Happiness At Last, OR Loyalty Recompensed.

CHAPTER XXVI.
He rolled off the nefarious scheme fluently, and she listened, with her head on one side, her eyes fixed on the fire. Then she laughed.
"I dare say I could manage that," she said.
"Of course," he said, with a laugh. "The boy's in love with you. You take him unaware; give him no time to think. You can promise him anything—seeing that we can start in the morning."

She yawned. There was no compunction in her nature, no sense of shame. She had been an adventuress all her life, and a successful one—simply because of that absence of compunction and shame.

"Very well," she said. "Oh, yes; I can do it easily enough. But mind, I take that two hundred, Morgan."

His face fell.
"My dear Laura! Think of my expenses!"

She looked at him with a glint of anger in her eyes.
"I take that two hundred," she repeated, emphatically. "You have plenty of money; I know that; and I've wondered sometimes where you get it. You have had more than you got from Trevor and Deane."

He changed color, and she laughed contemptuously.
"Don't trouble to lie," she said, coolly. "I shouldn't believe you. And I don't care how you get it. All I know is, that I mean to have this bag. And do you know how I am going to spend it?"

"Another diamond bracelet? My dear, you might get it on credit."
"No; I'm going to spend it on detectives. I am going to find out that husband of mine."

Mr. Morgan Thorpe smiled a sickly smile.
"My dear Laura, you know best; but is it worth while?"

"Yes!" she said, with sudden fury. "I mean to find him. You've tried—or pretended to—and have failed. I'm going to try, and I mean to succeed."

"My dear, why be angry with me? I hope you will succeed; though why you should want him, seeing that you hate him like poison."

"Yes, you're right. I hate him like poison; and that's why I want him. I'm going to make life a hell for him."

She rose and stood looking before her with eyes which blazed with a malignant fire; her lips were parted, showing her white, even teeth; her powder showed almost yellow against her white face; her small hands were clenched tightly at her side.

Morgan Thorpe looked at her with a mixture of fear and admiration.
"Upon my soul, Laura, I don't envy him if you do find him," he said, with an uneasy laugh.

She drew a long breath.
"You'd have no cause to," she said, significantly, as she moved toward the door. "Tell me when you want me to get that money. Good-night."

The next morning Mr. Morgan Thorpe began his preparations for a sudden and secret flight. Such preparations with gentlemen of Mr. Morgan Thorpe's character are beautifully simple. They consist in getting as many articles on credit as confiding and trustful tradesmen will supply. He bought a nice stock of clothes, some choice cigars, a few—but they were costly—articles of jewelry; he borrowed as many five-pound notes as he could from men with whom he had scraped acquaintance.

It was, "By Jove! I've left my purse at home! My dear fellow, will you lend me a few pounds for to-night?" And at last, when the landlord of 31 Cardigan Terrace wrote demanding the rent by return post, Mr. Morgan Thorpe informed his sister that everything was ready for the exodus, and that she might bring off her grand coup against that young fool Deane.

She went up to her room after dinner, and locked the door, and in about an hour she came down and presented herself for approval, as it were.

Morgan Thorpe looked at her, as she stood before him, and uttered an exclamation of admiration. She was pale; there were dark rings round her eyes; but her expression was the highest achievement. She looked hunted, harassed, full of despair.

"By Heaven! you ought to have gone on the stage, Laura!" he said, preventively. "You ought, indeed. Why, you'd melt a heart of stone with that face and that look! Really, I think I should try for three instead of two hundred!"

She laughed, the heartless, callous laugh of the adventuress.
"Too high a sum would frighten my baby," she said. "Call a cab for me, Morgan. Here—give me a glass of champagne before I go."

He gave it her, still eying her with admiration.
"Perfect actress!" he murmured, ecstatically.

She laughed and nodded exultingly.
"Oh, I shall play the part all right. It's easy enough with such an innocent child as he is."

"If Trevor comes I'll have him told that you're in bed with headache."

She arrested the second glass on its way to her lips, and exclaimed:
"Thank God, I shall escape from him! He was here yesterday, and—well, that was a hard part to play! It was as much as I could do to keep from screaming out: 'I hate you—hate you! Take your hands off me!'"

Morgan Thorpe laughed.
"By this time to-morrow you will have put a good many miles between you and that too ardent lover of yours, my dear."

He called a cab, and, closely veiled, she entered and was driven off.
As she passed from the house to the cab, Trevor came round the corner. He saw her and recognized her, and he stood still for a moment, with astonishment. Then he went on to the house and knocked.

"Is Mrs. Dalton at home?" he asked, as coolly as he could.
"Yes, sir," replied the French maid, blandly; "but madame is confined to her room with a bad headache."

She saw him wince and start, saw the blood leave his face slowly.
"I'm sorry," he said, curtly. "Tell her—But never mind. Good-night, Marie."

He went down the steps and walked a few paces. Then he ran. The cab was still in sight. At the end of the street he halted, and jumped into a hansom.

"Follow that cab!" he said. "Keep out of sight if you can. Follow it, and mind you don't lose sight of it!"

He crushed an oath between his teeth.

Gaunt stood with his back to the door which he had closed on Deane—and waited. He heard the front-frou of a woman's dress; the other door opened, there came the faint perfume which he remembered so well and loathed so bitterly, and the woman, his wife, entered.

The lamp was low, and shaded by a deep crimson shade, the fire-light flickered. In the faint light she did not in the first moment or two of her entrance see him. She moved to the fire, carefully threw back the hood of her fur cape, and held out her hands to the fire; and he, motionless and in silence, watched her.

He had once loved, or persuaded himself that he had loved, this woman. He could have laughed aloud with bitter self-scorn and mockery.

She warned her hands daintily, glanced at the clock, yawned, put up her hands to smooth the hair which the hood had ruffled, then turned and looked round the room, and—saw him.

For a moment she did not recognize him, and uttered a faint cry of surprise. Then with a shriller, though strangely repressed cry, she moved toward him, her head projected, her eyes fixed on him. She looked, as she moved, like an exquisitely beautiful snake. She was within a couple of paces before the words—

"It is you!" broke from her parted lips.

Gaunt, white and rigid, made a gesture of assent.
"Yes," he said. "Why are you here?"

She drew a long breath, as if she were choking, then she came nearer, and stared at him as she broke into a laugh—a laugh of triumph, of derision.

"It is you!" she repeated. "You—my husband! Well—My God, it's too good to be true! You—you here! How did you come? Why?" She looked round the room, as if amazed and perplexed, and then back at him. Her beautiful face flushed beneath the paint; her eyes shone like stars within the artistically drawn shadows. It was the face of a mask suddenly, hideously ended with life.

"This is my home—my rooms," he said. His own voice seemed to him as if it belonged to some one speaking at a great distance.

"Your—your rooms!" she repeated, dully. Then her eyes glittered, and she laughed. "Yours! Then—then—you are Lord Gaunt?"

"I am Lord Gaunt—yes," he said, as dully and mechanically as before.

She put her hand to her forehead and then to her throat, as if the thoughts that were crowding on her were suffocating her.

"You are Lord Gaunt! These rooms are yours! And you are a nobleman—a swell—and my husband!"

"Yes," he said in exactly the same lifeless tone, "I am your husband."

She leaned against the back of a chair and breathed heavily, then she laughed.

"I have found you—found you at last! And you are Lord Gaunt! And I am—yes, I must be, of course—Lady Gaunt! Lady Gaunt! My God, this was worth living for!"

CHAPTER XXVII.
"It is worth living for!" she repeated, with a choking laugh. "To think of it!" She snatched up a book from the small table near her, and dashed her hand on the inner cover, which bore his book-plate with list of arms above his name and title. "To think that I knew you were the owner here, that I've seen your name in all these books, and never knew, never guessed—"

She paused, breathless with excitement and triumph. Her voice, usually so musical, was thick and vulgar, the vulgarity of a common nature bursting through the thin coating of veneer, and she was at that moment, for all her beauty and grace, a virago of the worst type as she confronted him.

Gaunt stood quite still, his eyes fixed on her with the calmness of despair, the impassivity of disgust.

"Why did you leave me?" she demanded, stridently. "Why did you do it?"

"Can you ask?" he said, very quietly. "Do you think it was possible for me to remain with you when I discovered—that you were, what and who it was I had married?"

The reply infuriated her. She took a step toward him, and stared into his face with the passion of hate burning in her black eyes.

"You deserted me!"
"I left you, yes," he said, as calmly as before; "but deserted—in the strict, the legal sense—no. I provided for you—"

"A beggarly allowance. You married me in a false name!"

"No," he said again, with a touch of weariness in his voice. "Edward Barnard are two of my names. I concealed my family name and title; yes, that is true. I must have had some pretense—of what you were."

She flung her arms out.
"The law will reach you, punish you!" she hissed.

He made a slight gesture of indifference.
"You can not get rid of me!" she exclaimed, with an air of triumph. "You can not divorce me! You would if you could!"

"No," he said in exactly the same tone. It was as if he were confronting the passion with the calmness of the rock to the howling wave, which beat against it in vain. "Do what you will, I should not seek for a divorce. I am content to suffer anything rather than bring shame and disgrace upon the name I bear."

"You can bring no charge against me!" she said, defiantly.
"He made a gesture of assent.
"I am glad," he said, with a sigh. "I left you because I discovered what you were before I married you. I was silent a moment!" for she had opened her lips as if about to protest retort. "Put yourself in my place. I loved you, deeming you all that a girl should be, all that a woman should be who takes the name of an honest man. I found—Ah! why should I tell you? You know."

She flung herself into a chair, and leaning her face on her hand, looked up at him with a mixture of defiance and hatred.

"What else could I do, but leave you?" he said. "What other course was open to a man of honor when he had discovered that he had married—an adventuress of the worst, the vilest type? God knows I loved you—"

She laughed discordantly.
"Not you," she retorted.

THIRTY KILLED IN "BLACK AND TAN" PANIC.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21. Thirty persons are reported to have been killed and many injured in a panic when "Black and Tans" invaded a football match to-day and fired on the crowd. While a Tipperary team was playing against a Dublin team in Croke Park in the presence of fifty thousand spectators the "Black and Tans" entered in force by two gates and after a scene of wild confusion fired on people.

FOURTEEN KILLED IN ATTACK ON MILITARY.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21. Fourteen persons were killed and six wounded in what appears to have been a prearranged simultaneous attack on military officers and former officers in their lodgings in various parts of this city to-day, according to an official announcement. The streets of the city were immediately placed under severe patrol by the military who fired their rifles to disperse the crowds. The assassinations occurred in various parts of the city at nine o'clock this morning. In one case three of the assassins captured two "Black and Tans" while they were on their way to reinforce troops and killed them. The dead included two court martial officers. Early this morning Captain Fitzgerald, military officer, was shot in his bed in Earlsfort Terrace. A quarter of an hour later two other officers were shot in their beds in Pembroke Street, a quarter of a mile away, and dangerously wounded. Three men suspected of being secret service agents likewise were attacked and shot while asleep in Hampton St. and still another man in Lower Mount Street was shot. Capt. Donald MacLean and a man named Smyth, the owner of the house and another man named Caldwell were shot in a house in Donbrooke Street. Capt. MacLean was killed instantly and Smyth died a few minutes later. Caldwell is believed to have been fatally hurt. At a house in Dagget Street Captain Newberry was shot by five men. He was in a front parlor of the house. In Graham Hotel two former officers were shot down in a fight that occurred with men who are believed to have been in the "Black and Tans" who entered the house. In Mount Street two men are reported to have been killed and a civilian wounded. During the excitement in the street "Black and Tans" in a lorry heard cries of help and answered them. A fierce encounter ensued between Irish Volunteers and "Black and Tans" in which two of the former were killed and several volunteers were wounded.

SHOOTING IN STREETS REPORTED.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21. Shooting began in the streets just before midnight and a number of people are reported killed. There is much military activity. The casualties in Croke Park is semi-officially given as ten killed and sixty-five injured, eleven seriously.

The Floral Calendar.

The floral calendar is as follows: January Snowdrop. The floral meaning of the snowdrop is atonement, constancy, hope. From its glistening bed of snowy white petals Came the snowdrop with its petals bright.

For February there is the primrose, which means early grief. Emblems of early sweetness, early death. Nestled the lovely primrose.—Bryant.

The violet meaning faithfulness, modesty, worth, is the flower of March. Out from its sunned and sheltered nooks The blue eyes of the violet looks.—Whittier.

For April there is the daisy, symbolizing innocence. That well by reason men call it maid. The Daisy, or else the eye of the day. The emprise and flour of floures all.—Chaucer.

And for May the hawthorn, which in floral language means hope. With the sunshine on a bright May morn. In raiment red—the fair hawthorn.

The flower of June is the honeysuckle (rose), meaning generosity. How sweetly smells the honeysuckle In the hushed night, as if the world were one Of utter peace, and love, and gentleness.—Tennyson.

The water lily is July's flower. Its floral meaning is purity of heart. The water lilies' soft, sweet scent is borne on the breeze. And robin red-breast sings softly from among the trees.

August's is the poppy, the symbol of consolation. In Flanders fields the poppies grow Between the crosses, row on row.—John MacCrae.

September's flower is the morning-glory, meaning affection in the language of flowers.

The hop, the flower of October, means injustice.

For November there is the chrysanthemum the flower "without a peer," which bears the floral meanings of fidelity, friendship and love.

For December with its Christmas cheer we have the holly. It means foresight—foresight into the New Year.

With trembling fingers did we weave The holly round the Christmas hearth.—Tennyson.

Politeness and Politics

Because women would never be able to discuss politics dispassionately, calmly and collectedly they should not have the vote. This used to be said. Women would get too excited about it. There was a sort of feeling that politics should be held a subject taboo at the family dinner table. It was all right when men lunched together or dined at the club, but out of respect to the women men were taught that they should not bring up political discussion at home. This sentiment prevailed on this continent very much more than in England where women of position and good breeding have always read and talked politics much more than most women have here.

Now, of course, this has changed. If women are to vote they naturally wish to discuss and listen to discussion of political issues and political candidates, and out of all this has sprung a new social grace we must acquire and that our daughters must be taught—that of talking politics and listening to political discussion without becoming irritated or agitated, or at least without showing it. The hostess of to-day can no longer simply shift the subject away from politics as she was wont to do just as if it were a really objectionable topic for her dinner or tea table, but she has had to learn the trick of keeping political discussion free from animosity and acridity.

This Week's Wisdom.

The part woman takes is generally the lot.

A woman can do anything in the world but wait.

Distance lends enchantment—but not in a taxi cab.

The really important part of a rule is the exception to it.

Some men are like posts, steady enough, but never get anywhere.

The hardest part about knowing some people is to conceal our opinion of them.

A prehistoric speech—yet one always up to date. "You're the only girl I ever loved."

Memory's a sort of box you keep things in to preserve them, but sometimes you lose the key.

Why He Howled.

Leaning against the fence of a cottage garden stood a diminutive urchin, sobbing as though his heart was dangerously near the breaking point. A benevolent old man approached him. "What is the matter, my child?" he inquired soothingly. The youth only roared the louder. "My father," he howled, "has been beatin' me." "Come, come!" said the old man, "you mustn't cry like that! All fathers have to beat their boys at times. You must cheer up and forget all about it." Then the small boy looked at him with a scornful glare. "Ah!" he said slowly. "I might forget it if my father was an ordinary sort of man; but"—and here tears burst forth once more—"he plays the big drum in a brass band."

The Love Romance of Maurice De Saxe, Marshal of France.

(John o' London's Weekly.)

If ever woman was born to win and love, it was surely Adrienne Le Couvreur, queen of tragedy and idol of France when the eighteenth century was young. And to her love was the very breath of life—"the one thing," she vowed, "that made existence worth while."

Of her beauty we can judge—only faintly, perhaps—from the engraving, which alone survives, of Coppel's portrait of her, which reveals a woman daintily fashioned, from her small, gracefully poised head to her prettily-moulded arms and delicate fingers, with large upturned eyes full of sadness. Such were her charms and gifts that Voltaire wrote of her, "Greece would have had altars erected in her honour," and d'Alainville placed her second to the Tuileries among the "four marvels in Paris."

The Greatest Soldier of His Day.
Such was Adrienne Le Couvreur when, after love had eluded and mocked at her for many years, she wrote bitterly to a friend, "Love is nothing else but a folly which I detest, and to which I shall strive hard not to surrender myself as long as I live." But, though she little dreamt of love, so long and vainly desired, was soon to bring into her life a great romance, and with it a crown of tragedy—a love more passionate than she had thought possible. And it came with the arrival in Paris of Maurice, Comte de Saxe, the greatest soldier of his day.

Charmed, Conquered, Entranced.
Never was man better equipped for the conquest of woman than this son of Augustus the Second, Elector of Saxony, and of the Countess Aurora von Königsmarck, one of Sweden's most beautiful daughters. From his father he inherited his gigantic frame and brawny muscles; to his mother he owed the good looks which made him one of the handsomest men in Europe. Already, in the twenties, he had won laurels on scores of battlefields, and had his feet well on the ladder at the summit of which was the baton of Marshal of France.

From the hour when Adrienne first met this handsome giant, who could break horseshoes with his fingers and who "subdued hearts as easily as unfortified towns," she was charmed, conquered, entranced.

For three years, Adrienne was meanly happy with her "hero-husband," turning blind eyes to his many faults and to his periods of unaccountable absence and neglect. But even such doubtful constancy could not last for ever with DeSaxe. Ambition and the love of adventure were in his blood, and when he heard that the Duchy of Courland was going begging he quickly made up his mind that it should be his.

There were many tears at the parting; but after all, it was but for a time, and Maurice would come back to her with his new dignity. He vowed it on his knees. But meanwhile she could help him; and this she did by selling every jewel she possessed and giving him the proceeds, forty thou-and lives, as a parting present.

A False Lover.

But Maurice de Saxe was as false in love as he was brave in war; and soon stories came to Adrienne of his flirtations with one fair lady after another in distant Courland, to two of whom—the Grand Duchess Elizabeth Petrovna and Anne Ivanovna, widow of the late Duke—he had even offered marriage. For once, however, his good fortune was to fail him. He missed his way both to the Duchy and the altar; and came back, a penniless, to the woman he had betrayed, who received him with arms of welcome and tears of joy.

But for De Saxe the glamour was now gone; carelessness gave place to cruelty, devotion to studied neglect; until the day came when Adrienne exclaimed in her despair, "I am beside myself with rage and misery." The end came when De Saxe began to pay attentions to the Duchesse de Bouillon, one of the loveliest and most unscrupulous women at the French Court.

The climax came one night when she was playing "Phedre," the false Comte looking on from the stalls. At the words "In default of thy arm, lend me thy sword," she "snatched the sword out of her fellow-actor's hand and hurled it straight at De Saxe's stomach, in the presence of three thousand spectators. This stage-sword gave the coup de grace to a love which was already sick to death."

The Crowning Disillusion.

For Adrienne this was the crowning disillusion and humiliation. A few weeks later, when she was playing Jocaste in Voltaire's "Œdipe," a sudden illness seized her. She was carried in agony from the stage, and four days later "she went out like a candle." She had been poisoned, it was said, by the Duchesse de Bouillon, the "great lady" who had supplanted her.

Whether or not this story is true—and it is not improbable that her death, tragically swift as it was, was due to natural causes—her love for the man who had ruined her life remained unchanged. During her last hours a priest vainly urged her to repent, but with a final effort she raised herself in bed and, pointing to a bust of Saxe, said, proudly, "There is my world, my hope, my god!"

As for DeSaxe, who gave a further proof of his heartlessness by selling her horses almost before the breath had left her body, he got his Courland dukedom and his marshal's baton; and, after making European rings with his martial exploits, died full of honours, a score of years after the woman who had loved him so well was flung into a nameless grave.

WHY LEONARD HESITATED.
A scripture lesson was proceeding and, having spoken about heaven and the happy life all good little boys would lead after they died, the Sunday school teacher said:
"Now, will all the little boys who wish to go to heaven please stand up."
All the little boys in the class stood up with the exception of Leonard.
"And don't you want to go to heaven, Leonard?" the teacher asked kindly.
Leonard was a boy who always told the truth.
"Not yet," he said.

VICTORY.
We're feeling well and hearty, and peace is in our souls; the Farmer-Labor party has triumphed at the polls; and Parley, standard bearer, will fill the White House chair, and bring a reign of terror to traitors everywhere. The Wall Street barons hissed him, hissed Parley, safe and sane, the plutocrats dismissed him with snorts of high disdain, and all the hosts of treason said they would knock him cold; but oh, there were no seas on our standard bearer bold. He came from Salt Lake City, the home of Brigham Young, and he was wise and witty, and had a fluent tongue. The farmer left his barley, in manner circumspet, to vote for good old Parley, our President-elect. And Peter, Mike and Charley, the tollers, piled their feet to vote for good old Parley, who takes the Woodrow seat. Oh, some were sure that Harding would harvest Wilson's socks, and some made claims regarding my old friend Jimmie Cox. And some grew sore and snarled, defending Warr'n or Jim, but I stood up for Parley, and now rejoice with him. Old parties are disjoined and driven from the map, and I will be appointed to some fat public snap.

Women Jurors in England.

During the last few months a good deal of consternation has been carried into many a quite English household on account of the delivery of a paper stating that the lady of the house has, owing to the march of progress, become entitled to act as a juror when the country demands her services and in more than one instance a temporary collapse has followed. The broad-minded person will admit that there are many cases, both criminal and civil, in which the jury might with advantage be composed of women rather than of men, or it might literally be six of one and half a dozen of the other. The difficulty most apparent is the law at the best of times is a cold-blooded proceeding, in which impulsiveness is a danger, and impulsiveness is rather a common characteristic of what was once termed the softer sex. On the other hand, it must be admitted that women have very often a natural instinct for arriving at a right conclusion, even though their line of argument may be weak, and there are certain phases in human life which they may more truly understand than men.

St. Cecilia's Day.

St. Cecilia—whose day is November 22—was canonized by the Roman Church, and is reported to have been a beautiful Roman lady, married to Valerian. Becoming a convert to Christianity, she took a vow of perpetual virginity, but was forced to marry, and was later thrown to the lions with her devoted brother-in-law, Tibertius, who was himself converted, together with her husband. She is regarded as the patroness of Music, and, honoured in both the Eastern and Western Churches, is counted as one of the four great virgins of the Latin Church. Her skill at music was so great that, so runs a legend, an angel who visited her was drawn from the mansions of the blessed by the charms of her melody. Our early St. Cecilia's celebrations, about the end of the seventeenth century when "music feasts" took place, first at the Stationers' Hall and afterwards elsewhere, led to the establishment of the Three Choir Festivals of Hereford, Worcester, and Gloucester. It became the fashion of every poet—either minor or of celebrity—to write an ode to St. Cecilia. Dryden's is, perhaps, one of the finest and most frequently quoted.

A Bristol Benefactor.

The death took place in the evening of Wednesday, November 22, 1910, of Sir George White, of Bristol, in his 63rd year, after he had been engaged in business all the day. His career was a romance scarcely equalled in fiction. From the position of office boy in a solicitor's office, he rose to be a leading stock-broker, tramway king and millionaire. He was the pioneer of electric street traction, and as chairman of the Imperial Tramway Company first introduced electric system in London, Middleborough, Bristol, Dublin, and elsewhere. He was also chairman of several important companies, including the Bristol and Colonial Aeroplane Company, which has supplied aircraft to various countries. He established the first manufactory of flying machines in England, and introduced the Bristol aeroplanes and monoplanes in 1910. He was also President of the Bristol and West of England Aero Club. As President of the Bristol Royal Infirmary, an institution to which he gave princely sums, Sir George placed its finances on a sound basis and organized the extension of the buildings, a new wing being opened in 1912 by King George, accompanied by the Queen. He had devoted a large portion of his time to Red Cross work, and was president of the Queen Victoria Hospital at Nice. Sir George received his baronetcy in 1904.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE CHILD'S RIGHTS QUESTION.

Is it right to make a child obey just "because I say so?" A letter friend who professes himself interested in the remarks on "Why We Forbid" brings up this old question. "Doesn't a child," he goes on to ask, "have an inalienable right to know why he is asked to do this and so? Is it not unfair to him and degrading to his intelligence to enforce obedience without letting him understand your reasons and getting him to agree with you that what you ask is right?"

It is always a pleasure to let one letter-friend answer another, and so after receiving the above letter, I delved in my files for one I received some time ago from another letter-friend (mother of two) when some phase of this same subject was under discussion.

Don't We Stake Up a Growing Plant? "To different natures, different methods," she writes. "But remember that children are more animal in nature than grown-ups. They are more affectionate, franker, dirtier in their habits as a rule, than adults. Therefore, discipline should be enforced absolutely because they are not fully developed enough to reason with as we do with ourselves."

"I recently heard a 'friendly' father, say about his ten-year-old girl, afflicted with enlarged tonsils, 'I will have an operation if Emma wishes it. I longed to be a child again so I could be frankly rude and say, 'Don't you know what is right?'"

"Why do we stake up a growing plant or vine and protect it in the start and afterwards, let it stand on its own?"

Ideal if the Child Could Decide. It seems to me that this excellent letter from a woman who, I happen to know, has both the "habit of thinking things out and the chance to try them out," puts the "child's rights" question just about as it should be put.

It would be ideal if we could let the child reason everything out for himself. It is not good for him or for us that we should exercise arbitrary power. But there are times when, leaving our own convenience aside, it is necessary that we should be arbitrary to protect the rights of outsiders and also to protect the child from himself.

Is She to Endanger Her Health?

Witness Emma and the tonsils. Suppose Emma does not wish the operation—a highly likely supposition. My six-year-old niece was ruminating yesterday over the possibility of a second vaccination. She was vaccinated against whooping cough and disliked the experience. It is now proposed that she have her smallpox vaccination. She objects very much. "Once is enough," I heard her say firmly to her mother; and then after a moment's rumination, "Once is too much." Suppose Emma persists in not wishing the operation in spite of its becoming vitally necessary. Is she to be allowed to endanger her own health?

It seems to me that for the child's own sake and for the best interests of the home, she should be taught to obey, knowing that his father or mother will give all explanations possible and will be ready to listen to his point of view. In return for this obedience, it seems to me it is the parent's duty to interfere as little as possible and to let the child learn by his own experience so far as possible.

How People Die in India.

A return of the number of inquests held by the Coroner of Bombay during 1919 gives us some very interesting particulars. Among the "suicide" we find that 6 cut their throats, 28 drowned themselves, 4 hanged themselves, 15 jumped out of windows, 20 took opium, arsenic or some other poison, 4 shot themselves, and 8 burned themselves. Drowning, therefore, took pride of place last year, whereas self-poisoning was the favorite method of quitting life in 1918, there being twenty-six cases reported. Other suicidal practices mentioned in the report are stabbing and the act of knocking one's head against a wall. No one has favoured either of these methods during the past two years, however.

Women and Secrets.

Women cannot keep secrets, if we rightly interpret the attitude of Freemasons toward women. Hitherto women have been denied the right of admittance to the Order, the impossibility of their being able to observe the rule, "silence in regard to Masonic secrets," being the main reason, so it has been contented of their exclusions. The only woman, who has been a Freemason was Elizabeth St. Leger, a daughter of a former Viscount Doneraile, who, by hiding herself behind the curtains of a room in which a lodge meeting was taking place, overheard secrets of such a nature that she was made a Freemason and bound over to secrecy. Her great-granddaughter, Miss Alicia St. Leger Aikworth, was initiated as a Co-Mason, an honorary distinction, some two years ago. Now, however, France proposes to admit women to the Order on the same terms as men, initiating them into all the rites and mysteries of Freemasonry. It is doubtful, according to inquiries, if a similar privilege will be granted to women in this country.

We're Living Longer Now.

Life insurance companies, whose profits depend entirely upon the hardest kind of statistics, who, to-day, give far better terms than they would have to our grandfathers. All the great corporations which take risks upon the duration of mortal life have been steadily removing one restriction after another.

One curious point which is shown in insurance tables is that those organic diseases which are so frequent in middle-life, develop at a period from five to ten years later than they did fifty years ago.

Medical science has, of course, done a lot for the race in the way of lengthening human life, but sanitary science has done more. Zymotic or infectious diseases are being slowly but steadily conquered by improved water supply, drainage and housing.

We use bad language about our climate, but for all that it is one which encourages long life. There are about 700 centenarians in the United Kingdom as against 250 in France.

Excessive heat and excessive cold are equally prejudicial to long life. In Iceland and in India alike seventy is extreme old age, and few attain to it.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD.

The rule of the road is keep to the right, don't drive at a reckless rate. You may go as you please when the course is clear and the stretch is smooth and straight. But watch your pace where the roadway bends and travel the curves with care. And be ready to meet the test should danger stop you there.

There are laws to govern the speed of men and the manner they shall go. And what's right and wrong as we drive along, we are all supposed to know.

But beyond the law and the statute books and the power of the courts to touch. Are numberless rules which we might observe which would help so very much.

The law will not stifle our selfishness—we must do that for ourselves. And there is no word in all of the books on all of the dusty leaves which says that we must be kindly folk or courteous or polite. We can drive as road hogs if we choose and legally be right.

The rule of the road is keep to the right, but the rule of a gentleman is to give to the neighbor who would pass as much of the road as he can; And there'd be less need for the laws in books and a happier world 'twould be. If we'd all obey on the roads of life the rules of courtesy.

A Tip to Western Editors.

A correspondent of the New York "Sun" sent in the following translation of a Chinese rejection slip, used in returning would-be contributions: "We have read thy manuscript with infinite delight. Never before have we revealed in such a masterpiece. If we printed it the authorities would ordain us to take it for a model, and henceforth never print anything inferior to it. As it would be impossible to find its equal within ten thousand years, we are compelled, though shaken with sorrow, to return your divine manuscript, and for doing so we beg one thousand pardons."

ed to vanishing point now. And men are alarmed on this account, and anxious to get rid of their fish almost at any price.

Heard on the Street.

That a well known lawyer was responsible for the front page article in Friday's Advocate.

That the Advocate's promises are like pie-crust, made to be broken, as witness the promise to the fishermen to rectify its account of Wednesday's meeting.

A political magnate named Squires from gay London they say now retires.

"There is only one Coaker," said the Advocate yesterday. It is very fortunate for Newfoundland that it is so.

There was a young lawyer named Squires, Who with sanctity, says he perspires, With his hand in the sack.

An affidavit by Squires was made, Some kind of low politics played; But not dear old Squires! But when he's found out he'll be fayed.

Coakerian Compliments.

(Acknowledged with thanks. Taken from Saturday's Advocate. All emanating from the vigorous pen of the Honorable William F. Coaker, the man who is carried away with the "exuberance of his own verbosity.")

"That's why Charlie James got 231 votes in Burgeo and LaPoile last fall." "Let not political hypocrites of the calibre of James say so."

"The small number of individual who writes editorials for the Telegram."

"James has once more made an ass of himself."

"Is it James to-day who is selling the fishermen's fish?" (Query—Is it Coaker?)

"The little-souled creature of the Telegram rag."

Being so much beneath the contempt of that virtuous and uxorious mortal, Honorable William F. Coaker, we feel highly flattered by the above references, which are but the vapourings of a discredited and beaten politician on his own particular preserve, and are glad to note that our stock has again gone up, having been twenty-three times in Saturday's issue of the organ.

The "little-souled creature of the Telegram" obviously causes uxorious Bill a good many uneasy moments. Ave atque vale Gulleima. You'll get yours very shortly.

Police Court.

Two stowaways who had come out on the Canadian Aviator from London, were remanded until the ship sails.

A young man for stealing two pairs of gloves, the property of John Anderson, was fined $10 or twenty days. A drunk and disorderly was fined $5.

The Fish Situation.

At only two premises to-day is there any great activity in Labrador fish. These are Messrs. Barr's and Job's, where quite a number of some 10 vessels are discharging.

Things the People Want to Know.

Is the Government going to guarantee the price of fish?

What Mr. Coaker thinks of Thursday night's fiasco?

What the fishermen intend to do about it?

If it is true that the only air Mr. Coaker knows anything about is "Hot Air"?

What preparations are being made to celebrate the "Great Panjandrum's" home coming?

Is the great reception, as forecasted in the Telegram, going to be given him by his friends?

How many inspectors will be made to celebrate the home coming?

If the Star "gas" expert is to be given command of one of the blimps?

WE ARE NOT A "SPECIAL SALE" HOUSE.

However—We believe that there is now an expectant public waiting for lower prices—lower than any decline in cost up to the present would justify.

Our stocks are very full and complete, so we decided to inaugurate a sale of such magnitude, at selling prices so much below the regular quotations, that women interested in the purchase of can not resist this money saving event. An increased volume of business must compensate for the greatly reduced prices.

To those who have never purchased here—We desire to convince you that unusual Values can always be found here.

This is the opportunity to purchase THE DRESS, COSTUME, FUR SET, FUR COAT or HAT at the low price you have expected.

Continuous Emigration

Passengers who arrived by the Fortia from the Westward, this morning report a stormy trip, and general trade conditions along the coast are in a state of stagnation.

Send Flowers.

Nothing is more acceptable or more delicately expressive of just the right sentiment than flowers. To the sick friend, to the sorrowing home, to the wedding, birthday reception, or at any time when the occasion demands some token of expression of friendship and good wishes, flowers are always appropriate.

A letter from the Bishop in connection with the annual collection for the Orphanage was read and explained by the Chairman, who stated that in this parish alone we have some twelve children without breadwinners and who ought to be in the Orphanage, but that not more than a few of them would likely be accepted owing to lack of accommodation and funding to lack of decision to take up this collection on Sunday, December 13th.

The address was given by the Chairman, who took as his subject "The character of St. John," showing the

MEETING THE CONDITIONS OF THE DAY

The position of the Dry Goods Business to-day is such that we feel compelled to make a very definite statement, in fairness to the public and to ourselves.

We hold splendid stocks of merchandise which were bought at the lowest possible prices some months ago.

We have consistently offered goods at prices which permitted us only a narrow margin of profit.

There is a tendency to sell goods to-day at prices which bear no relation to the cost.

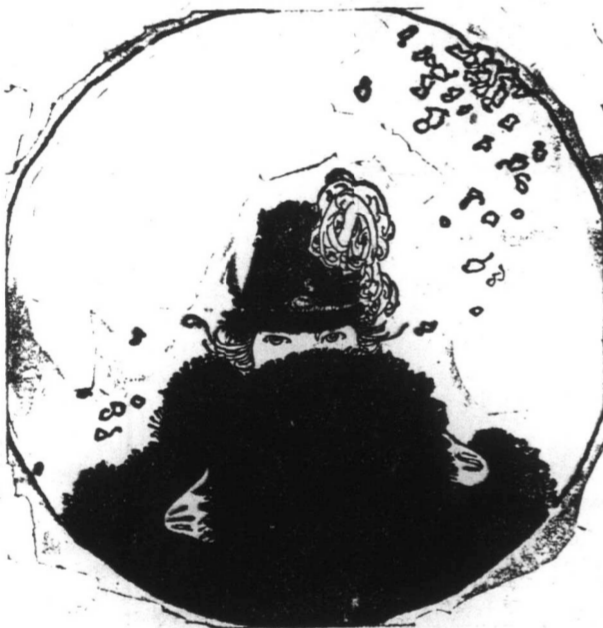

Being fully determined to uphold our claim as to St. John's Lowest Prices, we have decided to offer our Entire Stock at such prices that similar qualities are not to be bought so cheaply anywhere else.

These Examples Indicate the Heavy Reductions Made

What Do You Want?

You will find it here cheaper and easier than elsewhere.

London Man Forced to Live on Milk and Bread.

Balley Eats Pork And Anything Else Since Taking Tanlac—Gains Twenty Pounds in Few Weeks.

"When a man's stomach gets in such a bad fix he has to live on bread and milk as long as I did, and then gets a medicine that fixes him up in a few weeks time so he can eat pork and just anything else he wants, I think it is time for him to talk for the benefit of others. Well, Tanlac has not only done all that for me, but it has built me up twenty pounds in weight, and made me feel better than I have in many years.

The above statement was made recently by Mark Balley, a well known carpenter living at 130 Albert St., London, Ontario.

"For eight years," Mr. Balley continued, "I gradually went down hill on account of stomach trouble. After eating, gas formed and puffed me up, and for hours I had such severe pains I could scarcely stand it. I had an attack of influenza last winter and that left me in a worse fix than ever, and I fell off about twenty pounds. I got to where I could scarcely eat anything, and was finally told after an examination that I had an ulcerated stomach.

"I got to worrying a great deal over my condition, and finally decided to see if Tanlac would help me like it did so many who had praised it to me, and the medicine seemed to go right to the spot, and I saw it was just what I had been needing. My stomach feels just like a new one now, and, to make a long story short, Tanlac has made me feel just like a brand new man, and I am working every day without the least trouble. Tanlac is beyond doubt the best medicine made."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gush, in Miramichi, by E. J. Platts Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by C. Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freake.—adv.

Nearly Asphyxiated.

Thanks to the intelligence of Constables S. Churchill and J. Greene, a returned soldier named Stanley Snow was, early yesterday morning, saved from asphyxiation. The officers were doing duty on Water Street, East and about 4.30 a.m. were attracted by an unusual noise which they conjectured came from Devonshire Inn, now used as a boarding house. The police went to the door to investigate and heard a deep breathing as if someone was smothering. They attracted the attention of one of the boarders by rapping at the door, but a lodger answering their questions from a raised window said that things were O.K. in the house. The officers were not satisfied however, and demanded an entrance. This they were refused, but after threatening to force their way the street door was opened. An investigation followed and in one of the rooms which was filled with gas, Churchill and Greene located Snow, lying in bed unconscious with a lighted lamp close by on the floor. They immediately opened the windows and tried to resuscitate Snow but to no purpose. One of the police then hurried to the station and summoned Dr. Tait who with Sergt. Furlong was quickly on the scene and after some time brought the ex-soldier back to consciousness. There was a gas jet in the room but the soldier is not aware whether he used it or not during the night, in fact he seemed very hazy as to what had occurred, nor did any of the other inmates know. If it had not been for the quick action of the police, the gas would probably have become ignited through a kerosene oil lamp which had been left burning and a serious explosion, with possible loss of life, would have followed.

Time and Talents.

Will members of the T. & T. kindly send in now their annual subscription for 1921? The reason for this is that we are asked to send our money for the magazines in advance to Headquarters in England for the whole year, and the Secretary is anxious to send all magazine money for the new year before the first issue—the January number—which is published promptly.

Will members also please note that a request has been received from Headquarters for 40 cents extra per annum from each member to meet increased cost of the magazine and in order to do this it was agreed by vote at the last meeting of Time and Talents to increase our annual subscription to $1.00, instead of taking it out of the present rate of subscription ($1.50), which would reduce the balance of our funds at the end of the year for some local use?

All subscriptions should be sent to the Hon. Sec., D. C. White, Bishop's Court.

Non-members of Time and Talents who might care to take the quarterly magazine, "The Road" can do so by sending the order and 75 cents to the Hon. Sec. of T. & T.

B.I.S. Quarterly Meeting.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Benevolent Irish Society was held yesterday morning, the President, Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., occupying the chair, and their being a large attendance of members. Twenty-three applicants were admitted to membership, evidence of the flourishing condition of this venerable institution. Before proceeding with the regular business the President, on behalf of the Executive, submitted the following resolutions:—

RESOLVED—That we place on record an expression of our deep regret at the death of the late John L. Slattery, an Honorary Vice-President. In his passing the Society has lost one of its most loyal and valued members. He was at all times foremost in his endeavours to promote the best interests of the institution, and his many years at the Executive Board, whether as Secretary or later as Vice-President, were ever marked by intelligence, earnestness, and enthusiasm.

RESOLVED FURTHER—That we extend to his relatives our sincere sympathy in their bereavement. In appropriate language Mr. Higgins paid tribute to the many years of faithful service given to the Society by the deceased member, who was always conspicuous for his unflagging interest in every movement with which the body was in any way identified. In likewise touching references Mr. W. J. Harris proposed, and Mr. W. S. Dunphy seconded the resolutions, which were thereupon adopted.

The reports of the different committees, covering the various departments of the Society's activities, were then made, and all showed a most satisfactory state of affairs. The School Committee's report, which included the usual letter from the Superior of the Christian Brothers, showed the good work in the schools overhead was going along in the same efficient manner. The communication from the Brothers paid a gracious tribute to an ex-pupil of the schools who lately visited here, Mr. J. P. Hand, of Hamilton, Bermuda, for his munificent gifts to the boys in the way of providing scholarships and arranging for a play ground. By a happy coincidence the letter was read just after Mr. Hand had been elected to membership in the Society.

Before adjournment the President made reference to the arrival in the city of Mr. Lindsay Crawford, who is to deliver an address to-morrow evening on Irish affairs. He hoped that the members would by their presence on the occasion give expression to their interest in the Empire-wide movement on behalf of the country from which they had sprung.

Addition to Nfld. Fleet.

A brand new three-masted schooner, just off the stocks in Bath, Maine, arrived in port says the North Sydney Herald of Thursday 18th. She is the Netherland, and was built for Job Bros., of St. John's. She will take a cargo of coal for St. John's, and later will likely go in the fish carrying trade. The new schooner is in command of Capt. Falke, late of the steamer Thefts.

Denies Amherst Meeting Broken Up.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 16.—Lindsay Crawford, National president of the Self-Determination for Ireland League, in the course of his address here last night denied that the meeting at Amherst had been broken up, as had been reported in press despatches. He had been given a good hearing in Amherst, he said, despite the fact that Orangemen there had stated before the meeting that they would break it up. He would tell people who opposed free speech that the Self-Determination League would stand for it through thick and thin.

Lindsay Crawford, Writer and Lecturer.

Mr. Lindsay Crawford, the Canadian journalist and orator who is at present in the city, is peculiarly well qualified to discuss the Irish situation. Born and brought up in Ulster, in his early days he was a prominent and active Unionist. Mature consideration, however, converted him to the support of the Home Rule movement, and his talents as a writer won him the position of editor of the Belfast "Ulster Guardian," then the only Liberal paper in Ireland; a post which he held for several years. He left Ireland to join the staff of the Toronto "Globe" and remained with that paper as an editorial writer for eight years. Since then he has edited the "Statesman" of Toronto, a brilliant little weekly which has made a name for itself in Canada for its clear thinking and fearless frankness of speech. In October last Mr. Crawford was elected President of the Self-Determination for Ireland League at its Ottawa convention, and his visit to Newfoundland follows a speaking tour through Eastern Canada. He is accompanied by Mr. Thomas R. Donnan, of Ottawa, National Secretary of the League.

Mr. Crawford will speak at the Majestic Theatre on Tuesday night, and if his address here has only half the eloquence, force, and courage shown in his writings and reported of his speeches in Canada, those who attend to hear him have an intellectual feast in store for them.

C.C.C. Old Comrades.

A meeting of the C.C.C. Old Comrades which was held in the Armoury, after Last Mass, yesterday morning was well attended, and was very enthusiastic. The C.C.C. Old Comrades, who of late seemed to be breaking up, are now forming together again, under a new executive, and intend, very soon, to start again the card tournaments and other forms of entertainment, which they were so noted for last year. At the meeting yesterday Mr. J. Fagan, who was a Battalion Sgt. Major in the Corps for years, and who also has a splendid record in the brigade, was unanimously elected as President for the coming year. Mr. Fagan was the only officer nominated yesterday, the election of the remaining officers being left over till next Sunday, when a larger attendance is anticipated, all ex-members being invited to attend. A committee has been formed, who are having the rooms renovated and heated, and hope very soon to have these in a better condition than ever.

Big Guns for the Convention.

A special train taking Mr. Coaker and his party, left here Saturday night to attend the F.P.U. Convention at Port Union. Amongst the party are Hons. Halfyard, Barnes, Penney; Messrs. Jennings, Hibbs, Scammel, Sampson, Jones, Winsor, Abbott, Guppy, Targett, Archibald and LeGrow. We understand Dr. Barnes will deliver a lecture on Education, probably reading extracts from the last few issues of the Star and Advocate. According to the Advocate of Saturday Mr. Coaker will attend the Convention, with the laurels of victory decorating his brow. He may, however, return like Napoleon from Waterloo.

Church of St Michael and All Angels.

Thanksgiving Day was fittingly observed at St. Michael's Church by two celebrations of "Our Sacrifice of Praise and Thanksgiving," to which a goodly number of communicants drew near to receive the Blessed Sacrament. The second Eucharist at 11.00 was sung throughout and was a beautiful and reverent procession preceded this service, during which Bishop Heber's hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy," was sung. The Rev. Dr. Facey was the preacher, his text being from the words of Isaiah, "O Lord my God I will extol thee for thou has been very gracious unto me." In the evening the Canon Field preached from the Gospel of the Day, "Gather up the fragments that remain." During his sermon he announced to the congregation their special reason for thanksgiving, namely the fact that in the past week the "Land Purchasing Fund" had been completed by the signing of deeds for the purchase of the western portion of Buckmaster's Field (at a cost of $4000.00) for the future erection of a new Church and Clergy House. This fund represented the efforts and struggles of many years, and the priest and people of Saint Michael's are to be congratulated on the success of this undertaking. Laud Deo!

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—The public message to us of the 18th inst., states in other things the serious idea that Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, has located a paper amongst some of the leaders of the Irish Republican Army, reading that the horrifying movement was on foot to spread (by, I presume, the Sein Feiners) typhoid among troops, and glanders among cavalry units. It is peculiar and passing strange that this very idea was thought to be followed out by the German soldiery in 1916, but was not verified either in history or fact. It is to be hoped that the proposed outrage, of which Sir Hamar it is said holds the plans, will be strictly investigated, proving it to be a document is genuine or not, and not borrowed from the original German thought of accomplishment (which, mark, was not accomplished), and that the paper was not prepared for Greenwood's hands by the enemies of Irish Freedom. It is of course well known to-day, and admitted by some English writers and unbiased historians of the Irish movement (and let it stand in perpetuo to their ideas of fair play and its noble attributes—justice), that the atrocities said to be a part of the Sinn Fein effort to secure freedom for Ireland, have been traced to the ignoble manner of reprisals carried on daily by the Black and Tan and other determined factions to the detriment of the Irishman at home and abroad.

A few weeks ago a strict and just British investigation brought the fact to light that the killing of two British soldiers had been actually done by their fellows in arms, though it had been hoped to blow the blame on the already overtaxed Irish. It is only those who are following closely the whole matter of this national fight can see how truly the fact shines out that there are indeed "two sides to every story," and the remnant of information received by us people is hardly capable of educating us re the struggle in Ireland by its sons to make of their country a Nation once more.

In Ireland to-day where the Republican Government holds a firm (though disputed) sway, the letter of law and order is followed, and it was only a little while ago that a Sinn Fein court fined and fined heavily one of its own members of the organization for an offence against a point of law. The man in question was given the choice to be tried by an English Justice, but decided to have his case brought to the Irish (new) Court, who adjudicated on it without fear or favor, with the result as told above. Few of us except we read, and study and are willing to justly see the two sides of this as well as every other question that must be gone into with unbiased minds, know just what is happening in Ireland to-day. How many of us see the misery that the reprisal movement has brought upon hundreds of innocent people—a movement that is even against the principle of the War Measures and the International Code of Honor as the world sees it. And yet it goes on, winked at—as it surely must be—by the powers that are the controlling factors of the soldiers that nation arms.

Yours truly,

P. J. KINSELLA.

Steamer Meets Stormy Weather.

S.S. East Chicago, Capt. McPhail, arrived in port Saturday evening short of water. The ship is bound to Baltimore from Glasgow in ballast and was 15 days out, having experienced a continuation of head winds with heavy seas all through the trip, and being light received the full force of the gales that raged. In the heavy weather, the ship's forward water tanks went adrift, with the result that the steamer's water supply ran short and as St. John's was the nearest port, the captain decided to come here and have the tanks refilled.

Shortly after the arrival of the S.S. East Chicago, the Canadian Aviator put into port short of coal. The ship is also from Glasgow and bound to Halifax, and experienced the same weather conditions as the East Chicago. The ship is receiving a supply of bunker coal from Messrs. A. Harvey & Co. Shortly after leaving Glasgow two stowaways were found on board the ship. One of them is a tailor, whilst the other has only been lately demobilized from the army, and both were trying to reach Canada where they hope to get employment. On Saturday the Furness Withy Co. received a wireless from the S.S. Wampum, stating that she was making for this port short of fuel oil. Later messages were received stating that the steamer had been picked up and was being towed to her destination.

Scotsburn Safe.

S.S. Scotsburn, for which some anxiety had been felt, has reported that she entered Bay St. George to replenish her bunkers. Not being a very powerful boat she could not make much headway against the weather which prevailed in the Gulf last week.

Dominion Sports To-night.

Our first Dominion Sports will take place this evening at 8 o'clock sharp in the Prince's Rink, and it is the intention of the committee not to have any delays between the events which will enable them to run on schedule time, having the ten mile marathon starting at 9.30, also the two high jumps in centre of rink at the same time.

From what can be gathered, the marathon is going to be a very closely contested ten mile race as the contestants are making good time, much better than was done by Rodgers in Halifax. The cup for the colleges will be the property of the college winning the greatest number of points. From information gathered Saturday, it looks as if the various teams are evenly matched, which will make the different college events very interesting and exciting both for the general public as well as the pupils.

Every provision is made for the public to gain admission quickly to the rink. There will be two ticket boxes, also the committee selling tickets on the floor, which no doubt will help the people to get inside without much delay. The Boat Club Committee are doing everything possible to have the event the best of its kind ever run off in St. John's. Smoking is not allowed as the colleges and contestants say it is most injurious to the boys while running. The Committee have acceded to the wishes of a great many young ladies and gentlemen to have a dance after the sports are finished for the small sum of fifty cents. All will wish the Dominion Sports every success they deserve and no doubt they will be well contested.

Newfoundlanders Wedded in Malta.

A very pretty and interesting wedding was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Valletta, being the happy union, unique of its character in Malta, of two Newfoundlanders—the Rev. G. H. Hewitt, H.M.S. Caradoc, son of the Rev. Canon Hewitt, St. John's, Nfld., and Miss Eleanor Parnell, daughter of Fred. Parnell, Esq., at present residing in Boston, U.S.A. A large and select congregation testified to the affection and esteem in which the bride and bridegroom are held. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Canon Fergus. The bride, who was given away by Lieut-Commander Fisher, R.N., late of H.M.S. Caradoc, looked charming, wearing her mother's wedding dress of old Irish corded cream silk trimmed with deep laces and orange blossoms, and a long flowing veil of tulle also showered with orange blossoms. Mrs. Trevor Hayles looked very elegant as Dame d'Honneur; also the bridesmaids, the Misses Pauline and Sylvia Fergus, carrying shower bouquets of asters and white roses. Master Brian Fergus, was a very pretty page. Mr.

GREAVES & SONS,

Wholesale Dry Goods and Woollen Merchants,
QUEEN STREET.

Produce and Provisions.

(from Saturday's Trade Review.)

WHEAT.—The export of dried fish from St. John's this week amounted to 35,096 quintals, and to the outports 9,271 quintals. Of St. John's export the schooner Hon L. Mason took 2,712 to Barbados from Baine Johnston, G. J. Car and the Nfld. Produce Co. The schooner Kinsman took 7,414 quintals to Messrs. Hickman & Co. Ltd. to St. John's. The S.S. Rosalind 7,000 quintals to New York from various shippers, the S.S. Lady of Gaspe 869 quintals to Boston from Messrs. Hickman & Co. Ltd., and Harvey & the Ruby W. took 5,813 quintals to Pernambuco from Baine Johnston Co., the John W. Miller 5,319 quintals to Bahia, from A. Goodridge & the Nfld. Produce Co., and the Canadian Miller 5,906 quintals to Liverpool from different shippers. At the outports exports, the schooner O'Neil took 3,550 quintals from Barbados to Malaga from Messrs. Hickman & Co., the schooner Agnes D. Blashen 2,361 quintals from W. & Moors, Carboner for Barbados, the schooner Maagen 3,360 quintals from St. John's, and the schooner Export Co., (J. Long) for Porto.

OLIVER OIL.—The market is quiet and few sales are being made. By the last Rosalind 5,000 tons only were shipped to New York. The local price is around one cent per gallon, the lowest point reached since the war. There is a belief that the price will advance against the dealers as the supply in the local market is the smallest for years, and the produce is the best ever made in Newfoundland.

COD OIL.—The Cod Oil market is quiet and there are no enquiries in the United States. The price declined. There is a belief amongst dealers that the situation will improve in a few weeks. Leather manufacturers will need to get in 9 months' supply, and as winter advances the demand is expected to improve. The S.S. Rosalind took 7,429 gallons to New York last trip.

HERRING.—There have been very little herring taken in Green Bay so far, and there were only four packers operating up to last week. Seventy-five per cent. of the herring caught up to the middle of the month were "empty" fish, i.e., no milt and no roe, and are, therefore unfit for Scotch Pack. A better run is expected in December. There are only three packers in Placentia operating so far. In Bay of Islands and Bonne Bay "business" is as usual, and $3.00 are being paid from the net. Scotch are quoted at $12.00.

BEEF.—The latest Beef quotations show considerable advances. Reports reached here this week that this is caused by a scarcity of good cattle. Advances are very firm at $1.00 per barrel for cheaper grades to $2.00 for best brands. It is believed that these advances will prevail for the balance of the season. The local supply of popular brands are light, but with the arrival of next Rosalind this scarcity will be relieved. Local prices to-day are, $38.50 for Libby's special Family, $35.00 for Bos. Flank, $32.00 for Boneless, and $25.00 for Plate.

PORK.—The Pork market continues lifeless with slight declines during the week. A considerable export trade is reported from American Packing Centres, and as the volume of packing countries are large, this is the principal factor in keeping prices down. The sustained big cattle movement in the West is more than able to supply all this demand and to keep prices down. As feeds are cheap, this is a circumstance that will help the downward tend. In the local market Short Mess is $48.00, Ham

Butt $45.00, Short Cut and Fat Back $44.00, and Family Mess $38.

FLOUR.—The price of flour has declined to $15.00 per barrel wholesale in the local market for Leading Brands, and $14.75 for under qualities. The importation of flour to Newfoundland so far is about 70,000 barrels short of last year, and the best week of import with all the tonnage available in this trade will not be able to alter this shortage, and by the end of the year there must be a considerable shortage. The imports this week much improved and amounted to 7,538 barrels, nearly all from Montreal.

SUGAR.—The Food Control Board sent out a letter to the Sugar Dealers this week, asking them if they required sugar, to put up each $3500 for 50 barrels of sugar on the basis of selling price of 22½ cents, adding that this price would be maintained for about 3 months. There is, we are informed, a reluctance on the part of the trade to take hold, fearing that they may be taught again with stocks on their hands, on which they would meet losses should the F. C. B. announce a further decline before three months, and the possibility of which one dealer told us is involved in the word "about." The wholesale price is now 24 and three-quarter cents.

MOLASSES.—The importation from Barbados is about 4,000 puncheons short of last year. As sugar has declined, molasses in the local market has had to follow the downward tendency. Fancy is now being offered at $1.50 per gallon in the puncheon, and Grocery at $1.45; in tierces 2 cents higher and in barrels five cents. The new crop of canes is a month behind and owing to so much dry weather the output at Barbados will be reduced by one-third at least.

POTATOES.—Contrary to expectation Prince Edward Island potatoes have advanced this week to $5.20 per barrel, instead of declining as plentiful crops everywhere seemed to warrant. The home-grown crop is now cellared and holders are asking $3.50 to $4.00. None are expected to come from the outports henceforth till Spring, as the risk is too great. Importations from P.E.I. are expected to be small owing to a good local crop.

Spanish "Prisoner's Friend" Society.

There is in Spain a strange and exclusive society. It is known as the Hermandad de la Paz-y-Caridad, that is to say, the Fraternity of Peace and Charity. Founded by Don Juan Manara-y-Mendoza, the beautiful original of Lord Byron's "Don Juanan," it takes charge of prisoners under sentence of death during the last twenty-four hours preceding their execution.

As there are about fifty capital sentences imposed by the tribunals each year in Spain the duties of the members of this fraternity, which is restricted to actions of the very oldest houses of the Grandees, are far from being merely honorary. When they are on duty they wear a black robe, reaching almost to the ground, surmounted by a peaked hood of the same material, the features being wholly concealed by a cloth, in which two holes are cut for the eyes. Then arrayed the members read to the prisoners during the last twenty-four hours of his existence, pray with him, write letters for him to his family and relatives, take charge of the fulfilment of his last messages and of wishes and finally accompany him to the scaffold, support his faltering steps and remain with him in the role of friend and counsellor until the chief executioner, standing behind the victim, turns the crank of the garrote, which in an instant crushes the vertebra of the neck, causing instant death. Then the brethren of the order take charge of the burial of the body.

The brethren never speak about their services in this connection and never reveal the identity of those who have figured beside the condemned on the scaffold.

Mysterious Metal.

Costing $200 an ounce, zirconium is one of the most precious and useful metals employed by scientists and manufacturers to-day. It derives its name from the mineral zircon, varieties of which, known as jargona and hyacinth, have long been used by jewellers for women's ornaments. The existence of the metal zirconium, in zircon was discovered 180 years ago, but it has been discovered of recent years in large quantities in a certain ore known as brantite the deposits of which in Brazil are practically inexhaustible. The value of zirconium lies in the fact that it is a wonderful substitute for other metals. Since platinum became so scarce, it has been used in its stead. The Germans experimented with it with a view of getting armour-plate superior in hardness to steel. It can withstand such high temperatures that it has been found superior to all other metals for lining electrical furnaces. It is used in the manufacture of wire filaments for electric lights; for X-ray work and enamelling. The zirconium industry is a comparatively new one, interesting developments being foreshadowed by the discoveries already made.
