THE SQUIRE'S GRAND-DAUGHTERS.
BY ROSA MULHOLLAND.

“Never mind Margaret. We will leave her out of our conversation. I allow she was in every way different from you. Still she was some one to speak to, and now that she is—er—dead, you are not much of a person to live alone in these spacious chambers. So I have arranged that you shall have a companion.”

“Oh!” said Fifiue, thinking he meant her to have a chaperon, and instantly resolving to make the troublesome old lady, whoever she might be, do everything just as she ordered.

“Miss Justina Winthrop is coming to pay you a visit.”

Fifiue smiled. “That was not so bad. A house must be a little gay where there are visitors.”

“I shall do my best to entertain her,” said Fifiue, sitting very straight in her chair, and looking important.

“And I may as well tell you at once,” continued the squire, “that I have serious views in bringing Miss Winthrop here.”

Fifiue cast about. “Perhaps he is going to marry her,” she thought. “Oh, poor me! poor Rene!”

“You must understand that I intend to make Rene my heir, and I have other views some time ago. But owing to certain disappointments, I have changed my plans. Here the squire gave arown to Margaret’s implacability. “Rene will be Squire of Amberwolds. And that being so, he will require to have a suitable wife.”

“Rene! So it was Rene who was to be married?”

“Yes, Rene, who was like her little tame dog, to be petted or knocked about just as she was in the humor. It was ridiculous to think of him as the husband of a dignified English wife. And Rene to be Squire of Amberwolds! Fifiue felt that all this news would require a good deal of reflection on her part presently.

“Little fool!” thought the squire, observing her, “she thought she was going to be mistress here.”

Messaline Fifiue had regained her presence of mind and cleared her countenance.

“You may rely on me to do my best to entertain Miss Winthrop,” she said, “and I hope she is a sensible girl, for Rene is certainly a goose.”

“She is a rock of sense. Girls who do not marry are always,” said M. Dunois, and Fifiue laughed, reflecting complacently that no one could accuse her of being a rock of sense. Nevertheless, she begged the belief that she was as sharp-witted as the squire himself, in spite of her pretty face; and the squire, observing the play of her eyes and lips, concluded that she had better include her in his plans for the property of the family, as she was quite cunning enough to interfere in her usual way to spoil his arrangements, and quite clever enough to do so with success.

“A sixth can ruin the most costly stuff,” he thought. “And Fifiue is a snob. She may find a way to destroy the fabric I am weaving so painfully.”

Then he said: “I may as well tell you, my dear, that if you believe nicely in this matter and help to carry out my intention, I shall not forget you either. I will take care to find you a proper husband, even if I have to go back to France to search for him.”

“Though meaning to please her, M. Dunois could not, for the life of him, help planning a sting in the tail of the speech that he had intended to be encouraging. And the only part of the speech that told on Fifiue, was the sting.

“After he had left her the three hours’ full length on the hearth rug, and clasped her little hands above her head and thought: “So this was all that had come of getting rid of Margaret. Rene the squire, and his wife mistress of Amberwolds! Why, she should be very important under the shadow of the squire’s mansion, the mistress of the mansion, the lady of the house, and then a husband found for her. Ah, she would tell when he meant by saying that he had to go to France to search for one! Fifiue had remarked that during the past year, while Margaret was in all her distress, had had many visits, though she had never seen her; but he had never seen her, and she had never seen her, and she had never seen her.”

“I don’t know, indeed.”

“Neither do I, I think, so neither what you do, he will, in the end, have to make you Squire of Amberwolds.”

“Then you think I may venture to refuse to marry Miss Winthrop?”

“Yes,” said Fifiue, clasping both her little hands over his arm, and looking sweetly at him.

“Oh, Fifiue! Do you mean that you will stick to me and take the chance?”

“I don’t know, indeed.”

Epps' Cocoa
BREAKFAST.
“By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operation of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors’ bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease.
Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape them a fatal shock by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.”—Dr. Cass

Free Farms
—IN THE—
Canadian Northwest.
Manitoba, Assiniboia,
Alberta, Saskatchewan.

C. P. R. Lands at a uniform price of $3.00 per Acre.

THE unoccupied lands in the Railway Belt, West of the Third Meridian and the Saskatchewan, Red Deer and Battle River Valley lands will be on sale commencing Monday, April 4th, at a uniform price of $3.00 per acre.
Only one-tenth of the purchase money required down. A payment of $48.00 will secure a farm of 160 acres, the balance of the purchase money is payable in nine annual instalments: interest—6 per cent. The usual regulations regarding mineral and other rights, remain in force with respect to these lands.

Edmonton Lands.—The Lands in the Edmonton District will be sold by Auction at Edmonton on 3rd May.

The Government give one quarter section (160 acres) free to every bona fide settler. A second quarter section can be presented by different payments.

The Canada Northwest has the most productive soil in the world. Its wheat fetches the highest price; its live cattle are admitted to the English market, while United States cattle are not.
There is a market for the farmer at every station; and there are schools and churches wherever there are settlers. It is not subject to drought nor floods, to grasshoppers or to cyclones or tornadoes.
Ask any Canadian Pacific Railway agent for books and maps concerning the sale for Farming and Ranching in Western Canada, or the “Free Farms” map, or “Actual Experiences,” and read the testimony of men who have gone there from Eastern Canada. Young women are in great demand; they find occupation as domestic directly they arrive, and readily get married to prosperous young farmers. Young men or young women can start life there almost without money. They make the money there; an independence is aid in a very few years by the thrifty.
