the outlook in Manitoba is better than it has been for years, and we are encouraged to hope that our flour will be cheaper than has been the case for the past year at least. The stock in Manitoba has wintered well and the date at which the grass was sufficient for feeding was earlier this year than last. One of the results of the early disappearance of snow was early seeding. The wheat was sown at the beginning of April. There were two frosts in May, but fortunately the wheat escaped injury, though the oats and barley suffered some damage. The total area under wheat is 623,245 the wharves where lumber is sent away acres, an increase of 191,111 acres acres, an increase of 191,111 acres over 1887. One great staple, the apple, although at first a large crop was anticipated, will, it is feared, hardly be up to the average. We hear the complaint from all quarters that the fruit, which sat well, has fallen off in large quantities. Past experience has shown however that when we have a small crop of apples the quality is generally first class; and if good prices prevail our orchardists may be able to realize as much as they would with a large crop of poor quality fruit at small prices.

And looked across to where,
Upon the other side, I saw
The lights reflected there:
And, as I gazed, a longing came
To reach that place once more.
And walk upon the good old soil
I'd often trod before.

Last night I dream'd that once again I saw the old, old home— Where oft, when I was but a lad, My wandering steps did roam— I'd crossed unto the other side Of this wide, running stream; Alas! I woke in full delight, To find it but a dream.

Oa, could I but retrace the years!
And backward go once more,
I would not then be cursing fate
Upon this barren shore.
What recks it that I have the gold
Wherewith to pass all time?
Since I must while away the years
In this most wretched clime!

Ye stars that shine so bright to-night, In yonder yault above, How merrily ye're looking down On friends that I do love. Would I were there; but yawns a gulf, Wide as eternity! The sheriff arm, the broken trust, Doom me to misery!

"I should think that gang ought to be !. GETTING INFORMATION.

"I should think that gang ought to be broke up," he said.

He expected no rejoinder, and got none. The School Board's attention centered upon no such whimsical irrelevancy.

"Reckon you're the one to notify her. Thornton," said Saunders, again.

He wriggled unquietly on his stool.

Thornton sat motionless. Whether in fact or by a trick of the ill-burring lamp on the counter, his good-looking face with its heavy, light moustache, appeared pale. He sat with his arms crossed on his knees and his syes on the floor, silent.

"Jest so," said Kinney, with an air of impartial decision. "You can git it off better in Saunders or me, Thornton. You're a better lookin' man, anyhow, and you're better ringsed up," he concluded, with politic amiableness.

"But will you tell me the number of graduates?"

"Oh, ever so many, and they are just the brightest girls. Oh, it is such a wonderful."

It was not the custom in Fence Corners to rap; it would have been looked upon as a useless formality. He stepped into Bissel's large, scantily furnished, rag-carpet of best roun.

He gasped as he stood there. He had vaguely hoped for a little reprieve, but she sat there by the lamp, alone, bending over some work. She rose at his entrance, and came forward a little to offer her hand.

but he did not see it, and she dropped it back in awkward haste. "Won't you take a chair?" she said.
She brought one forward. Thorr ton sat down. He dropped his hat as he did so, and picked it up with a red face. Then he sat still. He would have tried to speak, but he knew he could not; his tongue felt thick and immovable.

kinew he could not; his tongue feit thick and immovable.

"IVs snowing, ain't it," said the school-teacher; she bore the marks of diffidence herself in her timorous voice and look.

Thorton nodded; it was all he could do. He stared at her fixedly, almost vacuously. His mind wandered back and strove to anchor itself to something. Once he had spent an evening at Bissel's, on the occasion of a sociable, and taken her hand in one of the games; once he had overtaken her, in a wagon, on her way to school and given her a lift. That was all. He thought it might have been less hard for him if there had been something more, but that was all him morbid self-distrustfulness had allowed him.

The following testimonials will be of valuable service to all intending using dyes and want to be sure of getting good reliable dyes:—

We the undersigned have used and sold all kinds of dyes, but have found none near so good as the "Excelsior" dyes; for which we can truly say that the "Excelsior" dyes are the best dyes that can be used. They are sold by all first-class grocers and druggists at only 8 cents per package, which is cheaper than other dyes, and they will also dye more goods than any dyes we ever used; and a trial of a package or two will soon convince all that are interested in dyeing. They will not fade like other dyes and they are so simple to use that any child can use them; and are economical, brilliant and durable colors.
