A Toronto report says: John Henry Heard, a young man 25 years of age, was instantly killed last' evening by a trolley car going west on King street. The unfortunate man was employed as assistant foremen at the Polson Iron Works, and was in the habit of riding to and from his work on a bicycle. Last evening he left the shop shortly after 6 o'clock, and was proceeding along King street towards his home at No. 35 Wellington avenue. It is understood that when opposite Government House he turned cut to pass a trolley car which was gaing in the same direction, and when he got about ten yards in front of the moving car turned in between the rails on to the asphalt pavement. Another bicycle rider whose name was not ascertained turned in at the same moment from the opposite side of the track and the two riders collided. Heard was thrown from his wheel immediately in front of the appraching trolley, and realizing his danger, made a desperate attempt to save himself, but it was too late. In a moment the car was upon him. The body was frightfully mangled, the left leg being completely severed from the body. The remains were remayed to the morgue in the police patrol waggon, and an inquest will be held before Coroner Atkins this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The deceased lived with his father and mother on Wellington avenue, and was Arthur Polson's brother-in-law.

They Make a Run on a Bank and Keep Tellers Busy.

A London cable says: The great building and bank society, which was announced in these depatches on Friday as being involved in the failure of the London & General Bank, the Liberal or Permanent Building & Investment Society and the House & Land Investment Trust, is the Birkbeck Bank. The Birkbeck Bank is the oldest of the associated building trusts. To-day a run was made on the bank, and the premises were choked with customers withdrawing their money. The demands were met with rapidity. The manager attributed the run on the bank to the position brought about by the failure of building societies. He said: "Our total liabilities, which we may be called to pay on demand, amount to £5,674,000. We have securities on which we can immediately realize £5,544,000 and have money locked up in lands and buildings."

This evening the crowd of creditors of the bank was greatly augmented. Wild excitement prevailed, although the bank at 6 colock was still paying every one who demanded his money. The authorities of the Birkbeck Bank announced this evening that the Union Bank has guaranteed them the sum of £1,000,000 with which to meet their liabilities. DEPOSITORS IN A PANIC

The Caution of the Servia's Captain Averts a Bisaster.

A London cable says: Passengers landed at Queenstown by the Servia agree that they had a narrow escape when the steamship collided with the American sailing vessel the Undaunted. The credit for their safety, they say, is due to Capt Dutton, who, throughout the fog, proceeded very contiously with the Servia's bells ringing and her fog-horn blowing. The 'fog began on September 5th. It was no dense that a person could hardly see half a ship's length ahead. The speed of the Servia was immediately alsokened. At 2 c'clock on the morning of the 6th many of the passengers felt a slight shook, although about half of the passengers aboard were not even aroused from their sleep. About twenty persons ran on deck, and saw a big ship so near at hand that Capt. Dutton was calling out to learn if she needed assistance. The Undaunted's captain said that she had received no injuries, and proceeded. An examination of the Servia was also made, showing no damage had been done her. The Caution of the Servia's Captain Averts

She—That couple in front of us—do you think that they are married?

She—Why, how do you know?

He—Haven't you noticed that when a pretty girl comes on the stage abe always hands the opera glasses over right away.

can't no opera giasses over right away.

"Ask a married woman how her husband came to propose, and what do you think she'll say! In nineteen cases out of twenty it is: "Why, I don't know—it all seemed to come around that way—don't remember any special circumstance." One little woman that I know said that; then she added: "Ted said after he had made a goose of himself, '8sy, Bess, what did I say, anyway? I don't remember; and I just told him that I didn't know myself, but I was pretty sure that he did the saking, and that it wasn't my fault either."

because it is not in condition to enforce the terms dictated by its sense of right and justice.

It will not do to say that this is an old and determined contention. The Ten Commandments are thousands of years old, but they and the doctrine of Tariff Reform will be taught and preached until mankind and the Republican party shall heed the injunction, "Thou shalt not steal."

The laboring man, bearing in his hand all indispensable contribution to our growth and progress, may well insist, with manly courage and as a right, upon the same recognition from those who make our laws as is accorded to any other citizen having a valuable interest in charge.

It is evident that tariff regulation by treaty diminishes that independent control over its own revenues which is essential for the safety and welfare of any government. Emergency calling for an increase of tixation may at any time arise, and no engagement with a foreign power should exist to hamper the action of the Government.

Queen Victoria's Dolls. At Osborne, in a room of her pretty country honee, where Queen Victoria had been staying for a few weeks, a wonderful party of dolls is just now assembled. Such funny or entures they are, with wooden heads and hair combed down flat over their ears, and then caught up and twisted in a prim little knot at the back. They are Dutch dolls, and when the Queen was a little girl sho used to play with them and make their clothes. That was long before the days of elegant wax, or chins, or composition dolls. For a long time these dolls had been stored away somewhere in Buckingham Palace, but the other day Sir Henry Ponsonby found them quite accidentally, and Low they have come to great honor and glory, and are being photographed sand admired and fondled. One of their attractions is that they are dressed in the national costumes of as many different countries as there are dolls in this royal company.

A Locdon cable says: The Shanghai correspondent of the Times tays: A mob in northwest Sze-Chuen, attributing a severe drought there to the alleged evil influence of the Christian missions, grievously assaulted a missionary named Turier and his wife. The couple fared very badly at the hands of the infuriated crowd of natives and would very likely have been put to death if the officials of the palace had not rescued them.

A Paris cable says: The French forces in Dahomey are advancing into the interior and are meeting with little opposition. A revolution broke out at Abomey, the capital, and King Behanzin returned from the field to restore order. She Wanted a Herre and Nothing was Tee Good for Her.

Agropos of the late Countess of Resebery, I recall a story of a visit she paid to the stables of Mr. Cox, the horse dealer, of Stamford atreet, some years ago. He was in his yard one day when a lady, not particularly noticeable either for elegance of figure or attire, walked up to him unattended and said she wanted to look at a park hack. He glanced at her for a moment and then led her to a stable with a couple of loose stalls, recommending the choice of two hacks, one at £120, one at £150. The lady did not jump at the offer. "I want something better than either of those." "Of course, madam, you can have the best horse in the kingdom if you like to pay the price for it," was the eply.

After a pause, the visitor quietly said: "Do you know the horse that Lady—rides in the park now? I want something about as good as that, or better; something in that style at any rate, perfect in its pace, temperate, and, as I think, matchiess in form and color." Know the horse, madam! I should think I do," said Mr. Cox. "Why, I sold it to the lady. Do you know what the figure was? £500! I could not match that figure was? £500! I could not match it he figure was? £500! Like her, because that Whittier, who, more than any other poet, is the American Burns, should have had his genius wakened into life by the poetry of the Scottiah bard.
While a mere boy Whittier heard an old Scotch peddler who stopped at his father's house overnight, sing several of Burns' simple, touching melodies. His heart throbbed and burned with emotion, and he began to bear similar strains reashing through his own mind.

"I began to make rhymes myself and to imagine stories and adventures," he tells us. He began to write verses everywhere
—under the fences, in the attic, in the barn, wherever he could do so unseen. When pen and ink were not forthcoming, he used chalk, and even charocal. His family were greatly surprised to discover one day some verses of his hidden under a heap of rubbish in the garret.

One day Whittier was busy helping his father build a stone wall, when the postman flung a newspaper at him. He took it up and, to his amazement, his eye fell upon a poem of his own called "The Exile's Departure."

"What is the matter with thee ?" exclaimed his father, noticing his dazed expression. Whittier kept his own counsel and resumed work on the wall, but could not help stealing glance after glance at the newspaper that lay on the ground before him to assure himself he was not dreaming.

The editor of the paper thought so much of the poem and others that followed it that he drove over to see the author. Whittier, then only 18, was sunbrowned from the fields where he was hoeing, clad only in shirt, trousers and straw hat. He slipped into the kitchen, donned a coat and a pair of ahoes, and went into the parlor to greet the editor, who proved to be William Lloyd Garrison, then poor and unknown.

This was the beginning of a lifelong friendship between two men, who, hand in hand, were to lead the fight against slavery and gain themselves an immortal name.
