Referring to the unity of the Liberal party, he said he saw no sign of any such divisions as led to its deteat in 1874. Everywhere there were signs of union, and he looked forward with satisfaction. There was much to be done in altering and modifying the land laws of England and Scotland, but the circumstances in these parts are not those of Ireland. He argued depression of trade proceeded from decreased purchasing power. He calculated between 1878 and 1880 the count; I lost twenty-four million pounds on her expert trade, but

THE TROUBLES OF TRADE. Excitement in Paris and Lendon—The Flew of Gold to America. NEW YORK, Oct. 7.-The marked decline

New York, Oct. 7.—The marked decline to-day in grain and provisions is attributed to the tightness of money. The Graphic's London letter says fears are entertained there and in Paris of a closely approaching financial crash. Bankers and money men admit a feeling of ala.m., and there seems to be no prospect of an early stoppage of the flow of gold to America. Bankers are prophesying still higher rates of discount, and believe the export of gold will be gradually increased. The situation of the bourse is apparently actiminating, and the largest operators are holding aloof.

"Ever had to break news? Well, yes, I had a pretty tough job that time when Mrs. Cowan's husband got smothered working in the drain with me. I went to the house—neat little clap-boarded cottage, with a bit of a garden in front—and the first thing I know'd a youngster came running out of the door and grabbed me round the legs and says 'Here's dad, here's dad' (Jim and me was just about of a size), and when I told him I wasn't dad, he looked so sad that I thought 'If the boy, feels so bad about a little thing like that, how in God's name am I ever going to tell him the whole truth? Then I went inhim the whole truth? Then I went in-him the whole truth? Then I went inside, and everything was as neat and bright as a new pin—lamp nicely trimmed, table set as good as the Rossin, wife bustlin around and smilin"—

"Well, that was a comfort," said a pompous-looking listener.

"Comfort, you blame fool, that was just the worst of it. If I'd gone in there and seen everything miserable, wife drunk, of children dirty, big black bottle on the table, I could have told the whole thing in two minutes. But there was worse in store table, I could have told the whole thing in two minutes. But there was worse in store for me. As I said, she was bustlin' around and just nodded pleasantly to me and sat down on the settee and did not say a word. I thought—I hoped—she would see from my way of action there was something wrong—but she did not seem to notice. I always was a gloomy-looking kind of a chap anyhow. Then she says, pointing to the apple pie on the table, 'Just wait till you see Jim go through that—I never saw such a man for pie, and he always pretends he can't eat it unless I make it.' Well, gentlemen, maybe there ain't anything very poetic about a pie—but I tell you that one just floored me. And then what do you think I did but forget the whole of my little speech, and blurted that thing out all in a heap. No use askin' me what she did—but I sat up all night calling myself did—but I sat up all night calling myself all the fools and asses in creation, and every time I think about it I get on the

OUR NEIGHBORS are fond of superlatives. For instance: Ex-Judge Curtis of New York, who has been approached for the defence of Guiteau, says that "a fair trial of this assassin in the present excited state of public feeling would be a more 'successful test of the value and perma-" nence of American institutions than any "other which can be conceived." This is simply ridiculous. There can be no doubt as to Guiteau's act; it has never been denied that he fired the fatal shot. No matter, then, what the state of public feeling may be, no mistake could be made in finding him guilty. But if it is true that Guiteau is insane, it can be preven by expert testimony, and it is inconceivable that dozen jurymen could be selected at random who would agree upon a verdict of murder against an insane man.

Canada Presbyterian : There will remain canada Fresoyterian: There will remain a very large number of Canadians of all classes and of all churches who will gladly avail themselves of the opportunity provided for rejoicing before God with the voice of praise and thanksgiving, for the many great and precious blessings with which the people of Canada have been free young during the year that is now ravidly.

The Good Side of Ben. Butler. Gen. Butler's income from fees alone is between $150,000 and $200,000 a year. between $150,000 and $200,000 a year. Some time ago he received a retainer of $100,000 in one case. His liberality is great, and his brother lawyers in Boston say that he does a larger gratuitous business than any other man in America. He never charges a cent for obtaining a pension, and pays all incidental fees. His subordinates know that they would be instantly discharged if he discovered that they had ever charged a pensioner a feather for the standard papers.

Any story of outrage, especially any story of legal wrong, quickly moves Gen. Butler, and he has been known to put aside a millionaire's business to start the machinery of his office to work upon a poor widow's case.

(Detroit Free Press.)

There is an exemplary young man in Detroit who, on account of some facial affliction, can wink with but one eye. Every time he calls for a glass of soda, he is obliged to explain to the clerk that his wink, though honest-looking and apparently genuine on the face, is but a hollow delusion and a snare, and that he will take his swallow of fizz without the spiritual consolation which his wink would imply that he desired. He spends about half of his life in dodging irate husbands and browink, though honest-looking and apparently genuine on the face, is but a hollow delusion and a snare, and that he will take his swallow of fizz without the spiritual consolation which his wink would imply that he desired. He spends about half of his life in dodging irate husbands and brothers, whose wives or sisters he has met on the street and who thought themselves just dreadfully insulted, and the other half bemoaning his cruel fate and cursing the luck. He thinks of getting his winkative eyelashes amputated, or else of wearing a single-barreled goggle.

A Noble Deed.

(Pert Hope News.)

Few people in Port Hope had any idea of the shocking calamity that was averted on Wednesday last by the presence of mind of Mr. John Cochrane, one of the engineers of the Midland railway. He had been up to the G. T. R. yard with the locomotive and several cars, and when returning to the Midland yard, down that heavy grade crossed by John street, he observed a child run over across the street and lie right across the stre several cars, and when returning to the Midland yard, down that heavy grade crossed by John street, he observed a child run over across the street and lie right across the track. The bell was ringing, but the little thing did not seem to mind the noise, remaining there unconscious of danger. Cochrane knew he could not stop the engine on that grade. Orick as thought danger. Cochrane knew he could not stop the engine on that grade. Quick as thought, and much more rapidly than it takes to give an account of the incident, he hurried out by the cabin window, ran along to the cow-catcher and got there just in time to snatch the child from the jaws of death.

Wisdirected Prayer.

There is so much scientific atheism taught nowadays, that it is inexcusable to give it a new text to show either that there is no God at all or that if He exists He is neither all-merciful nor omnipotent. Life would not be worth living if we could not depend upon the immutable order of nature. We now know that every act of our lives is subject to law, and if an arbitary power anywhere can set aside the order of nature, then human existence is a chaos, for we cannot know on what to depend. There is a biological law that the superior conditions of life depend upon the inferior. The most ethereal of poets and the most charming and refined of the female sex could not live without wholesome food. Let ue have no more appeals to the Almighty to set aside the plau of creation.

The committee.

An inquest was held yesterday at the Royal Arms hotel, to inquire into the cause of death of the boy Walter Hart. A jury was empannelled, and the evidence of a lamp-lighter named Nicholas Mitchell, who carlighter named Nicholas Mitchell, who carried the boy home, was first heard. He detected the boy home, was first heard. He detected the undefended action of North of Scotland the undefended action of North of Scotland mortgage company v. Blackstock, for the the crbman whose vehicle passed over the boy might have taken him home. The calman, Wm. Breadan, explained that he was driving a quartette to the G. W. R. depot and was afraid of missing the train if he stopped to take up the boy. Victor Glassford, the little fellow who was alleged to have pushed deceased in front of the cab, and he did not leave the sidewalk. Dehave pushed deceased in front of the cab, said he did not leave the sidewalk. De-Barrick testified as to the cause of the boy's death—rupture of the bladder—and the jury after hearing the coroner's review of the evidence, returned a verdict of accidental death.
