BALDWIN'S POLICY SUDDENLY TESTED

Dominions Being Kept in Close Touch with Situation in Egypt.

London, Nov. 21.—The situation in Egypt is supplying a sudden and serious test for the plan inaugurated by Mr. Baldwin in seeking the close co-operation of the Dominions in affairs affecting the Empire. Egypt was one of the subjects discussed at the "tea party" at Downing street last Tuesday. The murder of Sir Lee Stack has of course made the situation infinitely more serious. The Dominions are accordingly being kept in close touch with every development by the British Government. The Australia, New Zealand and South Africa everything which affects the security of the Suez Canal is of course of prime importance. Canada has not the same vital interest in the question, but if armed intervention in Egypt became necessary in Egypt the Canadian Government would eventually have to register its sympathies in some fashion.

WHEN PARTNERS PART
A hand-shake long and silent,
A tear that squeezes out,
A mirthless smile that's not a smile at all;
A look into your buddy's eyes,
An extra squeeze of a pair of sighs—
A happy part you sullenly recall.

A swift good-bye—good luck,
A hand-shake long and silent,
A tear that squeezes out,
A mirthless smile that's not a smile at all;
A look into your buddy's eyes,
An extra squeeze of a pair of sighs—
A happy part you sullenly recall.

Note.—This poem from "Youth" Chicago, was recited at a banquet in New York City on Sept. 8th. The occasion was the disbanding of American Scouts who had returned from Wembley and Copenhagen and a large number of representative people were present.

XMAS MONEY FOR YOU

Search Your Attic For Fortunes In Old Stamps

Among the old letters of many families are hundreds of very rare stamps. Many have been found and sold for small fortunes. Single envelopes have been sold for as high as $6,000.00 and many have brought upwards of $100.00. It is not because there are only a few, but for the simple reason that most of them have remained stored away and forgotten, in old trunks, family chests and closets. Make a thorough search through your attic or storeroom for these old letters—anything mailed from 1845 to 1875. I am a collector, not a dealer. Have nothing to sell or circulate to send, but am willing to pay for rare stamps more than the average dealer.

The stamps I am especially interested in are the early U. S. issues on envelopes mailed to Canada, the stamps of Canada, British Columbia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and Vancouver, or a few of the early issues of Great Britain and Colonies. Loose stamps I do not buy—only those on the original envelopes. So don't cut them off the envelope.

Letters mailed since 1875 bear mostly common stamps, and these I do not care for. I collect nothing but stamps, and am not interested in buying old relics, old newspapers, books or coins. There are many stamps of different issues which are similar in appearance. It is therefore impossible for me to quote values from descriptions. I must first see the stamps. When you have gotten all the envelopes together wrap them carefully, using cardboard to protect them from becoming wrinkled or creased. Please don't write on the face of envelope—I am fully acquainted with the issues even though the postmark shows no year date. Don't use pins. Private letters inside the envelope may be kept by you, as it is only the envelope I want. (This would not of course be possible with the old-fashioned folded letter, as the letter itself forms the "envelope.")

If you have reason to believe that your stamps are of great value, and that they are registered mail. In order to avoid having the package held up for customs examination, mark on the outside "Old Stamps, Not Dutiable." I hold myself responsible for the care of such envelopes while in my possession. On receipt I will examine them and if found of no value, or if my offer is unsatisfactory, I guarantee their safe return to you.

Make your search now, before the address is lost or forgotten. Tell your friends or ask permission to look over their old letters. Many elderly people have kept hundreds of such envelopes. They will come the opportunity of realizing money for them at very little trouble and no expense.

WHEN THE KING OPENS PARLIAMENT

A Pair of Gates in London which are Opened Only Once a Year

There are a pair of gates in London that are kept permanently shut to conveyances every day of the year except one. Those gates lead out of Dean's Yard, Westminster, into a lane that runs straight to the House of Lords. They are only opened on the day on which His Majesty the King opens Parliament in person.

On the day that the new Parliament is opened next month His Majesty will proceed from Buckingham Palace in a wonderful old coach, drawn by jet-black horses. While the King is on his way, Yeomen of the Guard will conduct the time-honored search through the vaults under the houses of Parliament, to ensure the safety of the monarch and his ministers.

When the King reaches the House of Lords guns will be fired in St. James's Park. Flagmarchers will stand on the towers of the Houses of Parliament, and send their messages to other signallers on Government offices overlooking the park. From thence the signal of the King's arrival will be conveyed to the troops below. Cabinet ministers will await the arrival of the King outside the House, and then take up their position in the procession to the Lords. Usually as large number of peacocks attend as well.

Everybody will stand, and it will be "heads off" for the Black Rod when he passes down the central corridor on his way to summon the commons, who enter a few minutes later at a rapid march—their pace is always quick—to hear the King's speech.

The King's speech is prepared by the Cabinet and deals with the international situation, and reviews the legislation it is intended to introduce during the parliamentary session.

THE STRANGER
"Who's that stranger, mother dear? Look, he knows us—ain't that queer?"
"Hush, my own, don't talk so wild; He's your father, dearest child."
He's my father? No such thing; Father died, away last Spring; "Father didn't die, you duby; Father joined a golfing club, so he has no place to go, you see. No place left for him to roam— That is why he's coming home. Kiss him, he won't bite you, child. All those golfing guys look wild." (Exchange.)

A Fighter.
Bobbie—"Wigwag, is the most argumentative fellow I know." Slobbs—"Yes, he is always ready to fight for his opinions." Bobbie—"Even when he hasn't any, in fact."

Her Friends Gave Her Up

"I was badly run down after having 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy," writes Mrs. Baxter.

To have 'flu alone is surely bad enough, but to have 'flu with pneumonia and pleurisy is in most cases fatal. Even 'flu itself after it has run its course leaves the system in a weakened, depressed, nervous, run-down condition, but few are able to fight 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy, and live to tell the tale. No wonder, Mrs. Baxter was given up when she had 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy. No wonder after having had these dreadful afflictions she was terribly run down. The mystery is how she ever survived. But we will let Mrs. Baxter tell you her story in her own way—"I want to tell you what Carnol has done for me and mine. I was badly run down after having 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy. My sister advised me to try Carnol. She used it both for herself and her daughter and both were completely relieved. I have now taken five bottles of Carnol and can say I never enjoyed better health. My daughter is also taking it for a spring tonic. I advised a neighbour to give it to her little girl who had had bronchitis from birth and she is getting well. We all praise your wonderful medicine and only hope it will do as much for others as it has done for me and mine. A long life to Carnol!"—Mrs. E. E. Baxter, R.R. No. 2, John County, New Brunswick.

Carnol is a wonderful tonic and gives marvellous results in all weakness and run down conditions, because its ingredients are the finest tissue, nerve and blood builders, and are known to every doctor in the medical profession, full particulars of which will be found in every circular accompanying a bottle of Carnol.

THIS DEER HAD EIGHT LEGS

Shot Near Bathurst Last Week
—Could Run Either Way

Bathurst, N. B., Nov. 29.—A deer equipped with eight legs by means of which it could propel itself both forwards and backwards, and a head which in the normal position faced towards its hind quarters, a deer shot on the Miramichi road here this week by Percy Rennie and Michael Casey has proved to be the greatest game freak ever secured in the New Brunswick woods. When first observed by the two hunters it is doubtful if they could believe their eyes. The animal moved first in one direction and then without turning about proceeded a stern with approximately as much ease as it had shown in the forward movements. It was an entirely new gear shift so far as the hunters were concerned. When browsing the deer was able to turn its head like an office arm-chair to reach the fodder on the ground. The carcass has since been shipped to a taxidermist for mounting and will be preserved as New Brunswick's greatest freak.

"I thought you had said last night that Jan's complexion was ruined." "So I did." "But there she is over there looking as beautiful as ever." "I referred to her last night's complexion."

JUDGE HAS FORMULA FOR HAPPY COUPLES

Jurist Who Has Handled 10,000 Divorce Cases Advises Husbands and Wives

A formula for successful marriage was presented today by Judge Joseph Sabath of the Superior Court, who in the last four years has disposed of 10,000 divorce cases in the city of Chicago. Judge Sabath, who prepared a thesis on the subject to deliver before the University of Michigan Alumni Club, but was unable to appear in person, advised marriage in early life, at 12:30 p.m. and the jury retired a real partnership between husband and wife and children, if divorced Nov. 18th last. No order as to costs was made by His Honor, following his discharge of the jury. Asked regarding an appeal, Hon. Dr. Wm. Pugsley, K.C., senior counsel for the plaintiff, said the matter was still open as also was the matter of the personal libel suit of J. Harry Driscoll against Dr. Farris, also entered in this court record.

"Oh! who with earth would grudge to part when called by death to be with the blessed." This saying of the prophet may be suitably used in connection with the death which took place in our village on Sunday morning November 16, of Mr. Damian Rooney son of Mr. and Mrs. William Rooney after an illness of 3 weeks, at the early age of 29 years. His death is mourned by his parents, three sisters, namely, Mrs. Thomas Kennedy, Mrs. Arthur Grant, of Douglastown, and Sister St. Bridget of Sisters of Holy Rosary of Rimouski, and one brother Mr. Rupert Rooney also of Douglastown. On Tuesday morning the remains were conveyed to the Roman Catholic Church, interment was made in the rural cemetery. The service in the church and prayers of committal at that you are stirring a fire that may eventually destroy you. Rev. G.E. Myles, P.P. The sympathy of many friends is extended to the family in their sad and sudden bereavement.

Mr. Fournier and Mr. Guignon of St. Marique were in Douglastown on Monday on business.

Mr. Arthur Ste. Croix of Chedoke who travels for the Fuller Brush Company of Toronto was a visitor here sometime ago.

Mr. Emery Holland motored out to Grande Valle last week and returned after a few days.

Miss Grace Gervais of Brilliant Cove spent a few days last week among her Douglastown relatives.

Mr. Jerome W. Briand and Mr. Smith E. Baird spent a couple of days in Port Daniel and Shipshaw.

Rev. Harold S. Laws whose native home is at Gaspé Harbour, assistant pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Anglican) corner Claremont and Sherbrooke St., Montreal, was the special preacher at a memorial service held in that church on Thanksgiving in honor of the late Mr. W.J. Price and Miss Suse Gerrard all of Campbellton, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended.

The funeral which was held on Sunday Nov. 23rd, was largely attended. The floral tributes were many and beautiful.

Her favorite hymns, "Son of My Soul" and "Rock of Ages" were rendered by the Methodist choir of which church deceased was a member. The bearers were: W.J. Kent, Oscar Fenwick, G.W. Ellis, Stephen Branch, Clyde Branch and G. Doucet.

Thomas J. Irvine who resided in Flatlands was a highly respected farmer. He was spending a few weeks with his sons when he was taken down sick in the night. He was immediately rushed to Campbellton to receive medical aid, he was taken to Hotel Dieu Hospital where on the 17th of November, he underwent a very serious operation and died on the following Thursday at 9 o'clock. He was 59 years of age.

He leaves to mourn a wife and nine children, four daughters, Mrs. James Haley of Matapedia, remains were laid to rest in Rene, Aubrey and Gertrude all at home, Glen, Lewis, Cemetery, and five sons, Aubrey, Lionel, Donald, Rev. Father Lantaigne conducted Ivan and Bertie all at home, and the service.

DR. FERRIS WINS
IN LIBEL CASE

Jury Out Only Ten Minutes and Bring Verdict for Defendant

St. John, N.B., Nov. 29.—A verdict for Dr. H.A. Ferris, medical superintendent of the Saint John County Hospital, defendant in a libel suit brought against him by J. Harry Driscoll et al, doing business as the Drisco Laboratories, was given by the jury at noon today following ten minutes consideration. Mr. Driscoll completed his charge person, advised marriage in early life, at 12:30 p.m. and the jury retired a real partnership between husband and wife and children, if divorced Nov. 18th last. No order as to costs was made by His Honor, following his discharge of the jury. Asked regarding an appeal, Hon. Dr. Wm. OBITUARY

Mrs. Mina T. Carter
On Friday, Nov. 21st at 10 P.M. there passed away at her home in Bathurst a much respected and beloved citizen in the person of Mrs. Mina T. Carter, widow of the late Sid Carter, in her 67th year. Although she had been failing in health for some time her condition did not appear to be serious, and her sudden death will be mourned by a great number of friends.

She was the daughter of the late Robert A. Gerrard of Tide Head, Restigouche Co., and leaves to mourn one son Gordon, with whom she lived and four sisters, Mrs. Alexander Douglass, Mrs. Angus Young, Mrs. W.J. Price and Miss Suse Gerrard all of Campbellton, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended.

THE WIDE AWAKE MERCHANT

We are all familiar with the new paper advertising of wide-awake retail merchants and we are impressed by the amount of space used by them. Good advertising on the part of individual dealers means the bringing of more people from outside into the town and when they come everybody gains in some degree. Just recall about the mail order business houses that pour their direct advertising into the community where the local merchants under-advertise, an expensive thing for the mail order houses to do, but expensive as it is it pays. Nothing creates an impression of a live community so much as having a local paper filled with effective advertising. There is no other method which equals this for getting the impression of being a good trading centre out into the country.

ANNUAL CALEDONIAN BANQUET

 an encore he gave the old favorite, "When You and I were Young Magie." Another baritone solo by Mr. Welsh was also enjoyed. On his second appearance Mr. Welsh sang "Bonnie Mary of Argyle" in true Scotch spirit.
 At this point Mr. H. R. Smith who can always be depended on to add something to an enjoyable occasion gave a number of recitations which were heartily applauded.
 In proposing the toast to "Our Town" Mayor McKay spoke optimistically of the future of Campbellton and, as always, gave logical reasons for a hopeful outlook. Mr. R. B. Roseborough responded in a most capable manner. Mr. Roseborough seldom makes a speech but when he does he always says something that inspires thought. On this occasion he spoke of Campbellton's possibilities in connection with the development of pulpwood and lumbering industries, and referred to our opportunities in regard to manufacturing. He also urged the necessity as a means of progress, the erection of the proposed bridge across the Restigouche and spoke of the important part it would play in the development and advancement of this part of the country. In the course of his remarks Mr. Roseborough lamented the absence of social life in our town. He declared that our civic leaders such as Mayor and Aldermen must find little satisfaction in serving on our local government in as much as they were seldom shown any gratitude by citizens generally. Our leaders, he stated were left too much to themselves. There was not the spirit of fellowship, interest and co-operation that there should be.

A selection of generous length on the bag pipes by M. Harry McEwan Piper, was also a feature of the evening musical programme. This spirited music was rendered in the true

Scotch style that stirred the blood of Highland clans of old and aroused a pardonable pride in the breast of every Scotchman present.

A solo "Ye Banks and Braes of Bonny Doon" by Mr. J. R. Vallis was well received. Mr. Vallis sang in his usual satisfactory way and in response to loud applause gave a rendition of "Mother McCree" that was thoroughly pleasing in both volume and tone.

Rev. V. Forbes of Tide Head proposed the toast to our sister town in fitting words. Mayor W. S. Montgomery responded with his usual spirit. Incidentally he referred to the Restigouche bridge and declared that it would now be a reality had it not been for the war. He also pointed out that co-operative effort would undoubtedly bring success in this project and declared that the bridge should not be referred to as between Campbellton and Bonaventure, but as between Restigouche and the Gasp Peninsula. Concluding his remarks, the speaker proposed a toast to Restigouche County, and asked Mr. D. A. Stewart to respond. The conservative member did so in fitting words.

 At the close of the programme the banqueters joined hands and, forming a large circle sang "Auld Lang Syne," the echo of their lusty voices reverberating through the building. The National Anthem concluded this annual gathering and all left with the feeling that the occasion had proven a most successful and memorable one.

The Great Impersonation

A stirring story of love and adventure.
One of the famous author's best.
Published by arrangement with The British & Colonial Press Limited.

The Right Honourable Gerald Watson stood upon the steps talking to the wife of the Italian Ambassador. She left him presently, and he came striding down the lawn with his hands behind his back and his eyes seeming to see out past the golf links.

"There goes a man," Terloff murmured, "whom lately I have found despatched. When I first came here he met quite openly. I believe, even now, he is sincerely desirous of peace and amicable relations between us. I cannot tell what it is. I cannot tell even of what nature it is, but I have an instinct for people's attitude towards me, and the English are the worst race in the world at hiding their feelings. Has Mr. Watson, I wonder, come under the spell of your connection, the Duke of Worcester? He seemed so friendly with both of us down in Norfolk."

Their womenfolk left them at that moment to talk to some acquaintances seated a short distance away. Mr. Watson, passing within a few yards of them, was brought to a standstill by Dominey's greeting. They talked for a moment or two upon idle subjects.

"Your news, I trust, continues favourable?" the Ambassador remarked, observing the attitude which required of him to be the first to leave the realm of ordinary conversation.

"It is a little negative, in quality," the other answered, "after a moment's meditation. I am summoned to Downing Street again at six o'clock."

"I have already confided the result of my morning despatches to the Prime Minister," Terloff observed. "I went through them before I came down here. It was the somewhat doubtful reply."

"You will have appreciated, I hope their genuinely pacific tone?" Terloff asked anxiously.

His interlocutor bowed and then drew him up. It was obvious that the strain of the last few days was telling upon him. There were lines about his mouth, and his eyes spoke of sleepless nights.

"Words are idle things to deal with at a time like this," he said. "One thing, however, I will venture to say to you, Prince, here and under these circumstances. There will be no war unless it be the will of your country."

Terloff was for a moment unusually pale. It was an episode of unrecorded history. He rose to his feet and raised his hat.

"There will be no war," he said solemnly.

The Cabinet Minister passed on with a lighter step. Dominey, more clearly than ever before, understood the subtle policy which had chosen for his great position a man as chivalrous and faithful and yet as shrewd as Terloff. He looked after the retreating figure of the Cabinet Minister with a slight smile at the corner of his lips.

"In a time like this," he remarked significantly, "one begins to understand why one of our great writers—was it Bernard Shaw?—has written that no island could ever breed a race of diplomats."

"The sea which engirdles this island," the Ambassador said thoughtfully, "have brought to England great wealth, as they may bring to her much woe. The too-nimble brain of the diplomat has its parallel of insecurity in the people whose interest he seems to guard. I believe in the honesty of the English politicians. I have placed that belief on record in the small volume of memories which I shall presently entrust to you. But we talk too seriously for a summer afternoon. Let us illustrate to the world our opinion of the political situation and play another nine holes at golf!"

Dominey rose willingly to his feet, and the two men strolled away towards the first tee.

"By the by," Terloff asked, "what of our cheerful little friend Seaman? He ought to be busy just now."

"I am seriously enough, he is returning from Germany to-night," Dominey announced. "I expect him at Berkeley Square. He is coming direct to me."

CHAPTER XXVI

These were days, to all dwellers in

The Great Beef Economy.

CUBES

London, of vivid impressions, reasserting themselves afterwards with a curious sense of unreality, as though belonging to another set of days and another world. Dominey remembered his dinner that evening in the sombre, handsomely furnished dining-room of his town house in Berkeley Square. Although it lacked the splendid proportions of the banquet hall at Dominey, it was still a fine apartment, furnished in the Georgian period, with some notable pictures upon the walls, and with a wonderful ceiling and fireplace. Dominey and Rosamund dined alone, and though the table had been reduced to its smallest proportions, the place between them was yet considerable. As soon as Parkins had gravely put the port upon the table, Rosamund rose to her feet and, instead of leaving the room, pointed for the servant to place a chair for her by Dominey's side.

"I shall be like your men friends, Everard," she declared, "when the ladies have left, and draw up to your side. Now what do we do? Tell stories? I promise you that I will be a wonderful listener."

"First of all you drink half a glass of this port," he declared, filling her glass, "then you peel me one of those peaches, and we divide it. After which we listen for a ring at the bell. To-night I expect a visitor."

"A visitor?"
"Not a social one," he assured her. "A matter of business which I fear will take me from you for the rest of the evening. So let us make the most of the time until he comes."

She commenced her task with the peach, talking to him a little gravely, a sweet and picturesque picture of a graceful and very desirable woman, her delicate shape and artistic fragility more than ever accentuated by the somberness of the background.

"Do you know, Everard," she said, "I am so happy in London here with you, and I feel all the time so strong and well. I can read and understand the books which were a maze of puzzle to me before. I can see the things in the pictures, and feel the thrill of the music, which seemed to come to me, somehow, before, all distorted and discordant. You understand, dear?"

"I have spoken to Doctor Harrison about it," she went on, her voice scarcely audible. "He declared that you probably loved more than you dared to show, because some day the real Everard might come back."

"That is quite true," he reminded her softly. "You may come back at any moment."

She gripped his hand, her voice shook with passion. She leaned towards him, her other arm stole around his neck.

"But I don't want him to come back!" she cried. "I want you!"

Dominey sat for a moment motionless, like a figure of stone. Through the wide-flung, blind-shielded windows came the raucous cry of a newsboy, breaking the stillness of the summer evening. And then another and sharper interruption—the stopping of a taxicab outside, the firm, insistent ringing of the front doorbell. Recollections came to Dominey, and a great strength, the fire which had leaped up within him was thrust back. His response to her wave of passion was infinitely tender.

"Dear Rosamund," he said, "that front doorbell summons me to rather an important interview. Will you please trust in me any way you can, and I will be back in half an hour. I am not indifferent. There is something with which I never reckoned, something which is beginning to weigh upon me night and day. Trust me, Rosamund, and wait!"

She sank back into her chair with a piquant and yet pathetic little grimace.

"You tell me always to wait," she complained. "I will be patient, but you shall tell me when you are so kind to me. You make or mar my life. You must care a little? Please?"

He was standing up now. He kissed her hands fondly. His voice had all the old ring in it.

"More than for any woman on earth, dear Rosamund!"

Seaman, in a light grey suit, a Panama, and a white bow-tied tie, had lost something of the placid urbanity of a few months ago. He was hot and tired with travel. There were new lines in his face and a queer expression about his eyes, at the corners of which little wrinkles had begun to appear. He responded to Dominey's welcome with a fervour which was almost feverish, scrutinized him closely, as though expecting to find some change, and finally sank into an easy-chair with him.

Dominey rang the bell. He had already surmised, from the dressing case and coat in the hall that his visitor was not a stranger.

"What will you have?" he enquired.

"A bottle of hock with seltzer water, and ice if you have it," Seaman replied. "Also a plate of cold meat, but it must be served here. And afterwards the biggest cigar you have. I have indeed news, news, disturbing, news magnificent, news astounding."

Dominey gave some orders to the servant who answered his summons.

"Of course," he answered gravely, "I do not wonder," she went on, "that Doctor Harrison is proud of me for a patient, but there are many times when I feel a dull pain in my heart, because I know that, whatever he or anybody else might say, I am not quite cured."

"Rosamund dear," he protested. "Ah, but do not interrupt," she insisted, depositing his share of the peach upon his plate. "How can I be cured when all the time there is the problem of you, the problem which I am just as far off solving as ever I was? Often I find myself comparing you with the Everard whom I married."

"Do I fail so often to come up to his standard?"

"You never fail," she answered, looking at him with brimming eyes. "Of course, he was very much more affectionate," she went on after a moment's pause. "His kisses were not like yours. And he was far fonder of having me with him. Then, when he was not there, he did wild things; he seemed to forget me altogether. It was that," she went on, "that was so terrible. It was that which made me so nervous. I think that I should even have been able to stand those awful moments when he came back to me, covered with blood and reeling, if it had not been that I was already almost a wreck. You know, he killed Roger Unthank that night. That is why he was never able to come back."

"Why do you talk of these things to-night, Rosamund?" Dominey begged.

"I must, dear," she insisted, laying her fingers upon his hand and looking at him curiously. "I must, even though I see how they distress you. It is wonderful that you should mind so much, Everard, but you do, and I love you for it."

"Mind?" he groaned. "Mind?"

"You are so like him and yet so different," she went on meditatively. "You drink so little wine, you are always so self-controlled, so serious. You live as though you had a life around of which others knew nothing. The Everard I remember would never have cared about being a magistrate or going into Parliament. He would never have had ambassadors for his friends. He would have spent his time racing or yachting or hunting or shooting, as the fancy took him. And yet—"

"And yet what?" Dominey asked, a little harshly.

"I think I loved me better than you," she said very sadly.

"Why?" he demanded.

"I cannot tell you," she answered, with her hand resting on his plate, "but I think that he did."

Dominey walked suddenly to the window and leaned out. There were drops of moisture upon his forehead he felt the force of his air. When he came back she was still sitting there, still looking down.

"I have spoken to Doctor Harrison about it," she went on, her voice scarcely audible. "He declared that you probably loved more than you dared to show, because some day the real Everard might come back."

"That is quite true," he reminded her softly. "You may come back at any moment."

She gripped his hand, her voice shook with passion. She leaned towards him, her other arm stole around his neck.

Dominey rang the bell. He had already surmised, from the dressing case and coat in the hall that his visitor was not a stranger.

"What will you have?" he enquired.

For a few moments they spoke trivialities of the journey. When everything was served, however, and the door closed, Seaman could wait no longer. His appetite, his thirst, his speech, seemed all stimulated to swift action.

"We are of the same temperament," he said. "That I know. We will speak first of what is more than disturbing—a little terrifying. The mystery of Johann Wolff has been solved."

"The man who came to us with messages from Schmidt in South Africa?" Dominey asked. "I had almost forgotten about him."

"The same. What was at the back of his visit to us that night, I cannot even now imagine. Neither is it clear why he held aloof from me, who am his superior in practically the same service. There we are, from the commencement, confronted with a very singular happening, and scarcely so singular as the denouement. Wolff vanished from your house that night into an English fortress."

"It seems incredible," Dominey declared bluntly.

"It is nevertheless true," Seaman insisted. "No member of our service is allowed to remain more than one month without communicating his existence and whereabouts to the headquarters. No word has been received from Wolff since that night in January. On the other hand, indirect information has reached us that he is in France here."

"But such a thing is against the law, unheard of," Dominey protested. "No country can keep the citizen of another country in prison without formulating a definite charge or bringing him up for trial."

Seaman smiled grimly.

"That's all very well in any ordinary case," he said. "Wolff has been marked man for years, though, Wilhelmstrasse would soon make fuss enough."

"If it were of any use, but it would not be. There are one or two Englishmen in German prisons at the present moment, concerning whose welfare the English Foreign Office has not even thought it worth while to enquire. What troubles me more than the actual fact of Wolff's disappearance is the mystery of his visit to you and his apprehension practically on the spot."

"They must have tracked him down there," Dominey remarked.

"Yes, but they couldn't thrust a pair of tongs into your butter's sitting-room, extract Johann Wolff, and set him down inside Norwich Castle or whatever prison he may be in," Seaman objected. "However, the most disquieting feature about Wolff is that it introduces something we don't understand. For the rest, we have many men as good, and better, and the time for their utility is not far off. You are our great hope now, Dominey."

"It is to be, then?"

Seaman took a long and ecstatic draught of his hock and seltzer.

"It is to be," he declared solemnly. "There was never any doubt about it. If Russia ceases to mobilize tomorrow, if every statesman in Serbia crawls to Vienna with a rope around his neck, the result would still be the same. The word has gone out. The whole of Germany is like a vast military camp. It comes exactly twelve months before the final day fixed by our great authorities, but the opportunity is too great, too wonderful for

By the end of August shall be in Paris."

"You bring news indeed!" Dominey murmured, standing for a moment by the opened window.

"I have been received with favour in the very loftiest circles," Seaman continued. "You and I both stand high in the list of those to whom great rewards shall come. His Majesty approves altogether of your reluctance to avail yourself of your permission to wed the Princess Eiderston. Von Rugastien has decided well," he declared. "These are not the days for making or giving in marriage, these, the most momentous days of the world have ever known, the days when an empire shall spring into being, the nightfall since the Continents fell into shape and the stars looked down upon this present world. Those are the words of the All Highest. In his eyes the greatest of all attributes is the splendour of purpose. You followed your own purpose, contrary to my advice, contrary to Terloff's. You will gain by it."

Seaman finished his meal in due course, and the tray was removed. Soon the two men were alone again. Seaman puffing out dense volumes of smoke, gripping his cigar between his teeth, brandishing it sometimes in his hand to give effect to his words. A little of his marvellous caution seemed to have deserted him. For the first time he spoke directly to his companion.

SCALLOP FISHING IN BAY CHALEUR

Department of Marine and Fisheries
Make Investigations
In Local Waters

During the past summer the Department of Marine and Fisheries hired a fishing boat, placed an expert scallop fisherman from Nova Scotia on board of her with two scallop drag-nets, such as are used in Mahone Bay, Nova Scotia for the purpose of locating scallop beds in the waters of Gloucester County, New Brunswick, where such beds were said to exist. The work has carried on for seven weeks along the Bay Chaleur and the Gulf shores of the county. The results, as will be seen later, were extremely satisfactory in that some extensive and prolific beds of this very valuable shell-fish were discovered. A record was kept of the exact location where dragging took place each day, the number of scallops taken at each drag, the depth of water each day, and the condition of the bottom. From that record the following summary has been made for the information and guidance to fishers and to make this a regular branch of the fisheries of that part of the coast.

Bay Chaleur
At a distance of one to two miles ranging from southeast to east off Bellefleur lighthouse, in 12 to 13 fathoms of water, six drags gave 202 scallops. The bottom was found to be good.

From Black Rock one and one-half to two miles in a range from south-east to east, in 11 to 13 fathoms of water, six drags gave 120 scallops. The bottom was good.

East to southeast from Green Point one and one-half to two miles from the shore, in 12 to 14 fathoms, drags gave 120 scallops. The bottom was good.

From a point two miles east-southeast of Limestone Point Church to a point one and one-half miles south-east of Elm Point the bottom was found to be muddy and rocky and not suitable for dragging. Consequently no scallops were caught excepting 12 in one drag one and one-half miles southeast of Elm Point.

At a distance of two to three miles ranging south-east by south, and east-southeast from Petit Rocher lighthouse, in 11 to 14 fathoms, from 20 to over 300 scallops were taken at a drag. The total from ten drags was 1214 scallops. One especially good spot southeast by south from Petit Rocher lighthouse gave 600 for two drags. The bottom was good.

From a point east-southeast from Nigado Church to a point southeast of Ste. Therese Church three to five miles from shore, in 11 to 15 fathoms, 12 drags gave 1231 scallops. At one point four and one-half miles south-east by east from Ste. Therese Church two drags gave 370 scallops. The bottom was good.

Northeast to northeast by north three to four and one-half miles from Bathurst Gully lighthouse, in 10 to 16 fathoms, eight drags gave 1050 scallops. Two drags at one spot gave 415 scallops. While two at another spot gave 325. The bottom was found to be good.

From Bathurst Gully lighthouse to Petit Rocher, a distance of about ten miles, scallops are said to be very plentiful.

From a point northeast of Clifton Head to a point northeast of Grindstone Point lighthouse one to one and one-half miles from the shore, in 18 to 15 fathoms, eight drags gave 124 scallops. The bottom was not very good. From a point one and one-half miles north by east Grindstone Point to a point west northwest of Grand Anse Church one to one and one-half miles off the shore, no scallops were found, the bottom being of mud and rock.

From a point northeast of Grand Anse Church four miles off to a point north of that church two and one-half miles off, in 10 to 12 fathoms, five drags gave 116 scallops. The bottom was found to be a little rough for dragging.

From two and one-half miles northeast of Blue Cove lighthouse to three and one-half miles north-northeast of Miconette lighthouse, in 13 to 15 fathoms, ten drags gave 252 scallops. The bottom was found to be good. Later drags over this locality gave an average of 250 scallops to a drag.

North northeast from Lower Carquet Church four and one-half miles, in five to nine fathoms, three drags gave 52 scallops. The bottom was found to be good.

From northeast of Poke Sudi lighthouse, near the entrance of Shipigan Harbour, in six to seven fathoms, to five miles north northeast of Poke Sudi lighthouse in twelve fathoms, 100 scallops to a drag were taken. The bottom was found to be good.

From northwest to west northwest of Micon Centre Church, two to three miles off shore, in 7 to 11 fathoms, nine drags gave 1072 scallops. At one place three drags gave 156, 275 and 210 respectively. The bottom was found to be good.

From five miles northwest by north of Micon Church, to five miles northwest by north from Goose Lake lighthouse, in 12 to 15 fathoms, eight drags gave 680 scallops. The bottom was good.

From four miles northwest by north of Micon Church, to four miles northwest of Micon Centre Church, in 14 to 16 fathoms, six drags gave 280 scallops. The bottom was found to be good.

From a point three miles north northwest of Micon Point lighthouse to a point 12 miles northeast of the lighthouse no scallops were found, the bottom being unsuitable.

SPLENDID SHOWING BY MARITIME LIFE

Business Written in First Eight Months in Excess Of $1,000,000.

Written business to Nov. 13 in excess of $1,000,000, representing applications for insurance from approximately 500 people, is the result which has been achieved by the Maritime Life Assurance Company during the eight short months which this organization, now a well established institution, has been in existence. And with the exception of a substantial amount written in Bermuda this splendid volume of business has been secured altogether within the Maritime Provinces.

It is with pardonable pride that the directors and leading executives of The Maritime Life point to this business record, claiming it to be a better one than has been made by most of the Canadian companies in their initial year. It is a record which establishes the soundness of the company's business methods and reflects credit upon those under whose guidance its affairs have been conducted. The achievement of writing more than $1,000,000 worth of insurance shows that the Maritime Life has already been able to create an effective field force and it shows too, sincere and constant effort on the part of those engaged in furthering its interests.

The fact that the company is an "all Maritime" one, Maritime owned and Maritime directed, may in part be responsible for the excellent start it has received, but energy and executive ability, fairness of dealing, and a product the value of which is not surpassed, have undoubtedly won the business.

The subscribed capital of the company at the present time amounts to in excess of 56 per cent of the authorized capitalization of $1,000,000, the expectation of the directors, judging by the way the stock is being taken up, that the whole issue will be absorbed by the public in the near future.

J. T. Wilson, president of the Maritime Life, speaks most optimistically of the future, declaring that the field force is daily improving its capacity and greater results can be expected in the immediate future.

Micon Plate was found to be too rocky for scallop dragging.

From east northeast of Little Shipigan Gully lighthouse to east by northeast of Cape Bateau, about three and one-half miles off shore, in 16 to 22 fathoms, ten drags gave 1548 scallops. The bottom was found to be smooth and the scallops large in size.

From north northeast of Shipigan Church, four to five miles off shore, to east by south of Tracelle Gully lighthouse, three and one-half to four miles off in 12 to 15 fathoms, 22 drags gave 1465 scallops. The bottom was found to be good, and the scallops to be large in size. It is reported that for a distance of about 20 miles along the shore from Cape Bateau to Tracelle Gully the bottom is excellent for scallop dragging, and that the prospects for the establishment of a fishery are very good.

The length of time allowed for each drag in the foregoing record was from 25 to 30 minutes.
