Oxford University.

An able contributor of The St. John New Free Press gives the following history of the Oxford University in answer to a query by a Chatham correspondent:

Oxford University is one of two great seats of English learning. Like Cambridge, it owes its origin to Catholic days, while England under the Reformation, has founded no other school half so distinguished as is either of them.

The city of Oxford as the scene of important military events, is mentioned from the time of Alfred down, but the first indisputable witness of its being a seat of learning, is Giraldus Cambrensis, about 1180. It is certain, however, that Vacarius, a Lombard from the University of Bologna, lectured on the civil law at Oxford about 1149, and a foreigner would hardly have elected this city for such a task had it not been a seat of learning. Monasteries and other religious houses existed at Oxford long anterior to any special mention of it as the seat of a university. Attached to many of these were schools which gave gratuitous instruction, and usually support, to those who were preparing for the service of the Church; and secular schools sprang up in imitation of the cloisteral institutions. Common interests induced the teachers to form a voluntary association for the discussion and decision of questions of general interest.

They chose one of their number to preside over them, and as the powers and duties of the association increased, subordinate offices were created. This association, distinct from and higher than any particular school, was the origin of the University of Oxford. The date of its foundation and the phases of its development are unknown; it had become a great and flourishing institution long before it was mentioned in any known royal decree or legislative enactment. The first known application of the word university to it, occurs in a statute of the third year of King John Lockland (1201); while the earliest known document in which the word is applied to the schools at Paris is an ordinance of Pope Innocent III. dated 1215, although it is fully certain that schools existed as spoken of by Innocent III. existed throughout Europe. King's palaces in those days, were often seats of learning, while scholars from Ireland, for instance, had already taught the Continent at diverse places.

The first charter recognizing the university as a corporate body, and conferring additional privileges upon it, was granted by Henry III. in 1244. This was followed by others from him and his successors confirming the old granting new privileges.

The religious troubles of the reign of Henry VIII. diminished the inducements to the study of theology, and from this and other causes the number of students at Oxford greatly diminished. In 1546, only thirteen degrees were conferred, and in 1552, the number of students on the books was only 1015, and of these the larger majority had quitted the university. When one knows that at an earlier date the university, for a given year, could show ten times that number, he is rather not given to be over-enthusiastic on the head of educational beneficence effected through the misnamed Reformation. An elaborate act of parliament "concerning the incorporations of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge," enacted by Elizabeth, in 1570, resumed and defined previous characters; and from that time until the passage of the act of 1854, this was regarded by both universities as the chief source of their powers and privileges. In 1603, James I. granted the privilege which still continues, of electing two representatives to parliament; they are styled burgesses. By an act of parliament passed in the third year of his reign, Catholics were disabled from presenting to any ecclesiastical benefice or nominating to any free school, hospital or "donative." The university of Oxford was loyal to the Stuarts, and it melted down its plate to assist Charles I. in his struggle with the parliament. The statutes of the university were modified in 1629, by Archbishop Laud, who was elected chancellor in 1630. His code was adopted by the university and ratified by the King in 1738, and was not essentially changed until 1854.

The university comprises twenty colleges, as follows: University College, founded by William of Durham in 1249; Balliol, by John Balliol and his wife, Davorgilla, between 1263 and 1268; Merton, by Walter de Merton, Bishop of Rochester, at Malden in 1264, removed to Oxford before 1274; Exeter, by Walter de Stapleton, Bishop of Exeter, in 1314; Oriel, by Edward II in 1326; Queen's by Robert Eglesfield, chaplain to Philip, Queen of Edward III, in 1340; New, by William of Wykeham, Bishop of Winchester, in 1386; Lincoln, in 1427; All Souls, by Henry Chichele, Archbishop of Canterbury, in 1437; Magdalen by William of Waynflete, Lord Chancellor, in 1456; Brasenose by William Smith, Bishop of Lincoln in 1509; Corpus Christi, by Richard Fox, Bishop of Winchester, in 1516; Christ Church, by Henry VIII, in 1546-47; Trinity, by Sir Thomas Pope, in 1554; St. John's by Sir Thomas Cooke in 1714; Keble, by subscription as a memorial to Rev. John Keble, in 1870. The Jesuits, it is well to remark, have a house at Oxford in connection with the University.

Life at Oxford is not like life in the American universities for instance. The college and halls examine applicants for admission previous to Matriculation, but the examination is generally not at all difficult. A student whose name has been inscribed on the books of a college or hall, or of the delegates of the unattached students, and has paid the necessary fees, is a member of the university. No university examination is required. The academic year is divided into four terms. Michaelmas term extends from Oct. 10, to Dec 17; Hilary, or Lent term, from Jan 14 to the day before Palm Sunday; Easter term, from the Wednesday after Easter day to the Friday before Whitunday; Trinity or Aot term, from the day before Whitunday to the Saturday after the first Tuesday in July, but may be continued by congregation. There is no vacation between the last two terms. To obtain the degree of B.A. it is necessary to pass three distinct examinations. The examiners are appointed by the university. The examinations are partly oral, partly written. The first examination called responsions, or in the language of the students, "the little go," is conducted by the "masters of the schools," six in number, who are nominated yearly in convocation. Responsions are held three times a year. Every candidate is examined in Latin and Greek grammar, Latin prose composition, one Latin and one Greek author, arithmetic, and either Euclid or algebra. A considerable range of choice is allowed the candidate in regard to the authors in which he wishes to be examined. Every candidate who passes responsions satisfactorily receives a certificate called a "testamur." A candidate who fails is said "to be plucked."

Having passed the responsions, the student chooses whether he will try for a "pass" or a "class," that is, whether he will simply try to get his B.A. degree, or will also try for honors. If he "reads for honors," he will find it necessary to employ a private tutor.

The second examination, called the first public, is held twice a year. It is conducted by ten moderators, and is called "moderation." The second public examination, if passed successfully, entitles the candidate to his degree. It is held twice a year, and is conducted by twenty-two public examiners, divided into six schools. No candidate can offer himself for examinations in classics before his twelfth term, unless his eleventh happens to be Easter, in which case he may offer in that term. Except in certain cases, he cannot be a candidate after his sixteenth term. For candidates for a pass merely, this examination is comparatively easy, but for honors it takes a very wide range. Logic is indispensable with candidates for the highest honors. In mathematics, the examiners can make it as severe as they choose. Poets, some of poets, and certain others of the nobility, are, by statute, entitled to certain privileges; but these are always waived, while in some colleges a refusal to waive them is sufficient ground for denying admission.

To obtain the degree of B.A. at Oxford is perhaps quite as easy as at most of the American secular colleges, to obtain the honor of a "first class," is extremely difficult. The total amount of college and university fees, payable by each student, from matriculation to graduation, is about $325. The expense of living, for an economical student is about $1,250 a year, or $1500 if he employs a private tutor.

Oxford had smiles but for Anglicans during a long course of later years, yet Catholics and non-Conformists find matters greatly changed to-day.

The students, as we may infer, are not self-taught; on the contrary, there is more "coaching" done in Oxford than in perhaps any other university.

Sonnet to St. Joseph.

BY THE REV. M. RUSSEL, F. J.

Saints know thee best, oh, hidden, silent Saint!
And would that I could feel a little part
Of that great love Theresa's kindred heart
Felt for thee, Foster-father! But the taint,
The chill, is on my soul; and few and faint
The prayers that from this earthly bosom dart
Up to that heavenly throne whereon thou art
In glory, not too high to hear my plaint.

Patron of all who work in humble ways!
Pray that from pure and earnest motive I
May fill with patient toil the moments flying;
Patron of happy death-beds! When my days
Have reached their term, be thou, dear Joseph, nigh,
With Mary and with Jesus, while I'm dying.

Items of Interest.

In the end Napoleon had to confess that, even at his dictation, France would not accept a Church which should be independent of and not responsible to Rome. The logic of the whole case insisted upon the Pope being given an all-powerful role in his own Church; there was no other way of compassing religious peace and none knew better than Napoleon that the temporal peace of the country was dependent on the people being at peace in the matter of religion—a fact which seems to have escaped the politicians of France at the present day. It was in order to circumscribe the power of the Pope as much as he could that Bismarck appended to the first Concordat, the so-called Organic Articles of which we hear so much at the present time, but which in reality had been attached to the Treaty without ever having received the sanction of Rome. Their effect was not to satisfy the supremacy of the Pope, so much as to curtail the privileges of the French clergy in a way that made their "first duty" to Rome always as ambiguous which it was hard to get over, for either Rome or the clergy

Only within the last few days have the papers begun to speak of the conversation to Catholicism of the famous writer Adolfo Rette. He has been really a fervent Catholic for nearly two years, but he has this week published the twenty-fourth volume of his works, and it contains this open profession of faith: "I believe in God and in His Church. I know that the Church is the basis of society, and that it must be defended and saved. I will fight for the Church and for the Faith; I will write versus in honor of the religion I once blasphemed, I will adore without limit what I would have once burned. Most Holy Trinity, Virgin Immaculate, my sweet morning star, help me!"

Mr. Hyman's Retirement.

Ottawa, June 15, 1907.

It is now practically admitted in Government circles that Hon. C. S. Hyman has definitely and finally retired from the Government.

THE TRIAL DELAYED.

The defence in the London conspiracy case has succeeded in postponing the criminal trial until next autumn.

THE LONDON CONSPIRACY.

As the facts brought out in this conspiracy examination have been partly forgotten it may be worth while to recall some of them.

THE CONFESSION OF COLLINS.

The first witness was Jeremiah Collins, who had been a returning officer in the by-election and who made confession of his share in the transaction.

THE METHOD OF OPERATIONS.

Collins gave the exact details of methods adopted. After he had been appointed Deputy Returning Officer O'Gorman sent for him and they arranged the system.

pay the money until they were sure of the votes. They objected to the secret ballot. Deputy returning officers, in the plot were therefore instructed to fold the ballot in such a way that when the elector brought it back marked the officer in hearing of the counterfoil could see how he had voted.

THE SAME IN OTHER DIVISIONS.

This was only one division. In another, according to Collins' testimony the deputy returning officer and another operator spent between eleven hundred and twelve hundred dollars for the same purpose.

AN INCIDENT RECALLED.

The final retirement of Mr Hyman recalls the remarkable statement made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House on the 26th of March last.

THEY HELD THE POLLS.

Beside Mr. Collins himself some of the accused were returning officers. In one case a gentleman who had been appointed returning officer had his appointment cancelled just before the election.

CONFESSION OF AN EXPERT.

Among the witnesses who testified in the inquiry was J. G. Pritchett. It is explained that the charge of criminal conspiracy includes not only the London election but several other federal and provincial contests.

some as high as twenty-three. I think that was the highest of any person doing." They were paid $5 per ballot.

O'GORMAN RECOGNISED.

Much other evidence was given before the Magistrate and much more is understood to be forthcoming. It is interesting to notice that Mr O'Gorman was not wholly neglected by his friends after the London by-election.

MR HYMAN AND THE CONSPIRATORS.

And so that matter stands. The great Liberal triumph of 1905 in London is now understood. It was all in the interest of Mr Hyman, and though he says he knew nothing about it beforehand, it is probable that he paid a large part of the bills.

His parents have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement in which we join.

Among the companies incorporated in Boston during the present year is the McDonald ice cream company of Massachusetts, for the manufacture and wholesale of ice cream. The members of the company are all natives of this Province. They are: John E. McDonald, President, of Glenora, Vernon River; Joseph A. McDonald of the same place, Vice President; J. S. McDonald Treasurer; A. H. McNeill, Secretary. The output is steadily increasing. At present the delivery is between 800 and 1,000 gallons per day. Their place of business is in South Boston. Success to our enterprising young Island friends.

Was Weak and Run Down WOULD VERY OFTEN FAINT AWAY

Mrs. J. H. Armstrong, Port Elmsley, Ont., tells of her experience with

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

She writes: "It is with gratitude I tell how your Heart and Nerve Pills benefited me."

"I was very weak and run down, had headaches nearly every day and very often would faint away. In fact, my doctor said that sometime I would never come out of the faint. It was through one of your travelling agents that I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and after taking three boxes I am glad to relate it has been a number of years since I had a fainting spell and scarcely ever have a headache. Too much cannot be said in praise of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, for in me they have effected a perfect cure."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Sensational Bargains In Whitewear.

20 p. c. off all Whitewear in Stock

Commencing to-day, and continuing until further notice, we will give extraordinary reductions on all lines of made-up whitewear. No need to give any detailed descriptions of lines. Their superiority is well known, and the enormous quantities we sell is proof positive that our moderate prices are appreciated.

See our windows for samples, then come in and secure what you need as these extraordinary discounts will not last long. We will also give

20 p. c. off all high priced Wall Paper

In order to clear out the balance of our best lines which have become very much reduced through our extraordinary selling, we will give 20 p. c. off all lines over 25 cts a roll, as we are unable to repeat on these and wish to make room for an entirely new stock for the following year.

We have already repeated on the cheaper grades and marked them so close, as to be decided snaps at their present prices. They are going out with a rush, and our advice is to secure what you need without delay.

Compare what it costs to paper a room this year with what it formerly cost, and deal with the firm, who has procured for you such extraordinary reductions. You can now purchase a whole roll of bordering, for what it formerly cost you for a single yard.

Samples sent to country trade state about what price required, and give an idea of the color also whether narrow or wide border. We are confident we can suit you.
