MR. CLINCH

of New Brunswick Underwriters of St. John

IN CAMPBELLTON

Last Week and Asked that Better Provision at Reservoir be Made.

Mr. Peter Clinch, of the New Brunswick Fire Underwriters, St. John, was here last week inspecting the water system and making tests of its efficiency as to its fire fighting qualities.

He inspected the hydrants and on Water St. found a pressure of about sixty pounds. He also visited the reservoir.

To the Town Council he reported the system in a fairly satisfactory condition, but asked that in order to bring it up to a high state of efficiency the reservoir be built at least twenty feet higher. If this was complied with, he stated that the Underwriters would probably be able to allow the insurance rates for the town to remain at its present rating, otherwise an increase would be necessary.

Mr. Clinch was particularly interested in the large hydrant on Water Street and has asked for a photograph of same, with the name of the maker.

The Town Council have taken up the question of improved reservoir and same will be built this summer.

S. S. Admiral

Makes Her Regular Trip

The S. S. Admiral arrived at Dalhousie Monday morning and loaded a large cargo of freight which had accumulated there for her and left Wednesday on her trip down the coast. It is not probable that she will come to Campbellton until the larger quantity of freight at Dalhousie has been reduced and freight delivered here. Steps are being taken, we understand, to have the deep water terminus put in proper shape, and to erect necessary warehouses etc. for handling freight at this port.

DALHOUSIE

Water Supply Question to Come Before Ratepayers

IN JUNE.

Tests of McNish Brook Being Carried Out—Other Interesting Items from the Shiretown.

The most important question that ever presented itself to the rate-payers of the town of Dalhousie is the water subject. Will the people at the special meeting to be held in June vote for water? This is a very important matter and it is the duty of every person who intends making his home in our town to give this affair serious consideration. It should not be left entirely in the hands of the commissioners. They are only acting as agents for the people. It looks to your correspondent that if the Dalhousie citizens were satisfied the McNish Brook would furnish all the water required to supply the town with its mills they would vote for water by a large majority. Under these circumstances it is the duty of the people to examine the brook as soon as the spring freshet is over and form their own opinions. The Commissioners have secured the services of an engineer highly recommended. Before making their final report to the rate-payers they will have the brook again tested by Deputy Surveyor, Daniel McMillan or other competent surveyor or engineer. The Commissioners have no axe to grind in the matter. Each Commissioner's home is provided with water and modern improvements and it is their intention to leave the matter entirely with the people. They have gone to a great deal of trouble and will be prepared to place a clean proposition before our citizens when the time comes. It will remain with the rate-payers to decide.

The news of the death of Mrs. Dr. L. S. Belliveau which occurred at Shediac on the 19th ult. was a shock to many who knew the deceased lady. She was Miss Marguerite Esther Morin, was born at Maria, Bonaventure Co. P. Q. and moved to Dalhousie with her parents when a child. She had made many friends here in her youth. She then moved to Campbellton. Later she taught school in Rogersville, N.B. After that she entered the Newton Hospital, where she became a very popular nurse. There she met Dr. Belliveau, one of the most popular citizens of Shediac and was married to him about a year ago. Her funeral which took place at Shediac was very largely attended. Her unconsolable husband has received numerous letters and telegrams of sympathy from all parts of the Dominion.

Campbellton, May 7th, 1904. Rev. H. E. Thomas, Pastor of the Campbellton Methodist Church, report in favor of a bounty on dog fish.

Dear Sir—

J. M. Sutherland, Inspector.

The Fish Commission.

Report in Favor of a Bounty on Dog Fish.

Ottawa, May 6.—The commission appointed to enquire into the dog-fish pest has made its report to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

The commissioners report in favor of giving a bounty on each dog-fish caught. They say two and a half cents each would be the proper amount.

In regard to waiting for the construction of fertilizer factories, they consider the pest too serious to lose any time, and ask that the bounty be given at once.

The commissioners also suggest that if the bounty does not meet the difficulty, then the government cruisers should be manned with fishing gear or tugs secured for this purpose, and the pest exterminated.

The difficulty that will present itself is the carrying out of the report. For instance, the commissioners say that the production of the tail of an adult fish will be sufficient to get the bounty but it is said that the throwing away of the body in the water should be detrimental to the fisheries, and could not be permitted. What is considered best would be to give a sufficient bounty to the delivery of the fish, which could be used for a number of purposes, and the industry in this way made profitable to all parties; the government and the fishermen as well.

August is the worst month for dog-fish, and the recommendations of the commission will likely take effect by that time.

Telegraphers' Pay.

Delegation were well Treated by Minister of Railways.

(Special to Globe.)

Moncton, May 7.—S. C. Charters, station master at Point du Chene, returned from Ottawa, yesterday, where he was one of the delegates from the Brotherhood of Railway Telegraphers to interview the Minister of Railways in regard to increase of wages and some revision of rules connected with their order.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson met the delegation, and it is learned that a satisfactory arrangement of rates and rules has been agreed to.

The minimum for telegraphers on the main line was $41.50 and branch lines $38. This has been increased to $45 main line and $43 branch line. There will also be an increase in extra time for Sunday working above the minimum rates of operators at terminal points and yard officers had been increased from $45 to $50, and operators in despatching offices from $55 to $60. Train despatchers are granted an additional week's vacation.

Mr. Charters said the delegation was much pleased with the kindness and courtesy extended to them by the Minister of Railways. The best of feeling prevailed throughout the discussion, and the delegates feel satisfied that the Minister has done all he possibly could to meet their wishes.

Escuminac School Report.

April 25, 1904.—Inspected this school today, remaining over two hours. Pupils on roll, 20; present, 18. With the teacher's assistance I went over all the subjects of the course of study, with the exception of Agriculture.

At former visits I found this school to be interesting and satisfactory. This time it shows better than ever. The pupils are respectful in manner and show themselves industrious and ambitious to learn. In all the grades they acquitted themselves well in reading and spelling.

Their map drawing was unusually neat and well done. They answered well in Scripture, giving the story of Miracles and Parables quite readily. They were exercised conversationally in French. In Arithmetic they did fairly well, though with some inaccuracies. They are more backward in Grammar than in other subjects.

Miss Miller has no diploma yet, but she seems to be a very successful teacher. This is her first school and it has made notable progress since she came.

THE FIRE CROWD.

As a Rule It Likes a Big Blaze and Crashing Walls.

"There is one curious thing connected with fires," said a thoughtful man, "and that is the fact that while the fireman is always a hero in the public estimate and while men and women have all kinds of admiration for these brave fellows they yet want to see them get the worst of it in the fight against the flames. It is an interesting fact that the average man and woman are not at all anxious to see the firemen get the fire under control. They would much rather see the flames spread until the affair developed into an immense conflagration. Mind you, the trait is not at all vicious. There is no excitement and adventure, things that are so deep rooted in human nature that we may not control them at will. Besides, we want to develop our heroes to the limit. We want our firemen to fight a good fight against long odds and under great difficulties. We cannot quarrel with this feeling in the human-makeup. After all, it is what one may call the poetry of human nature, and without it this old system of ours would be dull and prosaic indeed. Of course, you will always and a few persons around a fire who are directly concerned in the fight the firemen are making. They want to see the flames put out. In the case of some of the spectators it means bread and meat. They want to see a big blaze and hear the crash of the walls and all that sort of thing. Did you ever take the trouble to analyze a fire crowd? In the first place an alarm of fire will draw a crowd quicker than anything in the world. Whenever the bells begin to clang and the engines go rushing down the street you will see men, women and children rushing this way and that in order to see as much as may be seen of the fire and fire fighters. The hour of day or night does this make so much difference. The crowd will get there in some way and for some reason, though the great majority of the persons have no sort of interest other than idle curiosity. Once on hand, they want to see a good fire, and that's why I say they want to see the flames get the best of the firemen. They will go away and talk about what a game fight the fire laddies made. Human nature is a curious thing, is it not?"

Never Occurred to Him.

"I don't know why it is," said Mr. Gleason as he came downstairs red faced and angry and greeted his guest "but I never can get used to the striking of that clock in our room."

"It has such a loud, insistent 'bang' when it strikes the hours and wakes me up nearly every time. We've had it in the house two or three years, but I can't become accustomed to it. We bought the place in the little long ago, only it's a present from my wife's mother, and that would never do. Good clock, too, aside from that, but it worries me nearly to death. I wish I knew what to do with it."

"Why don't you wind merely the timekeeping part of it," said his guest, "and let the striking part go unwounded?"

"Johnson, you have saved my life!" exclaimed Mr. Gleason joyfully. "I never thought of that."

She Took Them at Their Word.

Kentia lake is one of the most attractive of the great chain of lakes in the interior of New York state. But point at its head is a bold promontory which rises grandly and impressively. It was upon the banks of this lake that the famous "Kentia Williamson" founded a colony nearly three generations ago and announced that she could walk up on the water of the lake. A large crowd gathered to see her undertake the experiment. Turning to her followers she asked, "Have you all faith that I can walk upon the water?" "We have!" they replied. "Then there is no use in my undertaking to do so," she replied. "If ye have faith ye shall be saved without my walking up on the water."

An Apt Quotation.

The readiness of reputation of Thomas B. Reed was never better illustrated than on one occasion when he went to visit a friend who lived at the top of a long and narrow flight of stairs. Half way up Reed missed his footing and fell to the bottom. His friend, hearing the racket, rushed to the door and shouted down the semidarkness of the hall, "Who is that?"

"Tis Elser rolling rapidly," drawled the man from Maine as he picked himself up.

Chickweed.

Like the plainest, which the Indians called "the white man's foot" because it sprang up wherever the whites penetrated, the chickweed seems to follow the track of the white colonist, and in New Zealand the Maoris call it "the mark of the paleface." The little flower is a sort of barometer. It means when fine weather is coming, remains closed if rain is in the air.

Both Artists.

"My pa," said the blind man's boy, "can tell times from pennies and nickels from quarters by just feeling of them."

"Eh," replied old Hardphist's son, "that's nothing! My pa can tell the difference by the smell."

A woman is never known to advertise for the return of stolen property "and no questions asked." She would ask questions or die.

MANNERS IN BUSINESS

Brains and Good Deportment a Winning Combination.

The value of brains in business can not be overestimated, of course; but neither can the value of manners. Don't make the error of supposing that brains are everything. You may have the best set of brains in the town, but if you haven't the manners of a gentleman nobody is going to appreciate you. Your manner is the outward indication of what you are within the estimate of most people, and if the manner is disagreeable few will take the trouble to examine into you any further.

The consensus of general opinion is that the man who goes about with porcine quills as his manners hasn't any brains worth bothering about. Did you never notice that the men who employ large forces of intelligent people look at an applicant closely, ask a few seemingly unimportant questions and promptly employ or dismiss him? They don't sound his brain depth; they don't obtain his biography; they don't inquire into his social standing; they size him up from the surface they don't look for gold within.

The employer knows that if an applicant's manner strikes him favorably it will also favorably strike people with whom he comes in contact in his work. And nobody knows better than a big business man that a favorable first impression means half the sale. People are apt to think that if there is any place where manners are of little consequence it is in business, where cold calculation so largely takes the place of feeling. But the truth is that nowhere else are manners of such importance as in everyday dealings. There is no capital and equipment any young man can have that will pay him better than good manners. There is no possible calling for which this does not better fit him. If he has brains the world owes him something, but unless he has good manners he will have a hard time collecting it.

A WHISTLER PICTURE.

The Dramatic Manner of its Finish and an Anticlimax.

Whistler was one day visited by a foreign artist, an old acquaintance, with whom Whistler had not as yet quarreled. He was received with genuine cordiality, and, artist-like, he ran round the studio looking at everything. One small picture seemed to charm him especially, and he said, "Now that is one of your good ones." "Don't look at it, dear boy," said Whistler airily, "it's not finished." "Finished!" said the visitor. "What is the most carefully finished picture of yours that I have ever seen?" "Don't look at it!" persisted Whistler. "You are doing injustice to yourself, you are doing injustice to my picture, and you are doing injustice to me!" The visitor looked bewildered, when Whistler, in a theatrical tone, cried out: "Stop! I'll finish it now!" Then he produced a very small canvas, fixed it on a long and slender handle, mixed a little speck of paint on his palette, dipped the tip of his brush into it, and then, standing off from his picture and with the action of a fencer with his rapier, he lunged forward and touched the picture in one spot with his pigment.

"Now it's finished," said he. "Now you may look at it!" This was all highly dramatic, and indeed very well acted, but, as in the case of some stage plays, the final act of Whistler's performance proved to be an anticlimax. The foreign artist took his leave, but finding that he had, he said, "I'll finish it now!" Then he produced a very small canvas, fixed it on a long and slender handle, mixed a little speck of paint on his palette, dipped the tip of his brush into it, and then, standing off from his picture and with the action of a fencer with his rapier, he lunged forward and touched the picture in one spot with his pigment.

The investigation of a neglected spring or rivulet may bring to light a valuable supply of water for gardening or domestic purposes. A surprising quantity is often obtainable by installing a ram at some seemingly insignificant source. A ram is cheap, because the first expense is the last, there being no cost of maintenance, and it is satisfactory, because the ram requires no attention. Once started, it takes entire care of itself.—Country Life in America.

Twenty Shots in His Head.
At the present time there is a keeper on a Hertfordshire estate who has about twenty shots in his head. Nearly thirty years ago this man was accidentally shot by an under keeper, and there were twenty-two holes in the hat he wore, which is preserved to this day. The injured man never had the shots extracted, was long between life and death and completely lost his hearing.—London Standard.

Qualified Approval.
"How did you like the opera?" "First rate," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I didn't care much about the tunes they played, but it was a great comfort to have enough noise to drown the vacuous conversation that was going on around me."

A Looking Glass.
Mr. Crittack—Miss Arts tells me she does most of her painting now on glass. Miss Sports—I think she means with the aid of a glass.

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and a loving favor rather than silver or gold.

Japs Capture Dalny and Feng Wang Cheng.

RUSSIANS ARE ABANDONING NEWCHWANG.

Kuropatkin Announces That He Had to Retreat Before a Superior Force or Have a Repetition of Yalu Battle—Czar's General Reports Loss of 2,500 Men and Officers at Turenchen—Japs Buried 1,400 of Their Foes After the Fight

London, May 9.—The morning Post's Shanghai correspondent reports that Dalny was captured Friday, while the Tokyo correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, cabling under date of Sunday says:

"Dalny was invested yesterday." The Daily Mail's correspondent at Newchwang in a despatch dated May 8th says:

"Yesterday most of the Russian troops retired to Tashihohai and during the night most of the guns were removed from the fort and sent to the Liao Yang, where all the Russian forces are concentrating."

Kuropatkin Says Japs Captured Feng Wang Cheng.

St. Petersburg, May 8.—General Kuropatkin has sent the following telegram, under date of May 7: "Scouts from Feng Wang Cheng report that the enemy's cavalry and units of their advanced guard occupied Feng Wang Cheng to-day."

"Two companies and two squadrons of their force proceeded towards Dalny and the enemy's cavalry and units withdrew towards Schindjane."

"Scouts from Feng Wang Cheng report that two Japanese divisions advanced May 6th towards Feng Wang Cheng by the main road from Fain-min. A third division advancing in the valley of the Ai river occupied a position near Khanduip-Tse and posted batteries to fire upon Feng Wang Cheng, counting upon finding our troops there."

"The Japanese advanced slowly and very cautiously upon Feng Wang Cheng."

RUSSIANS ABANDONING NEWCHWANG. Newchwang, May 7, 9 p. m.—There is every indication that the Russians have decided to evacuate Newchwang. Troops have been leaving here all day long. Forts have been dismantled and all artillery has been placed on board trains. All the local transportation has been commandeered by the Russian authorities. There is current here a native rumor that Japanese troops are in Foo Chau Bay (on the west side of the Liao Tung peninsula) about 60 miles north of Port Arthur.

The fear is held here that if the Russians leave and the Japanese do, the British will occupy the place. The foreign residents are prepared to resist the brigands should they come over. The British consul has requested that a gun-boat be sent to Newchwang.

The Russians probably will destroy the non-bat St. Vouch before leaving. The road is at Newchwang.

Japanese troops fired on what probably was the last train out of Port Arthur as it passed near P. rt. Adams. They used artillery and small arms and killed or wounded several Chinese.

It is reported here that Viceoy Alexander was severely wounded prior to his departure from Port Arthur. He barely escaped from there before the Japanese closed communication.

The Russian general staff has moved from Liao Yang to Mukden.

Russians here will not talk of the situation for fear that they may impart some information. They do not cou-sider that their forces here are sufficient to hold this section of the country. It is probable that the Russian troops will withdraw to Harbin.

The Russian warships at Newchwang are leaving hurriedly and many natives are fleeing the city in fear that they will be subjected to maltreatment at the hands of the brigands.

TERRIBLE LOSSES OF RUSSIANS

St. Petersburg, May 8.—The Emperor has received a despatch from General Kuropatkin, giving the report of Lieut-General Zassalitch of the Russian losses in the battle of Kieu Lien Cheng. The report states that Major General Kasatkins was injured in the head by a stone. The brunt of the fighting, General Zassalitch says, was borne by the 11th and 14th Rifle Regiments, and the 2nd Regiment.

The losses of the two former regiments in killed were four officers, including the commander of the 11th, and 481 non-commissioned officers and men. The wounded were one officer and 801 non-commissioned men, and a chaplain while 700 others were left on the field.

General Zassalitch confirms the report of the enormous mortality among the artillery horses, and concludes his report as follows:

"Our losses on April 30th and May 1st altogether amounted to seventy superior and subaltern officers, and 2,324 in killed, wounded or taken prisoners. Of this total 1,081 were left on the battlefield, but it is not known whether they were killed or wounded."

"In consequence of the heavy losses in men and artillery horses and the difficulties encountered in the roadless country, it was absolutely impossible to bring away the guns, and machine guns."

St. Petersburg, May 6, 10.50 p. m.—A despatch received to-night says that Port Arthur is cut off from all communication by land, the Japanese having disembarked in its rear, occupied the railway and cut the telegraph.

Vice-Admiral Skrydloff, who is en route to Port Arthur to take command of the naval forces in the Far East, will be unable to reach the destination.

St. Petersburg, May 6, 9.50 p. m.—The Ministry of War has received the following telegram from Major General Pitag, chief of the Military staff, on the evening of May 4th:

"According to the information I have received, seven of the enemy's transports, and afterwards about fifty, appeared opposite Pitsewo, on the evening of May 4th."

"On the morning of May 5th the Japanese began to land at Pitsewo and on the coast near Cape Terminal (about fifteen miles southwest of Pitsewo) under cover of an artillery fire."

"At this moment about sixty transports were observed bearing down upon the whole front and our posts retired from the shore."

"All papers in the post office of Pitsewo were removed and the Russian inhabitants abandoned the town."

"According to Chinese reports, by the evening of May 5th about 10,000 of the enemy's troops had landed and taken up quarters in the Chinese villages near the points of debarkment."

Bottled up in Tokio.

(Richard Harding Davis, in Collier's Weekly.)

Tokio, March 21.—In New York, the writer was one of the mistaken few who prophesied there would be no war. In Tokio he was inclined to go further and protest that there is no war. He admits when he was in New York there was a war. War filled the front page of all the morning papers. In the afternoon editions its three letters, in sanguinary pink ink, were writ large from margin to margin. Stocks were affected. Insurance rates became prohibitive. Packing houses were working overtime, and the Missouri mule loomed into a national asset. Every man you met was an intimate familiar with the number of guns in the secondary batteries of the Retzwin and the Shikishima as with the number of his own telephone. Wherever you saw two men talking together it was safe to wager one was saying, "They are a wonderful little people," and that the other was replying, "Yes, but don't forget that in '04 the Russian fleet sailed right up the lower bay and saved the Union." There, in New York, was the only topic. People asked you if you were going to "the front" as if there were somewhere between Seventy-Second street and Grant's tomb. When we crossed the continent, cowboys rode out of an alkali desert to ask what was the latest from "the war." At water tanks in Arizona, and at every one of

Fred Harvey's eating houses from Santa Fe to the Pacific coast, the proprietors kindly warned us against Russian cruisers lying just outside of the Golden Gate. War continued with us right into the heart of San Francisco, where the Bohemian Club gave the war correspondents a noble farewell dinner, and where we proudly displayed our war kits to the belly in the Palace Hotel. When the Chinese flooded seven hundred tons of "cow-traband of war," and Japanese crowded the wharf to wave farewells to their fellow-countrymen, who were off to fight, and the San Francisco band played for them "The Girl I Left Behind Me," we all tried to look cheerful and said, as though we liked it, "Well this is the Real Thing at last."

But somewhere between Honolulu and Yokohama, somewhere in the deepest part of the Pacific, we lost the warboard, and we have neither seen it nor heard of it since. I do not mean to say that if you go to the war office here you will not see the sentry nor do I deny that if you go inside you will see two orderlies. You also will be received by various officials, grave, courteous generals, each apparently doing nothing by himself, in a large bare room hung with a map or two. He apparently has plenty of leisure, certainly enough of it to enable him to be polite. But he has no time to discuss the probability of Japan and Russia being at war. He says there may be a column which some day may leave some place for somewhere and do something, and if you are patient maybe you, too, can go to the place. But this is the only definite information he has to give you this morning, and so, "If you really must be going, I wish you 'good night'."

Nor do I say that in "the chief street" you will not see colored prints of battles and people looking at them as though they were artistic productions and with respectful interest.

That is all we who are bottled up in Tokio know of the Japanese War.

This morning we thought that at last we had caught them in the act. We woke to find the streets filled with jubilant natives, each waving a flag, the hotel windows were hidden with flags. They fluttered from every Japanese house. We rushed out to ask eagerly if Port Arthur had fallen, to learn what great battle had been won on the Yulu. The interpreter regarded us with gentle reproach. "To-day is the spring festival," he said. "That means that to-day in Tokio, everyone is rejoicing because at the Temple of Kawasaki a plum tree has given birth to a number of blossoms. But then why should the Japanese know anything of this war? They live so far from New York."

Misleading Evidence
A stranger recently walked into a Georgia hotel, and began to descend upon the wonders of psychology, declaring that he could tell a man's political preferences by looking at him, so strong is the mark left upon one's face by his opinions. One man was skeptical, and offered to bet the cigars that the stranger could do no such thing.

"You are right," said the mind-reader; "you yourself are for Cleveland."

"He was right," said the scoffer; "an accident."

"You," he said to another, "prefer Parker." "He was right again," and "Wonderful!" said the crowd.

"Lungs in a box," said the said; "And you are for Hearst."

"You are a liar!" was the unexpected response, delivered with heat and indignation; "I've been sick; that is the reason I look this way."

BAKED APPLES.

The Way to Make a Convenient and Delicious Dessert.

The difference between apple sauce stewed quickly over the fire and that baked slowly for several hours in a moderate oven is so great that one could easily believe that different fruits had been used. Each method, if carefully followed, produces a delicious result, and, while some persons have a strong preference for one or the other, to my mind it is difficult to decide which is the better way. Therefore it is well to use both methods, cooking the first apples that come in midsummer by stewing, and later, when the cool days of early autumn make a fire less objectionable, trying the baking.

The dish for baking is as important as that for beans baked properly and also for Indian puddings, and should be the same in style and material. Cut the fruit (and you may use in this way any kind of apples or pears which are too green or hard to use uncooked into quarters, then remove the cores and skins. Allow one cup of sugar and one-half cup of water to two quarts of fruit. The amount will vary with different apples, and it is important not to use too much sugar, for the long cooking seems to develop the natural sweetness of the fruit. Cover them closely and cook in a slow oven four or five hours or until they have a deep red color. If they cook too fast, the steam will cause them to burst and run over the edge and result in a mushy sauce, but a moderate heat, long continued, will leave each quarter distinct in the clear sirup. Let it cool in the pan and turn it out without any stirring of the fruit. This may be poured at once into sterilized jars and sealed the same as canned fruit, if you are not likely to use it all soon. As a sauce for a breakfast or dinner it is acceptable, with cream and hot biscuits for supper it is delicious, and as a filling for pastry shells it is convenient.—Home Science Magazine.

THE CAVE OF GHOSTS.

This Is One of the Wonder Places of New South Wales.

One of the curiosities of Oakley creek, N. S. W., is a cave which few people care to enter. It is of the usual order of stalactite and stalagmite shapes and figures, but in order to get inside the visitor must crouch down and squeeze himself through a narrow opening and grope his way in the inky darkness for a few yards till he can stand erect and light a torch.

As soon as he has done this he sees faintly the weird shapes assumed by the water dripping from the limestone and he hears a whirling noise. He feels inclined to make his exit at once, but he hears something moving all round him, and presently something touches him.

He concludes that there are uncanny spirits about, and this sensation is multiplied many times in intensity when turning to retrace his steps he finds himself confronted by a tall, ghostly figure.

If the visitor has a strong nerve or has been forewarned, which is not always the case, he recognizes that the ghostly figure is a senseless block formed by the dripping from the limestone, and that the moving creatures are bats.

There is one part of the cave which no man has dared to explore. It is called the black hole. One adventurous visitor was about to squeeze himself through this narrow aperture when it occurred to him to throw a stone through. He did so, listening for the stone to touch bottom, and the dull sound that finally reached him convinced him that there was a sheer drop of 500 feet on the other side of the black hole.

Condensed For Four Days.
"There was a good old lawyer of the good old southern type," said a judge, "who had a most eloquent way of pleading. His brief for three days had been a marvel of classical allusion and legal erudition."

"The judge, however, became a trifle impatient and, as gently as he could, intimated that the docket was somewhat crowded, and it might be to the client's interest if the lawyer could contrive to end his plea. And, do you know, the old barrister declared that the last four days of his argument were a marvel of condensation."

Critics.
A party of composers and printers from the country, up for a day's outing in London, visit the National gallery and pause in front of Turner's "Ulysses."

Foreman (to his companions, both lost in admiration)—It's marvelous! All done by hand too!

Second Composer and Printer (enthusiastically)—Why, it's every bit as good as color printing!

Born Diplomat.
The famous portrait painter threw down his brushes with a sigh.

"What is the matter?" asked his elderly blossom of a customer. "It's no use," he cried. "I can never reproduce your loveliness."

Interference.
Dorothy—What Frank Werser ever could have seen in Bessie Brown is past my knowledge.

Belle—Why, Dorothy, I didn't know you cared so much for Frank.

Marriage.
"Marriage is like a besieged city." "In what way?"

"So many of the people are trying to get in and so many to get out."

To be a consistent hypocrite is the craft of a very fine artist.—Schoolmaster.

TRAIN ACCOMMODATION

At last the North Shore is to have a fast day train. The Ocean Express is announced to commence July 1st. We trust nothing will transpire in the meantime which will necessitate the cutting out of this train as it will be of great accommodation to North Shore towns and we know the action of the Minister of Railways in this matter meets with general approval.

Although Campbellton is a railway centre it is not well served by local trains. For instance there is no way of reaching this town from the West during the day. All the trains which would be of service to the people up the river and scheduled to arrive here in the evening. The town council took up this matter at a recent meeting and passed a strong resolution which is to be forwarded to the Minister of Railways and it is the earnest wish of all our citizens that this matter be rectified if possible, and that the change be made when the new time table comes into effect which will be about June 14th.

STANLEY

SIR Henry Stanley, the great explorer, is dead at the early age of sixty-three. The whole world is familiar with the story of the adventures, which have placed him at the very front rank of travellers. He was a native of Wales, a son of very poor parents, and was brought up in a charitable institution. Going to America in the course of time, he became a newspaper man, and this fact led to his becoming a great explorer. Prior to that he had been war correspondent in Abyssinia and in the campaign of Sir Garnet Wolseley against the King of Ashanti. He conducted the search for Dr. Livingstone and found the great African traveller and missionary. His more recent explorations will be remembered by most of our readers. His books describing his African travels have had an immense circulation on both sides of the Atlantic and have been the means of arousing a great deal of interest in the Dark Continent. A great feature of Stanley's career, as a traveller was his dauntless courage and the ability to control large bodies of men by his personal leadership. Everyone will hear with regret of his death.—Gleaner

To the Editor of Events

Dear Sir:—
As the report published in your issue of last week relative to some of the proceedings at the recent annual meeting of the liquor licence commissioners for the county contained no reference to the largely signed petition against the granting of any license for the sale of liquor at Eel River Crossing, I desire to publish for the information of all concerned that part of my report which referred to the said petition. I reported as follows in reference to the same. There is a petition on file with me largely signed by the people of Eel River Crossing against the granting of a liquor license to any one residing there, showing that the sale of intoxicating liquor by any one there would be a great injury to the place, and hence the people there are almost unanimous in opposing the sale of liquor in that locality for the reason stated in their petition. In the face of such a petition against the sale of liquor by the people of that place, the Liquor License Commissioners for the county have

Young Carr won a scholarship in Prince of Wales college, Charlottetown, which meant free tuition for two years and a grant of $100 for two successive years. He matriculated at Dalhousie college and graduated B. A. in 1868. In 1871 he completed his Theological course under Revs. Drs. King and Macknight and constantly refused to grant any one a license to sell liquor in any locality where they were a majority of the people are opposed to it. The report was adopted.

Among the greatest benefits conferred upon the world by England was in the improvement of all kinds of live stock.

The Balmoral Agricultural Society is also a progressive institution. This spring it purchased two Ayrshire bulls, one from Sussex and the other from Bathurst Village. Last year this Society made a fine importation of swine and the previous year had invested in two bulls besides subscribing largely towards the purchase of the stallion "Baron Frederick". Dalhousie will no doubt see several new buildings go up this year. Already improvements are going on and rumors of several changes are reported.

One of the greatest drawbacks to the progress of our town is the difficulty of securing building lots. Some people own vacant lots here and will not part with them. Such citizens retard the advancement of the place.

The Charlottetown "Weekly Patriot" reports the marriage of Miss End M. McLean sister of Mr. T. A. McLean, Engineer of the Dalhousie Water Works, as follows:

"One of those happy events that The Patriot is always pleased to chronicle took place at Frogmore the beautiful residence of T. A. McLean Esq., where his eldest daughter End Mary became the wife of Charles Plummer Hill, a prominent mining engineer and real estate dealer in Manitoba and the West. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. F. Fullerton, pastor of St James church in the presence of a large number of invited guests. The wedding march was played by Miss Fraser. The spacious drawing room was artistically decorated with a bank of lilies, roses, primroses, and foliage added a picturesque loveliness to the charming scene. There was a brilliant array of elegant and valuable presents."

The happy couple left for the Pacific coast on their honey-moon trip visiting Montreal, Ottawa and Chicago and other Western cities. The bride is one of Charlottetown's most accomplished and popular young ladies.

Old Shepherd, of Calcutta, you remember the firm, desperately rich people is looking for a country place, and it has been offered to his solicitor. It seems to me that this indicates intentions widely different from anything you anticipated, and points more to a marriage for love, than one for, let us say money and love. I have met Marden more than once lounging in Pall Mall and Regent street as if he had nothing on earth to do, which certainly does not look like the urgent business he asserted called him to town. However, you, no doubt have information which may throw a totally different light on these ambiguous proceedings. I can only give you the result of my observations. Take it at what it is worth."

This letter was the last pebble on the cairn of hopes and fears, desires, doubts, and silent, stinging anger which had been gradually accumulating over the bright anticipations of a few months ago, a continued state of agitation and disappointment had strained endurance beyond the utmost, and the passionate, self-willed woman gave way under it. A cold, caught during a long drive with Lord Dorington in the east wind, obliged Mrs. Ruthven to keep her room. After a day or two of anxious attendance on the part of the local doctor, high fever set in, and it was evident that Mrs. Ruthven was dangerously ill. A great physician and a couple of trained nurses were summoned from London, all the pomp and circumstance of the most serious sickness were established in Lady Dorington's pleasant house, and for the time being the sports and dancing women knew it no more.

CHAPTER XI.

It was some little time before the well-timed and discreet Mrs. L'Estrange and Nora, as their correspondence with Lady Dorington was not frequent, and she was too much taken up, and too angry with him, to continue her diurnal letters to her brother.

Meanwhile Nora and her step-mother went on the even tenor of their way. Mrs. L'Estrange had gone to New-wood to luncheon with an old lady, a distant cousin of her mother, who had only remembered her existence after she had made what was considered a good marriage, and had more than once invited her. Mrs. L'Estrange always found it hard to say no, and, somewhat to Nora's indignation, had consented; but went alone, as her step-daughter refused to accompany her.

It was dusk when she returned, for her hostess had indulged herself in endless inquiries and fault-finding respecting their mutual relations. Mrs. L'Estrange was weary, and longed to see Nora's kind, bright face, and to describe the peculiarities of her testy kinwoman while enjoying a cup of fresh, warm tea.

Nora was sitting on a foot-stool by the fire-light when her step-mother came in, and the little tea-table was drawn near the hearth, the tea-pots simmering under its cozy, a plateful of thin bread and butter, temptingly delicious, beside it.

"How late you are, Helen," cried Nora, starting up and coming over to see if in taking off her cloak.

"What has kept you so long?" Something in her tone struck Mrs. L'Estrange; it was not impatience exactly, it was a sort of subdued excitement.

"It was not the charms of my hostess, nor the delights of my visit, I assure you," and she proceeded to describe the bitterness of her entertainer with much quiet droolery, while Nora poured out the tea.

"You don't want the lamp yet?" she asked, after laughing at her step-mother's account. "It is so nice to sit by the fire."

"It is," said Mrs. L'Estrange, and there was a pause; then Nora said suddenly:

"Helen, Clifford Marden called here to-day!"

"Yes," he said something about coming last night."

"But, Helen! He—he asked me to marry him! I was so amazed!"

"He speaks for himself!"

"Well, Nora, I am surprised, too, though not so amazed as you are. I have seen that he was fond of you, but I did not think he would marry without money. How did you answer him, dear?"

"I scarcely know, except that I certainly did not say 'yes'." "It is curious," said Mrs. L'Estrange, as if to herself. "I never thought Clifford Marden would tie himself to any woman, unless for a large money bribe. He knows exactly how you are situated, and I think the better of him! He must love you very much!"

"He says he does, I believe he does," said Nora, sitting down on her footstool again and clasping her hands round her knee in a thoughtful pose. "In fact, I am half frightened at the idea of his caring so much about me, though that is weak and silly. I never thought the squire could be so intensely in earnest about anything. I feel somehow to blame, for Helen, I am not one bit in love with him. I told him so, and he said he knew it."

"My dear child, you do not know whether you are or not! Clifford Marden is a man who might teach any woman to love him; and why should he not win you? He shows that he is sincerely, disinterestedly attached to you. I must say I am entirely on his side."

"Are you?" said Nora dreamily. "I suppose so," she sighed for. "It is a marriage that would have given your father the keenest pleasure."

Nora was silent. "Did you truly reject him?" asked Mrs. L'Estrange.

"He would not accept rejection," said Nora, with a grave smile. "He said I must hear him; that I must marry him; he seemed rather angry and excited, but I never thought of him as being so much in earnest. I promised to think of it as he had said, and speak to you, who would be his friend; he said he was an astonished he should care for me so much! He has seen such quantities of charming, beautiful people—but he doesn't! Oh! Helen, he is wonderfully fond of me! I could hear it in his voice. I am very ungrateful. I wish he were not so good to me. I wish he were to marry me; he would be disappointed to find that I did not love him enough. It is—I mean it must be—so wretched not to receive as much as one gives."

"My dear, you could not fail to love him; he is a perfect heart-whole, and yours is a kindly nature, not likely to harden itself against the tenderness of a true lover."

"No, perhaps not. I wish I did love him. How happy and light-hearted I should be! I am so impatient, Helen! I can not rest if I am unhappy. I must get my light and freedom, or I should beat myself to pieces against my prison bars! You are ever so much braver and nobler than I am."

"You have never come in contact with a real necessity, Nora. You can not conceive how intensely submission is forced upon one sometimes."

There was a short pause. "I suppose so," resumed Mrs. L'Estrange, "to see you well and happily married. You would, I am sure, be always a kind sister to my poor, sweet Nora."

"It is not impossible that I may—"

"Certainly not; why should you not?" put in Nora, eagerly. "You are young and fair enough to marry some good, delightful person."

"My dear Nora!" interrupting in her turn. "What can have suggested so absurd an idea? I was about to touch on a very delicate topic, and I will not now. Tell me, did Mr. Marden say he would come again?"

"Yes—no. I am not sure what he said. But I think he will most probably."

"Well, we can say no more at present. I will go and change my dress. I trust you will be wise, and not reject such an offer for a whim."

"I only want to do what is right," cried Nora, standing up, and letting her clasped hands fall to the length of her arms. "I do wish I loved Clifford; as he deserves me to love him; but it is very odd—I don't think I like him as well as I did yesterday. I used to be quite glad to see him—and now I rather dread his coming."

"That is natural enough, Nora. There will be a little awkwardness in meeting him at first. I do not quite understand your indifference to so very attractive a man as Clifford Marden! Tell me—you know I would not intrude on your confidence; I only ask because you are dear to me as my own sister—have you any preference for some one else to steal your heart?"

"No, I am not sure what I want. I will go and change my dress. I trust you will be wise, and not reject such an offer for a whim."

I used to be quite glad to see him—and now I rather dread his coming."

"Why? who has ever made love to me?" cried Nora, indignantly, coloring crimson as she spoke, "and am I the sort of girl to bestow my heart or fancy when neither are sought?"

"Pardon me," said Mrs. L'Estrange smiling, "the heart, even in the strongest-minded, young ladies is strangely illogical and unaccountable."

"Well, I really am not very silly. Now I have kept you too long, perhaps your dress is damp, and you know you must not be imprudent."

"I know it, but I have been under cover all day."

"She took up her cloak and was leaving the room, when Nora exclaimed:

"How selfish I am! I quite forgot to tell you I had a few lines from Lady Dorington, she says Mrs. Ruthven is seriously ill, with fever, nervous fever, and they are quite uneasy about her."

"Indeed! I am sorry, very sorry. I never liked Mrs. Ruthven as well as you do, but I think she looked dreadfully worried of late."

"Do not distress yourself on that score. I fancy Mr. Marden's flirtation with Mrs. Ruthven was of the very lightest order. Did you answer Lady Dorington's letter?"

"Yes, at once, and begged her to let us know how the patient was."

Mrs. L'Estrange was fascinated by the idea of Nora's marriage with Marden. She had always liked him, and living out of the world, had never heard the various reports respecting his wild extravagance, his generally reckless life. Even if she had, she would, like a simple good woman, have fully believed in the power of a pure attachment to elevate and reform the most determined rake. Besides, though truly and warmly attached to her step-daughter, she was keenly alive to the fact that her own precious child was utterly dependent on her half-sister. She never doubted that Nora, if left to herself, would be both just and generous, but if Nora married before attaining her majority, Beattie would be really dependent on some man's strange, and men are so strange and hard about money matters. The husband's power and influence are so great; the poor lonely widow, though she blushed for herself, secretly hoped Nora would not marry until she was twenty-one. If Nora married Marden, she felt sure he would be kind and generous, and was peculiarly sympathetic. It was this that gave him more than half his attraction. He always condescended to be really kind, and was glad to help any one. His detestation of everything unpleasant or painful gave him an air of kindness, that impressed even himself.

Yes, if Nora would consent, Beattie's future was secure, and why should she not? A better or indeed a happier marriage could not be found. Why Nora was not already in love with her sister, Mrs. L'Estrange could not understand, and set it down to one of the inscrutable mysteries of a young undeveloped nature.

Nora, too, was thoughtful, and the evening passed almost in silence; but each spoke a few words, and then fell into a fit of musing. The spell, however, was broken by the entrance of the servant with a note for Mrs. L'Estrange.

"The messenger waits, m."

"It will ring in a minute or two," said Mrs. L'Estrange, opening the envelope.

"It is from Mr. Marden, Nora," she exclaimed. "He wants to see his alone to-morrow morning."

"Indeed!"

"I suppose," smiling, "he wants to secure my vote and interest."

"They are his already." A pause.

"What shall I say, Nora?"

"Whatever you please."

"Then I shall see him."

She rose, went to the writing-table, and penned a few lines, and sent them to Marden's messenger.

"I imagine that Mr. Marden will not be easily turned from his purpose. And I hope, Nora, yet will not too thoughtlessly refuse so sincere and disinterested a lover."

"No, I am too undecided to do that. But it is rather awful to think that, having once said 'yes,' one can not unsay it."

Everything goes to show that spring is advancing as everybody is busy themselves in one particular or another. The farmers are fencing up their fields, and are also putting their land in shape for sowing. With town folks many are giving attention to the cleaning of their yards, white-washing sheds and fences, besides otherwise beautifying their premises. In doing this it seems as if we were carrying out nature's plans, for there is a time for everything.

We are sorry to notice the depression in the American shingle market, which we understand will effect the wages of shingle sawyers and buncchers, if prices do not advance. We think it is about time that a petition was being sent around for our merchants to sign agreeing to observe Victoria Day, May 24th, as a general public holiday. The old method of sending a petition around on the eve of a holiday is hardly fair to people living out of town who not knowing whether stores are closed or not come into town to make purchases. If the matter to close was decided upon some time before hand of which due notice be given people living out of town; they could govern themselves accordingly with the result that no business would be done even if one or two of the merchants did refuse to sign. However we think if merchants were approached a week or two before a holiday so as to give them time to notify their customers that their stores would be closed on such a date. The scheme would meet with the general approval of our business men.
