THE VAUDOIS VALLEYS.

BY MRS. HEMANS.

Yes! thou hast met the sun's last smile
From the haunted hills of Rome;
By many a bright Egean isle
Thou hast seen the billows foam:

From the silence of the Pyramid
Thou hast watch'd the solemn flow
Of the Nile, that with his mantle hid
The ancient realm below:

Thy neart hath burn'd as shepherd sangs
Some wild and warlike strain,
Where the Moorish horn once proudly rang
Through the pealing hills of Spain:

And o'er the lonely Grecian streams
Thou hast heard the laurels moan,
With a sound yet murmuring in thy dreams
Of the glory that is gone.

But go thou to the hamlet-vales
Of the Alpine mountains old,
If thou wouldst hear immortal tales
By the wind's deep whispers told!

Go if, thou lov'st the soil to tread
Where man hath bravely striven,
And life like incense hath been shed
An offering unto Heaven!

For o'er the snows and round the pines
Hath swept a noble flood,
The nurture of the peasant's vines
Hath been the martyr's blood.

A spirit, stronger than the sword,
And loftier than Despair,
Through all th' heroic region pour'd,
Breathes in the generous air.

A memory clings to every steep
Of long-enduring Faith,
And the sounding streams glad records keep
Of courage unto death!

Ask of the peasant where his sires
For Truth and Freedom bled,
Ask, where were lit the torturing fires
Where lay the holy dead?

And he will tell thee all around,
On fount, and turf, and stone,
Far as the chamois' foot can bound,
Their ashes have been sown.

Go when the sabbath-bell is heard
Up through the wilds to float,
When the dark old woods and caves are stirr'd
To gladness by the note:

When forth' along their thousand rills,
The mountain people come,
Join thou their worship on those hills
Of glorious Martyrdom!

And while the song of praise ascends,
And while the torrent's voice
Like the swell of many an organ blends,
Then let thy soul rejoice!

Rejoice, that human hearts, through scorn,
Through grief, through death, made strong,
Before the rocks and heavens have borne
Witness of God so long.

A hoary drunkard boasted that he had gone to bed drunk, nightly, for 40 years and upwards, and was still comparatively hale and sound.

A bystander inquired of him, 'Where, where are all your boon-companions gone? The bacchanal whispered him, 'I have seen seven generations of them all to their graves, and am settling the eighth very quickly, for I lost three companions last month, and one very good fellow to-day.' In general, however, the process is that of a very few years, when it arrives at the point of destruction, generally lasting so long as to have seen the ruin of the circumstances of the unfortunate, and all the fell train of domestic miseries which ever follow in the rear of inebriation. There is, however, a period in the progress of the disease which I do not include in this estimate,—the silent unobtrusive, and hardly observed stage of every drunkard's progress, the few years in which he drinks temperately, respectably and regularly, and drinks on almost all occasions below the point of intoxicating. It is from this practice of regular and respectable drinking, that is derived all the tendencies of drunkenness; and the drunkards of every successive year are those who, the season before, were the respectable drinkers. Thus drunkenness, like covetousness, does not at once come up to its consummation of iniquity, but creeps on in its progress, from little and little, till at least the vice is as a second nature, and forms a part of the constitution. The victims of the disease, then, of a sudden, find themselves affected with it. They at first drink only a sociality, and nightly unite a sense of animal gratification with the kindly interchange of good humour and good fellowship. 'But there is a law in our animal economy, that when the action either of a part or of the whole system is increased beyond the standard of health, a state of collapse, weakness or loss of action, proportionate to the degree of previous excitement, is produced.' And every successive time this stimulus is applied, it requires a greater proportional quantity to produce a given effect. This law is as invariable as the other. Thus, in the progress of the drunkard, there is constantly going on an increasing necessity of excitement, and also an hourly diminution of energy: the progress of constitutional deterioration, and the necessity of new causes of injury to the frame, both advancing with a steady step of destruction. The vital powers become at last, to a certain extent, exhausted; the natural and healthful excitants of the system no longer keep it in comfort; and the fatal necessity of perpetual stimulation is fully formed before the unfortunate tippler is aware that he is a drunkard.

Look at the living drunkard, and you will find him only the remnant of his former self. His immortal mind is not less blighted by this withering curse than his dying body. His memory, once retentive and ready, has lost its wonted elasticity and power. His understanding, which could once grasp, and wield, and elucidate almost any subject, becomes debilitated and childish. In his cups, the drunkard is generally a temporary fool or madman. His very horse exhibits the external symbols of mortification for the load he carries, and his dog is ashamed to keep his master company. But idiotism and insanity are not always temporary in the case of the drunkard. Both of these effects often become permanent in the future man. Idiots may be found almost everywhere, who have brought this calamity upon themselves by the immoderate use of ardent spirits. From men of intellect, and men of business, and perhaps men of pre-eminent attainments, they have debased themselves to a common level with the swine. In some cases reason seems to be blotted out, and the miserable victim of intemperance lives and dies a literal fool. In other cases still more numerous, there is a manifest approximation to idiotcy, where this deplorable consequence does not actually follow. Who has not witnessed the wane of intellect around him? Who has not seen the shrewd accountant become dull, the profound philosopher rendered obtuse; the arch politician bewildered; the eager flight of the learned advocate flag; and that precocity of genius which, in the dawn of life, attracted the steady gaze, and promised a giant manhood, dwindle into mental insignificance and leath? The world may, perhaps, stand and wonder at the change, and speculate upon the latent cause. But lift the curtain, and the mystery is solved. There stands the bottle, and the death of intellect is in it. Trace the effects of this habit upon the talents, and learning, and prospects of a young man of early promise; fix your eye upon one who is gifted with as fine a mind as was ever moulded by the hand of heaven; and let him become addicted to his cups; and let him continue to suck and suck at the bottle, and he will ultimately possess (to borrow an allusion from Dr. Rush) just about the intellect of a CALF.

Again, spirits have been always celebrated as good preventives of the bad effects of exposure to cold and wet, and as the best means of enabling men to undergo them. This also is a delusion. Every recent experiment which has been made upon the subject demonstrates most clearly, that men when, exposed to extreme cold and wet, undergo their sufferings longer and with less injury upon simple water only, than when supplied with spirituous liquors. Dr. Trotter's experiments upon sailors, on the tops, in cold nights, for hours together, were uniformly in favour of the men who had taken no spirits. The Roman soldiers, natives of the mild regions of Italy, conquered the world without the use of spirits. No soldiers ever underwent greater fatigues or surmounted greater difficulties; but whether scorching on the sands of Egypt, or freezing on the passage of the Alps, whether in forced and incredibly long marches, and in heavy armour for weeks together, such as a modern spirit-drinker could not even carry, or in the toil and perid of the battle-field, they uniformly served without even an allowance of wine, a little vinegar and water being their only refreshment; and these were the men who conquered the world!!! Let us hear no more, then, of the necessity of alcohol to labour. Let us not bride our servants to unnatural exertion by giving them such stimulants. We are not warranted in extracting from our fellow-creatures, by such destructive means, any unnatural temporary exertions; and, if there are permanent servants, we will always find that the detriment will recoil upon ourselves, if not in the breaking down of their health, at least in the deterioration of their habits. Are we not guilty of the blood of these men, who tempt them on to their ruin, by this constant practice of bibbing them with liquor for every act of service, or of procuring some short temporary exertion from its aid?

The celebrated Dr. Hunter gave one of his children a full glass of sherry every day after dinner for a week. The child was then about four years old, and had never been accustomed to wine. To another child, nearly of the same age, and under similar circumstances, he gave a large orange, for the same space of time. At the end of the week he found a very material difference in the pulse, heat of body and state of the bowels of the two children. In the first the pulse was quickened, the heat increased, and the bowels deranged, whilst the second had ever appearance that indicated high health. He then reversed the experiment: to the first-mentioned child he gave the orange, and the other the wine. The effects followed as before: a striking and demonstrative proof of the pernicious effects of vinous liquors on the functions of life, in a state of full health. Now this is the effect of the regular use of a comparatively mild and weak substance on the stomach of a young human being. The very same ... effects will follow the regular use of a stronger substance of the same class, viz; spirits, even in the stomach of an adult; and from all this deranged digestion, and feverish irregularity of the system, will result an exactly proportionate diminution of strength for labour. Dr. Beddoe's experiment on two dogs shows how imperfectly the work of digestion and assimilation is performed when the food is mixed up with ardent spirits.—He caused an equal quantity of the same food to be given to two young dogs of the same litter. Immediately after feeding, four teaspoonfuls of spirits were poured down the throat of one of the animals. In five hours both were opened within a very few moments of each other. The animal to whom the spirits had been given had its stomach nearly twice as full as its fellow. The bits of flesh were as angular as immediately after they were cut by the knife; they were also as firm in their substance. In the other dog the pieces were rounded off, and much softer. Exactly as it happened to these dogs will it also to you.—You do not cause digestion;—you retard and diminish it by taking spirits;—you produce daily a kind of palsy of the principal organ of life, so that its functions are only partially performed, if performed at all.

THE DUKE OF SUSSEX.—SINGULAR ROYAL ALLIANCE.

(From the Standard.)

There appears to be no doubt of the correctness of the rumour mentioned by us in Friday's Standard, of her Majesty's intention to consent to the public solemnization of the marriage of Lady Cecilia Underwood (or rather Buggins, for that is, we have been assured, the lady's real name) with his Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex. The Morning Chronicle is of opinion that "an immense majority of the people of the whole empire" will be rejoiced to learn that such a step has been decided on. We are also assured by our contemporary that a private marriage was solemnized between his Royal Highness and that lady some years ago, and that all who refuse to admit that her Majesty has been judiciously advised, in the determination she has formed of placing Lady Buggins in a position which may possibly render her the Queen Consort of Great Britain, are a "vile and envious faction," who would deprive his Royal Highness of the "happiness of seeing his wife raised to a proper station." We confess that we belong to the stigmatised order who come within our contemporary's category; for we are decidedly of opinion that neither the public morals, nor the dignity of the Royal Family, will be likely to be enhanced by drawing the attention of the country to circumstances which might otherwise be buried in oblivion, for the sordid purpose of repairing an unsuccessful attempt to put an additional income into his Royal Highness's pocket. If her Majesty's ministers consider themselves in his Royal Highness's debt, let them, in the name of decency and good faith, adopt a less objectionable mode of repaying the obligation. Should such a precedent be established, there is no saving were it may end.

An Act to establish the Fees and Costs chargeable in the several Police Offices and Courts of Sessions in this Colony.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1840.

We observe that the free and independent electors of the district of St. John's are on the eve of exercising their unbiased judgment in the selection of a Member for the Colonial Legislature. Perhaps, however, the safest way for them, under existing circumstances, will be, to attend to the infallible directions of the Newfoundland Patriot, whose able and sagacious Editor has hitherto been so exceedingly fortunate in his choice, that there can be no danger whatever in trusting, entirely, to his discrimination.

To be sure, according to his own confession, he made some slight mistakes with regard to, Dr. Carson, Mr. Morris, Mr. Kent and Mr. Brown, to all of whom he has been frequently under the painful necessity of administering some fatherly reproof, as the public must well remember; but, with these little exceptions, the Editor of the Patriot, in his nomination of Representatives, has been judicious and marvellously "cute"! Master O'Dwyer and Thomas Fitzgibbon Moore are ready, at a moment's warning, to prove the truth of this assertion!

We learn with much indignation that the House of Assembly, in a paroxysm of economy, has not only reduced the salary of the Geological Surveyor, but has actually gone so far as to deprive him of his vessel: row really this is too bad; it is paltry and contemptible to the last degree. We had hoped that the labors of that gentleman in his late survey—his interesting and valuable discoveries, together with his scientific and masterly Report, would have insured him a continuance of all the accommodation the Colony could afford, and which in such an undertaking and upon such a coast, he indispensably requires. But the sun of the Assembly rose in a vapour and it will set in a cloud.

A small portion of the wreck of the barque Atlantic floated ashore here on Friday morning last.

Herrings have been abundant during the past fortnight. Some excellent Cod have also been taken.

TO prevent present inconvenience to the Public—to facilitate the means of procuring Grants of Land—and to remove every pretext for its undue occupation, the Governor, by and with the advice of the Council, has adopted the following regulations for its alienation:—

- All Petitions for Land, now in the Office of the Surveyor General, or which may hereafter be lodged there, shall be submitted to the Governor for his approval.
 - If a Petition be so approved, the Land applied for will be surveyed and advertised for Sale in three successive Gazettes—put up at Public Auction at an upset price of 2s. per acre—and sold to the highest Bidder.
 - A deposit of Ten per cent. to be paid down at the time of Sale, and the remainder of the purchase money within 14 days thereof.
 - On such payment, as also of the Established Fees, being made, the Grant will be delivered.
- JAMES CROWDY,
Secretary.
Secretary's Office,

“THE MODEST PETITION, ONLY HALF MY PAY.”

To His Excellency HENRY PRESCOTT, Esq., Companion of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, and Governor and Commander-in-Chief, in and over the Island of Newfoundland and its Dependencies, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency,

At the sacrifice of professional emolument, considerable expense and much personal fatigue, I have strictly performed the services of Speaker in the present House of Assembly.

Both houses of the Legislature have concurred in voting me two hundred pounds per annum, which has been sanctioned by your Excellency.

By the loss of the Contingency Bills for 1839 and 1840 I am deprived of resources which I calculated upon to great pecuniary inconvenience.

I pray that your Excellency will be pleased to issue your mandamus in my favour on the Colonial Treasurer for two hundred pounds, being half of the sum due to me. Precedents for such a proceeding will be found in the Treasurer's accounts for 1838. And your petitioner, as in duty bound will ever pray.

WILL CARSON,
Speaker of the House of Assembly.
Billies, April 30.

Sir,—I beg you will do me the favor, to present the accompanying petition to the Governor.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,
WILL CARSON,
Colonial Secretary.

Secretary's Office,
30th April, 1840.

Sir,—The Governor desires me to acknowledge the receipt of your memorial of this date, and to acquaint you that although he regrets the inconvenience to which you and many others are exposed by the circumstance of no provision having been made for the contingent expenses of the last two sessions, yet it is utterly out of his power to comply with your request.

I have the honor to be,
Your very obedt. servt,
JAMES CROWDY.

To the hon. William Carson,
&c. &c. &c.

A coroner's inquest was held on Friday and by adjournment on Saturday last, before AARON HOGSETT, Esq., on view of the body of MARTIN EAGAN, fisherman and labourer, who had been assaulted and beaten in the house of THOMAS RAFTER, at River-head, on the previous Tuesday evening. It appeared in evidence that the deceased and one EDWARD CONNELLY, cartman, had met in the house of RAFTER on the evening above stated, and after some altercation, CONNELLY took up an earthenware jug and struck the deceased on the head, from the effects of which blow the deceased lingered until the following Friday, when death terminated his sufferings. A post mortem examination was held on Saturday by EDWARD KIELLEY, Esq., and Dr. S. CARSON, who found an extensive fracture over the left eye, with a portion of the skull driven in upon the brain. The jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against EDWARD CONNELLY; who, notwithstanding every vigilance to apprehend him, has hitherto succeeded in eluding the officers of justice.

The deceased has left a widow and family in a state of lamentable destitution.—Ledger, May 5.

"Under this head (HOSPITALS) your Committee beg to state that they have received no account whatever, alitho' an address was presented to His Excellency from your honorable House respectfully requesting to cause the 14th sec. of the Act to be complied with."

Now the above, coming from any other than PETER WINNER, J. P., M. H. A., Chairman of Audit, Finance, and so forth, would, as they say in the far west, "be pretty considerably cool," but coming from the great authority aforesaid, we pronounce it the most downright and monstrously barefaced piece of impudence that ever was perpetrated even in that "refuge for the destitute" of which the above-named gentleman is so distinguished a member. Our readers will better understand our meaning when we inform them that it has lately come to our knowledge that certain complaints have referred to the executive by the Directors of the Hospital at Ferryland, against this self-same PETER (who has the effrontery to say the Hospital Act "has not been complied with,")—that he has not only offered great obstruction to the due execution of the Hospital Act, but has, under cover, of his authority as a Justice of the Peace, actually threatened the local Collector of the Hospital dues with something of superhuman vengeance for daring to demand them.

We have heard a good deal from time to time of the goings-on of the above personage, which, owing to his utter insignificant tho' oftentimes violent character, we have hitherto refrained from noticing; but which we are informed has more than once been made the subject of representation to the government. In the present instance, if all we are told is true, we should not be much surprised if this pugnacious Justice should, ere another year passes over his head, find himself shorn of his "little brief authority"—as the permitting any man, who could be capable of acting as he has done in several instances, to remain any longer in the commission of the peace, would only tend to bring the Magistracy of the colony into contempt and disrespect.—Times, May 6.

Our attention has been called to the wilful neglect of the House of Assembly to make any provision for the expenses attending the Registration of Voters throughout the colony. Our readers are no doubt aware that in one of the earlier sessions of the legislature an Act was passed on this head, providing that all persons entitled to vote at elections of members of the House of Assembly should be registered in the manner and at the period therein prescribed. The House of Assembly it appears has pertinaciously refused, notwithstanding the repeated messages of the Governor on the subject, to make the least provision for defraying the necessary expenses attending this most essential duty—the consequence of which virtual abrogation of an existing law will be that there will be no Registration, and of course no election can take place after the dissolution of the present House—which if not sooner extinguished by the authority of the executive, will die a natural death in May next.

We have not time at present to offer any further remarks; but as the effect of the proceedings of the House of Assembly to which we have alluded will be to disfranchise the entire constituency of the colony, we think the subject calls for the most serious consideration.—Ibid

The new Barque ATLANTIC, of Perth, (284 tons) George Morton, Master, from Dundee, bound to Quebec, with a general cargo, ran on shore near Cape St. Francis, at half past 11 o'clock, on the night of Tuesday last. The Passengers (27 in number) and the crew had a miraculous escape, but all succeeded in getting on shore with the exception of a boy named Hog, who, was unfortunately drowned.

We feel persuaded that it will be only necessary to apprise the public of the destitute condition of these poor strangers, to secure for them that assistance of which they now stand in need. Scarcely an article of clothing was saved from the wreck,—the loss of the ship having been almost the work of an instant, and the circumstances superseding every consideration but the preservation of life,—many got on shore as they rushed from their beds on being aroused by the shock. His Excellency the Governor, we understand, promptly and humanely sent to their assistance, on being informed of their situation; and we are requested to state that the President of the Chamber of Commerce—the Hon. W. Thomas—will receive clothing or any other contribution for the benefit of the sufferers.—Newfoundlander, May 7.

(For the Star.)

SAD NEWS FOR THE GROG SHOPS.

Within the past week no less than One Hundred and Twenty-three emigrants, wearing the honorable and sacred insignia of Temperance, have arrived in this Colony. Their appearance just at this moment, coming as they do from the immediate presence of the Apostle Mathew, cannot but spread terror and confusion among "the lovers of drink." The intelligenc they bring relative to the all but miraculous diffusion of their principles throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, exceeds every thing that could have been imagined. To such an extent has sobriety prevailed, that, in some counties, a drunken Irishman would be regarded by the mass of the people with greater detestation and abhorrence than even Satan himself. Publicans have universally "shut shop," and have returned to their former and more honorable avocations of carpenters, shoemakers, tailors and the like. Indeed, a man who has now any thing to do with the sale of spirituous liquors in Ireland is obliged to sneak through the "lanes and by-ways of the city," more like a culprit just escaped from the gallows, than one in the pursuit of his ordinary calling. Happy Ireland! When shall we resemble thee! Oh that the great—the illustrious Mathew would hasten to visit us; for truly the harvest is plentiful but the labourers are FEW.

PEREGRINUS.

[We heartily concur with the writer of the foregoing, in hailing the arrival of such adventurers to the shores of Newfoundland. The only thing we lament is, that we have already in the Colony, more hands than work—more mouths than bread to fill them. Yet, on the other hand, we are free to admit that the evil has a remedy: turn off the tipplers, and give employment to the men of the pledge.

Thus, in a very little while, the industry of the country could with propriety, boast of five times the physical strength, without any addition to the number of its bones and muscles.—ED. STAR.]

(To the Editor of the Star.)

"The toasts were closed, and as the mountain dew began to fall, the Boys enjoyed it heartily. They bore the wetting with the happiest feeling; and became fully resolved that in HONOR OF OLD IRELAND they would not go home till morning, to which resolution they most faithfully adhered."—Official Report of the last St. Patrick's Festival in the town of Harbor Grace.

"What! Honor Old Ireland by getting drunk."—Son of the True Church

SIR,
I am much mistaken if there are not a considerable number of your readers to whom it is perfectly unnecessary to introduce the foregoing Quotations. Their features are so strongly marked, and there is, withal, something so exceedingly impressive in their "make and manner," that having once had the pleasure of their acquaintance, the most oblivious I should imagine, could scarcely forget them. I shall not detain the reader therefore with the superfluous formalities of an introduction, taking it, as I do, for granted, not only that he knows them by sight, but also that he has some vivid recollections as to their birth, parentage, and education.

On St. Patrick's day last, there moved through the streets of Kilkenny, one of the grandest and most interesting processions that Ireland has ever witnessed. And of whom, think you, Mr. Editor was this procession composed? Was it made up of individuals reeling under the influence of drink? Was it composed of such as were anxious for a Bacchanalian "wetting"? Of those who had resolved to evince the depth of their veneration by debauchery and riot—their love for old Ireland by getting "gloriously" drunk? No; the Bacchanal was not there; the glutton was not there, the rioter was not there: neither the "drops of brandy" nor the "cruiskeen lawn" were tolerated there. But I will tell you who constituted that magnificent procession;—THE FOLLOWERS OF FATHER MATHEW—THE TEE-TOTALLERS OF ERIN, headed by their Priests. Men who respect themselves—who venerate St. Patrick and who fear and worship their God. I am credibly informed, Mr. Editor, that throughout the whole city, Temperance was triumphant; and that the day closed in solemnity and peace. What a delightful example for us to follow. Oh that we may henceforward follow it in sincerity and truth. As a full account of the whole proceeding will be shortly published, I shall say no more on the subject, but subscribe myself

Your obedient Servant,
PHILO-MATHEW.

POETRY

Oh! chide not! if I have no grief,
In outward show,
Or seek in pleasure short relief
From inward woe,
Oh! chide not! for the burning tear
Falls sad alone,
The wounded heart hath something dear
To rest upon,
The treasured memory of the past
Time cannot dim, or fortune blast.

Frown not! that bowl but mock'd my thirst;
In fancy's dream
Reflected all, too fondly nursed,
My boyhood's beam:
My star of hope! can I forget
The light it gave?
The hour it rose in joy, or set
Within the grave?
The liquid hail a stranger drop,
'Tis sorrow's offering at the top.

Mark not my tongue! its careless flow
May pain conceal,
Why should I cloud my friends with woe
They cannot feel!
Can I receive a father's smile
With tearful eye?
Or should a brother's care beguile,
Not check the sigh?
Then chide not! though my grief's unknown,
Its sacred offering falls alone.
