RELATIVE SIZE OF JUPITER, 1864.

Jupiter is the king of planets, being about 11.2 the diameter of the Earth, and having a bulk of 1,456 such worlds as ours. It appears larger and brighter at its opposition to the Sun on the 13th of May. Jupiter has four moons, each a good sized world; it revolves on its axis in less than ten hours, and its year is equal to 4,332.58 of our days.

RELATIVE SIZE OF SATURN, 1864.

Saturn shines with a pale light. This Planet is next beyond Jupiter, and has seven moons, and anomalous bodies termed rings, which are visible through a good telescope the whole of this year, their northern surface being turned towards the Earth.

PHASES OF MERCURY AT GREATEST ELONGATION.

This planet exhibits all the lunar phases, and on the 18th of February this year, the 17th of June, and the 24th of October it will be at its greatest elongation west; and on the 9th of January, the 30th of April, the 28th of August, and the 22d of December it will be at its greatest elongation east, being a Morning Star at the first named dates, and an Evening Star at the others. It will be brightest and slightly gibbous and visible three days after the western elongation, and three days before its eastern elongation. When within and on this side of its points of greatest elongation, it presents to the earth a crescent form.

Mercury will be brightest and visible three days before its greatest elongation east, on the 6th of January, 27th of April, 25th of August, and 19th of December, being then in the west soon after sunset. It will be visible also in the east just before sunrise, three days after its greatest elongation west, on the 21st of February, 20th of June, and 12th of October.

THE APPARENT SIZE OF MARS AND ITS PHASES, 1864.

Mars is little more than half the size of the Earth. It is one of the superior planets, and its distance from the Sun is about 145,000,000 miles. When it is in opposition to the Sun, as will be the case December 1, its apparent size is greatest, because it is then nearest the earth. Its configuration is that of a perfect circle generally. When at either quadrature, it exhibits a well-defined gibbous phase, seen this year on the 18th of August.

THE PHASES AND APPARENT SIZE OF VENUS, 1864.

Venus is one of the inferior planets, and exhibits all the phases seen in the Moon during a lunar month; but at no time during this year will Venus come within the points of greatest elongation east and west, and therefore it will not appear as a crescent this year. After the 18th of July, when it will be in superior conjunction with the Sun, its illuminated limb changes from left to right.

THE APPARENT TRACK OF JUPITER AMONG THE STARS,
DURING THE YEAR 1864.

Jupiter is about 490 millions of miles from the Sun, and completes its revolution in a little less than 12 years. Thus, when the Earth has completed its circuit, Jupiter has gone but 30 degrees, and the Earth will overtake and pass it in about a month. At the opening of 1864 Jupiter is in the constellation Libra on its direct motion. From March 13 to July 15 it is on its retrograde course, and then resumes its direct motion for the rest of the year, passing through Scorpio into Sagittarius.

SATURN, remote and slow moving, will be in the constellation Virgo throughout the year.

VENUS will be passing through the part of its orbit most remote from the Earth during the summer of 1864, being in conjunction with the Sun July 18, after which it will again be the Evening Star, and return slowly towards the Earth's orbit through the rest of the year.

APPARENT PATH OF MARS THROUGHOUT THE HEAVENS
DURING THE YEAR 1864.

The Earth, in its annual journey around the Sun, traverses the great plane of the Ecliptic, which, continued to the fixed stars, is fringed by that belt of constellations forming the twelve signs of the Zodiac. The annual circuit of the Earth makes the Sun seem to perform a complete circuit among these stars each year. Any one may verify this by watching the evening stars nearest the Sun's setting, and seeing how they successively disappear week by week, and are next seen rising in the morning before daylight, having passed the Sun and receding from it more and more.

To a spectator on the Earth, the apparent motion of the planets among the fixed stars is complicated by the Earth's own motion. If one of the more remote planets, Saturn for instance, were fixed in its present place, to us on the Earth it would appear for more than half a year to move among the fixed stars from west to east, and during the rest of the year to retrace its path from east to west. As it is not fixed, but moves round the Sun in the same direction with the Earth, the period of both the direct and the retrograde motion of Saturn are thereby lengthened; and so increasingly with Jupiter and Mars.

MARS is a little more than half as far again from the Sun as the Earth is, and its year almost as long as two of our years. The direct motion of Mars continues most of the year 1864. At January 1 it is a little north-east of the brightest star in Scorpio; whence it passes through Sagittarius, Capricornus, Aquarius, and Pisces, crossing the equator June 2; thence through Aries, and near the two brightest stars of Taurus, becoming stationary October 23, and then returning to near the Pleiades December 31.

ECLIPSES.

There will be two Eclipses this year, both of the Sun, but neither of them will be visible in this Island.

I. A central eclipse of the Sun, May 5, in the afternoon.

II. An annular Eclipse of the Sun, October 30, visible in the West Indies, Mexico, and South America.

Eclipses take place every half year, and at each period there may be one, two, or three; if only one, it must be an Eclipse of the Sun. When the Earth becomes situated between the Sun and the Moon, the latter must be covered with darkness, and there will be an eclipse of the Moon, which will be total or partial, according as the Moon plunges wholly or in part into the cone of the shadow—it will be central, if the centre of the Moon coincides exactly with that of the terrestrial shadow. A total eclipse of the moon never exceeds two hours, and may be shorter than that period.

When the Moon interposes herself between the Sun and the Earth, the former may be eclipsed. The eclipse is partial when the Moon hides only a part of the Sun's disk; total when she covers the whole of it; annular when the Sun, masked by the Moon, projects all round in the form of a luminous ring; lastly, it is central when the spectator's place is in the prolongation of the line joining the centres of the Sun and Moon.

To produce either a solar or a lunar eclipse, the new or full moon must be in the act of crossing the sun's annual track. This point of crossing is called the moon's node, and became, therefore, an object of the deepest interest. Long and careful scrutiny revealed the fact of its movement around the ecliptic, in a period of 18 years and 11 days, during which time there occur 223 new moons, or 223 full moons. If, then, a new moon falls on the sun's track to produce a solar eclipse to-day, at the expiration of 223 lunations, again will the new moon fall on the ecliptic, and an eclipse will surely take place. Suppose, then, that all the eclipses which occur within this remarkable period of 223 lunations are carefully observed, and the days on which they fall recorded, on each and every one of these days, during the next period of 223 lunations, eclipses may be expected, and their coming foretold. This wonderful period of 18 years and 11 days, or 223 lunations, was known to the Chaldeans, and by its use eclipses were predicted more than 3000 years ago. It is likewise found among the Hindoos, the Chinese, and the Egyptians, nations widely separated on the earth's surface, and suggesting the idea that it had its origin among a people even anterior to the Chaldeans. Let it not be supposed that the application of the Chaldean period or Zaros to the prediction of eclipses, can in any way supersede modern methods. While antiquity contented itself with announcing the day on which the dark body of the moon should hide the sun, modern science points to the exact second on the dial, which shall mark the first delicate contact of the moon's edge with the brilliant disk of the sun.

Now let us sit down by a crackling fire, and turn over a new leaf in the book of life. Ah! how white and pure, like the snow-covered ground, opens the page we are now to begin! What a contrast with that which was folded up yesterday and labelled "THE PAST"! See the blanks that can't be filled. They mark the omissions. See the blots that can't be rubbed out. They mark the deeds that are done, and that are sealed up by the recording angel. Last night the account closed. It is too late to right its wrongs; but let the swift years speed on. It matters little, if they teach us in their flight how to live now, and how to fill up the bright pages that lie open before us.

Some men seem to get on as if success were a matter of course with them. People call them "lucky;" but don't you see that luck was the result of work, the improvement of time, and the application of energy? "God helps those that help themselves." Take care of the minutes, and the hours will take care of themselves. Be honest, be industrious be good, and you will be happy, or, at least, you ought to. Such being the case, I wish you most cordially a happy new year.

Prof. Mapes says, in the Working Farmer, that "no error is more universal than the plowing in of lime. It should always be applied on the surface, so that dews and rains in carrying it through the soil may bring it in contact with the surface of every particle; and therefore it should be applied to the surface in small doses and more frequently."

JOKING.—Never risk a joke, even the least offensive in it nature, with a stranger or a person who is not well bred and possessed of sense to comprehend it. By heeding this advice you will save yourself mortification and pain.

"I wish it was the fashion to go to bed every hour in the twenty-four," said an indolent person. "I like that first rate; but the fashion of gettin' up is the meanest ever invented."

What are you about now-a-days? It is a good time to read a little, study a good deal, and chop wood for exercise. Do the chores first, of course. The stock will suffer without careful attention these cold days. The hens ought to lay, and, if they wont, they ought to be made to. Give 'em a little fresh meat, a few pounded bones, a little sand or gravel to roll in, and a warm, sunny shelter, and see if you can't encourage 'em. There is time for the farmer's club and the lecture, now, and time, too, for a little care over the education of the children. Why not get an interesting book, and let the girls and the boys take turns at reading aloud? You've no idea what an influence it would have on them all through life, to say nothing of the information you might gain. We can't get away from the fact that our children are very much what we choose to make them, and if we want them to love and respect us, and cling to home, we've got to take an interest in their studies, and aid and encourage them when they do well. This everlasting fault-finding won't do. Hope and fear are the two great motives to human action. Isn't it far better to have a child do right with the hope of pleasing, than from the fear of offending? Lead, not drive, them in the right way.

LABOR LOST—An organ-grinder playing at the door of a deaf and dumb asylum.

LAUGHTER.—It is a good thing to laugh at any rate; and if a straw can tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness.

A Mine of magnetic iron has been opened in Sweden, several feet thick, which causes a deviation of the needle of from ten to fifteen degrees. Natural magnets of 4 cwt. will soon, says a Copenhagen letter, be no rarity in commerce.

The total of natives of European continental states residing in London is 37,955.

A place for everything, and everything in its place, will save many an hour of anxious and fretful search after a lost farm tool. Have a tool-house by all means. It won't cost much. And when you get it, keep things where you can find them. It is not enough to keep them in the tool-house, but they should be in their place, each hanging on its own, or on two nails; and, that you may be sure which it is, it is a good plan, after hanging up a tool, to draw an outline on the board wall in pencil or chalk, and then with a brush and a little paint mark out a clear likeness of the implement. Then you can see at a glance whether it is in its place or not. Don't say this is too much trouble, and it 'ill cost more 'n it comes to. It isn't so. Once get a system started, and it works easy enough. It is the want of system that causes so much trouble and loss of time.

Now, when a tool is broken, and needs mending, here's the place to do it, in the tool room. Mend it yourself, if you can; if not, send it to the mechanic. A little paint now and then will keep wooden tools sound.

WHERE OUR FLOWERS COME FROM.—Our sweet peas we have received from Sicily and Ceylon; pinks, carnations and stocks are natives of Spain, Italy, and the Greek Islands; sweet Williams come from Germany; the pretty saxifrage, or London pride, from the Alps; and heart's-ease from the wastes of Siberia. The amarantus are chiefly from the East Indies; the anemone grows wild in Germany and Switzerland; the hepatica comes from the mountains of Sweeden; the fuchsia is a native in Chili, in South America, where it is a tree Chrysanthemums and hydrangeas have been introduced from China; the gladiolus was brought from Turkey; the crown imperial comes from the woods of Persia; hyacinths belong to Syria; and dalias grow wild in the sandy plains of Mexico. The scarlet lychnis is a native of Asia, Greece and Russia; the ranunculus was brought to Europe from the Holy Land by the crusaders.

There goes neighbor Restless over the way. They say he's going to build a first-rate house. Now, I like to see a man build according to his means, at the time he starts in life. It's better than at the end of his career. Let him build to stand as long as human labor can. That's a record to his children of what he has been, and from what, perhaps, he has risen. Build to last, and make the homestead as lovely and attractive as work and means will warrant. Everything a man does gains in honor and grace by its regard to the future. It shows the far sight, the earnest patience, that dignify and adorn the character. I would 'nt build merely for present delight and use. Let the work rise so that those who are to come after us will look with thankful hearts on what our hands have wrought, and point to it with proud satisfaction when the clustered memories of the past have sanctified it. "See! what our fathers did for us." Age adds glory to the homestead in the eyes of the family, and this is reason enough for building something for all time. Shade and ornamental trees add beauty to the place, and have a real money value far greater than the few dollars they cost.

At the close of a sermon on worldly vanities, a rural minister gave the following notice: "The parties to be joined in marriage will present themselves, after we have sung the 225th hymn, beginning, 'Mistaken souls that dream of Heaven.'"

"Cheek" is thus defined: Cheek is a rare union of fun, impudence, readiness, perseverance, and intelligence, endowing its possessor with the power of walking quietly over social obstacles, which form an impassable barrier to the rest of mankind.

An illiterate farmer, wishing to enter some animals at an agricultural exhibition, wrote as follows to the secretary of the society: "Also enter me for the best jack-ass. I am sure of taking the premium."

Politeness is the religion of the heart, as piety is that of the soul. It is good-natured in action. It renders whoever may be its subject contented and happy under its softening influence.

Bright and joyous comes the May, with its fragrance and its flowers, and with it comes the pressing work of the spring. If you look forward to a rich harvest with gladness of heart, you must expect to work well through May. As you sow so shall you reap. Better be idle four days of winter than one day of May. Spring round John! Up early, and down late. Run the plough a little deeper. Stick in a seed here and another there. If the crows pull up a hill of corn, or any seed fails to take, don't give it up so. It's of no use to worry or fret, but just set about transplanting from hills that have too many to stand well, or put in a squash or a few rutabagas. By the way, suppose the cows could talk, and tell us their tastes, or vote on the question of roots or no roots in the winter storehouse, don't you think they'd go in for a few turnips and mangle-wurzel, or a basket of swedes now and then? Get the votes ready and try it. Bear in mind, always the cleanest ground for roots. You ought to raise a few carrots for horses. They do well on them when not hard at work, and ought to have a few anyhow. Sow them early, the earlier the better after the ground is ready. Don't let the birds be killed.

James the First once went out of his way to hear a noted preacher. The clergyman seeing the King enter, left his text to declaim against swearing, for which the King was notorious. When he had finished, James thanked him for his sermon, but asked what connection swearing had with it. "Since your Majesty came out of your way to hear me," said the clergyman, "I could not do less than go out of mine to meet you."

It is not libellous to call a man who has kicked you down stairs a free-booter.

Content is the riches of nature; he is the richest who is contented with the least.

A well conducted farm is a beautiful machine. If well conducted every part will move on noiselessly but efficiently — all will be promptly done in its season, there will be no confusion, and a great deal will be accomplished. A badly managed farm, on the contrary, if not wholly neglected, will be hurry and disorder, with everything out of joint, and very little will be done. The farmer must know at the start what he is going to do. His yearly operations must be distinctly before him. It will not be profitable for him to stop and consider, and plan, after a piece of work is partly executed. He must begin at the beginning—must have his fields well laid out—his rotation digested—and the extent of each crop prescribed.

REMARKABLE LAKES.—On the top of a ridge of mountains in Portugal, called Estralla, are two Lakes of great extent and depth, especially one of them, which is said to be unfathomable. What is chiefly remarkable in them is, that they are calm when the sea is so, and rough when that is stormy. It is therefore probable that they have a subterranean communication with the ocean; and this seems to be confirmed by the pieces of ships that they throw up, though almost forty miles distant from the sea. There is another extraordinary lake in this country, which, before a storm, is said to make a frightful rumbling noise that may be heard at the distance of several miles. And we are also told of a pool or fountain, called "Fervencias" about twenty four miles from Coimbra, that absorbs not only wood, but the lightest bodies thrown into it, such as cork, straw, feathers, &c. which sinks to the bottom and are never seen more. To these we may add a remarkable spring near Entremos, which petrifies wood, or rather encrusts it with a case of stone; but the most remarkable circumstance is, that in summer it throws up water enough to turn several mills, and in winter it is perfectly dry.

Rev. T. S. King, in an agricultural address delivered in California, says: "In dealing with land man is called to be a co-worker with the Infinite Mind. This is the foundation of the nobleness of the farmer's office. * * In fact, we shall not reach the right point of appreciating the eminence of agriculture as a duty, a profession and a trust, until we see that the earth is not yet finished. The Creator has left part of the fashioning to man, or rather waits to work through man in perfecting it. * * Rejoice all you that are called to the dignity and trusts and delights of the farmer and the horticulturist! Rejoice that you belong to a class through whom God is finishing his creation, and who are enlarging the divine bounty, and adding to the beauty of the world. Whether an acre, a garden spot, or a section, is under your charge, feel more deeply your commission, be glad in the responsible honor of your lot. Resolve to add to the fertility of your domain. * * * Subdue the lust for large farms. If you have fifty acres, and burn to have fifty more, annex fifty that lie beneath what you now own, and gain your title by a subsoil plough. * * Increase the beauty of your homestead by taste." * *

It is not by great deeds, like those of the martyrs, that good is to be done; it is by the daily quiet virtues of life, the Christian temper, the good qualities of relatives and friends, and all, that good is to be done.

Talkers will refrain from evil speaking when listeners refrain from evil hearing.

As you would protect your fellow man from the bitings of cold, by clothing his nakedness; so ought you to defend him from bitter back-bitings, by cloaking his faults.

Words, personally abusive, are the blows which a coward strikes.

The crop of hay is secured, or ought to have been, before this, and there is time to breathe a little more freely. Harness up Old Billy, and let us take a drive. We can learn a good deal by visiting a well-conducted farm. Nothing like observation, when the farmer has his eyes open, with a disposition to copy or improve. Sometimes a failure is about as instructive as a success. Now, if neighbor Thrifty manages better than we do, why not ride over there and see? It'll pay better than any day's work of the week. I like to see a farmer looking round now and then, as well as other people. We do not, as a general thing, know as much about what others are doing in farm improvements, in stock-raising, in sheep-farming, and in farm mechanics, or the construction of buildings, cisterns, and other improved appliances, as we ought. Many of us know better what is done at a distance, in some other Province or country, than the improvements of the neighborhood. If a good farm stock of any kind is brought within a few miles of us I think we ought to make it a point to know and see it. Be neighborly in fact and not limit the range of your vision to within a gun-shot of home.

ENCKE'S COMET — which completes its circuit in a shorter time than any other — reappeared in 1862, after an absence of three years and four months, at almost the precise spot predicted by Prof. Encke; an interesting confirmation of the truth and accuracy of the laws of gravitation and motion as applied to these heavenly wanderers. The slight variance between its motions & the calculations is thought to indicate the existence in space of some resisting medium of an extremely subtle character.

It is, indeed, wonderful that any one should attempt to raise himself by lying.

Put not your trust in money, but your money in trust.

Fall ploughing now calls your attention, if you have got thro' cutting those drains down there in the meadow. You improved the driest time for draining the lowlands, of course. By the way, don't you know that it pays first-rate to reclaim your swamps, if it is properly done? I can name a hundred places where the first crop taken has nearly, and in many of them quite, paid the cost of the whole improvement. You will find them, if they are well "brought to," the most fertile and productive parts of the farm. Perfect draining is, of course, at the bottom of it all.

The harvest is now fairly begun, and a jolly time it is. The luscious fruit, the golden corn, the carts loaded down with potatoes and pumpkins, the barns bursting with the bountiful crops, this month and next, ought to make the farmer's heart swell with thankfulness and joy. How many of us appreciate it as we ought to? How many of us say it is only the pay for our own labor, and forget that the showers and the sunshine, the gentle dews and the drying winds, had about as much to do with it as we? So it goes. The heart never will soften at the goodness that scatters blessings so liberally.

INTEMPERANCE.—A drunkard is the annoyance of modesty, the trouble of civility, the spoil of wealth, the destruction of reason. He is the brewer's agent, the ale-house benefactor, the beggar's companion, the constable's trouble. He is his wife's woe, his children's sorrow, his neighbor's scoff, his own shame. He is a spirit of sleep, a picture of a beast, and a monster of a man.

There is but one vice with which we may come in contact without contamination. It is the blacksmith's vice.

In every community which is called Christian, the Sabbath-keepers hold the first place; they take precedence of all other classes in intelligence, in morals, in thrift, and in social position.

No month is more beautiful than this. The forests are crimson and golden, teeming with the most gorgeous colors, the bracing air gives its cheering vitality to all animated life, and the world abounds in the luxuriance of vegetable wealth. If we began right in spring, we may now look upon the full fruition, the reward of honest labor.

The evenings are growing long,
the frost thickens, and whitens the ground, sparkling in the morning sun. Who would not stir round in a bright October morning? And when night shuts in, who would not ask himself,
"What have I learned to-day?"
Let not the eye and the ear be opened in vain to catch the ever varying forms and sounds of nature; and if we ask aright to penetrate her secrets, we shall not ask in vain. Some experiment begun in spring will now utter its teachings; some idea will be suggested by the crop here or the failure there. Open the mind to them all, and do not fail to learn even from the printed page, the exhibition of the Agricultural Society, or the farm journal.
You know the old saying "live and learn." It is never too late, but do not trust to the fickle future. Now is the time, and let us improve it.

A Balloonist states that he has made the following discovery:—
"I take a bar of brass, which, when weighed on the earth's surface, actually weighs 15 pounds.
When I ascend up three miles in the atmosphere and weigh the brass bar, it actually weighs, by a spring balance, only seven and a half pounds. Five miles up, it only weighs three pounds and a quarter. What is the cause of this? The want of atmospheric pressure on it, and the sun's attraction, which becomes more apparent the nearer we approach its orbit.

A great many little jobs now need looking after. Don't you see that gate left a-jar, and swinging in the wind? A week of neglect will injure it more than months of careful usage. Get a self-fastening latch and stop its creaking by a little grease. There's another, a little sagged. Don't you see how it drags on the ground, and strikes the post? Better straighten it up now. Let it go so all winter, and ten chances to one you'll have to get a new one in the spring. I like to see things put to rights before winter fairly sets in. Now you've got a grease-pot in your hand, just rub a little into the hinges as well as the latches. "A stitch in time," you know. Look to the stove-pipes. Are they firm and safe? Are they tolerably free from soot? Many a house has caught fire from burning soot in a windy night. So keep the soot well out of your stove-pipes and your chimneys, if you want to sleep safe and sound these long nights. Take a rainy day and burn it out, if you can't do it any better. Don't let a door go squeaking on its hinges, when a slight touch of an oiled feather will put an end to it. See that your window-sashes slide up and down easily.

STORMS SUBJECT TO FIXED LAWS.
—It is stated that the science of meteorology has been so perfected that every general violent storm can be predicted with almost absolute certainty twenty-four hours in advance, and the information be telegraphed to all parts of the country. In England, the British government have established a department for investigating the subject, by means of which hundreds of lives are annually saved. No great general storm visited the country the past year that was not heralded several hours in advance, and by signals along the coast, seamen were warned to keep off the shore, or not to venture out of port.

Now's the time to lay in a good stock of wood for next summer. Don't let it lie long in great sticks. Saw and split it up, and let it be drying. You'll find green wood dried fast is a great deal better than it is if allowed to lie full of sap till half rotten. Give it the wind a few weeks before housing, and it will dry all right.

Comfort for the stock in the barn saves flesh and food. If you don't feed at regular times, you make the cattle fret from waiting, and wear off more flesh than a good meal will put on. Now they can't feel easy with half a bushel of dirt sticking to their hair and skin. Keep them clean, therefore; give them warm, well ventilated, not stifled and close quarters, good food, and enough of it, and pure water in the yard or the barn itself. As to shelter, you know that a foot of board is equal to a pound of beef. Don't try to winter many animals on little food. You can make no greater mistake. You get no growth for the food, and it don't pay just to keep stock alive. A few head of cattle well fed will put on a far greater weight of flesh on the same food, and sell better in the market. But the knell of the year is sounding, and hopefully we bid you adieu.

ARTESIAN WELLS.—The well recently completed at Passy, in the suburbs of Paris, is 1,926 feet deep, and nearly two feet bore. It supplies daily 20,000 cubic metres of water—the metre being 39.37-100 inches—or enough for 500,000 inhabitants.

In the desert of Sahara fifty artesian wells have been sunk, during five years terminating in 1860. In connection with these wells, 30,000 palm-trees, and 1,000 fruit-trees have been planted. Numerous oases have been recovered from ruin, and two fresh villages established.

Chloride of Lime is recommended, in a sprinkled solution, or in a paste with fat, as a protection from flies and other insects, in stables, on beds of vegetables, around the trunks of fruit trees, &c. Even rats and mice quit places where chloride of lime have been sprinkled.

LOVELL'S SERIES OF SCHOOL BOOKS.

HAVING long felt the necessity existing for a SERIES OF EDUCATIONAL WORKS, prepared and expressly adapted for our COLONIAL SCHOOLS, the Publisher was induced to attempt the supply of this want. His efforts thus far have been crowned with success; his Books having been most generally welcomed in the Schools, and most favorably noticed by the Press, of British North America:

LOVELL'S GENERAL GEOGRAPHY has met with entire success, having been already introduced into almost every School throughout British North America. The General Geography, however, being considered too far advanced for young beginners, a new and elementary work has been prepared, entitled, EASY LESSONS IN GENERAL GEOGRAPHY. This Book is intended as introductory to the General Geography.

He takes great pleasure in calling attention to the following list of SCHOOL BOOKS already issued by him; and to which he will add, from time to time, such new works as may be of use to the youth of the Provinces,
