Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XLIII.
Calligan did not flinch.

"If I knew, I would tell you," he said quietly. "Not because you deserve it—not because you deserve any consideration from her or from me, but because I care for her so much that I'd give my life to see her happy." Now—he flung at young Winterdick with defiance—"you've got your answer, and I hope you like it."

Philip passed a shaking hand across his mouth. He was half convinced of his friend's honesty, but that drive up from Apsley through the darkness had been torture for him, and he could not so readily forget it.

"She meant to come to you—I know she did—" he said again with anguish. "Where is she if she's not here? There's nobody else she would have gone to. . . . Oh, don't stand there like that!" he broke out stormily. "Say something—suggest something . . . for God's sake . . ."

Calligan's face quivered. "You'd better search the place," he said hoarsely. "If you don't believe me, I tell you I don't know where your wife is." His pale face blazed suddenly. "I suppose you've been torturing her and half driving her mad. In the name of heaven, Philip, what's come over you? You seem very sure that she would come to me. I wish I were so sure—I wish I knew that she cared enough to come. . . . His voice rose excitedly. "I wish she cared one-hundredth part as much for me as she does for you. She shouldn't ever have gone back to you, I promise. She—"

Philip turned slowly.

"Care for me!" he said in a hoarse voice. "She never cared for me. . . . He waited a moment, staring at Calligan with eyes that pleaded for a contradiction of his words, that implored it, even while in his heart he knew there was no smallest hope of getting it.

It was Calligan who looked away first.

"You've never deserved that she should," he said with an effort. "But if we men only got what we deserve it would be a pretty poor look out for some of us." He raised his sad eyes to Philip's again and suddenly he said agitatedly: "Phil—you don't mean . . . you weren't such a fool as not to know that she cared?"

Philip tried to speak, but no words would come. He groped backwards for a chair and dropped into it, his arms outflung on the table, his face buried in them.

Then Calligan drew a breath like a sigh. He laid a hand on his friend's shoulder.

"Poor old chap . . . As yet his mind was but a chaos of agitation in which he groped blindly for the truth; but as he was beginning to see it slowly, and to understand that after all it had not been only Eva who had suffered.

He walked over to the sideboard and mechanically mixed a couple of whiskies. He brought them back to the table and gave Philip a little shake.

"Here—buck up," he said with rough kindness. "I can't help you till I know what's happened . . ."

Philip raised his head.

"She's gone . . . We—she . . . Oh, I was a brute. She never answered me when I—but I knew—I could see it in his eyes—all through that confounded dinner . . . She looked like death, and then . . ."

"Well, the thing is to find her. You say she left Apsley. You were sure—sure?" Calligan's voice was wrung with anxiety.

"Yes—as sure as I can be." Philip got to his feet. He looked like a man on the verge of a bad breakdown.

"Peter's outside—I brought him up in the car."

Calligan left the room and came back a second later with his overcoat.

"I'm ready," he said. "She may have gone to the flat."

"No—no, she won't have done that. They went down the stairs together. At the bottom Philip said shamefacedly: "Tom—"

"Well?"

"I—I should like to beg your pardon."

Calligan laughed mirthlessly.

"Oh, I shouldn't do that. As I told you, if I'd been given the opportunity you might be looking for me now with a revolver."

He went on into the street hurriedly to avoid further words. He spoke to Peter—a cold, miserable-looking Peter, huddled up in the car, half-asleep.

Peter listened sulkily to Calligan's brief explanation.

"It's all a wild-goose chase," he said irritably. "She's probably at Apsley all the time. Why doesn't Philip 'phone up and see?"

"He couldn't get an answer at this time of the morning; nobody would ever hear the ring." He gave Peter a little shove. "Move up and make room—we're going round to the flat."

The three crushed into the narrow seat and Philip took the wheel again.

Got No Sleep

But now the neuritis has gone, the pains have ceased, the nervous system is restored and the writer of this letter pays a grateful tribute to the medicine which made him well.

Mr. John Woodward, P.T.O., Lucan, Ont., writes:

"It gives me much pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's medicine, especially the Nerve Food. I was a sufferer from neuritis for several years, and tried all kinds of remedies, yet never seemed to get any better. At last my nerves and whole system seemed to give way through not being able to get any rest or sleep at night for pain, which mostly used to take me in all parts of the limbs and feet. My nerves would twitch till my whole body would seem to jerk right up as I lay in bed. Almost at the point of despair, I decided I would get Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I did, and after taking twenty boxes I believe myself almost normal again. I also keep a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills on hand, and for the past year I seem to enjoy my usual health."

The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER I.

When he came down to breakfast on this fine May morning, there the words were, looking him steadily in the face, while his pretty daughter Doris was gazing at them intently. She turned when he entered.

"Papa," she asked, "what is a Radical?"

The old lawyer's face flushed hotly.

"I will not answer you until I feel calmer; to say the least of it, it is most atrocious to place that name there."

The girl looked at it with softened eyes.

"Martin Ray," she said—"it is not a bad name, papa."

"It is not the name, but the man," rejoined the lawyer. "The fellow is capable of anything; and unfortunately he is a fine orator, they say."

"I should like to hear him," said Doris.

"Hear him! Do you want your ears to burn, Doris, through listening to such doctrines as his? Take my word for it, the man who does not believe in and serve his guest fails to serve his Maker."

Doris made no answer, but in her heart she said that such a sweeping condemnation was unfair—that many men to whom the word "royalty" even was an abomination tried their best to lead a pure life.

"I do not see what politics have to do with religion," said Doris dreamily.

"When a man is true in one thing, he is likely to be true in all," declared the lawyer; "and if he is false in one, he is apt to be false in all. Give me my hat, Doris; I will have that poster down."

His daughter smiled.

"You can tear down the bill, papa; but you cannot remove the man," she said.

"Unfortunately, no; if I could, I would have him locked up."

"I should like to hear him," said Doris. "I have never heard a really eloquent speaker. May I go to the lecture?"

"I shall be ashamed if you do," replied the lawyer.

But Doris laughed.

"Not quite that, Sir John Durke. In going, with his wife and daughters, I should like to go also."

"Well, you can go, Doris—that is, if you cousin will accompany you. Just once will not matter, and it will prove to you what nonsense such men talk. You will certainly hear a fine orator. I have heard that Martin Ray's words fall like flame and set his hearers' hearts on fire. Go, but do not mention the man's name to me again."

Mr. Hatton finished his tea and went off to the office, where, in the intricacies of "Larson v. Gotlar," he forgot all about Martin Ray; nor did he dream that a tragedy had begun that day.

Harbury was a quiet town, with very few amusements, and such a thing as a great political lecture, no matter on what side, was not to be neglected.

Doris Hatton was well pleased to go. She had all her life heard her father speak of Radicals as of a class of beings quite different from other men. Here was a chance of seeing the enemy. Partly because she had nothing to do, partly because fate or destiny led her, Doris Hatton went to the lecture.

Looking over the sea of faces, changing, brightening, or darkening under the fire or scorn of his words, Martin Ray saw one that lived in his heart for evermore—a pale, refined, pretty face, with great earnest eyes and a tender mouth, the face of a girl who must be a hero-worshipper by nature. The expression of it was rapt and attentive; the eyes never left his; the face paled; the lips quivered, the eyes brightened, and the face flushed as he changed his theme. It was like playing on some grand harp; touch what cords he would, the response was certain. After awhile the girl's face held him captive—he found himself speaking to it, thinking of it, watching it as it changed and paled. It was no longer himself and his audience, but himself and this girl. He was explaining to her his doctrines; imbuing her mind with his ideas.

MOTHER!

Open Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even a cross, feverish, constipated child loves its "fruity" taste, and mothers can rest easy because it never fails to work all the sour bile and poisons right out of the stomach and bowels without griping or upsetting the child.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

Smoking and Appetite.

The soldiers, explorers, and sportsmen who have endured many hours of fasting have testified that Charles Kingsley was right when he likened tobacco to "the poor man's food." Tobacco smoking undoubtedly removes the keen edge from hunger, but it is in no sense a food substitute. I am often asked if smoking diminishes appetite and causes indigestion.

A pipe or cigar just before a meal lessens the sensation of hunger in the majority of smokers. There are some persons who smoke until dinner is on the table and even between the courses without experiencing any diminution of appetite. But almost all heavy smokers find that the habit reduces hunger.

In the case of corpulent people with hearty appetites the use of tobacco may be beneficial. The healthiest and most active persons tend to eat moderately or sparingly, and among them are a number of regular smokers. A sedentary man, however, more likely to suffer from the ill effects of excessive smoking than one employed in muscular outdoor work, and it is possible to establish a general rule concerning moderation in the use of tobacco.

Very moderate indulgence in smoking affects some few persons, injuriously, while constant and some what immoderate smoking appears to have no harmful effect upon the very robust and non-nervous types.

In a tirade against smoking, written by a layman, it is stated that "all victims of the tobacco habit" have chronic indigestion and die painful deaths from intestinal trouble. No specific instances are given in this counterblast to tobacco. We are simply told that all smokers are "in a dangerous condition of ill-health."

Dr. Binz, the painstaking pharmacologist, has carefully noted the effect of tobacco smoking among average men. He says that moderate smoking cannot be said to injure the system and that the results are in many cases advantageous. Judicious smoking is known to stimulate the brain and to increase the activity of the heart. This authority is also of the opinion that smoking often corrects a tendency to constipation.

The depressing symptoms of tobacco poisoning arise from excessive smoking, especially when the tobacco is "strong." Analysis of various tobaccos shows that cavendish contains nearly 4 per cent. of nicotine, whereas a light honeydew has less than 2 per

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Ready and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 10 ounces. Or you can use clarified, molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves a good few things of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it's also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

It is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE WARNING.

WALT HATTON

The road turned sharply to the right, and, as my silver rolled, my startled eyes beheld a sight that made my blood run cold. A brand new sign, with a message drier, I there perceived, glared: "Beware! A man was killed just here, because he drove too fast." I had been ripping off the miles at quite a reckless pace; my silver scorched, in many styles, as though 'twere in a race. But I was startled by that rate, that message stark and clear, and so I then reduced my speed to fourteen miles an hour. And if it so affected me, I wager that it jars a hundred others when they see that warning from their cars. You say it would be wise, indeed, to place such monuments wherever mania for

Fifty-One Years Ago.

Notes From a Pocket Diary---The Seal Fishery and Other Matters.

1st. 1871--The following crews left port for the icefields to-day: Eagle, Capt. Jackman; Capt. Ryan; Osprey, Capt. Walrus, Capt. Mallowney; Capt. Cummings; Lion, Capt. Hector, Capt. White. The Hector, Capt. White, had sailed, but was delayed to a death in the captain's meeting. A great temperance meeting was held by His Lordship Bishop at the Commercial Rooms on Duckworth Street to-day in connection with the sealing voyage. Mr. C. L. Jarvis, the Society's Secretary, who has charge of the rooms, is as busy as a bee arranging for the annual sweepstakes, which, it is said, will aggregate, on the present occasion, more than £1,000. All prominent merchants are taking tickets this time. Two of them won £300 each last year. Snowing and drifting in the morning. Wind changed to S.W. towards evening with warm rain and free thaw everywhere. Trappers predict an early Spring. The funeral of the late Mr. Joseph Woods took place to-day and was largely attended.

5th.--Much interest manifested itself at the Commercial Rooms on Duckworth Street to-day in connection with the sealing voyage. Mr. C. L. Jarvis, the Society's Secretary, who has charge of the rooms, is as busy as a bee arranging for the annual sweepstakes, which, it is said, will aggregate, on the present occasion, more than £1,000. All prominent merchants are taking tickets this time. Two of them won £300 each last year. Snowing and drifting in the morning. Wind changed to S.W. towards evening with warm rain and free thaw everywhere. Trappers predict an early Spring. The funeral of the late Mr. Joseph Woods took place to-day and was largely attended.

6th.--Lovers of the "roarin' game" are in a great state of excitement over the approaching "bonspiel," and some of them have been practicing night and day for the past week or fortnight. The newspapers are full of it, and posters, headed "Curlians" decorate the walls of the city in every direction.

7th.--News of a remarkable event reaches us to-day from Witless Bay. It is stated that Mrs. Evelyn, of Chanle Cove, gave birth yesterday to three healthy children--all boys. Weather continues fine; winds high and cold, especially at night, but snow and ice apparently gone to stay.

8th.--Preparations are already being made for the approaching cod-fishing, and, to keep pace with the progressive age in which we live, and the requirements of our great staple industry, Mr. Ambrose Shea (not yet knighted) is arranging to have a steam bait-ship built. The work of construction is now going on at the Galway Wharf under the supervision of a son-in-law of our celebrated marine architect, Mr. Michael Kearney. The timbers and other materials have been brought on here from one of the neighboring outports, and the boat, when finished, will be racy of the soil as well as of the sea.

9th.--A serious misunderstanding, which culminated in "assault and battery," occurred at the House of Assembly to-day, between Major Renouf and the Hon. John H. Warren. Various versions of the affair are given at the clubs and other places where men do congregate, but no particulars are available.

10th.--Weather fine to-day; snow all gone. The House of Assembly goes into privilege this afternoon on the Renouf-Warren imbroglio. The result is awaited with much interest. The outfit for the seal-fishery from St. John's this year amounts to 34 vessels, aggregating 4,254 tons and carrying 2,022 men. Nearly all of them sailed for the fices on the 1st inst. News received to-day of peace between France and Germany.

11th.--Weather still remarkably fine and an early Spring predicted.

12th.--Not a particle of snow or ice visible and atmospheric conditions summerlike.

13th.--Mr. Murphy, Magistrate at St. Mary's, died a day or two ago, and Messrs. R. Furlong and Adam McKen are candidates for the vacancy.

14th.--Raining all day with mud and slush ankle deep almost everywhere.

15th.--Still raining. A fine old citizen, the person of Mr. P. Feehan, was buried to-day. Yesterday, or the day before, the leader of the Opposition, Mr. F. B. T. Carter, brought in a bill regarding the privileges of the House of Assembly which were supposed to have been violated during the trouble between Messrs. Renouf and Warren. A heated debate ensued in the course of which Premier C. F. Bennett, and Receiver General Thos. Glen spoke strongly against the measure. The bill was rejected by a solid party vote.

16th.--Wind N.W. to N.E. cold with snow showers. No particular news.

17th.--St. Patrick's Day. The parade of Tasker Masonic Lodge takes place this forenoon. At the time of the Lodge's first meeting it was suggested by Mr. Gillipie, the W.M., that the annual parade be fixed for the 17th of March, in honor of Mr. Tasker, the latter's name being Patrick.

18th.--Quite a lot of interest is manifested here to-day, consequent upon a rumor that the Orangemen of the city intend to have a grand parade. However, His Lordship Bishop Power, at last Mass yesterday, made reference to the matter, warned his people against any attempt to interfere, and told them just to imagine that the yellow was only light green and govern themselves accordingly. Anyway, the parade did not take place. Bishop Power's great Conversation came off at the Palace last night, and pretty well all the elite of the city attended. I don't think His Lordship invited any of the grog-sellers. He seems to have no regard for those who retail intoxicating drink. Messrs. Hearn, Harvey and staff were there. Revenue to the amount of £30,000 (thirty thousand pounds) was collected on rum last year. The brigantine Lady Bird arrived to Harvey & Co., a day or two ago with a full cargo of rum from the West Indies. Rev. Father Walsh, of Placentia, died there on the 18th; his body is being brought here to-day overland. A curling match at the Rink last night between teams led by Irwin and Roche resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 9 to 8. Mr. Robert Alsop, Colonial Secretary, is very unwell and not expected to recover. Intelligence has just been received from London of the death of Mr. John Fox, formerly of this town and of the firm of Harvey & Fox.

19th.--Delightfully fine day, but the walking still somewhat sloppy, owing to the light snow that fell last night having melted this forenoon.

20th.--The steamer Walrus, Capt. P. Mallowney, arrived from the icefields early this morning to J. & W. Stewart, with 11,000 seals, eight hundred of which are on deck. She commenced landing on the 15th. The captain says: "I really do not know exactly how many are on board, because we had no time to count them. The crew threw the pelts on board until every place was filled." The Walrus reports six steamers and three sailing vessels in the same ice. This is the first of the fleet to arrive. Capt. Mallowney brought a letter from Capt. Con. Callahan.

21st.--A question has arisen in regard to the American steamer Monticello, whether, in the event of her getting a load of seals, they should be allowed into this colony free of duty. Mr. Harvey has an interest in the Monticello.

22nd.--No special news in circulation to-day. People with money in the sealing venture expect handsome returns this season, and preparations are being made to handle a big voyage.

23rd.--The following attended a card party at Jocelyn's last night: F. Goodridge, R. Goodridge, John Rowe, W. Canning, Capt. J. Winsor, Jeff Lash, John Gillard, S. Canning, John Kelligrew and George Hutchings. They managed to get home at 4 a.m.

24th.--The s.s. Lion, Capt. Graham, and the s.s. Eagle, Capt. Jackman, arrived this morning from the seal-fishery, the former with 22,000, and the latter with 23,000 prime young harps. To-night, about 9 o'clock, the s.s. Hector steamed into port with 23,000--4,000 on deck. She is commanded by the veteran seal-killer Captain White. He reports the Nimrod, Capt. Cumming, with 24,000.

25th.--The Walrus, Capt. Mallowney, leaves this morning on a second trip to the icefields. Mr. Robert Alsop died this afternoon. He was an upright and consistent business man and his death is regretted by the whole community.

26th.--In the House of Assembly on Thursday, the Hon. the Prime Minister moved and Mr. Emerson seconded a motion that Mr. Richard Holden be appointed Clerk Assistant to the said House, which was unanimously adopted; and this gentleman, who has for thirty-six years been connected with the Legislature, in various capacities, was duly installed into an office the duties of which his long experience has so well qualified him to discharge.

27th.--The Address in Reply to His Excellency's Speech on the opening of the Legislature has passed the Assembly last. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the business to be done will be got through as rapidly as careful progressive legislation will admit of. If honorable members will give their attention to the work before them, and avoid a too lengthy airing of their talking abilities, there will be little difficulty in getting through in about eight weeks, although more than a fourth of that time has been occupied on the Address.

28th.--Alexander Murray, Esq., has secured a portion of the Commissariat Department for the arrangement of the very many specimens he has from time to time procured in his geological survey of the colony. He has some very good samples of coal obtained on the West Coast.

29th.--On the Mall to-day are fourteen cases of various sizes. They contain the monument to be erected to the late Mr. Weston Carter, who lost his life at Signal Hill, on St. Stephen's Day, two years ago, while making a gallant effort to save some young persons from drowning.

30th.--The s.s. Osprey, Captain Knight, arrived early to-day with 8,000 seals. She belongs to Mr. Stephen March.

31st.--This afternoon the sailing vessel Hebe, Capt. James Geran, entered port with 4,000 seals. In referring to our annual harvest of the icefields we are reminded that a circle of 2,000 miles in diameter is occupied by frozen fields and floes of vast extent. Here and there giant masses of fantastic form rear their heads.

Wore a Fountain Pen.

James Norman Hall tells the following amusing South Sea story: Hualu, the native constable of a lonely South Sea atoll, was the only one who made any heavy social demands upon me.

He had once made a journey from Papeete to San Francisco as a stoker on one of the mail boats, and was immensely proud of the few English phrases which he had picked up during the voyage.

He didn't know the meaning of them, but that made no difference. He could put on side before the others, make them believe that he was carrying on an intelligent conversation.

"What's the matter?" "Oh, yes." "Never mind," were among his favorite expressions--unusually mild ones, it seemed to be, for one who had been associated with a gang of cockney stokers--and he brought them out apropos of nothing.

He was an exasperating old hypocrite, but a genial one and I couldn't help replying to some of his felicitatious conversations. "Once, out of curiosity, wondering what his reply would be, I said 'Hualu, you're the worst old four-flusher in the seventy-two islands, aren't you?'"

He smiled and nodded, and came back with the most telling of all his phrases, "You go to hell, me!" On that occasion it was delivered with what seemed something more than mere parrot-like wisdom of reply.

Clipped to his undershirt he wore a fountain pen, which was as much a part of his costume on these dress occasions as his dungaree trousers and pandanus hat. It had a broken point, was always dry, and Hualu could hardly write his own name.

No matter. He would no more have forgotten his pen than a French soldier his croix de guerre.

To secure a smooth pie crust, without bilsters, make dough, and after rolling it, fit it over bottoms of pie pan and bake there. This leaves a smooth inside to the crust. Put it inside pan and fill as usual.

NURSE THINKS NOTHING BETTER

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Advised for all Women in Poor Health

Toronto, Ontario.--"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and it is the only patent medicine I ever recommend. I am a nurse and if I find a woman in poor health I always tell her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first took it many years ago, I was so tired when I got up in the morning that I could not get up, and when I went to bed I was too tired to sleep. My mother-in-law told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was just what I wanted so I tried it and only took two bottles when I felt better. Since then I have found that there is nothing that makes me feel so well, for it seems to build my system right up. I don't know any other medicine that has done so much for women."--Mrs. W. H. PARKER, 13 Wellesley Ave., Toronto, Ontario.

Women testify again and again that they have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound "after other medicines have failed." It has been tried for nearly fifty years and is not finding wanting. If you are suffering from any of the usual ailments which accompany female weakness try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chinese Royalty Not Changed.

The recent death of Princess Chin of China, a "suicide" which followed a quarrel with the Empress Dowager, recalls the legend of poisoning that took form in Peking thirteen years ago, when the great Dowager Empress Tsi An died within a few hours of the death of Emperor Kuang-han, who had been a puppet in her hands.

One of the sinister rumors that was spread at the time was that Tsi An had been the first to die, and that the emperor had "not been allowed to survive her."

Strange things have happened in China since then, the strangest being a Chinese republic, a growing custom of cutting off pig-tails and another of sending girls to college. But the imperial palace at Peking does not change. It clings to its old customs.

No matter that the royal family is not just now a ruling one, China being a republic, at least in name. The imperial palace continues just the same to be a hotbed of Chinese politics of the ancient pattern, and it is in full harmony with that ancient pattern that a convenient overdose of optimism is blamed for the untimely death of the indiscreet Princess Chin, mother of the deposed boy emperor.

Witness the scene when little Puyi, the baby emperor, to be known royally as Hsuan Tung, was ceremoniously enthroned, soon after the death of Tsi An and Kuang-han.

It took place in the throne hall of the Forbidden City. All Peking was in ferment over the latest rumor that the departed emperor had not even died in the Pavilion of Peaceful Longevity, where all Chinese emperors are obliged by tradition to die. But the entombment was marked by perfect composure.

Court mourning for the dead empress dowager and the emperor was suspended for the occasion. The robes of the high officials would have eclipsed any garden of dahlias. Before reverent eyes the baby emperor was divested of his mourning robe and dressed in a tiny robe embroidered with imperial dragons. Then his nurse started with him to the throne.

His imperial majesty was only 2 years and ten months old, but he insisted on toddling all alone, dragging his grand draperies with him, and the spectacle is said to have been a moving one. Reaching the throne, the little mite kowtowed to his mother, Princess Chin. Then he clambered to his imperial seat and received with dignity the kowtows of his venerable nobles and courtiers.

After the ceremony his coronation robes were taken off and he went back into the care of his nurses. And now he is a wistful boy of almost 16, a pawn of conflicting ambition, a puppet of petticoat government, a lonely lad who has just lost his mother.

"But Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked." The title Jeshurun was a poetical name for Israel—the chosen people—and it is alleged on the authority of their leader Moses, that becoming stiff-necked and stubborn they went their own way—for a time—waxed fat and kicked. Their case is exactly analogous to that of the President of the Fishermen's Protective Union, who also—for a time—went his own way, waxed fat and kicked. In the year of grace, 1915, he kicked against the Products Corporation Bill introduced in the House of Assembly by the Prime Minister of the day. In 1922 he kicks against all those who are opposed to the Humber Valley Project, and threatens them with dire penalties, if they persist in their hostility. A cursory examination of the Products Corporation Bill of 1915 and the proposed Humber Valley Proposition of 1922 may show that there is not a great deal of difference in the twain. But since 1915 Jeshurun (Coaker) has waxed fat. But his kick is not against the new deal this time. On the contrary it is directed at those who do not favor it, and the dictator has handed down notice that those who stand in the way of the 1922 accomplishment, will be ground to powder.

The proceedings of the House of Assembly for the year 1915 are as reputable and correct as any of those, preceding or succeeding. Mr. Coaker was then sitting in Opposition, and felt it to be his bounden duty to oppose to the utmost the establishment of the Products Corporation on the Humber River. On May 3, 1915, speaking against the Bill in the House of Assembly, Mr. Coaker made use of language which left no doubt as to his antagonism. The following quotations from the local Hansard are credited to Mr. Coaker, in speaking to the measure before the House:

"I know that there are men in this country who know what is in the country; they were allowed to take charge of the whole railway system (how history repeats itself) and take land in payment for the operating of the system for fifty years. They knew that there was something in these lands. The timber in the Gander region alone is worth $50,000,000. (If then why not much more so today?) There is tremendous value in timber there. Nothing good can come out of Nazareth," said the Premier (Sir E. P. Morris). If this bill as it read formerly, had gone through the fishermen would have a say in the matter."

Obviously then the fishermen in 1915 were instructed to oppose the Products Bill in much the same manner as they are ordered to favor the Humber Valley deal in 1922, and Mr. Coaker was and is, the power behind the movement in both cases.

Consistency is therefore not a virtue cultivated by that gentleman. He is merely a time-server and one who disagrees to-day to agree to-morrow. Employment of those who needed labor has been exploited by the President of the F.P.U. in the case of the new Humber proposals, but his sentiments on this score in 1915 were entirely different. Here is the official report of his remarks in that direction, taken from the edited text of his speech on the day and date above quoted:

"The Premier (Sir E. P. Morris) painted a very rosy picture when he said that four thousand men would be working there. (Products Corporation). I would like to see the day. I hope it will not turn out like the promise that the South Side hills would be white with sheep. A bird in the hand is worth how many did you say?—I should say all in the bush. But our fishermen are not going to get such tremendous benefits even if it does work. Many a man has gone up to work at Grand Falls, and is very sorry that he ever left the fishery to go there. The ordinary fisherman if he remains at home to work hard catching fish would earn a better living."

Thus Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked. He kicked against the Products Corporation establishment in 1915, and there was no uncertainty in the sound of his voice as heard in the House. In 1922, making a complete volte face, he praises in the Humber Valley project what he condemned in the Carbide proposition. Where is the consistency? Other utterances of Mr. Coaker on the measure will show exactly his position when in Opposition to the Government. Why the change of front when him and his party are arrayed with the Government? The threats of the actual dictator of the Administration will fail of their effect, in the present instance, for no sane individual who has followed the record of the W.P. since 1908, will submit to his dictates in a matter which concerns Newfoundland more vitally than any other. Other extracts from Mr. Coaker's seven speeches on the Products measure will be published as occasion warrants.

Twenty Years Ago To-Day.

(Evening Telegram, March 8, 1902.)
The sealers from all the steamers in port to the number of 3,000, turned out on strike for better terms at the Sealers' Crews from the Ranger, Aurora, Terra Nova, Vanguard, Iceland, Greenland, Southern Cross joined in procession and proceeded to Government House where the spokesmen, Kelloway of Pool's Island, Mercer of Bay Roberts, and Hall of North River, asked His Excellency to intercede for them. They demanded $5 per cwt. for fat, or an advance of $1.75 over the price received the year previous; abolition of the charge for coaling the steamers; to do away with the practice of charging 33 per cent. on crop; to be allowed to sleep on board the steamers upon coming to St. John's. Mr. A. B. Morris acted for the sealers, and after a lot of negotiating the matter was settled satisfactorily to both parties.

Reported Short of Coal.

The Furness Withy Co. received a wireless message yesterday from the S.S. Hickman saying she was short of coal and asking if it were possible to make this port. The Hickman belongs to the American Shipping Board and is bound from Hamburg to Philadelphia. She is a ship of 5000 tons register. It is possible that owing to the ice blockade the ship will proceed to Halifax to replenish her bunker.

Boxing Tournament.

MEMORIAL SPORTS COMMITTEE WILL HOLD SPRING MEET.
At yesterday's meeting of the Memorial Sports Committee, as reported in the Telegram, it was decided that a boxing and wrestling tournament and gymnastic exhibition should be held in the spring. The following were appointed a Committee to decide upon a programme which they will recommend to the general committee on Saturday. Messrs. B. B. Stafford, S. Cullen, R. Stick, A. E. Holmes, A. B. Berlin, F. Marshall, H. Colton, and E. J. Goodland.

This committee met yesterday afternoon and their recommendations were that their should be five weights in the boxing and wrestling, and a gymnastic exhibition consisting of pyramids, "stunts" on the parallel bars, and humorous items. Only the finals in the boxing and wrestling tournaments will be run off on the night of the show, as the preliminaries will be contested on the previous night. There will be four rounds in the boxing contest, three of 2-minutes and one of 3-minutes, with 1-minute intervals. The exhibition will be held in the C.L.E. Armoury which has been kindly placed at Lt.-Col. Nangle's disposal by Lt.-Col. Goodridge.

Lights for Fire Trucks.

Among the many innovations and improvements which are now being introduced into the Police and Fire Departments, is that of placing electric lights on the horse trucks of the fire department. These lights have been tried on some of the trucks and have proved so successful that more have been ordered, sufficient to supply all the trucks in use. Two fire-cell batteries provide the "juice" for the lights.

Lectured on Science.

SCRIPTURE vs. GEOLOGY.
Rev. F. E. Fairbairn, Pastor of George St. Methodist Church, lectured at the regular weekly meeting of Wesley Debating Club last night on the subject of Science vs. the Bible. The address was given really on the question: "Do Modern Geological Discoveries agree with Holy Writ?" and Mr. Fairbairn for purposes of interest took geology to mean the science of which it was a part. The question then read: "Does Science agree with Holy Writ?" The lecturer answered the question mainly in the negative. "Why should the Bible agree with Science? The Bible was not a work of science by scientists. That was not its value. Where, as a matter of fact, the Bible attempted to encroach on the domain of science, it was hopelessly inaccurate. At the conclusion of his interesting talk, Mr. Fairbairn invited questions on the subject, and there were raised: at him a great number. Proposed by J. R. Smallwood and seconded by Fred Gushue, a vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer. Mrs. Julia Salter Earle, who was present, was invited to speak, and expressed her pleasure at having heard such an interesting discourse.

Police Officer Honored.

No Races To-Day.

Sportive moods of Dame Nature are responsible for the oft deferred "Horse Races." All other patron Saints have turned deaf ears to the Horseman's appeal for good ice, our eyes are now fixed on the great St. Patrick himself, and if he fail us, we are foiled indeed. Good old St. Patrick use your best of wits and give us good ice next week. Listen to the music of the jingling bells and the flying feet of horses, mingled with the merry laughter of your delighted patrons.

Dangerous Situation in Limerick.

Free State Forces May Fight Republicans—Sir Arthur Balfour Favors Coalition—Italy Blockades Fiume—King George Approves Issue of Medal for Foreign Troops.

PERILOUS SITUATION IN LIMERICK.

LONDON, March 7. The situation in Limerick is perilous according to a News correspondent here. Although a fortnight ago Limerick Brigade repudiated the Free State authority, seven weeks are still held by Free State forces under Brigadier Brennan, who is fighting in the European style. The fighting troops attempt to break the barracks heavy fighting is heard.

HEARDLY GONE TO LIMERICK.

DUBLIN, March 7. Brigadier Mulcahy, Minister of Defence in the Eireann Cabinet, left for Limerick this afternoon.

NUMBER FAVOURS COALITION.

LONDON, March 7. Sir Arthur Balfour declared himself a believer in the benefits of a coalition Government. "I am emphatically of the opinion that the party interests are best served by coalition," he said, in addressing the Carlton Club at luncheon in his honor. He would remain a member of the Conservative and Unionist party, he added. Sir Arthur paid a tribute to Mr. Lloyd George, and said in his opinion no other man could so well have brought the present agreement on March 31, was reiterated at the White House to-day.

THE COAL SITUATION.

WASHINGTON, March 7. The belief of President Harding that American Coal Companies and miners should keep faith and get together before the expiration of the present agreement on March 31, was reiterated at the White House to-day. The President has informed the Secretary of Labor that the Labor Department should insist on both parties observing the provision for meeting to renew the agreement or arriving at a new one.

WILL RECOMMEND EXTRADITION.

KEY WEST, March 7. After preliminary hearing of the case of V. Brocklehurst, charged with the murder of Capt. Chafe of the British sloop, Lewis Brothers, United States Commissioner Knowles will recommend compliance with the request of the British authorities for the extradition of Brocklehurst in Nassau for trial in a British court.

LUMBER BACK TO 1914 PRICES.

LONDON, March 7. Lumber prices F.O.B. mill, with the exception of some high grade stock, are back to 1914 basis, according to the statement of Manager Sergeant of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, before the Canadian Railway Commissioners.

WANT STEFANSSON EXPEDITION INVESTIGATED.

OTTAWA, March 7. The appointment of a Commission to investigate the organization and conduct of the Stefansson Arctic expedition is asked by a petition of four scientists presented to the Minister of the Interior to-day. They want the truth or falsity of the Stefansson charges established. All were members of the expedition.

TRADE BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES.

WASHINGTON, March 7. American exports to Canada in January were $3,505,000, against $4,372,000 in January, 1921. Imports from Canada were $25,218,000, compared with $24,231,000.

VISCOUNT GREY SERIOUSLY ILL.

LONDON, March 7. Viscount Grey of Fallodon, former Secretary of State, underwent an operation for ulcer to-night. His condition is considered serious.

Directorate Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Newfoundland Wholesale Dry Goods Ltd. took place yesterday afternoon. The reports of the year's work proved very satisfactory. The election of officers resulted as follows:— President—W. S. Mouror. Vice-Pres.—J. M. Spears. President—W. S. Mouror.

Mounted Men Out.

District Inspector Noseworthy, commander of the lately revived mounted police, was out for a canter yesterday afternoon with two mounted constables. The small patrol presented a fine appearance and won appreciative glances from all who saw them. Before very long, the full troop will be mounted and ready for service, and few can doubt their success in the carrying out of the special duties which will fall to their lot.

Mid-Week Bill at the Crescent.

Amusement seekers certainly cannot do better than take in the popular Crescent Theatre this afternoon and night. The programme is one that will interest the most blasé movie fan. Apart from the usual big holiday picture, Eddie McGinley the vaudeville comedian, will appear in an entire change of act. Eddie has recently made some poetry concerning the coming sealshery which he intends using at this performance. He has also got some new comic and novelty songs and funny parodies together with a good selection of jokes and funny stories. Have a good laugh at the Crescent to-day.

Letter From Prospero.

CHIEF ENGINEER THANKS THE TELEGRAM. A letter has just been received by the Telegram from Mr. Jas. McKinley, chief engineer of s.s. Prospero which has been ice-bound at Green Cove, Exploits, for many weeks. Chief McKinley thanks us for papers sent, which, he said, were perused word for word, by every man on board. With reference to the ship's position, he says: "Our position and chances of getting clear are much about the same, if anything worse, as the longer we are here the heavier the ice is getting. The only chance there is that perhaps this month sometime, there may be a heavy sea or swell pitch in, that will break up this body of ice that is all around us, and give us a free leg to get away with. Otherwise we are here until we melt out of it. The weather has also been on just about its worst behaviour lately, snowing, blowing, freezing and everything that is rotten." Our correspondent says that all on board are well.

This morning Requiem Mass for the repose of the soul of Robert Comerford was celebrated in St. Bonaventure's College Oratory by Rev. Fr. Flynn. A large number of friends of the deceased youth attended the ceremony. After mass the body was removed to the home of Mr. Wm. Comerford, Military Road, from where the funeral takes place to-morrow.

Thomas A. Kempis.

The year 1921 was so greatly taken up by interest in the Dante sescentenary that most persons failed entirely to note the fact that the year was the four hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of another of the world's immortals, Thomas A. Kempis, the author of the "Imitation of Christ." A quarter of a century or so ago a discussion with regard to the world's greatest books was precipitated by an ingenious London editor who asked the question: "If you were to be marooned on a desert island for life and could take only a dozen books with you, what books would you select?" In the lists of answers Dante and a Kempis was omitted from almost none of the lists of university men, and was included by many scientists, even Huxley himself selecting it.

How to Prevent a Cold.

One of the best cold cures in the world is ordinary spirit of camphor. The proper way to take it is to put from ten to fifteen drops on a lump of sugar, and eat it in bed. Do not drop the spirit on the sugar until you are unwearyed as it soon evaporates, but pop it in the mouth when you get into bed, and cover yourself up well, and then keep your mouth shut. If this remedy is tried as soon as a cold begins to show itself, it will, in ninety-nine cases out of the hundred, check it before it gets to an acute stage. Spirit of nitre may not suit everybody's constitution; whereas camphor may be employed with impunity. For a child use from five to ten drops, according to age.

ON THE SELF STARVERS.
Some people eat to live, some live to eat. Besides these two classes there are still two more—the people who mean to live to eat, but because they never have built up the reserve of strength that has saved you.

A reserve of strength is a blessed thing to have in all the crises of life. It not only carried this woman through a serious illness but it made her capable at her husband's death of taking on the double burden of bringing up children and supporting them. To-day at 58 she is still capable of filling a useful position in society and of heartily enjoying life.

Don't Think You Know Better, You DON'T.
To eat properly neither too much nor too little, is one of the finest physical duties. You cannot neglect it without suffering and bringing suffering to others. If you are under 50 you may think that you can do it without feeling it, but unless you mean your years you will feel it sooner or later.

Once more I am going to make myself a lot of work—work I am glad to do as a contribution to the world's happiness—by promising that I will send to anyone who suspects he does not eat enough or that his nerves are undernourished, a book which will help him to find out. As your part of the bargain, please send a stamped envelope fully addressed.

Famous Mystery of Dublin Castle.
DISAPPEARANCE OF JEWELS DISCOVERED IN 1907.

Among the papers that were destroyed by the British officials before Dublin Castle was handed over to the Irish Free State it is possible there could have been any referring to the famous mystery of the theft of the Crown Jewels in 1907. It is possible for no doubt the documents that were burnt were not exclusively those that were useless, but that many were given to the flames because the publication of their contents might provoke scandal. The theft of the jewels remains one of the most peculiar and baffling crimes of many years, on account of the intrinsic and historical value of the booty, the prominence of those involved and the impenetrable mystery that has surrounded the affair. In the past fourteen years not a trace of the jewels has been found, nor has there been any public acknowledgment of a clue having been discovered, though powerful influences and funds were devoted to the case.

THE ULSTER KING AT ARMS.
The missing jewels were sent to Dublin Castle in 1830 by King William in order that they might be used as regalia for the investiture of new Knights of St. Patrick's. They consisted of a diamond badge and a large diamond star, said to have had a money value of a quarter of a million dollars. They were in the official custody of the Ulster King at Arms, a high functionary of the Viceroy's establishment. At the time of the robbery the Ulster King at Arms was Sir Arthur Vicars. He had won distinction by his genealogical investigations, was a member of several smart London clubs and moved in the highest circles. When he was appointed in 1893 the choice was general.

ly approved, though he was a young man and unmarried. The jewels were kept in an old-fashioned safe in an office which was occupied by two clerks in the day time and by no body at night. The safe was opened with a ponderous key, which remained in the possession of Sir Arthur. So far as is known, there was no duplicate of it.

REFUSED TO RESIGN.

The fact that the jewels were missing from the safe was made in July 1907, just a year after Lord Aberdeen had been made Lord Lieutenant, and his family, including his son, Lord Haddo, and his bride installed in the castle. Preparations were going forward for the investiture of Lord Castledown as a Knight of St. Patrick, and an examination of the safe showed that the jewels were gone. Sir Arthur was not charged with having taken them, but as he was responsible, he was accused of having neglected proper precaution. He refused to give it and appealed to King Edward to order an investigation. Some months later he was informed by the Secretary of State for Ireland that as the King had decided to make a different disposition of the office of Ulster King at Arms, he could no longer be considered the incumbent. That is to say, he was dismissed in disgrace. He offered a thousand pounds for information as to the whereabouts of the jewels, and retired into private life, devoting himself, it was supposed, to an effort to solve the mystery.

THE LIBEL SUIT.

His troubles were by no means over, for he was made the victim of an invective in the less scrupulous newspapers and received a stream of anonymous letters, which made grave reflections, not only upon his own conduct, but upon that of members of the Viceroyal family. His detectives were unable to trace these letters, and to this day the so-called "Hidden Hand" remains hidden. Eventually, however he was given the opportunity of taking a slanderer to court when a London newspaper printed a story which he considered libellous. The paper said that the real thief was a woman and that Sir Arthur had shielded her, that the jewels were never taken out of the castle, and that there was something highly suggestive in the fact that Lord Aberdeen had almost vindictively pursued Sir Arthur, while his son, Lord Haddo, had defended him.

PARTLY VINDICATED.

Sir Arthur Vicars, through his attorneys, pleaded that the statements and suggestions in the article were false and asked for a substantial verdict. The newspaper's publisher tried to justify his statement by naming persons, the chief being a woman called Molly, and then known as Mme. Robinson. She was said to have been assisted to Paris by Sir Arthur. The jury gave Sir Arthur heavy damages, for the publisher failed to prove a single statement. Armed with this partial vindication, Sir Arthur appealed to King George to hold an investigation, but His Majesty showed no more interest than had been shown by his father. In 1917 Sir Arthur found some assuagement of his troubles in marriage. He died last April, still under a cloud officially. It seems unlikely at this late date that the mystery will be solved. Possibly the truth will crop out in some spicy memoirs a half century hence.—Exchange.

The Gordian Knot.

Gordius, a peasant, being chosen king of Phrygia, dedicated his wagon to Jupiter and fastened the yoke to a beam with a knot that no one could untie. Alexander the Great was told that "whoever untied the knot would reign over the whole east." "Well, I perform the task," and so saying he cut the knot in two with his sword. This was in 330 B.C.

Captain Kidd.

Captain William Kidd, the pirate, lived from about 1645 to 1701. He was born in Scotland, and probably at Greenock, but his origin is obscure. As a young man he rendered service in New York, then a British colony, and the colonial council awarded him £150. Later he was commissioned to chase a hostile privateer of the coast, and is known to have served with credit against the French in the West Indies. In 1695 he was in London trading with a sloop of his own.

A large land owner in New York at the time was Col. R. Livingston, and he recommended Kidd to the newly appointed colonial governor, Lord Bellomont, as a fit man to command a vessel to cruise against the pirates in the Eastern Seas.

The "Adventure Galley" a vessel of 20 guns, was privately fitted out and the command given to Kidd, who received the King's commission to arrest and bring to trial all pirates, and he also received a commission of reprisal against the French. In May, 1696, Kidd sailed from Plymouth, England, for New York, where he filled up his crew, and in 1697 he reached Madagascar, the pirates' principal rendezvous. He made no effort to hunt down the pirates, but on the contrary he associated himself with the notorious pirate Cailliford. He captured some French ships, but when he found none to capture, he attacked, robbed and destroyed native trading vessels. He also plundered on the coast of Malabar. News of his doings reached England in 1699, and the Government instructed Lord Bellomont to arrest Kidd if he should return to America.

Abandoning the vessel "Adventure," Kidd sailed for America in one of his prizes, the "Quedah Merchant," which he left in the West Indies. He reached Boston in a sloop in July, 1699, and was arrested and sent to England, where he was tried for the murder of one of his crew, and then with others for piracy. The evidence against him was that of two members of his crew, the surgeon and a sailor, who turned King's evidence. He was found guilty and hanged at Execution Dock, London, on May 23, 1701.

Of Captain Kidd's treasures, about £14,000 were recovered from his ship and from Gardner's Island, off the east end of Long Island, New York.

The Terror Hour of Petrograd.

Sir Paul Okes, of the British Secret Intelligence Service, thus describes the "terror hour" at Petrograd. The dingy interior of the headquarters of the extraordinary commission in Petrograd with its bare stairs and passages, is an eerie place at all times of the year, but never is its sombre, sorrow-laden gloom so intense as on a December afternoon when dusk is sinking into darkness.

While we made out preparation, there sat in one of the inner chambers at No. 2 Gorohovaya, on wooden planks which took the place of bedsteads, a group of women, from thirty to forty in number, their faces undistinguishable in the growing darkness. The room was overheated and nauseatingly stuffy, but the patient figures paid no heed, nor appeared to care whether it were hot or cold, dark or light. A few chatted in undertones, but most of them sat motionless and silent, waiting, endlessly waiting.

The terror hour was not yet—it came only at 7 each evening. Then each victim knew that if the heavy door was opened and her name called, she would pass out into eternity, for executions were carried out in the evening and the bodies removed at night.

At 7 o'clock, all talk, all action ceased. The white faced women sat still, eyes fixed on the heavy folding door. When it creaked every figure became rigid!

A moment of ghastly, intolerable suspense, a silence that could be felt, and in the silence—a name! And when It's Flavor that Makes the Meal!

And the sauces that the Libby chefs have adapted for you give flavor to the simplest dishes. It may be eggs, or macaroni, or a cheap cut of meat—an unusual and delicious sauce will make it something you eat with delight and remember with pleasure—because of its flavor.

LIBBY'S CATCHUP and CHILI SAUCE are made from red, ripe tomatoes, grown in the fertile soil of Kent County, Ontario, picked when they are mellowed by the sunshine of long summer days, then rushed to the nearby Libby kitchen.

Here in sunny rooms the tomatoes are cooked with fragrant spices, onions, sugar and the best vinegar—cooked for hours until all the flavors are blended through and through.

Now the sauce is ready to give an appetizing relish to your steaks and chops, or a new piquancy to the meat gravy you serve with your roasts.

Your grocer has, or can get you, Libby's Catchup or Chili Sauce. Use it with your cold meat teas and note how quickly the second helping is necessary.

The delightful flavor of Libby's Beans is due largely to the wonderful Sauce prepared by the skilled chefs. Have you tried them?

Libby, McNeill & Libby

the name was spoken, every figure—but one—would imperceptibly relapse. Here and there a lip would twitch, here and there a smile would flicker. But no one would break the dread silence. One of their number was doomed. The figure that bore the name would rise, move slowly, with unnatural gait, tottering along the narrow aisle between the plank couches. Some would look up and some would pray, or mutter, "To-morrow, maybe!" Or there would be a frantic shriek, a brutal struggle, and worse than death would fill the chamber!

Non-Partisan League.

LOST MONEY IN EVERY WAY.

(New York Times.)
 BISMARCK, N.D., Feb. 1.—Reviewing North Dakota's experience in State industrialism, as put into effect when the State was controlled by Non-Partisan League officials, the Industrial Commission, now controlled by Anti-Leaguers, says there is "not one oasis in the dreary desert of failure." The commission fixes losses now at $41,041, and says they will be much heavier.

In the balance sheet, Secretary L. F. Crawford of the commission, who signs the report, says further losses must be recognized as having already been sustained. Their total, he says, is not now computable, but he anticipates actual losses in excess of $1,500,000.

The Bank of North Dakota, a State-owned institution having control of public moneys, has lost $225,088.14, says the report, with heavy additional losses also sustained by reason of the fact that nearly $1,000,000, has been re-deposited by the State bank in privately owned banks that are now in the hands of receivers.

The flour mill and grain elevator being constructed at Grand Forks, into which $1,000,000 already has been poured, will cost another $1,500,000 and be worth less than $2,000,000 when complete, says the report. This is occasioned by the fact that contracts were awarded when prices were at the peak.

Losses in the mill at Drake, N.D., have totalled $74,278.12, says the report, the losses exceeding an average of $100 a day for the entire time the mill has been in operation, the loss being in excess of $150 a barrel for every barrel of flour produced. Discontinuance of plant is advised.

The North Dakota Home Builders' Association, created for the purpose of construction of residence to be sold on the installment plan, has "lost" $113,256, says the report, and heavy additional losses must be absorbed by the State in that venture, for the reason that only one of the fifty-six houses constructed has been sold at the price that it costs to the State.

In other instances, the report adds, the price demanded by the State is far in excess of the estimated cost given to operative buyers. The houses cannot be sold for the money they cost the State.

Flagrant violations of the law also are cited in the report covering this feature of the industrial activity of the State.
 (NOTE.—The Non-Partisan League was a union of farmers very like the F.P.U. here. The leaders are now in prison. The "Anti-Leaguers" were "the people generally" who rose in their might to rescue the government of the State from the control of the Unionists.—Editor Telegram.)

SPRING FEVER.
 When the blue gets back in the skies once more
 And the vines grow green round the kitchen door,
 When the roose bud and robins come, I stretch myself and I say: "Hoo-hum, I ought to work but I guess I won't. Though some want riches to-day, I don't!
 This looks to me like the sort of day That was made to idle and dream away.
 When the sun is high and the air just right,
 With the trees all blossomy, pink and white,
 And the grass as soft as a feather bed With the white clouds drifting just overhead,
 I stretch and yawn like a school boy then,
 And turn away from the walks of men And tell myself in a shame-faced way: "I'm going to play hockey from work to-day!"
 "Here is a morning too rare to miss,
 And what is going to a day like this,
 And what is fame to the things I'll see Through the lattice-work of a fine old tree?
 There is work to do, but the work can wait,
 There are goals to reach, there are foes to hate,
 There are hurtful things which the smart might say,
 But nothing like that shall spoil to-day.
 To-day I'll turn from the noisy town,
 And just press all my burdens down; I'll quit the world and its common sense,
 And the things men think are of consequence,
 To chum with birds and the friendly trees
 And fathom their mysteries;
 For here is a day which looks to be The kind I can fritter away on me."

It is now possible to X-ray a steel plate five inches thick!
 Every flaw and imperfection in the plate is clearly revealed. It will be easily seen how valuable is this powerful ray, when it is remembered that the smallest undetected fault in a piece of steel may cause thousands of pounds' worth of damage.
 It was in 1916 that experiments were first made in X-raying steel and other metals.
 At the very start the ordinary X-ray apparatus was found unsuitable. Something far more powerful had to be constructed, and many dangerous and difficult experiments were made.
 The "ray" is produced by passing an electric current through an X-ray tube. The electric current is of enormous high tension, approximating 200,000 volts. This huge power is generated by a transformer, the latter being partly composed of miles and miles of fine, insulated wire.
 The Power of the "Glowing Eye."
 The giant X-ray tubes at Woolwich are made in a special glass-blowing department, and the plant used to exhaust the air from the tubes consists of a series of vacuum pumps.
 The great service X-rays have rendered to commerce cannot be exaggerated.
 For example, it was recently desired to examine the welding of two steel plates. To all outward appearances they were securely attached to each other. An X-ray examination, however, showed that only the surface of the steel had been affected by the welding process, and the edges were not properly joined.
 Another case: The failure of several shells to explode was investigated by X-rays, and certain small faults were revealed in the resulting photograph.
 In a third case, an X-ray photograph of a rubber tyre was taken, and it exposed every flaw and weakness in each layer of rubber and canvas.
 When using such powerful rays, the radiographic operator is liable to serious injuries and often a painful death.
 The late Dr. Bruce Ironside was devoted to the study of X-rays, and gave up his life in the cause.
 At Woolwich the most elaborate precautions are taken. Huge lead screens, inches thick, protect the operators, but even then the cumulative effect of the penetrating rays often results in the loss of an arm, leg, or finger, if in nothing worse.
 The science of radiology has advanced with great strides since the war, and X-rays are now used by the medical profession in cases of certain internal maladies. While they may not actually cure, the ultra-violet rays have a restraining effect on the growth, which is often kept to comparatively harmless dimensions by a course of X-ray treatment.

Mob Murders Pilloried Prisoners.

On Monday, March 8, 1922, a man named Egan, a shoemaker, of Drury Lane, and another named Salmon, a breeches-maker, were placed in the pillory at Smithfield, London. This instrument of punishment of a wooden frame, supported by an upright pillar of post, and having three holes through which the head and hands were placed, while the condemned person publicly stood up, and thus was utterly unable to defend himself if assaulted by any of the crowd: It has been disused in England since 1837. The name was corrupted from the Latin "speculator," to "watch", and a poor "look-out" the criminal possessed when thus exposed. In the case the mob was so exasperated against the culprits as to severely pelt them; and Egan, consequently, died from a mortal wound. At the request the coroner's jury returned a verdict of willful murder against persons unknown. On Friday, March 5, three days earlier, two of their comrades had undergone like punishment. MacDaniel, an ale-house keeper, of Scroops Court, Holborn, and Berry, of George Yard, Hatton Garden, during which they were both pelted by the populace; the former having his forehead severely wounded by a stone, while the latter barely survived. All four had been sentenced to stand twice in the pillory, to be imprisoned in Newgate Gaol seven years and afterwards to find security of £1,000 each for good behaviour for seven years, and to pay a fine. They probably deserved their punishment and the indignation of the populace, for they were fraudulent thief-takers. They conspired together in this fashion: One induced two inexperienced persons to commit a robbery, depriving them by splits of some self-control, while the tempter was said to have escaped; a second was the person robbed; a third bought the stolen goods; a fourth was to seize the robbers as a police-officer; and all were to share the reward offered by law for discovery of the felons, who then, in accordance with it, would be hanged. On this occasion the crime was committed near Deptford, but by Kelly and Ellis, who had been indicted into the real criminals were disclosed to Mr. Cox, the Chief Constable of that party, which was confirmed by the confession of Blew, a fellow-conspirator; and the punishment was therefore inflicted upon the proper persons, however much it may in these days seem to be cruelly severe.

What is Your Verdict!

Is it not safe to assume that the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, who manufacture in their own huge perfectly equipped plant practically every part of the Ford car, are the people best qualified to make replacement parts at the lowest price compatible with the high quality which must be maintained?

Manufacturers of spurious parts, operating as they do on a small scale with limited capital and inadequate equipment, cannot possibly make parts of the same quality or accuracy at anywhere near the low price you have to pay for Genuine Ford Parts. Yet you are asked to believe that these spurious parts not only equal Genuine Ford Parts in quality but can be produced to sell for less!

We rest our case here. The verdict we leave to you.
