DONNELLY, COLES AND BLANDFORD ELECTED

Ald. Richter Makes a Discovery Which Upsets the Old Idea of Twelve Aldermen and Permits Three Representatives for Every Ward, There Being Five Wards in the Forest City.

A SENSATION SPRUNG AT CITY HALL AND LAW IS QUOTED TO PROVE CASE

Council Will Now Be Composed of Fifteen Aldermen and the Mayor, Instead of Twelve Aldermen as at Present-The Situation as Explained by Ald. Richter.

Three of the candidates for the council, who were counted out when he official returns were made, were given an agreeable surprise today, when they were informed that they were elected aldermen for the coming year.

W. G. Coles, and Ald. R. F. Blandford are aldermen for the present year. The information has not been given out officially, but it will be shortly. In the meantime, all three will take the oath of office in order to be prepared for the council meeting on Monday morning next.

ALD. RICHTER KNOWS THE LAW. Ald. Richter is to be credited with the discovery of this fact, and as an authority on municipal law, his opinion will hardly be questioned. The reason for the change in representation is found in the wording of the application of the council for the annexation of the suburts. It was stipulated in this aplication that the newly-annexed district was to be known as Ward 5. The subsequent order of the Ontario railway and municipal board ratified the application, and designated Ealing, Pottersburg, Chelsea Green and Knollwood

Park as Ward 5. According to the municipal act, section 71, the representation of a city shall consist of three representatives to each ward. It does not say "may

The section, in part, is as follows: The council of every city shall consist of the mayor, who shall be the head thereof, and three aldermen for each ward, to be elected in accordance with the provisions of this act, provided always that the council of any city may on or before the first day of November in any city pass a bylaw reducing the number of aldermen for each ward to two members, etc."
METHOD OF ELECTION.

The provisions of the act make it absolutely certain that the council hat they may be elected by wards, or at large. The city council of London by Bylaw 1,594, amended as follows:

"The aldermen of the city of London shall be elected by a general vote of the municipal electors." The provisions of the bylaw make it absolutely certain that the council must consist of fifteen members, and as Messrs. Donnelly, Coles and Blandford are next in line to the twelve already declared elected, the additional tario railway board not specified that the annexed district be Ward 5, the territory would have been added to the wards which it adjoined. A SENSATION. The news created quite a sensation at the city hall, nothing having been known about the matter until Ald. Richter discovered it. It is known that the three gentlemen interested will take the oath of office, and be prepared to take their seats on the day the council is inaugurated. I have been informed that I am elected to the council," said Ald. Coles. "I have consulted some lawyers, and they have informed me that according to the municipal act, I am one of the fifteen members of the council. Mr. W. R. Meredith, who took an active part in the annexation proceedings, informs me that my contention is proper, and that I am entitled to a seat. I will take the 'I have also been informed that I am entitled to a seat on the council," said Ald. Blandford. "Instead of Ald. Johnston being last man, I will have that distinction. I will qualify, of course, and be prepared to take my place

Ex-Ald. James Donnelly had not heard of the matter, and could not say what he would do. It is understood that he, too, will qualify.

ALD. RICHTER IS CERTAIN. Ald. Richter is confident that the three gentlemen named are entitled to a seat on the council board. He has gone into the matter very carefully and his judgment is that the council must consist of fifteen members. "I have had this matter under advisement for some days," said Ald. Richter. "In looking over the municipal act, I discovered that there should be three members elected from each ward. bers. In the application for the annexation of the suburbs it was specifically stated that the newly-annexed territory should be known as Ward 5. I have seen the copy of the order of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, and it states that the new territory should be known as Ward 5. Had the territory been taken in without any mention of what ward it should be, it would form a portion of the wards which it adjoined. However, it is practically certain that the city now has five wards, and as such we must Ald. James Donnelly, Ald. W. G. Coles, past few weeks was perpetrated last Ald. James Donnelly, Ald. W. G. BIGGER MERGER THAN STEEL CORPORATION

Millions Reported To Be Involved in Latest Financial Deal.

[Canadian Press.]

Montreal, Jan. 6. - Announcement ast week of the intention of the United States Steel Corporation to build a $20,000,000 plant in Canada has revived interest here in a merger scheme which received only scant and rather incredulous attention, when it was laid before local financial interest about the middle of last month, says the Gazette. This scheme aims at a merger steel companies in Canada and the United States, which if ever carried out would result in an industrial merger of even vaster proportions than the United States Steel Corporation. It would embrace in the United States some of the large independent steel companies headed by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and in Canada the Dominion Steel Corporation and the Steel Company of Canada. The other United States steel companies would include the Pennsylvania Steel Company, the Cambria Steel Company, the Midland Steel Company and the Laelle fron Works of West Virginia. The projected capitalization of this huge merger is $1,100,000,000, divided, is understood, into $200,000,000 bonds, $500,000,000 preferred and $400,000,000

ommon stock. When the whole scheme was submited to financial interests here some hree weeks ago, directors of the Steel Corporation and the Steel Company of Canada averred that it was all news to them and ridiculed its possibility Since then it is known that plans o the syndicate, which is said to be headed by Charles M. Schwab, have been laid before President Plummer of the Dominion Steel Corporation, and before other leaders in the steel indus-

AMUSEMENTS

"A Butterfly On the Wheel."

"A Butterfly On the Wheel," given at the Grand last night, is not so much a lay based on the triangle problem as a blow at the system which stretches a woman upon the rack of the divorce courts and breaks her spirit while endeavoring to wring a confession from

It contains the usual triangle of the absorbed husband, the wife who innocently lets her flirtations go beyond discretion, and the ardent lover supposed by the world, until the world begins to aik, to be the mutual friend.

The play is notable for its great second act court scene, when the wife defends an action for divorce—the result of a journey by her begun with friends, neluding the mutual friend, and ended in a Paris hotel, through what the wife elieved to be an unavoidable chapter of mistakes, with the mutual friend taking advantage of the situation and forcing two by an anonymous letter-writer, The trial scene is made realistic not so much by the bewigged counsel, and the proper appurtenances of a court-room as her husband's leading counsel. For the length of the whole act she is subjected to a violent cross-examination, and her very guilesness serves to entangle her. The counsel is brutally direct, quick to press the brand upon the woman, yet in he next breath expressing his regret at the proceedings and referring to her charm of manner.

Esther Evans, an actress of graceful manner and exceptional emotional ability, seems to fit light rather than heavy drama when one first sees her, yet she rises supreme when the great test comes, and her acting is superb.

Lewis Broughton, as the ranked next to Miss Evans in the bestowing of honors, and for a bit of char-

The play is skillfully woven, and the intricacies of cross-examination, shown in the trial scene, added a new chapter to the drama that is deserving. of a high place. There is a play of light epigram in the piece and clever and very natural lines. The lover at one time describing the engrossed husband statesthat "his heart beats by act of parliament."

Large audiences attended the Emplre Vaudeville Theatre on Monday evening, and for the most part were pleased at the performance. Several of the act were amusing and clever, while one could be described as somewhat amateurish.

Could Not Sleep Well For Four Years.

HEART AND NERVES WERE BAD.

To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pace the bedroom floor with nerves unhinged, heart action wrong, and to whose eye sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.

Mrs. Wm. Douglas, Thessalen, Ont., writes:-"I am going to send you my testimonial for what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. For four years I could not sleep well at night, as my heart and nerves were so bad. I tried all the doctors here, but none of them helped me. I read of your Heart and Nerve Pills, and tried only a few boxes, and I can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can now sleep as well as ever, and can advise anyone who suffers from heart trouble to from his point of view, is that it occ

Political Satire In a Novel

[By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

It was Disraeli who invented the political novel. "Coningsby" was such example of this species of the novel of thrown it when the engine, hot with manners. There have been numerous sum of human knowledge rather than thirst, had stopped at a lonely tank in imitations of Disraell's masterpiece, and Mrs Humphry Ward has produced probably the best stories of this class in our an understanding of how England (and that could compare with the red which day, but it has always seemed strange inferentially, how other nations) devel- the average Calgary citizen saw when to me that there have not been more develop this form of satire. When we do run across political novels they are by second-rate writers; the big guns among English writers at any rate, avoid satire and satisfy themselves in the lists of Venus, perhaps because they feel that the general public have no very impetuous appetite for Coningsby It is, therefore, interesting to chron-cle the appearance of an English novel which sports characters well known to engaged in the whirl of politics at Westminster This new political satire is by Mr. H. H. Munro and is entitled "The Unbearable Eassington" (John Lane, London). Mr. Munro has changed the names of his characters slightly, but the majority of English, and even Cana dian, readers will be able to guess the originals of Sir Edward Roan, the Liberal foreign secretary; Lady Caroline Benares, the elderly Socialist aristocrat, or Sherard Blaw, the dramatist Courtenay Youghal, M. P., is described as the young man whose knowledge of the middle east was an embarrassment to bate." This brilliant, cynical young man we are told, is able to give Sir Edward, Commons, on the question of Persia, so widow, "I'd have you understand that is the original, for he is generally re garded as an authority on the Middle Carcline the satirical splendors of this novel, let us look at the dreaded foe of at a Sunday School treat, "won't you Sir Edward through our novelist's spyglass, "He is," we are told, "a political "Well, then, put some in your pock- spurwinner, who seems absurdly youthfu! to a generation that has never heard of Pitt. It was Yaughal's ambition-or perhaps his hobby-to infuse into the grayness of modern political life some of the color of Disraelian dandyism, tempered with the correctness of Angle-Saxon taste, and supplemented by the flashes of wit that were inherent from the Celtic strain in him. His success was only a half measure.

The public missed in him that touch of blatancy which it looks for in its rising public men; the decorative smoothhave been wholly lost sight of in the ness of his chestnut-golden hair and the torrent of hysterical gush with which lively sparkle of his epigrams were counted to him for good, but the restrained ravats were as wasted efforts

This is clever enough, but Mr. Munro cores highest when he draws a penportrait of Lady Caroline, the aristoratic Socialist:

"Lady Caroline Benares had reached hat age when you can say and do what you like in defiance of people's most sensitive feelings and most cherished antinathies. Not that she had waited to attain her present age before pursuing that line of conduct; she came of a family whose individual members went through life, from the nursery to the grave, with as much tact and consideration as a cactus hedge might show in going through a crowded bathing tent. "It was a compensating mercy that they disagreed rather more among themselves than they did with the outside world; every known variety and shade of religion and polities had been pressed into the family service to avoid the possibility of any agreement on the larger essentials of life, and such uncoked-for happenings as the home rule schism, the tariff reform upheaval, and the suffragette crusade were thankfully seized on as furnishing occasion for fur-

her differences and subdivisions. "Lady Caroline's favorite scheme entertaining was to bring jarring and antagonistic elements into close conact and play them off remorselessly one agginst the other.

One gets much better results under these circumstances,' she used to observe, 'than by asking people who wish to meet each other. Few people talk so brilliantly to impress a friend as they do to depress an enemy.

Lady Caroline, says Mr. Munro, was professed Socialist in politics, chiefly, was believed, because she was thus enabled to disagree with most of the Liberals and Conservatives, and all the other Socialists of the day. She did not permit her Socialism, however, to pene trate below stairs; her cook and butler had every encouragement to be individualists. She is in reality a sort of female Bernard Shaw. This is why Mr. Munro makes her disagree with Sherard Blaw, the dramatist. It is amusing to hear her say that she regards Bernard (or Sherard) as somewhat out of date. "The whole of the Sherard Blaw school of discursive drama suggests, to my mind early Victorian furniture in a travelling circus," she declares. "However, you will always have relays of people from the suburbs to listen to the Mocking Bird of yesterday, and sincerely imagine it is the harbinger of something new and evolutionizing.

On seeing the noted dramatist entering the theatre, Lady Caroline turns to a silver-haired archdeacon who sits beside her and wittily remarks. "I'm out for a ride," the motorist cried

"They say the poor man is haunted by the fear that he will die during a general election, and that his obituary otices will be seriously curtailed by the space taken up with the election results. The curse of our party system,

For the length of the whole act she is subjected to a violent cross-examination, and her very guilessness serves to entangle her. The counsel is brutally direct, quick to press the brand upon the woman, yet in the next breath expressing his regret at

The play is skillfully woven, and the woman upon the rack of the divorce intricacies of cross-examination, as chapter to the drama that is deserving of a high place. There is a play of light epigram in the piece and clever and very natural lines. The lover at one time describing the engrossed husband statesthat "his heart beats by act of parlia ment."

With a number of the members of his own English company, Mr. Lewis Waller will appear at the Grand tomorrow evening, making his initial bow here. Mr. Waller's "A Marriage of Convenience" is possibly one of his most successful roles, for, written by the master hand of Dumas, it gives the actor the opportunity to show himself as the distinguished courtier, the brilliant wit, the suavegentleman of old France of 1750, a character in which the distinguished Englishman should excel. Mr. Waller has already appeared in Montreal and Toronto, scoring an enormous triumph in each city with a capacity business. The seat sale while at the Royal Alexandra in Toronto last week for the engagement of this distinguished player was one of the greatest in the history of the theatre;

LONDON, TUESDAY, JAN. 7. LONDON AND THE YEAR 1912,

When the historian of the city London takes up his pen he will devote a special chapter to the year 1912. He will be obliged to record that in November the citizens were startled by a project for "scrapping" the London and Port Stanley Railway, and converting it into an electric road at a cost nearly $900,000; and that the only evidence in support of it was supplied by two electrical engineers who had had THE LOCAL OPTION CONTESTS.

It may not be too much to say that there is not now upon this continent a man of Mr. Gras' years who has any more scholarly attainments too. than this graduate of the Western University. While here his work was of such a character as to warrant the Harvard University authorities in making an opportunity for him to pursue his course as a post-graduate student. His work at Harvard resulted in realone but in the building of sound the very word "reform." scholarship and the acquiring of wise and accurate methods of investigation and research.

Two or three years ago, the Harvard authorities awarded him a "travelling scholarship," which entitled him to spend his time in Great Britain or Europe, investigating such historical subjects of interest and importance as he might desire. Mr. Gras chose as his subject for investigation "The Origin of the National Customs-Revenue of England." After a scholarly, laborious and able examination of the literature on the subject, followed by a re-examination of the original sources of information already consulted by other and more general investigators, he pushed his inquiry further, and went into a minute examination of the Calendar of Charter Rolls, the Calendar of Close Rolls, the Calendar of Patent Rolls, Rotuli Litterarum Patentium, Rotuli Litterarum Clausarum, Rotuli Chartarum, the King's Remembrancer, the Customs Accounts of the Exchequer, the Pipe Rolls, and about 25,000 Port books. Much of this original material had been examined before, particularly by Hall and Dowell, but not with such a single eye to the constitutional history of the customs revenue. Some of the results of Mr. Gras' work have been published in the last

Mr. Gras will be an important link in the chain of investigators who are melting and will soon completely dissolve the doctrines of Rousseau's "Social Contract," and of that school of political philosophers whose writings group themselves fore and aft unhistorical Frenchman.

All friends of the Western University congratulate Mr. Gras on his able work, and each alumnus is a whit prouder of his alma mater because of a fellowstudent's achievement

Framing a tariff for the mother country is a new duty some British statesmen would thrust on the selfgoverning Dominions. Every Britisher who didn't like the result would then blame it on the Dominions. Some of the so-called Empire cementers have ; strange brand of cement.

The Democrats in Congress have begun the revision of the tariff, "Big Business' may try to precipitate a panie to frighten the House or the Senate into timid measures, but business conditions, under the stimulus of a bumper crop, are decidedly healthy. At the time of the last spell of depression coinciding with Democratic tariff legislation, between 1892 and 1896, the financial system of the country had been run down by an overdose of silver. Could Not Sleep Well For Four Years. HEART AND NERVES WERE BAD.

To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pace the bedroom floor with nerves unhinged, heart action wrong, and to whose eye sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.

Mrs. Wm. Douglas, Thessalen, Ont., writes:-"I am going to send you my testimonial for what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. For four years I could not sleep well at night, as my heart and nerves were so bad. I tried all the doctors here, but none of them helped me. I read of your Heart and Nerve Pills, and tried only a few boxes, and I can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can now sleep as well as ever, and can advise anyone who suffers from heart trouble to try them."

Political Satire In a Novel

(By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

It was Disraeli who invented the political novel. "Coningsby" was such imitations of Disraeli's masterpiece, and Mrs. Humphry Ward has produced probof the Red Book, or anywhere else, ably the best stories of this class in our day, but it has always seemed strange to me that there have not been more successful attempts in recent years to develop this form of satire. When we do run across political novels they are by second-rate writers; the big guns, among English writers at any rate, avoid satire and satisfy themselves in the lists of Venus, perhaps because they feel that the general public have no very impetuous appetite for Coningsby

It is, therefore, interesting to chronicle the appearance of an English novel which sports characters well known to this generation, real characters who are engaged in the whirl of politics at Westminster. This new political satire is by Mr. H. H. Munro and is entitled "The Unbearable Eassington" (John Lane, London). Mr. Munro has changed the names of his characters slightly, but the majority of English, and even Canadian, readers will be able to guess the originals of Sir Edward Roan, the Liberal foreign secretary; Lady Caroline Benares, the elderly Socialist aristocrat; or Sherard Blaw, the dramatist Courtenay Youghal, M. P., is described as the young man whose knowledge of the middle east was an embarrassment to ministers at question time, and in debate." This brilliant, cynical young man, we are told, is able to give Sir Edward, "He'll make a good husband for the foreign secretary, a hot time in the Commons, on the question of Persia, so that it is quite likely that Lord Curzon widow, "I'd have you understand that is the original, for he is generally regarded as an authority on the Middle East, As Youghal shares with Lady Carcline the satirical splendors of this Bertie," said the hospitable hostess novel, let us look at the dreaded foe of Sir Edward through our novetist's spyof Pitt. It was Yaughal's ambition-or perhaps his hobby-to infuse into the grayness of modern political life some of the color of Disraelian dandvism tem Saxon taste, and supplemented by the flashes of wit that were inherent from the Celtic strain in him. His success was only a half measure. The public missed in him that touch of blatancy which it looks for in its rising public men; the decorative smooth ness of his chestnut-golden hair and the lively sparkle of his epigrams were counted to him for good, but the restrained sumptuousness of his

"If he had habitually smoked cigarettes in a pink coral mouthpiece of worn spats of Mackenzie tartan, the great heart of the voting man and the gush of the paragraph-makers might have been unreservedly his."

This is clever enough, but Mr. Munro scores highest when he draws a penportrait of Lady Caroline, the aristocratic Socialist:

"Lady Caroline Benares had reached that age when you can say and do what you like in defiance of people's ished antipathies. Not that she had waited to attain her present age before of a family whose individual members representing various interests; nor went through life, from the nursery to the grave, with as much tact and consideration as a cactus hedge might show in going through a crowded bath-

"It was a compensating mercy that they disagreed rather more among themselves than they did with the outside world; every known variety and shade of religion and polities had teen pressed into the family service to avoid the possibility of any agreement on the larger essentials of life, and such unlooked-for happenings as the home rule schism, the tariff reform upheaval, and the suffragette crusade were thankfully seized on as furnishing occasion for fur-

her differences and subdivisions. "Lady Caroline's favorite scheme entertaining was to bring jarring and antagonistic elements into close conact and play them off remorselessly one agginst the other

One gets much better results under circumstances,' she used to observe, 'than by asking people who wish to meet each other. Few people talk so brilliantly to impress a friend as they do to depress an enemy."

Lady Caroline, says Mr. Munro, was professed Socialist in politics, chiefly, was believed, because she was thus enabled to disagree with most of the Liberals and Conservatives, and all the other Socialists of the day. She did not you oblige, Mr. Henderson? permit her Socialism, however, to penetrate below stairs; her cook and butler ad every encouragement to be individualists. She is in reality a sort of fe male Bernard Shaw. This is why Mr. Munro makes her disagree with Sherard Blaw, the dramatist. It is amusing to hear her say that she regards Bernard (or Sherard) as somewhat out of date. "The whole of the Sherard Blaw school of discursive drama suggests, to my mind early Victorian furniture in a travelling circus," she declares. "However, you will always have relays of people from the suburbs to listen to the Mocking Bird of yesterday, and sincerely imagine it is the harbinger of something new and revolutionizing."

On seeing the noted dramatist en tering the theatre. Lady Caroline turns to a silver-baired archdeacon who sits eside her and wittly remarks. "They say the poor man is haunted by the fear that he will die during a

For the Hostess

A prospective hostess has issued invitations for a pretty shower to be given in konor of a girl who is to be a January bride. It is to be a luncheon with eight guests, each to send a handkerchief. For the table centrepiece there is to be quite a large "Jack Horner" pie, from which broad pink ribbons are to go to each plate; on the end the name will be done in gold lettering.

After the luncheon, when the ribbons are pulled, the one for the honored guest will have a shower of handker chiefs on the end; this is made by taking each handkerchief in the centre and tying it with a bit of baby ribbon, then fastening all on to the broad ribbon, after the manner in which shower' bouquet is constructed.

On the ends of the ribbons for the quests there will a pink rose.

Consult An Expert

There are times when it is advisable for the most competent to consult an expert. One of those occasions is when you are just going to buy a piano, because you will probably live with the instrument for the rest of your life. The average man is not a piano expert. J. J. Callaghan is. The consultation won't cost you anything; in fact, it will probably SAVE you $100.

Drop in and hear the Martin-Orme Piano, ask about its construction, and learn why experts think so highly of it. If you purchase a MARTIN-ORME, rest assured you are paying for the piano,

The London Bonspiel Postponed

The London City Bonspiel, which was to have commenced this afternoon, was postponed until Feb. 4, at a meeting of the committee held in the Grigg House last evening. The action of the committee in postponing the event was due to the soft weather of the past week or so. Although the local rinks had a fair sheet of ice, the weather was so uncertain that it is doubtful if the bonspiel could be run over satisfactorily. The entry list was also uncertain owing to the doubtful weather, and this also led the committee in charge to arrange for a postponement. Secretary Tillson will wire all

Announcement of Removal

The rattling of stones at the cave entrance made Julie sit up with a glad leap of her heart. Then she heard a low snorting grunt and saw a fat furry body press through the opening, followed by a second and larger form. For a moment they seemed like apparitions, but in a second she recognized them as a big black bear and cub. Attracted by the heat and the scent of food, they, too, had sought shelter here. She crouched as far back as possible, with her eyes glued upon them, hardly daring to breathe. We beg to advise our many patrons hat after Jan. 1, 1913, we will be established in our new premises, 348 Talbot street, near York street, and cordially nvite your inspection.

The cub continued towards the flames, but the mother stopped to sniff and blink through tiny black eyes at the other presence there. Then, with a low growl, she ambled on toward the food which had been left in the frying-pan on the ground. Slow and clumsy though she was, she revealed power in every lumbering movement. With a quick blow of one of her forefeet she sent the pan spinning across the cave and summoned her cub to share in the scattered contents. So for a moment they busied themselves, shying away from the fire.

Julie watched them. She knew that the

Julie was concerned this whole affair was still too unreal to be judged sanely. This man had just fought for her life against a forest creature, and had conquered. Shouldr to shoulder by his side, she stared out at the dark with him and was content. As for him, he knew only that she had clung to him and that when he had taken her. In his arms she had not resisted. He knew that here this second she was close to him, and that because they are not the same of the second she was close to him, and that because they are containly and so act so mildly, but so certainly and so beneficially. BY FREDERICK ORIN BARTLETT. CHAPTER XI.

The Cave Woman.

As soon as he had left, Julie crouched for warmth and comfort as close to the light and heat of the flames as possible. It made a big difference whether or not he was here with her. But the knowledge that he would soon be back again calmed her fears. In the waiting itself she found a certain excitement which sharpened the illusion that she was living in some bygone day when men and women stood stark in their relations one to another. She felt as primitive as any of the roving things wandering among the trees here on the mountain top. In this particular situation the rest of the world seemed to play no part whatever. The episode was isolated from all the rest of her life. It was now just he and she, and it was he who was responsible for this. He looked so big and self-confident by and in himself that it seemed possible for them to live on here indefinitely. He would hunt and fish for her, bring her water and make her warm with fire, and lead her among the pleasant places in the sunlighted forest. It gave her a sense of delightful vagabondage, and in the intensity of this gypsy emotion she lost herself completely.

Her hair had fallen about her face, and the heat from the fire struck the length of her tired body and enveloped her as in a blanket. He wanted to throw his coat over her shoulders, but she would not and bound it as tightly as he could. He

"I believe I can sleep," she said.

He assisted her to the fragrant couch, and she found it very comfortable. The heat from the fire struck the length of her tired body and enveloped her as in a blanket. He wanted to three his coat over her shoulders, but she would not allow it.

"You must get some rest yourself," she said solicitousty.

"Don't worry 'bout me," he said, as he squatted the other side of the fire.

"You must get yourself some boughs and lie down," she insisted sleepily.

"You must lie down. You must..."

But her eyes had already closed. He smiled and settled back comfortably where he could watch her.

She woke up several times during the ound of his return. Nat seemed like a sew man to her up here, where his fear-ssness and his physical strength beame his most dominant characteristics. It had never before shown her the positive side of his nature. She had known im merely as a shy, good-natured fellow, who in his attentions to her had rought forth nothing but the commonlace. Now for the first time she saw him she really was big and primitive as a smiled and settled where he could watch her.

She woke up several times during the night when he was obliged to fix the fire. But each time is was only for a minute. Generally she just smiled at him, stirred into a more comfortable position, and, closing her eyes, fell asleep once more. Towards morning it grew colder. He piled on more wood, and, removing his coat gently laid it over her shoulders. The cave was fairly warm, but when he did feel a bit chilly he roused himself and paced back and forth with a remarkably soft tread for so heavy a man.

[To be Continued.] place. Now for the first time she saw him as he really was, big and primitive as a savage. She thrilled with the power of sim. She felt that it was impossible to fear anything with him near, neither wind nor dark, nor wild beasts nor spirits. Most significant of all, he relieved her of all responsibility to herself. She had no need of remaining on guard. With her eyes half closed she pictured him fighting his way down the rugged slopes to the spring; saw him stoop and fill his pail, and then scramble up the heights again. She saw his broad back

The new board of health of London will consist of three members, the mayor, Dr. Hutchinson, the medical health officer, and one other.

The suggestion was made some time ago that the new board should consist of three of the aldermen. This was was defeated. The liquor interests considered a proper step towards made a dead-set all through the cam-bringing all the spending bodies under paign and spared nothing to prevent he control of the council,

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable, Depressed?

When That Languid, Laggy, Easily-Tired Feeling Comes, Your Liver Is Slow.

Tells How To Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was singgish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, languor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker, because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in cleaning up my systems. A Journalist Tells of the Advantages of Keeping Nerviline Handy on the Shelf.

Fifty years ago Nerviline was used rom coast to coast, and in thousands f houses this trusty liniment served the entire family, cured all their minor ills and kept the doctor's bill small. Mr. G. G. Rhynard, Mill Village, N.S., writes:—"I have had occasion to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and can say that it is certainly a good medicine. About a year ago I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and left them in a very weak state. The cough racked me terribly, and I was in despair, until a friend advised Dr. Wood's Norway. Pine Syrup. I took five bottles, in all, and it cured me of my cough, and left my lungs strong and well."
