Here, ne more of consciousness as to what was going on about her than a jimson weed by the highway, called me to her in a voice so tremulous that I scarce knew it for hers. A dangerous time is the morning; There is nothing to fear at night; Calm are the eyes in closing, Tired of the urgent light; The body is healed in sleeping, "Harry, Harry," she said, "I pray thee, come here." Then, when I ap-proached, hesitating, for I had a shrinking before some outburst of fem-The heart is in perfect peace.

But who can say in the morning, How fierce will the trials be? Where difficult paths may be trodden inine earnestness, which has always intimidated me by its fire of helpless-ness and futility playing against some resolve of mine which I could not, on account of my masculine understanding of the requirements of circumstances, allow to meit, she reached up one hand like a little nervous claw of ivory and caught me by the sleeve ut I see not an hour before

Then she looked at me, and such love and even adoration were in her face as I never saw surpassed in it, even when she regarded her grand-daughter Mary, yet withal a cruel distress and self upbraiding and wrath at herself and me. "Harry, Harry," she said, "I can bear no more of this." Then, to my consternation, up went her silken apron with a ding to her old face, and she was weeping under it as unrestrainedly as any child.

I did not know what to de or say. "Madam," I ventured firmly, "if you distress yourself in such wise for my distress yourself in such wise for my sake, 'tis needless, I assure, 'tis need-less, and with as much truth as were th, sunrise that has no setting.

"Oh, Harry, Harry," she sobbed out,
"know you not that is why I cannot bear it longer, because you yourself bear it with no complaint?" Then she half laughing, for she seemed more and more like a child, "you know that it cannot be, and that I have no de-sire for balls." bear it with no complaint? Then she sobbed and even wailed with that pitsousness of the grief of age exceeding that of infancy, inasmuch as the weight of all past griefs of a lifetime go to swell it and it is enchanced by memory as well as by the present and an unknown future. I knew not what "But I would have thee go. Harry." "But I am not asked," I said.
"What matters that? 'Tis almost with open doors, since it is a farewell to do, but laid a hand somewhat tim of my Lord Cuipeper before sailing for England. Harry, go, and—a—and —I swear if any exception be taken to it, I—I will tell the truth." to do, but laid a hand somewhat timidly on one of her thin silken arms and strove to draw it gently from her face. "Madam Cavendish" I said, "indeed you mistake if you weep for me. At this moment I would change places with no man in Virginia."
"But I would have—I would have you!" she cried out, with the ardor of a girl, and down went her apron, and her face, like an aged mask of tragedy, not discolored by her tears, as would "Dear madam, it cannot be," I said. "and the truth is to be concealed not only for your sake, but for that of Then she broke out in another parox-

"Harry, I cannot clear not discolored by her tears, as would not discolored by her tears, as would have happened with the tender skin of a maid, confronted me. "I would have you the governor himself, Harry. I would have you—I would have"—Then she stopped and looked at me with a red showing through the yellow whiteness of her cheeks. "You know what I would have, and I know what you would have and all the rest of thee unless I convict my own granddaughter Catherine," she said piteously, "and if I spared her not, neither her nor my pride, what of Mary? Catherine hath been like a mother to the child, and she loves her better than she loves me. 'Twould kill her, Harry. you would have, and all the rest of my old life would I give could it be so, Harry," she said, and I saw that she knew of my love for her grand-And, Harry, how can I give Mary to thee, and thou under this ban? Then suddenly she cried out ve-hemently: "Not one word have I said to you about it since that dreadful time, Harry Wingfield, for shame and that pride as to my name, which is a fetter on the tongue, hath kept me still, but at last I will speak, for I can bear it no longer. Harry, Harry, I know that you are what you are, a convict and an exile, to shield Cather-ine, to shield a granddaughter of mine, who should be in your place. Harry Wingfield, I know that Catherine Cavendish is guilty of the crime for which you are in punishment, and, woe is me, such is my pride, such is my her pick in the colony if she so chose, and it may be that she might not choose you, Master Harry Wingfield."

I laughed. "Madam Cavendish," I said, rising and bowing, "were I a king instead of a convict, then would I lay my crown at Mary Cavendish's feet; as it is, I can but pave, if I may her way to handness with my wicked pride, that I have let you suffer and said never one word."

I put her hand to my lips. "Mad-am," I said, "you mistake; I do not suffer. That which you think of as my suffering and my disgrace is my glory and happiness."
"Yes, and why, and why? Oh, may, her way to happiness with my

At first I thought it was Catherine, in spite of her fault, but now I know it was for the sake of Mary that you sacrificed yourself-for her sister, Harry, I know, I know, and I would that I could give you your heart's desire, for 'tis mine also!' Then, so saying, this old woman, who had in her such a majesty of character and pride that it held folk aloof at a farther distance than loud swaggerings of importance of men high in office, drew down my head to her withered shoulder and touched my cheek with a hand of compassionate pity and blessing, as if I had been in truth her son, and caught her breath again and again with a sobbing sigh. All that I could say to comfort her I said, assuring her, as was indeed the truth, that no woman could justly esti-mate the view which a man might take of such a condition as mine, and how the power of service to love might

"Harry, thou art like a knight of olden times about whom a song was written which I heard sung in my girlhood and which used to bring the tears, though I was never too ready with them. Woe be to me that I, knowing what I know, have yet not the courage to sacrific nave yet not the courage to sacrince my pride and my unworthy grand-daughter and see you free. The Suffragettes of England are peremptorlly thrown into goal with the applause of both parties for breaking a few windows and disturbing a few public meetings. The world holds up its hands in horror at the "doings" in Mexico. Yet there are leaders in Britain who are deliberately preaching the doctrine of "arms and the moh." and they are not only not ned. but are rapturously applauded by an entire political party. Here are some utterances on the assigned dates by and Captain of schooner Annie M. Parker perished. essel struck on reef and crew left i but little damaged.

Ten men ploked up at sea in two dories and scantily clad, were taken to Portland, Me., last night by the 4-masted schooner Tifton, with a harrowing tale of marine disaster which probably cost the lives of their own cantain and three others, and the known loss of their cook who was washed from a dory and drowned in sight of all hands Saturday night last. The men are of the fishing schooner Annie M. Parker, owned by Gorton and Pew, of Gloucester, Mass., and commanded by Captain Vincent Nelson, of Beverley, and as a consequence the funeral was largely attended. Servloss were conducted at the home, church and graveside by the Rev. D. Edwards, rector of the parish. A tather and six eisters survive to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate son and brother.

A narrow escape from a serious accident occurred on the ferry steamer Dartmouth, at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. The steamer had docked on the Dartmouth side, and had among its passengers an automobile containing four gentlemen. When the driver of the machine applied the starting gear, instead of going ahead, as was the listention, the automobile began to go backwards. Thinking this only a temporary whim of the engine the coupants remained seaked, but the car continued on its backward course. Reaching the chain stretched across to prevent teams from backing over, this was snapped asunder. Striking the iron gates next these were smashed down, and had it not been that some of the broken gates became tangled in the rear wheel, bringing the car to a stand still, it would have surely gone into the harbor, and the compants with it. The captain of the steamer went to secure a horse to haul the car from its perilous position, and had only been gone a few minutes, when the engines attarfed shead, and the machine gilded off the boat little worse of the lock was copsiderable, scooms of the street car strike here. The Governor also announced that he would declare martial law. All of the troops, 2000 in number, are expected here this atternoon.

The Governor said he regretted that troops had to be called out, but that the situation is critical and he would not delay any longer. "Men are being assaulted and killed," asid Governor Raiston," property is being destroyed and there is rioting in the atreets, which the city officials have not toutcolled, and I feel it is my duty to take this drastic action."

Precident Robt, I. Todd, of the Street Car Company, said he was ready to start the car service as soon as the authorities were sure that they could protect the days.

St, John has a police sensation. They have been having a police investigation, and on Monday evening William A. Sullivan, of the William J. Burns Detective $4.00 Agency, took the stand and told of how he had been in the city for some time posing as a Mr. McGragor representativa of a moving picture concern in Boston, and how, by saying he wished to buy the and how, of saying he whard to buy the country market, he had laid an elaborate plot to catch the Chief of Police. He said the chief and several of the leading citi-zens, whose names he kept scoret, were connected with a deaf from which they The best proposition in this city in a connected with a deaf from which they were to receive reward from him.

He went to the chief to ask about the laws governing moving picture houses, and then asked the chief to name a man who would act as broker for him in the purchase of the market building. The chief assumed three men and finally gave the detective a letter of introduction to one of them. He then tried as induce the chief to accept money for his services in recommending the man to him. The chief did not agree to take the money, though the detective said he got the impression that the chief expected to get something when the deal was put through. The chief said he had refused the money offered him.

Sullivan described the condition of things in general in St, John as "pretty rotten." Sullivan first said that he had been sent to the city by the Boston agency to look after certain conditions of crime, firebugs, etc. The incendiary fires were to be looked after especially, and I was also to look after eart an other crimes that should come under my observation.

Sullivan said he knew no one in St. John when he came, excepting an assistant of his, who came here before him. After relating the result of his olearing up of Nashua (N. H.), he said that in conducting his work here he received no instructions from any outside parties—only from his office.

Q—How do you find conditions here? A—Pretty rotten.

Q—What was the result of your investigation here? A—I feel pretty sure that we have located the firebugs in St. John, and I feel now that you won't have any more trouble with fireburgs. In justice to those who set the fires, however, I would say that they should not be put in Jail, but in an asylum.

Here Mr. Sullivan asked that the court should excuse him from any answering an workingman's were to receive reward from him. Goodyear welt See it and be convinced.

Legislation dealing with these points is expected to provide an interesting arrapped in the boase. The expect of the recommendation is the provided and the commission will make will not be known until its report is tabled, but it is taken for granted that they will suggest legislation of a most drastic character.

It is thought that instead of the har, hotels will be compelled to establish actes with tables and chairs after the fashion of Huropean resorts. Officials of the Government here who have discussed the possibility of the change in the present system of getting revenue from the license fees think that more money would be secured by assessing hotels on the amount of business done.

It is thought that changes in the license law will only be made gradually, and that hotel proprietors will only be forced to accept them when a renewal of a license is saked for.

MANY CHANGES MADE a sailings to and from Halifax A newspaper man made too -The Italian Lines cease their trips. NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—James Steele Jr., once editor of the Eagle, Little Falls, N.J., whom Canada deported yesterday, declared he was expelled because he made too much money on a Halifax newspaper learning he was earning more than they, protested to the immigration authorities that he had some to Canada under contract. His employers were fined $250. The Royal Edward and Alsatian will b replaced for one trip east.-Other shipping. There have been many changes during

There have been many changes during the past few weeks in regard to the sallings of steamers to and from Hailfar.

The latest announcement is the the two halls lines of steameships salling to Hailfax from Grass Naples, etc., and from Hailfax to those ports, will cease calling at Hailfax for the present. These lines are the "Italia" and the "Navigazione Generale Italians," and have made two trips a month to and from Hailfay. Wood trips a month to and from Halifar Wor was only received last night by the Italian Coasul, Mr. W. J. Fisher, but he could not give any reason for the alteration of the LONDON, Ont., Nov. 6.—Jack Labatt, son of John Labatt, brewer, of this city, was severely injured yesterday afternoon, when his horse fell while making a jump over a fence in a London hunt else run near St. John's, six miles from thir city.

The horse fell on Labatt, frasturing his leg and inflicting other hurts. Labatt is in a precarious condition in Victoria Hospital, he having suffered greatly from expoaure, as it was six hours before he reached the hospital from the time of the accident. schedule.

Enquiries made elsewhere resulted in the information that the Italian markets were flooded with fish and other products, and this might be the reason for the temporary cessation of the calls by these lines. The steamer Palermo, which-left Naples a few.days ago, will likely be ordered by wireless to proceed to Boston instead of coming to Hailfax. TO-DAY'S NOON STOCK LETTER.

coming to Haifax.

The Allan Line schedule of sailings to Haifax has been slightly altered by piacing the steamer Scandinavian in the place of the Alsatian for the safting from Liverpool on Dec. 20 and from Halifax on Jan. 3. Jan. 3.

Another change has been made in the schedule of the winter sailings. The Royal Edward will not make her trip to Halifax the latter part of November as previously advertised, but word was yesterday received by A. G. Jones and Co., agents for the White Star Line, that the Canada of the Dominion Line, would sairfrom Halifax on the third of December with mails and passengers for the Royal Edward.

The information received in Halifax is

(F. B. McCurdy & Co.)

New York, Nov. 6.—The market opened quiet and unchanged from last night, in spite of a lower range of quotations sent over from London, The tendency after the opening was toward improvement, and the list ruled generally strong in the first hour of trading, making slight fractional gains over the opening figures.

Canadian Pacific was an exception and opened up nearly a point above last night's close. Interboro Metropolitan showed strength from the start and advanced 1½ on a moderate degree of activity. The rest of the list held strong till about 11 o'clock, when stock began to be supplied on the rise, and this selling not only quickly checked the advance, but caus d a recession, which in the second hour caused stocks not only toose their previous gains, but forced them down to a level fractionally below last night's close. The market is now quiet and heavy.

Saice to noon 106,000. Bonds, $1,361,000. Rdward.

The information received in Halifax is that the Canada will not remain in Halifax, but after landing the Rayai Edward's passengers, mails and freight will proceed to Portland, and leave there on Dec. 2, making Halifax sport of call the following day in order to take the Royal Edward's mails, passengers and freight booked for that date.

The steamer Boethic will leave to-night for Bermuds on a special trip under charter to Pickford & Black. Here, There and Everywhere The P. and B. liner Briardene arrived a St. John, N. B., this morning from Dem

St. John, N. B., this morning from Demerara.

Nova Scotia grocery jobbers are awaiting the arrival of the Thompson liner Jacona, which is due in Haiffax on her annual voyage from Patras, Greece, with a cargo of dried fruits, upon which the wholesale houses depend for stocks for the winter. The Jacona lett Greece about three weeks ago with a full load of packed ourrants, raisins, etc., calling at Spain to complete eargo. After discharging here she proceeds to Quebec and Montreal, taking on some freight here. G. S. Camphell & Co. are agents for the Thompson liner. It becomes more famous every day, as each person who uses J. A. Huggins' Menthol Liniment is pleased with the result, and recommends it most highly. The universal household remedy, always keep it handy.

At the meeting of the Diocesan Board of the Women's Auxiliary, held yesterday at the Church of England Institute, it was decided to hold a mass meeting for women during the mission, on Wednesday Nov. 25th, at Sk. Paul's Church, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when several of the missioners will be the special speakers. The steamer Progresso arrived yester lay to load potatoes for Cuba. The Florizel arrived yesterday from St John's, and left to-day for New York.

But the heart of the born teacher yearned for the schoolroom, and the was not many months before she was again in the thick of the fight. The scene of the war between the energetic lady and ignorance lay this time in Niagara street school, Toronto. There followed some time in the Boys' Home on George street in the same city. me city. Mrs. Warburton, as may have been uessed by this time, has a special redilection for boys.

She next took a position as teacher in the Victoria Industrial School at dimico. For six years she taught in that institution.

Then, as now, there were naturally nany touch lads in the place.
But, winning her way with womantact, with unlimited common

From Mimico, Mrs. Warburton en-

story could one tell all the experiences of these later years, of the lessons of truth, courage and honesty the boys have learned; of the many who have made good.

A gathering of teachers and friends took place in the new Hester How school last year, when Mrs. Warburton's portrait was unveiled. The speakers of the evening were three Jowish lads, expupils, whose bright intelligent faces glowed with affection as they told of what their friend had done for them. One young man who was in the class some years ago is now an honored and trusted employe in an influential firm in the city. Another has looked after a widowed mother, and his younger brothers and sisters, and has saved maney for them all by his work. Several are in business for themselves. Many hundreds of the newsboys have come under her influence during these years. On one of the down-town Toronto streets the other, day a little bootblack jumped up from the dirt where he was "polishing." Hited his hat with the best of good comradeship to the merry-faced woman passing, then dropped back to his knee again with pleased, happy face. This is one of the tributes to Mrs. Warburton offered by her "boys." A greater one is the fact that last year when she went away for a holiday to England—throat given out—her old pupils did not forget.

They wrote her continuously and constantly. In one week fifty-four letters reached her from her paylis and expupils in Toronto.

It is twenty years how since Mrs. Warburton began her task of making over graceless young scamps of newsboys and other boys into men.

She has succeeded where most women would have failed. Her boys are real men who can on occasion thrash an enemy, if the cause of righteousness demands it, yet who have, through her teaching, honesty and respect for women ingrained finto their souls.

Likely To Be Chosen. What flag shall Ireland fly? This is a question that is again being dis-cussed as the time draws nearer fo-the 'nal passage of the home rul bill.

Probably no country has had more national flags than Ireland, so that of o'! time flags the range of choice is by no means restricted. The most ancient, without doubt, is the "Spear and Serpent," said to commemorate the curing by Moses of an ancestor of Milesius who had been bitten by a creake.

Then there is the golden sunburst Then there is the golden sunburst upon a blue ground, emblem of Fionn MacCumhall's Fenians (militia). Blue was always Ireland's national color until 1798, when the United Irishmen, to signify the blending of north and south, evolved a national color of the bue formed by the amalgamation of blue and orange, name-y, green.

The three golden crowns upon The three golden crowns upon a blue ground is another emblem which has not been overlooked. The design appears to-day in the arms of Munster, and the three crowns are said to typify the triple kingdoms of Desmond, Thomond and Ormond. Anyway, the fiag was the emblem of Ireland from 1170 until 1547, when Henry VIII. of England substituted the harp for the three crowns, the reason being that Henry was anxious that the three crowns should not be confused with the triple tiara of the pope, with whom, at that juncture, Henry was not upon the best of terms.

Still another national device to be considered is the "Lamh Dearg Eirinn," the Red Hand of Ireland, which, upon a white ground, was borne by Shane and Hugh O'Neill's which, upon a white ground, was borne by Shane and Hugh O'Neill's armies that defeated Queen Elizarbeth's generals.

The early hours of the 19th century saw Ireland inflicted with the St. Patrick's Cross, a red saltire upon a white ground. What St. Patrick had to do with it nobody can say, but some emblem or other had got to be incorporated in the British flag upon the passing of the act of union, and so the heralds did the rest. Wherever they got the red saltire from is and so the heralds did the rest. Wherever they got the red saltire from is not known, but there is reason to believe that it was borrowed from the arms of Trinity College, Dublin, which body had in turn borrowed it from the Fitsgerald family.

In all probability Ireland will adopt the sunburst upon a blue ground, the chief reasons being its antiquity, its distinctly Irish origin and its symbolism of Ireland risins to take her proper place among the nations.

But come what may, the ground of the new flag is going to be blue. The Sinn Feiners are resolved upon that, and that the flag's material shall not be silk or cotton, but good NEW DINING-CAR FEATURE.

Confessed Their Poverty. Among all the relics that changed ownership in a Browning sale in London the only things that could bear the name of jewelry were the usband's, not the wife's - a ring or two, sleeve links, studs and such rifles. Mrs. Browning probably nev trifies. Mrs. Browning probably never owned a jewel—a little cheap gold brooch, but nothing more. She did not live to share her husband's better prosperity, and her own habits as maid and wife were frugal. A passage in the letters records the misgivings of the lovers, each of whom supposed the other to be accustomed supposed the other to be accusto to some degree of luxury. At las growning had the courage to te Hizabeth that he was extremely poo and she, delighted, told him that the whole dress she was wearing cost something very small in shillings. Very Flowery. In a lecture the other day Sir Ar-thur Quiller-Couch, the well-known author, who is professor of English literature at Cambridge, said that cer tain writers, like the Hindu Babu were always trying to make "our poor dear language more floriferous, more Babus are notorious, of course, for Hadus are hotorious, of course, for their passion for using flowery Eng-lish, and they seize eagerly on any phrase, whether poetical or slangy, that may happen to catch their fancy. Sir Arthur gave as an example a stoof a Babu who wanted to send a te am announcing the death of hi er. A plain statement of the fac death did not satisfy him, so h ired, "The hand that rocked the

It Would Flatter Man. Few men have deserved and fev e won higher praise in an epitaph have won higher praise in an epitaph than the following, which was written by Lord Byron on the tomb of his dead Newfoundland:
