WARNING

Microfilming of archival records held by Manuscript Division is intended to protect often fragile originals from damage through handling and to make the material more widely available through inter-institutional loan.

Although original records are generally in good physical condition, researchers should be aware that some documents are faded, that some of the colored paper stock and inks used may not photograph well, and that some type of documents may not reproduce well on microfilm. Negative photostats, too, often fail to appear clearly on microfilm. It should also be noted that because of their size, some documents have to be filmed in several sections. The National Archives of Canada has attempted to the best of its ability, to reproduce what information is legible and provide at least a reference for what is not.

ARCHIVES NATIONALES DU CANADA
Division des manuscrits

AVIS

La division des manuscrits microfilme les documents d'archives pour empêcher que les originaux, souvent fragiles, ne finissent par s'abîmer à l'usage et pour accroître la disponibilité de ces documents au moyen du prêt entre institutions.

Bien que ces originaux soient généralement en bon état, nous rappelons aux chercheurs que certains documents ont pâli à travers le temps, que les encres et les papiers de couleur ne se prêtent pas tous à la photographie et que certains types de documents sont difficiles à reproduire sur microfilm. La reproduction de copies négatives de photostats, souvent ne donne pas une lisibilité parfaite. A noter que certains documents ont dû être microfilmés en plusieurs sections étant donné leur format. Les Archives nationales du Canada se sont néammoins efforcées de reproduire toute l'information lisible et de faire mention des passages qui ne le sont pas.

Original, 1641, 1703, 1815-1969, 231.650 m. Photocopies, 1908-1950, 7.250 m. Transcripts, 1893-1950, 17.340 m. Finding Aid No. 502.

William Lyon Mackenzie King, a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie, was born in Kitchener (then Berlin), Ontario, 17 December 1874. He attended the University of Toronto (B.A., LL.B.), the University of Chicago, and Harvard University (M.A., Ph.D.). His field of study was Political Economy, with labour problems as his special interest. In 1900, he was appointed the first Deputy Minister of Labour and editor of the of the Labour Gazette. In 1908, he resigned to enter the House of Commons and in 1909 he entered the cabinet as the first Minister of Labour. He left politics after his defeat in the election of 1911 and from 1914 to 1917, he worked for the Rockefeller Foundation investigating industrial relations. He re-entered politics in 1919 after he was chosen leader of the Liberal Party. At the end of 1921, he became Prime Minister and held the post (with the exception of three months in 1926) until his party's defeat in the election of 1930.
He was Leader of the Opposition until October 1935 when the Liberals came back into power. From that time he was Prime Minister until he retired on 15 November 1948. He died 22 July 1950 at his Kingsmere estate.
The W.L. Mackenzie King Papers were deposited in the Public Archives of Canada by the terms of Mr. King's will. The papers were the property of his literary executors until they became the property of the Crown. The final transfer occurred 30 June 1977.

Public Papers.

Primary Series Correspondence, J1 Series. Original, 1889-1950, 44.700 m. (Vol. 1-447).

This series consists of the important correspondence both from the Prime Minister's Office and from Laurier House. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by author within each year, with enclosures and any replies kept together. The pages of the entire series are numbered consecutively. For the correspondence up to 1921, there are both subject and author indexes. The subject index is in four 10 cm boxes and the author index consists of index cards. The subject index is also available on microfilm reels C-4591 to C-4593. For the 1922-1942 correspondence a detailed subject and author index is available in the form of computer printouts. A detailed subject and author index for the period 1943 to 1950 is in preparation. A subject list for the entire period prepared by the biographers is available in the Political and Public Affairs Archives.

Prime Minister's Office Correspondence, J2 Series. Original, 1921-1930, 1935-1948, 52.000 m. (Vol. 1-520).

This series consists of the subject files remaining after the Primary Series correspondence was selected. A file list is available in two separate bound volumes.

General Correspondence, J3 Series. Original, 1915-1950, 15.200 m. Photocopies, 8 pages. (Vol. 1-161).

This series consists of personal letters which were kept at Laurier House. These letters were left after correspondence was selected for the Primary Series (J1), the Family Papers (J7), and the Personal Correspondence Series (J8). A file list is available in the finding aid. A more detailed author list is available in the Political and Public Affairs Archives.

Memoranda, notes and some correspondence are found in this series, arranged in subject files within four chronological periods (1887-1921, 1922-1932, 1933-1939 and 1940-1950), with additional material at the end. A complete file list is available in a separate bound finding aid and on microfiche.

Originaux, 1641, 1703, 1815-1969. 231.65 m. Photocopies, 1908-1950. 7.25 m. Transcriptions, 1893-1950. 17.34 m. Instrument de recherche no 502.

William Lyon Mackenzie King, petit-fils de William Lyon Mackenzie, est né à Kitchener (alors Berlin), Ontario, le 17 décembre 1874. Il étudie aux universités de Toronto (B.A., LL.B.), de Chicago et Harvard (M.A., Ph.D). Il se spécialise en économie politique et s'intéresse particulièrement aux problèmes ouvriers. En 1900, il est nommé premier sous-ministre du Travail et rédacteur de la Gazette du travail. Il démissionne en 1908 pour entrer à la Chambre des communes; en 1909, il devient le premier ministre du Travail. Il quitte la politique après sa défaite aux élections de 1911 et de 1914 à 1917, il étudie les relations industrielles à la Rockefeller Foundation. Il revient à la politique en 1919 après avoir été élu chef du parti Libéral. En 1921, il devient premier ministre et conserve ce poste (sauf pour quelques mois en 1926) jusqu'à la défaite de son parti aux élections de 1930. Il est chef de l'Opposition jusqu'à la reprise du pouvoir par les Libéraux en 1935. Il réintègre alors son poste de premier ministre qu'il conservera jusqu'à sa retraite en novembre 1948. Il meurt le 22 juillet 1950 dans son domaine de Kingsmere.

Les papiers W.L. Mackenzie King furent déposés aux Archives publiques du Canada conformément au testament de M. King. Les papiers sont demeurés la propriété de ses exécuteurs littéraires jusqu'au 22 juillet 1975, date à laquelle ils sont devenus celle de la Couronne.

Les instruments de recherche des papiers King ne sont pas encore terminés. La description de chaque série comprend une note explicative sur son (ses) instrument(s) de recherche. Consultez les archives des premiers ministres pour les instrument de recherche en préparation.

Les séries suivantes sont disponibles sur microformes: Première série de correspondance (J1), Mémoires et notes (J4) 1887-1939, Discours (J5) 1889-1932 et Journaux intimes (J13). L'instrument de recherche de chacune de ces séries comprend une liste de conversion des microfilms.

Dear Billy:-

I regret very much indeed, that I was out of the City when your mother, Mrs. Grace Mackenzie King, died recently here. You may well be proud of the splendid record your mother made here. She was beloved by every Member here. Her father was an old friend of mine whom I valued very much.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

I see a suggestion that you should have a seat in Quebec. This seems to me an excellent idea and possibly the same provision might be made for Mr. Stewart. I wish I could get from you a view of the general situation, and I should like very much to talk it over with you. There are many things I would like to say that could not be conveniently said in a letter. In the meantime you have my best wishes for success in your public career.

My dear, dear Rex,

As I write, you are at the Church of St Andrew where your loved one, fair and noble daughter of good Scottish stock, worshipped the God of her fathers and the God of the days to be. I am beside you, with those gathered there under the shadow of a common loss yet in quietness and confidence of soul to pay the last solemn and tender offices of faith and love. With you I look beyond the things that death and the grave seem to do to that Home to which our Father calls us one by one to be with Him forever in peace joy and higher service.

able to confide in you there among the first, and know you will understand how impossible it is for me to go to Toronto, much as I long to be with you at this hour. Some time soon we must meet, and exchange ideas as to our service in this momentous age. I trust you will be guided, and you know you have my affectionate interest.

Louise joins me in sincerest and tenderest sympathy, hoping the wreath we ordered arrived in good order. In reverent affection for the dear one at Rest, and in faith and hope,

Ever affectionately yours
George

When all else seems to go, the Communion of Saints abides to inspire us with that faith and patience that was theirs; for "they without us shall not be made perfect": "they have labored and we are entered into their labours" to carry their ideals to a higher issue in the life-spirit of Him who would have us as sons of men prove ourselves filial sons of God, by laboring to bring in the rule of Heaven on Earth.

Never can the strong and tender, forceful and gracious spirit of your noble, saintly Mother fail to touch and inspire my days: and this being so. I realize the better the sharing, sweet inspiration that abides with you.

On the 17th I was anxious to send you a line of Birthday wishes, but did not know where to find you. But you will accept them now spiritualized by this heavenly Birthday which we are celebrating in both heart & soul.

This week is momentous for us both, the most momentous week I have known since coming to Canada. St. Andrew's and St. Paul's are likely to unite, and with that in view the latter has called me to the work. Meetings last night, today and tomorrow rendered my absence from town impossible. Try as I did to be excused. Events move swiftly, and all may be a fait accompli towards the end of the year: though nothing can appear in the papers meantime. I am glad to be

THE BRIDGE OF DREAMS.

The thought of thee is like a swinging tune,
A gay and swinging tune we seem to hear;
The thought of thee is like the breeze of June
Blowing across the winter of the year!

The thought of thee is like a golden star
Set all alone within the midnight blue,—
A heaven-lit candle shining from afar
Upon the road that we are passing through.

The thought of thee is like the woods in Spring,
With silver-grey and silver-green o'er-set;
The thought of thee is what the four winds bring
Over the banks of wild-blown mignonette.

And all the music of the twilight sea
Echoes your voice in tender undertone;
The sea-gulls seem but grey-winged thoughts of thee,
Caught on the salted wind and outward blown!

* * * * * * *

God keeps the secret of His heaven well,—
Yet Azrael finds its gates, where'er they be;
And from the earth, to fields of Asphodel,
We build a bridge of dreams, and cross to thee.

VIRNA SHEARD.

My dear Mackenzie King

Twenty years and a month ago I was called upon to carry a great sorrow. Cradled in my mother's arms I learned for the first time what it was to be motherless. Every year as it comes round I think upon the mortal frame I then saw in all its loveliness, and the immortal spirit which I could then only dimly realize. Each year my own sorrow has become softened, and the memory of the one I lost has grown more precious, and I know this

My dear Billy.

My heart goes out to you in this your greatest bereavement. I know how you idolized your mother and all that she meant to you. She was a wonderful woman and everybody who knew her loved her. What a great gift she will leave in your life. She thought so much of you - you were everything to her. How unutterably much to talk to you about. If you are going up to Jennies for Christmas why not stop off on your road back. or come up & spend New years with us. Choose your own time. No one is more welcome in our house.

Wasn't there an awful landslide last Monday. No wonder you went down with the rest. However you must have made a great fight judging from all I hear. The majority against you was small in comparison to what all of the other ridings. What do you think of your old riding here. again extending to you my heart felt sympathy. believe me Billy I remain your dear affectionate friend Uncle.

feel that you have our deepest sympathy in your hour of sorrow. I would like to have been with you on Thursday, but we heard of your trouble too late, besides I am laid up with a heavy cold & am writing this now in bed. I worked hard through the election campaign, got tired & was not ready for any draught of air that might blow my way - your Mother has always meant so much to you - you will greatly miss the love she always had for you & you on your side were always so thoughtful & kind to her. You will miss not being able to bestow the tokens of love & affection - but you will always have the happy memory of knowing that she was happy through what you did. My Dear King:-

It is a melancholly pleasure for me to send you Christmas Greetings at this time. The world is full of sadness and you have had your share of cause for grief lately. You have my sincere and heartfelt sympathy in the passing of your Mother. Although I had not the pleasure, nor the honour of her personal acquaintance I have learned from others something of her grand and noble qualities; and she leaves the world poorer in consequence of her going, but richer and better because of her sojourn here. I know you will miss her very much; but in the life of sacrifice and service for others which you are following you will find an influence that will mellow grief's sharp point; and I am shure your Mother would have it so.

May the coming year be void of all cause for sorrow, and

My dear Mackenzie King

We were all grieved to hear of your mother's death. She did not long survive your father. My recollection goes back to the old days when you lived in Berlin and I had the privilege of dropping in at the old home, on my occasional business trips to your town. After your removal to Toronto, it was a pleasure to look in occasionally at your new home, where a kindly welcome awaited me from both your father and mother. The memory of their friendship and hospitality will always be treasured by me.

We all join in sincere sympathy with you and your brother and sister.

Yours faithfully
Jamesatt Coyne

Dear Dr. Harrison:

Let me send just this line by way of further acknowledgment of your note of sympathy. As one of my mother's most valued friends, being one of the few remaining who was a friend of her father, I appreciate the more the kind letter you have sent me. My mother often spoke of your visit to our home in Toronto, and of our talk at Andrew Thompson's home in Haldimand. The associations of that visit will ever be among the happiest of my recollections.

Trusting that Time and Care will deal gently with you, and with all good Wishes, Believe me, always,

Very sincerely yours,

with you in your bereavement,
It cannot say that we here know when we heard that your dear Mother had been called home. We knew that She had been weak and helpless for sometime, and there was no hope of recovery.

You know well, dear one, to be grateful now. You have much to be thankful for in connection with her passing away. You have the comfort of the Christian hope that she is now with the Saviour whom She loved and served on earth. She had reached the age when this change must be expected, and it will always be a comfort and satisfaction to you that did so much to comfort and brighten her life.

Your Father & Mother were true friends of ours, and they both did very much

Dear Mrs. Lindsay

I thank you for your kind letter of Dec. 31st, and for the sympathy which it expresses. Your dear Mother's passing away was a great shock to us all, and we shall miss her very much indeed. She was a most remarkable woman, and I am glad to have had the opportunity of knowing her as well as I did. I am sure that you will find much comfort in the thought that you were able to do so much for her in her declining years, and that you were with her at the last. SAFELY HOME!

I AM Home in heaven, dear ones:
Oh so happy and so bright!
There is perfect joy and beauty
In this everlasting light.

All the pain and grief are over;
Every restless tossing passed;
I am now at peace for ever,
Safely Home in heaven at last!

Did you wonder I so calmly
Trod the valley of the shade?
Ah! but Jesus' love illumined
Every dark and fearful glade.

And He came Himself to meet me
In that way so hard to tread;
And with Jesus' arm to lean on,
Could I have one doubt or dread?

Then you must not grieve so sorely,
For I love you dearly still:
Try to look beyond earth's shadows,
Pray to trust our Father's will.

There is work still waiting for you,
So you must not idly stand;
Do it now, while life remaineth,—
You shall rest in Jesus' land.

When that work is all completed
He will gently call you Home:
Oh the rapture of that meeting!
Oh the joy to see you come!

Dearest Love.

Words fail me to express my deepest sympathy with you in your great sorrow. I am grieved beyond measure to learn of the death of your dear sister Isabel. Her gentle and unselfish life was an inspiration to all who knew her, and her memory will be a benediction. I am glad that you were with her during the last days of her illness, and that you were able to be of some comfort to her. I feel sure that she knew how much you loved her, and how much you will miss her. Her children will also feel her loss keenly, but they will have the memory of a beautiful mother to live for, and to cherish. Her life was a noble one, and her influence will live on in the lives of those who knew her.

Yours affectionately,

W. L. Mackenzie King

Dear Sir,

Please excuse this liberty in addressing you. My name is Mrs. King, and I am a widow with a young family. I have a large amount of correspondence in connection with my late husband's estate, and I am desirous of having it in order as soon as possible. I am also desirous of securing a position as typewriter, and would be grateful if you could inform me if you have a vacancy in your office.

Yours truly,

Dear Mr. King

I have kept aware of you and of your mother through the last months, & write just to say I can truly & deeply sympathise with you in your mothers death -

One cannot put in words what it means - but it seemed to me when my mother died that if in the hereafter we recognise anyone or live in communion with anyone it will be with our mothers -

I recognise that this Christmas season is not in any case what we have grown up to feel as Christmas - but I realize that it has a deeper sadness to you than to others - & I sympathise with you.

Yours very sincerely

Dear Mr. King,-

My wife had previously informed me of the serious illness of your mother, whose loss you are now called upon to deplore. Please receive my sincerest sympathies in the sorrow which the loss of a mother, and especially a good mother, always involves.

My own mother passed away when I was three years of age and I have always felt the loss. You have had a longer companionship and therefore, in one sense, the bereavement is all the greater.

With sincerest sympathy,

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King

I received your letter of the 1st Dec. and was glad to hear from you. I am sorry to say that I have not been well since Isabel died. I have had a severe attack of Influenza and Pneumonia and am only now getting about. I have had a terrible time with my eyes, and have had to have them treated by a specialist. I am now wearing glasses. I have had a letter from Mr. Mackenzie, and he tells me that he has received a letter from you. I am sending you a photograph of Isabel which I hope you will like. I am sending it to Ottawa as I do not know your address.

Dear Mr. King

At the time of your Mother's death you were so much engaged with other matters that I hesitated to encroach on your time & thoughts you were then on my mind knowing what your dear Mother was to you - at this late date, may I offer you my warmest sympathy.

You are to her what not a great many sons are to a Mother & you have this knowledge to console you in your sadness & it will be a happy memory to you through life - & I hope, as a consequence, "your days may be long in the life"

With kind regards

Sincerely Yours

Maria Grant

My Dear King

Be good enough to accept the most sincere Sympathies of Mrs H. Gray & myself in the great load you have sustained in the death of your esteemed Mother. Also allow me to express our regrets at the results of the Elections particularly at your defeat in South York, it could not of well been otherwise with the cards stacked as they were, however you have the satisfaction of going down with the honest conviction that the stand you took was in the very best interest of a united Canada, which means the best interests of our noble Empire
Be good enough to express my sentiments to Our Grand old Chief Sir Wilfrid and that not to allow the powers that Be to use him, after all the unfair criticism they have given him, to my mind one of the great faults of the Grits have been in being too easy
I am feeling considerably better, with best wishes for the future I remain

Yours Very Truly
H Gray

The printed card can quite properly express the thoughts that one should feel on such days in the dark hours of deepest affliction...

I trust that the Gulf Tide of future years may be brighter than the days of December 1917 darkened by sorrow and disappointment

Heartfelt Condolence

In the time of darkness and sorrow,
When the night seems cruelly long,
And the sunshine has lost its brightness,
And the birds have lost their song,
I would like to feel that my presence
Is felt by you, at your side,
Silent, but sympathetic,
And wide as the skies are wide,
I would like you to know I am with you—
That the words I would like to say,
Are hushed in the face of your sorrow,
And silently die away:
But my heart is speaking to your heart,
And my hand is seeking thine,—
For no one suffers alone, dear,
And the pain in your heart is mine.

My dear Mr. King:

Having just shared the Christmas cheer at my own fireside with a mother at the age of eighty-four seated beside me I feel impelled to offer to yourself my sincere sympathy on the recent loss of the mother to whom you have been so devoted these many years.

The holiday season of 1917. has many disappointing memories but none whilst life remains can be more keenly felt than the personal bereavement which called you home - would Lordly a week ago.

Something that every home of yours acquaintances on the humble walks of life have still to be grateful for is the precious companionship of the white haired mother, whose gentle tones and genial smiles daily greet them.

MOURNING.

By GERTRUDE KNEVELS

SHALL I wear mourning for my soldier dead,
I—a believer? Give me red,
Or give me royal purple for the King
At whose High Court my love is visiting.
Dress me in green for growth, for life made new;
For skies his dear feet march, dress me in blue;
In white for his white soul—robe me in gold
For all the pride that his new rank shall hold.
In earth's dim gardens blooms no hue too bright
To dress me for my love who walks in light.

MY SON.

NOT where they slay and speak of sin and doom
Is my beloved found – his radiant self
Was never born in kinship with the dust,
And the bright splendour of his heaven-girt life
Can never fail nor fade out in the dark.
The farthest star in all the universe
Touches his life more nearly than their hate;
And the envenomed darts of wickedness
Fade at the touch of the enfolding good.
He is not bound by human hopes and fears,
Nor broken on the wheel of mortal fate;
But sanctuaried in Love's infinity!

Dear Mr. Brothers:

Allow me to add this further line to the formal acknowledgment I have sent of the more than kind letter received from Mrs. Brothers and yourself. I appreciate much more deeply than I can say the sym athy it so generously expresses.

You were both such constant and true friends throughout the whole political campaign that your kind words with reference to the loss of my dear mother come with a twofold significance. I shall always remember with real gratitude the generous assistance given by you from day to day throughout the campaign. It was a source of regret to me n t to have had a chance of seeing more of you and other of my friends who were so helpful in the contest; but the circumstances were not of our choosing or disposition. However, I feel that friendships have been made which Time cannot change, and I am hoping that an all-kind Providence may yet give many opportunities of renewing associations that have been made doubly precious through events that have come so quickly together.

With my kindest remembrances and best wishes to Mrs. Brothers and yourself, believe me, always,

Yours very sincerely,

W. L. MACKENZIE KING

My dear Holborn:

I have sent a formal acknowledgment of your kind note of December 23rd, but I should like to add this line just to say how deeply I appreciate the sympathy you have expressed on your own behalf and on behalf of your family. Having so recently been in your home, and having been there when the first alarming word of my mother's failing condition came, I feel as though I owed a special debt of gratitude to you all for the kind hospitality you extended, and for the kindly feeling of which your present note is but a further expression.

I was sorry not to have had a chance to visit Sutton before coming away, but I shall watch for an opportunity on some early occasion. It is my purpose to go up to Newmarket and Aurora for Friday and Saturday, to thank some of my friends there and to conclude the settlement of matters pertaining to the election, but I doubt if it will be possible for me to visit other points in this riding, much as I should like to do so.

I shall ever remember with gratitude your own strenuous and helpful part in the contest. We may have lost the day, but we have won a united and whole-hearted body of supporters of a good cause. The organization now existing must be developed, and no stone left unturned to effect a triumphal vindication of our rightful position at the next opportunity.

With kindest remembrances to Mrs. Holborn, your daughters and son, as well as to yourself, and with best wishes to all for the New Year, Believe me,

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Nottingham:

I have acknowledged in a formal way the kind note of sym athy which I have received from Mrs. Nottingham and yourself; but I should like to add this further word just to say how very deeply I appreciate the sympathy you have expressed. You were both so kind and hospitable while I was in Newmarket, that your words at this time bring an added emphasis of kindly feeling and good will. Dear Dr. Dales:

Let me add just this line to the formal acknowledgment I have sent of your kind letter, to thank you again for its generous words and the sympathy it expresses. I value much more deeply than I can say the kindly sentiments to which your letter gives expression.

It was a source of deep regret to me that I was obliged to hurry away from the Riding so quickly after the day of polling. I should like to have spent some time in the Riding to thank my many friends and supporters, and to see something of them. I had looked forward to this as one of the real compensations of the campaign. However, circumstances determined otherwise, and I am obliged therefore to convey my self for the present to a written word.

I should like to take this opportunity of thanking you particularly for your indefatigable work throughout the whole campaign. I appreciated deeply the assistance you gave in Aurora, and I shall always remember it with gratitude.

I hope our friends will develop the new organization, which was thrown so quickly and hurriedly together, and make of it a strong force for Liberalism in Aurora. There is no reason why the Liberal cause should not triumph on the next opportunity. This last contest was lost, not through weakness, but by the fraud of the franchise and the fraudulent tactics of our opponents.

Please give my kind remembrances to Mrs. Dales, whose support I also much appreciated. Again with thanks to you both for your hospitality as well as your political assistance, and with all good wishes, Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

My dear Mr. Ferguson:

I have sent a brief acknowledgment of your kind letter of sympathy. I wish, however, to add this further line just to say how very much I appreciated the words of your letter and how genuinely I feel the sympathy of yourself and Mrs. Ferguson and all your family.

The summer spent with Mother and Father at your farm will ever be among the happiest and most sacred of my memories. You were all so very kind to both Mother and Father, and the summer did them both so much good, I know that but for that little visit my mother would not have lived as long as she did.

Now that they both are gone, I feel doubly grateful that we were all privileged to share together an association with North York which holds so much of past and present interest for me. My mother was a living link between the contests of the past and those of the present, and I am glad that many of my friends and supporters had the pleasure of knowing her and that as long as they are spared her name will have its place in many of the homes of the Riding.

I am not sure whether you have a photo of my mother, but in case you may not have one I am enclosing the picture of a little painting of her which was made one summer at my cottage in Kingsmere. The painting is by Forster of Toronto. I like it the best of any of the pictures I have of my mother, and I am sure it will help to recall her as you knew her to Mrs. Ferguson, the young people and yourself.

I have sent a brief acknowledgment of the kind expression of sympathy which came from you by wire to me. I should like to add just a line to thank you for your kindness in sending the telegram you did, and to say how very much I appreciated your kind thought in so doing.

I would like also to take advantage of this moment of writing you to say again how very much I appreciated all your generous effort and support during the contest. No one could have worked harder or been a more loyal supporter than you were, and I shall always remember with gratitude the zeal with which you fought on my behalf from the day the contest opened to its close. We have at least this satisfaction, which is a lasting one, that our cause was right, and that Time will more than justify our position.

Dear Mr. Cane:

I have sent a brief acknowledgment to yourself and your family of the sympathy you have all so generously expressed for me in my recent bereavement. If I have not written as I should have liked, it has been because I have realized how inadequate words are to convey the depth of the gratitude I feel.

I cannot, however, let the year slip by without sending just this further line to say that I have been touched beyond words by the many considerate thoughts and acts of yourself and all the members of your family. The telegram which came from you to me on the day of my return to Ottawa, your own presence at the service at St. Andrew's, and the wonderfully beautiful floral tributes from friends in Newmarket, were all, as it were, but "Broken light on the depths of the unspoken".

I value more greatly than I can say these marks of your great friendship. They are the more valued, knowing how recently you have all suffered a like bereavement, and knowing how keenly at this season of the year you will be experiencing the loss of one who was equally dear, and whose sweet and beautiful nature seemed to me like the sweet, beautiful nature of my own mother. While I may have seemed absorbed in my own grief, and during the contest, in its pressing necessities, I have never entered your home or been with yourself or any members of your family without feeling something of the loss which it has been yours to bear through this year. Though I have said very little, my sympathy has gone out just as strongly to you as yours has returned with the flood-tide to me.

It would be useless for me to attempt to add any word of thanks and appreciation for the constant and generous help given by you and all of your family and connection through the whole of the campaign. As you well know, it was through your expressed desire and interest that I became the candidate for the Liberals of North York some five or six years ago. I hope, notwithstanding the defeat, our friends will not regret your choice.

To me the defeat is as nothing compared to the real enjoyment of the campaign itself, and the hosts of friends it was my privilege to make. I should enter the fight again tomorrow were the present result a certainty, provided I was guaranteed all the good will and the friends I have been permitted to gain.

As I am looking forward to seeing you tomorrow or the day after, I shall not say more, but simply add my best wishes to one and all for the New Year.

Ever gratefully and sincerely yours,

In the note I sent you last night I expressed my embarrassment at not knowing to which of the many members of the Cane family I should write first. I sent you the note I did to acknowledge the beautiful wreaths which brought the sympathy of Newmarket friends to me on the day of my mother's funeral. I should like to add just this line to thank you further for the kind telegram of sympathy which came to me from you on the day of my return to Ottawa, and which I very deeply appreciated. I hope you will express to all who shared with you in this message my very sincere thanks.

As I hope to see you very soon, I shall not write more just now. Only let me add a further word of personal thanks to you for the stand you took on my side at the outset of the campaign and for the help and support given throughout its progress. I realize that had you wavered when the moment for decision came, the result, instead of being slightly adverse, might have been seriously so. I am sure you will never have cause to regret the stand you took. Already Time has begun to vindicate our position.

My dear Verne:

Amid the pressing duties of the last few days, I have not had opportunity of sending more than a brief line of acknowledgment of the kind telegram of sympathy which came from Mrs. Cane and yourself on the day of my return to Ottawa.

Let me add this line just to say how deeply touched I was by this expression of sympathy from you both. We were so very closely associated throughout the whole of the campaign, and I had so recently enjoyed the hospitality of your home, that this expression of your continued thought of me was the more genuinely appreciated. All of your family and connection, both on Mrs. Cane's side and your own, have been such loyal, helpful, and true friends that I find it very difficult to say just how very helpful your encouragement and support has been, not only during the anxieties of the campaign, but also amid my present sorrow, which followed so closely upon it. I do not believe there was anyone who gave of his time and thought and energy more willingly and generously than you did throughout the campaign. I am quite sincere when I say that I enjoyed all the trips we had together, through the pleasure of being with you. Both Mrs. Cane and yourself possess a way of radiating hopefulness and good-will; it is the secret of a glad heart, and my sincere wish is that you may both retain it through the whole of life.

With renewed expressions of my gratitude, and with all good wishes, Believe me always, dear Verne,

Dear Dr. Hutt:

I have been trying to find out from McGregor to whom I am indebted for the thought of the beautiful floral tributes which came from friends in Newmarket as an expression of sympathy to me in my bereavement, and as a tribute from her father's old riding to my dear mother, his youngest and, at the time of her death, his only surviving child. McGregor seems unwilling to impart such information as he has, but he has mentioned your name as one of two or three of the friends who spoke to him; and so I am writing just a line to say how deeply touched I was by these tributes of sympathy and affection, and how grateful I shall ever be to those to whose kindness I am indebted for them.

I could not believe that in the midst of a sorrow so great, so much comfort and joy could be brought as the sight of these tokens of affectionate remembrance brought to my heart on the day of my mother's burial. I hope you will accept for yourself, and help to convey to all the other friends associated in this remembrance, my most heartfelt thanks. The memories of that sad day will never come to my mind without the recollection also of this evidence of loyal and generous friendship.

May I in sending this word just add a line of genuine thanks to you for all your help during the campaign. I know how energetic and helpful you were in many directions, and I shall never forget your good-will and efforts from the commencement of the campaign to its close.

My dear Robertson:

I have been at a loss to know to whom I should write to express my thanks for the beautiful floral tributes which came from friends in Newmarket on the day of my mother's funeral. Thus far I have been able to obtain the names of only one or two to whose kind thought I owe this generous expression of sympathy and affection. Your name is among the number, and I am therefore writing just to say how deeply grateful I feel to you, and also to ask if you will be so kind as to express to others associated with you my sincere gratitude for their goodness.

I was touched more deeply by these expressions of sympathetic and affectionate remembrance than I can begin to say, and I shall ever remember the glow of comfort and cheer they brought into my heart amidst the great sorrow that possessed it at the time.

Dear Mr. Widdifield:

I have already sent a brief acknowledgment of your kind word of sympathy to me in the loss of my mother. I wish, however, to add just a line to thank you for what you say in the same letter of the outcome of the elections and your kind personal references to my own part in the campaign.

I am sure we were right in the position taken, and I think every day will help to vindicate our stand. It is better to be defeated in a just cause than to win by methods which are unfair in any cause. So far as North York is concerned, the triumph, I fear, was one for corrupt electoral machinery and methods rather than for principle. This must react sooner or later. Meanwhile, I hope our forces will keep together and make victory certain when the next appeal to the people comes.

My Dear Mr King

I was shocked to read yesterday morning (& also to see the picture of your mother in the paper) of the death of your mother. Although I knew when last I saw her how very ill she was, & no hope of her recovery, I had not seen nor heard anything I had thought she had rallied somewhat. I know full well what it means to you, as you have always been so devoted to her, & she in turn worshipped you. Her Willie was her world, & she was I am sure an inspiration to you in your work & ambitions. It does not make any difference about age, whenever they are taken from us it is a shock, & takes so much out of us. You have my sincerest sympathy. You have given father & mother within a very short time of each other, & the passing on of a life leaves a vacancy in our lives here whatever

Dear Rex ——

Have just heard through letters from home of your sad news. Even though you were prepared for the inevitable, the realization of death is always a shock especially when it touches one we dearly love. climbed the ladder from the lowest rung (therefore deserving of great credit) was here for dinner sometime ago and while discussing the labour question he remarked (not knowing that I knew you) that although he had never met the Hon. W. King he considered he was a man who had done a great service to his Country. I believe he added that there was no such a thing as a system of labour until you took over the Dept. of Labour. This needs is not surprising to me but pleasing. It is nice to hear ones praises being well spoken of. This anecdote is not meant to flatter you, but you know I always hold that just praise is only encouragement to continue the good work.

You have had many worries and troubles during 1917 but I do hope that 1918 will prove a better friend.

Dear Mr. King

I want to express my heartfelt sympathy with you in your loss, I fear that my message will reach you so late that it will revive sad memories but you will forgive me that I had the privilege of knowing your mother and of admiring her gentle nature and must express my own personal sorrow.

One of the sad sides of the war is that it has kept me from my friends in Canada for so long but if when I come over which I hope will not be so long as now seems likely I can do anything to your mothers' medallion for you it will be a pleasure to me to do so.

Yours sincerely.

The sad news reached me the day before yesterday through Mother. Jo's Father from Ottawa arrived the day before telling me how very ill your Mother was & how she really prayed that she might be at Rest.

I am sure you felt the same for I knew that there were my feelings before Father was taken, but it makes the loneliness now the less desolate.

For you my heart goes out in deepest sympathy - the exquisite joy of that Mother's love was your very life, & I remember your once saying to me that you never wanted to see the day when

I am not going to tell you that time helps, it doesn't, except to make one feel one is getting nearer to the end of one's own life which as far as I am concerned is all I want now. I thought when my father went I never could believe in the goodness of One who helps us in time of woe and trouble, I tried and tried but alas this summer when my baby girl came and went the same day. I knew I couldn't if you have a stronger faith you are a Christian, I don't know whether I am or not. I have been through so much suffering in the last year. I am broken, and I don't feel as if I could stand any more, why do such things happen why are they allowed, oh I know how you suffer. I know the longings and yearnings that at times drive one almost to insanity, but it is rest and peace for those who go, it is hard for those who stay, think of in your case, the joyful reunion, of you

My dear friend, your telegramme reached me when I was full of thoughts of you; I hope the essence of some of them reached you, for at a time like this, when the great parting makes the world seem empty and cold, the only thing that helps is the warm affection and understanding to go to Cleveland to a wedding but I shall be at home again by the first of the year, if not sooner. Will you come down?

Florence and Jim are both so watched that they are not to be in town this winter. I am sending your sad tidings on, and you will doubtless hear from them. They shared as I did, the brightening her radiance diffused.

For weeks I could not feel that my Mother had gone. She seemed so much with me; she had such a definite place in my life and thoughts. It was very beautiful. I hope you are passing through a similar experience.

But after all I am sure you must feel as I did that you would not bring the dear little woman back if you could. She is free now - free from pain and weakness and the limitations that were growing upon her. And she is happy - with your Father, your sister, but missing you

Thank god for our Mothers and for the many years they

Dear Mr King

Only yesterday
I heard of the great sorrow that has come to you, my heart ached for you, for I have been privileged to understand just what your dear Mother meant to you. each,
as it were, living for the other. She has filled my so proud of you at that you were doing and you so proud of her at what she had done.

But you should not grieve, except for the separation from your dear self.
Now you have to realize what life means today. the merciful. the sorrow and the suffering on every side. your heart should be filled with gladness and a new peace should come realizing that your mother is now beyond all this. you should see her young again in the prime of her beautiful life, almost hear her whisper do not grieve

Dear Mr King:

Through the papers you sent me I have just learned this morning of the very great sorrow that has come to you. I realize that in spite of your mother's long illness and the anxiety you have for this last year — when the end comes - it is a great shock - that you will be alone in Perhaps you will be returning to Toronto soon - I hope so. With most sincere sympathy and very kind regards

My dear Mr. King,

I am so very very sorry to hear of the overwhelming sorrow that has come to you, in the death of your mother. For I realize, how truly devoted you were to her, and, that the companionship and sympathy that have meant so much to you while you were together, mean that her loss is crushing to you now. With all my heart I sympathize with you. But the influence of her beautiful life will be, with you always, and, the thought of what you were to her, must comfort you. I think to often of the verse, in connection with my own mother, "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace". Life has never been the same for me, since she died, but I am grateful. Every day

Dear Friend:

You are constantly in our thoughts and although I need not express to you again our sympathy I am unwilling that the year end without special assurance that we not only sympathize with you, but personally share your sorrow

You hope your work and you will carry it steadily and strongly without the sunshine of your Mother's presence; but I shrink from thinking of your heart aches and longings for her.

I have never forgotten how beautifully your Mother often spoke of what you had been to her, of what you had meant in her life and of her glowing admiration and love for you whenever she referred intimately to your place in her life. The thought of the joy your gave her will always remain one of your profoundest satisfactions, and for that you have cause for deep thankfulness.

In fact, you have so much to be thankful for in relation to your lovely Mother that there can be no bitterness in your sorrow and bitterness is one of the heaviest burdens we have to carry. So, in spite of the loss to you and to us who loved her so dearly, I can also send you warm felicitations, as you have been more than ordinarily blessed and you know she is not lost but only "just away."

With affectionate regards from

We did not know at Christmas time about your great bereavement; so we sent you the card of greeting. When we received your letter a few days ago which brought us such a sad news we were indeed greatly surprised and the whole family were so sad. We could easily imagine how sorrowful & lonesome you must be because you loved your mother so deeply and your mother regarded you as her only consolation in the whole world in her late declining age. She was indeed such sweet and tender lady loving and loved by all who ever came across her. As I write thus we really feel as if we have some spiritual communion with her, her spirit as if hovering over us.

My Very Dear Friend:-

The paper which you sent me with the account of your blessed mother's death was received yesterday. I don't know where it has been all this time, as you must know I would have written you immediately.

There are no words to comfort a heartbroken as yours is, but you know that my hands would press yours in deepest sympathy, because I think you were just the son to your mother that my son is to me. Once in a long long time that relationship comes and when it is broken or severed by death there is no agony like it, because we only have one mother and, if she has loved us as your mother has loved you, nothing can ever take that place.

I know you are heartbroken, but I know you will do just as we all have to do - go on and live with our memories, but that takes years to do. I know for many many years to come that ache in your heart will be just as it is today, but bye and bye you will find that time has been that wonderful friend and smoothed the terror all away and left something beautiful for you to sit with all by yourself. I loved my husband, just as I know you must love your mother, because he was everything in the world to me and for nine years it seemed to me I never could be happy again. I've kept all the anniversaries a sacred thing for 22 years, but do you know the 3rd of December this year I forgot until the next day, it was the day my husband died and I was perfectly astonished to think that anything in this world could interest me enough to take my mind away from the 3rd of December, but you see how good time has been, because that was the one day of days that I suffered most. But it took 22 years to make me come to that knowledge.

I wonder if you can't come to Chicago before I leave for California. I should love to see you. Or possibly you could meet me in New York. I shall be there some time between the 11th and 22nd of January. If you write me, let me know if there is a possibility of your coming and I could let you know the exact date. I should love to talk with you for a little while and now I am going to ask a great favor of you. The face of your beautiful mother haunts me and I wonder if you will do me the honor of sending me a copy of the picture which is in the paper. I shall love it and now dear friend, if you feel inclined to sit down and write to me, I will write you soon again.

My dear Mr. King:

I have just learned of the death of your mother. While I have no thought that any words of mine can lighten the sorrow you must feel at such a bereavement, I want you to know that I am thinking of you with sincere sympathy.

I know that your mother must have felt a lively interest

Dear Rex,-

A thousand thanks for your cablegram telling us that you had arrived safely over there. We have been expecting that cable for some days, but were getting anxious. We are glad that you had a good trip and that you are well. Mother is very busy packing up and getting ready to leave for Toronto on the 15th. She will be glad to get away from the heat and dust of Lexington, but will be sorry to leave her many friends here. Mary Pickett is also leaving for Toronto on the 15th. Mother will be glad to have her company on the journey. Mary has been very kind to Mother and has been a great help to her. Mother has been very busy with her packing and has had little time for anything else. She has been very well and has enjoyed her stay here very much. She will be glad to get back to Toronto and to see her friends there. Mary Pickett's husband is also in the army and is stationed at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky. The loss of a beloved parent makes a gap in one's life which can never be filled, and whatever consolation you must get from the fact of knowing that your care and affection made the last months of your mother's life full of happiness, still the ache is always there and remains so. From the paper announcement I see that Mrs. Lay was with her at the end and I know how much your mother must have appreciated having you both with her, and I hope she passed away happily and free from pain.

It will be about two years ago from now that I first knew your parents and I remember the first

An editorial from the Toronto "Telegram" of December 21, 1917:

THE DAUGHTER OF WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE.

"Death has emptied the homes in which the late Mrs. Grace Mackenzie King was welcomed in her girlhood and womanhood, and death has stilled many of the hearts that loved and honored the last surviving daughter of William Lyon Mackenzie.

"A company of sincere, sorrowing and sympathetic friends were joined in sorrow to the mourners who were united by the nearest and dearest ties of family and kindred to the widow of the late John King, K.C., and to the mother of Hon. W. L. M. King.

"As a daughter, Mrs. Grace Mackenzie King was related to the family of a national leader who was idolized by his followers and execrated by his foes; as a wife, to the activities of a distinguished member of the Ontario bar; and as a mother, to the eminence of a son who served as a Cabinet Minister and fought as the first lieutenant of his party's leader. The daughter of William Lyon Mackenzie, the wife of John King, K.C., and the mother of Hon. W. L. M. King was recognized by many friends and admirers as a strong, true, and attractive personality in her own right. Sympathy is offered to Hon. W. L. M. King and other mourners from all the survivors in the great company of friends that the late Mrs. Grace Mackenzie King made and kept."

MRS.JOHN KING,REBEL DAUGHTER,DEAD IN OTTAWA.

Mother of Denver Doctor,Whose Grandfather Was Canadian Patriot.

Word has been received in Denver by Dr.D.Macdougall King,928 Olive street,of the death of his mother,Mrs. John King,at Ottawa,Canada.

Interest in the death of Mrs.King to Canadians lives in Colorado lies in the fact that she was the daughter of William Lyon MacKenzie,instigator of the Canadian rebellion of 1837-1838,whereby a constitutional government was procured for the Dominion and the establishment of a state church prevented. Also she was the mother of the Hon.William Lyon MacKenzie King,who drafted the plan whereby the miners on Rockfeller's properties came to an agreement with their employers and have worked in peace and harmony since the days following Ludlow.

As a girl,Mrs.King was rushed,with her father,across the Canadian border into New York,and there she lived during those years that a price of $5000 was fixed on her father's head and until an armesty was granted whereby MacKenzie ~~the revered patriot and citizen~~ the rebel, was allowed to return in safety to his home and become MacKenzie,the revered patriot and citizen,and ultimately was elected mayor of Toronto and to parliament.

That the MacKenzies and Kings have played a large and useful part in the history of Canada is demonstrated by the notices printed on the death of Mrs.King,evincing the debt owed by lovers of freedom to her father,Mac Kenzie the rebel,and to her son,the economist.

In Mrs.King's former residence in Grange Road there could be seen a copy of the proclamation of the offer of a money reward for the apprehension of her father, who if he had been captured,would have,no doubt shared the fate of his colleagues,Lount and Matthews,under the quasi military regime of Sir George Arthurs,then governor of Upper Canada.

The Denver Post,Jan'y.2,1918.

WHEREAS the late Isabel Christina Grace King of Toronto, Spinster, died on the fourth day of April A.D.1915, at Toronto, and left her surviving her father the undersigned John King, her mother the undersigned Isabel Grace King, her brothers the undersigned William Lyon Mackenzie King and Dougald McDougall King, and her sister the undersigned Janet Lindsey Lay, wife of Lay of Walkerton, Ontario;

AND WHEREAS the undersigned had at her credit in the Savings Bank Department, Toronto Branch, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the sum of $410.30;

AND WHEREAS the undersigned represent that the deceased owed no debts and had no estate other than personal effects and the said moneys;

AND WHEREAS the undersigned are desirous of avoiding the necessity of applying for letters of administration to the estate of the deceased, and of applying the said moneys in the ways in which the undersigned believe the deceased would wish, and they desire the Canadian Bank of Commerce to waive the taking out of letters of administration and to pay over the said moneys to the said William Lyon Mackenzie King;

AND WHEREAS the undersigned also represent and state that in their belief the deceased died intestate, search having been made for a Will in all places where it is likely that any Will would have been found if such existed;

AND WHEREAS the said Bank are willing to comply

I, John King, of the city of Toronto, in the County of York, in the Province of Ontario, King's Counsel, solemnly, sincerely and truly declare as follows:

I was born as I have good reason to believe and do verily believe, on the fifteenth day of September, Eighteen hundred and forty-three, at the said city of Toronto; and I have seen a record of the fact contained in a military bible belonging to my late father, John King, which has passed out of the possession of my family and the present whereabouts of which is unknown to me; the said entry was to the best of my knowledge, recollection and belief in the following words, namely: "John King, son of the late John King, born 15 September, 1843, at Toronto." This entry was contained in the fly leaf of the said bible along with some other entries relating to members of our family. I am satisfied, from conversations I had with my mother, that the said entry is a true entry of the date and place of my birth.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing it to be true and knowing that it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath and by virtue of "The Canada Evidence Act,1893".

John King

Solemnly declared before me at Walkerton in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario this 2nd day of September A.D. 1915.

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: that I, ISOBEL GRACE MACKENZIE KING, of the CITY OF TORONTO, in the COUNTY OF YORK, WIDOW, do hereby constitute and appoint WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING, of the CITY OF OTTAWA, in the COUNTY OF CARLETON, DIRECTOR OF THE INVESTIGATION OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS UNDER THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION, my true and lawful Attorney for me, and in my name, place and stead, for my sole use and benefit, to do and execute all or any of the following acts, deeds or things, that is to say:-

1. To demand, sue for, enforce payment of, receive and give discharges for all moneys, securities for moneys, debts, stocks, shares and other personal estate now belonging or hereafter to belong to me.

2. To commence, carry on or defend all actions and other proceedings touching my estate, or any part thereof, or touching anything in which I or my estate may be in anywise concerned.

3. To settle, compromise or submit to arbitration all accounts, claims and disputes between me and any other persons.

4. To accept the transfer of any stocks, funds, shares, annuities and other securities which shall or may at any time hereafter be transferred to me.

5. To invest any of my moneys in such manner, at such rate of interest and upon such securities as my Attorney shall in his absolute discretion think fit, and from time to time to vary the said investments, or any of them, and in the meantime, and pending any such investment as aforesaid, to deposit the said moneys, or any part thereof, with any bank or bankers to whom my Attorney shall think fit to entrust the same.

6. Out of such moneys to pay any such calls upon shares or other expenses in respect of any part of my said estate as my Attorney shall think fit, and to receive the dividends, interest and income arising from any stocks, shares, or other estate now or hereafter belonging to me.

7. To vote at meetings of any companies or otherwise to act as my Attorney or proxy in respect of any stocks, shares, or other investments now held or which may hereafter be acquired by me therein.

8. To carry into effect and perform all agreements entered into by me with any other person.

9. For the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, to accept and sign my name to any cheques, notes, bills of exchange, dividend or interest warrants or other instruments payable to me, and to sign my name and execute on my behalf all contracts, transfers, assignments, deeds and instruments whatsoever.

10. To purchase, sell, assign, transfer and discharge either partially or wholly any mortgages either on personal or real property, and to exercise any power of sale or other powers therein contained, of any mortgages which now belong or shall hereafter belong to me.

11. To purchase, rent, sell, exchange, mortgage, lease, surrender, manage and in every way deal with real estate and any interest thereon and to execute and deliver deeds, mortgages, leases, assignments, surrenders and other instruments.

12. Generally to act in relation to my estate and to the premises as fully and effectually in all respects as I myself could do, and whether I am concerned or interested solely or jointly with any other person or persons.

AND I hereby undertake to ratify everything which my Attorney or any substitute or substitutes or agent or agents appointed by him under the power in that behalf hereinbefore

In the Matter of the Estate of John King, deceased.

I, GEORGE GOLDWIN SMITH LINDSEY, of

of the City of Toronto, in the County of York, King's Counsel,

Do Solemnly Declare that

It is not the intention of the beneficiaries under the Will of the late John King to take out probate of the same because the estate is not of sufficient value to justify the expense.

A thorough search has been made for other Wills and none have been found, and I believe the writing hereto annexed to be a true copy of the last Will and Testament of the said John King.

And I Make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing it to be true and knowing that it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath and by virtue of the CANADA EVIDENCE ACT.

NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

Applications regarding Gas to be made at the office of the Company.

Parties about to leave premises or discontinue the use of the Gas, must give notice at the office of the Company, as they will be held accountable for all Gas used on the premises until such notice has been received at the Office.

If a meter ceases to register, the account will be based on the average of another meter, or on the quantity of Gas used in a corresponding period.

All Gas Company's employees authorized to enter consumers' premises, wear badges and uniform caps.

GAS APPLIANCE BRANCH

Consumers are invited to visit the Company's Gas Appliance Branch, Nos. 12 and 14 Adelaide Street West, where complete lines of modern gas appliances are exhibited at reasonable prices.

Telephone Adelaide 2180

LEARN TO READ YOUR METER

It is very simple

For example: Dial "A" (see illustration) reads "8" because the index has not yet reached nine. Dial "B" reads six for a like reason, and Dial "C" reads "9." Put down these three figures, namely, "869," and add two ciphers, because the figures on the right hand Dial represent hundreds. Thus you have 86,900 cubic feet as the present reading. Deduct from this the largest number on previous gas bill, say 84,500, and you have the number of cubic feet you must now pay for, or 2,400. Multiply this number by the price per thousand cubic feet and you obtain the proper amount of your gas bill.

the girls could not bring them in that evening & they are making exercises to get the amount up to $100 - we are giving them another week. If we succeed the Girls Own Club will have given $500 - to the relief of the Soldiers since the beginning of the War. I was more than delighted to hear that you are feeling ever so much better Kings more always did agree with you. I suppose you have not made any plans for the summer yet - We are having most delightful weather it is simply perfect to-day Toronto is very quiet so many out of town but they will soon be all returning now quickly the time goes. I am going to drive to Jane So must stop Kindly remember me to Willie & thank him for the dollar for Helen's patients with heaps of love to you dear M. King

MEMORANDUM FOR MAX OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN JENNIE AND MYSELF RESPECTING DIVISION OF MOTHER'S ESTATE.

I went up to Walkerton on December 10, and Jennie and I spent most of the morning of December 11 going over together the inventory of the articles belonging to Mother's estate. Most of the articles were of a kind which neither of us cared particularly to have, their possession necessitating cost of moving, storage, or the occupying of space more valuable for other uses. To this class belonged the dining room and bed room furniture, most of the books that are stored, the piano, some of the cheaper pictures, the sewing machine, many of the kitchen belongings, the cheaper china, cutlery, hangings, etc.

I felt that to attempt to sell these articles would be to sacrifice them entirely, and expressed a willingness to take over, as part of your share and my own, any that Jennie did not wish to have, and keep them in storage pending such possible use of them as the future might present.

The articles which we both most prized, and which we felt would also be most prized by you, were those that were not only valuable in themselves but had association with Father's and Mother's life, as, for example, the drawing room furniture, the portraits and best paintings and steel engravings, the best silver, Mother's hand-painted china, some of the other china, and dresden figures belonging to Mother.

REPEAT
REPETITION

The drawing room furniture we thought should be divided, the sofa going to one, an arm chair and ladies' chair to another, and the remaining chairs to the third. Of this division, Jennie preferred the sofa. As regards the portraits, paintings, and silver, we thought that the oil portraits of Father and of the grandparents should go to one, the marked silver service in oak case to another, and the best oil paintings to the third. Of this division, Jennie thought that the oil portraits ought to come to me, and that she would prefer the silver, leaving the other best oil paintings, ~~with miscellaneous silver~~, to you. Of the silver covers for dishes, of which there are six, it was thought they should be evenly divided, the largest and smallest going to one, and the others divided between you and me. Jennie expressed her preference for the largest and smallest. Of the china, the most prized was the pink and white tea set (a wedding gift); fruit dishes, hand painted by Mother; and the crown derby dishes, together with some few other dishes. Of this grouping, Jennie preferred the pink and white tea set, leaving the other two groupings to be divided between you and me. A large hand-painted china dish Jennie wished to have; also an ordinary dinner set of china, to be offset by a division of other remaining china between you and me. Of the glass ware, Jennie expressed a preference for the ice cream plates, leaving the glass custard cups and finger bowls, as one lot, to offset the plates, and other glass for the third division. Of the books, there are sets of Dickens, De Quincey, and Thackeray, which we thought should be set off against each other, the Dickens set going to Jennie. Of the steel engravings, Jennie expressed a preference for the Highland picture, "Going to Market"; the other best engravings to be divided. Of Mother's drawings, Jennie wished the one of the goats, the one of the horse and head to go to you, and the dog's head to me. Against a high roll chair desired by Jennie, we set off a prieu dieu and one other chair, for me, and walnut table for you. Against oak hall table and two chairs, which Jennie wished, we set off card table and marley bronze figures for me, and brass fender, and fire irons for you. Against such miscellaneous articles as fender stool, round foot stool, one square footstool, one bronze flower pot, one metal vase, one white vase, vase with parrot Dresden figures, piano bench and Ottoman, Vernon gallery pictures (book), wicker desk and chair, which Jennie expressed a desire to have, were set off wicker verandah sofa and table and similar small articles in equal quantities for you and me. Jennie thought she could make use of the curtains, and that ~~corresponding to th~~ I might be able to make use of the carpets or rugs. Something corresponding to this should go to you. Of the kitchen belongings, we thought a division in three might be made, Jennie to get glass jars amongst other things. Both Jennie and I have a few things that were sent to Walkerton and Ottawa respectively at the time we broke up house on Grange Road, or subsequently when the house on Avenue Road was closed. These we thought might be retained. They include, in Jennie's case, all of Mother's music, her dresses, laces, and what few personal pins or little jewellery she possessed, as well as dressing table articles, such as brush and comb, etc. In my case, they include the yellow dressing table china in Mother's room, the Greek slave clocks and a few dishes. To offset some of these personal belongings, which we felt Mother would wish Jennie to have, I am to receive Father's diplomas and testimonials of one kind or another, which he would probably have wished me to have. As you have not shared in these things beyond Father's gold watch and chain and crest, and the bronze Napoleon carried off some time ago, an equivalent of these things is to be allotted you out of belongings in storage, and not mentioned here. The bed linen and other linen we thought should be evenly divided between the three of us; also that there might be an allotment of the smaller pictures.

I think the money valuation of $1000 placed on your share is about right, when due allowance is made for what would of necessity have to be deducted in shipping or selling the articles; but I do not think it is a cent too much, and I am very glad indeed to make the purchase at this figure as agreed upon. Only I am anxious that you should have, out of what I thus purchase, any of the things you may feel you would like to have. I can arrange to get them out to you somehow at some later time.

If it were agreeable to Jennie, and as a means of avoiding the appearance of my receiving more than my share by the residue, so to speak, being left to me to dispose of, I should be glad to give you a receipt for $500.00 additional, to cover all the remaining articles, this $500.00 to represent a valuation of $750 on what remains, or a share the equivalent of $250 each. I do not think the articles not wanted particularly by any of us and omitted from the above list would bring this amount; but they may be worth it or more. However, if Jennie were agreeable that her share of what is left over should come to me on consideration of my giving you a receipt for $500.00, in addition to the receipt for $1000 already given, to represent the $250 share to which she would thus be entitled and $250 to which you would thus be entitled, I shall be very glad to place this valuation on the balance as a means of closing up everything in a way that will indicate a fair intention and fair play all round. I should not wish to make a purchase of either your share or Jennie's of the "left overs", save to close matters up, and if it meant a fresh cash payment would not suggest or offer it. Inasmuch, however, as you have taken the noble means you have of paying back advances made during your illness from the share of the estate that is rightfully yours, I feel sure that Jennie will feel pleased to contribute in this way to a final settlement of everything.

Till ready to remove, the articles are to be kept in storage at my expense: $7.50 a month, with insurance paid since September of this year of $32.00, also at my expense.

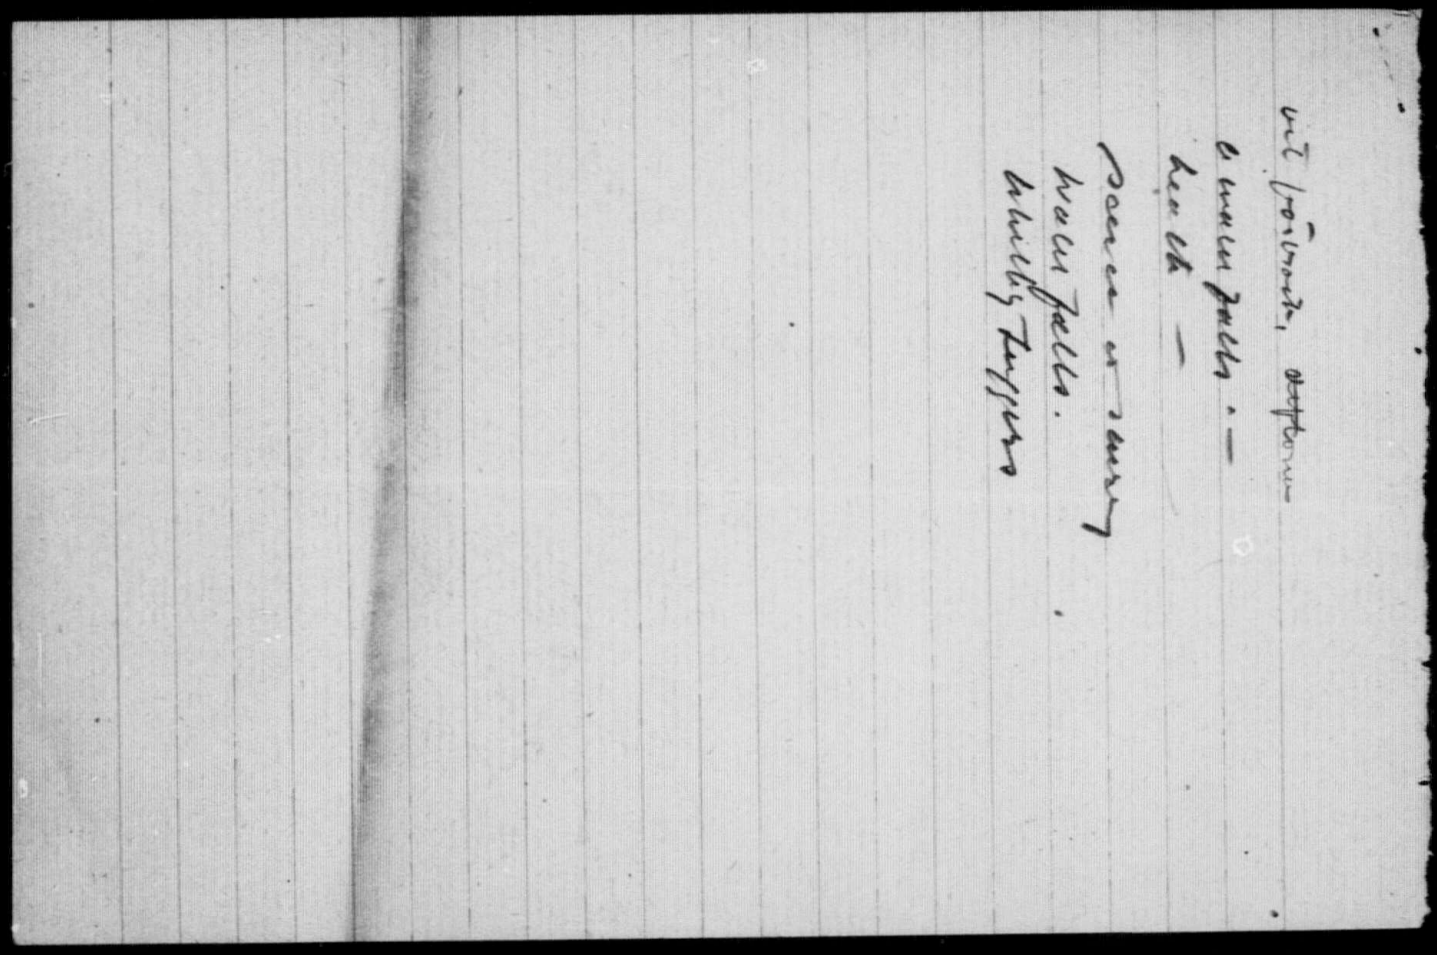

I should like, ~~also~~ as a further evidence of my wish to have both you and Jennie assured of my intentions at the time of undertaking the trust reposed in me by Mother and Father, to say that from the things purchased from you I shall be glad to divide further with Jennie the part of the parlor suite which comes from my purchase of your share, and also the handpainted china belonging to Mother, which, notwithstanding her special desire to have, she was willing should come to me as my share in offsetting the four o'clock tea service which goes to her. I shall be glad to consider letting her have, in exchange or otherwise, any other of the articles assigned to either you or me, or in the list not assigned and left over. In any way that either of you may suggest, I shall be glad to consider any other disposition which may seem more equitable or satisfactory.

I am sending Jennie a copy of this memorandum.

Your affectionate brother,

CONDITIONS

SEC. 1. The Carrier of any of the goods herein described shall be liable for any loss thereof or damage thereto except as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. In the case of shipments from one point in Canada to another point in Canada, or where goods are shipped under a joint tariff, the Carrier issuing this bill of lading, in addition to its other liability hereunder, shall be liable for any loss, damage, or injury to such goods from which the other Carrier is not by the terms of this bill of lading relieved, caused by or resulting from the act, neglect, or default of any other Carrier to which such goods may be delivered in Canada, or under such joint tariff, or over whose line or lines such goods may pass in Canada or under such joint tariff, the onus of proving that such loss was not so caused or did not so result being upon the Carrier issuing this bill of lading. The Carrier issuing this bill of lading shall be entitled to recover from the other Carrier on whose line or lines the loss, damage, or injury to the said goods shall have been sustained the amount of such loss, damage, or injury as it may be required to pay hereunder, as may be evidenced by any receipt, judgment, or transcript thereof. Nothing in this section shall deprive the holder of this bill of lading or party entitled to the goods of any remedy or right of action which he may have against the Carrier issuing this bill of lading or any other Carrier.

SEC. 3. The Carrier shall not be liable for loss, damage, or delay to any of the goods herein described, caused by the act of God, the King's or public enemies, riots, strikes, defect, or inherent vice in the goods, or the act or default of the shipper or owner; for differences in weights of grain, seed, or other commodities caused by natural shrinkage or discrepancies in elevator weights when the elevators are not operated by the Carrier, unless the weights are evidenced by Government certificate; the authority of law or by quarantine. For loss, damage, or delay, except where cartage is to be performed by the Carrier or its agents, caused by fire occurring after forty-eight hours (exclusive of legal holidays), or in the case of bonded goods seventy-two hours (exclusive of legal holidays), after written notice of the arrival of said goods at destination or at port of export (if intended for export and not covered by a through bill of lading) has been sent or given, the Carrier's liability shall be that of warehouseman only. Except in case of negligence of the Carrier (and the burden of proving freedom from such negligence shall be on the Carrier), the Carrier shall not be liable for loss, damage, or delay occurring while the goods are stopped and held in transit upon the request of the party entitled to make such request. When in accordance with general custom, on account of the nature of the goods, or at the request of the shipper, the goods are transported in open cars, the Carrier (except in case of loss or damage by fire, in which case the liability shall be the same as though the goods had been carried in closed cars) shall be liable only for negligence, and the burden of proving freedom from such negligence shall be on the Carrier.

SEC. 4. No Carrier is bound to transport said goods by any particular train or vessel, or in time for any particular market or otherwise than as required by law, unless by specific agreement endorsed hereon. Every Carrier in case of physical necessity shall have the right to forward said goods by any railway or route between the point of shipment and the point of destination; but if such diversion be from a rail to a water route the liability of the Carrier shall be the same as though the entire carriage were by rail.

The amount of any loss or damage for which any Carrier is liable shall be computed on the basis of the value of the goods at the place and time of shipment under this bill of lading (including the freight and other charges if paid, and the duty if paid or payable and not refunded), unless a lower value has been represented in writing by the shipper or has been agreed upon or is determined by the classification or tariff upon which the rate is based, in any of which events such lower value shall be the amount to govern such computation, whether or not such loss or damage occurs from negligence.

When under the terms of the classification or special reduced tariffs, the goods are carried at owner's risk, such conditions are intended to cover only such risks as are necessarily incidental to transportation and shall not relieve the Carrier from liability for any loss, damage, or delay which may result from any negligence or omission of the Carrier, its agents or employees, and the burden of proving freedom from such negligence or omission shall be on the Carrier.

Notice of loss, damage, or delay must be made in writing to the Carrier at the point of delivery, or to the Carrier at the point of origin, within four months after delivery of the goods, or in case of failure to make delivery, then within four months after a reasonable time for delivery has elapsed. Unless notice is so given the Carrier shall not be liable.

Any Carrier or party liable on account of loss of or damage to any of said goods, on reimbursing to the insured the premiums paid in respect thereof, shall have the full benefit of any insurance that may have been effected upon or on account of said goods, so far as this shall not avoid the policies or contracts of insurance.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY OFFICE,
Montreal, 1st October, 1909.

SEC. 5. Grain in bulk consigned to a point where the Carrier has an elevator or warehouse, or where there is a public or licensed elevator or warehouse, may be there delivered and placed with other grain of the same kind and grade without respect to ownership: Provided that this shall not apply to a point of final delivery if it is otherwise expressly noted hereon, unless the grain is not promptly unloaded after written notice of arrival has been sent or given to the person named herein. Grain so delivered shall be subject to a lien for elevator charges in addition to all other charges hereunder.

SEC. 6. Goods not removed by the party entitled to receive them within forty-eight hours (exclusive of legal holidays), or in the case of bonded goods, within seventy-two hours (exclusive of legal holidays), after written notice has been sent or given, may be kept in car, station, or place of delivery or warehouse of the Carrier, subject to a reasonable charge for storage and to the Carrier's responsibility as warehouseman only, or may at the option of the Carrier (after written notice of the Carrier's intention to do so has been sent or given), be removed to and stored in a public or licensed warehouse at the cost of the owner and there held at the risk of the owner and without liability on the part of the Carrier, and subject to a lien for all freight and other lawful charges, including a reasonable charge for storage.

Goods in carloads shipped from a private siding or a station, wharf, or landing, where there is no duly authorized agent, shall be at the risk of the owner until the car is lifted or bill of lading is issued by the Carrier, and thereafter shall be at the risk of the Carrier. Goods in carloads destined to a private siding, or station, wharf, or landing, where there is no duly authorized agent, shall be at the risk of the Carrier until placed on the delivery siding.

All goods shall be subject to necessary cooperage and baling at owner's cost.

SEC. 7. No Carrier shall be bound to carry any documents, specie, or any articles of extraordinary value not specifically rated in the published classification or tariffs unless a special agreement to do so (the duty of obtaining such special agreement to be on the Carrier when the nature of such goods is disclosed herein) and a stipulated value of the articles are endorsed hereon. If such goods are carried without a special agreement and the nature of the goods is not disclosed hereon the Carrier shall not be liable for any loss or damage thereto.

SEC. 8. The owner or consignee shall pay the freight and all other lawful charges accruing on said goods, and, if required, shall pay the same before delivery. If upon inspection it is ascertained that the goods shipped are not those described in this bill of lading, the freight charges must be paid upon the goods actually shipped, with any additional penalties lawfully payable thereon.

SEC. 9. Except in case of diversion from rail to water route, which is provided for in Section 4 hereof, and except as provided hereafter, if all or any part of said goods is carried by water over any part of said route, such water carriage shall be performed subject to the liabilities, limitations, and exemptions provided by statute and to the conditions contained in this bill of lading not inconsistent with such statute or this section, and subject also to the condition that no carrier or party in possession shall be liable for any loss or damage resulting from the perils of the lake, sea, or other waters; or from explosion, bursting of boilers, or breakage of shafts not arising from the negligence of the Carrier, or from any latent defect in hull, machinery, or appurtenances; or from collision, stranding, or other accidents of navigation or from prolongation of the voyage. And any vessel carrying any or all of the goods herein described shall be at liberty to call at intermediate ports, to tow and be towed, and assist vessels in distress, and to deviate for the purpose of saving life or goods.

The term "water carriage" in this section shall not be construed as including lighterage or car ferriage across rivers, or in lake or other harbors, and the liability for such lighterage or car ferriage shall be governed by the other sections hereof.

If the goods are being carried under a tariff which provides that any Carrier or Carriers party thereto shall be liable for loss from perils of the sea, then as to such Carrier or Carriers the provisions of this section shall be modified in accordance with the provisions of the tariff, which shall be treated as incorporated into the conditions of this bill of lading.

SEC. 10. Every party, whether principal or agent, shipping explosives or dangerous goods without previous full written disclosure to the Carrier or its agent of their nature, shall be liable for all loss or damage caused thereby, and such goods may be warehoused at owner's risk and expense, or destroyed without compensation.

SEC. 11. Any alteration, addition or erasure in this bill of lading shall be signed or initialed in the margin by an agent of the Carrier issuing the same, and if not so signed or initialed shall be without effect, and this bill of lading shall be enforceable according to its original tenor.

THE ROXBOROUGH
OTTAWA

Ottawa, December 18, 1916.

Dear Mother:

Jen. told me over the phone last night that you would like to have your deposit at the Bank increased. -- Accordingly I enclose a cheque for an additional $100.00 taken from monies of your own which I am holding in trust. -- Please sign the attached receipt and return it when the cheque comes to hand.

It was a great joy to me to hear your voice and Jennie's over the phone last night. I am looking forward with great delight to seeing you all at the end of the week. I plan to leave here on Thursday night and to leave Toronto at five o'clock Friday afternoon arriving in Walkerton at 9.10.

Ever lovingly yours,

Willie

Mr Pitts came out yesterday and doubtless will see you soon W.

MEMORANDUM CONCERNING MOTHER'S ESTATE

Prepared for Jennie and Max

Part I

Monies belonging to Father, which became part of Mother's Estate at time of Father's death, and subsequently.

From Frazer Estate:

The circumstances under which I undertook complete management of Father's and Mother's affairs, so far as finances were concerned, are set forth in the part of this memorandum which relates to Insurance Policies. Father's blindness made it impossible for him to attend to any matters of business, whilst his and Mother's advanced years made it perilous to have subject to their management the little monies outstanding. It was under these circumstances that, as an inducement to Father to save whatever monies might be outstanding, I offered to allow him six per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly on all monies the safe-keeping of which he might entrust to me.

Under this arrangement, Father transferred to me the first payment he received from the Frazer Estate, on November 27, 1915, the amount of which was 1,500.00

Father had, prior to this time, allowed to be used for house purposes, out of gifts I had made to Mother for her personal use, sums amounting to 650.00

He had also allowed to be used for house purposes monies which Isabel had advanced from time to time to the extent of 100.00

There was also a sum of 81.60
due the University of Toronto, of which Father had omitted to make payment some years before, and which he expressed a desire to pay as soon as the Frazer monies were received.

Father had also expressed a wish to meet personally, out of the first cheque on the Frazer monies, the expenses of Isabel's last illness and burial. The total of this expense was 400.00

All of these amounts were accordingly deducted from the first cheque from the Frazer Estate; the $81.60 was paid to the Bursar of the University; $400.00, the expense of Isabel's illness and burial, was refunded to me; the $100.00 borrowed from Isabel during her life time was paid into her estate, to be held as part of a trust fund for Max, and subsequently paid to

Max at the time of the purchase of his car. The $650 used for house purposes out of Mother's money was transferred to her personally, as a sum to be held in trust by me for her at the same rate of interest as that being paid to Father on the Frazer monies. These deductions amounted in all to	1,231.60
and left a balance of on the first Frazer payment.		268.40
On February 29, 1916, a second payment was made to Father from the Frazer Estate, amounting to		1,000.00
At the same time, a cheque was received from the American Law Book Company for in payment of professional services rendered by Father, and which were in the nature of matters pertaining to Customs exemption, which matters I managed for him at Ottawa.		150.00
Both these cheques Father permitted to be transferred to me for purposes of investment, for which I allowed him a rate of six per cent. payable half-yearly.
with his money from the sale of law library.
These were the only amounts in the nature of trust funds belonging to Father which I was holding at the time of his death. They amounted, less interest, to	1,418.40	1,418.40
Of monies belonging to Mother, the only amount I was holding in trust at the time of Father's death was the which Father had agreed to have placed to her credit from the first Frazer cheque.	650.00
As the monies I was holding in trust for Father became Mother's at the time of his death, I transferred all the amounts to Mother's credit at the time, together with interest on both Father's and Mother's monies, which I fixed at made up as follows:	75.75
Interest on $ 268.40 held in trust 9 months 12.00
Interest on $ 650.00 held in trust 9 months 29.25
Interest on $1000.00 held in trust 6 months 34.50
Making a total on these accounts of		2,144.15

At the time of moving from Grange Road to Avenue Road, Father's law library was sold for This amount I induced him to allow me to place also with the Frazer monies as an investment on which I agreed to allow him six per cent.	255.00
The interest on the money received as payment for the law books, to the time of Father's death, I have fixed at	3.60
Making a total on this account of		258.60
Making a total of all monies passing to Mother from sums held by me at the time of Father's death, together with interest to date on the same, of		2,402.95

Payments due Father's Estate:

Subsequent to Father's death, I secured and deposited to Mother's credit the following sums, which were owing Father during his life time but were not secured until after his death:

Cash in Father's pocket at time of death	.20
Balance due from the Frazer Estate,	656.91

Mother's Bank Account:

In addition to these amounts, there was, at the time of Father's death, in the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Toronto, to the joint credit of Mother and myself, a sum amounting to 586.80
This amount was to be accounted for as follows.

For some time prior to Isabel's death, I was in the habit of making to Mother advances in cash in the nature of gifts for her own personal use. Where these monies were used for house purposes, it was understood that refunds would be made to her from monies subsequently earned or secured by Father. The $650.00 above referred to, repaid to Mother out of the first Frazer cheque, was a repayment of monies which had been in the nature of gifts by me to her.

At the time of Isabel's death, Mother had to her credit in her personal savings account the sum of 218.10
To avoid the kind of trouble which occurred in securing back from the Bank of Commerce the small amounts in Isabel's savings account, I advised Mother to transfer this personal savings account to a joint account in her name and my own, and told her that I would supplement this account by placing the sum of $1,000.00 to our joint credit, and would see that during her life time the total amount of this account would never fall below that sum. I told her that any part of this $1,000.00 over and above the $218.10 of her own personal savings, which she might use for herself, either for carriages, theatres, dresses, or other purely personal expenditures, she could regard as a gift from me to her; but that any part of this amount or subsequent advances which was used for house purposes, or purposes other than those peculiarly personal to herself, would have to be regarded as a loan to be repaid to me out of monies which properly should be used for home expenses.

My purpose in this was to keep intact, as much as possible, all the Frazer monies, and to confine the home expenditures as largely as possible to monies coming in from the Carnegie pension and the Law School allowance. The Law School money had been voted only for a year, and might not have been continued thereafter. I was anxious to avoid any drawing on other funds so long as this could be prevented.

You will observe that I have charged nothing on this loan, which at the same time was gaining interest for

Father's salary cheque for the month of July, amounting to $100.00, was endorsed by him to Mother and deposited in this joint account. The total monies therefore in the joint savings account from the time it was opened, were as follows:

Loan by me to Mother	1,000.00
Mother's personal savings transferred	218.10
Father's Law School cheque for July	100.00
Bank's interest	29.67
Making a total of		1,347.77
Of this amount,		758.97
was paid out during 1915 and 1916 on house account prior to Father's death. There remained, therefore, as a balance in the Bank to the joint credit of Mother and myself, at the time of Father's death,		588.80

As up to the time of Father's death Mother had not used for personal purposes any part of the $1,000.00 loaned to meet outlays, etc., this amount became repayable to me. The $218.10 which represented Mother's personal savings in this joint account, and the interest on the whole joint account, together with the $100.00 of Father's Law School salary cheque for July, are of course represented in full to Mother's credit in the balance of $588.80 left after the deduction of $758.97, expenditures on house account.

The total of Mother's assets, as per the above, comes to $ 3,971.36

Against these amounts were the following liabilities.

Loan in joint credit account:

The amount of 1,000.00
placed by me in the joint account as above mentioned.

Family monument and burial plot:

It was Father's wish that a family monument should be erected at his expense at the Mount Pleasant Cemetery, which monument was to bear an inscription to his father and mother, and Isabel. The order for the monument, and its execution, was largely completed at the time of Father's death; but the monument was not erected until subsequently, and when erected contained also the inscription to Father's memory. The amounts payable on the monument were, however, all approved by Father during his life time. The cost of the monument, including inscription to Father's parents, to Isabel, and also inscription to Father's memory, together with cost of head stones to mark Grandmother's, Isabel's, and Father's graves, was 792.00

In addition to the monument, there was acquired at the time of Isabel's death, a piece of property enlarging the original plot. This was acquired owing to a change by the Cemetery authorities in the construction of the road. The plot as originally purchased was by the side of the road. But for the purchase of the additional piece, there would have been another plot between the original and the road as it now stands. The total payment on this plot was 101.00

These amounts were to have been taken out of the monies received from the Frazer Estate, which were being held in trust. They therefore became a charge against Mother's estate.

The only other charges against Mother's estate are those which relate to the expenses of Father's illness and burial, the expenses incidental to the house at Avenue Road, the cost of closing up the same, the storage

there came into Mother's estate ~~at the time of Father's death~~ through moneys inherited by her from Father, a sum amounting to $ 830.80

This sum has been conserved in its entirety. All outlays made by or on account of Mother, other than such as related to the settlement of Father's estate, have been met by me personally out of insurance monies assigned by Father to me during his life time under the terms of the agreement whereby I undertook to advance to him and Mother, as required, monies necessary for their protection during their life time.

I might point out that the preservation, intact, of all monies which passed to Mother under Father's will, together with all monies which subsequently came to her as a pension from the Carnegie Foundation, was due to the assignment by Father to me of his insurance policies.

I might also point out that all monies derived under the insurance policies, and which became available for Mother's use under the terms of the agreement whereby the policies were assigned, were conserved and rendered thus available in virtue of the assignment. Had I not taken over the obligation of refunding the insurance companies the monies which had been borrowed on these policies, and also the obligation of keeping them in full force and effect, through payment of premiums due not only from the period of the assignment but for some years previously, these policies would have completely lapsed, and Mother, as well as other members of the family, would have lost all benefits subsequently derived from them, including Mother's entire estate in money, all of which I have succeeded in conserving intact.

You will observe that, with the exception of physicians' accounts, current house rent, and a few other current accounts, there was not a single payment outstanding at the time of Father's death. In other words, not only did Father not owe anyone anything at the time of his death, but he left, over and above the insurance monies he had assigned during his life time, a considerable sum in the nature of savings, in addition to all household effects.

The house at 4 Grange Road was given up during the month of June, when Father and Mother moved to Avenue Road. At that time a number of articles were disposed of by sale. All of the expenses incidental to this moving were covered by monies obtained through these sales. In addition, there were recovered through sales the small amounts which have been credited to Mother's estate above. By securing a tenant for the Grange Road house, it was possible to avoid paying more than the month of July, though three months' payment on the Grange Road house was the sum agreed to at the time the premises were vacated.

The house on Avenue Road was secured by lease for a year. By arrangement with the lessors, through whom another tenant was obtained, a release of this lease was secured by payment of rent for the months of September and October only, thereby safeguarding Mother's estate against further loss.

Part III

Monies Available Under Insurance Policies

When it became apparent, at the time of Isabel's death, that neither Father nor Mother was in a position to be concerned with money matters one way or the other, and that it was advisable that, as respects both of them, their minds should be relieved forever of this burden, I told Father and Mother that if they would care to entrust me with the management of all monies belonging to them, I would try so to protect their interests that nothing would be lost which belonged to them, while, on the other hand, I would see that as long as they lived ample provision would be made, in sickness or in health, for their comfort.

The time at which I volunteered this duty was the one of least outlook, so far as the future was concerned, which Father and Mother in their lives together had experienced. Father's work at the Law School was ended. He was too blind to think of undertaking lectures for the ensuing year. There was a certainty that he would not be reappointed, but no certainty that any recognition of his past services would be made by the Law Society to meet future needs. Possible assistance from the Carnegie Foundation in the nature of a pension had not been thought of, let alone secured. The monies due Father by the Frazer Estate had not been paid in, and it was uncertain whether they would ever be realized as he had anticipated.

To keep up with the difficulties of the past, Father had borrowed considerable sums on his insurance. I had been carrying for years a chattel mortgage on all of the household goods, which I had taken over, together with other liabilities, from a man who had previously held it. Father was indebted to me in a considerable sum for payment of past debts, many of which were incurred while he lived in Berlin, all of which I had cleared off to lessen the strain at home. I had been contributing for a considerable time previously to the home support, in monies sent Mother month by month. Father was actually in the position at that time that he had not money available wherewith to pay the rent of the house, the current expenses of the home, the monthly premiums on insurance, and ~~for~~ the expenses incidental to Isabel's burial; nor had he, apart from the Frazer monies, any source of further income.

I myself was in none too fortunate a position. My connection with the Rockefeller Foundation was only on the basis of a yearly agreement, which I knew must terminate, at the outside, within three years. I was making small advances to Max, which I was most anxious to continue.

All these circumstances considered together, as well as the fact that my duties in the subsequent months were taking me to the United States, where I would not be in a position to deal, in the case of an emergency, with Father's and Mother's affairs, caused Father to repeat the wish which he had expressed to me a number of times, that I would allow him to make an assignment of his insurance policies to me, and that I would advance to him, as required, monies needed for Mother's support and his own, keeping the policies as security for repayment of these amounts.

Father was most anxious that his affairs should be kept as nearly private as possible. Had either of you been in a position to help to share the obligation I was then assuming, it would have been my wish to have conferred with you both as to what was best. As it was, I felt that I could only be adding to your anxiety to lay this situation before you; and, feeling no doubt in my own integrity, and believing that your faith in me was as strongly shared as Father's and Mother's, I agreed to accept the assignment to me of the policies, less outstanding indebtedness, and, holding them as security, to advance to Father and Mother from that time henceforth, such monies as might be required for their support.

To appreciate just what this obligation seemed to mean at the time, you must realize that Father was then a strong man, and that none of us believed he would live other than a number of years. Moreover, his blindness meant that he would require, as long as he lived, extra care and attendance. Mother's strength was very feeble, and it meant for both Mother and Father in their advancing years, personal care and an expenditure for physicians and the like to an extent unequalled at any earlier time. I really felt, in assuming this obligation, that I was doing for you both a service almost as great as that I was attempting to do for Father and Mother.

Having just experienced, through the absence of any will by Isabel, no end of difficulties and delays in obtaining from the Bank of Commerce the small amount of savings left by her and securing their transference to Max, I felt it was most desirable that Father should make some will which would avoid like difficulties, though on a considerably increased scale, in regard to his affairs, should his life be cut short by some unforeseen and sudden event, when, perchance I might be in some other part of the continent, or abroad.

As every will can be modified by codicils, my whole purpose in desiring some will to be made at the time was not that of obtaining any statement as to final disposition of effects, but solely that of avoiding legal and technical difficulties in arranging the affairs of the estate.

Again, it must be remembered that all these matters had to be attended to in the little space of time between my coming from Denver to be present at Isabel's funeral and my return to go on with my work in Colorado

Father and Mother had both felt that the step was a wise and necessary one, and accordingly wills were drawn by Father which left everything, in the event of his death, to Mother, and by Mother, which left everything, in the event of her death to Father; and, to secure against legal difficulties such as those above referred to, both wills were so drawn that, in the event of Father and Mother both dying without any other instrument being drawn, (something which none of us contemplated at the time), all effects would fall to me as a trustee and executor. I on my part made a will at the same time leaving everything to you both subject to her life interest to Father and Mother for the period of their lives.

That there was any attempt on my part, or thought on the part of Mother or Father, to permit me to become the sole inheritor of their estate, is inconceivable. The only disposition Father or Mother would ever have thought of making of their effects would have been one of equal division between the children who survived them. This they expressed at the time of drawing these documents, in the words that they knew I would do what was right should events ever so transpire that they should both pass away before making any further disposition.

There was nothing secret about these arrangements. Father did express a desire that very little should be said about his affairs. Both Father and Mother were wholly free to discuss with either of you any of these matters; and if they refrained from so doing, it was no doubt due to the same motive which actuated me in not opening up a discussion, namely, that as matters stood at the time, the obligation was so completely one-sided that to have said much to either of you would have appeared as in the light of seeking to emphasize one's own obligation with a desire of having it relieved or shared. Father and Mother both spent part of the summer with Jennie prior to Father's death; it was as possible, therefore, for her as for me to have the question of the disposition of home effects fully discussed and further determined. To Max there was not the same opportunity, except by letter, though he had, as Jennie also had, the opportunity of discussing with Mother the disposition of her affairs.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Estate - Disposition n.d., 1915-1918

If both of you refrained from speaking, it was doubtless owing to the same kind of feeling which made it difficult, if not impossible, for me to ask Mother during the course of her long illness, to make some disposition of her effects before her death. On two or three occasions I spoke to her, as gently as I could, about what she would like to have done when the time came that her days would be ended. Her reply on reach occasion was that, as I had taken her to live with me for the rest of her life, she wished to leave all these matters to me, knowing that I would do what was right so far as those who might survive her were concerned.

This implicit faith on the part of Father and Mother, which was shared also by Isabel, will always be to me the most sacred and cherished memory of my life. To keep unbroken the knowledge in my own heart of this faith having been more than amply justified, is naturally the only concern I can have, now that they are gone.

That brings me now to a detailed statement of the discharge of my trusteeship in this connection.

Value of Insurance Policies:

Total value of insurance policies at the time of Father's death, less outstanding indebtedness acknowledged, repayment of which was made at time of assignment of policies, and indebtedness subsequently incurred through payment of premiums in keeping policies alive - 4,245.43

Made up as follows:

London-Lancashire Life	370.43
Royal Arcanum	3,000.00
A. O. U. W.	875.00
	4,245.43

To which was subsequently added, as consequence of threatened suit with A.O.U.W., the sum of 1,125.00

Making a total in all of 5,370.43

The original policy in the London-Lancashire Life was for 5,000.00

Against this amount, there was chargeable on the score of indebtedness at the time the policies were assigned, the following amounts:

On chattel mortgage	2,267.57
On borrowings from the Company on policy, and other means	1,770.00
Due as refund of advances on premiums on life insurance in different companies	592.00	4,629.57
Leaving a balance of		370.43

The amounts of $2,267.57, on chattel mortgage, and the refund of $592.00 for advances on premiums to keep up life insurance, represent the refund made to me, and are the monies referred to in a letter I wrote Max, in which I mentioned ~~that~~, having received from Father, through the insurance policies, monies that I never expected to have refunded.

It was these monies that I wished Max to regard as an offset to any advances I had made to him, and which I should like to have had him consider as a gift from Father to him in substitution of advances I had made. Indebtedness by Father to me to this amount, considering the satisfaction it gave me to be able to assist in these matters at the time, would have occasioned me no sense of loss, as I really never expected that these monies would be refunded. On the other hand, I felt that any feeling of obligation which Max might have for advances made would be transferred from me to Father, which I know would have accorded wholly with Father's desire had it been possible for him to do as he would have liked to do by Max during his life time.

Monies paid out on account of Mother's illness:

With the feelings I cherish towards Mother's memory, it would be wholly preferable to me to make no statement whatever on this score, but to regard all outlays made for Mother during the year she was with me as a service which was the greatest of privileges to render to her.

If you both feel that you would care to let me enjoy this privilege exclusively, I shall feel very grateful for the opportunity of so doing. In that event, all of the available monies from Father's insurance I shall gladly regard as a part of Mother's estate, conserved intact as in the case of the other monies, and to be made divisible in full. I recognise, however, that to ask this much may be to deny you both of what I am sure is not a less privilege to you, of feeling that, so far as it was possible, you also contributed to the relief of Mother's suffering during the whole of the last year of her life. I might add I was careful through the Trade of Mother's illness to let her know that it was Father's provision for further sustenance, which was bringing her the support she had.

If you wish to share this privilege, the under-mentioned disbursements, by being sanctioned on your part, may be regarded as having been divided among the three of us; or, should you wish the division altered, it can be made in any proportion you think preferable.

I have given the figures only so far as I have vouchers for the accounts or memoranda of cash payments for specific purposes. Never having contemplated making any detailed account of any expenses incidental to Mother's living with me, but having, from the moment she came, regarded all possible outlays as being part of the obligation I had assumed when I accepted the assignment of the policies. I have not kept anything in the nature of an inventory. The amounts, therefore which are set out here are such only as Mr. McGregor and I, in going through accounts and cheques for the period in question, have found it possible to compile. I shall be glad to send you both to look over if you so desire, ~~and~~ all the vouchers for each of the several items enumerated below.

I have also vouchers for all of the other payments which I have charged against either Father's or Mother's estate, and these also can be sent if you wish to see them. As respects these accounts, I should perhaps also mention that I have included only such items as I have vouchers for. There were many expenses incidental to travelling and settling affairs in different directions which might properly be charged had I ever thought of so doing, or did I regard myself as an executor in any official sense.

Rentals:

I have been greatly in doubt as to what proportion of the Roxborough expenses should be chargeable to Mother as in accord with the spirit of the agreement above referred to. Owing to the unfortunate circumstance that Mother was ill all the time she was with me, and that all of the time I had to have nurses in the apartment, both day and night, so that at most I never had use of more than one room and partial use of the bath room and one other room, I have thought that if I were to divide the total rental charge of the Roxborough for the year in half, that would be a fair division. I might, of course, have taken a separate apartment to myself. In order, however, to economize, I tried to get along as best I could without getting extra accomodation, and managed until the last two months to do without an extra room. The total Roxborough rental for the year amounted to $912.00. Half of this amount would be 456.00

House Equipment:

I have had similar difficulty in knowing what division I should make of the expenses incurred in the nature of additional house furnishings and equipment which I was obliged to obtain on account of Mother's illness: such items, for example, as beds, mattresses, pillows, bed-room equipment, electrical supplies, tray waggon, screen, comforter, curtains, towels, oil stove, and other articles required for the furnishing of rooms for Mother and a nurse at the Roxborough and at Kingsmere. I have gone over the items in this connection of which I have the accounts, and taking only such as I would not have purchased but for what became necessary under the circumstances, I find that they reach a total of $343.90.

Some of this equipment is used up entirely; some of it is but partially used; most of it is available for further use; and a little of it is about as good as new. I have wondered whether, were I to write off say, 20 per cent. as being in the nature of a rental value to offset wear and tear, as well as payment for use, I would be doing what was fair in the circumstances. If this seemed reasonable to you, it would mean that I would be incurring an expenditure of

$275.12, for which I have articles in my possession, and that Mother's estate would be charged with a rental value on this account of 68.78

Perhaps I should say that in this connection, account should be taken of the circumstance that I am making no charge of any kind against Mother's estate for the use of or the wear and tear occasioned my own furnishings, either at the Roxborough or at Kingsmere. Some of these, such as my mahogany furniture, have suffered considerable damage through hot water, medicines, and the like. I think perhaps were I to estimate the outlays as to wear and tear in this connection, they would more than offset what I suggest here as helping to meet the other expenses.

Supposing, instead of writing off 20 per cent. for furnishings bought, I were to write off only 10 per cent. and to estimate the value of furnishings of my own which were made subject to wear and tear, at a value the same as that of the new equipment purchased, and I were to charge 10 per cent. rental all round, that would come to the same thing, and perhaps would seem a more equitable basis of estimate. The Roxborough, I think, charges 25 per cent. value of furnishings for rental by the year. If, under the circumstances, I charge 10 per cent. all round, would that not be considered fair? Estimated either way, the share to be borne by Mother's estate would come to $68.78.

Payments to Olive:

As to the payments made to Olive, I am a little in doubt as to what it is best to do. While at Kingsmere, Olive's services were almost exclusively for me. On the other hand there was Miss Petrie's or Mrs. Durant's room and board which I provided at Kingsmere through the summer. In Ottawa, Olive's time was almost exclusively given to Mother. I had also the expense of Olive's board, which I provided at Ottawa.

I have not thought of attempting to make any estimate of expenditures on account of groceries, etc. ordered at Kingsmere or ordered in Ottawa; but I have thought that, if the payments made to Olive were charged exclusively against Mother's account, such part of her services as I profited by would be more than offset by making no charge, whatever, for the outlays incurred for Miss Petrie's and Mrs. Durant's board at Kingsmere, and expenses of a similar kind at Ottawa, excepting only trays sent up from the Roxborough dining room, but including, of course, outlays for Olive herself. I paid to Olive in all This includes her travelling expenses from St. Catharines to Kingsmere, and a payment of $100.00 which I gave her in December, 261.00 some $70.00 of which represented a gratuity. I felt that this money was due Olive, from the exceptionally faithful nature of her services; that it would have been Mother's wish that some recognition of the kind should be shown her. I felt also that, but for her willingness to serve as a nurse as well as a servant, I would have been put to much greater expense in securing an additional nurse. The payment of $70.00 to her was in reality more in the nature of a payment for nurse's services than of a gratuity.

Similarly with Miss Petrie, I made her last payment $100.00, instead of the part of a month to which she was entitled. This I felt Miss Petrie also had merited by her faithfulness, and particularly by the fact that she had at no time insisted on hours, and also was ready to economize by at times preparing her own meals, and in other ways.

The payments in the nature of additional recognition of their services, to Olive and Miss Petrie, I should be very glad to assume myself if, under the circumstances, they seem to either of you in any way unwarranted or extravagant.

With respect to the outlays made in payment for groceries supplied at Ottawa, from McGregor's, and at Kingsmere, from Bryson-Graham's, Murphy, the vegetable woman, and others, I find that they came in all to between $500 and $600. I did have a few friends in to dinner occasionally at Kingsmere; but with that exception, this total amount was made up of outlays made exclusively for the family as constituted by Mother, myself, Olive, and the nurses.

Sundry accounts:

Among items which I have not included in any of the above statements, but which are properly chargeable to Mother's account, is a payment of 8.00 for coal oil, used exclusively in a little stove for heating her room; and another payment of 3.40 for coal, used exclusively for the grate in Mother's room in the spring of the year. I have taken no account of coal used in the fall, or coal oil for other than the heating of the oil stove.

The accounts of the Hydro-Electric for electricity supplied during the year 1917, amounted to $28.10. Considering that the electricity was used mostly in cooking, as well as in lighting for the nurses, etc. at nights, were I to take a third of this amount, which is in excess of the average of my accounts thus far this year, I think that would be fair. This would make as a charge against Mother's account, 16.75

The Roxborough accounts show an additional outlay, for meals sent from the dining room to nurses, of about The Roxborough charge is $1.25 a meal for dinner, and an extra 25 cents for service by tray. Additional payments were made to the maids for doing up the rooms, and for servants for attendance in different ways, moving furniture, special elevator duty, and the like. These latter payments I have regarded as being included in the round sum of $100.00, though probably the total additional outlay for meals and payments to servants, etc. would come to double the figure fixed.	100.00
The charges of the Sanitary Laundry, and extra charges by the Roxborough for extra linen, will come to about $50.00 in the year. I am fixing this amount at	25.00
The services of a carpenter were required to fit up the necessary equipment in the way of changing book-cases into cupboards, providing equipment of one kind or another; and special payments had to be made in connection with carpentry work in the store-room to permit of transfer of books, etc. The charges altogether in this connection were probably in the vicinity of $20.00. I have fixed the amount at which is less than the cost of the bill rendered by the carpenter for the fixing of cupboards alone.	10.00
There are many charges for long distance telephones, telegrams, and the like, all of which related directly to some phase of Mother's illness and subsequent funeral arrangements. I have taken only the outstanding charges in this connection. In round figures, for the year, I am fixing them at though here again the expense actually occasioned in this way would be considerably in excess of the amount fixed.	25.00

Travelling Expenses:

There is another charge on the insurance monies which I should like to have met, before any division is made, and that is the transportation and other expenses incidental to Jennie's three visits to Ottawa from Walkerton to see and be with Mother during her illness. I asked on each occasion to be allowed to make payment at the time, or to have the expenses met in the interval out of the $100.00 deposit to the joint credit of Mother and Jennie in the Bank at Walkerton; and so far as any of these expenses have not been met in this way, I should like to have them regarded as a charge properly made against the insurance monies transferred to me on the conditions mentioned.

The only remaining outlays of which I have a record as made on Mother's account are in the nature of payments for travelling expenses, presents which she wished to have understood as being from her alone or equally shared in by me, and one or two items of personal expenditure.

The following comprise the items of which I have a record:

Mother's Travelling Expenses:

Trip to Denver and return to Walkerton, Sept. 12 to Oct. 9, 1916	135.00

Adding together all the amounts in the nature of disbursements by Mother or on Mother's account, the total comes to 4,585.39

Deducting this amount from the total of the insurance monies which came to me, 5,370.43

There is a balance left of $ 785.04

According to the terms of the agreement between Father, Mother, and myself, under which these insurance monies were assigned, I would legally be entitled to this balance as representing my compensation for the risk assumed in taking over the policies on the conditions mentioned. As, however, I have never, either in thought or desire, contemplated any possibility of personal profit through this arrangement, I wish this balance to be regarded as a part of Mother's estate, which becomes divisible in accordance with what I believe would have been her wish, namely, an equal division between the three of us, the only surviving children.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Estate - Disposition n.d., 1915-1918

National Archives of Canada

Summing up the total of Mother's estate, so far as monies are concerned, the amounts are as follows:

From estate left to Mother under Father's will	830.80
From monies paid Mother by Carnegie Foundation	747.38
Monies derivable from Father's insurance monies	785.04
Total	$ 2,363.22
Add - Rosebrough account	456.00
	2.819.22
Deduct - Additional deposit in Wetherbee (see postscript)	100.00
Storage, 1918. Rawlinson	45.00
Nordheimer	6.00
	2.668.22

Against this amount, before it becomes actually divisible, there is properly chargeable the cost of storage of the household goods at Rawlinson's from the time of Mother's death to the time of their final distribution and disposition. Inasmuch as it may appear to either of you that this disposition has not been made as rapidly as it should have been, I am quite agreeable to allowing the proportion of this expense which you feel properly belongs to you to be fixed by yourselves.

There will also be expense in winding up the affairs of Mother's estate, through the disposition of these effects along the lines that may be agreed upon between us.

Until it is possible to ascertain what the expense in this connection may be, it would seem unwise to make a final division of the monies. It may be that you will feel that these monies should carry interest for the period of time elapsing between Mother's death and their payment, inasmuch as they are monies which have all along been in my possession. I shall be very glad to allow whatever interest payment you think proper in this connection.

Against interest payments of the kind, however, and charges incidental to delays in the disposition of the effects, I should like to point out I have not considered anywhere in connection with either Father's or Mother's estate, or the administration of their affairs, the time and expense to which I have been personally put in their management and acting in the position of a trustee. I think I am not far out when, including matters incidental to the closing up of the House at Avenue Road and the closing up of the house at Grange Road, as well as correspondence that has been entailed in connection with the Frazer monies, the A.O.U.W. policy, and all other matters, I say that the time which has been actually consumed in attending to Father's and Mother's affairs has exceeded the total amount of time I have been able to give to the book on which I have been engaged during the last three years.

I mention this circumstance, not through any desire to emphasize any part I myself have taken, and which I realize is perhaps not as great as either of you would have given had your opportunities been similar, but, viewing this memorandum simply in the light of a statement of the discharge of my duty as executor and trustee, I am anxious that you should know something of the care with which I have sought to surround your interests as well as my own.

I wish also to make clear to both of you why, knowing what was involved in giving an account of my trusteeship and administering of Father's estate, I was anxious not to be drawn into this fresh obligation until after I had discharged my obligation to the Rockefeller Foundation. It would, I think, have been discharged fully by the end of last year had I been free to give my time uninterruptedly to the work. As it is, I have still uncompleted the book on which I have been working, and shall be obliged to give at least the equivalent of five months of this year to the completion of the book without receiving any remuneration whatever for the time so given.

Perhaps, too, I might mention that I have made no charge whatever for the amount of clerical work which has been involved, including postage, stationery, filing, and sorting of accounts, keeping of records, etc., etc. all of which, either directly or indirectly, I have met out of my own pocket.

In this connection, there is one charge which I should like to bring to your attention, not with a view of having you share it, but rather that you may understand wherein I have been let in for some outlay because it was known that certain of the insurance monies had passed into my hands.

When George Lindsey brought his suit against Morang to prevent the publication of LeSueur's book, he appealed to Father and me to help to share the cost, seeing that it was to prevent the publication of the slanderous and libellous attack against Mackenzie which LeSueur had written that he was bringing the action. Father was not in a position to promise anything. I told George that I did not see that I should be asked to contribute anything as I had no dealings with LeSueur whatever.

He pressed for some promise in the event of losing his action. I finally consented to stand for expenses not to exceed $200.00, so far as our family was concerned. I told George that this I would undertake only in the event of being in a position to meet the amount when the time came. George lost his suit in the Supreme Court just shortly after I had been defeated as a Minister, and as I had no visible means of support at the time, he did not press me for the money. When, however, he volunteered assistance towards adjusting matters relating to Father's estate, and he learned of the payments that were being made under the insurance policy, he wrote and asked me if I could not make him the payment of $200.00 promised some years before. This was just before Mother and I started for Denver. Naturally, I paid the amount. My feeling toward George has never been quite the same since.

Lest it may appear that I have sought to obtain back from the insurance monies all payments that I have made on account of home expenditures of different kinds, I feel I should perhaps add to this statement the following brief statement as to advances made to Mother on the dates indicated, which were in the nature of contributions to her towards meeting personal outlays and home expenses. These amounts are in no way included in anything of which account is taken in this memorandum; nor would they be properly included, as at the time of their receipt they were regarded by Mother as gifts from me. They do not include any gifts made in connection with Christmas, birthdays, or home visits, but only contributions made on a regular basis, that Mother's mind might be made easier with regard to the strain at different times. They include only amounts for which I hold the Bank's cheques.

Perhaps I should mention also that I told Bella, during the time she was at the Bank of Commerce, that any monies she might pay out of her own earnings for house purposes I would see were restored to her. As far as I was able to total up from her Bank books, she had paid out nearly $100.00 in this way. That amount I put to her credit in the Bank after her death, that it might bring the little sum held in trust for Max up to the figure it was at. This I have not charged in any way against Father's or Mother's estate. That was a matter of honor entirely between Isabel and myself.

I found, however, that some of the expenses of her illness had been met out of her Bank account. These monies I restored to her credit, but I have charged them against Father's estate at the time of his death, and they are mentioned in this memorandum as part of the expenses of Isabel's illness, because Father expressed the wish that he himself should meet, out of the Frazer monies, not only the expenses of Isabel's burial, but also the expenses incidental to her illness.

Part IV

Disposition of Household Effects

There remains to consider the disposition of the household effects. My hope is that it may be possible for us to come to an agreement among ourselves as to the division that should be made without, on the one hand, incurring the expense of bringing in a valuator, or, on the other, sacrificing the goods through public sale. I see no way to effect this but for each one to express quite frankly what articles are personally desired.

The only inventory I have is such a memorandum as was made at the time all the articles in the house were listed in connection with a chattel mortgage, and the memorandum I made at the time the articles were being placed in storage. Jennie, I think, knows what the home possessions are better than I do, and might be able to indicate her wishes from memory, with such assistance as it may be possible for me to give when a final disposition is being made. As I am leaving this week for Colorado, I can discuss with Max personally his wishes as to this part of the estate, and shall bring with me such material as I have in the shape of an inventory.

Neither of you can be quite as anxious as I am to have this whole matter finally disposed of, and if upon receipt of this memorandum, you could each express your wish as to what you would like to have, or what you think should be done, or the manner in which you would like to have it done, I shall do my utmost to meet you both in accordance with any proposal you may make.

My idea as to what Mother meant when she spoke of doing what was right in the matter, is that the estate should be divisible into equal parts among the three of us. What I should like now to get is a statement of the particular articles, if any, which either of you would like to have in your part. Some of the home belongings were brought by me to Ottawa at the time the house on Grange Road was closed, and some were taken to Walkerton by Jennie. So far as any articles I have are concerned, they are open to division along with the rest. If I can come to an arrangement with Max while in Colorado as to what he wishes done as far as he is concerned, my idea would be to send to Jennie, on my return from Colorado, and if possible before returning to Ottawa, the articles she may wish to have.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Estate - Disposition n.d., 1915-1918

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

It may be that, as the publishers are pressing me for the manuscript of my book, I shall have to beg for a little further delay in the final disposition; but, if immediate preferences could be indicated, they might be carried out, and the final settlement deferred to an opportune moment.

Let me say in conclusion that I deeply regret having felt it necessary to enumerate all the details of this memorandum. I had hoped that you both would have shared the confidence in me which Father and Mother and Isabel so wholly shared. It has been with the utmost pain that I have been obliged to feel the distrust of my motives and intentions in these most sacred of all obligations; but I am sure, had your knowledge of the situation been as wide as mine, you would not have construed my acts in the light in which you have.

One thing I deeply regret with regard to this memorandum, and that is that it appears to be a record in part of my own doings, and the desire to take credit to myself for what has been done. I have never been more honest in anything that I have said at any time than when I now say that, at the time I sought to look after both Mother's and Father's affairs, ~~ever since~~, it was their interests and your interests rather than my own which I had most at heart.

I wish you both to regard this memorandum as a statement which is open to any criticism you may wish to make. It is in no way intended as disposing of the matters to which it relates without giving you every opportunity to raise any question you may wish to raise, or to call for any vouchers or receipts which you may desire to see.

It may seem that the outlays on Mother's account during her stay with me have been considerable and excessive. In this regard, I can only say that the cost of living in Ottawa, and especially in apartments at the Roxborough, where housekeeping is a necessity, is very considerable; also that, as Max well knows, expenses incidental to nurses and illness are very great. In justice to myself and the expenditures made on Mother's behalf, a distinction should perhaps be made between what relates exclusively to her illness and what, had her illness not taken place, would have represented the portion of her estate which she would have paid to me for the charges I have made. Grouping these items they will be seen to be as follows:

which relates to Mother's travelling expenses, cash advances to her, and her expenditures for personal gifts.
	$ 4,585.39

You will see from this statement that the amount I have charged, properly speaking, against Mother's living expenses for the year, apart from her illness, does not equal the rental of my own apartment for the year. Had Mother had a house or apartment of her own, the expenditure could hardly have been kept within these narrow bounds.

It is, of course, for you both to say what disposition, apart from the division of the amount, you think should be made of the monies belonging to Mother's estate. It has been my feeling, from the moment that I took over the management of Father's and Mother's affairs, and knew the nature of Max's illness and what it would necessarily involve, that any portion of Father's and Mother's estate which it might be possible to conserve should, so far as might be possible, be kept intact as a source on which Max might be at liberty to draw in meeting expenses incidental to his illness; that only when this necessity should have passed, through his becoming self-supporting or for any other reason, should a final disposition of monies belonging to the estate be made. Similarly, I have felt that it was prudent to have some such available sum to meet emergencies which might arise through unforeseen circumstances in connection with Jennie's family. In other words, I have felt it would be continuing the guardianship of Father and Mother over our lives were monies available in this way conserved to meet the contingencies of life which make its path difficult. That does not mean that I have any desire in my own mind to maintain a possession of the funds in question. I should be only too happy, in the event of you both agreeing upon the wisdom of such a course to transfer the trust to any source you might jointly designate, with the condition only that it be administered as indicated.

It may be that you will each prefer having an equal division made, and yourself determine the disposition you wish made of your share, and that, of course, is entirely for you to say. In the event of your deciding that this is the wiser course, I should like to say now that my share of the monies, whatever it may be, will be held as a fund in the nature of a trust from which Max ~~shall~~ be at liberty to draw, so long as it lasts, for any amounts he may require towards meeting expenses incidental to his illness. I shall be pleased if he will regard any monies so drawn as in the nature of monies derived by him from Father's and Mother's estates, for which, so far as I am concerned, there will be no expectation of obligation, either of accounting or return.

My motive in this is precisely identical with the motive I had in proposing a similar arrangement in regard to the estate left by Isabel, which arrangement, I think, afforded as much happiness and satisfaction to those of us who were parties to it as it afforded to Max. I am sure that the happiness he has derived from the use of his car has been increased by the thought that it was primarily Isabel's savings which brought it to him. I am anxious, as respects subsequent borrowings necessary on his part, that, so far as may be possible, he should feel that the monies are forthcoming out of sums which Father and Mother left, rather than from a source occasioning personal sacrifice on the part of anyone. I am sure that such a disposition of any sums which Mother may have left wholly accords with what would have been her wish.

Postscript to Memorandum:

As showing wherein items of expenditure may have been omitted altogether in the enclosed memorandum, I attach hereto a copy of a letter written Mother on December 18, 1916, which shows that on that date I sent a cheque for an additional $100.00 to be placed to her credit in the Bank at Walkerton.

The only amount I have charged against the Walkerton account is a memorandum of $100.00 in November. To be strictly accurate, this date should be October 20th, at which time I sent the $100.00 in a letter to Harry, asking him to open an account to the joint credit of Mother and Jennie.

I suppose the $100.00 I sent on December 18th, 1916, should be added to the figures in the memorandum and the totals adjusted accordingly.

Dear Mother:

Jen. told me over the phone last night that you would like to have your deposit at the Bank increased. Accordingly I enclose a cheque for an additional $100.00 taken from monies of your own which I am holding in trust. Please sign the attached receipt and return it when the cheque comes to hand.*

It was a great joy to me to hear your voice and Jennie's over the phone last night. I am looking forward with great delight to seeing you all at the end of the week. I plan to leave here on Thursday night and to leave Toronto at five o'clock Friday afternoon arriving in Walkerton at 9.10.

Ever lovingly yours,

* The receipt was evidently not signed or sent in. The bank book will show if the amount is correct.

MEMORANDUM CONCERNING MOTHER'S ESTATE

Prepared for Jennie and Max

Part I

Monies belonging to Father, which became part of Mother's Estate at time of Father's death, and subsequently.

From Frazer Estate:

The circumstances under which I undertook complete management of Father's and Mother's affairs, so far as finances were concerned, are set forth in the part of this memorandum which relates to Insurance Policies. Father's blindness made it impossible for him to attend to any matters of business, whilst his and Mother's advanced years made it perilous to have subject to their management the little monies outstanding. It was under these circumstances that, as an inducement to Father to save whatever monies might be outstanding, I offered to allow him six per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly on all monies the safe-keeping of which he might entrust to me.

Under this arrangement, Father transferred to me the first payment he received from the Frazer Estate, on November 27, 1915, the amount of which was 1,500.00

Father had, prior to this time, allowed to be used for house purposes, out of gifts I had made to Mother for her personal use, sums amounting to 650.00

He had also allowed to be used for house purposes monies which Isabel had advanced from time to time to the extent of 100.00

There was also a sum of 81.60
due the University of Toronto, of which Father had omitted to make payment some years before, and which he expressed a desire to pay as soon as the Frazer monies were received.

Father had also expressed a wish to meet personally, out of the first cheque on the Frazer monies, the expenses of Isabel's last illness and burial. The total of this expense was 400.00

All of these amounts were accordingly deducted from the first cheque from the Frazer Estate; the $81.60 was paid to the Bursar of the University; $400.00, the expense of Isabel's illness and burial, was refunded to me; the $100.00 borrowed from Isabel during her life time was paid into her estate, to be held as part of a trust fund for Max, and subsequently paid to

Max at the time of the purchase of his car. The $650 used for house purposes out of Mother's money was transferred to her personally, as a sum to be held in trust by me for her at the same rate of interest as that being paid to Father on the Frazer monies. These deductions amounted in all to	1,231.60
On February 29, 1916, a second payment was made to Father from the Frazer Estate, amounting to		1,000.00
At the same time, a cheque was received from the American Law Book Company for in payment of professional services rendered by Father, and which were in the nature of matters pertaining to Customs exemption, which matters I managed for him at Ottawa.		150.00
Both these cheques Father permitted to be transferred to me for purposes of investment, for which I allowed him a rate of six per cent. payable half-yearly.
These, with the money from the sale of law library, were the only amounts in the nature of trust funds belonging to Father which I was holding at the time of his death. They amounted, less interest, to	1,418.40	1,418.40
Of monies belonging to Mother, the only amount I was holding in trust at the time of Father's death was the which Father had agreed to have placed to her credit from the first Frazer cheque.	650.00
As the monies I was holding in trust for Father became Mother's at the time of his death, I transferred all the amounts to Mother's credit at the time, together with interest on both Father's and Mother's monies, which I fixed at made up as follows:	75.75
Interest on $ 268.40 held in trust 9 months	12.00
Interest on $ 650.00 held in trust 9 months	29.25
Interest on $1000.00 held in trust 6 months	34.50
Making a total on these accounts of		2,144.15

Mother's Bank Account:

In addition to these amounts, there was, at the time of Father's death, in the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Toronto, to the joint credit of Mother and myself, a sum amounting to 588.80
This amount was to be accounted for as follows.

For some time prior to Isabel's death, I was in the habit of making to Mother advances in cash in the nature of gifts for her own personal use. Where these monies were used for house purposes, it was understood that refunds would be made to her from monies subsequently earned or secured by Father. The $650.00 above referred to, repaid to Mother out of the first Frazer cheque, was a repayment of monies which had been in the nature of gifts by me to her.

At the time of Isabel's death, Mother had to her credit in her personal savings account the sum of 218.10
To avoid the kind of trouble which occurred in securing back from the Bank of Commerce the small amounts in Isabel's savings account, I advised Mother to transfer this personal savings account to a joint account in her name and my own, and told her that I would supplement this account by placing the sum of $1,000.00 to our joint credit, and would see that during her life time the total amount of this account would never fall below that sum. I told her that any part of this $1,000.00 over and above the $218.10 of her own personal savings, which she might use for herself, either for carriages, theatres, dresses, or other purely personal expenditures, she could regard as a gift from me to her; but that any part of this amount or subsequent advances which was used for house purposes, or purposes other than those peculiarly personal to herself, would have to be regarded as a loan to be repaid to me out of monies which properly should be used for home expenses.

My purpose in this was to keep intact, as much as possible, all the Frazer monies, and to confine the home expenditures as largely as possible to monies coming in from the Carnegie pension and the Law School allowance. The Law School money had been voted only for a year, and might not have been continued thereafter. I was anxious to avoid any drawing on other funds so long as this could be prevented.

You will observe that I have charged nothing on this loan, which at the same time was gaining interest for Mother. I was also allowing Father and Mother interest at six per cent. on the monies I was holding in trust for them. The Bank's interest payments on this savings account were in the following amounts:

	12.91
	9.51
making a total of	$ 29.67 .

Father's salary cheque for the month of July, amounting to $100.00, was endorsed by him to Mother and deposited in this joint account. The total monies therefore in the joint savings account from the time it was opened, were as follows:

Loan by me to Mother	1,000.00 .
Mother's personal savings transferred	218.10 ..
Father's Law School cheque for July	100.00 .
Bank's interest	29.67
Making a total of		1,347.77
Of this amount,		758.97
was paid out during 1915 and 1916 on house account prior to Father's death. There remained, therefore, as a balance in the Bank to the joint credit of Mother and myself, at the time of Father's death,		588.80

As up to the time of Father's death Mother had not used for parponal purposes any part of the $1,000.00 loaned to meet outlays, etc., this amount became repayable to me. The $218.10 which represented Mother's personal savings in this joint account, and the interest on the whole joint account, together with the $100.00 of Father's Law School salary cheque for July, are of course represented in full to Mother's credit in the balance of $588.80 left after the deduction of $758.97, expenditures on house account.

The total of Mother's assets, as per the above, comes to $ 3,971.36

Against these amounts were the following liabilities.

Loan in joint credit account:

The amount of 1,000.00 placed by me in the joint account as above mentioned.

Family monument and burial plot:

It was Father's wish that a family monument should be erected at his expense at the Mount Pleasant Cemetery, which monument was to bear an inscription to his father and mother, and Isabel. The order for the monument, and its execution, was largely completed at the time of Father's death; but the monument was not erected until subsequently, and when erected contained also the inscription to Father's memory. The amounts payable on the monument were, however, all approved by Father during his life time. The cost of the monument, including inscription to Father's parents, to Isabel, and also inscription to Father's memory, together with cost of head stones to mark Grandmother's, Isabel's, and Father's graves, was 792.00

In addition to the monument, there was acquired at the time of Isabel's death, a piece of property enlarging the original plot. This was acquired owing to a change by the Cemetery authorities in the construction of the road. The plot as originally purchased was by the side of the road. But for the purchase of the additional piece, there would have been another plot between the original and the road as it now stands. The total payment on this plot was 101.00

These amounts were to have been taken out of the monies received from the Frazer Estate, which were being held in trust. They therefore became a charge against Mother's estate.

The only other charges against Mother's estate are those which relate to the expenses of Father's illness and burial, the expenses incidental to the house at Avenue Road, the cost of closing up the same, the storage

there came into Mother's estate ~~at the time of Father's death~~ Through monies inherited by her from Father. a sum amounting to $ 830.80

This sum has been conserved in its entirety. All outlays made by or on account of Mother, other than such as related to the settlement of Father's estate, have been met by me personally out of insurance monies assigned by Father to me during his life time under the terms of the agreement whereby I undertook to advance to him and Mother, as required, monies necessary for their protection during their life time.

I might point out that the preservation, intact, of all monies which passed to Mother under Father's will, together with all monies which subsequently came to her as a pension from the Carnegie Foundation, was due to the assignment by Father to me of his insurance policies.

I might also point out that all monies derived under the insurance policies, and which became available for Mother's use under the terms of the agreement whereby the policies were assigned, were conserved and rendered thus available in virtue of the assignment. Had I not taken over the obligation of refunding the insurance companies the monies which had been borrowed on these policies, and also the obligation of keeping them in full force and effect, through payment of premiums due not only from the period of the assignment but for some years previously, these policies would have completely lapsed, and Mother, as well as other members of the family, would have lost all benefits subsequently derived from them, including Mother's entire estate in money, all of which I have succeeded in conserving intact.

You will observe that, with the exception of physicians' accounts, current house rent, and a few other current accounts, there was not a single payment outstanding at the time of Father's death. In other words, not only did Father not owe anyone anything at the time of his death, but he left, over and above the insurance monies he had assigned during his life time, a considerable sum in the nature of savings, in addition to all household effects.

The house at 4 Grange Road was given up during the month of June, when Father and Mother moved to Avenue Road. At that time a number of articles were disposed of by sale. All of the expenses incidental to this moving were covered by monies obtained through these sales. In addition, there were recovered through sales the small amounts which have been credited to Mother's estate above. By securing a tenant for the Grange Road house, it was possible to avoid paying more than the month of July, though three months' payment on the Grange Road house was the sum agreed to at the time the premises were vacated.

The house on Avenue Road was secured by lease for a year. By arrangement with the lessors, through whom another tenant was obtained, a release of this lease was secured by payment of rent for the months of September and October only, thereby safeguarding Mother's estate against further loss.

Carnegie Pension Fund

At the time of Father's death, the Carnegie Foundation voted to Mother a pension of one half the amount to which Father had been entitled in his life time. The payments made to Mother by the Carnegie Foundation during her life time were as follows:

For month of September, 1916	47.91
October	47.91
November	47.71
December	47.91
January, 1917	47.91
February	47.91
March	47.91
April	47.91
May	47.91
June	47.91
July	47.91
August	47.91
September	47.67
October	47.91	670.30

The following amounts were received subsequent to Mother's death:

For month of November, 1917	48.12
December	26.27	74.39

These, together with interest allowed by the Bank on the same, as follows: 2.69

Amount in all to 747.38

Adding together the amount in money due Mother's estate by Father's will 830.80 and the amount paid to Mother by the Carnegie Foundation, which has been left intact, the total of Mother's estate in money at the time of her death amounted to $ 1,578.18

Part III

Monies Available Under Insurance Policies

When it became apparent, at the time of Isabel's death, that neither Father nor Mother was in a position to be concerned with money matters one way or the other, and that it was advisable that, as respects both of them, their minds should be relieved forever of this burden, I told Father and Mother that if they would care to entrust me with the management of all monies belonging to them, I would try so to protect their interests that nothing would be lost which belonged to them, while, on the other hand, I would see that as long as they lived ample provision would be made, in sickness or in health, for their comfort.

The time at which I volunteered this duty was the one of least outlook, so far as the future was concerned, which Father and Mother in their lives together had experienced. Father's work at the Law School was ended. He was too blind to think of undertaking lectures for the ensuing year. There was a certainty that he would not be reappointed, but no certainty that any recognition of his past services would be made by the Law Society to meet future needs. Possible assistance from the Carnegie Foundation in the nature of a pension had not been thought of, let alone secured. The monies due Father by the Frazer Estate had not been paid in, and it was uncertain whether they would ever be realized as he had anticipated.

To keep up with the difficulties of the past, Father had borrowed considerable sums on his insurance. I had been carrying for years a chattel mortgage on all of the household goods, which I had taken over from a man who had previously held it. Father was indebted to me in a considerable sum for payment of past debts, many of which were incurred while he lived in Berlin, all of which I had cleared off to lessen the strain at home. I had been contributing for a considerable time previously to the home support, in monies sent Mother month by month. Father was actually in the position at that time that he had not money available wherewith to pay the rent of the house, the current expenses of the home, the monthly premiums on insurance, and ~~for~~ the expenses incidental to Isabel's burial; nor had he, apart from the Frazer monies, any source of further income.

I myself was in none too fortunate a position. My connection with the Rockefeller Foundation was only on the basis of a yearly agreement, which I knew must terminate, at the outside, within three years. I was making small advances to Max, which I was most anxious to continue.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Estate - Disposition n.d., 1915-1918

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

All these circumstances considered together, as well as the fact that my duties in the subsequent months were taking me to the United States, where I would not be in a position to deal, in the case of an emergency, with Father's and Mother's affairs, caused Father to repeat the wish which he had expressed to me a number of times, that I would allow him to make an assignment of his insurance policies to me, and that I would advance to him, as required, monies needed for Mother's support and his own, keeping the policies as security for repayment of these amounts.

Father was most anxious that his affairs should be kept as nearly private as possible. Had either of you been in a position to help to share the obligation I was then assuming, it would have been my wish to have conferred with you both as to what was best. As it was, I felt that I could only be adding to your anxiety to lay this situation before you; and, feeling no doubt in my own integrity, and believing that your faith in me was as strongly shared as Father's and Mother's, I agreed to accept the assignment to me of the policies, less outstanding indebtedness, and, holding them as security, to advance to Father and Mother from that time henceforth, such monies as might be required for their support.

To appreciate just what this obligation seemed to mean at the time, you must realize that Father was then a strong man, and that none of us believed he would live other than a number of years. Moreover, his blindness meant that he would require, as long as he lived, extra care and attendance. Mother's strength was very feeble, and it meant for both Mother and Father in their advancing years, personal care and an expenditure for physicians and the like to an extent unequalled at any earlier time. I really felt, in assuming this obligation, that I was doing for you both a service almost as great as that I was attempting to do for Father and Mother.

Having just experienced, through the absence of any will by Isabel, no end of difficulties and delays in obtaining from the Bank of Commerce the small amount of savings left by her and securing their transference to Max, I felt it was most desirable that Father should make some will which would avoid like difficulties, though on a considerably increased scale, in regard to his affairs, should his life be cut short by some unforeseen and sudden event, when, perchance I might be in some other part of the continent, or abroad.

As every will can be modified by codicils, my whole purpose in desiring some will to be made at the time was not that of obtaining any statement as to final disposition of effects, but solely that of avoiding legal and technical difficulties in arranging the affairs of the estate.

Again, it must be remembered that all these matters had to be attended to in the little space of time between my coming from Denver to be present at Isabel's funeral and my return to go on with my work in Colorado

Father and Mother had both felt that the step was a wise and necessary one, and accordingly wills were drawn by Father which left everything, in the event of his death, to Mother, and by Mother, which left everything, in the event of her death to Father; and, to secure against legal difficulties such as those above referred to, both wills were so drawn that, in the event of Father and Mother both dying without any other instrument being drawn, (something which none of us contemplated at the time), all effects would fall to me as a trustee and executor. I on my part made a will at the same time leaving everything to you both subject to a life interest to Father and Mother for the period of [illegible] lives.

That there was any attempt on my part, or thought on the part of Mother or Father, to permit me to become the sole inheritor of their estate, is inconceivable. The only disposition Father or Mother would ever have thought of making of their effects would have been one of equal division between the children who survived them. This they expressed at the time of drawing these documents, in the words that they knew I would do what was right should events ever so transpire that they should both pass away before making any further disposition.

There was nothing secret about these arrangements. Father did express a desire that very little should be said about his affairs. Both Father and Mother were wholly free to discuss with either of you any of these matters; and if they refrained from so doing, it was no doubt due to the same motive which actuated me in not opening up a discussion, namely, that as matters stood at the time, the obligation was so completely one-sided that to have said much to either of you would have appeared as in the light of seeking to emphasize one's own obligation with a desire of having it relieved or shared. Father and Mother both spent part of the summer with Jennie prior to Father's death; it was as possible, therefore, for her as for me to have the question of the disposition of home effects fully discussed and further determined. To Max there was not the same opportunity, except by letter, though he had, as Jennie also had, the opportunity of discussing with Mother the disposition of her affairs.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Estate - Disposition n.d., 1915-1918

If both of you refrained from speaking, it was doubtless owing to the same kind of feeling which made it difficult, if not impossible, for me to ask Mother during the course of her long illness, to make some disposition of her effects before her death. On two or three occasions I spoke to her, as gently as I could, about what she would like to have done when the time came that her days would be ended. Her reply on reach occasion was that, as I had taken her to live with me for the rest of her life, she wished to leave all these matters to me, knowing that I would do what was right so far as those who might survive her were concerned.

This implicit faith on the part of Father and Mother, which was shared also by Isabel, will always be to me the most sacred and cherished memory of my life. To keep unbroken the knowledge in my own heart of this faith having been more than amply justified, is naturally the only concern I can have, now that they are gone.

That brings me now to a detailed statement of the discharge of my trusteeship in this connection.

Value of Insurance Policies:

Total value of insurance policies at the time of Father's death, less outstanding indebtedness acknowledged, repayment of which was made at time of assignment of policies, and indebtedness subsequently incurred through payment of premiums in keeping policies alive - 4,245.43

Made up as follows:

London-Lancashire Life	370.43
Royal Arcanum	3,000.00
A. O. U. W.	875.00
	4,245.43

To which was subsequently added, as consequence of threatened suit with A.O.U.W., the sum of 1,125.00

Making a total in all of 5,370.43

The original policy in the London-Lancashire Life was for 5,000.00

Against this amount, there was chargeable, on the score of indebtedness at the time the policies were assigned, the following amounts:

On chattel mortgage	2,267.57
On borrowings from the Company on policy, and ~~this became~~	1,770.00
Due as refund of advances on premiums on life insurance in different companies	592.00	4,629.57
Leaving a balance of		370.43

The amounts of $2,267.57, on chattel mortgage, and the refund of $592.00 for advances on premiums to keep up life insurance, represent the refund made to me, and are the monies referred to in a letter I wrote Max, in which I mentioned ~~that,~~ having received from Father, through the insurance policies, monies that I never expected to have refunded.

It was these monies that I wished Max to regard as an offset to any advances I had made to him, and which I should like to have had him consider as a gift from Father to him in substitution of advances I had made. Indebtedness by Father to me to this amount, considering the satisfaction it gave me to be able to assist in these matters at the time, would have occasioned me no sense of loss, as I really never expected that these monies would be refunded. On the other hand, I felt that any feeling of obligation which Max might have for advances made would be transferred from me to Father, which I know would have accorded wholly with Father's desire had it been possible for him to do as he would have liked to do by Max during his life time.

Monies paid out on account of Mother's illness:

With the feelings I cherish towards Mother's memory, it would be wholly preferable to me to make no statement whatever on this score, but to regard all outlays made for Mother during the year she was with me as a service which was the greatest of privileges to render to her.

If you both feel that you would care to let me enjoy this privilege exclusively, I shall feel very grateful for the opportunity of so doing. In that event, all of the available monies from Father's insurance I shall gladly regard as a part of Mother's estate, conserved intact as in the case of the other monies, and to be made divisible in full. I recognize, however, that to ask this much may be to deny you both of what I am sure is not a less privilege to you, of feeling that, so far as it was possible, you also contributed to the relief of Mother's suffering during the whole of the last year of her life. I might add I was careful throughout her illness of Mother's illness to let her know that it was Father's provision for her, not mine, which was bringing her the support she had.

If you wish to share this privilege, the under-mentioned disbursements, by being sanctioned on your part, may be regarded as having been divided among the three of us; or, should you wish the division altered, it can be made in any proportion you think preferable.

I have given the figures only so far as I have vouchers for the accounts or memoranda of cash payments for specific purposes. Never having contemplated making any detailed account of any expenses incidental to Mother's living with me, but having, from the moment she came, regarded all possible outlays as being part of the obligation I had assumed when I accepted the assignment of the policies, I have not kept anything in the nature of an inventory. The amounts, therefore, which are set out here are such only as Mr. McGregor and I, in going through accounts and cheques for the period in question, have found it possible to compile. I shall be glad to send you both to look over if you so desire, all the vouchers for each of the several items enumerated below.

I have also vouchers for all of the other payments which I have charged against either Father's or Mother's estate, and these also can be sent if you wish to see them. As respects these accounts, I should perhaps also mention that I have included only such items as I have vouchers for. There were many expenses incidental to travelling and settling affairs in different directions which might properly be charged had I ever thought of so doing, or did I regard myself as an executor in any official sense.

Rentals:

I have been greatly in doubt as to what proportion of the Roxborough expenses should be chargeable to Mother as in accord with the spirit of the agreement above referred to. Owing to the unfortunate circumstance that Mother was ill all the time she was with me, and that all of the time I had to have nurses in the apartment, both day and night, so that at most I never had use of more than one room and partial use of the bath room and one other room, I have thought that if I were to divide the total rental charge of the Roxborough for the year in half, that would be a fair division. I might, of course, have taken a separate apartment to myself. In order, however, to economize, I tried to get along as best I could without getting extra accomodation, and managed until the last two months to do without an extra room. The total Roxborough rental for the year amounted to $912.00. Half of this amount would be 456.00

House Equipment:

I have had similar difficulty in knowing what division I should make of the expenses incurred in the nature of additional house furnishings and equipment which I was obliged to obtain on account of Mother's illness: such items, for example, as beds, mattresses, pillows, bed-room equipment, electrical supplies, tray waggon, screen, comforter, curtains, towels, oil stove, and other articles required for the furnishing of rooms for Mother and a nurse at the Roxborough and at Kingsmere. I have gone over the items in this connection of which I have the accounts, and taking only such as I would not have purchased but for what became necessary under the circumstances, I find that they reach a total of $343.90.

Some of this equipment is used up entirely; some of it is but partially used; most of it is available for further use; and a little of it is about as good as new. I have wondered whether, were I to write off say, 20 per cent. as being in the nature of a rental value to offset wear and tear, as well as payment for use, I would be doing what was fair in the circumstances. If this seemed reasonable to you, it would mean that I would be incurring an expenditure of $275.12, for which I have articles in my possession, and that Mother's estate would be charged with a rental value on this account of 68.78 .

Perhaps I should say that in this connection, account should be taken of the circumstance that I am making no charge of any kind against Mother's estate for the use of or the wear and tear occasioned my own furnishings, either at the Roxborough or at Kingsmere. Some of these, such as my mahogany furniture, have suffered considerable damage through hot water, medicines, and the like. I think perhaps were I to estimate the outlays as to wear and tear in this connection, they would more than offset what I suggest here as helping to meet the other expenses.

Supposing, instead of writing off 20 per cent. for furnishings bought, I were to write off only 10 per cent. and to estimate the value of furnishings of my own which were made subject to wear and tear, at a value the same as that of the new equipment purchased, and I were to charge 10 per cent. rental all round, that would come to the same thing, and perhaps would seem a more equitable basis of estimate. The Roxborough, I think, charges 25 per cent. on value of furnishings for rental by the year. If, under the circumstances, I charge 10 per cent. all round, would that not be considered fair? Estimated either way, the share to be borne by Mother's estate would come to $68.78.

Payments to Olive:

As to the payments made to Olive, I am a little in doubt as to what it is best to do. While at Kingsmere, Olive's services were almost exclusively for me. On the other hand there was Miss Petrie's or Mrs. Durant's room and board which I provided at Kingsmere through the summer. In Ottawa, Olive's time was almost exclusively given to Mother. I had also the expense of Olive's board, which I provided at Ottawa.

I have not thought of attempting to make any estimate of expenditures on account of groceries, etc. ordered at Kingsmere or ordered in Ottawa; but I have thought that, if the payments made to Olive were charged exclusively against Mother's account, such part of her services as I profited by would be more than offset by making no charge, whatever, for the outlays incurred for Miss Petrie's and Mrs. Durant's board at Kingsmere and expenses of a similar kind at Ottawa, excepting only trays sent up from the Roxborough dining room, but including, of course, outlays for Olive herself. I paid to Olive in all 261.00 . This includes her travelling expenses from St. Catharines to Kingsmere, and a payment of $100.00 which I gave her in December, some $70.00 of which represented a gratuity. I felt that this money was due Olive, from the exceptionally faithful nature of her services; that it would have been Mother's wish that some recognition of the kind should be shown her. I felt also that, but for her willingness to serve as a nurse as well as a servant, I would have been put to much greater expense in securing an additional nurse. The payment of $70.00 to her was in reality more in the nature of a payment for nurse's services than of a gratuity.

Similarly with Miss Petrie, I made her last payment $100.00, instead of the part of a month to which she was entitled. This I felt Miss Petrie also had merited by her faithfulness, and particularly by the fact that she had at no time insisted on hours, and also was ready to economize by at times preparing her own meals, and in other ways.

The payments in the nature of additional recognition of their services, to Olive and Miss Petrie, I should be very glad to assume myself if, under the circumstances, they seem to either of you in any way unwarranted or extravagant.

With respect to the outlays made in payment for groceries supplied at Ottawa, from McGregor's, and at Kingsmere, from Bryson-Graham's, Murphy, the vegetable woman, and others, I find that they came in all to between $500 and $600. I did have a few friends in to dinner occasionally at Kingsmere; but with that exception, this total amount was made up of outlays made exclusively for the family as constituted by Mother, myself, Olive, and the nurses.

Sundry accounts:

Among items which I have not included in any of the above statements, but which are properly chargeable to Mother's account, is a payment of 8.00 for coal oil, used exclusively in a little stove for heating her room; and another payment of 3.40
for coal, used exclusively for the grate in Mother's room in the spring of the year. I have taken no account of coal used in the fall, or coal oil for other than the heating of the oil stove.

The accounts of the Hydro-Electric for electricity supplied during the year 1917, amounted to $28.10. Considering that the electricity was used mostly in cooking, as well as in lighting for the nurses, etc. at nights, were I to take a third of this amount, which is in excess of the average of my accounts thus far this year, I think that would be fair. This would make as a charge against Mother's account, 18.75

The Roxborough accounts show an additional outlay, for meals sent from the dining room to nurses, of about The Roxborough charge is $1.25 a meal for dinner, and an extra 25 cents for service by tray. Additional payments were made to the maids for doing up the rooms, and for servants for attendance in different ways, moving furniture, special elevator duty, and the like. These latter payments I have regarded as being included in the round sum of $100.00, though probably the total additional outlay for meals and payments to servants, etc. would come to double the figure fixed.	100.00
The charges of the Sanitary Laundry, and extra charges by the Roxborough for extra linen, will come to about $50.00 in the year. I am fixing this amount at	25.00
The services of a carpenter were required to fit up the necessary equipment in the way of changing book-cases into cupboards, providing equipment of one kind or another; and special payments had to be made in connection with carpentry work in the store-room to permit of transfer of books, etc. The charges altogether in this connection were probably in the vicinity of $20.00. I have fixed the amount at which is less than the cost of the bill rendered by the carpenter for the fixing of cupboards alone.	10.00
There are many charges for long distance telephones, telegrams, and the like, all of which related directly to some phase of Mother's illness and subsequent funeral arrangements. I have taken only the outstanding charges in this connection. In round figures, for the year, I am fixing them at though here again the expense actually occasioned in this way would be considerably in excess of the amount fixed.	25.00

Travelling Expenses:

There is another charge on the insurance monies which I should like to have met, before any division is made, and that is the transportation and other expenses incidental to Jennie's three visits to Ottawa from Walkerton to see and be with Mother during her illness. I asked on each occasion to be allowed to make payment at the time, or to have the expenses met in the interval out of the $100.00 deposit to the joint credit of Mother and Jennie in the Bank at Walkerton; and so far as any of these expenses have not been met in this way, I should like to have them regarded as a charge properly made against the insurance monies transferred to me on the conditions mentioned.

The only remaining outlays of which I have a record as made on Mother's account are in the nature of payments for travelling expenses, presents which she wished to have understood as being from her alone or equally shared in by me, and one or two items of personal expenditure.

The following comprise the items of which I have a record:

Mother's Travelling Expenses:

According to the terms of the agreement between Father, Mother, and myself, under which these insurance monies were assigned, I would legally be entitled to this balance as representing my compensation for the risk assumed in taking over the policies on the conditions mentioned. As, however, I have never, either in thought or desire, contemplated any possibility of personal profit through this arrangement, I wish this balance to be regarded as a part of Mother's estate, which becomes divisible in accordance with what I believe would have been her wish, namely, an equal division between the three of us, the only surviving children.

Summing up the total of Mother's estate, so far as monies are concerned, the amounts are as follows:

From estate left to Mother under Father's will	830.80
From monies paid Mother by Carnegie Foundation	747.38
Monies derivable from Father's insurance monies	785.04
Total	$ 2,363.22
Add - Rowborough a/cct. (p.18)	456.00

Storage, 1915 - (6 months)
Rawlinson -	45.00
Northeimer -	6.00
	151.00
	2,668.22

Against this amount, before it becomes actually divisible, there is properly chargeable the cost of storage of the household goods at Rawlinson's from the time of Mother's death to the time of their final distribution and disposition. Inasmuch as it may appear to either of you that this disposition has not been made as rapidly as it should have been, I am quite agreeable to allowing the proportion of this expense which you feel properly belongs to you to be fixed by yourselves.

There will also be expense in winding up the affairs of Mother's estate, through the disposition of these effects along the lines that may be agreed upon between us.

Until it is possible to ascertain what the expense in this connection may be, it would seem unwise to make a final division of the monies. It may be that you will feel that these monies should carry interest for the period of time elapsing between Mother's death and their payment, inasmuch as they are monies which have all along been in my possession. I shall be very glad to allow whatever interest payment you think proper in this connection.

Against interest payments of the kind, however, and charges incidental to delays in the disposition of the effects, I should like to point out I have not considered anywhere in connection with either Father's or Mother's estate, or the administration of their affairs, the time and expense to which I have been personally put in their management and acting in the position of a trustee. I think I am not far out when, including matters incidental to the closing up of the House at Avenue Road and the closing up of the house at Grange Road, as well as correspondence that has been entailed in connection with the Frazer monies, the A.O.U.W. policy, and all other matters, I say that the time which has been actually consumed in attending to Father's and Mother's affairs has exceeded the total amount of time I have been able to give to the book on which I have been engaged during the last three years.

I mention this circumstance, not through any desire to emphasize any part I myself have taken, and which I realize is perhaps not as great as either of you would have given had your opportunities been similar, but, viewing this memorandum simply in the light of a statement of the discharge of my duty as executor and trustee, I am anxious that you should know something of the care with which I have sought to surround your interests as well as my own.

I wish also to make clear to both of you why, knowing what was involved in giving an account of my trusteeship and administering of Father's estate, I was anxious not to be drawn into this fresh obligation until after I had discharged my obligation to the Rockefeller Foundation. It would, I think, have been discharged fully by the end of last year had I been free to give my time uninterruptedly to the work. As it is, I have still uncompleted the book on which I have been working, and shall be obliged to give at least the equivalent of five months of this year to the completion of the book without receiving any remuneration whatever for the time so given.

Perhaps, too, I might mention that I have made no charge whatever for the amount of clerical work which has been involved, including postage, stationery, filing, and sorting of accounts, keeping of records, etc., etc. all of which, either directly or indirectly, I have met out of my own pocket.

In this connection, there is one charge which I should like to bring to your attention, not with a view of having you share it, but rather that you may understand wherein I have been let in for some outlay because it was known that certain of the insurance monies had passed into my hands.

When George Lindsey brought his suit against Morang to prevent the publication of LeSueur's book, he appealed to Father and me to help to share the cost, seeing that it was to prevent the publication of the slanderous and libellous attack against Mackenzie which LeSueur had written that he was bringing the action. Father was not in a position to promise anything. I told George that I did not see that I should be asked to contribute anything as I had no dealings with LeSueur whatever.

He pressed for some promise in the event of losing his action. I finally consented to stand for expenses not to exceed $200.00, so far as our family was concerned. I told George that this I would undertake only in the event of being in a position to meet the amount when the time came. George lost his suit in the Supreme Court just shortly after I had been defeated as a Minister, and as I had no visible means of support at the time, he did not press me for the money. When, however, he volunteered assistance towards adjusting matters relating to Father's estate, and he learned of the payments that were being made under the insurance policy, he wrote and asked me if I could not make him the payment of $200.00 promised some years before. This was just before Mother and I started for Denver. Naturally, I paid the amount. My feeling toward George has never been quite the same since.

Lest it may appear that I have sought to obtain back from the insurance monies all payments that I have made on account of home expenditures of different kinds I feel I should perhaps add to this statement the following brief statement as to advances made to Mother on the dates indicated, which were in the nature of contributions to her towards meeting personal outlays and home expenses. These amounts are in no way included in anything of which account is taken in this memorandum; nor would they be properly included, as at the time of their receipt they were regarded by Mother as gifts from me. They do not include any gifts made in connection with Christmas, birthdays, or home visits, but only contributions made on a regular basis, that Mother's mind might be made easier with regard to the strain at different times. They include only amounts for which I hold the Bank's cheques.

Perhaps I should mention also that I told Bella, during the time she was at the Bank of Commerce, that any monies she might pay out of her own earnings for house purposes I would see were restored to her. As far as I was able to total up from her Bank books, she had paid out nearly $100.00 in this way. That amount I put to her credit in the Bank after her death, that it might bring the little sum held in trust for Max up to the figure it was at. This I have not charged in any way against Father's or Mother's estate. That was a matter of honor entirely between Isabel and myself.

I found, however, that some of the expenses of her illness had been met out of her Bank account. These monies I restored to her credit, but I have charged them against Father's estate at the time of his death, and they are mentioned in this memorandum as part of the expenses of Isabel's illness, because Father expressed the wish that he himself should meet, out of the Frazer monies, not only the expenses of Isabel's burial, but also the expenses incidental to her illness.

Part IV

Disposition of Household Effects

There remains to consider the disposition of the household effects. My hope is that it may be possible for us to come to an agreement among ourselves as to the division that should be made without, on the one hand, incurring the expense of bringing in a valuator, or, on the other, sacrificing the goods through public sale. I see no way to effect this but for each one to express quite frankly what articles are personally desired.

The only inventory I have is such a memorandum as was made at the time all the articles in the house were listed in connection with a chattel mortgage, and the memorandum I made at the time the articles were being placed in storage. Jennie, I think, knows what the home possessions are better than I do, and might be able to indicate her wishes from memory, with such assistance as it may be possible for me to give when a final disposition is being made. As I am leaving this week for Colorado, I can discuss with Max personally his wishes as to this part of the estate, and shall bring with me such material as I have in the shape of an inventory.

Neither of you can be quite as anxious as I am to have this whole matter finally disposed of, and if upon receipt of this memorandum, you could each express your wish as to what you would like to have, or what you think should be done, or the manner in which you would like to have it done, I shall do my utmost to meet you both in accordance with any proposal you may make.

My idea as to what Mother meant when she spoke of doing what was right in the matter, is that the estate should be divisible into equal parts among the three of us. What I should like now to get is a statement of the particular articles, if any, which either of you would like to have in your part. Some of the home belongings were brought by me to Ottawa at the time the house on Grange Road was closed, and some were taken to Walkerton by Jennie. So far as any articles I have are concerned, they are open to division along with the rest. If I can come to an arrangement with Max while in Colorado as to what he wishes done as far as he is concerned, my idea would be to send to Jennie, on my return from Colorado, and if possible before returning to Ottawa, the articles she may wish to have.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Estate - Disposition n.d., 1915-1918

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

It may be that, as the publishers are pressing me for the manuscript of my book, I shall have to beg for a little further delay in the final disposition; but, if immediate preferences could be indicated, they might be carried out, and the final settlement deferred to an opportune moment.

Let me say in conclusion that I deeply regret having felt it necessary to enumerate all the details of this memorandum. I had hoped that you both would have shared the confidence in me which Father and Mother and Isabel so wholly shared. It has been with the utmost pain that I have been obliged to feel the distrust of my motives and intentions in these most sacred of all obligations; but I am sure, had your knowledge of the situation been as wide as mine, you would not have construed my acts in the light in which you have.

One thing I deeply regret with regard to this memorandum, and that is that it appears to be a record in part of my own doings, and ~~the~~ desire to take credit to myself for what has been done. I have never been more honest in anything that I have said at any time than when I now say that, at the time I sought to look after both Mother's and Father's affairs, ever since, it was their interests and your interests rather than my own which I had most at heart.

I wish you both to regard this memorandum as a statement which is open to any criticism you may wish to make. It is in no way intended as disposing of the matters to which it relates without giving you every opportunity to raise any question you may wish to raise, or to call for any vouchers or receipts which you may desire to see.

It may seem that the outlays on Mother's account during her stay with me have been considerable and excessive. In this regard, I can only say that the cost of living in Ottawa, and especially in apartments at the Roxborough, where housekeeping is a necessity, is very considerable; also that, as Max well knows, expenses incidental to nurses and illness are very great. In justice to myself and the expenditures made on Mother's behalf, a distinction should perhaps be made between what relates exclusively to her illness and what, had her illness not taken place, would have represented the portion of her estate which she would have paid to me for the charges I have made. Grouping these items they will be seen to be as follows:

Expenses due to illness:

Physicians	641.50
Nurses	1,357.00
Medicines	109.41
Invalid supplies	71.50
Stimulants and mineral waters	44.35
Carriages and motors	14.50
Cash advances for medicines, food, etc.	371.25
Coal oil	8.00
Coal	3.40
Hydro Electric	18.75
Roxborough, additional outlays for nurses, etc.	100.00
Carpenter	10.00
Telegraph and telephone charges	25.00	2,774.66

Expenses apart from illness:

Share of rental	456.00
Share of house equipment	68.78
Payments to Olive	261.00
Laundry	25.00	810.78

The balance charged against Mother's estate is made up of	437.70
which relates to funeral expenses; and	562.25
which relates to Mother's travelling expenses, cash advances to her, and her expenditures for personal gifts.
	$ 4,585.39

You will see from this statement that the amount I have charged, properly speaking, against Mother's living expenses for the year, apart from her illness, does not equal the rental of my own apartment for the year. Had Mother had a house or apartment of her own, the expenditure could hardly have been kept within these narrow bounds.

It is, of course, for you both to say what disposition, apart from the division of the amount, you think should be made of the monies belonging to Mother's estate. It has been my feeling, from the moment that I took over the management of Father's and Mother's affairs, and knew the nature of Max's illness and what it would necessarily involve, that any portion of Father's and Mother's estate which it might be possible to conserve should, so far as might be possible, be kept intact as a source on which Max might be at liberty to draw in meeting expenses incidental to his illness; that only when this necessity should have passed, through his becoming self-supporting or for any other reason, should a final disposition of monies belonging to the estate be made. Similarly, I have felt that it was prudent to have some such available sum to meet emergencies which might arise through unforeseen circumstances in connection with Jennie's family. In other words, I have felt it would be continuing the guardianship of Father and Mother over our lives were monies available in this way conserved to meet the contingencies of life which make its path difficult. That does not mean that I have any desire in my own mind to maintain a possession of the funds in question. I should be only too happy, in the event of you both agreeing upon the wisdom of such a course to transfer the trust to any source you might jointly designate, with the condition only that it be administered as indicated.

It may be that you will each prefer having an equal division made, and yourself determine the disposition you wish made of your share, and that, of course, is entirely for you to say. In the event of your deciding that this is the wiser course, I should like to say now that my share of the monies, whatever it may be, will be held as a fund in the nature of a trust from which Max ~~would~~ be at liberty to draw, so long as it lasts, for any amounts he may require towards meeting expenses incidental to his illness. I shall be pleased if he will regard any monies so drawn as in the nature of monies derived by him from Father's and Mother's estates, for which, so far as I am concerned, there will be no expectation of obligation, either of accounting or return.

My motive in this is precisely identical with the motive I had in proposing a similar arrangement in regard to the estate left by Isabel, which arrangement, I think, afforded as much happiness and satisfaction to those of us who were parties to it as it afforded to Max. I am sure that the happiness he has derived from the use of his car has been increased by the thought that it was primarily Isabel's savings which brought it to him. I am anxious, as respects subsequent borrowings necessary on his part, that, so far as may be possible, he should feel that the monies are forthcoming out of sums which Father and Mother left, rather than from a source occasioning personal sacrifice on the part of anyone. I am sure that such a disposition of any sums which Mother may have left wholly accords with what would have been her wish.

W. L. Mackenzie King.

Postscript to Memorandum:

As showing wherein items of expenditure may have been omitted altogether in the enclosed memorandum, I attach hereto a copy of a letter written Mother on December 16, 1916, which shows that on that date I sent a cheque for an additional $100.00 to be placed to her credit in the Bank at Walkerton.

The only amount I have charged against the Walkerton account is a memorandum of $100.00 in November. To be strictly accurate, this date should be October 20th, at which time I sent the $100.00 in a letter to Harry, asking him to open an account to the joint credit of Mother and Jennie.

I suppose the $100.00 I sent on December 16th, 1916, should be added to the figures in the memorandum and the totals adjusted accordingly.

Ottawa, December 18, 1916.

Dear Mother:

Jen. told me over the phone last night that you would like to have your deposit at the Bank increased. -- Accordingly I enclose a cheque for an additional $100.00 - taken from monies of your own which I am holding in trust. -- Please sign the attached receipt and return it when the cheque comes to hand.*

It was a great joy to me to hear your voice and Jennie's over the phone last night. I am looking forward with great delight to seeing you all at the end of the week. I plan to leave here on Thursday night and to leave Toronto at five o'clock Friday afternoon arriving in Walkerton at 9.10.

Ever lovingly yours,

COPY

* The receipt was evidently not signed or sent in. The bank book will show if the amount is correct.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

In loving remembrance of my dear father and mother, I hereby release my brother, Dr. D. Macdougall King, of all indebtedness to me incurred on account of illness prior to January 1, 1918, and which, according to his account, amounts, without interest, to $4740.06.

My father's action in assigning and transferring to me certain securities because of advances made and to be made to him and to my mother during the life of each of them, has made possible this release as without consciousness of sacrifice on my part, inasmuch as I never desired or expected repayment of advances made my brother, ~~nor did I~~ and never expect to realize out of the securities given me by my father repayment of the monies advanced to him and to my mother. At the time of the transfer of the securities, I anticipated rather a considerable personal sacrifice through long continuance of the obligation their acceptance involved.

Under the circumstances, I shall be happy if my brother will regard this release, so far as financial considerations are involved, as in the nature of a gift from my father to him, a gift which, had his circumstances permitted, my father would gladly have made of his own accord. Giving in this spirit enables me to feel that I have fulfilled a faith which both my father and mother had in me, and none the less preserves me in the feeling which I cherish that to some degree I have been of assistance in helping to restore my brother's health and make possible his life's contributions to the needs of his own family and of humanity, a reward greater by far than repayment of advanced monies could ever bring.

This release is granted in the hope that it may serve to still further aid my brother's recovery, and is without prejudice to any rights accruing to my brother or sister out of my father's or mother's estate, either rights existing at law or binding in moral obligation upon myself as the beneficiary and executor named therein.

re Warwick Manor Apartment

Dear Mr. Hughes:

After reading to my father the memorandum of our understanding as to the terms and conditions on which the property at 236 Avenue Road is being leased for a period of two years, I tried to get you on the phone to tell you of my father's wish to have a formal lease of the tenancy made out. The first few times I called, the phone was busy, and later, when your servant answered it, he told me that you had gone out for a short time.

You may remember that when we talked together at luncheon at the King Edward and discussed the ~~point~~ period of tenancy, I mentioned to you that I should like to make the lease for two years, allowing to us the option during the second year of giving up the tenancy upon three months' notice. I pointed out that what was in my mind in desiring this option was the uncertainty due to the advancing years of my parents, and my desire to secure them against possible change of occupancy should I be away from Canada during any period of the time. You stated that unless the three months' was made optional on the part of the lessor as well as the lessee, it would be one-sided, to which I replied quite frankly that I realized this, but having it one-sided was, for the reasons mentioned, a consideration which I would take into account in reaching an ultimate decision as to the leasing of the apartment. You then assured me that I could count on the lease being made out on this understanding. When I returned home after our conversation, and before seeing Mr. Gregg, I told my father just what you had agreed to in this connection, and he concurred with me in agreeing that it would be wise to take the apartment on this basis, and to incur in so doing the financial sacrifice which might be involved in giving up our house at 4 Grange Road before the lease expires.

In drafting the memorandum last night, you will recall that while running it off you said to me that you would insert a clause giving the owners the right, in the event of the sale of the property, to give three months notice at any time during the second year. I demurred, but you followed with the remark that this would be fair, and I acquiesced rather than express the feeling of surprise and disappointment which I experienced at the moment, and to which I should have been obliged to give expression had I at the time pointed out that the insertion of this clause was quite contrary to the terms which you said would be acceptable while we were talking over the matter at lunch, and on the basis of which, with my father's consent, I subsequently negotiated with Mr. Gregg.

I realize that, having acquiesced in this way, my father and I are in honour bound to accept the condition as you have inserted it in your letter to me, and which at the time of its insertion you spoke of as being a condition extremely remote as a possible contingency; and if you feel that, viewing the entire transaction in accordance with what is strictly honourable, we should accept the condition as a part of the lease, we shall gladly do so. I am not less pleased, however, to leave entirely to you both the recollection of what was said and agreed to when, on your invitation, I lunched with you to discuss the basis of our negotiations, and what you may feel a sense of business and personal honour may in the circumstances demand.

I mentioned to my father that you had said it would be quite agreeable to you to have him prepare a lease in accordance with the terms of your letter to me. This he is arranging to do. Perhaps you would be so kind as to let him know, with reference to the particular feature referred to in this letter, the action which under the circumstances you may desire him to take.

With kind regards, Believe me,

Yours very truly,

Dear Mr King.

re Warwick Manor tenancy.

I am in receipt of your letter of the 31st. ultimoand have fully noted contents thereof.

It is unfortunate that a misunderstanding should have arisen to mar the pleasant recollections of our meetings on this matter.I clearly remember our conversation upon the point to which you now take exception and regret that I cannot agree with you as to the manner in which it was disposed of. It is upon this point that my co-owners have always held me most strictly,in my capacity as agent for the property,and it has been most clearly understood between us that under no circumstances should the holding be closely tied up for a longer period than one year.The object of this stipulation you are fully cognizant of,and I feel sure ,in sympathy with,bearing in mind the heavy annual loss at which the property is maintained.

I quite understood that it was clearly agreed between us that the privilege of terminating tenancyduring second year was to be mutual as between Lesseeand Lessor,and my recollection of the closing of our conversation upon this point was your agreement thereto,after our having mutually decided that even if it became necessary for Lessor to exercise such privilege,the period of notice involvedprovided more than ample time to permit of your people being comfortably installedelsewhere .

As your understanding of the matter appears entirely to the contrary I think it is to be particularly regrettedthat you should have completed the negotiations without further discussion on this clause of our agreement,which,however could not have been otherwise arranged even tho'I were personally disposed to possibly jeopardize the interests of owners in order to relieve you of any anxiety and your people of any inconvenience at a later date.

I have already assured you,and I trust given you practical evidence, of my wish and intention to do all in my power to contribute to the good interests and general comfort of your people during their residence,which I trust may be prolonged for many years,in the building which is also my home,and upon this question that has arisen between us I would reiterate that you need have no misgivings,as my knowledge of the market for such properties forces me to the conclusion that there is no reasonable possibility of reaching the purchase price asked on this property for many years to come.

Mr Sinclair,is,I understand from your father,drafting a form of lease for my perusal . The painters are starting todayand will complete their work early in the coming week.

With kind regards,believe me,

Yours very truly,

Arthur W. Hughes

Dear Mr. Hughes:

My father and mother are spending most of this month with me at my little cottage here at Kingsmere. We are far removed from banks and post offices where it is possible to obtain either drafts or money orders. Under the circumstances, I hope you will excuse my enclosing, at my father's request, two cheques payable to his order, and endorsed by him over to you in payment of a month's rental of the apartment at 236 Avenue Road, to the 31st of August of the present year. The one cheque is for $95.83, the other for $8.75, making a total of $104.58. This is $4.58 in excess of the month's rent. Perhaps you would retain this amount till my father and mother return home, at which time you could refund the small amount to my father, to save the trouble of transmitting the money in the interval.

My mother has spoken a number of times of your kindness in having her feel a sense of possession in the flowers of the garden, and both Father and Mother have spoken frequently of the pleasure the apartment gives them. I am sure when they return to Toronto you will scarcely know them. The change the holiday at my sister's and here is doing them no end of good, and I look forward to their having a peaceful and happy winter in their new home.

My dear Mr King,

I have to acknowledge receipt of your two letters dated the fifth and sixth instant respectively. You will readily understand that, from this distance, and being very much of a moving quant ity, I am unable to keep in close touch with affairs in my Toronto office, and I have therefore left my affairs there entirely in the hands of Mr Dingle, of my office and Mr Malcolm H. Robinson, who holds my general power-of-attorney.

I am writing Mr Dingle and instructing him as far as my individual interests are concerned, to show you every possible consideration and to at once ~~~~ co-operate with you in an effort to find a new tenant.

The legal situation I cannot possibly enter into from this end. The matter, as far as I am concerned, will be satisfactorily settled if a new tenant can be found, and this should not, at this time, be difficult to do under the combined efforts of yourself and my staff.

I hope that Mrs King is bearing up well un-the terrible strain of the recent past and that you are both well, With kindest regards, believe me,

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Hughes:

Owing to my father's death my mother will be obliged to give up the apartment at 236 Avenue Road leased by my father a few months ago. She is going to Colorado to spend the winter with my brother and will leave at the end of the present week, if possible. Meanwhile she will arrange for the disposition of her effects so that the apartment can be immediately vacated.

My mother feels that as she is dependent on the small estate left her by my father you will be anxious and willing to assist her in being relieved of the charge upon her slender resources which the payment of rent of an unoccupied apartment over any period of time would involve. Under the lease as drawn she would have the right to sublet but she would prefer to be released entirely on such notice as in the circumstances you may think would be reasonable.

At her request, and as the Executor of my late father's estate, I am writing to know if you would be willing to suggest a date by which she might be released from the obligations of the lease, provided a check in immediate payment of the amount covering such period were given.

Perhaps you would be agreeable to instructing your office to advertise the premises at once and to take steps securing a new tenant. This month of September would seem particularly opportune for this purpose.

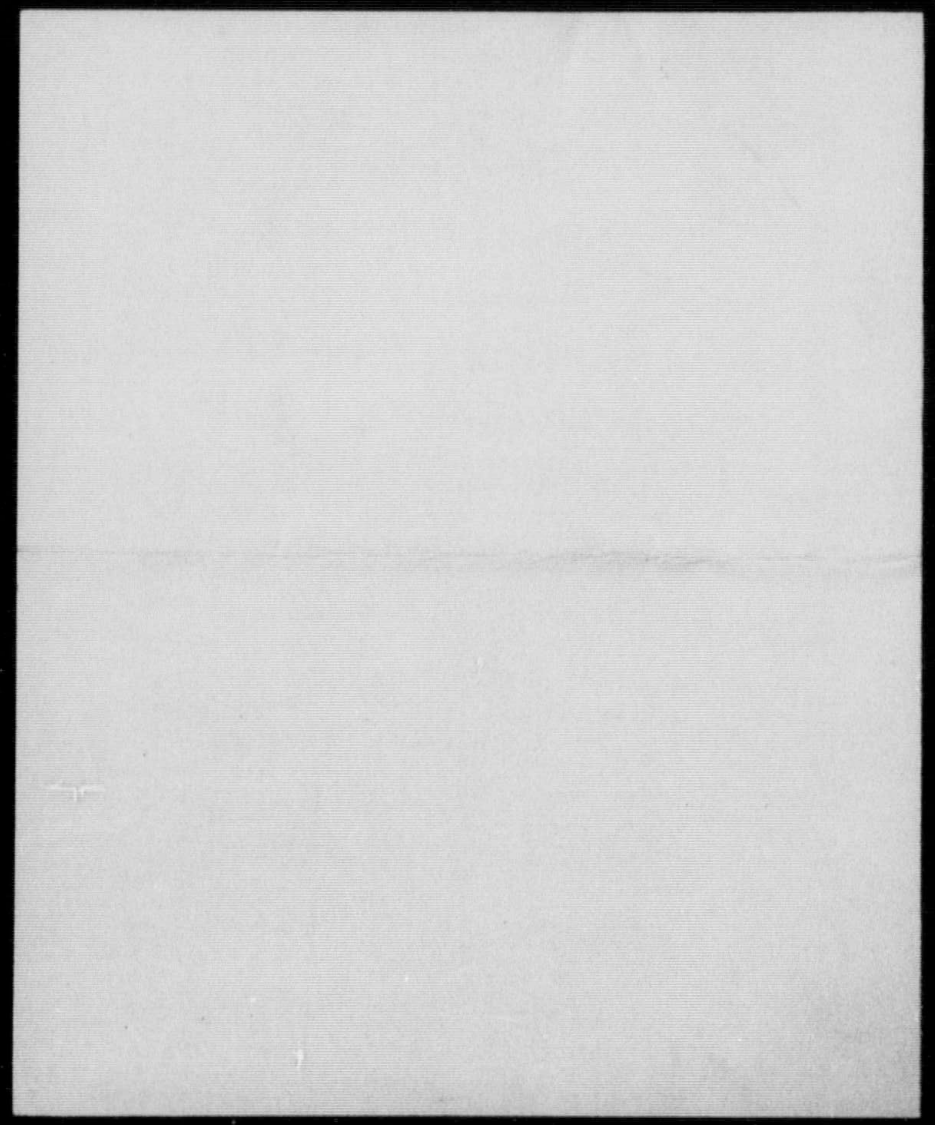

As the Executor named in my father's will, and for this reason only, I mention that I am writing this letter without prejudice as to the position of law in which my mother may be placed, seeing that the lease was executed by her late husband in his own name only and that he being now deceased his income has absolutely ceased.

Please let me hear from you at once, if possible, as I am anxious not to delay my mother's journey to the west.

My dear Mrs Hughes:

Since writing you yesterday, my mother has been advised that her right to sublet the apartment under the lease does not exist, as she has no rights under it, the lease according to law having expired with the death of the party to whom same is let and not containing, as should apparently be required by law any other provision to cover the case of death. Such being her rights of occupancy under the lease having expired, should you care to exercise

Jam rights as a landlord in the circumstances

I assume that you will ascertain the advantages of the law in the matter to exercise any right of immediate vacation, but would by no means wish to take advantage of any position in which the funds herself placed. There is reason however why both of us should do our utmost to secure a new tenant as soon as possible, and I hope you will do all you can towards this end.

After some delay I have at last been able to go into your letter of the 22nd ultimo, returning insurance papers for re-adjustment, and I have concluded that the best thing to do is to re-issue same from September 11th in the way you desire.

I am enclosing an application made out in the terms of your letter, and I would ask you to kindly check same over carefully and if correct please return to me, and I will issue a new receipt, and policy, and cancel the two you returned. The total amount of the new insurance according to the new application will be $2500. with a premium of $32.22 less a rebate of $11.96 under old cancelled policy #4316697 leaving a net amount due by you of $20.26

I trust this arrangement will be satisfactory, and I would be pleased to hear from you as soon as possible, at the same time returning me the enclosed application.

Thanking you for your trouble in this matter, and with kind regards, I remain

Mr. S. Bruce Harman,
General Agent, The London Assurance Corporation,

Dear Mr. Harman:

I have received your letter of the 15th instant; also application form which you have prepared.

On looking over the application, I notice that the printed specifications include printed books and music, pictures, engravings, paintings and their frames, with a statement that in case of loss, no one picture, engraving, or painting and its frame is to exceed the actual cost thereof. As some of the paintings which are stored are considerably in excess of $100, which appears to be the amount specified as recoverable on the pictures, paintings and engravings which you have named in the special typewritten specifications, it would appear to me that it would be better, seeing that the pictures, paintings and engravings are all in the Rawlinson storage warehouse, to have them embraced within the printed lists rather than separately specified on the typewritten one which limits the amount recoverable. For the same reason, it would seem better, instead of specifying a certain amount of insurance on the books, to have the books, as well as the paintings and engravings, included in the general statement, and simply have the policy made out for $100.00 on the piano as it stands and $2,400.00 on household goods under the regular printed heading. If later I should decide to take some of the pictures, paintings and engravings here to Ottawa, I presume it would be possible to arrange for their insurance separately. You will remember that the reason for specifying this amount in separate form was my original intention of having the paintings in Ottawa instead of having them retained at Toronto.

One other point: I observe that the general form states that all the items mentioned are "the property of the assured." In this matter I am acting on behalf of my mother, I being the executor of my late father's estate. The household furniture and furnishings are, under my father's will, the property of my mother, all my father's personal possessions having been left to my mother. It is her wish that in all financial and business matters I should act for her, and I have general power of attorney so to do. If, under the circumstances, it is correct to have the policy made out to me personally, and if the policy can be so made without prejudice to my mother's interest, both she and I would, of course, prefer to have it made in this way; but if there is any possibility of a question arising under the policy as to who constitutes the assured as respects the property, through the policy being made out in my name, rather than in the name of my mother, I would wish to have the policy made out to her instead of to me. Perhaps if you make out the policy to me as the executor of the estate of the late John King, so that the property in that sense will be regarded as mine, that will be sufficient to cover what I have in mind.

If you will issue a new receipt and policy in accordance with the terms of this communication and in amount similar to that set forth on the application you have forwarded, I shall with pleasure forward cheque for $26.66, being the net amount due, as soon as the new receipt is received.

You understand that I am anxious to cover all the furniture and furnishings, including paintings and books, in the manner which will secure to my mother the greatest advantage in the event of possible loss through fire. It is on the assumption that this will be best effected by having everything included under the one printed heading that I am requesting the change in the application form submitted by you to be made. If, however, the application form as presented appears to you to offer a greater security, I would be prepared to accept your advice and to act upon it.

Thanking you for your trouble and assistance in this matter, I am,

Yours very truly,

Re Estate of John King,K.C., and insurance on household furniture & piano.

Dear Mr. Harman:

I am in receipt to-day of your letter of the 19th instant, together with new Interim Receipt and correct account in the above.

Though your letter does not include an answer to the question I raised with respect to the furniture being the property of my mother while the policy will be made out to me, I am assuming that by making the policy to me as executor of my late father's estate and trustee of my mother's interest in this estate, no question will be raised as to the right of recovery of insurance by myself under the policy in the event of amounts becoming payable through possible loss occasioned by fire. Unless the policy can be issued on this condition, I should prefer not to have the property insured, and would ask you to return the enclosed cheque. I shall regard its acceptance as evidence that no question will arise with respect to the point I have raised.

I notice that the present policy is for a term of twelve months only, whereas the policy my father held was for a period of three years; also that the rate for the twelve months is very much higher than the rate of my father's policy for the longer period of time. I presume, of course, that this is due to the goods being stored in a warehouse instead of being in a private residence.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Correspondence - Estate 1916-1917

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

As it is altogether probable that at least a part of the furniture, if not all, will be removed from Rawlinson's warehouse some time before the expiration of a year, I am assuming that it will be possible when that time comes to have the insurance adjusted so as to cover the furniture and other effects wherever they may be transferred, and that in this connection it will be possible to take advantage of the benefit of the lesser rate of insurance should the location entitle the goods to such. Unless this is understood, I should prefer to have the policy made out for a shorter term, say six months instead of twelve, and should be obliged if you would arrange accordingly.

I regret having had to give your office so much trouble in this matter, but as an executor I have been obliged to take precautions which as owner it might not have been necessary to take.

Yours very truly,

Dear Dr. Thistle:

It was only last week that Mother and I got back from Denver. After leaving Mother with Jennie at Walkerton, I came on here, but to-day is the first opportunity I have had of going through an accumulation of correspondence and of finally arranging a few outstanding matters relating to Father's estate. Among the number is the account which I requested from you, for professional services to Mother and Father from the time of your last account up to and including Father's last illness. On Mother's behalf, I enclose cheque in payment of your account herewith, and in doing so would like again to express the consolation it has been to both of us to know that in the illness which carried him away so suddenly Father was fortunate in having the best that medical skill and tender care in nursing could provide.

Dear Dr. Reeve:

Before leaving for Colorado with my mother, I wrote to express to you on her behalf and my own our grateful acknowledgment of your kindness to Father in his affliction, and to ask if you would kindly let me have at your early convenience a memorandum of your account for professional services.

I much appreciate your consideration in not hastening to send in your account, but I shall be glad, nevertheless, to receive it at an early date if that is wholly convenient to you. I am anxious to prepare for my mother a statement of what may be coming to her under Father's estate, but until all outstanding obligations are met I cannot give it finality.

Dear Dr. Goldie:

I enclose cheque in payment of your account herewith. I regret that, having taken my mother to Colorado very shortly after Father's death and having only just returned to Ottawa, I was prevented from sending a cheque immediately.

Let me, in sending the enclosure herewith, express on behalf of my mother and myself our feeling of gratitude to you and Dr. Thistle for your efforts to do all in your power to spare Father's life. While the loss is irreparable, it is a consolation to know that he had through his illness the best that medical skill could do for him.

With kind regards, Believe me,

Dear Mr. Greig:

I enclose cheque for $40.00 in payment of the balance due as rent on the house at 4 Grange Road. This is the payment to cover the month of July up to the 1st of August, which I understand covers in full all indebtedness with respect to these premises. Will you kindly send me a receipt acknowledging a complete discharge of indebtedness against Father's estate, that I may file the same with other papers in this matter.

I am sorry that, having started for Colorado before your letter was received and having been travelling about considerably ever since, I have not had before this an opportunity of expressing appreciation of the kind words it contains, and to thank you on behalf of Mother and myself for the sympathy it expresses. You will be pleased to know that Mother stood the journey to Colorado and back to my sister's in Walkerton in splendid shape, and that the little rest and change at my brother's did her a great deal of good. He, by the way, has made splendid progress and has now resumed his practice as respects consultation

Dear Mr. King,

The last payment for rent made by your father was on the 29th June - & paid in June to the 1st July. The arrangement then made was that he was to pay to the 1st August. as I had rented the house from the 1st Sept. to Mrs. Phillips. The month of August was to be devoted to repairs. There is therefore just one months rent £40.- unpaid.

I have felt very keenly the sudden death of your father, & will greatly miss his cheery visits to The Grange - where he came monthly to pay the rent. The pleasant chats we had.

I know what a blow it has been to you and Mrs King particularly - I notice you are going with her to Colorado, it will be a comfort to her to be with Mrs. S. I think it will also help her to get rid of Goods will not be delivered to any person unless fully identified and authorized to receive them; and persons, whether owners or agents, desiring to withdraw, transfer, or examine goods, must bring this receipt with them.

Cartage and labor charges IN and storage for one month are payable on receipt of goods; thereafter bills payable monthly, unless otherwise arranged. All charges must invariably be paid before the delivery or transfer of goods to any party.

Owners of goods assume all risk of damage by fire, rust, the elements, moth or other vermin, inevitable accident, corruption, depreciation by time or of injury arising from improper packing or unpacking by others than our employees. Goods delivered at owner's risk at places where receipts are customarily refused or when no authorized person is present to receipt for the same and when delivery or shipping orders are incomplete, all omissions supplied by the warehouseman in the exercise of his best judgment and discretion shall be at owner's risk.

A reasonable allowance is expected from persons storing, for the ordinary wear and tear of moving and hauling furniture, and no responsiblity is assumed in transporting fragile articles unless properly packed, and all claims must be made in writing within five days from the delivery of goods.

We will not be responsible for contents of Trunks, Bureaus, Barrels, Cases, or other Packages, unless contents are made known at time of storing and expressly receipted for on schedule.

This receipt is not negotiable, and is valid only in the hands of the party to whom issued. No transfer of any article stored will be permitted unless made on our books.

Present this warehouse receipt and a written order when any goods are to be withdrawn, and it is hereby agreed by the holder of this Receipt that when the charges due on these goods have remained unpaid for 6 months from the date on which they were stored, we shall have the privilege of selling all, or such portions of these goods as shall be necessary to pay the charges and expense of sale, without further notice to the holder of this Receipt.

WHEN THE GOODS ARE TAKEN OUT THIS RECEIPT MUST BE RETURNED.

Dear Sirs:

In looking over the storage warehouse receipt for household goods stored on September 9th, I observe the following clause:

> "We will not be responsible for contents of Trunks, Bureaus, Barrels, Cases, or other Packages, unless contents are made known at time of storing and expressly receipted for on schedule."

Had I known that this clause constituted one of the terms and conditions of the receipt issued by your firm respecting the contents of barrels, cases, etc., I should have been very pleased to furnish this statement at the time the boxes and barrels were taken to the Warehouse; but as nothing was said about it, I assumed that these goods would be in precisely the same position as others the character of which would be apparent on observation.

You will doubtless recall that I asked for a receipt at the time the goods were stored, but was unable to obtain it from your firm; also that I was obliged to write on two different occasions before I was able to obtain this receipt. On October 26th you wrote apologizing for not answering me at an earlier date and mailing them to me as requested, and mentioning that a previous letter had been overlooked. When your letter of October 26th was received, I was unavoidably detained in a hospital at Baltimore, having to undergo a slight operation on my nose and throat. This has prevented me from forwarding at an earlier date the statements as to the contents of barrels and cases listed on your receipt of goods stored. The circumstances being considered, I hope your firm will be agreeable to accepting the statement of contents of the barrels and cases, which I enclose herewith, as if received at the time of storing, and expressly receipted for on schedule at that time.

If it is necessary to obtain a new schedule in order to have these goods expressly receipted for in the manner required by this clause, I should be obliged if you would have the same made, but assuming that you will not hesitate to meet my request in this particular, and assume a responsibility which it was presumed from the outset you would be willing to assume, I have pleasure in enclosing my cheque herewith for $147.12, being in payment of your account as rendered for packing, carting, freight charges, etc., including one month's storage from September 9 to October 9, 1916, amounting to $124.62; and $22.50 in addition to cover storage from October 9, 1916 to January 9, 1917.

Kindly receipt the enclosed account and return.

Dear Sirs:

I have received to-day your letter of the 4th instant. I am somewhat surprised that you are not prepared to accept responsibility of contents of boxes, barrels, etc. of household goods in storage, where one of the clauses in your contract would seem to indicate that you were prepared to do so if lists of contents were supplied at the time of storage. Of course, if parties storing goods are not informed of this clause in advance and the interpretation is placed upon it as as your letter gives, it is meaningless and should, I think, be eliminated from the contract altogether, as it conveys a wholly erroneous impression.

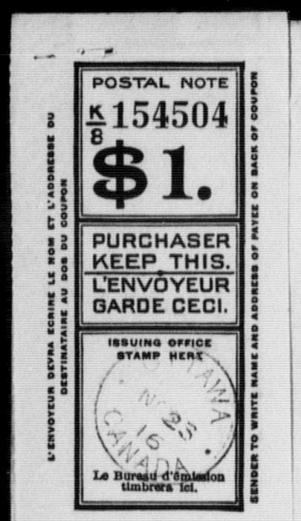

I hope that the assurances your letter contains as to the security of contents of goods in boxes, barrels, etc. will prove correct. Having the goods stored in your warehouse, there is, of course, no alternative other than to accept representations as made by your letter. I confess quite frankly, however, that as a method of doing business your letter comes as a surprise.

Yours very truly,

T O R O N T O,

Dear Sir:-

There must be some mistake in the enclosed communication. Some little time ago I settled an account with the Globe for a subscription to the address given on the enclosed envelope. I explained in the letter that the reason the account had not been immediately settled was that Mr. King had died on the 30th August. As the payment I then made was in full of account rendered I am unable to understand why these further communications should have been sent to the address mentioned on the envelope.

My purpose in returning the letter was not to avoid payment of the amount mentioned in the account, which I would gladly submit if desired, but to bring to your attention some fault in the system of book-keeping, and the sending out of notices and communications of the kind which are particularly distressing under the circumstances.

T O R O N T O,

Dear Sir:-

There must be some mistake in the enclosed communications. Some little time ago I settled an account with the Globe for a subscription to the address given on the enclosed envelope. I explained in the letter that the reason the account had not been immediately settled was that Mr. King had died on the 30th August. As the payment I then made was in full of account rendered, I am unable to understand why these further communications should have been sent to the address mentioned on the envelope.

My purpose in returning the letter ~~was~~ not to avoid payment of the amount mentioned in the account, which I would gladly submit if desired, but to bring to your attention some fault in the system of book-keeping, and the sending out of notices and communications of the kind which are particularly distressing under the circumstances.

In memory of

JOHN KING, M.A., K.C., born 1841, died 1916, an Elder of this Church, and of his wife ISABEL GRACE, born 1841, died 1917, youngest daughter of WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE who, in March 1830, was one of a number of the members of the Legislative Assembly and other citizens of York who met together to form, in Upper Canada, a congregation in connection with the Church of Scotland and who became the founders of St. Andrew's Church.

"Our vows, our pray'rs, we now present : God of our fathers! Be the God

paraphrase 11.2

In love and gratitude for the self-sacrificing devotion of their father and mother to their family, and for hallowed memories contained within these sacred walls, this memorial was erected on the 3rd of March, 1930, by their surviving children JANET KING LAY and WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING on the occasion of the Centenary of St. Andrew's Church.

Dear Mr King,

St. Andrew's will celebrate its Centenary on 3rd March (Monday) of this year.

We contemplate a week of activities; but on Mon. 3rd March we intend to have a sort of Reunion, at which we earnestly wish you to be present and to say a few words — if your duties will permit, — perhaps about your family's early + long connection with the Kirk.

The occasion will be a great one for all of us if you can be with us on that Evening — and, indeed, on any of the other days also. We hope to have the Lt. Governor, Mr Ella Beattie, and represen-tatives of all the Churches.

With very cordial wish

Yours sincerely

Stuart C. Parker.

Reverend Stuart C. Parker, B.D.,
42 Admiral Road,
Toronto,
Ontario.

My dear Dr. Parker:

I appreciate very deeply your kindness in writing with respect to the Centenary of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, on the 3rd of March of this year, and, in particular, the wish you have expressed that it might be possible for me to be present and say a few words on that occasion.

I can assure you that nothing but the most imperative of obligations would prevent me from participating in an event fraught with so much of historic and, to me, personal interest as well.

I confess, however, that I do not see how it is going to be possible for me, much as I should like to be able so to arrange it, to be absent from Ottawa on ~~the~~ any day of the week, commencing Sunday, March the 2nd. Parliament, as you are aware, re-assembles on February the 20th, and there is every probability that the debate on the Address may reach on ~~until~~ into that particular week, and that it may be accompanied by one or two divisions. This session, in more respects than one, is likely to be critical and, apart from all else, I shall have to set my colleagues an example of being pretty continuously in the House and in touch with the Members. The experience of several years has taught me how perilous it is, once Parliament assembles, to plan more than a day or two ahead for ~~business~~ absences of any kind. This year, to plan to be away at all is going to be particularly difficult.

Your letter revived in my thoughts a small matter which I have long had in mind, and which, if it can appropriately be associated with the Centenary, would afford me very great pleasure. I have felt that I would very much like to have placed on the walls of St. Andrew's Church an appropriate tablet in memory of my father and mother, and to have the tablet placed there at the time ~~when~~ I am holding the office of Prime Minister. The only reason that I have permitted so many years to slip by, without seeing if this could be arranged, is the difficulty I have found, since assuming office, of giving any time whatever to matters that are more or less distinctly personal. I can see, however, in this regard there is likely to be little in the way of change, and indeed that, in all probability, the pressure of my public work will increase rather than lessen, for such further time as I may continue to hold office. If, therefore, the memorial is to be placed in the church at all, it would seem that, in every way, this would be the most appropriate time. What has really concerned me most has been the wording of such a tablet and the form it should take, whether bronze or marble.

If it is not burdening you too much, I should be very grateful if you would drop me just a line, indicating in the first place whether it would be agreeable to the members of the session and to the trustees to have such a tablet erected, and to give it a suitable place, and, secondly, whether, in the event of finding it possible to have the work executed in time for the tablet to be put in place by March the 3rd, its unveiling at the time by myself, if it were possible for me to be present, or, if it were not, by someone on my behalf, would be regarded as appropriate in connection with the Centenary proceedings. Thirdly, whether it would be preferable to have the tablet in bronze or marble, and fourthly, if this is not asking too much, the kind of wording which would be regarded as most suitable.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Correspondence re: Mural Tablet n.d., 1930

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

I might say that what I have in my own mind is something similar to the tablet erected to my sister, Isabella, by the Girls' Own Club, in the Hall adjoining the Church, something which would be just sufficient in wording to indicate the association of our family with the church, and the fact that my father was, for some years, one of its elders. The tablet would be placed there by myself, and I should be glad to associate with my name that of sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, of Barrie, Ontario. We are the only members of the family left. Had my brother and other sister been spared I should have welcomed, above all else, the tablet to my parents being placed there as a memorial by their children. The mention of Mrs. Lay's name and my own would, I assume, be appropriate as those of the surviving members of the family. I had thought once of having the tablet presented by myself as Prime Minister of Canada, but the more I reflect on that, the more I am inclined to think the mention of the office which I now hold would be inappropriate.

I shall give to the wording of the tablet great care and thought and will, of course, submit it, in the first instance, for the approval of yourself and the members of the session, but, before giving further thought to the wording of the tablet, perhaps you would let me know just whether the church would welcome my making a presentation of the kind, and whether, seeing that it is doubtful as to my being able to be present at the Centenary, some time other than the Centenary itself might be more appropriate.

With respect to the Centenary, I might say I fully understand that it might be inadvisable to introduce a feature such as this one as a part of its proceedings. On the other hand, I can also see where, should it be possible for me to be present myself and to unveil the tablet, it might, everything considered, very fittingly be made an appropriate feature of the Centenary proceedings.

With kind regards,

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Mr Mackenzie King.

Thanks for your kind & most interesting letter. I shall go on hoping that circumstances may yet allow you to be in your old Kirk on Monday, March 3rd, and I do trust you will do all in your power consistent with the performance of your high duties, to come to us. You will have a wonderful welcome. The Moderator of the United Church will be there, and the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, with others. It would be wonderful that the Prime Minister of Canada should in his own Old Church, sit between the Official heads of Churches so recently in Opposition! It would be a great Occasion & memorable in Canada.

Perhaps the unveiling of a Memorial on that Evening - if it can be prepared in time - to your parents would appear to Parliament a good and sufficient reason for letting you absent yourself for a few hours. I can see that merely to be present at the Centenary of a congregation might be reckoned a frivolous excuse'. But the most hardened member of the Opposition & the most exacting member of the Government could hardly do otherwise than release the Prime Minister to arrange important business with goodwill in order that he might honour his father and his mother in the Church to which they were attached.

So, as you guess, your kind proposal to place a memorial in St. Andrew's is most acceptable to us here. Answering your second question, - your unveiling of it, as I have suggested, would certainly be most appropriate to the Centenary. Your family was "in at the start" in 1830.

Now, as to the third question, relating to the material of the tablet. We have bronze, brass & marble already in the Church, so that you might please yourself entirely in the matter. Brass is always, I think, very suitable in a Church whose interior walls are not bare stone, but plaster, painted, as ours are. If you are not thoroughly bound to the idea of a mural tablet, you might be interested in our Scheme of Memorial stained-glass windows, of which three will shortly be built in. They are very beautiful, as the Committee in Charge are dealing only with the best artists in St. Britain & on this continent. The three about to go in are the work of Canadians — the result of competition, with names of competitors suppressed; so Canada is not being left behind even in Art! I am enclosing a copy of our Magazine which will explain how the large windows have been divided into two series — one series above the Tablet & one below. I am mentioning this just in case it should appeal to you, and not at all to suggest that you should consider a Mural Tablet unwelcome. I hope I have made this clear. If you should be more attracted by the idea of a memorial window, it could not be made for the Centenary. But a Mural Plate designed to go beneath it and carrying the inscription could certainly be cast in time for unveiling on March 3rd, - the window to be dealt with some months later. But you will please yourself entirely, and we shall be pleased with your decision.

Your fourth question relates to the wording on the Tablet. You are the best judge of what ought to be set down. You know the familiar formula —

TO THE GLORY OF GOD

I am sure you will compose a most suitable and beautiful inscription. Indeed, no one can do it but you, and the most we could do to help would be to adjust the inscription – or suggest the adjustment of it – to suit the area of the Tablet.

Certainly the Church will welcome your memorial to your honoured parents, whatever its form: And, because I am convinced no element in our Centenary proceedings could be more appropriate than your unveiling of the Memorial, may I still hope that it will be possible for you to carry it through on 3 March, or, if that evening should be absolutely impossible, some other day of the week 2 — 9 March, (preferably, if the 3rd is found impracticable, the 4th or the 6th.).

Please let me know, if you have time to do so, just what the prospects are. I shall gladly keep in touch with you, & do all possible to facilitate matters.

Thanking you for your letter,

Yours very sincerely

Stuart C. Parker.

P.S. Incidentally I think your position as Prime Minister should be noted on the inscription. It would arrest thought. Perhaps it might run —

"Erected by their surviving children, Mrs H. McLay, and the Rt. Hon. W.L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada."

Reverend Dr. Stuart C. Parker,
St. Andrew's Church,
Toronto, Ontario.

My dear Dr. Parker:

I thank you very warmly for all the trouble to which you have gone in replying to the many queries of my recent letter. Had I the means so to do, nothing would please me more than to present a window to the church as a memorial to my parents. Unfortunately, such endowment as I have in the matter of worldly goods has come in largest measure through friends who have known of my impecunity, and who, through their generosity, have sought to make some provision for the meeting of the many demands of my public life and work.

I really feel that I should not let my thoughts run beyond the presentation of a mural tablet, and, since you have been so kind as to say that the church would accept a memorial tablet, and that you feel it would be appropriate to have the tablet unveiled at the time of the centenary celebration, I have decided, should it be possible to secure the tablet ~~to be~~ placed in the church, to make every possible effort to be present myself for the purpose of its unveiling. I have made a note of the date on which you would like to have me come, and I shall seek the co-operation alike of my colleagues in the government and the Leader of the Opposition to make this possible.

I shall be happy to leave the selection of an appropriate location for the tablet to yourself and the Trustees, but, in this connection, I would be obliged to you if you would indicate to me the size which you think the tablet should be. My thought is to make mention on it simply of the fact that my father was an elder of the church, and that my mother was a daughter of William Lyon Mackenzie, who was a member of the original congregation at the time the church was founded. I should like to embody the thought that St. Andrew's had been the place of worship of themselves and their children in Toronto, and of the gratitude which was felt by their children, alike for their noble lives and the close association of our home and the church.

I have been giving careful thought to the possible mention of my present position on the tablet. The more I think of it, the more I am inclined to feel that, were I to be permitted to make mention of the fact that the tablet is being erected at the time of the centenary, the date, in association with my name, would be sufficient to identify my position as Prime Minister with the presentation of the tablet, and to afford any significance which might attach to the memorial being given at the time of my holding the office of Prime Minister.

There is one other thought which I have in mind, and which, indeed, in your sight, may appear heretical. I have often experienced a feeling of indignation at the words, "to the glory of God", which usually preceed tablets of the kind. Indeed, in my book "Industry and Humanity", written some twelve years ago, will be found the words: "Man is forever erecting altars to the glory of God, and forever worshipping at them in pride of self". I have just that sort of feeling about most of the mural tablets that I have seen, and, if I have been a long time in placing a tablet in the church to the memory of my father and mother, it has been, in part, owing to the dread which I have had of anyone imagining that there could be a thought of self in anything of the kind. The church itself is to the glory of God, and that, I assume, might be considered to cover any requirement with respect to aught in the way of memorials which find a place on its walls. Unless, therefore, there is some insuperable rule to the contrary, I would much prefer omitting these particular words from the tablet, and having its inscription begin simply with the words "In loving memory".

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Correspondence re: Mural Tablet n.d., 1930

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

If need be, I have, I think, a precedent which I might cite as a good one. In St. Giles Cathedral, there is a mural tablet erected to the memory of King Edward. It reads:

"In memory of Edward King of Great Britain and Emperor of India
1901 - 1910
His Scottish subjects have erected
This memorial in grateful and Loyal remembrance"

I am sure the authorities of St. Gile's had in mind all that was essential to this memorial finding its place in the cathedral. I hope, therefore, I may be pardoned the omission of these words, which, I am sure you will recognize, is due to a sense of profound reverence, rather than to any lack of it.

I shall have the mural tablet made in Toronto, so as to lessen complications as to its erection. Just as

"Re Memorial Tablet"

Dear Sir

Following our telephone conversation of this morning, we got in touch with the Rev. Stuart Parker, and went over to St. Andrews Church to see what spaces were available for your proposed tablet.

There is a space on the south wall, west of the Chancel, alongside the war "Honour Roll" which is in near view of your former family pew H33, (as set down in the year's report of 1912), or, as an alternative, there is a space of 8 feet on the west wall between two other tablets which also is near the old family pew.

If in the former position, it might be made uniform in shape with the one to Rev. D. J. Macdonell and his wife on the east side of the chancel, which is 24" x 34", one of the largest in the church, most of the others being around 20" x 30" or smaller.

There are no memorial tablets on the east side of the nave and Mr. Parker said any position there is also at your disposal.

We send herewith, a few small facsimile prints of some tablets we have done which may help you in giving us suggestions in preparing a draft for your approval. Some of the tablets illustrated are a bit out of date. To-day it is generally recognized that a straight away inscription well massed and following one style of letter throughout is preferable. (See the Tom Thomson example)

We understand your tablet is to be in position for unveiling on Thursday, March 3rd, and should be in hand at as early a date as possible. A tablet similar to the Macdonell plate would be about $200.00.

Hoping we may be of service to you in the matter, we remain,

Yours very truly,

Reverend Thomas Eakin, D.D.,

Toronto, Ontario.

My dear Tom:

I have decided to place in St. Andrew's Church a memorial to my father and mother, and to come up and unveil it on March the 3rd, on the occasion of the centenary celebration of the Church. A few days ago Dr. Parker wrote asking if I would come up for the celebration. It will be a little difficult for me to get away, for our Parliament will be beginning its proceedings just at that time. However, I have, for some years past, had in mind placing a tablet in the Church to the memory of father and mother, and it has seemed to me that the centenary celebration would be a fitting occasion, more especially as it so happens that my grandfather was the secretary of the first meeting called for the purpose of forming what subsequently became the first congregation of St. Andrew's Church.

In the correspondence which has passed between Dr. Parker and myself, he has suggested that I should make mention, on the tablet, of my present position. I can see quite clearly what he has in mind is of interest to the Church. It might even be said, as His Excellency the Governor General expressed it to me, that it would not be without honour to my parents that the mention of my present position should be made on the tablet, seeing that it is being erected by me at the time I am in office. Just the same, my own feelings are all against anything of the kind. It might be said, while not with equal truth, that to appearances the tablet had been placed there by me to do honour to myself, as much as to the memory of my father and mother, by having my name and present position recorded on the walls of the Church.

I am inclined to believe that you will agree wholly with me. I am perfectly sure that my sister Jennie will be of my view. At the same time, I want to do only what is right and what would be considered by the members of the congregation as the most appropriate and desirable thing.

I should be very grateful, therefore, if you would read over very carefully the two draft wordings of the tablet and what I have said concerning them in my letter to Dr. Parker, and give me very frankly an expression of your own view an this point, and, if you have time for it, on the other points on which I require so much in the way of guidance.

I dislike very much troubling you with a matter of this kind, especially as I know how occupied each moment of your time must be. However, I also know the affectionate regard in which you held both my father and mother, and there is, as well, the bond of our own friendship. I shall, therefore, be most deeply grateful to you if you will give me the benefit of your very sound judgment in this matter, which is not without its significance to the Presbyterian Church as well as to our immediate family.

As the wording of the memorial will have to be given to the engravers almost immediately to permit of the work being completed in time, I shall be very grateful if you can find it possible to let me have a line from you within the next few

Dear Mr. Leathem:

You will recall my speaking to you, Sunday evening last, of my intention to place in Saint Andrew's Church, Toronto, a memorial to my father and mother on the occasion of the centenary of the church on March 3rd, next. I have thought that, instead of calling to see you personally, it would, perhaps, give you a clearer idea of what I have in mind, and of points on which I am anxious to have the benefit of your opinion, were I to send to you a copy of a letter which I have just dictated to Reverend Dr. Parker of Saint Andrew's Church, Toronto, who very kindly has offered to superintend the work of the erection of this small memorial.

I should be grateful if you would be so kind as to read over the letter and its enclosures, and, at your convenience, let me have a word from you concerning them.

Reverend Dr. Stuart Parker,

Dear Dr. Parker:

I am enclosing alternate draft wordings of the proposed mural tablet to the memory of my father and mother. You will observe that the one draft contemplates the memorial being given by my sister and myself, and, the other, the memorial being given by myself alone. My preference is for the first of the two, which includes my sister and makes no mention of my present position.

The second, which rather throws into prominence the fact that it was at the time of my being Prime Minister of Canada that I had given this memorial in loving remembrance of my parents, and which associates with it the fact that my grandfather, while a member of the Legislative Assembly, was connected with the founding of Saint Andrew's church, might be held to give a special significance to the association of Church and State. I can see where, apart from personal feelings and considerations, the ~~other~~ latter wording might have some advantages over the former in an historical tablet. On the other hand, the personal motive is the governing one in the memorial, and it would be most distressing to me, if, as I believe might be the case, the public, or any part of it, might feel that I had sought, through the medium of this memorial tablet, to give my own name and position a place on the walls of the church. The more I think of it, the more I feel I should not consider the second draft at all.

At the same time, I would like very much to have your opinion upon it, and I am going to ask for the opinion, as well, of my intimate friend, Reverend Dr Eakin and of Doctor Leathem, my own minister here. When I have the consensus of view from the three mentioned eminent divines, I shall then give further consideration to which of the drafts I shall finally decide upon, though I shall not promise, even if all three opinions differ from my own, to alter my present view.

I might say that I have had a word with His Excellency, the Governor General, who has good judgment and good taste, as well as wide experience in these matters, and he favours the second draft. His associations, however, are primarily with the State, and very much with purely official life. In my mind, there is something more immediately personal and wholly non-official in these particular associations with the church.

You will notice that, in the first draft, I make a general reference to the association of my grandfather, with others, in the founding of Saint Andrew's church. In the second draft, I make specific mention of the fact, which is recorded in Professor McCurdy's "Life and Work" of the late D. J. Macdonell, of my grandfather having acted as secretary of the meeting over which Sir Francis Hincks presided, and which was called for the purpose of forming, in Upper Canada, a congregation in connection with the Church of Scotland. I hardly know which of these two wordings is preferable. I should be grateful if you would give an expression of your own views.

I am not wedded to any wording of either draft, or to any aspect of the arrangement in either. I am prepared to eliminate or add words, phrases or paragraphs, as may be thought best, and, in this connection, shall welcome any suggestion. For example, the verse of the paraphrase quoted might be placed at the end of the tablet, instead of in the centre, though, it seems to me, the centre is preferable. I have, perhaps, used the phrase "this church" where I should have used the words "Saint Andrew's Church", or where, perhaps, I should have used the words "the congregation" or "this congregation", in preference to either. Here again, I would be pleased to have alterations suggested.

I have inserted the word "March" before 1930, as the month in which the first meeting called to form the congregation was held. This will have to be verified before it can be inserted. I wish I had, but I do not appear to have anywhere, the exact date of this meeting. If the church records contain it, the date, as well as the month and the year, might be inserted. I rather like the making mention of the two years 1830 and 1930. I like, too, the association of Church and State in its broadest aspect, and in its more immediate bearing upon our own family, as I have sought to make mention of it in the tablet. If, however, in your opinion, I have gone too far in this particular, please do not hesitate so to advise me.

You will notice that I have worked in a reference to York (the name which Toronto had prior to 1834), also to Upper Canada (which was the name of the province prior to 1840) and to the Church of Scotland which, through Saint Andrew's, links up this country with Scotland and which helps to preserve the continuity of our church history. I have also introduced mention of the centenary, which is another historical feature.

The circumstances that, a hundred years ago, my grandfather, while a member of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada, acted as secretary of the first meeting which led to the founding of Saint Andrew's, and that, at the end of a century, it should fall to my lot, as Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada, to unveil a tablet which records this, is a fact which, I believe, is worthy of record, alike in the history of our church and our country, and which will, I think, arrest attention, as well as occasion reflection.

I fear I have gone unduc length in the matter of this mural tablet, which, after all, is a very small affair. I can see, however, therein its erection, in connection with the centenary, has a certain appropriateness, and I am most anxious that, in so far as that may be the case, nothing should be left undone, or, on the other hand, be overdone, which, in either case, would detract from the essential purpose of the tablet. To pay, in the presence of the members of Saint Andrew's congregation, a tribute of love and gratitude to my parents, which it is so much in my heart to give, and to commemorate an association of nearly a quarter of a century of themselves and their family with the life and work of Saint Andrew's church, is what I have really most at heart.

The centenary feature affords an added interest, and gives a larger historical association. If, however, the latter feature were in any way to detract from the former, I should very gladly wholly sacrifice that particular aspect. It is so difficult, in matters of this kind, to be, at one and the same time, personal and impersonal, and not to permit the one to exclude too completely the other. One has to fall back on the kindness and good judgment of those who are in a better position to bring a detached point

Rt. Hon W. L Mackenzie King
Prime Minister of Canada

Dear Sir

Upon receipt of your wire to-day, I telephoned the Rev. Mr. Parker regarding the wording for inscription, which you were sending for his consideration, but, as he had not received it, will have to wait till Monday, when we can determine whether the matter will not be too lengthy; though I think there will be ample space without crowding.

To expedite matters, we shall submit first a quarter scale sketch for your approval, and a blue print later, of the full sized drawing, as a final check up before proceeding with the engraving.

Regarding position, I would say that, as Mr Parker was not with me at the Church, the suggestions in my letter were "off my own bat": one objection to the space you prefer, is, that there is a radiator immediately below where the tablet would come, and the consequent moisture arising might cause a discoloration to the lacquered plate, in time. Also, since consulting Mr Parker, I gathered that he did not favor that position, and suggests the east wall of the nave, as a better situation, and at present unadorned with any memorials.

Yours faithfully
W. W. Alexander

Dear Sir.

Judging from the matter for inscription, which Dr. Parker telephoned to me this morning. there will be no difficulty, in bringing it on the tablet, without crowding. The enclosed blue print, which is about one half size of your proposed tablet, will give an idea of the style lettering would appear. with much less wording and the plate 24" x 34". Inscription would be longer than "Dedicatory Prayer" on this specimen. Upon receipt of the final draft of inscription, we shall lose no time in submitting sketch.

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

I have your letter this morning and am hastening to write you, returning your drafts and the suggestion you so kindly invited.

I do think that the historical interest of the Memorial will be enhanced by the mention of your high office in the State. That is one consideration which I have taken into account in altering the inscriptions. Another is that it is not possible now to determine accurately whether your grandfather was Secretary of the meeting in 1830 or not. I have been investigating in connection with my History all existing "original sources" and find that the source of Prof. McCurdy's statement was itself by that time hearsay. The probability is that John Ewart was Chairman, not Sir Francis Hincks; so you will see at once why I suggest that it should not be mentioned on the Tablet that Mr. Mackenzie was Secretary. I am inclined to believe he was, but I cannot find any proper evidence: so many papers have been lost these many years.

A third point is, however, that it is, if not perfectly clear, at least fairly clear that the meeting took place on Wed. 3rd. March, 1830, three days before the rising of the Legislative Assembly in that year.

Taking these points into consideration, I am suggesting the ~~following~~ Enclosed combination of your drafts, which may be of assistance to you in making up the Inscription.

Mr. Alexander, of Alexander & Cable, has just been speaking to me on the telephone. I read him your two drafts. He says that, as long as the Inscription does not run beyond about a hundred words, it can be negotiated quite well. The paragraph telling of the donors will be in smaller type. Also, he will be grateful to have the wording, if possible, by the end of this week.

He tells me that he- thoughtlessly as he confesses- mentioned the South Gable Wall as a suitable location. It is not so by any means, as he tells me this morning he has informed you. The only really clear spot is taken on this one side by the Soldiers' Tablet, and on the other by the Tablet to Rev.D.J.Macdonnell. On the spot which his eye hastily caught there is a radiator, while on occasion the whole of that wall is banked with flowers and wreaths in memory of the Fallen.

Either the East Wall or the West Wall would provide a location. On the West Wall there are many Tablets; but even there, there is at one suitable point a space of about eight feet(so Mr.Alexander says). On the East Wall there is really no memorial at all: there- and that is what has been in my mind- we could place the Tablet to your dear Father and Mother in the choicest of places.

We are all so interested in the matter here,- needless to say, myself even more than many; and if you will command me at any time I shall do all possible to advance the work.

I am enclosing a copy of my little Magazine. I see the "Globe" has been working on it overnight: it was issued only yesterday!

Yours very sincerely,

Stuart Parker

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

OTTAWA, 3rd February 1930

Dear Rt. Mackenzie King,

As the result of a good deal of thought, I prefer the form of words for the Memorial Tablet which associates Mrs Lay's name with your own in this act of devotion to your Father and Mother. But at the same time I should like to see the fact of your Office recorded in the inscription. I wonder if you would be willing to add the words "Prime Minister of Canada" so that the inscription would read "by their Surviving children Janet King Lay and William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, on the occasion of the Centenary of St. Andrew's Church." The omission of Right Hon^ble and of any other titles or orders indicated by letters following the name would certainly safeguard you from any stupid criticism. The simple fact that you were at the time indicated Prime Minister of Canada could give offence to none and would really enhance the historical value of the Tablet.

This is the main point upon which you have been so kind as to ask my opinion. There are one or two other matters of minor importance
In the first line of the verse from the Paraphrase I should prefer the word "prayers" written in full. It is so printed in the most recent Hymn Books of The Church of Scotland and the Church of England. The archaic form with the elision of the "e" would, I fancy, look strange on the tablet.
As given in the typewritten copy the numbered "2" the Paraphrase looks like "eleven" instead of "two". Though this is due to the typescript, yet it is the kind of error that tends to be perpetuated. We found in Scotland when so many war memorials were being placed in Churches that the craftsmen showed a perverse ingenuity in making mistakes in the final workmanship.
I am so glad to know that this inscription is to find a place in one of our historic Churches.
With kind regards Yours very sincerely William H. Leathem

Dear Mr. Leathem:

I am very grateful to you for your letter, just received. Oddly enough, I had had in mind the very suggestion you yourself have made. I did not wish to put it forward until I saw how the form of wording might be viewed by Dr. Eakin, Dr. Parker and yourself. I have still to hear from Dr. Eakin and Dr. Parker, and will let you know their views, after I have ascertained them.

I am glad you have drawn my attention to the spelling of the word "prayers." I had had my stenographer, in copying the verse from the paraphrase, copy it exactly as it was printed in the Bible from which I was quoting. I drew attention to the archaic form used. This, in view of what you tell me, in your letter, I am only too happy to discard. I am on the look out for the number of the paraphrase which, as you say, looks like eleven instead of two. I shall see that that is made correct. I hope you think the inclusion of the verse appropriate.

You may be interested in knowing that, in a record which I have just secured from our Archives, the following is a Minute of the Presbyterian Church, of the 8th August, 1833:

> " York, Upper Canada 29th July 1830. We the undersigned regularly constituted and appointed Trustees of the Presbyterian Congregation of St. Andrew's Church of York request that your Society will be pleased to ordain and appoint a Minister to preside over us. Signed.
> H. Carfrae, James F. Smith, Alex. Murray, Jacob Letham, John Ewart, Thomas Carfrae, Jr., W. Rose."

It is quite true that Jacob Letham's name is spelled a little differently to your own, but I have been wondering whether this was due to the happy effects of a voyage across the Atlantic, or some other reason, and if it is not just possible that your ancestors as well as mine may not have been associated in the foundation of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto.

Again, with many thanks for your letter,

Dear Dr. Parker:

I have been having our Archives searched to see what records they may contain with reference to the founding of Saint Andrew's Church, Toronto. I enclose a letter from Dr. Doughty, the Chief Archivist, addressed by him to my secretary, Mr. Baldwin. The quotations given from the publications to which it refers would appear to agree with the record of the foundation of the church contained at pages 66 and 67 of the Life and Work of D. J. Macdonell, except that it is stated at page 67 of Macdonell's Life that the Honble. Francis Hincks was at the first meeting, whereas, as Dr. Doughty points out, and as I have verified at page 10 of the reminiscences of his public career by Sir Francis Hincks, Sir Francis did not arrive in Toronto until the winter of 1830-31, at which time the Legislature was in session. Sir Francis, therefore, obviously could not have presided at the meeting which was held apparently in the spring of 1830.

In Robertson's "Landmarks" the name of the Chairman of the meeting is given as John Ewart, which I imagine is correct. This would appear to be the meeting of which my grandfather acted as secretary, though the extract here from the "Landmarks" does not make a specific mention of this such as is contained in McCurdy's Life of the Rev. D. J. Macdonell.

I hope there may be in the Church itself records which will enable us all to get the exact particulars. I recall having heard my mother mention at different times that her father had been one of the founders of Saint Andrew's Church, though, whether by this was meant that he was one of those who participated in the meeting called to establish the Church, or was a member of the first congregation, or a contributor toward the cost of building the Church, I am unable to say. We shall have to rely on ~~the~~ exact dates as to how far I may go in making mention of my grandfather's association with the Church at the time of its beginning.

Mr. Tisdale may have some knowledge of the facts through papers in his possession. He would, I am sure, be glad to co-operate in any way in securing the exact facts.

I would not think of troubling you in the matter of any of these records, did I not know that in connection with the Centenary itself you and members of the Session and Board of Trustees will be anxious to have such information as it may be possible to gather on the founding of the Church.

I have obtained from Mr. Leathem his preference for the form of words for the memorial tablet, but shall wait till I hear from Dr. Eakin and yourself before sending you my decision. Mr. Leathem has made a suggestion which I had in my own mind, and which I think may help to resolve one of the problems in a manner which will be satisfactory to all concerned.

Mr. Alexander has written concerning the location of the tablet. As mentioned in a previous letter, I shall be well pleased with any appropriate place. Perhaps the space on the west wall near our old pew might be considered the best, seeing that there is some objection to having a tablet placed immediately above the radiator on the front wall. I am inclined to feel that a special significance

Dear Mr. Baldwin,

In answer to your letter about St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, I find in the Minutes of the Presbyterian Church of the 8th of August 1833 the following:

York, Upper Canada 29th July 1830.

We the undersigned regularly constituted and appointed Trustees of the Presbyterian Congregation of St. Andrew's Church of York request that your Society will be pleased to ordain and appoint, a Minister to preside over us.
Signed. H. Carfrae, James F. Smith, Alex Murray, Jacob Letham, John Ewart, Thomas Carfrae, Jr., W. Rose.
And at a public meeting of the said contributors held on the eighteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and thirty, they drew up and agreed to a Constitution.
That is the only official communication we have.

In Robertson's Landmarks, he states that the Hon. Wm. Morris, while on his way to the Episcopal Church in 1830 passed the ruins of a former parliament House and suggested the idea of converting the place into a church for the Scotch people and he seems to have called a meeting of several people and men from the 79th Regiment. This meeting of the adherents to the Church of Scotland in the town of York, held in 1830, with John Ewart in the chair and a motion of Dr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. H. Carfrae, it was unanimously resolved to erect a place of worship in connection with the church. In Toronto Past and Present, it is stated that the Church was opened for Divine Service on the 19th June, 1831, attended by a Regiment of the 79th Scotch Highlanders.

St. Andrew's Society according to the newspapers of the time was founded in November, 1830. Francis Hincks did not come to Canada until 1831. I am unable to find anything in the papers of the time relating to the Church or to the meeting, but I shall keep up the search and I may find something more in the course of time.

Some day, when the Prime Minister has a moment, I should like to show him a paper which I have with some pencil notes in the handwriting of Wm. Lyon Mackenzie, regarding a subscription to his paper.

Yours truly,

Reverend Dr. Stuart C. Parker,

Toronto, Ontario.

Dear Dr. Parker:

Your kind letter of February 3rd has just, this moment, come to hand. Early in the day, before it had been received, I wrote, giving my own views on one or two of the matters to which it refers. They are so completely in accord with your own that, instead of destroying the letter, I have thought it best just to send it on to you as it was written before your letter arrived. It will let you see that we are very much of the same mind on practically all the points that remain to be determined. I really cannot thank you enough for all the trouble to which you have gone on my behalf.

As between the east and west wall, I confess that I have a preference for the west, simply because, as a family, we all sat on that side of the church, and the eight foot space which remains there is, I understand, almost in direct line with our family pew. I can see where the tablet might be a little more conspicuous on the east wall, and might afford a better balance as between the two sides of the church. Unless, however, you feel at all strongly in the matter, I think I will decide at once upon the available space on the west wall, and will have Mr. Alexander let me know exactly what would be the most appropriate shape and size for the tablet in that particular space.

My own thought would be an oblong tablet, say about three feet by two, with very little in the way of decoration beyond, possibly, something in the nature of a Celtic design making a frame within which the wording might be placed. On the other hand, it is just possible that the tablet will be all the better for having just the wording without the design. I should not like the wording to appear crowded in any way.

I have about come to the conclusion that, in the circumstances, I will permit the words "Prime Minister of Canada" to be placed after my name. By not including the title "Right Honourable" before my name, or any degrees after it, and keeping the whole in the smaller size type of the paragraph telling of the donors, there will, perhaps, be avoided, in the minds of others, what I had feared might arise as a consequence of any mention of my position. On this point Mr. Leathem apparently agrees with His Excellency the Governor General and yourself, so, unless Dr. Eakins' judgment should be different, and my own, as a consequence, become again unsettled, I think we can regard that point as also disposed of.

I notice you do not include the words "in connection with the Church of Scotland" after the words "founded the congregation in March 1830". I see where they are wholly unnecessary, and I am not at all wedded to them, but I have wondered whether they might not add a note of historic significance which it would be well to retain, and to the significance of which emphasis would be given in the verse from the second paraphrase which would be quoted immediately below ~~them~~.

Before the end of the week I shall have, I think, everything satisfactorily straightened out, and the inscription finally decided upon in Mr. Alexander's hands.

Again let me say how good I think it is of you to give to this matter the personal thought and supervision which you so kindly are doing.

I am delighted to have the February number of your magazine which you have also very kindly enclosed with your letter. It looks as though I were now definitely booked for

Dear Mr. Alexander,

I enclose herewith the suggested wording on the tablet in memory of my father and mother. I have gone over the wording many times and I think that perhaps it is now as nearly final as it would be possible to make it. I shall be glad if you will send me a sketch of the wording in lettering as you think may be best. My personal preference is for Old English type similar to that on the tablet to the memory of my sister, which is on the walls of the Institute of St. Andrews Church. It has occurred to me, however, that Old English type may be difficult for engraving on brass. The tablet to my sister's memory is in bronze. There is of course, the style of lettering as on the Maurice Cody tablet, a blue print of which you sent to me. That might be preferable. Perhaps I had better leave the selection of the ~~type~~ style of lettering to yourself. As to the decoration, I am inclined to believe that the plainer the tablet is, the better. There might, perhaps, be crosses at the corners of the tablet where it is screwed to the wall, as has been done in the case of the tablet to the memory of my sister, and you may think well of working in some slight border, in which event I would suggest that the design by a Celtic one.

I assume that the upper half of the tablet will be of larger type than the paragraph at the bottom of the tablet. I think that the names of my sister and myself should be kept in small type, and not made too conspicuous, though I should like you there again to use your own judgment as to what may be best in design. In what I am sending you I have made no arrangement of the lines in any final way., Please feel free to do as you think best about spacing the wording. If you think it better to abbreviate the days of the month of the birth and death of my mother and father, please do not hesitate to do this, and if there are other alterations which you think would be helpful, do not fail to suggest or make the desired change. I think it might be well to set the Paraphrase in a sort of script or small block letters something a little different to the lettering used in either the first paragraph of the tablet or the last; also I would use very small lettering for the "Paraphrase II.2." and have it set near the right-hand corner lower left corner.

Again let me remark that in the copy I am sending you I have not attempted any special arrangement.

As drafted, the tablet would appear to be oblong in shape. If you and Mr. Parker think it better to have it perpendicular in shape, please do not hesitate to have the drawing prepared in that way. I have thought it best to take the site on the west wall almost in a direct line from where our pew used to be in St. Andrew's Church. This is, I think, preferable to the site on the East wall and will be somewhere in the eight foot space you have indicated.

Mr. Parker and others have been anxious that I insert "Prime Minister of Canada" after my name. I have tried to bring myself to this, but the more I think of it the more I feel the insertion of these words would occasion unfavourable comment and would really be somewhat out of place when the tablet is being erected by myself.

Again let me thank you for all the trouble you have been taking in this matter on my behalf.

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Doctor Parker,

I enclose the draft of what I have this evening sent to Mr. Alexander as the final suggested wording on the tablet.

You will notice I have not included the words "Prime Minister of Canada" after my own name. I fear you will be disappointed in this and think I am a strange sort of being to so quickly reverse the judgment which I said I thought would be final. I have not yet heard from Dr. Bakin, but I confess the more I thought of it, the more I felt that the tablet being erected by myself, I should refrain from including these words which would be almost certain to create unfavourable comment, possibly by some members of the congregation itself, and certainly by many outside. This is the last thing I would wish with respect to any memorial to my father and mother.

You will see that I have practically accepted

Dear Sir:

We were unable to get the rough sketch of the tablet finished in time to mail to you to-night, but shall get it in to-morrow's post early to reach you Saturday evening.

These will be merely to show the proposed layout before going ahead with our working drawing and subject to any alterations you may suggest; and if we can have your comment on this as early as possible, it will enable us to get started at once. We propose to use 14 gauge (Stubbs English) brass and fill entire inscription in black with St. Andrews Cross on raised shield in blue and white enamel.

My dear Mr. Alexander:

I am expecting to receive, during the course of the day, the draft designs of the tablet, of which we had a word over the 'phone. This note, therefore, is only to thank you again for the trouble which you have taken in this matter, and to send you the wording as finally arranged in our conversation over the 'phone.

Please notice the reference to the chapter from which the quotation "Blessed are the pure in heart" comes. Of course I shall expect whoever designs the tablet and its lettering to make whatever abbreviations may be thought best. I also would be glad to have him consider that, so far as punctuation is concerned, the tablet may be revised in any particular, if that is thought advisable.

Yours very sincerely,

I have duly received your letter & will call on the backseat at the post office tonight for the draft designs or rough sketch.

My dear Mr. Alexander:

I am returning the "rough sketches" herewith, and must tell you that I am more than pleased with what they promise.

My preference is for the oblong (horizontal) tablet - the larger one of the two - and the size as indicated on the brown paper you have sent me is entirely satisfactory.

I like the style of lettering and arrangement generally, and will approve your going ahead on the lines indicated.

Please note the following:

(1) In a letter I wrote you I enclosed a last draft .. suggested Matthew V .. at the end of the little quotation at the top. I think it is better to omit this altogether. I like the way this text is arranged in the rough sketch. If you want to include it, if you think it best to include it - well and good, but so far as I am concerned, I am satisfied with it as it is on the rough sketch.

(2) The year of my father's and mother's birth was 1843, not 1841. This was a slip in the original draft for which I am very sorry. I am glad it was caught in time.

(3) I think my mother's maiden name had better be given in full "Isabel Grace Mackenzie". I had thought that the name William Lyon Mackenzie might come out in large relief when I was preparing the draft so did not add the Mackenzie to my mother's name. I like the way the "rough sketch" shows what is to be done ~~--- (9) between~~ in the circumstances the full name of my mother (before her marriage) will look best on the tablet.

(4) I have never felt satisfied with the words "devotion to their family", on account of the confusion in the theirs of that last paragraph. I would suggest therefore substituting for these words the words "and devoted lives" which frees us of that difficulty, and makes the paragraph read a little better.

(5) I am enclosing photographs of the Cross which marks the grave of my father and mother in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. I spent a lot of time studying the Celtic slabs and designs of ~~(9)~~ the birthplace of ~~(9)~~ in Scotland, as you know. I believe it would add to the historic and personal interst of the tablet if the border around it could be of the design on the right side of the cross as seen from the side in the picture of the cross which is largely bare, and if the other scroll work could be of the design on the front of the cross, the sort of leaf-like, vine effect. It is the vine, symbolical of life, that is represented here. I believe it would blend perfectly into the design at the top of the tablet. Please keep the photographs of this cross ~~as~~ long as you may require them, but please also return them later as they are the only ones I have.

You may, I think, assume there will be no further changes and that the place selected will be wholly satisfactory.

P.S.: I do not suppose red lettering of the names of my parents would add to the appearance of the tablet. If you think so please let me know. I imagine the blue and white ~~(?)~~ St. Andrew's Cross on raised shield will be sufficient colour.

Dear Mr. King:

We are sending herewith photographs, taken at the suggestion of Dr. Parker, to show the location on the wall where your tablet would come and I have sketched in a suggestion of the inscription. The photographs show the brown paper patterns (which I sent you Saturday) attached to the wall. I have indicated on the photo the location of your former family pew which is just sixteen feet away, the point where the camera was focussed.

You can probably judge from these as to suitability of size or preference for the longitudinal or upright shape.

Your letter with final draft of inscription which was received this morning is all quite clear and we appreciate your allowance for artistic licence if any abbreviation is absolutely necessary.

We are posting this to catch the noon mail so that it will reach you to-night and if we can get final instructions by to-morrow by telephone it will enable me to get started at once on the on the working drawing.

Dear Mr. Alexander:

I thank you very warmly for sending me the photographs of the St. Andrew's Church wall, indicating the suggested place of the tablet. The little sketch by yourself, with the suggested inscription, makes the whole most attractive.

I am quite satisfied in my own mind that the longitudinal shape is preferable to the upright. You and Dr. Parker might consider whether the tablet would look better exactly centred beneath the window, which would leave space to the right of it for another tablet, or whether itsis best to leave it, as indicated in the photograph, between the two other tablets. That can be best judged by taking into account the entire wall, at the time you are putting the tablet into place.

I shall indeed be delighted to dine with Mrs. Makin and yourself, on the evening of Monday, March the 3rd, at the time of the St. Andrew's Centenary, and I thank you both very warmly for the kind invitation conveyed in your letter, received last night.

Let me thank you also for your helpful counsel and advice, with respect to the wording of the memorial tablet. I found it very difficult to know what was best to do, but when I found that Dr. Leathem, Dr. Parker, the Governor General and yourself were all in agreement, I decided to include the words "Prime Minister of Canada" immediately after my name. They are not a title. They are the designation of my actual position and occupation - my "job" as my sister Jennie put it in one of her letters to me. She felt very much as I did at the outset, but we both have come around to the other point of view. I, of course, do not include "The Right Honourable," which is a title.

The parallel that presented itself to my mind was the words "Principal of Knox College" after your own name, or "Minister of St. Andrew's" after the names of Dr. Leathes and Dr. Parker, or "Governor General of Canada" after Viscount Willingdon's name. I believe all would be appropriate additions in similar circumstances.

I am looking forward with real pleasure to seeing you and Mrs. Makin on March the 3rd.

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Mr. King. acknowledging your kind letter of Feb 11th a deliberate perusal of your written injunctions, (in yesterday's letter) made everything quite clear, and your help in this way is greatly appreciated, as it avoids what might be awkward changes later on. My personal interest in this matter is quite natural, as an old parishioner of J. J. B. Macdonell, under whom "we sat" in the west gallery for many years, and later as designer of several tablets in the church, I am much pleased to have a hand in another permanent record of historic interest.

Regarding the position of the tablet under the centre of the window, I do not think it would crowd the wall any more than there already there, to the south of it. It was for the purpose of getting a straight elevation of the (that I went to Mr. Pheasant) side of the Cross, and the letter under on the east edge. and my snap shot (enclosed) was a lucky shot. though, to make sure I made a surface rubbing from the carving on their base with crayon; as my material is now in order, and &c. as time is "the essence of the contract" have been getting busy at once.

Yours faithfully

Dear Mr. King:

The drawing of tablet is not in complete shape to forward a blue print to you yet but in lieu thereof, we are sending herewith, a photostat which, though reduced will show the disposition we have made of the inscription.

As you will see, the dates now come on the same line with the names and the six lines of the main inscription work out evenly at the sides.

The ornamental vine scroll at the top is almost identical with that on the cross as you suggested. As to the border, I do not think the small repeated cross would be as effective as if alternated by the introduction of the usual Celtic criss-cross strap work and it would be next to impossible owing to the actual labor it involves to complete the "Cross" border in the time at our disposal, and the result would not justify the additional expense.

Incidentally, we would like to state that our approximate estimate quoted ($200.00) was based on the size and the same amount of lettering on the Macdonell plate, 250 letters, your text totals 799 letters so we trust you will take this into consideration and allow us some slight leeway as we have secured some heavier gauge (12°) brass and shall use it instead of the 14° first suggested.

If you note any errors on photostat copy, please advise us by Monday morning if convenient.

We are,

Yours very truly,

My dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

I am enclosing the order of our proceedings on Monday evening, March 3rd, which I hope will commend itself to you - particularly the words accompanying the act of unveiling, which I have tried to cast in your mood and manner. If you would rather use some other form of words, please do so, of course. This, I thought, was short, easily memorized, and suited to your sentiment on the occasion.

I hear you are to be present at the Memorial Service for Lawrence in St. Paul's Anglican Church on the morning of March 2nd. If you can honour us with your presence in St. Andrew's that evening, I shall be more than delighted to go over things with you after the Service. Please send me such instructions as you think fit. On the Monday evening the "platform party" will meet in the Vestry at 7.45 p.m.

Ever yours sincerely,
Stuart C. Parker.

P.S. Mr. Alexander assures me all will be ready for you. S.C.P.

Dear Mr. King:

The engraving on the tablet was completed yesterday. The black enamel is being run into the inscription to-day, and the final polishing and lacquering Thursday. The escutcheon with St. Andrews cross is (the tablet) also complete, so that we will be prepared to place it in position on Saturday if necessary.

I have just been over to the church and tried out the blue print of tablet, centred under the window and it leaves about 20 in. space from the adjoining plate to the south, and there is sufficient space for a future tablet to the right. Dr. Parker is to meet me at the church on Friday evening to settle this and other details. In case you are attending service at St. Andrews when you are here Sunday, we could have the tablet at the church in the vestry, if we do not put it up until Monday. When you telephoned us regarding the border last week, we already had it completed round two sides, however, I think you will be pleased with the final result.

We are,

Yours very truly,

TORONTO EVENING TELEGRAM, MARCH 4, 1930.

Men and Women of All Ranks Gather to Celebrate Centenary of St. Andrew's

Men of high degree in the councils of state, men of note in the professional and business worlds, men and women of more simple estate, drawn together by a common devotion, were met last night, together with ecclesiastics of diverse allegiance, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King st., to further mark the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the congregation.

Truly on this occasion Jerusalem had "peace and felicity." From the Roman Catholic archbishop (his greeting by letter), from the bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Toronto; from the Moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada; from the acting Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada; from a neighboring sister Presbyterian congregation; from the minister—personally and on behalf of his people—of Old St. Andrew's United Church with its earlier close kinship with St. Andrew's, King st.; from men of past close association with the Kirk of St. Andrew's; from his Majesty's representative in this province, and the Prime Minister of the Dominion—both of the Presbyterian faith; from the Corporation of Toronto, came cordial good wishes.

No less significant to the members of the congregation was the informal ceremony at the close of the services. Grouped about the platform in St. Andrew's Institute, they witnessed the simple but crowning act of the centenary anniversary occasion when the birthday cake was cut. As the knife sank through the cake, crowned with a model of St. Andrew's Church, they were given visible sign that their organization had reached its century mark.

And at the end the benediction was pronounced by the Moderator of Toronto Presbytery, Rev. Samuel Lundie, whose last act in his present moderatorial office was this official representation of the Presbytery. Rev. Stuart J. Parker, Minister of St. Andrew's, presided, opening the anniversary observation with prayer.

KNOX TO HONOR CHURCH.

That Knox College will at no distant date honor the service of St. Andrew's and its minister was more than hinted by Principal Eakin, former minister of St. Andrew's and present principal of Knox, in the course of his address last night. It may be taken, therefore that the Senate of Knox College has decided to grant to "Mr." Parker that doctor's degree in Divinity, which is even now so often accorded him, prophetically, as it were.

"This is a very happy occasion for us in St. Andrew's," said Mr. Parker, welcoming the assemblage which filled the nobly proportioned church. "And it does our hearts a great deal of good to know that other people are happy with us."

His Honor, W. D. Ross, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and a member of the congregation, expressed his sense of privilege in participating in the celebration.

"We are far too apt to forget the past in this rushing life of to-day," His Honor observed. Such an occasion as was being celebrated bade men look back, see where they came from, and this looking back helped to destroy the germ of excessive selfishness, to fix attention on the accomplishments of the past. The speaker brought to mind those people of York of 1830 who laid securely and reverently the foundation of the church.

WILL PROCLAIM TRUTH.

"A hundred years, as time goes, is less than a moment in the life of the Church," he pointed out. "But the preaching and teaching of the word of God, the prayers offered up and the praise raised week after week down through a century have a value beyond computation. They build up human character and men and women had hao their faith sustained and their strength renewed thereby."

St. Andrew's would continue to proclaim to the business world around about it that permanent satisfaction can only come from whatsoever things are true, just, pure, lovely and of good report.

Ald. Carrick represented His Worship Mayor Wemp, who was unavoidably absent. He brought greetings from the Mayor, Board of Control and City Council, and withal a personal word, for the gathering recalled to him memories of his youthful days when he attended the old kirk on Adelaide street during the ministry of Rev. D. J. Macdonnell. He recalled the names of Jame Michie, Robert Hay, Dr. Mac-Murchy and many others whose faces were familiar to him in the days of the old church. He also brought greetings from the Metropolitan Church, in which he is an officer.

TOUCHED WITH HUMOR.

His more serious utterances typically intermingled with touches of humor, Rt. Rev. Dr. W. T. Gunn, Moderator of the General Council of the United Church, brought his need of tribute which, too, had its personal tincture, for Dr. Gunn confessed to putting up "a little bit prayer" that God would bless St. Andrew's and its

TORONTO EVENING TELEGRAM, MARCH 4, 1930.

Men and Women of All Ranks Gather to Celebrate Centenary of St. Andrew's

Men of high degree in the councils of state, men of note in the professional and business worlds, men and women of more simple estate, drawn together by a common devotion, were met last night, together with ecclesiastics of diverse allegiance, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King st., to further mark the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the congregation.

Truly on this occasion Jerusalem had "peace and felicity." From the Roman Catholic archbishop (his greeting by letter), from the bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Toronto; from the Moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada; from the acting Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada; from a neighboring sister Presbyterian congregation; from the minister—personally and on behalf of his people—of Old St. Andrew's United Church with its earlier close kinship with St. Andrew's, King st.; from men of past close association with the Kirk of St. Andrew's; from his Majesty's representative in this province, and the Prime Minister of the Dominion—both of the Presbyterian faith; from the Corporation of Toronto, came cordial good wishes.

No less significant to the members of the congregation was the informal ceremony at the close of the services. Grouped about the platform in St. Andrew's Institute, they witnessed the simple but crowning act of the centenary anniversary occasion when the birthday cake was cut. As the knife sank through the cake, crowned with a model of St. Andrew's Church, they were given visible sign that their organization had reached its century mark.

And at the end the benediction was pronounced by the Moderator of Toronto Presbytery, Rev. Samuel Lundie, whose last act in his present moderatorial office was this official representation of the Presbytery. Rev. Stuart G. Parker, Minister of St. Andrew's, presided, opening the anniversary observation with prayer.

worl every time he passed by it—as he now did daily. It was a custom which he began some years since, when first he noticed St. Andrew's standing so nobly in the face of many difficulties of situation.

Dr. Gunn spoke of his happy relations with the past and acting Moderator, Dr. A. J. MacGillivray, and with Dr. Buchanan, whom he had known for many years in India. He paid tribute, too, to the memory of Dr. Perrie, the late Moderator, whose worth he knew by reputation.

More often than any other man was the name of the late beloved Rev. D. J. MacDonnell on the lips of those who considered past times last night, and Dr. Gunn recalled the remark of an old United Church minister that he had never seen a face that reminded him more of Jesus Christ than the face of "that noble pastor."

Appreciated Kind Courteous Gesture

Dr. Gunn was followed by Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeny, who, like the other guest-speakers, expressed appreciation of the "kind and courteous" gesture of the minister of St. Andrew's in inviting his participation in the service of last night.

The Bishop at the outset of his remarks was moved to consider how very relative was time. Since accepting the Archbishop of Canterbury's invitation to be present at the next Lambeth Conference he had been asked to participate in the 500th anniversary of this cathedral of the Old Land, the 700th of another cathedral and the 800th of another institution. To the Old Land, grown accustomed to such a rolling up of the years, these celebrations did not mean as much as did a hundredth anniversary in Canada.

HAS WATCHED CHURCH GROW.

"For 48 years I have known your history," said the Bishop, addressing himself particularly to the case of St. Andrew's. "I have watched it very carefully ever since I came to this city."

"We cannot help, on an occasion of this kind," the bishop continued, "thinking of the generations that have come and gone, of the congregations that participated from Sunday to Sunday and from time to time in this great and goodly edifice. We cannot help thinking of the edification of the services, services that have run through the whole gamut of human emotion. Such a church had a great contribution to make to the community and province to which it belonged.

TRIBUTE TO EX-MODERATOR.

Dr. MacGillivray voiced the greetings of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, a duty which for him was tinged with sadness in that one whose voice had been stilled by death would have so rejoiced had he been spared to see this day—the reference to the Rt. Rev. Dr. David Perrie, Moderator of the General Assembly, lately passed to his reward.

Dr. MacGillivray recalled with gratitude the great service which St. Andrew's had rendered in the task of upholding the blue banner of Presbyterianism, extending without stint and without remuneration its hospitality to the many boards and committees of the Church at large.

It was no small thing in this young country that a church should preserve in goodly measure its continuity for the space of 100 years, but this asset was enhanced in view of the fact that St. Andrew's had not only preserved that continuity, but was renewing its youth.

UNVEILS TABLET

"Strong, united and helpful, humanly speaking, you can do anything you set your minds and will upon to do. Let me express the hope that you will devise liberal things for yourselves and for your weaker brethren, at home and abroad," Dr. MacGillivray told the congregation in conclusion.

The moment had come for Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King Premier of Canada, to unveil the tablet erected by himself and his sister Mrs. Lay, to the memory of their father and mother, sometime members of the congregation of St. Andrew's.

Accompanied by Mr. Parker, Premier King took his place before the tablet. There was the singing of the first verses of "O God of Bethel." The Premier performed the task of unveiling "in humble gratitude for the self-sacrifice and devotion" of his parents' lives. Then minister and Premier took their places again in the chancel and the great congregation took up anew the familiar strains of the paraphrase quotation from which has been placed upon the tablet.

CHERISHED MEMORIES.

And now it was the Premier's turn to speak:

"In our home life no association that I can recall was closer or more continuous than that of home and the church," he said. "Among the friendships of our parents I can think of none that were greater nor more greatly prized than those existing between the ministers of the different churches with which they were associated and their families. And of the memories which I cherish at this moment, the larger number, one way or another, have some association with the church and its activities."

For 20 years or more that association had been with St. Andrew's Church, Berlin, later, when the family had moved to Toronto, with St. Andrew's, King st. And this relationship had continued for nearly a quarter of a century, as was recorded on the tablet, though in so far as other members of the family relationship were concerned the association might be traced to the foundations of the church itself.

Institutions Basis Organized Society

"It was not until my father had passed away that I realized how completely the whole of organized society and our national life rests upon a few time-honored institutions and upon the loyalty which the highest ideals and traditions pertinent to these institutions are maintained by the individuals who accord them support," Premier King went on to say.

"The home, my father and mother made their first care and consideration, then the church, the university and the legal profession."

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 16) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Correspondence re: Mural Tablet n.d., 1930

The church the Premier's father had served, first in Berlin, as manager, in the latter part of his life he was an elder in St. Andrew's, Toronto. He had graduated from the University of Toronto before Confederation and had been a member of the Senate for 27 consecutive years. He had been long identified with the legal profession and for 21 years had been associated with Osgoode Hall as lecturer of the Law Society. With journalism and with politics he had had a life-long association—more intermittent and fugitive in character.

NEED CHURCH'S INFLUENCE.

The speaker's grandfather — his mother's father, had been one of the group members of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada and citizens of York who met together one hundred years ago to establish in this community a church in association with the Church of Scotland. The Premier had found it interesting to observe what the records disclosed of the interests and professions of those who met together to form the original congregation—among them were officers and men of a Highland regiment and men who in the early 30's were prominent in the financial, commercial and industrial life of the community.

"It is a great honor to have to do with the making of a nation's laws," the Premier observed, "and it is a great responsibility as well. The defence of one's country, must, it seems to me, be accorded a place of equal honor. The generation need not be reminded of how completely the cause of freedom, liberty and right had to depend upon those, who in the defence forces of the realm, whether of land or of sea or of the air, were prepared to sacrifice, and, indeed, did sacrifice, in countless numbers, their lives in their country's service."

GREETINGS FROM OTHERS

Mr. Parker read telegraph messages from Miss Bessie MacMurchy, now at the coast in the interests of the W. M. S., and Dr. E. D. MacLaren of Vancouver, and a cordial message of greeting from his Grace Most Rev. Neil McNeil, written on Saturday.

Said the Archbishop:

"Rev. Dear Sir:

"I congratulate you and the congregation of St. Andrew's on the hundredth anniversary which you celebrate to-morrow. Although I cannot attend the social meeting of the following day, to which you have kindly invited me, I feel that a word of greeting from the Mother Church of Scotland will not be unwelcome. We greet each other across a dividing stream which was wider and deeper a hundred years ago than it is to-day. Now we can all hopefully pray for the time when we shall be like those to whom St. Paul addressed the words: Let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to which also you were called in one body.

"Sincerely yours,
"(Signed) NEIL McNEILL,
"Archbishop of Toronto."

The minister also read greetings from the session of Cooke's Church.

Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, with flashes of pungent humor, considered the relationship of the two St. Andrew's churches—just what the relationship was, he was not sure—daughter, mother, granddaughter, or possibly step-niece. At any rate, there was relationship of some kind, and because of this common ancestry, the congregation of Old St. Andrew's united in rejoicing with St. Andrew's, King street.

The minister of Old St. Andrew's noticed "with pride, those flags which hang within this church," and he, too, took occasion to recall the part which Scottish soldiers had had in the building of the church. He had discovered, he said, that the original St. Andrew's folk had got contributions from the 71st Highland Light Infantry Regiment, then resident in Toronto, and also from the 9th Norfolk Regiment, of England, then in residence at Kingston. Furthermore the Kingston regiment had given two pounds more than had the Highland Light Infantry from Glasgow.

FREE OF CRANKS.

In 1876 was formed the new congregation "which marked its newness by calling itself 'old.'" Dr. Sclater observed.

Rev. Dr. D. R. Drummond spoke briefly on behalf of the former assistants of St. Andrew's—"the second fiddlers," he termed them; and the last speaker was Rev. Dr. Thomas Eakin, for some 25 years associated with St. Andrew's; for five years its minister.

With especial warmth did Dr. Eakin make reference to the late Rev. T. Crawford Brown, also some time minister at St. Andrew's, and to the unfailingly harmonious relations existing in St. Andrew's Church, which church he said had always been free from "that pestilential nuisance, the theological crank."

For the last 40 years there had been predictions of the future of St. Andrew's, not always painted in the most glowing colors. At one time even an option had been taken on an uptown property, but St. Andrew's remained in its old place, maintaining its spirit of vitality until to-day it was stronger at least numerically, than it had ever been in its history.

The addresses of the evening were interspersed with music by the choir, and at the close of the formal exercises the members of the choir adjourned to St. Andrew's Institute for a social hour, during which Mrs. R. G. Hector, who was christened in the old church 83 years ago, cut the centenary birthday cake. Mr. and Mrs. Hector are the oldest living members of St. Andrew's.

Rev. Dr. Wm. Barclay, of Central Church, Hamilton, addressed a meeting beginning precisely at 12.30 to-day in the church.

Dear Mr. Alexander:

Mr. Mackenzie King has been putting into proper order his papers relating to the mural tablet in memory of his father and mother. In this connection I thought that possibly you may like to have back the samples which you sent to Mr. King in the early stages of the drafting.

P.S.: So far as I can ascertain, Mr. King brought home only one photograph in miniature (5" x 6 1/4") of the tablet. I am very anxious to secure a few photographs of the tablet in its final form, perhaps in its position on the walls of the Church, showing a little of the surroundings, of a size approximately 7 1/2" x 11". Could you suggest how I could get this? I have in mind making a special mount or folder.

I wonder if you could have one of your men put in the colours of the enamel on the crest. For this purpose I suggest a "matt" finish of print would be best.

Dear Mr. Measures:

Replying to your letter of March 4th, would say that we had planned to photograph the memorial in its setting in the church the day following the unveiling, but the continued services with visitors to see the tablet interfered. However, we shall secure pictures as soon as possible. You may recall a couple of prints we sent to show position where tablet was to go. These did not show the tablet on large enough scale and would suggest we take in only lower part of window and cut off a t top of pews.

When we have negatives made I shall send proofs unmounted with a suggestive dummy folder of suitable stock, and am now sending down two sample prints under separate cover, showing high gloss and matt finish. The latter will take the colour much better on the escutcheon.

Also you will find enclosed a photostat, quarter dimensions of original drawing, a copy of which I am sending also to Mrs. Lay of Barrie. If urgent we can give you any number of these prints made from the finished drawing, immediately, pending the making of photographs.

I shall be glad to have Mr. King's suggestion as to how much of the surroundings we show on the photographs we are to make, and would you also express to him my appreciation of his kindly reference in his address at the dedication to my modest part in the carrying out of his own ideas in the design.

In advising us about photographs, please state about how many you will require. As a matter of record for our sample files we will be making an engraving of the tablet and will be glad to send you any number of prints from it (without any advertising of our firm thereon) other than descriptive artist's note.

Thanking you for return of our specimens and blue prints of the Maurice Cody plate.

Dear Doctor Parker:

This is the first free moment I have had since leaving Toronto on the evening of the St. Andrew's Church Anniversary celebration. The burden of my parliamentary duties has been heavier in the past fortnight than it has been for a long time. The Bill to prohibit the export of liquor to countries which prohibit its importation having received its second reading last night, and that debate now passed, I have for the moment a little less of strain, and I am therefore availing myself of this first opportunity I have had to write and thank you very warmly for all your kindness with respect to the direction and dedication of the memorial to my father and mother, which you made so important a feature of the meeting of the evening of March the third.

No one knows better than I do, or appreciates more than I do, the time, the thought and the personal attention which you gave to this matter, and I shall always very gratefully remember it. If by any chance you have preserved in any form the words which you used in dedicating the memorial, and the passages of Scripture quoted at the time, I should be grateful if you could let me have them to preserve among the records of the occasion. Perhaps one of the numbers of your weekly publication, "Saint Andrew's Church, Presbyterian, Magazine", may contain an account of Monday evening's proceedings. If so, I should be grateful if you could spare me three or four copies, as my sister and sister-in-law, as well as one or two friends, would, I know, be pleased to have a permanent record of the kind which they could retain.

I am sorry that my own part in the evening's proceedings was so inadequate. I would like to have said something of real significance with respect to the relations of Church and State; but, with the absence of any time for preparation, I had to content myself with giving expression to the two or three things touched upon in the course of my remarks, and suffer all the disappointment which comes with the knowledge that one has been unable to avail oneself of a really great opportunity to say a word that might have some real significance.

It has been a great privilege to my sister and myself to have the memorial to our parents placed where it is. It was a real delight to spend the hours we did with so many old friends on the night of the Anniversary. What, however, is most in my mind, and always will be, is your own kindness and good offices, and for these I should like again to thank you very warmly.

have the memorial completed in time for the St. Andrew's Centennial Anniversary, and also executed so completely in accord with my own direction and wishes. May I say that my sister and I are both delighted with the work in every particular. We are pleased with the location which the tablet has been given, pleased with its size and appearance, and, above all, delighted with the exceptionally fine quality of the workmanship which it reveals. It has been a real pleasure to me to be brought personally in touch with yourself to the degree I have in the carrying out of this little labour of love, and I shall always gratefullyremember your keen personal interest and sympathy in the whole undertaking.

I am glad to have the large photostatic reproduction and thank you for the copy which you have sent my sister as well as myself. I thank you also for the smaller photographic reproductions, of which you have sent me a couple of copies. If I could have half a dozen more similar to the ones with which you have been so kind as to supply me, I should be very grateful. They are a convenient size for framing and filing, and with the little touch of colour which they have on the St. Andrew's shield, are quite effective.

I notice that my secretary returned to you the blue print of the Cody memorial and the old samples of memorials which you kindly sent to me to aid in the selection of the style and type of the memorial. If what you sent me were samples available for distribution, I should be glad to have back any of these prints. It is altogether probable that I shall have occasion from time to time to deal with memorials of one sort or another, and to have on hand samples with which I am already familiar, is, in my busy life, likely to be of some assistance.

Dear Mr. King:

It was most gratifying to me personally, to receive your very gracious letter of the 15th inst. and I can only say that in any personal attention I gave to your commission, the pleasure was all mine. The instructions were so definite and direct that it enabled us to go straight ahead, and after all, it is the getting in touch with the man on the job that usually gives the most satisfaction all round.

As to the photographs, I shall have a dozen or more prints made from the cabinet size negative (all these are included in our charge). Large photostat copies 14" x 18" similar to one sent can be made at fifty cents each if desired. Your secretary, Mr. Measures, wrote some ten days ago instructing us to have photographs made of the tablet in its setting in the church, and I enquired of him about certain details as to how much of surroundings to include etc., probably this has been overlooked, but I shall go ahead using my discretion in taking photograph.

Thank you for your cheque covering the account to our company, which by an oversight was forwarded to us unsigned. Our accountant is a rabid autograph hunter in this respect, so the cheque is enclosed herewith for the necessary signature.

We will be most happy to send, as you suggest, fac-simile copies of engraved tablets for future reference, and can assure you of our earnest attention to enquires on the subject at any time without obligation on your part.

Again thanking you, and with very best wishes, I remain,

Yours faithfully,

W. W. Alexander
Vice Pres.

Dear Mr. Alexander:

Mr. King duly received your letter of March 18, and has asked me to return to you his cheque in payment of your account, which was sent to you in error before it was signed.

As to the photographs, I am afraid my zeal for a complete photographic record of the tablet, showing something of its surroundings, led me too far in the matter of the request for these, which was contained in my letter to you of recent date. Mr. King asks me to say that he does not require a photograph of the tablet in its setting in the Church. I hope I have not put you to any trouble in this respect.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Dr. Rochester:

Would you be kind enough to let me know whether Mr. Mackenzie King's remarks at the unveiling of the tablet in memory of his father and mother, on the occasion of the Centenary of St. Andrew's Church, have been reprinted in "The Presbyterian Record".

The Prime Minister would like to obtain a few copies of the "Record" which may contain his Address.

The Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. W. MacKenzie King, Laurier House, OTTAWA.

Dear Mr. Measures:-

It gives me pleasure, in response to yours of the 9th, to forward a dozen copies of the Record containing the Prime Minister's address at the unveiling of the memorial in St. Andrew's Church here.

I regret that for some reason the printer did not do as perfect work on this number as usual. The Record, therefore, does not present as good an appearance as we should like. However, Mr. King's address appears in full.

If you should require a further supply of copies I should be glad to forward them upon request.

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Rochester:

Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter of April 10, and of the one dozen copies of "The Presbyterian Record" containing the Prime Minister's Address on the occasion of the unveiling of the memorial tablet in memory of his father and mother at Saint Andrew's Church, Toronto.

The copies of the "Record" arrived here on Friday morning. Mr. Mackenzie King took one or two copies away with him when he left on Friday afternoon for a vacation in Burmuda during the parliamentary recess. The Prime Minister has asked me to keep the other copies carefully amongst his archives.

Again thanking you for your kindness,

The bulletin of St. Andrew's church, Sarnia, carries the following successive appeals:

THAT The Presbyterian Church in Canada issues every month a bright, attractive, informing magazine called "The Presbyterian Record." The price is a marvel of cheapness. The last page alone is worth the year's subscription. Ask Miss Bessie McGregor about the terms of subscription. We want every family in St. Andrews to be on the list and read this official Monthly.

Those interested in subscribing to the PRESBYTERIAN RECORD, starting with the first issue of the new year, may secure a SAMPLE COPY of the November issue in the vestibule of the church. There are 150 samples available, and it is hoped that 150 NEW SUBSCRIBERS will be added for 1930. Only sixty members of St. Andrew's subscribed during 1929. The subscription price is 40c a year, for 12 issues. Telephone Miss Bessie McGregor, 2773, and order your name on the 1930 subscription list. The Presbyterian Record is the only official publication of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. It is issued monthly, including the summer months.

Sir,—I read in the newspapers that Premier Ramsay MacDonald and Premier William Mackenzie King attended divine service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, which is said to be the oldest Presbyterian Church in Canada. I was under the impression that there was no Presbyterian Church in Canada now, that on the 10th day of June, 1925 all Presbyterian, Methodists, and Congregationalists automatically became Christians by Act of Parliament, and that only a few of the disgruntled, poor, and uneducated remained out of the fold.

Can you, Mr. Editor, explain how comes it then, that the two gentlemen referred to, who hold the two highest elective positions in the British Empire, could so demean themselves as to attend at that non-conformist kirk, and, what appears even worse, evidently induced the Governor-General, the representative of His Majesty the King, to accompany them there.—Maurice O'Halloran.

MORNINGSIDE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, TORONTO

Morningside Church observed its fortieth anniversary on December 8th with Dr. Rochester conducting the morning service and Rev. J. A. Mustard the evening. With the congregation's history the name of Rev. William Patterson, formerly of Cooke's Church is intimately associated, for on September 8th, 1889, in a house near he preached the first sermon. On May 17th, 1891, at the opening of the first church he again brought the message for the morning, and on June 11th of that year he presided at the organization of the congregation. For sixteen years recourse was had to student supply, the first induction taking place in December, 1907, when Rev. J. T. Hall entered upon a ministry of seven years. Rev. J. G. Cheyne, recently deceased, succeeded Mr. Hall and served for ten years. During his ministry, in 1917, the present edifice was erected. Under Rev. E. Foreman, now minister, the congregation has prospered notwithstanding the loss through Union of one-hundred and fifty members in February, 1925. In September, 1927, the Sunday School, to the left of the church, and the manse were erected. Few congregations of this size have such a splendid property and so complete an equipment.

MISREPRESENTATION.

Vancouver, B.C.

To the Editor:

I have read with great pleasure several interesting letters which appeared on various days in the British Weekly (England) from the pens of Rev. Dr. Scott, Rev. Dr. Harvey-Jellie, Rev. Dr. Frank Baird, and our own Rev. Dr. MacBeth. These letters have been of great value to our beloved Church which we are learning to respect more and more because of her consistency.

It is now more necessary than ever that Presbyterians should be very watchful because there seems to be a conspiracy by misrepresentation to retard the growth of our beloved Church. For instance, last year an Irish delegate attended the meeting of the General Council of the United Church at Winnipeg, and after his return to Ireland he contributed an article to the Belfast Telegraph which was contrary to fact and damaging to our work as a Church. A correction was forwarded to that paper by one of our most able writers but, strange to say, this was ignored. The gentleman who wrote the article is not to be censured so much as they who misrepresented the situation to him.

Another statement was sent from Winnipeg, purporting to come from an Anglican Church delegate to the same Council, urging on the Anglican-United merger because the movement favoring union between these two bodies was gaining ground in the Church of England. In this ininstance, the Canadian papers acted quite differently from the Irish paper referred to, by publishing a direct denial of the audacious report . . . .

The only way to counteract this unfair campaign is to forward The Presbyterian Record to ministers and others in the old land who we know have an open mind in this matter. This I have done a number of times, and your good little monthly is proving to be an excellent antidote to unscrupulous propaganda. . . .—D. R.

PRESBYTERIAN HISTORY

Toward the close of the 19th century the tide began to flow strongly in Scotland toward reunion. In 1847 a number of small secession bodies had come together forming the United Presbyterian Church. There existed, therefore, by 1850 only the following separated bodies: (1) The Church of Scotland. (2) The Free Church. (3) The United Presbyterian Church. (4) Original Secession Church. The Church of Scotland held out the hand of reconciliation continually, but the time was not yet ripe for a return to the parent body.

The process of reunion went on, however, among the daughter churches. The Free Church and the U.P. Church had much in common despite their differences. Mutual approaches continued to be made by these two large bodies in the last quarter of the century, the dominant figure in the negotiations being that of the great ecclesiastical statesman, Principal Rainy of the Free Church. The result was the union of the two in 1900, forming the UNITED FREE CHURCH. It was not a perfect union. A Minority of the Free Church, representative mainly of the Highlands, refused to enter, and successfully laid claim to the Free Church property. Matters were adjusted in respect to the property, however, by an appeal to Government, and the large "United Free Church" and the small "Free Church" went their several ways.

A PRAYER

O God, Who by Thy blessed Son hast commanded us to seek first Thy kingdom and righteousness, grant that before all else we may set the love of Thee and the reverence of Thy law. Whatsoever we do, may we be able to testify with a clear conscience that we have sought only Thy glory and the highest welfare of men.

ECHOES

Only the echoes of our Centenary celebration are heard now. In our busy life the present merges very quickly into the past. So let it be with our Great Occasion. We have the future stretching out before us, full of problems and of promise. We cannot afford to linger too long over our festivities. Yet may we be pardoned if, like travellers who have just stamped out the fires in a very jolly camping-place and resumed their journey, we take a last look behind and talk a little, even as we step out along the highway, of the fine time we had back there, and the good fellowship we enjoyed!

And surely we had a very pleasant and memorable celebration in those eight days, 2nd to 9th March! Innumerable friends have written to me since, expressing the great pleasure they found in the services and meetings, and marvelling especially at the wonderful atmosphere of comradeship which prevailed. One has asked how we brought it about! I could only say—"I don't know. I suppose it's just there naturally, that's all!" And that is so. It is one of the attractive things about St. Andrew's—at least as I have known it—that the members are more than usually like a family. Have we no differences with each other? I suppose we have, though personally I never seem to hear of any worth repeating. But, such as they may be, they are adjusted as a family's differences are adjusted, in a free-and-easy fashion that leaves no rancour behind. I have heard the word "clannish" applied to a congregation before now. I think it is just the word to describe ours; and maybe the atmosphere of warm cordiality noticeable to visiting friends at our recent gatherings was just the "clannishness" of us coming out to a more than usual degree!

MINISTERS, AND THE PRIME MINISTER

Our opening Sunday, 2nd March, and our Reunion on the following evening will rank among the most striking occasions in the history of the congregation. What a spectacle it was to see the building "packed from floor to ceiling" for our Thanksgiving Services. I am told that the beautifully printed booklet containing the Order of Service was much admired. Certainly the sermons of our two visiting preachers,—the ex-Moderator Dr. A. J. Macgillivray, and Dr. D. R. Drummond—were warmly appreciated by the great congregations to which they preached. To them, and equally to the Rev. Wm. Barclay of Central Church, Hamilton, and Mr. Wasson of Calvin Church, Toronto, who preached most able and inspiring "special" sermons on the Tuesday and Thursday respectively, we owe much gratitude.

I despair, indeed, of thanking every one of those who contributed to the success of our celebration. It would mean drawing up a long list of our men as well as of our ladies. But special mention must be made of the delightful Reception given by His Honour the Lieut.-Governor of Ontario and Mrs. W. D. Ross. The entire congregation, and the ministers of the Presbytery of Toronto, with their wives, were entertained at tea on Monday afternoon. It was the suggestion of the Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Ross themselves, and it was an inspiration! Nothing could have been more enjoyable, nor could anything else have shown up so well the solidarity which marks our congregation in spite of the varied character of its membership. Further, it was confided to me,—though not, I am sure, with any intention that I should keep it a secret, —that Government House has never seen a more unaffectedly happy gathering. If the guests enjoyed the occasion, they may be assured that greater even than their pleasure was the delight of their host and hostess.

To pass, on the evening of the same day, from the immense company which thronged Government House to a Church filled to overflowing for the third time in forty-eight hours, was an exhilarating experience. One member of the Choir told me that it all made her feel as if the holidays had begun! I have no doubt she was not alone in feeling so, for there was an air of happiness about the Reunion on Monday night associated only with a complete freedom from care. Everything moved smoothly. Two of the ministers present have since written that the meeting was a "miracle of organization"; but the real secret of its success is to be sought in the mood and spirit of the people. As always, the Choir and its soloists were most effective, while the various speakers,—the Bishop of Toronto; Dr. Gunn, Moderator of the United Church; Dr. Macgillivray; Dr. Sclater; Dr. Drummond; Principal Eakin; Alderman Carrick, representing the Mayor of Toronto; and His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario,—extended their greetings and congratulations in short speeches which could hardly have been improved upon. The remark of one listener is to the point. "No wonder you had fine speaking", he said to me, "since your speakers were the heads of everything they represented! You couldn't get a group like that together very often!" Perhaps not. There is all the more reason for our being grateful to these friends who came to wish us well.

Then, as the central feature of the proceedings, came the unveiling by the Prime Minister of Canada, Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, of a Memorial Tablet to his father and mother. The short service of dedication carried the mind of everyone back to the men and women of the past, to whom St. Andrew's was dear as it is still to their children and successors. The opening sentences of the service were a reminder of the immortality of those who in their generation have served God in righteousness.

> "Praise ye the Lord. Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, that delighteth greatly in His commandments. What man is he that liveth and shall not see death? The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance". (Pss. 89 & 112).

The singing, immediately thereafter, of the first two verses of the paraphrase—"O God of Bethel" —as the Minister and Mr. Mackenzie King took their stand by the draped Tablet in the nave of the Church, was peculiarly appropriate, as the words are engraved on the Memorial itself. After the act of Unveiling and the Prayer of Dedication, the congregation sang the remaining verses of the paraphrase, while the Prime Minister returned to the steps of the chancel, from which he spoke to the great audience in his own simple, appealing manner of things lying very near to his heart,—the long association of his parents and family with the Church, his father's joy in the Eldership, and his own pure ideal of the relations of Church and State.

> "The Church would have no place but for the world in which it finds itself. It is but one institution, but it should be the central institution of all. Its mission is to breathe upon the others the spirit of life. The State will find its noblest expression, and fulfilment of its highest destiny only as its life approaches in expression the aims and ideals of the noblest and highest individual life".

It was a delight to have the Prime Minister with us, and he himself—quite obviously—was charmed to be back among his own folk. During the social hour in the Institute following the gathering in the Church, the great Birthday Cake —a triumph of the confectioner's art, surmounted by a model in sweetmeat of the first St. Andrew's Church,—was cut by Mrs. R. G. Hector. The rooms and corridor were so crowded that elbow-room was not to be had anywhere! Yet everyone, from the Lieutenant-Governor and the Prime Minister to the newest member of the congregation, was happy and satisfied. So ended our great congregational Reunion. We had had, beyond all doubt, "a day in a thousand".

MUSIC—AND THE CLIMAX

It remains only to mention the musical part of our festivity. Both the Concert on Wednesday evening and the Organ Recital on Saturday were of the highest order and worthy of the occasion. The Hart House String Quartet played at the Concert with that exquisite taste and understanding which have already made it famous not on the American Continent alone, but in England, where on a London engagement a number of months ago it earned the highest praise. Equally satisfying was the playing of the great American organist, Mr. Palmer Christian, on Saturday afternoon. This first visit of his to Toronto has assured for him a fine welcome from music-lovers when he finds it possible to return. But we are—and naturally—proudest of the work of our own Choir at the Concert. Not only the solos of Miss Gale, Mrs. Cross and Mr. Doney, but the concerted work were well up to the standard set by the String Quartet, while the "Inflammatus", rendered by the Choir and Mrs. Ussher had to be repeated to satisfy the enthusiasm of the congregation.

When the climax of the celebration came with Holy Communion on the morning of Sunday, 9th March, it was a thankful people which sat at the Lord's Table, to acknowledge God's goodness and to dedicate themselves anew to His service. May He give to us grace to fulfil such resolves as we made in our hearts on that great day. We know that we have not done for the Cause of the Gospel all that we might have done. Our predecessors,—so the congregation was reminded in the sermon at Evening Service that same day,—have set us a high standard, pioneering, as they did, in many things which have been for the uplifting and enrichment of Presbyterian Church life. May God help us to be worthy of those who have gone before us, that, when another century shall have passed, men and women gathering here may look back with pride and affection to us as we look back to the pioneers of 1830.

OBITUARY

Death respects no occasions. As our Centenary celebration was closing on 9th March, the earthly life of one of our very oldest members closed also. Mr. WILLIAM WILLIAMSON had been for nearly seventy years a familiar figure in Toronto, being at one time its leading bookseller and publisher. Coming from Sanquhar, Scotland, as a lad, he was one of the few among us who form the connecting link between the first St. Andrew's and the present Church. Of late he had been failing greatly in health—he has died at the age of 87—and had lost contact with many. Yet it was my privilege to know him and see something of him while he was yet comparatively vigorous. Our common love of fine books brought me to his little office in Toronto St. many a time. The best of his books and historic manuscripts he had by that time donated. Much that he collected is now in the Dominion and Provincial Archives. But he still had some precious possessions which he would handle with the book-lover's tender care. A gracious, generous, simple and altogether admirable gentleman, "old Mr. Williamson", as he was to many of us, will handle no more precious things on earth. But in his quiet, godly life he sent on for himself treasures to Heaven which he will enjoy for ever.

The day following our old friend's burial there took place the funeral of Mr. GIBSON, fatally burned by steam from a boiler which he was about to clean. The same week occurred the death of Miss ANNE BARR, whose sisters and whose brother-in-law, Mr. Alex. Rose, are much-valued members of St. Andrew's. Then on March 19th Mr. GEORGE WRIGHT, one of Toronto's best known public men, was buried, the service being held in Church in the presence of a large congregation of mourners drawn from every walk of life in the city and Province; while in the same week bereavement came to Miss Hilda Grant of the Choir in the death of MRS. GRANT, her mother, and to Major and Mrs. Allan in the sudden death of their young daughter, Miss DOROTHY ALLAN. Our hearts go out with sympathy to our friends to whom the coming of Spring has meant only the coming of sorrow. May God comfort them with that solace which, whatever be our sympathy, it is beyond our power to give to one another.

—AND FINALLY

This paragraph is intended to do two things which have no connection with each other.

We congratulate Mr. W. ARNOT CRAICK, Editor of "Industrial Canada", on his appointment as one of the delegates to the fourth Imperial Press Conference, which will open in London, England, on 2nd June. Mr. Craick, who is Secy.-Treasurer of the Canadian Section of the Empire Press Union, goes to the Conference as Secretary of the delegation from this side. Everyone will be confident of his success in his important position, who remembers his zeal as a worker in the Institute some years ago. We wish him a happy and profitable time overseas.

The other object of the paragraph is to remind everyone of the Daily Service during Holy Week. The attendance at these services has increased year by year. May I hope to see a record set by the numbers this Passiontide? The service each day, except Good Friday, begins promptly at 12.30 and closes as promptly at 1 p.m. On Good Friday the hour is 11 a.m., and there is a short celebration of Holy Communion at the close. If I should make any appeal for a large attendance at these services, it could be in no other words than the Lord's own:

"What, could ye not watch with me one hour?"

S. C. PARKER.

Dear Mr. Alexander:

I am indeed pleased to have the prints of the St. Andrew's Church memorial to my father and mother, which you so kindly sent to me on the eve of the elections. It will always be a source of special pride and satisfaction that during my term of office as Prime Minister of Canada I had the privilege of joining with my sister in providing for the erection of this memorial on the occasion of the Centenary Celebration of the founding of St. Andrew's.

I shall always gratefully remember your own keen personal interest and good offices.

The elections were not all that we had hoped and expected they might prove to be, but to me, personally, it is a source of immense relief to be free of the responsibilities and obligations of office at least for a time. But for the disappointment which the change has occasioned other members

Happiness at being present on such an occasion - Centenarys. but a recent Church anniversary in Canada. Unlike centenary of human life which betokens end of the span - Centenary of Church but proclaims its leadership Qualities and its life - -should go from strength to strength.
Pleasure of meeting again many old friends (as well as new)
St. Andrews Church. rich with associations for Yourself & Sister - some joyful. some sad - three generations had been members - and the family life was linked with its life. from the very first - in 1830.
A reading in a Church's history must be replete with such memories for many gathered here & it is a good thing to remember

recall the "rock from which we were hewn" —
A century of Time. in the progress of Theology must display many shifting changes of sects & of thought. The century ending tonight for this Congregation would appear to be one of the most outstanding in importance to the human race — Concerned as we are

When the foundations of this church were laid.
Upper Canada was a struggling Crown Colony scattered thro' the primeval

Memorial Tablets

ENGRAVED ON BRASS OR CAST IN BRONZE

The Alexander & Cable Co. Limited.

114 KING ST WEST TORONTO. Canada

Established 1880

THE placing on the walls of our public, educational and religious buildings the records of worthy benefactors, and especially the names of these patriots who have fallen on the field of battle in the noble cause of liberty and justice, is more generally becoming the practice.

Appreciating the importance of this idea, we have, during the past thirty-five years, directed our energies toward maintaining a high standard of art in the production of permanent memorials in brass and bronze, and have executed a great many commissions throughout the Dominion.

Permanency

THE significant words "Their names shall be writ in brass" carry with them the inference of a permanency, which will outlast all other forms of record, and a walk through Westminster Abbey or Old St. Paul's, London, will readily convince the observer of the sagacity of this assertion. For where inscriptions in stone have long crumbled and are indecipherable, the names "writ in brass" many centuries ago are still intact, that "he who runs may read."

"All passes; Art alone enduring stays to us:
The bust outlasts the throne, the coin Tiberius."

Appropriateness of Design

IN the treatment of an ordinary tablet inscription of the simplest kind or more elaborate, we aim at producing a style in keeping with architectural surroundings.

In our long experience we have enjoyed the confidence of leading connoisseurs, architects, etc. with whom we are always ready to co-operate in carrying out their own designs, when they so desire.

Where heraldic accessories are desired in the design, our experience in this field enables us to render these with the accuracy which the subject demands.

Tablets for outside, where the weather conditions have to be considered, should be cast in bronze. All bronze cast tablets are finished in standard art bronze color, (a golden brown), and lacquered unless otherwise specified.

War Memorials

IT is singularly fitting that the deeds of those heroes, who have made the supreme sacrifice on the field of battle, and lie buried in a foreign soil, should be put on record, in some permanent form in their native land.

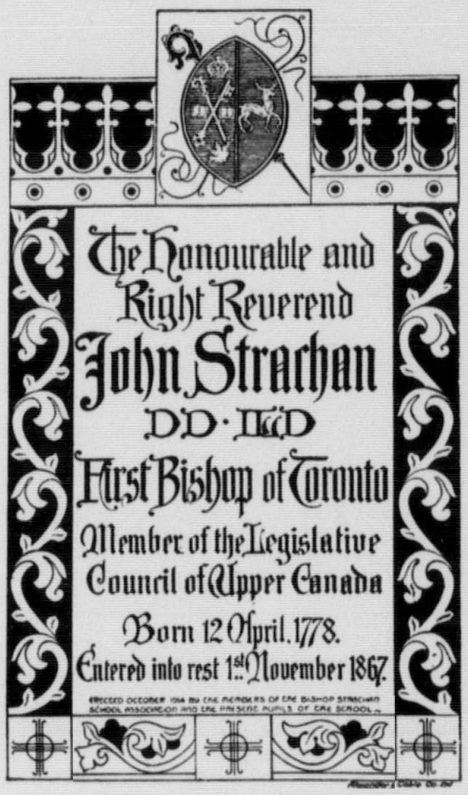

Some of the examples of our memorials we have executed, shown herewith, are evidence that this worthy form of tribute to patriotism is not being neglected in Canada. No prices are given with the illustrations in this pamphlet, as all of the tablets were made to special design, and to special order. The cost depends upon the amount of inscription and the size and style. If in making inquiry our patrons will state the approximate sum they wish to spend, it would enable us to prepare a design which can be made within the desired price.

To responsible parties we will gladly submit special sketches and prices, without charge, provided such are not to be used by competitors upon which to base estimates or designs.

BRASS tablets are sometimes mounted on marble of a dark color, oak or other wood, or fastened directly to the wall, as is usually done with cast bronze tablets. We supply screws or expanding bolts for putting up, and with our instructions any first-class local mechanic can erect our tablets securely and in a workmanlike manner.

ECHOES OF HIS VOICE

"Men ought always to pray, and not to faint."—(St. Luke 18:1).

"Be not afraid to pray,—to pray is right.
Pray, if thou canst, with hope; but ever pray,
Though hope be weak or sick with long delay:
Pray in the darkness if there be no light.
Far is the time, remote from human sight,
When war and discord on the earth shall cease;
Yet every prayer for universal peace
Avails the blessed time to expedite.
Whate'er is good to wish, ask that of Heaven,
Though it be what thou canst not hope to see:
Pray to be perfect, though material leaven
Forbid the spirit so on earth to be.
But if for any wish thou dar'st not pray,
Then pray to God to cast that wish away."

Hartley Coleridge.

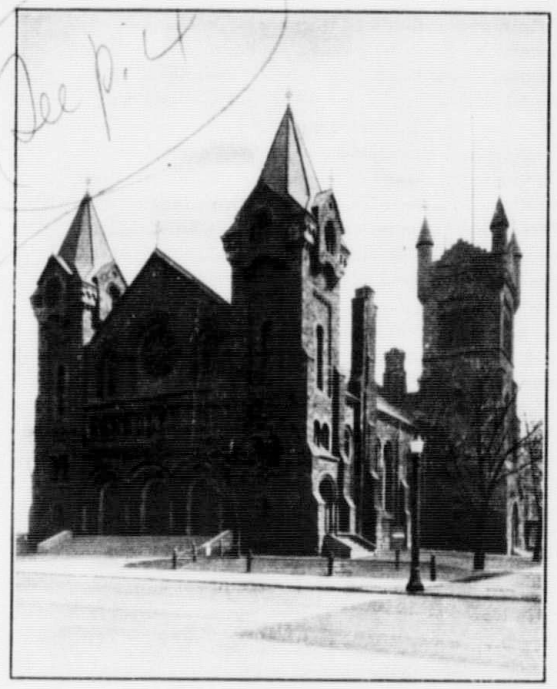

A PRAYER.

Lord, teach us to pray, as once Thou didst teach Thy disciples, turning our hearts to righteous desires and putting dutiful words upon our lips. And help us to be humble in our prayers, dear Lord, as Thou Thyself wast humble, Who didst bow before Thy Father, saying "Not my will but Thine be done." And strengthen us with patience, we beseech Thee, that though Thou should'st tarry long to answer us, neither our courage nor our faith may fail.

IMMORTALITY

Among the millions who share in the joy of Eastertide there are many, no doubt, who give not a moment's thought to the meaning of this annual festival. Easter is a holiday in their eyes, and the precious hours of holiday are not to be wasted in speculations as to its origin and significance! But if you were to press the question, you would find that in the minds of an extraordinary number Easter stands as the ground of men's faith in immortality. Christ rose from the dead, and therefore we Christian men and women believe we too are immortal, and rejoice in the conviction. That there is some truth in that no one could deny. But it is not accurate enough to be regarded as strict truth. Indeed, the last thing a Christian should do is to take his notion of Christian things from the notions that circulate in the popular mind.

Faith in immortality does not depend, as the world so commonly assumes, on the Resurrection of our Lord. Men had that faith when Christ was still unborn. You and I would still have that faith, probably, though Christ had never risen,—or, indeed, had never been! It is part of our heritage, not as Christians particularly, but as men; for the most primitive men have believed in human immortality, and there will be a faith in immortality till men shall be no more. That is not to say that the Miracle of Easter has nothing at all to do with our peculiar faith as Christians. It has almost everything to do with it. But one must remember that there is an element in this belief that comes not from the Gospel, but from a source as old as man and the world are.

And what is that source? Reason? Ask yourself, you who read this: have you got by reason that conviction of yours, strong or weak,—that confidence that, when the eyes are closed and the last sod is laid on the grave, the existence that is You survives somehow and somewhere looks on? It is true that one can bolster up one's faith with reasons. There are arguments for immortality, just as there are arguments for the existence of God. But we did not get our faith from any arguments that were ever forged. Arguments interest us: perhaps they strengthen us a little: we are pleased to find that Reason has something to say for us. But the arguments did not raise the belief, nor—thank God!—does any flaw in them chase the belief completely away.

From where, then, has it come, They tell us, those who have studied the ways of primitive men, that it is purely a negative belief at first. So wrote the late Professor Denney:

> "Man believes in the continuance of his being after death because he is incapable of forming such an abstract conception as that of his extinction. Broadly speaking, we may say that this is what we find in the earlier stages of religious history in races so unlike as the Hebrews and the Greeks. The Sheol of the Old Testament and the House of Hades in the Odyssey both belong to this stage. In both there is a world beyond death in which existence is continued. But men do not believe in it or hope for it under the impulse of motives which have any meaning or value for us. They believe in it only because they are unable to realise the alternative of annihilation. But they have no use for it. It has no ethical character at all. It simply awaits men as a state from which life, meaning and value have departed, and it awaits them all alike."
> ("Factors of Faith in Immortality")

No doubt some of us moderns are at that stage ourselves, believing vaguely in an after-existence just because we cannot imagine what complete extinction would mean. It is perhaps not to be dignified with the name of a "faith in immortality". But we all know men who have no other.

There is, however, another stage open to the "natural" or non-Christian person. It is the moral stage. It is reached when a man feels himself to have an affinity with things other than those which decay and die. He cannot prove this conviction, any more than he can prove his own existence. He hardly thinks of proving it. Simply he feels that there is something within him which is imperishable,—something with which the decaying body has nothing to do,—something that could use another body, if another were provided for it,—something whose plans and purposes the life of this present mortal body is too short to fulfil. As far back as Plato's day that notion possessed men; and they conceived of the Soul,—an existence distinct and separable from the body,—as struggling to free itself from the body's bondage and rise into a pure air in which the perishable is not found. And you can, in truth, speak of a "faith" in immortality when you get to that stage,—when the thought of a moral and spiritual world is as real to you as the thought of the material world lying at your feet,—when you can leave your broken purposes in the assurance that somewhere there will be an opportunity to repair them, and abandon your half-realised ideals, confident that you shall awake again to pursue them in the morning.

These things, I would suggest, are true of every man, be he pagan or Christian, believer or unbeliever. His faith in immortality, insofar as it is worthy of the name, is founded upon moral experience. Where, then, does the Gospel come in, and what function does it perform, and what superiority has the Christian conviction over the unquestioning assurance of a non-Christian man? To answer fully would mean a long dissertation. But this at least can be said—that to all the ordinary assurances the Christian adds the conviction that he is made in the very image of God, and whatever in him is like God cannot die. It is eternal and everlasting, as God is eternal and everlasting. They are composed of the same stuff; and the stuff is the stuff of life; and Christ has confirmed the thought in the Christian mind. "Because I live, ye shall live also", says Christ.

Then one may add another reason; for the Christian's chief pledge of immortality is his direct experience of the protecting Love of God. And here too there is a word of promise. "I give unto them eternal life", said the Lord, "and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand". It is in his experience of this new quality which Christ imparts to his life that the Christian finds his faith in immortality. "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" wrote one great Christian. The answer comes clear and confident,—"nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature!" And that is the answer, not of one Apostle, but of universal Christian experience. God cares, God watches, God protects, and God will preserve! "Where I am, there ye shall be also". "My Father which gave them me is greater than all, and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand". In whatever language it has been expressed, the Christian confidence is a confidence in God's protecting care, and an assurance that not even death shall come between the soul and its Divine Friend.

So the popular mind is wrong as well as right when it reads Easter and man's faith in immortality together. We do not gather our faith from the Resurrection of Christ. We only strengthen it. We have always known that we shall live when time is no more: God taught us that when He made us. But when He gave His Son to death, and raised Him from the dead, He taught us more. He taught us that, if we be faithful, our future shall be to enjoy Him for ever.

HOLY WEEK SERVICES

As usual there will be services in the Church each day during Holy Week. The hours of meeting are noted on the front page of this Magazine. At each service a very brief address will be delivered. No one to whom the Gospel is a reality will fail to be sobered in thought as the days approach in which the Lord set His face to go to Calvary. And what can any of us do better than to turn, in the midst of the day's business, to the quiet of God's House, to say a prayer there for himself, for his loved ones, and for the whole family of men?

AN ANNIVERSARY

Only a short time ago I learned from one of those most enthusiastic in making arrangements for it, that our very dear friend Mr. R. C. Donald, K.C., was honoured by a Complimentary Dinner on March 10th. last. The occasion was the fortieth anniversary of his becoming a member of the legal firm of which he is now the senior partner. Such a long record of upright and honourable dealing, resulting in the achievement of the high distinction of "King's Counsel", and the even higher distinction of universal affection and regard, ought surely to give any man a thrill of satisfaction. There is so little in any life worth while except "to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly" with God,—and our beloved fellow-member of St. Andrew's has consistently done all three.

I cannot resist the temptation to print for the benefit of our St. Andrew's people the message delivered to the many lawyers who have passed in forty years through Mr. Donald's hands. It is characteristic of one to whom so many owe their inspiration.

"To my Sons-in-law, Greeting.

The occasion of my having served with the Firm for the period of Forty Years provides me with the opportunity, of which I take advantage, to say that I wish, for you all, success in life and in your calling, that you may have in it Divine guidance and direction, that you may avoid all errors and error, faults and mistakes, that you may be honest and honourable, faithful and true, loyal and upright, decent, discreet, discerning, capable, reasonable, forceful and resourceful, enterprising and energetic, forgiving and forbearing, and that you may always do and think aright.

R. C. DONALD.

The congratulations of the congregation are extended to Mr. Donald at this memorable point in his legal career.

THE RENOVATIONS

Much satisfaction has been expressed regarding the introduction of indirect lighting into the Chancel. In the days when the Church was first wired for electrical lighting, the possibilities of the new system of illumination had not yet been fully realised. People simply followed the old guiding line of gas-pipe and gas-bracket. The result was massive chandeliers and clusters of globes which, confronting the eyes at certain angles, were very trying. Mr. Curry, who as architect has been planning and supervising our renovations during the past year, has eliminated the clusters in the Chancel, replacing them by lights hidden behind the pillars of the arches. The effect has been to take a strain from the eyes of the congregation, while giving a brighter illumination to the Chancel itself,—at much less cost in power. He has also very ingeniously solved the problem of a pulpit light (for the lamp on the pulpit was blinding to the Choir) by constructing a spot-light high up in the roof of the Church with rays directed upon the speaker, and comfortable both for congregation and minister.

The next operation is upon the windows of the Church, which in the course of fifty-two years have become loose and leaky. These will be replaced now with new semi-opaque glass, to be used until such time as each window may be filled with stained-glass as a memorial. Certain difficulties have discouraged members hitherto from thinking of putting stained-glass in these windows. In the first place, they are very large. In the second place, they are interrupted by the side galleries, which run across them, so that, if the entire window were treated as a unit, part of the picture would be beneath the gallery and part above, and the whole picture would not be visible from any one point in the Church. In view of this difficulty, the architect plans to separate the lower part of each window from the upper, thus making two series of windows on each side of the Church,—gallery windows and ground-floor windows,—which can be treated with stained-glass as independent series. There will be, therefore, twelve lower windows and twelve upper. The size of these will bring them within the reach of many who would like to provide a memorial. Of the lower ones, four will measure 4x4.9 feet, four 4x5.3 feet, and four 4x5.9 feet. The dimensions of the gallery windows, (also in groups of four), will be 4x9.2, 4x8.6, and 4x8.0.

It is to be hoped that the thoughts of the congregation will now turn toward the embellishment of these windows. Regularity will, of course, have to be observed in respect to the subjects—that is to say, whether Old Testament, New Testament, Traditional, or Modern—allowed in each series, and general schemes will be worked out under competent artistic guidance, and made known later through the Magazine. But meanwhile it is, I am sure, a great pleasure to all who love the beauty of God's House to know that the difficulty of the windows is being solved, and that we may reasonably expect them to be beautified from time to time by the piety and affection of our congregation.

The next great task of our Renovation Scheme is the redecoration of the interior of the Church. This has had to be set aside, of course, till all alterations are completed. But we trust that the entire work will be accomplished in time for our centenary celebrations.

—AND THIS IS PRIVATE!

I want to thank everyone for the immeasurable kindness that has been shown to my family and to me at a time when kindness has been a veritable sunshine to us. May God be as good to all of you.

S. C. PARKER.

PRESBYTERIAN HISTORY

The Presbyterian Church did not begin with the Scottish Reformation of 1560. It claims continuity with the Church of the Apostles. What happened in Scotland in 1560 was simply the re-organisation of the Church on the primitive lines. The earliest form of government in the Church was undoubtedly presbyterian. That is to say, authority was in the hands of the ordained ministers of Christ, and these were all equal, not even the Apostles, (except on account of personal prestige), having any superiority over their brethren. The essential element in the Scottish Reformation is that the Scots people, sickened by the enormities of the Roman system, sought to re-model their Church after the earliest known example,—the Church of Jerusalem, and adopted therefore the Presbyterian form of government, abolishing the episcopal gradation of offices. But they never ceased to claim that they were not a new Church, but merely the Church of Scotland—reformed.

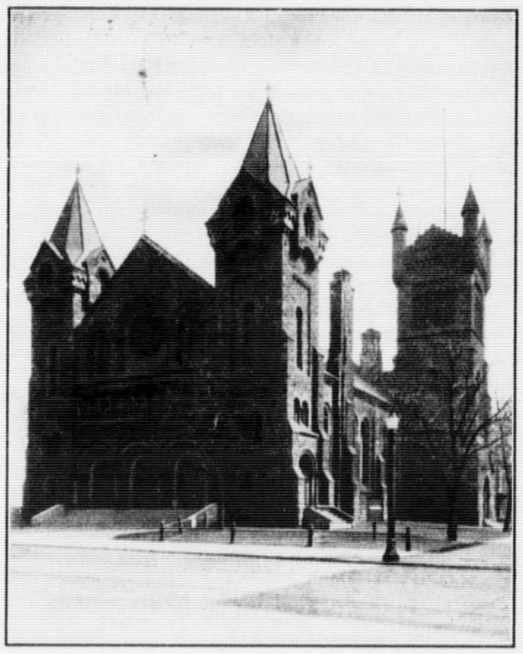

A PRAYER

THE SHORT COLUMN

Acting on the assumption that we would, all of us, like to know more than we do about the story of Presbyterianism, I am devoting the Short Column on the front page of the Magazine this season to a series of thumb-nail sketches of the Presbyterian Church throughout the centuries. The resolve to do this came to me out of two circumstances. The first is that our own people, while more or less acutely conscious that their Church represents the old Scottish tradition, enriched by the history of that Scotland-across-the-Channel which is now Ulster, yet find themselves as incapable as the average Englishman of following the divergent courses of Scottish Church life. Names, which our fathers, even in this country, were proud to own,—Secessionist, Burgher, Anti-Burgher, Auld Licht and New Licht, Moderate, and the like,—have ceased to have any meaning for us, not so much because we have outgrown the spiritual experience behind them, as because we have lost sight of the spiritual experience which such names inadequately commemorate. I am hoping that it may be possible to put the "high lights" of Presbyterian history on the front page of our Magazine so that everyone who reads it may have at least a general knowledge of how Conscience has made Presbyterian history.

The other consideration which has weighed with me is the unfamiliarity of our Anglican brethren with the most primary elements of Presbyterianism and the Presbyterian story. Time and again Anglican visitors to St. Andrew's—in which the service perpetuates the true Scottish tradition,—have remarked in going away, "Why, that is a very beautiful service! It is just very like ours!" For such tributes we are always, of course, more than grateful, for everyone with a sense of worship admires the old Anglican forms. But,—always with perfect good-nature—we must repudiate the implied charge of borrowing from the Anglican service. It is the last thing a Presbyterian congregation should feel any need to do; because it has its own rich tradition behind it, and its own exhaustless devotional treasury. Indeed, some of our great Presbyterians,—like John Knox,—gave the riches of their liturgical gifts to the formulation of the Anglican ritual. Surely, therefore, no one need be surprised that the Presbyterian Church,—the Church of their chiefest love,—should retain something of that sense of seemliness in worship which the old Presbyterians helped to fix in English minds. Possibly some of our Anglican brethren, whom we love for countless kindnesses received from them in the time of our need, may read this little Magazine. In it I shall try to remind them that the Presbyterian Church is as ancient as their own,—I am not sure that the stirrings of Reformation did not occur earlier in Scotland than in England,—and that, while the Scots spirit, traditionally radical, swept away the historic episcopate along with the Roman abuses, yet it kept the essential "Notes" of the Church Catholic, and is in no way behind any body which claims the Christian name.

"WHY READ HISTORY?"

While we are on the subject of History, it is worth while to mention an interesting article under the above title in the September issue of "Current History". The writer, Mr. Maddox, mentions the incident of a mathematician who "after having heard an artist read aloud Milton's Paradise Lost, asked what it proved". And he goes on to press the value of historical studies on the many whose valuation of things is like the mathematician's, partial and narrowly utilitarian. Among other good points which he makes are the following:

"The study of history will furnish a necessary perspective for the understanding of our time, and enable us to separate the permanent elements in contemporary life from those which are accidental and transient". . . "'He who knows the Whence will also know the Whither'. Nearly all reefs dangerous to the ships of state have been mapped by experts of the past" . . . . "History never repeats itself exactly, because the factors are never entirely the same, and, therefore, the analogy is never altogether perfect. Nevertheless, an assiduous perusal of its pages will reveal a law of continuity, a law of permanence through change". . . "If studied critically, history is hygienic for the mind, which it will free from credulity. That the World War was a 'war to end war' might have been believed by the credulous, but the man who knew history could easily foresee the scramble for territory that would ensue at the conclusion of peace. Any person who reads history intelligently cannot be imposed upon by word jugglery". . . . "An industrious reading and correct interpretation of history will serve to rid the mind of the suspicion of the decadence of our own time. . . In ages now regarded as heroic pessimistic men had the same thoughts". . . "The proper reading of history will indicate that it is difficult for both individuals and nations to endure prosperity, and in the light of this knowledge we can earnestly resolve to make ourselves and our nation exceptions" . . "The study of history will make clear to the reader that there is a goal in human affairs."

WINDOWS

Mr. Hilaire Belloc has said somewhere, (I think in "The Path to Rome", that English classic that is to be), that a generation is known by its windows, and all its occupations, ideals and aspirations are revealed. Well, we in St. Andrew's have been thinking much of Windows in these recent months. The old painted windows in the Nave have been removed. They served well, but they had grown insecure with age. Now they have been replaced by semi-opaque glass, and remodelled so as to make separate series over the gallery and beneath it. And now the sunlight is streaming in, showing up in some places the shabbiness of the interior of our Church. Some are disappointed, therefore, with the result. But there are two considerations to be taken into account. The first is that in our renovation scheme we have not yet come to the stage of re-decorating the interior. That could not be attempted till all structural alterations had been completed. It is probable that by next summer we shall be able to deal with that problem. Meanwhile, our thanks are certainly due to the Committee of Office-bearers for arranging things so that no dislocation—or, at least, a minimum of dislocation—has been suffered by the congregation. Our sincerest thanks are also given to the architects who have been working for us,—Messrs. Shepard & Colvin, and, latterly, our invaluable and supremely efficient Mr. S. G. Curry.

The second consideration is that the windows now installed are not intended to be permanent. We are full of hope that they will soon be replaced with real and beautiful stained-glass,—not the painted glass of former years. The separation of the windows above the gallery from those beneath has brought a Memorial Window within the reach of many who, unfortunately, (from considerations of cost, or because of the gallery traversing the windows), would not think of such a thing formerly. And—it is not telling any secret—several members of the congregation have already been turning their thoughts toward the embellishment of our dear old Church by memorial Stained-glass. What I want particularly to say here is that I shall gladly consult with those in whose minds such an intention arises. I am looking forward (and I hope not very far ahead) to a time when God's sunshine shall come to us filtered through the pictures which commemorate our well-beloved dead. After all, what symbol could be more appealing? They showed us in their life-time something of the divinity that is in common man. And how can the thought of God come to us, and how can we rise to God, better than by the contemplation of those beautiful lives which, in their own several ways, have been consecrated to His service?

"MY CHURCH"

First Church, Chicago, built into a wall of theirs, as a memorial, a stone from St. Andrew's, Toronto,—the first congregation of the Church of Scotland to be established in the town of York, the precursor of the modern city. Recently a very well-printed booklet was sent me, containing particulars of the Dedication Services of the new building in Chicago. A prominent feature in the booklet was a kind of Preface, which, I understand, is printed weekly in the Order of Service of First Church, Chicago, under the heading "My Church". It is an example of fine writing, and also of sober sense, not surpassed by anything I have ever read on the subject. I should like to reproduce it here verbatim, but must content myself with an abbreviation and free paraphrase of it.

> "My Church welcomed me as a child, and saw me set apart to the service of Christ. It tended me through childhood, showing me the path of life, which, if a man keep it, will bring the soul to a maturity of usefulness, and an old age of brightness, happiness, and contentment. I have had many faults and sins, but it has borne with them all, and always the prayer has gone up for me that I should fulfil the promise of my earliest days. Now what can I do for the kindly family which has watched me so long and with such affection? Must I repudiate all my upbringing, and turn my back on the decentest people I have ever known? Or shall I cast in my lot with theirs, seek the experience that underlies their simple faith, and try to worship the Eternal Spirit of Good in a world whose common thoughts are all of the earth?"

I hope I have caught the sentiment, even though I have not reproduced the words of our American brethren. I have at the moment only my memory on which to depend. I commend the thought to the many among ourselves to whom the Church means less than it ought to mean. You, baptized friend, were baptized into Christ, and the Church is Christ's Body. You, communicant, profess the fellowship of believers every time you raise the Cup to your lips. Now what are you doing to cement that fellowship, and strengthen that body? Anything? Or nothing? Sit down and think it over. Think of the hopes your people had for you when they presented you at the font of Baptism. Think of the resolves which filled your heart when you presented yourself for First Communion. And if you have not lived up to those hopes and resolutions—and who among us has done so?—then go down on your knees before God and pray that you yet may do some good thing for which your Church will remember you, and for which Christ Himself will remember you when He enters into His Kingdom.

A PERSONAL MATTER

The personal matter relates to my movements during the coming months. Circumstances have rendered the temporary breaking-up of my household unavoidable, and I shall no longer be found at the Manse, unless by letter. Those who wish to leave any message for me are asked to telephone the Church in the forenoon,—the number is Elgin 2600. I shall be acquainted with every such message, and will attend to it. I hope that it is only throughout this winter and the succeeding spring that this arrangement will have to be observed. But its observance will enable me to carry on with a minimum of inconvenience to the congregation.

AND THE CHOIR

I write this paragraph to welcome our new recruits to the Choir. Miss Nina Gale, one of the most distinguished of the Conservatory staff, has come to us as leading soprano, and already has made a place for herself in our esteem. And today, as this Magazine appears, we welcome our new Bass, Mr. Doney,—a student at Toronto University, and a very remarkable singer. The congregation is much to be congratulated on these new additions to the Choir. Miss Gale and Mr. Doney have the reputation of standing quite in a class by themselves; and with our present splendid soloists and efficient Choir we can be assured that the musical part of our service will be maintained for some time to come at the highest level.

PRESBYTERIAN HISTORY

The Scottish Church, like the early Christians, remained united as long as danger threatened. The removal of danger by the Revolution Settlement broke the link, however, and almost immediately began that series of secessions which was to culminate in the Disruption of 1843. The CAMERONIANS,—so called after Richard Cameron, their first leader,—had already assumed a dissenting attitude on account of what they considered the prevailing unwillingness to be true to the Covenant by completely extirpating Episcopacy. In 1743 they separated themselves definitely from the Church, and formed the "Reformed Presbytery,"—afterwards called the "Reformed Presbyterian Church,"—a body which still exists, though it is very small. But a more important secession was that of 1733, when certain ministers and others withdrew over the vexed question of Patronage, and formed the "ASSOCIATE PRESBYTERY." Their claim was that, if the Lay Patron failed to present a minister to a vacant parish, the right of choice should belong to the people. It is interesting to note that this same controversy caused the cleavage of 1843.

A PRAYER

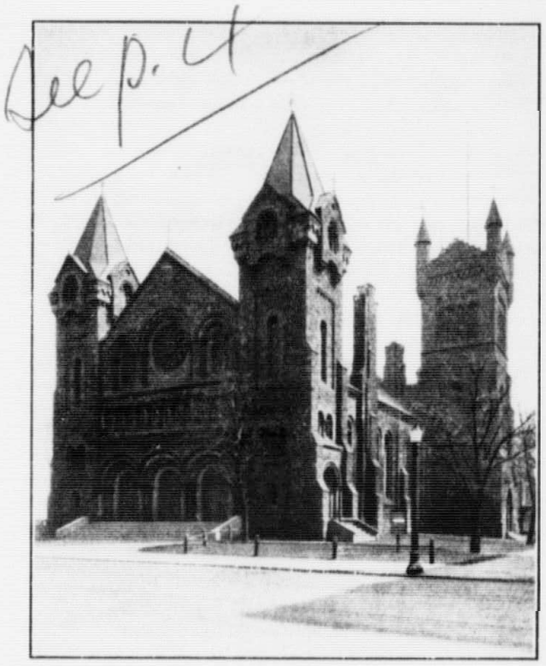

We confess our sins, O Lord, our lack of charity and brotherly forbearance. Help Thou our infirmities, and grant us grace to bear ourselves kindly one toward another, and to dwell in harmony as the brethren of the Lord.

SUNBEAMS

This has no reference to the glorious sunshine of this early Spring; though I could write very enthusiastically on that subject at this very moment, when the light is streaming in upon my desk, and, as I sit writing, I fancy I can see the lilac buds growing greener and greener every hour! Surely the world is very beautiful, and Spring the strangest miracle that is ever seen. . . . But the sunbeams of which I am thinking are little rays of happiness that have shot into my life during the past weeks. For it is with one's life as with the weather: some months are dull, cold and dreary,—others sunny and bright. Sometimes everything goes well with you, and the days are a song; at other times the fog is round your shoulders, and nothing seems right! But almost everything has been right with me recently. Prospects have cleared up in every direction, old friends have somehow come very near to me, and new ones have arisen, and the whole world has been in a conspiracy to make me more than happy.

But here are two things that stand out in my thoughts at the moment. The first is the fine attendance at the Holy Week Services last month. These were never better attended. I know that our Presbyterian people all the world over have an inheritance of disregard in the matter of the observance of sacred seasons. The Reformation set its face against everything of the sort,—and for very good reasons: the great seasons of the Christian Year had become associated in Reformation days with a superstition which was eating the heart out of religion. The people were exaggerating externals, and piety had become, as with the Jews of the Lord's day, a matter of ritual and formal obedience. But where there is no danger of such a calamity, surely the special celebration of the great Christian Days cannot be neglected without loss. That has been my thought, at least, in striving to mark the seasons as they come. The greatest of them, Christmas and Easter, are now whole-heartedly accepted even by the narrowest Christian bodies. The vast crowd in our own Church on Easter morning must have delighted all of us. But the observance of the other sacred seasons has not yet become what it might be. Still, with us in St. Andrew's it is steadily improving; and it was a real joy to me to see how many of our people came day after day in Passion Week to follow the Lord to His Cross. That is one of the "sunbeams" that have brightened life for me personally in these recent weeks, and I want to thank the congregation for the good cheer it has brought.

But now, another sunbeam is represented by the generosity of our people. I find traces of it everywhere. Not long ago, for instance, one of our men took me aside in his own house, and, while asking that his name should never be mentioned, bade me never neglect to draw upon him when St. Andrew's required money for a good object. As God has prospered him, so he desires to give back to God's service. Yet another instance came to my notice when I attended and spoke at a gathering of High Park Church, in the West side of the city. The Minister there announced to the meeting, in connection with the congregation's efforts to build a new Church, that a "member of St. Andrew's, who insisted on remaining anonymous" had given him a thousand dollars for the building. I do not know if anyone in the congregation but myself can realise what a thrill comes to the Minister on hearing of these "outside" gifts of his people. To me it comes as "the fruits of the Spirit." I would dearly like to think it is the fruits of my own ministry,—but I dare not think so highly of myself,—for my own sake. Only,—I get the thrill, nevertheless, and have something of that feeling which a father and mother have when their son's name appears in a list of those who have fought and won. And whoever may be those anonymous St. Andrew's men and women who are doing the good of which I hear from time to time, I want to thank them with all my heart,—not only for the good they are doing, but for the sunshine they bring into my own life by their practical piety.

GIFTS

While on the subject I feel that I must make reference,—and I hope the donors will forgive me,—to the two recent gifts to the Church in connection with our Holy Communion service. One is from Mrs. Thos. B. Henderson and is in the form of very beautifully wrought doyleys on which the silver "containers", recently gifted by our Women's Association, will rest in the salvers bearing the bread of Communion. I would like to tell what other gifts Mrs. Henderson has made anonymously before this one, but could not do so without breach of confidence. But, frankly, I am glad that her neglect on this occasion to exact a promise from us has made it possible to mention her name, and to convey to her the thanks of the congregation.

The same tribute is due to Mrs. T. J. Clark, who has deepened our obligation to her by providing an oak coffer, suitably arranged on the inside, for holding our beautiful Communion linen and silver and other vessels and furnishings. The coffer, which is the work of Messrs. Jenkins, Toronto, is in the Vestry, where it may be seen by any members of the congregation who care to come and inspect it. In former years such furnishings as the Church possessed were kept here, there and everywhere. Now they are gathered together in one solid and substantial chest, easily removed in case of fire or the like; and the recent and deplorable disaster at the Anglican Cathedral of St. Alban's, which has grieved all of us, adds a new significance to the splendid gift which Mrs. Clark has given to her Church.

Yet another gift, filling a long felt need, comes from the same family. Mrs. D. S. Barclay has provided a new and permanent stage for the large Hall, upstairs, in the Institute. For years it has been necessary, whenever a concert or other entertainment was projected, to erect a temporary platform over the small dais which occupied the south end of the Hall. But temporary platforms have a hundred disadvantages, not the least of them being that they creak and groan when anyone steps upon them! Well, we shall no longer be vexed by any such imperfections. The new stage is rigid and solid, and it has been planned so as to be easily adapted to any form of entertainment, dramatic or otherwise. Even at the Business Meeting of the congregation it will be found to be of inestimable advantage. So we thank Mrs. Barclay most cordially for her kindly thought, and trust that she and we shall know many happy hours in that selfsame Hall. The stage has been built by our invaluable Mr. Jock Robertson, upon whose loyal Churchmanship and practical knowledge we have constantly to congratulate ourselves.

OBITUARY

Never a month passes without loss and mourning to some of our families. As this Magazine goes to press there are four deaths to be recorded. On March 4th MRS. RIORDAN was buried. Every old member of St. Andrew's, every old family in Toronto, knew Mrs. Riordan, and to know her was to love her. For years she had borne a heavy burden of infirmity. But in her all too brief interludes of comfort and good health she was the most cheerful and sympathetic soul ever known. To me and mine she was a most loyal friend. The prayers I have had at her bedside,—and she was not happy unless we had prayers together,—will always be among my most cherished memories. We cannot regret that she has laid down her burden, for it was very heavy. We can only rejoice that she has entered into a rest which, of late years at any rate, she never knew on earth.

On March 9 a familiar figure was laid in the grave in the person of MR. JOHN THOMSON. Perhaps no one in Toronto was so well-known by sight. His long white hair and beard, and his altogether venerable aspect, together with his fine face were an attraction to every passer-by. When you saw him, you could not resist looking after him. He hailed originally from Aberdeen, and is said to have been related to the late Lord Kelvin. I visited him on several occasions of late, when his advanced age was showing itself in fairly frequent spells of weakness, and heard him talk with pathetic animation of his early days and old home. He went to several Churches, but he always claimed St. Andrew's as his particular home; and when of a Sunday evening I look up to the East Gallery, I miss—and shall long continue to miss—the most striking figure Toronto, in my time at least, has had to show.

Another blow fell upon our dear friends and fellow-members, Mrs. Herbert Mowat, and Mr. Skeaff, in the death of their brother, MR. JAMES SKEAFF, at Battle Creek. He had suffered ill-health some years ago, but of late had appeared to overcome his disabilities and to be quite strong. His death came as a very sad disappointment to the relatives and many friends who loved him. It seemed to one so hard, as one looked at the strikingly handsome figure lying in a coffin, that death should have laid its devastating hand upon one who was in the prime of life and usefulness. His body was carried to Toronto and buried on 21 March from the house of Mrs. Mowat, so recently saddened by the passing of our distinguished and beloved friend, Mr. Justice Mowat.

Then, on 3 April, MISS DUFF was laid to rest, after much weariness and weakness. She bore it all very bravely and uncomplainingly. I had the privilege of spending a little time with her on one of the last of her conscious days, and as we spoke of her dear old mother, whom we had followed to the grave so recently, it was plain that death was gilded for the daughter with the hope of meeting again, and soon, the one she had loved most on earth. A short time ago, an Anglican minister asked me what impressed me most in the life of the people among whom I have worked, and I said without hesitation—"their courage and hope!" It was his impression also. I think it must be every working minister's impression; and at the bedside of Miss Duff it was renewed for me in the spectacle of a quiet soul for whose body hope had been abandoned.

May God comfort those who have been thus bereaved. There is not much, apparently, that we can do for these friends of ours in their extremity. And yet, it is perhaps wrong to say that. We can support them by our prayers. We can support them even by our wordless sympathy. Somehow, ills are not so ill when you pass through them with the knowledge that your friends are thinking of you, and in spirit, if not in fact, have put their hands upon your shoulder.

WINDOWS

From time to time members of the congregation ask me what is being done in connection with memorial stained-glass windows in the Church. I am pleased to be able to report that three windows are at present fixed as to subject, and only await a decision by the families concerned and the Committee in charge of the work as to the relative merits of such competitive designs as are furnished for us. The Committee has had to go slowly and carefully. There is, perhaps, nothing in Art in which there are more pitfalls for the unwary than in Stained Glass. There are few who have made the subject a specialty and are qualified to guide and adjudicate. So the task of your Committee has not been easy. Its first care has been to defend both the Church and the donors of windows against having meretricious, but attractive, designs thrust upon them. The stained-glass windows of a Church must, firstly, be in keeping with the building, and, secondly, in harmony generally with one another. These are the general guiding principles on which the Committee is acting. So far as the details of our plan of operation are concerned, they may be shortly stated as follows: The donor chooses a window, and suggests in general the subject most appealing. A suitable Biblical scene or character is then proposed. This being agreed upon, a request is sent to a chosen number of the most reputable stained-glass artists in Canada and overseas, that they should give us sketches showing how they would treat the proposed subject or subjects. These sketches, after the entirely and obviously unsuitable are set aside by the Committee, are submitted to the donors, in order that they may choose which they prefer. In accordance with that choice, the commission is then given and the work started. That is the general plan. I should like to appeal, as Minister of the congregation, for its close observance, which will make the Committee's work both pleasant and profitable. The Town-planning Scheme, of which recently we have heard so much, is likely to put St. Andrew's in a very prominent position. We must do our best, therefore, to make St. Andrew's a "thing of beauty"; and the creation of suitable windows is going to serve that end. It will serve other ends. It will make the Church very precious to those who have loved and respected those whom its windows commemorate. But it will also make this old Presbyterian Church one of the pleasantest and most restful spots on Toronto's chief thoroughfare.

of Life of D. J. Macdonell.

The services were brought to a close by a few sagacious counsels addressed to the congregation by the minister of Scarboro, Rev. James Bain ..... Public worship being ended, a very cordial welcome was given to Mr. Macdonnell by the members of his congregation.

The day of the induction was to Mr. Macdonnell a sacred anniversary, and one to which he often referred from the pulpit. St. Andrew's, however, was never a church famed for public anniversaries, and it was the inner significance of the event rather than its outward celebration, that made it a day to be long remembered.

Through the genius and labours of Mr. Macdonnell, St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, has become as widely known as any Protestant church in Canada. But at the time of his induction it was already a congregation of long standing. The following extract from the Church Report of 1880, the year of the congregational jubilee, gives a succinct review of its history. It is specially interesting to note the names of historic fame which are associated with its foundation:

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 17) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Miscellaneous correspondence re: Mural Tablet n.d., 1928-1930

" In 1830 'Muddy Little York' had a population of about five thousand, and one Presbyterian congregation, that of Rev. James Harris, who had organized a congregation in 1821 in connection with the 'United Synod.' According to a statement in Mr. Croil's 'Historical and Statistical Report,' the authority for which is Mr. Rintoul, the design of forming a congregation in connection with the Church of Scotland was first entertained by some members of the Legislative Assembly when in York during the session of 1830. One of these, the late Hon. Wm. Morris, of Perth, has left on record an interesting incident. The names of Chief Justice Maclean and the Hon. Peter McGill are also associated with this incident. Mr. Morris was walking on a Sunday morning by the ruins of the former Parliament House before going to the Episcopal Church, thinking of the possibility of securing the ruined building and converting it into a place of worship in connection with the Church of Scotland. As he entered the Episcopal Church late, the Clerk was giving out the lines of the 132nd Psalm:

"'I will not go into my house, nor to my bed ascend;
No soft repose shall close my eyes, nor sleep my eyelids bend;
Till for the Lord's design'd abode I mark the destin'd ground;
Till I a decent place of rest for Jacob's God have found.'

C 50 1 1 7

"The words came home to him like an oracle. The next day a meeting was held, at which the Hon. Francis Hincks presided, and Mr. William Lyon Mackenzie acted as Secretary. Mr. Thomas Carfrae was the first Treasurer, and the original subscription list bears the names of many of the most prominent men of the time. The men of the 71st and 79th Highland Regiments, then stationed at York, were liberal contributors to the building of the church. The first payment entered in the Treasurer's book was made on the 10th of June, 1830. When the corner-stone of the old building was removed, there were fragments of two weekly papers found wrapped round the bottle, the Freeman and the Gazette, of date Thursday, 24th of June, 1830, from which it may be inferred that the stone was laid within a week from that day.

William Lyon Mackenzie And Old St. Andrew's Kirk

Highland Soldiers Lacked Psalm Books, Says Editorial in Colonial Advocate of York (Toronto), Describing First Services 99 Years Ago—Premier King, Grandson of Mackenzie, to Speak at Celebration on Monday

Since publishing an account of the original St. Andrew's Church of Scotland in York (Toronto) whose offshoots, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King and Simcoe sts., and St. Andrew's United Church, Jarvis and Carlton sts., are about to celebrate the centenary of the parent kirk which St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will commemorate with functions lasting for a week, The Evening Telegram has unearthed some contemporary newspaper references regarding the old kirk's foundation. They appear in the Colonial Advocate published at York (Toronto) a century ago. The editor and publisher of the Colonial Advocate was William Lyon Mackenzie, a member of the Legislature for York, first mayor of Toronto, leader of the Mackenzie Rebellion of 1837, and subsequently member of the Legislature for Haldimand. He was, of course, a grandfather of Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada who is to speak at the foundation centenary meeting at St. Andrew's Church, King st. on Monday 3rd March.

MACKENZIE AT FIRST SERVICE?

Some of William Lyon Mackenzie's descendants, including his daughter the late Mrs. John King, wife of John King, K.C., of Osgoode Hall and the latters' son, Premier King, were communicants at St. Andrew's Church, King street, but the loss of very early archives of the church leaves some uncertainty as to whether Mackenzie himself was a member of St. Andrew's congregation. Mackenzie was a Scots Presbyterian who once wrote that he would go to church more frequently if his labors of the week did not leave him so fatigued on the Sabbath. By some he is thought to have been a member of the pioneer Presbyterian congregation on Richmond st., which preceded St. Andrew's and later became Knox Church. But others assert that he was not only a member of St. Andrew's but first secretary of its board of managers. In any case he must often have sat in the pews of the original St. Andrew's Church at Church and Adelaide sts., whose early activities were chronicled in his paper, the Colonial Advocate. The editorial appearing below tells how a representative of the Advocate attended all three services held on Sunday 19th June, 1831 when St. Andrew's was first opened for worship. Just imagine three services on one Sunday, the first starting at 9 a.m., the second at 11 and the third at 3 p.m. But such was the old Scottish custom and devout folk were expected to attend all three. The editorial is signed merely "Z" but was more than likely written by Mackenzie himself.

GOVERNOR A SUBSCRIBER.

The church was founded on 3rd March, 1830, when a group of citizens met to discuss ways and means. Other meetings followed which the Colonial Advocate records thus:

York: Thursday, March 11, 1830:

About five hundred pounds have been subscribed, towards the erection of a church in this city, in connection with the Scottish Presbyterian establishment. The list of subscribers increases rapidly.

York: Thursday, March 18, 1830:

We have understood that Sir John Colborne has promised the Scots Presbyterian Kirk proposed to be erected here, £100, yearly for 5 years; but have not heard what fund it is to be paid out of. We are told that Mr. Ewart, the builder, has subscribed £50; Mr. Hugh Carfrae, £50; Hon. W. Allan, £25; Mr. Morris, of Perth, £10; Mr. McLean, of Stormont, £10; Hon. D. Cameron, and Chief Justice Robinson, £20 each.

JOHN ARTHUR WYLIE, manager of the Drug Department of the T. Eaton Company, died yesterday afternoon after an attack of angina pectoris while in his office. Mr. Wylie had been a member of the Eaton staff for the last 20 years. He was 52.

Wooden Idols of Temple Burned When Mercury Falls Below Zero at Sianfu

Peiping, Feb. 25.—Youthful soldiers in Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang's army in Shensi Province, some of them only 14 years of age, have invaded the temples in Sianfu, the capital of Shensi, and taken out the idols and burned them to keep themselves warm, according to reports from Sianfu printed in the Chinese newspapers here.

The report adds that the more important wooden idols in the City Temple of Sianfu, which was once the capital of all China, have been taken and burned by the boy soldiers. Other temples, some of them centuries old, also have been robbed of ancient idols.

Robbery of the temples followed one of the most serious cold spells in the history of Shensi. The temperature fell below zero, Fahrenheit, although a missionary who has lived in Sianfu for 40 years declares that it never before has fallen below 16 degrees above zero during his stay.

Sianfu is the centre of the most serious famine in China at present. Investigators report that two-thirds of the six million residents at Central Shensi either have died or are likely to die by next June from starvation or incidental causes.

But the district has to support 300,000 Kuominchun soldiers, who have been on starvation rations for weeks. It is declared that half of these soldiers are boys of 16 years of age or less.

In the effort to survive, these boy soldiers have committed many robberies and other excesses. The burning of temple idols is considered incidental to the famine.

About five hundred pounds have been subscribed, towards the erection of a church in this city, in connection with the Scottish Presbyterian establishment. The list of subscribers increases rapidly.

York: Thursday, March 18, 1830:

We have understood that Sir John Colborne has promised the Scots Presbyterian Kirk proposed to be erected here, £100, yearly for 5 years; but have not heard what fund it is to be paid out of. We are told that Mr. Ewart, the builder, has subscribed £50; Mr. Hugh Carfrae, £50; Hon. W. Allan, £25; Mr. Morris, of Perth, £10; Mr. McLean, of Stormont, £10; Hon. D. Cameron, and Chief Justice Robinson, £20 each.

AT BRADLEY'S HOTEL.

York: Thursday, March 18, 1830:

Notice—A meeting of the subscribers for the erection of a Presbyterian Church, in York, will be held in Bradley's Hotel, to-morrow evening, the 19th current, at 7 p.m.

By order of the Committee,
JAMES NEWBIGGING,
Secretary.

York, 18th March, 1830.

York, Thursday May 20, 1830.

A meeting of the subscribers was held in Bradley's Hotel on Tuesday last. They have £750 subscribed and are as we understand, to proceed with the building forthwith. Messrs. J. F. Smith, John Ewart, Jacob Latham, Walter Rose, Thomas Carfrae Jr., Hugh Carfrae, and Alexander Murray are appointed Trustees of the Church.

York: Thursday, June 16, 1831:

The New PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH in YORK

Will be open for divine service on Sunday next, the 19th inst., at 11 o'clock a.m., and at 3 o'clock p.m., when a collection will be taken at the close of each service to aid in the completion of the building, the pews will be free on that occasion.

N.B.—The pews will be rented in the Church on Wednesday next the 22nd inst., at 5 o'clock in the afternoon—when all those who are desirous of renting pews are requested to attend. One quarter's rent will be required to be paid in advance.

HIGHLANDERS AT KIRK.

York: Thursday, June 23, 1831:
Scots Kirk, York.

We intended to have the Camp Meeting on Yonge street last Sunday, but being desirous to see in what manner the minister of the second or new Presbyterian Church would acquit himself, we attended there thrice—viz., at 9, 11 and 3.

At 9 in the morning, the Rev. W. Rentoul delivered his first discourse in York, to a part of the 79th Regiment, from Luke X and 10, 11, 12; and at 3 in the afternoon he preached from Acts X and 29 on the duty of a Christian minister. At 11 a.m. Mr. McGill of Niagara took his text from Matthew V and 14 "Ye are the light of the world." These gentlemen speak in a clear distinct tone of voice, and the building proves well adapted for the conveyance of sound. They read every word of their discourses, which in some degrees mars the effect, especially when the hearer looks at the minister. But on the whole we felt pleased and gratified with the exercises of the day.

The old Scottish version of the Psalms of David, with the paraphrases, was, much to our satisfaction, used; and the tunes sung were St. Anne's, Old Hundred, Portugal, Irish, and some outlandish air which few knew ought of. Irish (or Dublin) was the last sung in the evening, and the gentleman who raised it ought to consent to take the clerk's desk. We thought it was one of the 79th, but were not certain. The line ought to be read when the troops are present, as many of the soldiers are without Psalm Books, and every means should be taken to keep up the time honored custom of singing God's praises in person rather than by proxy. Among the Psalms and hymns were: 1, Psalm CXXI"

The report adds that the more important wooden idols in the City Temple of Sianfu, which was once the capital of all China, have been taken and burned by the boy soldiers. Other temples, some of them centuries old, also have been robbed of ancient idols.

Robbery of the temples followed one of the most serious cold spells in the history of Shensi. The temperature fell below zero, Fahrenheit, although a missionary who has lived in Sianfu for 40 years declares that it never before has fallen below 16 degrees above zero during his stay.

Sianfu is the centre of the most serious famine in China at present. Investigators report that two-thirds of the six million residents at Central Shensi either have died or are likely to die by next June from starvation or incidental causes.

But the district has to support 300,000 Kuominchun soldiers, who have been on starvation rations for weeks. It is declared that half of these soldiers are boys of 16 years of age or less.

In the effort to survive, these boy soldiers have committed many robberies and other excesses. The burning of temple idols is considered incidental to the famine.

Rabies' Spread Causes Loss

Farmers of Two Counties Ask Department For More Assistance Against It

Farmers of Middlesex and Lambton Counties have appealed to the Department of Health through F. V. Laughton, Conservative member of the Legislature for North Middlesex, for assistance in an epidemic of rabies.

Several head of cattle are said to be dying weekly and farmers, it is claimed, are suffering financially.

In an interview with Hon. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health, Mr. Laughton was told the department is doing everything possible to check the spread of rabies in the province, but that its powers were curative alone and do not extend to quarantine.

The carcass of a cow left lying in a frozen state pending burial is said to have caused the present outbreak.

WELLAND AREA WORKS FOR HARMONIOUS PROGRESS

Welland, Feb. 25 (Special).—The slogan for Welland to-day is the great Welland Ship Canal and that is the basis on which the Welland County Ship Canal Industrial Area Committee has worked to date, and how it intends to work to that end, one for all, all for one. That is the way every municipality with the canal area from Port Colborne to the northerly limit of Thorold township has co-operated, all working for the benefit of the entire industrial area. Such was the gist of a fine address by Lynn B. Spencer, K.C., chairman of Industrial Area Committee at a meeting of Lion's Club last night.

84. Psalm from 8, verse; 3. Paraphrase XXXIX, v. 10, He Comes, etc.; 4. Hundredth Psalm, L.M.; 5. Paraphrase XXIII, v. 6, etc.; 6, Do. XX, 1st 16 lines.

MINISTER'S SILK GOWN.

These ministers appear in the pulpit in a black silk gown, which is not an inappropriate dress. The pulpit wants the top, an old Roman decoration that might have been as well continued. We regret to see the ministers of the Scots Kirk put in a claim for a share of the clergy reserves, a share of the public revenue, etc. They have a warning before them in the example of their brethren in Nova Scotia, and possibly may yet profit by it. It is our intention when we have heard Mr. Machar of Kingston, to state our humble opinion concerning the relative abilities of the three as preachers, and in the meantime it is unnecessary for us to do more than to remind ministers generally, that if "the good which one sincere Christian does in a village or a neighborhood is often incalculable," and Mr. McGill proved his assertion—the good which a sincere Christian minister does in a city or province—nay, often in a nation or a continent—is incalculable. Believing, that if Scottish ministers would renounce the arm of flesh and trust in Divine Providence, as their fathers did in Scotland's best and most glorious days, and the apostles and primitive Christians in times of old, they would never in America need any other patronage, nor at the last hour repent their election. We conclude by wishing to Mr. Rentoul and his family much happiness in their adopted land.

sert that he was not only a member of St. Andrew's but first secretary of its board of managers. In any case he must often have sat in the pews of the original St. Andrew's Church at Church and Adelaide sts., whose early activities were chronicled in his paper, the Colonial Advocate. The editorial appearing below tells how a representative of the Advocate attended all three services held on Sunday 19th June, 1831 when St. Andrew's was first opened for worship. Just imagine three services on one Sunday, the first starting at 9 a.m., the second at 11 and the third at 3 p.m. But such was the old Scottish custom and devout folk were expected to attend all three. The editorial is signed merely "Z" but was more than likely written by Mackenzie himself.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNIV. SARY IS MARKED BY RECEPTION

Hundredth Birthday of Church Is Occasion of Delightful Function—His Honor and Mrs. W. D. Ross Receive Members of Congregation—Ballroom Banked With Flowers

The 100th anniversary of the founding of St. Andrew's church was the occasion of a most enjoyable reception and tea this afternoon when His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. William D. Ross were host and hostess to the members of the congregation.

Mrs. Ross wore a charming gown of figured chiffon, fashioned with the new cape, and black slippers of crepe, with cut steel buckles, and Miss Susan Ross was in a dainty frock of cream colored lace, with slippers of brown.

Tea, with the members of the church assisting, was served in the ballroom where the dais was banked with potted plants and ferns, and the table was arranged with a profusion of bright spring flowers. In attendance were Colonel Fraser, Colonel Rhodes, Captain Haldenby, Captain Robertson, Captain E. E. Trent, Lieut. W. E Patterson, Lieut. Ross Wilson, Lieut. W. M. Campbell, Lieut. J. A. D. Craig, and Lieut. K. N. Lander.

MEMBERS RECALLED OF OLD ST. ANDREW'S

Mrs. A. W. McDougald of Montreal Was Daughter of Elder

Mrs. A. W. McDougald of Montreal, who attended Sunday school classes in the old St. Andrew's church building on Church St. and who was married in the new church by the Rev. D. J. Macdonnell in 1883, is one of many old communicants who with Premier King, Lt.-Gov. W. D. Ross and others are celebrating the centenary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on King and Simcoe Sts. to-day.

Mrs. McDougald, who has been an invalid for the past five years, has spent much of her time in Jamaica and she is at present the guest of her son-in-law, Phillip G. Kiely, of 2 Rosedale Rd.

TABLET IS UNVEILED BY PREMIER KING TO REVERED PARENTS

Old Church Is Crowded to Witness Impressive Ceremony

BIRTHDAY CAKE IS CUT

"St. Andrew's, God bless her!"

The old grey church on King Street was filled last night to her farthest corner. A great congregation was met to remember with thanksgiving the March night in 1830 when St. Andrew's Church was born of faith and loyalty in the hearts of the Scottish people of the little town of York.

Remembering that night 100 years ago, the people of St. Andrew's remembered with thankfulness as great the men and women who through 100 years had given unfaltering loyalty to their church, and received from her their faith.

A commemoration within a commemoration marked the night, one to be long cherished in memory by the people of St. Andrew's Church. The Prime Minister of Canada unveiled during the service a tablet set in the west wall of the church in memory of their father and mother by himself and his sister, Mrs. Janet King Lay.

"O God of Bethel, by whose hand
Thy people still are fed—"

Many hundred voices joined in the Scottish paraphrase as the tablet was unveiled.

Son of His Father.

Following its unveiling, Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King spoke, not as the Prime Minister of Canada, but as the son of his father and the grandson of his grandfather.

"May I say how proud I am to be among a number of those who have met together to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the founding of St. Andrew's, an event of very real significance in the life of the city and of our country. How happy I am, too, to be able to feel that my mother's father was numbered among the few members of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada and citizens of York who met together 100 years ago to establish in this community a church in association with the Church of Scotland," he said.

For Quarter Century.

"And may I express to Dr. Parker, the members of the Session and the congregation the thanks of my sister, Mrs. Lay, and myself for permitting us to place upon the walls of this church the tablet to the memory of our father and mother which it has just been my privilege to unveil.

"During the residence of my father and mother in Toronto, it was with St. Andrew's, Toronto, and its congregation that the association had its relationship for nearly a quarter of a century, as is recorded on the tablet which has just been unveiled.

"As we think of the distinguished and learned and devout men who have filled its pulpit, week in and week out, over the period of a century; of the officers and members who zealously and earnestly have helped to conduct its many activities; of the men and women who, under the inspiration of its ministrations, have entered upon and carried on their several vocations, with more of determination for the right, and more of Christian charity, may we not indeed be proud to feel that the privilege is ours of paying some slight tribute to the part which St. Andrew's has played in the making of our country what it is today."

On the tablet just unveiled, the speaker said, he and his sister had tried to give expression to the continuity of life in the Christian Church. Tracings were there copied from the cross of St. Martin in Iona, the birthplace of the Scottish Church.

"May I say that our thought was to express in some way, however small, on the tablet itself what 100 years ago inspired the thought of establishing in Upper Canada a Church in immediate association with the Church of Scotland. The tracings are there, some of those that are to be found at Iona in Scotland, and which serve to link Christianity in Scotland with Christianity at the place of its birth.

The Right Relationship.

"In all this, it seems to me, we find some indication of the right relationship of Church and State. The Church would have no place but for the world in which it finds itself. It is but one institution, but it should be the central institution of all. Its mission is to breathe upon the others the spirit of life."

Lieutenant-Governor Speaks.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario spoke not only of St. Andrew's great past, but of her living work, at last night's thanksgiving service. Alderman Carrick, representing Mayor Wemp, brought the good wishes of Toronto to St. Andrew's Church.

"I say to you, 'St. Andrew's, God bless her!'"

Rev. Dr. Gunn, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, brought greetings from his Church, and added his own blessing on St. Andrew's.

"I have never," he said, "for many years passed St. Andrew's without, as the Scots have it, 'putting up a little bit prayer' that God would bless St. Andrew's and the work she is doing."

Rev. Dr. MacGillivray, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church; Rev. Dr. Eakin of Knox College; Rev. Dr. Drummond of St. Paul's Church, Hamilton, leaders of Presbyterianism in Canada today, honored the memory of the founders of their faith in the new country, and spoke words of loving recognition of St. Andrew's work in Toronto and in Canada.

The Right Rev. Dr. Sweeny, Bishop of Toronto, spoke of his early memories of St. Andrew's Church, when it really was "New" St. Andrew's, and wished it a happy future, if not as a "United church," then at least as a united congregation.

"Whether daughter, mother, granddaughter or stepniece," Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater of St. Andrew's United Church, Carlton Street, was not sure of the relationship of his church to theirs, but in any case he brought the sincere greetings and good wishes of the congregation of one St. Andrew's to the congregation of the other.

Many Good-Wil Messages.

Letters and telegrams of congratulation were read by Rev. Stuart Parker, who presided. They included greetings from Most Rev. Neil McNeil, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto; from the Kirk Session of Cooke's Church, and from Rev. Dr. E. D. McLaren of Vancouver.

A reception followed the service. Mrs. R. G. Hector, a member of the congregation of St. Andrew's since her christening in the old church, 83 years ago, cut the century birthday cake of St. Andrew's Church.

PREMIER KING LAUDS ST. ANDREW'S RECORD

Unveils Memorial Tablet at Church's Centenary Celebration.

EVENING OF MEMORY

Other Denominations Send Greetings to Presbyterian Brethren.

Memories of tragedy and comedy, sentiment and romance, threatened disruption and renewed strength, ambition and affluence, were recalled at last night's centenary meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, in the church auditorium. They were memories weaving a strong and enduring fabric whose threads stretch not only the length and breadth of the Dominion, but throughout the British Empire.

Among those who helped to piece the fabric was Premier Mackenzie King, who unveiled a tablet in memory of his father and mother, on behalf of his sister and himself.

He told of the association of his family with St. Andrew's Church in Berlin and later with St. Andrew's in Toronto, the latter lasting for a period of more than half a century. In fact, he said, the family tree dated back to the foundation of the church itself. And in that home life there was no association so dear as that between the home and the church.

"If St. Andrew's Church, a single church, has had the influence we know and believe it has had, what must be the influence of the church on national life and throughout the world," he asked.

Central Institution.

"The church would have no place but for the world in which it finds itself. It is but one institution, but it should be the central institution of all. Its mission is to breathe upon the others the spirit of life. The state will find its noblest expression and the fulfilment of its highest destiny only as its life approaches in expression the aims and ideals of the noblest and highest individual life.

"If we would serve our country in the truest and surest way, let us, with the Hebrew, believe that God continues to work for continents as well as men. With the Founder of our faith, let us believe that all-life is sacred, and that human life, however shattered and sordid at times it may appear, carries within itself the reflected image of the divine. In this belief, and this only, will our country realize its highest destiny."

Premier King listed the time-honored institutions: The home, the church, the institutions of learning, the learned professions, government in its legislature, executive and judicial aspects, the defence forces on land, on the sea and in the air, and the financial, commercial and idustrial institutions of our land. There were, too, the agencies which stimulated art, literature and opinion in their different forms of expression.

"But let me remove from the group, or the moment, the church and its influence, and ask what the result would be," he said. "What, in a word, would our human society be to-day—what would our nation be to-day—were all the institutions which are, as it were, their supporting columns, to be beyond the orbit of the influence of the church and the inspiration of its teachings?

Proud of Memories.

"It is something like this, it seems to me, which we have to bring to our minds in order to get a true picture of the part which St. Andrew's Church has played in the century of its existence in this community and in our country. As we think of the distinguished and learned and devout men who have filled its pulpit, week in and week out, over the period of the century; of the officers and members who have zealously and earnestly helped to conduct its many activities; of the men and women, who, under the inspiration of its ministrations, have entered upon and carried on their several vocations, with more of determination for the right, and more of Christian charity, may we not, indeed, be proud to feel that the privilege is ours of paying some slight tribute to the part which St. Andrew's played in the making of our country what it is to-day?"

Lieut.-Governor W. D. Ross brought greetings from the province, and stressed the "value beyond computation of St. Andrew's Church."

Alderman Carrick stated that the church was the biggest police force in the community. That point had been established in the City Council during a debate on the taxing of church property. He brought the congratulations of the council, Mayor Bert Wemp and of Metropolitan United Church of which he is an elder.

Rev. Dr. W. T. Gunn, moderator of the United Church, spoke on behalf of that body. Right Rev. Bishop Sweeny brought greetings from the Anglican Church. Rev. Dr. A. J. McGillivray, past moderator of the Presbyterian church, felt that St. Andrew's might well be considered one of the shrines—one of the landmarks of the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. Thomas Eakin, principal of Knox College, outlined the contributions which St. Andrew's had made to the community, and Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater brought congratulations from Old St. Andrew's Church.

St. Andrew's To Celebrate Centenary

Week of Special Services in March – Site Chosen by the Founders Now Church and Adelaide

Presbyterians throughout the Dominion and representatives of all other religious denominations will join in the celebration of the centenary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King and Simcoe streets, which will be observed on Monday evening, March 3. Among the distinguished guests who will attend the centenary reunion and who will present the addresses are the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, his Honor W. D. Ross and his Worship Mayor Wemp.

Greetings from other churches will be conveyed by the Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto, the Moderator of the United Church, the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church and possibly his Grace Archbishop Neil McNeil.

Special services will be held during the whole week of March 2, and Holy Communion will be celebrated on Sunday morning, March 9. A feature of the anniversary is the history of the congregation prepared by the pastor, Rev. Stuart C. Parker.

A tablet commemorating the lives of the father and mother of the prime minister will be unveiled. The grandfather of Mr. Mackenzie King, William Lyon Mackenzie, was one of the "originals" of St. Andrew's Church congregation. His father was one of the elders. Another "old boy" who is being urged to attend is E. W. Beatty, president of the C.P.R.

The church was built in 1830 by a number of "Scotsmen in the Town of York," and was then known as the "Church of St. Andrew, York, in connection with the Church of Scotland," according to the history prepared by Rev. Stuart Parker.

PRESBYTERIAN HISTORY

From the Disruption of 1843 the Church of Scotland suffered more than the Free Church. Sympathy and money poured in upon the seceders from all parts of the world, and soon they had planted new "Free" Churches and Schools in almost every parish. But public opinion was against the "Auld Kirk." The Presbyterians of England and Ireland, for example, ceased to have communion with it, its foreign missionaries seceded in a body, and it was left, strong in numbers but bereft of sympathy, to face those very problems which the seceders had not waited to solve. Out of its troubles, as it happened, the Church of Scotland gathered new enterprise and earnestness. By the work of Robertson of Ellon and others it founded 250 new parishes by 1877. It prosecuted Home Mission work. It succeeded in 1874 in having Lay Patronage abolished. It restored the love of beautiful churches and a dignified and solemn worship; and through men like Caird and Flint it made its scholarship known throughout the world. So once again schism was over-ruled for good.

A PRAYER

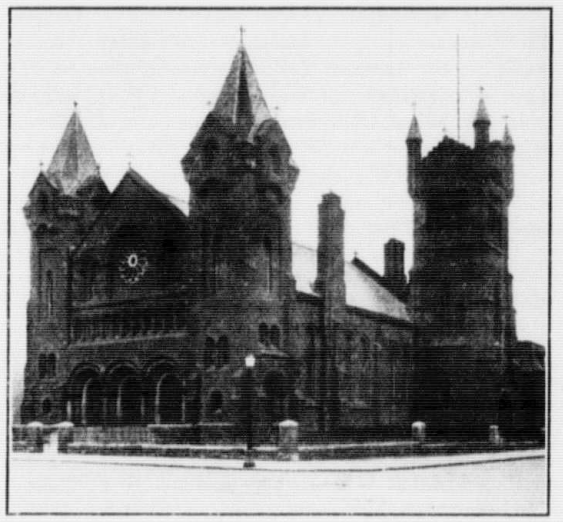

We bless Thee, O God, that out of the eater may come forth meat, and out of the strong sweetness. As Thy Providence hath in the past corrected our errors, turning them to good, so help us in the future. Regard our good will, O God, and not the failure of our performance; and where Thou seest that we cannot serve Thee as we would, help Thou our infirmities that Thy work may not suffer.

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO

On Wednesday, 3rd. March, 1830, some Scotsmen in the Town of York, members of the Church of Scotland, gathered together their friends and fellow Churchmen with a view to forming a congregation "in connection with the Church of Scotland". The meeting represented many "walks of life". The Legislature of Upper Canada was represented in men like the Hon. Wm. Morris and the Hon. Peter McGill, and Law by the distinguished Judge, afterwards Chief Justice, McLean. There were officers and men of the 71st. and 79th. Regiments of Foot then in garrison. There were leaders of the trade and commerce of the young Colony, and along with them many less successful settlers whose very hardships had made them the more zealous in forging a new bond between them and the dear land they had left behind. One and all, they deemed the time ripe for building a Church where they could worship God in their fathers' way. They made their decision at that meeting, opened a Subscription List, and organized themselves into the "Church of St. Andrew, York, in connection with the Church of Scotland." There was no Presbytery to help and encourage them. They set out upon their way alone, and by the month of June laid the Foundation of their Church on the S. W. corner of what are now Church and Adelaide Streets.

TODAY

On the 3rd. March, 1930, we celebrate, therefore, the Centenary of our congregation. The story of the Hundred Years is being written and will be published at the earliest moment possible. To this a reference will be made farther on in the Magazine. Meanwhile we must all of us answer the call of today. It is a call to Thanksgiving. If pride should tempt us to say—"For a hundred years St. Andrew's has kept the Banner of the Cross flying, and it flies after a century more boldly than ever!"—let Humility enter into our hearts and put better words upon our lips. Say rather—"For a hundred years God has blessed St. Andrew's and its people: He has comforted their sorrows, given them peace, strengthened them in living, encouraged them in dying; He has covered their failures, magnified their successes; He has blessed their children and enabled them to take high place in the life of Canada, and He has caused the Church of St. Andrew to bear an honoured name among the Churches. It is God's doing altogether, and it is marvellous in our eyes." May God grant to all of us grace to see in this Hundreth Anniversary an occasion for the re-dedication of ourselves to His service, and an opportunity of doing something to strengthen our old Church.

The Centenary Celebration Committee has planned a week of activities, beginning on Sunday, 2nd. March, which, it is hoped, will make the occasion memorable to everyone. The Committee has kept the City in mind as well as the Congregation, and has tried to make our Centenary an event of more than local interest. In order that everyone may be familiar with the arrangements sufficiently early to allow of the adjusting of other engagements, I am setting down, first of all, our MEETINGS in the form of a Diary of the Week.

SUNDAY, 2ND. MARCH

On this day Special Services will be held in Church. At Evening Service the Preacher will be the much-loved Moderator of the General Assembly, Dr. Perrie of Wingham, while it is hoped that in spite of difficulties existing at present we may be able to have the sermon at Morning Service from Dr. E. D. McLaren of Vancouver, whose old association and friendship with the late Rev. D. J. Macdonnell of St. Andrew's make the prospect of his presence with us very attractive. The Kirk Session will print the Order of Service for the day in the form of a handsome booklet which members will be able to preserve as a memento of the occasion.

At 3.30 in the afternoon a special Children's Service will be held in the Church. Ordinarily the Children's Service is attended only by the scholars of the Sunday School. On this occasion, however, it is hoped that all children connected with the congregation will attend, no matter how far from the Church they live. Will parents assist in making the Children's Service as memorable as any other by enabling and encouraging their children to attend? It is of great consequence that those who will carry on St. Andrew's after us should early be seized of the value of their heritage in the Church.

MONDAY, 3RD. MARCH

At 8 p.m. our Centenary Reunion will be held. The Church will be used for the purpose, as it is anticipated more people will attend than our Halls could accommodate. The Choir will be in attendance and, with our soloists, will provide the musical part of the proceedings. This will be in some respects a unique gathering. Speakers from the other Churches will convey their greetings to the congregation. The Bishop of Toronto, the Moderator of the United Church of Canada, the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, the Moderator of the Presbytery of Toronto,—and, possibly, His Grace Archbishop McNeil,—will speak to us. Dr. D. R. Drummond of Hamilton will represent the former Assistants. There will be representatives of "Old St. Andrew's" United Church,—the successors of the congregation formed in the old building after the present Church was erected in 1876. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, the Prime Minister of Canada, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, and His Worship the Mayor of Toronto are also expected to speak. By the generosity of one of our Elders, Rev. P. F. Sinclair, this, or one of the Sunday services, will be, if arrangements can be made, broadcast. An additional interest and solemnity will be given to this gathering by the unveiling of a Mural Tablet commemorating the father and mother of our honoured Prime Minister. This depends upon Mr. Mackenzie King's Parliamentary duties and upon the completion of the Tablet in time for March 3rd. But we have every hope that the work will be expedited, and also that all parties in Parliament will combine to make it possible for the Prime Minister to perform this act of filial piety upon which his desires are set. As everyone knows, the grandfather of Mr. Mackenzie King, the famous William Lyon Mackenzie, was one of the "originals" of St. Andrew's who founded the congregation; his honoured father was one of our Elders; and he himself is one of our most distinguished "old boys". Another distinguished "old boy", Mr. E. W. Beattie, President of the Canadian Pacific Railways, may yet find it possible to be with us, although at present bound down to meetings elsewhere on that day.

Further,—His Honour the Lieut.-Governor of Ontario and Mrs. W. D. Ross are very kindly sending out to all members of the congregation invitations to tea at Government House on the afternoon of this Anniversary Day.

TUESDAY AND THURSDAY, 4TH. & 6TH. MARCH

On these days a Midday Service will be held in Church, beginning at 12.30 p.m. and closing promptly at 1.10 p.m. A short Address will be delivered on each day by prominent preachers, and it is hoped that every member of the congregation who can contrive to be present will attend. We have much to be thankful for. Let us not fail, therefore, to wait upon God with our thanksgiving.

WEDNESDAY, 5TH. MARCH

On this evening at 8.15 a Sacred Concert will be given in the Church. Our own Choir, augmented for the occasion by friends, will provide the choral numbers. For the rest, the now world-famed "Hart House String Quartette" of Toronto, has been engaged and will play. It is hoped also to have a visiting vocalist whom the public as well as the congregation would like to hear. There will be no charge for admission to the Concert. A collection will be made, however. Offering plates will be placed at the entrances, and we are confident that sufficient will be subscribed to justify the Centenary Committee and the Managers in their enterprise.

FRIDAY, 7TH. MARCH

At 8 p.m. Service Preparatory to Holy Communion will be held in the Church. Our Preparatory Services are always well-attended. We expect, however, that at this one the attendance will exceed anything we have known hitherto.

SATURDAY, 8TH. MARCH

At 3.30 p.m. an Organ Recital will be played in the Church by MR. PALMER CHRISTIAN. Mr. Christian is recognized as one of the greatest living organists. On the American Continent he is among the most outstanding. Wherever he plays enthusiasm meets him. There is no space in the Magazine to do more than intimate his coming. We trust that the Press will give fuller information regarding his career and genius. Once again it falls to be said that, while no charge will be made for admission, opportunity will be provided for making an offering at the doors of the Church.

SUNDAY, 9TH. MARCH

This day will mark the close of our celebration. Holy Communion will be celebrated at Morning Service. The Kirk Session has postponed the February Communion to this date, in order that we may all feel the solemnity of the occasion and dedicate ourselves anew to God as we enter upon the second century of our existence as a Congregation. May God bless us all. Most of us will see no more "special" days in St. Andrew's. Let us make the most of this one, therefore, and leave to the children the thought that in our generation we were very faithful, shirking nothing that could make for the good of the Church, and seeking "first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness".

"THE BOOK OF ST. ANDREW'S"

In connection with our Centenary I am compiling a history of the congregation, with—I hope—an amount of additional matter relating to movements that have originated in St. Andrew's, public events connected with it, distinguished persons who have belonged to the congregation, and some record of the glorious Regiment, the 48th. Highlanders of Canada,

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 17) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Pamphlets and clippings n.d., 1930

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

which, being virtually born in St. Andrew's, has preserved connection with it through the years.

It is not likely that the book will be ready in the beginning of March, as the work, owing to the pressure of other business, can proceed only slowly. But it will be completed and published at the earliest possible moment. Meanwhile members of the congregation are asked to signify their intention of procuring a copy, so that we may know how many to produce. The book will be artistically bound and printed, and will be embellished with photographs of historical interest. It is not possible at this stage to state definitely the price which must be charged for it. But it is hoped that it will not exceed $2.50 a copy,—which will bring it within reach of every member of the congregation. It will be a permanent and interesting souvenir of a very memorable occasion.

Will the members kindly place their orders during this month of February? A card, or a note, placed on the Offering Plate at any service, bearing name and address and a statement of the number of copies required will be sufficient. If it is preferable to anyone, I shall be glad to receive a letter through the mail with the information required. It will hardly be possible to guarantee a copy, as everyone will understand, unless it is ordered in advance.

OUR ENDOWMENT SCHEME

One last item in our Centenary celebrations remains to be noticed. It is our Endowment Scheme.

That St. Andrew's is a "down-town" Church no one requires to be reminded. It was a "down-town" Church thirty years ago, if not earlier. Long ago the opinion was held that St. Andrew's was doomed to failure. The population had moved away from it. Its once fashionable district had become a wilderness of warehouses; and, in short, it was only a matter of time ere it should have to close its doors and establish itself somewhere in the residential parts!

That gloomy foreboding has not been realized. The advent of the street-car and the automobile has enabled St. Andrew's, like St. James' Anglican Cathedral, St. Michael's Roman Catholic Cathedral, and the Metropolitan United Church, to conserve its congregation and enjoy a rich and full congregational life. Problems have been created for us, it is true; the social work of our Church has altered drastically in character; some enterprises have had to be abandoned, and our scheme of work has had to be revised. But the congregation is larger today than ever, and it is perhaps not too much to say that its spirit is the spirit of its palmiest days.

But we must have regard to the future. The death of some of our most generous supporters would create a difficult situation for our Managers, and the time has come when we must face the fact and try to lift the old Church beyond the reach of such a contingency. Every "down-town" Church on the American Continent is striving to face the like circumstances and provide for them. St. Andrew's must not lag behind and by carelessness jeopardise its sacred Cause. We must seek to provide an endowment, like others, so that, no matter what losses the congregation may sustain, there will be no danger of our having to lower the flag of our Lord Jesus Christ in the heart of this great and greatly growing city. This is the last strong effort that the present generation will have to make for St. Andrew's and Presbyterianism in Toronto. Under God, our future depends on the way we rise to this summons and work for the Church in which we enjoy so much happiness.

The Managers, with the aid of the men of the congregation, are going to approach everyone to find out what help may be expected in the effort to endow the work of St. Andrew's. The sum ultimately aimed at is One Hundred Thousand Dollars. It would not be sufficient, by any means, to provide for our work wholly. But it would safeguard it from being crippled through sudden loss of income and would give our managers new heart in carrying on a work which in every respect is indispensable.

The Kirk Session, and indeed the entire congregation, are at one with the Managers in setting a stout heart in this way to the steep hill of the future. We are confident that all will support us to the utmost of their ability, and that this Centenary Year will see at least the beginning of an Endowment Fund in the Church. It will be an insurance for our children. It will make it possible for them to occupy our places here when we are gone, and to bless us in memory for the provision we have made.

This number of the Magazine will be mailed, together with a subscription card, to every member, and adherent, with special attention drawn to this paragraph. In addition, each member will be visited by one of our men, who will talk over the matter of Endowment and report thereafter to the Managers how much each one is prepared to do toward this great end. Take it to heart, friend reader, and make up your mind to pull your weight with us in the boat as God has enabled and prospered you.

If you do not require that anyone should call and talk the matter over with you, the subscription card might be filled up and returned to the Treasurer. Indeed, if you will do so, you will lighten the work for us very materially and give us cause to be most grateful to you for your loyalty and readiness.

Address subscription cards to
COL. J. F. MICHIE,
7 King St. W., Toronto.

May God be with us in these coming days and make March 1930 a happy and memorable time to us all.

S. C. PARKER.

STEEPLE BY JOHN HOWARD

It does not appear that any of the brick from the battle-scarred Legislature was used, but on 24th June, 1830, the corner-stone of the edifice was laid by Thomas Carfrae Jr. Trustees were: Jas. F. Smith, wholesale grocer; Thos. Carfrae Jr., merchant; John Ewart, builder; Hugh Carfrae, an official of the Legislative Council; Walter Rose of the Receiver General's office; Alexander Murray, merchant, and Jacob Latham, builder. The church was a plain brick structure plastered over to represent stone. It had a seating capacity of 900 and its spire, the design of John Howard, architect, and donor of High Park to Toronto, was added in 1850.

Unfortunately the York newspaper of 24th June, 1830, fell to pieces when the corner-stone was opened in 1877. Worse still the original subscription list for the church building fund crumbled away when taken from a strong-box in the cellar of St. Andrew's Church, King street, a few years ago. But among the church archives in the care of Col. John Michie, Treasurer, are many interesting old letters, and the original account book of St. Andrew's which, dating from 1830 to 1852, is replete with entries in faded goosequill penmanship.

FAMOUS SUBSCRIBERS.

Among other things it chronicles the names of some distinguished subscribers to the building fund. Chief Justice Sir William Campbell gave £30; Hon. William Allen, first Postmaster of York, £25; future Chief Justice Archibald McLean, £10; Hon. James Crooks, £5; Jesse Ketchum, 25 shillings; William Proudfoot, president of the Bank of Upper Canada, £7, 10s.; Dr. Burnside, £12, 10s.; Joseph Rodgers, the furrier, £17, 5s.; John Bekie, £10; Hugh Carfrae, £50; Dr. Dunlop, £5; Walter Rose, £7; G. G. Crawford and Jas. Newbigging, £7, 10s. each; J. H. Strang, £5; Mrs. Arthurs, £5, 10s.; Alexander Wood, £10; Jas. King and Prof. Jas. Murray, 25 shillings each; officers and men of the 71st Highland Regiment stationed at the Old Fort, £27, 7s., 6d. Most spectacular on the list, however, are the names of a famous Anglican prelate-statesman and an Iroquois chieftain. The Archdeacon of York, later Bishop Strachan, member of the Executive Council and leader of the Family Compact, donated £2, 10s. But "Jocky" Strachan, a Presbyterian in his youth, had, ere he took Anglican Holy orders, been an unsuccessful applicant for the pulpit of the pioneer Presbyterian congregation of St. Gabriel St. Church, Montreal. He had a soft spot in his heart for the "auld kirk". The Indian chieftain contributor to the church building fund was "Ahyouwaighs", Captain John Brant, General Superintendent and Chief of the Six Nations. Captain John who donated £1, 3s., 4d., to St. Andrew's was himself a member of the Anglican church on the Mohawk Reserve near Brantford, a warrior with a distinguished record in the War of 1812, and son and heir to the famous "Thayendanegea", Capt. Joseph Brant, leader of the Iroquois and Britain's staunch ally in the French and Revolutionary Wars.

WHISKEY AS ANTI-FREEZE.

A quaint entry in the old ledger in 1852 is: "10½ gallons of whiskey for preventing the gas pipes from freezing, £1, 1s., 0d.." Another item records that 12 shillings and 6 pence was expended for repairing "Capt. Richardson's furs from damage caused by oil from the lamps". The book reveals that the Government allowed £50 annually towards the first minister's stipend, and that the cost of letter postage from Toronto to Kingston was 9 pence. The recorded fact that on 27th April, 1835, Rev. James George, future Principal of Queen's University, and father of W. K. George of this city, received only 15 shillings "for supplying the pulpit two days" makes it clear that student-ministers of that time were not overpaid.

THE KIST 'O WHUSTLES.

St. Andrew's was the first Presbyterian Church in Canada to use instrumental music and introduction of the "kist 'o whustles" so angered one member of the congregation that after writing to the Session and publishing a pamphlet on the subject he left the church.

But in early days organ and choir were both lacking in that kirk. Instead, a grave precentor struck the requisite note of each psalm or hymn on a tuning fork and the voices of the congregation joining in furnished all the melody. As precentor in 1847, John Ross relieved by John Manlach, received £12 per annum. By 1852 the "auld lichts" allowed the band of the Highland Light Infantry from the Fort to furnish music in the church on Sunday mornings. That same year a choir was introduced and a tiny melodean, followed a few years later by an organ. When the subject of instrumental music in churches was up for discussion before the General Assembly in Scotland at that time St. Andrew's, Toronto, was cited as an example of its success.

HIGHLANDERS IRK BEADLE

Construction of the church, which was insured with John Ridout for several thousand pounds, and on which William Cawthra held a mortgage for £200, caused a dispute between Peter McArthur, the builder; Thomas Roy, the architect-engineer, and the Session. An injunction to stop the work was threatened, but arbitration settled it, and a letter from Hon. Hume Blake, Vice-Chancellor of Upper Canada, to the Session, expresses the hope that the arbitration fees of £22, 10s. will be satisfactory. Another letter among the church archives is from the beadle informing the Session that since the 91st Highland Regiment joined the congregation his duties had so increased that £20 per annum was too little pay. His resignation was accepted. Another letter, dated 1838, is from Hon. John McMurrich, subsequently Secretary of the Province, regretting his inability to accept the church managership he had been offered. In the way of expenditures the old church ledger notes that "a hot air stove and pipes" had been purchased from Hiram Pyper and in 1851 a lightning rod. In that year the church accounts bear the signatures of Malcolm Galbraith and of John Robertson (father of John Ross Robertson), a member of the congregation since 1833.

EARLY PEWHOLDERS.

A list of pewholders of the 1840-50 period in the old account book contains some names still associated with the congregation. A few of those chronicled are: Isaac Gilmour, Oliver Mowat (the future Sir Oliver, Premier and Lieutenant-Governor), M. Nicol, W. Williamson, Mr. Inglis, R. Mitchell, Jacques and Hay, George Michie (great-uncle of Col. John Michie), Robert Cassels (father of Richard Cassels, K.C.), A. Drummond, J. Macdonell, J. George, Cochrane, Rannie, Shaw, Dallas, John Ewart, P. Morgan, W. C. Ross, Adam McKay, Gibson, Bell, Bishop, E. W. Thompson, Hemphill, Balfour, Milligan, Starke, Capt. Taylor, Adam Wilson (later Chief Justice Sir Adam), Dr. Telfer, H. Pyper, G. Sinclair, Rogerson, Henderson, McNab, M. Galbraith, McConkey, Jordan, W. H. Dow, K. M. Sutherland, Kellogg, Fowler, Dr. Layton, R. P. Crooks and Callahan.

THE FIRST MINISTERS.

First minister of St. Andrew's Church was Rev. William Rintoul, who resigned in 1834 to undertake scholastic work. For more than a year the church lacked a regular minister until the appointment of Rev. W. T. Leach in 1835. But Mr. Leach, seceding from the Presbyterian Church, left St. Andrew's in 1842 to take holy orders in the Church of England. That year the celebrated Rev. John Barclay took the pulpit, which he occupied most ably until his resignation in 1870. Soon after his induction Dr. Barclay's influence with his congregation was most severely tried. For in 1843 troublous times came to Toronto's "Scotch Kirk," as St. Andrew's was then generally known.

DISRUPTION IN SCOTLAND.

That year saw the Established Church of Scotland in the Motherland split in twain when, protesting against the vicious patronage system whereby Presbyteries and great landlords were able to fasten undesired ministers upon congregations, half the ministers and adherents of the old state church went over to the Free Kirk. Long since the Church of Scotland purged itself of patronage, and last year, after nearly a century of separation, Presbyterianism in Scotland was re-united amid rejoicings. In 1843, the year of disruption, rival factions in St. Andrew's demanded that Rev. Dr. Barclay declare himself, but the minister wisely refused to take sides in a controversy which could not affect the Toronto congregation so far removed from Scottish conditions and never under patronage.

FREES LEAVE ST. ANDREWS.

Among those who supported the Toronto Free Kirk movement were Hon. Isaac Buchanan, Hon. John McMurrich, James Shaw, William Ross and Peter Brown, father of Hon. George Brown, proprietor of the Globe and leader of the Liberal party in Canada. Among those who opposed the suggestion and helped Dr. Barclay to hold the majority of his congregation were Chief Justice Maclean, George Michie, John Cameron, president of the Bank of Upper Canada; John Robertson, E. W. Thompson, Hugh Scobie, John Jacques and Peter Morgan. In 1844 some 83 members of St. Andrew's with Free Kirk sympathies left the church, and joining the Richmond street congregation, formed Knox Church, under Rev. Dr. Burns, of Paisley, Scotland. St. Andrew's remained a unit of the Church of Scotland until 1875, when the several divisions of the church in this country were amalgamated as "The Presbyterian Church in Canada." A Toronto city directory of 1846 designates St. Andrew's as Church of Scotland and Knox as "Presbyterian Church in Canada."

OLD CHURCH SPLITS.

Alas, alas! a still more serious rupture was to blight St. Andrew's. A brilliant and earnest young minister had since Dr. Barclay's retirement in 1870 been preaching from its pulpit. He was Rev. Daniel James Macdonnell, a native of New Brunswick, who, educated in Scotland and at Queen's University, Kingston, was a son of the Rev. George Macdonnell, the revered minister of St. Andrew's, Fergus. Rev. D. J. Macdonnell's liberal views on dogma had lately brought him to trial before the General Assembly on a not very serious charge of heresy. It was not, however, a matter of doctrine, but of ritual, which caused the clash in the old church at the corner of Church and Adelaide streets in 1875. In that year Rev. Mr. Macdonnell and all but 58 members of the congregation withdrew in a body to found the present St. Andrew's Church at King and Simcoe streets, an intersection whose four corners came to be known respectively as "Salvation," "Legislation," "Education" and "Damnation," denoting St. Andrew's Church, old Government House, Upper Canada College and a saloon. Here be it said that in view of its foundation St. Andrew's, King street, has never accepted the designation "New" erroneously applied to it.

"PRESBYTERIAN CATHEDRAL."

Modelled largely after the design of St. Magnus Cathedral, the red sandstone Norman edifice at Kirkwall, Orkney Islands, which dates from the 12th century, Toronto's "Presbyterian Cathedral" rapidly took shape. Its presiding genius was W. J. Storm, the architect who planned University College, Queen's Park. St. Andrew's was built of stone from Georgetown, Ohio, dressed with limestone from Queenston, Ont., and adorned with polished pillars of Bay of Fundy granite. The laying of its corner-stone was marked with great ceremony, Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, the great Tory chieftain; Hon. William Cayley, Rev. Dr. Barclay and Rev. Dr. Topp, of Knox, being among those present when Rev. D. J. Macdonnell with a silver trowel presented by Messrs. Z. A. Lash and Co. set the stone in place. The building committee consisted of James Mitchell, chairman; Wm. Mitchell, secretary; R. W. Sutherland, assistant treasurer; A. T. Fulton, Isaac Gilmour, Robert Hay, J. Jacques, W. M. Jamieson, R. Guest, T. M. Pringle, Z. A. Lash, W. Higinbotham, W. Arthur, James Bethune, G. H. Wilson, Russell Inglis, Wm. Milligan and J. M. Rogerson.

MACDONNELL'S MINISTRY.

saw happy days. Crowds flocked to St. Andrew's, filling the ground floor and the galleries and overflowing into chairs in the aisles. Mr. Macdonnell's fame as a preacher was continent-wide, and many a man and woman after hearing his inspired sermons turned to the better life. In his great work Mr. Macdonnell was ably assisted by a noble wife, a leader in all the church women's organizations and deeply beloved. Soon after the untimely death of her husband, the minister, whose boundless zeal and energy had taxed his frail body, sickened and passed away in his mid-fifties, worn out in the service of the Lord. Thousands mourned his death, and men of all denominations stood at his graveside. In preaching the burial service Rev. Dr. Grant, principal of Queen's University, declared: "I never knew a man of such absolute purity—he has not left his like behind."

DARK DAYS FO RCHURCH.

The death of Rev. D. J. Macdonnell in 1896 was a heavy blow to St. Andrew's. Already the growth uptown of Toronto's residential district had adversely affected the congregation. Toronto still opposed Sunday street cars, and many families who had moved northward found it impossible to attend the church. Ere the minister's death there had been talk of building elsewhere, and even of re-erecting the church stone by stone in a more suitable locality. Gloom pervaded a thinning congregation until Sunday cars solved a problem still further simplified by the automobile. To-day St. Andrew's has a congregation of some 1,350.

LATER MINISTERS.

In 1897 Rev. W. J. McCaughan, of Belfast, was called to the pulpit. A brilliant Irishman, his sermons were a feature in Toronto, but in little more than a year's time he resigned, having accepted a call to a congregation in Chicago, in which city he was to meet tragic death in a fire. For some time St. Andrew's lacked a permanent minister, Rev. Prof. Drummond and others taking the services. In 1899 Rev. Dr. Armstrong Black and his charming wife came out from Edinburgh. Dr. Black remaining as minister until his resignation in 1904. In 1905 Rev. T. Crawford Brown, a young Ontario man and gold medalist of his university, was called to St. Andrew's, foregoing to accept its pulpit a flattering invitation to become assistant at St. Giles Cathedral, Edinburgh, where he had been acting in that capacity for some time. He was the only incumbent to be married at St. Andrew's, and it will be recalled that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was present there at Rev. Crawford Brown's marriage to the daughter of Senator Lyman Melvin Jones. After ten years in its service continued ill-health compelled the resignation of Rev. Crawford Brown. His late lamented death will recall to many his visits to the sick of his flock and the kindly personal interest in the welfare of his congregation which characterized his ministry.

REV. STUART PARKER.

In 1915 Rev. Prof. Thomas Eakin, an able theologian and brilliant sermonist, who had frequently preached from St. Andrew's pulpit on former occasions, became the minister, assisted in 1919 by Rev. Wylie Mahon, whose recent resignation through severe illness is deeply deplored by all the congregation. Here it must be noted that other assistant ministers of the church were: Rev. J. F. Somerville, in 1886; Rev. Alfred Gandier, 1887; Rev. M. A. McKinnon, 1901; Rev. Thos. Eakin, Ph.D., 1906; Rev. J. M. MacDonald, 1906; Rev. R. J. MacDonald, 1908; Rev. Hugh Munroe, 1912.

In 1923 came the present minister, Rev. Stuart Parker of Glasgow, a brilliant young Scot and Great War chaplain, whose fame as a preacher has spread far and wide. Soon after his arrival in Canada the unhappy church union controversy began to rage and into the battle Mr. Parker threw himself heart and soul. Though tolerant to a degree in religious matters, he became a staunch champion for the preservation of Presbyterianism and a rallying point against coercion. It is no exaggeration to say that Rev. Stuart Parker's tireless energy and his eloquence in the cause did much to hold together the old Scottish kirk in Canada. Mr. Parker, whose wife has been mercifully restored to health after a long illness, is assisted in his work by Rev. Frank Beare. Its music, formed by a vested choir under the skilful direction of Dr. Norman Anderson, church organist for 25 years, has long been a feature of St. Andrew's, whose form of service closely approximates that of ancient St. Giles Cathedral, Edinburgh, the Westminster Abbey of Presbyterianism, where Jenny Geddes once threw a stool at a bishop. At St. Andrew's before each service, Mr. Jock Robertson, Boy Scout leader, and church officer, gowned in black, carries the big Bible to the pulpit with becoming ceremony.

HIGHLANDERS KIRK.

Grimed by the smoke of a city which has grown to ten times its population of 70,000 since the towers of St. Andrew's first loomed against the skyline, the old walls of the King street kirk shelter an interior hallowed by tradition. Brass tablets to its fallen soldier sons and to other departed sons and daughters of the church adorn the walls—among them a memorial to his parents which William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, a former member of the congregation, is shortly to unveil. Above the choir stalls in the chancel the light streams softly in through a great memorial window upon the battle flags of the 48th Highlanders, the King's color, and the regimental color emblazoned with the names of historic fights. The 48th is St. Andrew's own regiment, and St. Andrew's ministers are its hereditary chaplains. It was the late Colonel John I. Davidson, a son of the congregation, whose clan tartan the soldiers wear, who raised the corps in 1891. Colonel Cosby of the church succeeded him and Colonel Donald Robertson. Colonel Duncan Donald and Colonel Michie, Colonel Warren Darling, all members of the congregation, have been commanders of that battalion in their day. To the skirl of the pipes and the sound of the drums, the men of the 48th march to service at St. Andrew's on occasion, just as did the kilted veterans of Waterloo stationed at the Old Fort to the parent St. Andrew's on Church street, a century ago.

IT'S MEN AND WOMEN.

A story of the noted men and women who have attended St. Andrew's would fill pages. H.R.H. the Princess Louise with her husband, Governor-General, the Marquis of Lorne, who wrote that beautiful version of the 91st Psalm: "Unto the Hills Around Do I Lift Up," has worshipped there. Likewise the Duke of Connaught and other viceroys. Lieutenant-Governors of Ontario, including Sir John Gibson and the Hon. William D. Ross, who, with Mrs. Ross and the family, occupies a pew to-day, have been members of the congregation. Incidentally the Lieutenant-Governor and his Lady have hospitably invited the entire congregation to tea at Government House one afternoon of the celebration week. Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King, Prime Minister of Canada, and Edward W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway went to St. Andrew's as boys with their parents. James S. Macdonnell, son of the manse, whose father preached from St. Andrew's pulpit, is a banker of national renown in the United States. Judges, doctors, lawyers, professors, scientists, bankers, merchants and others outstanding in their several spheres have sat in the rows of pews along with their less distinguished brothers and sisters in all walks of life, who have ever been the backbone of the church.

ST. ANDREW'S, JARVIS ST.

Though badly shattered by the split of 1875 the remnant left at old St. Andrew's on the southwest corner of Church and Adelaide streets bravely carried on in a church approaching the half century mark. But the attendance had run down to a mere handful and the outlook was most disheartening. At this juncture Rev. George Macbeth Milligan, a Scot and a graduate of Queen's University, back to Canada on a vacation from his pastorate of Central Presbyterian Church, Detroit, was persuaded to stay over a Sunday in Toronto and to preach at old St. Andrew's. In the morning he had an audience of but 60 people. At the evening service 300 were present to hear his discourse.

DR. MILLIGAN ACCEPTS.

A sudden inspiration seized the struggling minority carrying on the church and at a meeting presided over by Rev. Prof. MacLaren, on motion of, William Gallow, seconded by William Henderson, a unanimous call was sent to Rev. Mr. Milligan. Finally consenting on the condition that the old site be vacated and a new church built at the northeast corner of Jarvis and Shuter streets, Mr. Milligan was formally inducted on the 24th of October, 1876. On the 12th of June, 1877, digging for the foundations started and on the 22nd of July of that year the minister laid the corner stone. Among those on the platform on that occasion were: Rev. J. M. King, Rev. Dr. Wm. Reid, Dr. Castle, J. M. Cameron, James Carmichael, Mr. Wallace, Rev. Dr. Barclay, W. H. Tilley, William Briggs, Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, Prof. Gregg, Hon. John McMurrich and W. H. Thom Office bearers included: Archibald McMurchy, Alexander Jardine, A. Farquhar Maclean, John Carlyle, Wm. Henderson, Frank Gallow, Forbes McHardy, Charles Hood, J. H. Thom, John L. Brodie, John Bain, Harry Stetnson, T. S. Fisher, Neil Maclean, John Paterson and James Pringle.

A HANDSOME CHURCH.

Backed by such stalwarts and by Chief Justice Maclean the handsome church rose rapidly. Like its sister of King street, it has an outline suggestive of ancient St. Magnus and was designed, too, by W. J. Storm. Credit Valley freestone and Ohio limestone were combined in this Gothic edifice which has long been a landmark in Toronto. Dr. Milligan proved a tower of strength to the congregation, which quickly increased its membership under his ministry. A rugged and vigorous preacher whose directness never for a moment left his meaning in doubt, Rev. Dr. Milligan was for years one of Toronto's most eminent divines. Today the church which had dwindled to 58 members in 1875 boasts a congregation of over 900.

Following Rev. Dr. Milligan's retirement from the ministry after 34 years at St. Andrew's, Jarvis street, Rev. Dr. Harper Gray was called to its pulpit. He in turn was succeeded by Rev. Dr. Mitchell, and later by Rev. Dr. Muir Auld. From 1909-19 Rev. Prof. Law was assistant. To-day, the Rev. Dr. P. R. F. Sclater, a preacher of wide reputation, ministers to a growing congregation.

QUAINT CEREMONY IN 1926.

Like its sister of King street, the Jarvis street church celebrated its semi-centennial some four years ago. Then, following a quaint Scottish custom, fourteen veteran members of the church passed a torch, lighting the 50 candles adorning the four-storey church birthday cake. James Litster, chairman of the anniversary committee, who had attended the Sunday school in its first year, lit the first candle, after which the torch was passed to other old-timers, including R. Weir, clerk of session; Miss Webster, Mrs. Munroe, etc. Among the fourteen were four people who had been 52 years at St. Andrew's, including Mrs. James Pringle, Mrs. Frank Gallow and Mrs. J. H. Thom, whose husbands had been among the first elders. The last two ladies cut the cake with a silver knife. A feature of the evening was the message from the beloved minister emeritus of the church, the Rev. Dr. Milligan, since gone to his reward, who, unable to be present, sent from his sickbed his blessing to the congregation he had served so long and so faithfully.

Much history has been written since a little body of worshippers, 100 years ago, founded old St. Andrew's in the tiny town of York. Today St. Andrew's, King street, remains a Presbyterian kirk, and St. Andrew's, Jarvis street, has gone into the United fold. But on the happy occasion of their historic parent's centenary the sister congregations will, for auld lang syne, join in proud commemoration.

ITS MEN AND WOMEN.

A story of the noted men and women who have attended St. Andrew's would fill pages, H.R.H. the Princess Louise with her husband, Governor-General, the Marquis of Lorne, who wrote that beautiful version of the 91st Psalm: "Unto the Hills Around Do I Lift Up," has worshipped there. Likewise the Duke of Connaught and other viceroys. Lieutenant-Governors of Ontario, including Sir John Gibson and the Hon. William D. Ross, who, with Mrs. Ross and the family, occupies a pew to-day, have been members of the congregation. Incidentally the Lieutenant-Governor and his Lady have hospitably invited the entire congregation to tea at Government House one afternoon of the celebration week. Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King, Prime Minister of Canada, and Edward W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway went to St. Andrew's as boys with their parents. James S. Macdonnell, son of the manse, whose father preached from St. Andrew's pulpit, is a banker of national renown in the United States. Judges, doctors, lawyers, professors, scientists, bankers, merchants and others outstanding in their several spheres have sat in the rows of pews along with their less distinguished brothers and sisters in all walks of life, who have ever been the backbone of the church.

ST. ANDREW'S, JARVIS ST.

Though badly shattered by the split of 1875 the remnant left at old St. Andrew's on the southwest corner of Church and Adelaide streets bravely carried on in a church approaching the half century mark. But the attendance had run down to a mere handful and the outlook was most disheartening. At this juncture Rev. George Macbeth Milligan, a Scot and a graduate of Queen's University, back to Canada on a vacation from his pastorate of Central Presbyterian Church, Detroit, was persuaded to stay over a Sunday in Toronto and to preach at old St. Andrew's. Toronto's Kirk of St. Andrew Was Founded 100 Years Ago When York Had 3,000 People

First Presbyterian Church in Canada to Have an Organ—Stormy Days in Its Early History—Well-Known Names on Rolls —Quaint Entries in Old Church Record Book

One Sunday morning in the long ago when pine forests fringed the town of York and its 3,000 inhabitants, a gentleman wearing a tall beaver hat, stock collar, frock coat of dark blue worsted, and long trousers, strapped down under polished boots, wended his way westward along the muddy thoroughfare known as King street. He was a Member of the Legislature for Perth, the future Hon. William Morris, Receiver General of Upper Canada and President of the Executive Council. Though a Scotch Presbyterian the Parliamentarian was on his way to worship with the Governor and other officials in the little wooden church of St. James which preceded the Cathedral. En route he passed the ruins of the old Parliament Buildings, near the foot of Parliament street, which had been burned by the Americans at the sack of York in 1813.

INSPIRED BY PSALM.

Contemplation of the ruins seems to have delayed Mr. Morris, for when he entered St. James, service had started and the clerk was reading that prose passage from the 132nd. Psalm which in the Presbyterian metre says:

"I will not go into my house, nor to my bed ascend;
No soft repose shall close my eyes,
nor sleep my eyelids bend,
Till for the Lord's designed abode,
I mark the destined ground,
Till I a decent place of rest for Jacob's God have found."

In regarding the ruins of the old Legislature Mr. Morris had not been idly curious. He had bethought him that its bullet and fire-scarred bricks might be useful as building material for a Church of Scotland—the only existing Presbyterian place of worship in Toronto being then little more than a mission. It was thus that the words of the Psalmist struck him with particular force as though the Church of England were encouraging her sister Church of Scotland. Tradition goes on to say that Mr. Morris soon afterwards started a movement for the erection of a Presbyterian church in the little capital.

ST. ANDREW'S FOUNDED 1830.

Be that as it may, on 3rd March, 1830, a meeting of adherents of the Church of Scotland was held in York. John Ewart, builder, was chairman, and on the motion of Dr. "Tiger" Dunlop, M.L.A. for Huron, later "Warden of the Woods and Ranger of the Forests" for the Canada Company and founder of the Public Library, which was seconded by Hugh Carfrae, merchant, it was unanimously resolved to take immediate steps to erect a Church of Scotland and to call a minister.

Thus came into being the original St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of Toronto the centenary of whose foundation, starting on Sunday, 2nd March is being celebrated by ceremonies lasting over a week. The old kirk, whose 100th birthday its two sturdy daughters, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King street, and St. Andrew's United Church, Jarvis st., are each about to commemorate was a landmark of the city at the southwest corner of Church and Adelaide streets, from 1830 until its demolition in 1877.

Thus came into being the original St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of Toronto the centenary of whose foundation, starting on Sunday, 2nd March is being celebrated by ceremonies lasting over a week. The old kirk, whose 100th birthday its two sturdy daughters, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King street, and St. Andrew's United Church, Jarvis st., are each about to commemorate was a landmark of the city at the southwest corner of Church and Adelaide streets, from 1830 until its demolition in 1877.

STEEPLE BY JOHN HOWARD

It does not appear that any of the brick from the battle-scarred Legislature was used, but on 24th June, 1830, the corner-stone of the edifice was laid by Thomas Carfrae Jr. Trustees were: Jas. F. Smith, wholesale grocer; Thos. Carfrae Jr., merchant; John Ewart, builder; Hugh Carfrae, an official of the Legislative Council; Walter Rose of the Receiver General's office; Alexander Murray, merchant, and Jacob Latham, builder. The church was a plain brick structure plastered over to represent stone. It had a seating capacity of 900 and its spire, the design of John Howard, architect, and donor of High Park to Toronto, was added in 1850.

Unfortunately the York newspaper of 24th June, 1830, fell to pieces when the corner-stone was opened in 1877. Worse still the original subscription list for the church building fund crumbled away when taken from a strong-box in the cellar of St. Andrew's Church, King street, a few years ago. But among the church archives in the care of Col. John Michie, Treasurer, are many interesting old letters, and the original account book of St. Andrew's which, dating from 1830 to 1852, is replete with entries in faded goosequill penmanship.

FAMOUS SUBSCRIBERS.

Among other things it chronicles the names of some distinguished subscribers to the building fund. Chief Justice Sir William Campbell gave £30; Hon. William Allen, first Postmaster of York, £25; future Chief Justice Archibald McLean, £10; Hon. James Crooks, £5; Jesse Ketchum, 25 shillings; William Proudfoot, president of the Bank of Upper Canada, £7, 10s.; Dr. Burnside, £12, 10s.; Joseph Rodgers, the furrier, £17, 5s.; John Bekie, £10; Hugh Carfrae, £50; Dr. Dunlop, £5; Walter Rose, £7; G. G. Crawford and Jas. Newbigging, £7, 10s. each; J. H. Strang, £5; Mrs. Arthurs, £5, 10s.; Alexander Wood, £10; Jas. King and Prof. Jas. Murray, 25 shillings each; officers and men of the 71st Highland Regiment stationed at the Old Fort, £27, 7s., 6d. Most spectacular on the list, however, are the names of a famous Anglican prelate-statesman and an Iroquois chieftain. The Archdeacon of York, later Bishop Strachan, member of the Executive Council and leader of the Family Compact, donated £2, 10s. But "Jocky" Strachan, a Presbyterian in his youth, had, ere he took Anglican Holy orders, been an unsuccessful applicant for the pulpit of the pioneer Presbyterian congregation of St. Gabriel St. Church, Montreal. He had a soft spot in his heart for the "auld kirk". The Indian chieftain contributor to the church building fund was "Ahyouwaighs", Captain John Brant, General Superintendent and Chief of the Six Nations. Captain John who donated £1, 3s., 4d., to St. Andrew's was himself a member of the Anglican church on the Mohawk Reserve near Brantford, a warrior with a distinguished record in the War of 1812, and son and heir to the famous "Thayendanegea", Capt. Joseph Brant, leader of the Iroquois and Britain's staunch ally in the French and Revolutionary Wars.

WHISKEY AS ANTI-FREEZE.

A quaint entry in the old ledger in 1852 is: "10½ gallons of whiskey for preventing the gas pipes from freezing, £1, 1s., 0d." Another item records that 12 shillings and 6 pence was expended for repairing "Capt. Richardsons flute, flageolet and clarionet" and adorned with polished pillars of Bay of Fundy granite. The laying of its corner-stone was marked with great ceremony, Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, the great Tory chieftain; Hon. William Cayley, Rev. Dr. Barclay and Rev. Dr. Topp, of Knox, being among those present when Rev. D. J. Macdonnell with a silver trowel presented by Messrs. Z. A. Lash and Co. set the stone in place. The building committee consisted of James Mitchell, chairman; Wm. Mitchell, secretary; R. W. Sutherland, assistant treasurer; A. T. Fulton, Isaac Gilmour, Robert Hay, J. Jacques, W. M. Jamieson, R. Guest, T. M. Pringle, Z. A. Lash, W. Higinbotham, W. Arthur, James Bethune, G. H. Wilson, Russell Inglis, Wm. Milligan and J. M. Rogerson.

MACDONNELL'S MINISTRY.

Situated in the then centre of Toronto's residential district and blessed with a young minister whose winning personality, great pulpit eloquence and splendid Christian example won all hearts, the new church on King street saw happy days. Crowds flocked to St. Andrew's, filling the ground floor and the galleries and overflowing into chairs in the aisles. Mr. Macdonnell's fame as a preacher was continent-wide, and many a man and woman after hearing his inspired sermons turned to the better life. In his great work Mr. Macdonnell was ably assisted by a noble wife, a leader in all the church women's organizations and deeply beloved. Soon after the untimely death of her, his helpmeet, the minister, whose boundless zeal and energy had taxed his frail body, sickened and passed away in his mid-fifties, worn out in the service of the Lord. Thousands mourned his death, and men of all denominations stood at his graveside. In preaching the burial service Rev. Dr. Grant, principal of Queen's University, declared: "I never knew a man of such absolute purity—he has not left his like behind."

DARK DAYS FO RCHURCH.

The death of Rev. D. J. Macdonnell in 1896 was a heavy blow to St. Andrew's. Already the growth uptown of Toronto's residential district had adversely affected the congregation. Toronto still opposed Sunday street cars, and many families who had moved northward found it impossible to attend the church. Ere the minister's death there had been talk of building elsewhere, and even of re-erecting the church stone by stone in a more suitable locality. Gloom pervaded a thinning congregation until Sunday cars solved a problem still further simplified by the automobile. To-day St. Andrew's has a congregation of some 1,350.

Says Husband Too Informed

Widow Claims Coastguardsman Killed to Prevent Testimony Against Runners

Franklin, Mass., Feb. 5.—Boatswain's Mate Victor L. Harris of coast guard patrol boat 152, found shot to death in his bunk aboard his boat at the East Boston base Sunday, was slain because he "knew too much," according to his widow, who is staying at her mother's home here.

He would have been an important witness in the government's case against rum-runners caught attempting to smuggle $100,000 worth of champagne into Boston shortly before Christmas, she said. Although she could not give names she declared her husband had told her the cargo of the Irene C., Nova Scotia vessel, had been intended for a Boston lawyer and a Massachusetts ex-mayor.

His enemies, she asserted, had led her husband to fear for his life. "He often said he felt he might get bumped off. Why, it's only about a year ago that two attempts were made on his life when he was shot at from an automobile on two different occasions over in East Boston on Summer st., not far from the base. The first time the bullet went through his hat."

Commander James A. Alger, of the East Boston base, denied Harris had reported to him that he had been shot

In regarding the ruins of the old Legislature Mr. Morris had not idly curious. He had bethought him that its bullet and fire-scarred bricks might be useful as building material for a Church of Scotland—the only existing Presbyterian place of worship in Toronto being then little more than a mission. It was thus that the words of the Psalmist struck him with particular force as though the Church of

But among the church archives in the care of Col. John Michie, Treasurer, are many interesting old letters, and the second annual account book of St. Andrew's which, dating from 1830 to 1852, is replete with entries in faded goosequill penmanship.

FAMOUS SUBSCRIBERS.

Among other things it chronicles the names of some distinguished subscribers to the building fund. Chief Justice Sir William Campbell gave £20; Hon. William Allen, first Postmaster of York, £25; Hon. Chief Justice Archibald McLean, £10; Hon. James Crooks, £5; Jesse Ketchum, £5; Billings, William Proudfoot, president of the Bank of Upper Canada, £7, 10s.; Dr. Burnside, £12, 10s.; Joseph Rodgers, the furrier, £17, 5s.; John Bekie, £10; Hugh Carfrae, £50; Dr. Dunlop, £5; Walter Rose, £7; G. G. Crawford and Jas. Newbigging, £7, 10s. each; J. H. Strans, £5; Mrs. Arthur, £5, 10s.; Alexander Wood, £10; Jas. King and Prof. Jos. Murray, 25 shillings each; officers and men of the 71st Highland Regiment stationed at the Old Fort, £27, 7s., 6d. Most spectacular on the list, however, are the names of a famous Anglican prelate-statesman and an Iroquois chieftain. The Archdeacon of York, later Bishop Strachan, member of the Executive Council and leader of the Family Compact, donated £2, 10s. But "Jocky" Strachan, a Presbyterian in his youth, had ere he took Anglican Holy orders, been an unsuccessful applicant for the pulpit of the pioneer Presbyterian congregation of St. Gabriel St. Church, Montreal. He "had a soft spot in his heart for the auld kirk". The Indian chieftain contributor to the church building fund was "Ahyouwaighs", Captain Brant, General Superintendent and Chief of the Six Nations. Captain John who donated £1, 3s., 4d., to St. Andrew's was himself a member of the Anglican church on the Mohawk Reserve near Brantford, a warrior with a distinguished record in the War of 1812, and son and heir to the famous "Thayendanegea", Capt. Joseph Brant, leader of the Iroquois and Britain's staunch ally in the French and Revolutionary Wars.

WHISKEY AS ANTI-FREEZE.

A quaint entry in the old ledger in 1853 is: "10½ gallons of whiskey for preventing the gas pipes from freezing, £1, 1s., 0d." Another item records that 12 shillings and 6 pence was expended for repairing "Capt. Richardson's furs from damage caused by oil from the lamps". The book reveals that the Government allowed £50 annually towards the first minister's stipend, and that the cost of letter postage from Toronto to Kingston was 9 pence. The recorded fact that on 27th April, 1835, Rev. James Cooper, future Principal of Queen's University, and father of W. K. George of this city, received only 15 shillings "for supplying the pulpit two days" makes it clear that student-ministers of that time were not overpaid.

THE KIST 'O WHISTLES.

St. Andrew's was the first Presbyterian Church in Canada to use instrumental music and introduction of a choir "to assist the congregation in singing the praises of God". This aroused one member of the congregation so much that after writing to the Session and publishing a pamphlet on the subject he left the church.

But in early days organ and choir were both lacking in that kirk. Instead, a grave precentor struck the key-note of each psalm or hymn on a tuning fork and the voices of the congregation joining in furnished all the melody. As precentor in 1847, John Ross received £12 per annum. By 1852 the "auld lichts" allowed the band of the Highland Light Infantry from the Fort to furnish music in the church on Sunday mornings. That same year a choir was introduced and a tiny melodeon, followed a few years later by an organ. When the subject of instrumental music in churches was up for discussion before the General Assembly in Scotland at that time St. Andrew's, Toronto, was cited as an example of its success.

HIGHLANDERS IRK HEADLEE

Construction of the church, which was insured with John Ridout for several thousand pounds, and on which William Cawthra held a mortgage for £300, caused a dispute between Peter McArthur, the builder; Thomas Roy, the architect-engineer, and the Session. An injunction to stop the work was threatened, but arbitration settled it, and a letter from Hon. Hume Blake, Vice-Chancellor of Upper Canada, to the Session, expresses the hope that the arbitration fees of £22, 10s. will be satisfactory. Another letter among the church archives is from the beadle informing the Session that since the 93rd Highland Regiment joined the congregation his duties had so increased that £20 per annum was too little pay. His resignation was accepted. Another letter, dated 1838, is from Hon. John McMurrich, subsequently Speaker of the Province, regretting his inability to accept the church's leadership because he had been offered "In this way a splendid" rapidly took charge. Toronto's "Presbyterian Cathedral" was in process of existence. In 1851 a lightning rod, in that year the church accounts bear the signature of Rev. Dr. Robertson, a member of the congregation since 1833.

EARLY PEWHOLDERS.

A list of pewholders of the 1840-50 period in the old account book contains some names still associated with the congregation. A few of those chronicled are: Isaac Gilmore, Oliver Mowat (the future Sir Oliver), Premier and Lieutenant-Governor), M. Nicol, W. Williamson, Mr. Inglis, R. Mitchell, Judges and Hay, George Michie (great-uncle of Col. John Michie), Robert Cassels (father of Richard Cassels, K.C.), A. Drummond, J. Macdonell, J. George, Cochrane, Rannie, Shaw, Dallas, John Fennell, Kollogg, Fowler, Dr. Layton, R. P. Crooks and Callahan.

THE FIRST MINISTERS.

First minister of St. Andrew's Church was Rev. William Rintoul, who resigned in 1834 to undertake scholastic work. For more than a year the church locked for a regular minister until the appointment of Rev. W. T. Leach in 1835. But Mr. Leach, seceding from the Presbyterian Church, left St. Andrew's to take holy orders in the Church of England. That year the celebrated Rev. John Barclay took the pulpit which he occupied most ably until his resignation in 1870. Soon after his induction Dr. Barclay's influence with his congregation was severely tried. For in 1843 trouble "times came to Toronto's "Scotch Kirk", as St. Andrew's was then generally known.

DISRUPTION IN SCOTLAND.

That year saw the Established Church of Scotland in the Motherland split in twain when, protesting against the vicious system whereby Presbyteries and great landlords were able to fasten undesired ministers upon congregations, half the ministers and adherents of the old state church went over to the Free Kirk. Long since the Church of Scotland purged itself of patronage, and last year, after nearly a century of separation, Presbyterianism in Scotland was re-united amid rejoicings. In 1843, the year of disruption, rival factions in St. Andrew's demanded that the minister wisely refused to take sides in a controversy which could not affect the Toronto congregation so far removed from Scottish conditions and never under patronage.

FEES LEAVE ST. ANDREWS.

Among those who supported the Toronto Free Kirk movement were Hon. Isaac Buchanan, Hon. John McMurrich, James Shaw, William Ross and Peter Brown, father of Hon. George Brown, proprietor of the Globe and leader of the Liberal party in Canada. Among those who opposed the suggestion and helped Dr. Barclay to hold the majority of his congregation were Chief Justice Maclean, George Michie, John Cameron, president of the Bank of Upper Canada; Hugh Scoble, John Jaques and Henry Morgan. In 1844 some 83 members of St. Andrew's with Free Kirk sympathies left the church, and joining the Richmond street congregation, formed Knox Church, under Rev. Dr. Burns, of Paisley, Scotland. St. Andrew's remained a unit of the Church of Scotland until 1875, when the several divisions of the church in this country were amalgamated as "The Presbyterian Church in Canada." A Toronto city directory of 1846 designates St. Andrew's as "Presbyterian Church in Canada."

OLD CHURCH SPLITS.

Alas, alas! a still more serious rupture was to blight St. Andrew's. A brilliant and earnest young minister had since become assistant to Dr. Barclay's retirement in 1870 been preaching from its pulpit. He was Rev. Daniel James Macdonnell, a native of New Brunswick, who, educated in Scotland and at Queen's University, Kingston, was a son of the Rev. George Macdonnell, the revered minister of St. Andrew's, Fergus. Rev. D. J. Macdonnell's liberal views on doctrine had lately brought him to trial before the General Assembly on a not very serious charge of heresy. It was not, however, a matter of doctrine, but of ritual, which caused the clash in the old church at the corner of Church and Adelaide streets in 1875. In that year Rev. Mr. Macdonnell and all but 58 members of the congregation withdrew in a body to found the present St. Andrew's Church at King and Simcoe streets, an intersection whose four corners came to be known respectively as "Salvation," "Damnation," "Legislation," and "Education." The hope that St. Andrew's Church, old Government House, Upper Canada College and a saloon. Here it said that in view of its foundation St. Andrew's, King street has never erroneously applied to it.

"PRESBYTERIAN CATHEDRAL."

Modelled largely after the design of St. Magnus Cathedral, the red sandstone Norman edifice at Kirkwall, Orkney Islands, which dates from the 12th century, Toronto's "Presbyterian Cathedral" rapidly took shape. Its architect who planned Osgoode Hall, Queen's Park, St. Andrew's was built of stone from Georgetown, Ohio, dressed with limestone from Queenston, its corner-stone was marked with great ceremony, Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, the great Tory chieftain; Hon. William Cayley, Rev. Dr. Barclay and Rev. Dr. Topp, of Knox, being those present when Rev. D. J. Macdonnell presented to Messrs. Z. A. Lash and Co. set the stone in place. The building committee consisted of Col. John Michie, secretary; R. W. Wm. Mitchell, assistant secretary; A. T. Fulton, Land, Gilmour, Robert Hay, J. Jacques, W. M. Jamieson, R. Guest, T. M. Pringle, Z. A. Lash, W. Higinbotham, G. H. Wilson, Arthur, James Bethune, G. H. Wilson, Russell Inglis, Wm. Milligan and J. M. Rogerson.

MACDONNELL'S MINISTRY.

Situated in the then centre of Toronto's residential district and blessed with a young minister whose winning personality, great pulpit eloquence and splendid Christian example won all hearts, the new church on King street, was happy days. Crowds flocked to St. Andrew's, filling the ground floor and the galleries and overflowing into the aisles. Mr. Macdonnell's fame as a preacher was continent-wide, and many a man and woman after hearing his inspired sermons turned to noble wife, a leader in all the church loved. Soon after the untimely death of her, his brilliant, devoted husband, whose boundless zeal and energy had passed away in his mid-fifties, worn out in the service of the Lord. Thousands mourned his death, and men of all denominations stood at his grave-side. Dr. Grant, principal of Queen's University, declared: "I never knew a man of such absolute purity—he has not left his like behind."

DARK DAYS TO RCHURCH.

The death of Rev. D. J. Macdonnell in 1896 was a heavy blow to St. Andrew's. Already the growth uptown of Toronto's residential district had adversely affected the congregation. Toronto still opposed Sunday street cars, and many families who had moved northward found it impossible to attend the church. Ere the minister's death there had been talk of building elsewhere, and even of re-erecting the church stone by stone in a more suitable locality. Gloom pervaded a thinning congregation till Sunday cars solved a problem still further simplified by the automobile. To-day St. Andrew's has a congregation of some 1,350.

LATER MINISTERS.

In 1897 Rev. W. J. McCaughan, of Belfast, was called to the pulpit. A brilliant Irishman, his sermons were a feature in Toronto, but in little more than a year's time he resigned, having accepted a call to a congregation in Chicago, in which city he was to meet tragic death in a fire. For some time St. Andrew's lacked a permanent minister. Rev. Prof. Drummond and others filled the pulpit on former occasions, became the minister, assisted in 1919 by Rev. Wylie Mahon, whose recent resignation through severe illness is deeply deplored by all the congregation. Here it must be noted that another assistant ministers of the church were: Rev. Alfred Gandier, 1887; Rev. M. A. McKinnon, 1901; Rev. Thos. Eakin, Ph.D., 1906; Rev. J. M. MacDonald, 1906; Rev. R. J. MacDonald, 1908; Rev. Hugh Munroe, 1912.

In 1923 came the present minister, Rev. Stuart Parker of Glasgow, a brilliant young Scot and Great War chaplain, whose fame as a preacher has spread far and wide. Soon after his arrival in Canada the unhappy church union controversy began to rage and split into the battle Mr. Parker threw himself heart and soul. Though tolerant to a degree in religious matters, he became a staunch champion for the preservation of Presbyterianism and a rallying point against coercion. It is no exaggeration to say that Rev. Stuart ago, by his energy and tireless energy he helped to build up in Canada a little body of worshippers, 100 years ago, founded old St. Andrew's in the tiny town of York. Today St. Andrew's, King street, remains a Presbyterian kirk, and St. Andrew's, Jarvis street, has gone into the United fold. But on the happy occasion of their historic parent's centenary the sister congregations will, for auld lang syne, join hands in proud commemoration.

Widow Claims Coast-guardsman Killed to Prevent Testimony Against Runners

Franklin, Mass., Feb. 5.—Boatswain's Mate Victor L. Harris of coast guard patrol boat 152, found shot to death in his bunk aboard his boat at the East Boston base Sunday, was slain because he "knew too much," according to his widow, who is staying at her mother's home here.

He would have been an important witness in the government's case against rum-runners caught attempting to smuggle $100,000 worth of champagne into Boston shortly before Christmas, she said. Although she could not give names she declared her husband had told her the cargo of the Irene C, Nova Scotia vessel, had been intended for a Boston lawyer and a Massachusetts ex-mayor.

His enemies, she asserted, had led her husband to fear for his life. "He often said he felt he might get bumped off. Why, it's only about a year ago that two attempts were made on his life when he was shot at from an automobile on two different occasions over in East Boston on Summer st., not far from the base. The first time the bullet went through his hat."

Commander James A. Alger, of the East Boston base, denied Harris had reported to him that he had been shot at, and said he was quite sure "the government will be able to prosecute the Irene C. Case without him." He intimated that it was his opinion that no foul play entered the case.

License Night Club Hostesses.

Albany, N.Y., Feb. 5.—Night club hostesses, or dancing partners or whatever they choose to call themselves in their professional activities, would be required to obtain a license from the authorities in the cities in which they work, under provisions of a bill before the legislature to-day. The measure, introduced by Assemblyman A. Spencer Feld, Democrat, of New York, proposes also to charge the ladies of the dance license fees that range from $5 to $25 a year.

"SCOTCH KIRKS" TO CELEBRATE THEIR 100TH ANNIVERSARIES

Toronto Churches Figured in Many Sectarian Disputes—Permitted Band to Play But Ordered Removal of Cabinet Organ — Beset by Hard Times

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCHES PREPARE COMMEMORATION SERVICES

Two Toronto churches, St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, King and Simcoe Sts., and St. Andrew's United church, Jarvis and Shuter Sts., are preparing special services for the week commencing March 2, to commemorate the founding of the original St. Andrew's Presbyterian church 100 years ago. St. Andrew's United church is known as Old St. Andrew's, because the members of its congregation continued to hold service in the old building at Church and Adelaide Sts. after the majority of the members had built the new church on Simcoe St. following a difference of opinion in 1875. REPEAT/
RÉPÉTITION

An interesting story is recorded of the founding of St. Andrew's United church, known as old St. Andrew's, and St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, the congregations of which are preparing to celebrate their 100th anniversaries in the week commencing March 2.

In the town of York, a little over 100 years ago, among a population of 3,000 persons, there was a considerable number of members of the Established Church of Scotland, but they had no church in which to meet.

Among those who felt the need of a church home was William Morris of Perth, a member of the legislative assembly in 1830, and who later became the Honorable William Morris. On his way one Sunday morning to attend service in the Episcopal church his attention was attracted to the ruins of the former parliament buildings at the foot of Parliament street, which had been burned when the town was sacked by the Americans in 1813.

The sight suggested to him the possibility of securing the bullet-ridden building and converting it into a place of worship for a congregation of the Church of Scotland. His pondering over the thought caused him to be late for the service and as he entered the church the Episcopalian clerk was reading the words from the 132nd psalm:

"I will not go into my house nor to my bed ascend,
No soft repose shall close my eyes,
nor sleep my eyelids bend,
Till for the Lord's designed abode I mark the destined ground;
Till I a decent place of rest for Jacob's God have found."

The coincidence served to kindle Mr. Morris' enthusiasm to such an extent that he called a meeting of his friends the next day. His plan met with a ready response from men of all walks of life and subscriptions were received immediately.

The list bears the names of some of the most prominent men of those times, including men of the 71st and 79th regiments, who were stationed at York. The actual organization meeting of the new church was held March 3, 1830.

Was Sorely Tried

Forgetting Mr. Morris' original thought of the old parliament building, plans for building on a site at the corner of Church and Adelaide Sts. were commenced immediately and the foundation stone was laid June 24 of that year. The building was a plain structure of brick, coated to resemble stone, and capable of seating about 900.

The first trustees were James F. Smith, grocer, with his place of business at 141 King St.; Thomas Carfrae Jr., who kept a general store at 209 King St.; John Ewart, builder; Hugh Carfrae, an official of the legislative council; Walter Rose of the receiver-general's office; Alexander Murray of the firm of Murray, Newbigging and Co., and Jacob Latham, builder, of Duke St.

The first minister of the newly-organized congregation was Rev. William Rintoul. He resigned in 1834 to take up scholastic work, and following a period of nearly a year, in which the young church had to manage without a minister of its own, Rev. W. T. Leach was appointed. Mr. Leach left St. Andrew's in 1842 to take holy orders in the Church of England.

The next minister was Rev. John Barclay, whose influence with his congregation was sorely tried during the troublous period of 1843, when the disruption in the Established Church of Scotland in the motherland had something of an effect in Toronto's "Scotch Kirk," as St. Andrew's then was generally known.

The seceders here, with Irish Presbyterians, formed Knox church, but records show there was little bad feeling between them and those who remained loyal to St. Andrew's.

One of the most famous of St. Andrew's pastors was Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, who was appointed following Mr. Barclay's retirement in 1870, continuing in the leadership of the congregation till his death in 1896.

St. Andrew's holds the record of having been the first church in Canada to introduce instrumental music as a part of the services, but this was not earned without considerable opposition from some of its most prominent members. There was little objection when the band of the 71st Highlanders played for morning service in 1852, the subsequent organization of a choir and the purchasing of a melodeon, but such strong objection was raised to the playing of a cabinet organ which was purchased six years later, that the instrument was silent for many years. An appeal had been carried through different bodies to the synod, which ordered the removal of the "obnoxious instrument with as little delay as possible."

Seceded in 1876

A break occurred in the steady advance of the church when, in 1876, a number of the members seceded following a dispute on a question of ritual. Rev. D. J. Macdonnell's views on dogma had brought him to trial before the general assembly and he and a portion of his congregation withdrew from the original church at Church and Adelaide Sts. to found the present St. Andrew's church at the corner of King and Simcoe Sts. The remaining members of the original church formed what, to-day, is known as St. Andrew's United church, on Jarvis St.

The death of Mr. Macdonnell in 1896 was a heavy blow to St. Andrew's at King and Simcoe Sts., and gloom pervaded a thinning congregation till Sunday cars solved a problem still further simplified by the automobile. To-day St. Andrew's has a congregation of some 1,350.

Later ministers at St. Andrew's included Rev. W. J. McCaughan of Belfast, who resigned in 1896 to accept a call to Chicago, where he later met tragic death in a fire; Rev. Dr. Armstrong Black of Edinburgh, who resigned in 1904; Rev. T. Crawford Brown, a young Ontario man, who turned down a flattering offer to go to Edinburgh in favor of the call to St. Andrew's and who died last summer after a period of ill-health, and Rev. Professor Thomas Eakin.

The present minister, Rev. Stuart Parker, came to Toronto from Glasgow in 1922.

The congregation, which, after the break in 1875, continued to hold services in the original church at Church and Adelaide Sts., was beset by hard times till the visit one Sunday of Rev. George Macbeth Milligan, a graduate of Queen's University, back on holiday from his pastorate of Central Presbyterian church, Detroit.

He was persuaded to preach both morning and evening at Old St. Andrew's. In the morning he had a congregation of 60, and in the evening he was greeted by 300. A sudden inspiration seized the struggling congregation and a unanimous call was sent to Mr. Milligan to be its preacher. He finally consented, on the condition that a new church be constructed on the corner of Jarvis and Carlton Sts., and he was inducted on October 24, 1877.

Dr. Milligan continued as minister at St. Andrew's for 34 years, a period in which the church grew steadily in all its departments. Upon his retirement, Rev. Dr. Harper Gray was called to the pulpit and he, in turn, was succeeded by Rev. Dr. Mitchell, and later by Rev. Dr. Muir Auld. Rev. Prof. Law was assistant pastor from 1909 to 1919. The minister to-day is Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, a preacher of wide reputation.

St. Andrew's, Presbyterian, Celebrates First Centenary

In 1830 the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Toronto was formed.

On Sunday, March 2, members and friends of the congregation will rally at the edifice at the corner of King and Simcoe streets and in services befitting the occasion observe the centenary of the founding.

The order of service is as follows:

Rev. A. J. MacGillivray, D.D., Moderator of the General Assembly, 1926, will deliver the sermon at the morning service. The officiating ministers will be Rev. Stuart C. Parker, M.A., B.D., minister of St. Andrew's, and Rev. Thomas Eakin, M.A., Ph.D., D.D., Principal of Knox College and sometime minister of St. Andrew's Church. Dr. Norman Anderson will be the organist at both services.

The order of service in the morning is as follows:

Organ Prelude

Processional Hymn 53

Then the minister shall say—"Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. A thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night. So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Let Us Pray

"O Lord our God, the lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, look with favor upon us, the children of a day, whose earthly life is as the grass, which in the morning flourisheth and groweth up, and in the evening is cut down and withereth. Help us as we contemplate Thine eternal glory to measure the love which Thou has manifested toward us, in that Thou hast opened even to us the gates of eternal life. And grant unto us such grace that having this hope in us, we may purify ourselves even as He also is pure, Who with Thee, the Father, and the Holy Ghost, one God, is worshipped and glorified, world without end."

Hymn 66

Then shall be read Old Testament.

Deuteronomy VIII

Then shall be sung—

Te Deum Laudamus

New Testament lesson,

Hebrew XI 1-10; XI 32; XII 2

Then the minister shall say:

"Let Us Pray.

"Almighty and Eternal God, Whose mercy endureth forever, we bring Thee thanks and praise for Thy blessings, more than can be numbered, which Thou hast bestowed upon this company of Thy people.

"We thank Thee for the grace Thou gavest to our fathers, putting it into their hearts to build an habitation for Thy glory, sustaining them under many burdens, and causing the trial of their faith to rebound to Thy praise and honor. We thank Thee for Thy goodness unto us their children in the Gospel, to whom Thou hast given to dwell in a land illumined with the light of truth, and to enter into a rich inheritance, gathering where we have not strawed, reaping that whereon we bestowed no labor. We bless Thee for the memories with which this day is fraught, the remembrance of a heavenly love which changeth not with years, of a Blessed Savior Who is the same yesterday and to-day and forever, and of a Gracious Comforter who dwelleth with us as He dwelt with our fathers. For the cloud of witnesses with which this day we are encompassed about; for the remembrance of lives lived in simple faith and charity, and laid down in hope; and for the precious example of sorrows borne without murmuring, bounties enjoyed with humility, and hardness endured with patience and courage, we give Thee thanks.

"Gracious Lord, accept our praise, and grant unto us that by the thought of Thy mercy and favor to us and to our fathers through so many years, we may be stirred up to serve Thee with greater zeal in our generation, and, looking unto Jesus, to run with patience the race that is set before us.

"We humbly acknowledge that our hearts have not always been lifted up to Thee as we lift them up this day. We have forgotten Thee, regarding neither the gifts Thou hast given unto us nor the commandments Thou hast laid upon us, sinning against Thee by the waywardness of our will, the coldness of our affection and the poverty of our endeavors.

"We beseech Thee to pardon us. There is forgiveness with Thee, that Thou mayest be feared. Let Thy forgiveness be extended to us. Cleanse us from our sins, secret and open, and from every thought displeasing to Thy holiness; and grant that with a peaceful soul and quiet mind we may fulfil the number of our days in this present world, and in the world to come may have part in the joy of Thy Kingdom.

"Grant that we may ever love the thing which Thou commandest and desire that which Thou dost promise; so that, among the sundry and manifold changes of this life, our hearts may surely there be fixed where true joys are to be found.

"Here, O God, we dedicate ourselves anew to Thee and to Thy service. Perfect this our offering, we beseech Thee; let the fire of Thy love consume in us all sinful desires of the flesh and of the mind, that, devoted to Thee in singleness of heart, we may work Thy works continually, and, following the example of Thy Blessed Son, may ever seek those things which are above, where He sitteth at Thy right hand; Who hath taught us when we pray to say:

"'Our Father which art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.'"

Hymn 74

Then the minister shall say:

"Let Us Pray.

"O God, Our Father, Who knowest the desires of all hearts, and Who yet has taught us to make supplications, prayers, intercessions and giving of thanks for all men, we humbly beseech Thee to receive these our prayers, which we offer unto Thee.

"We pray for all mankind that peace may prevail in the world, and that all men may be saved, being brought to the knowledge of Thy truth and of the redemption which is in Jesus Christ Thy Son.

"We pray especially for the good estate of Thy Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church. Cleanse her from every impurity, strengthen her every weakness, bring back to her all who have wandered away, and add daily unto her those who shall be saved.

"Remember Thy people in this land. Bless the Church whereof this congregation is a part. Build her up, repairing the breaches in her walls and strengthening her bulwarks, that she may be a strong tower to all who in her shall seek peace.

"Remember this congregation. As Thou wast with the fathers, so be with the children, building them as living stones into the temple of Thy kingdom.

"We pray for his Majesty King George, that Thou wouldst grant him a long and happy life, faithful counsellors, loyal subjects, a prosperous reign, and at the last a crown of glory.

"We pray for our gracious Queen Mary; Edward, Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family.

"We pray for the King's representatives in this Dominion, and in this province, that they may ever seek Thy glory and the good of Thy Church.

"We pray for the Parliament and Legislatures of this land, for the rulers of this city, and for all who are set in places of authority, that Thou wouldst inspire them with wisdom and grant unto them Thy blessing.

"We pray for all schools, colleges and universities, especially for those of this province and this city, beseeching Thee to grant that in them the fear of Thee and the reverence of Thy Word may reign.

"Bless the Navy, Army and Air Force of our nation, that they may be distinguished by loyalty and valor, temperance and godliness.

"Bless all our Empire. In particular we pray for this Dominion. Preserve our peace and defend our liberties, prosper our trade and commerce, give to us healthful and seasonable weather, bless our husbandry and crown the year with Thy goodness.

"And we beseech Thee to remember in Thy mercy the poor and needy, the fatherless and the widow, the sick and the dying. Relieve their needs, sanctify their sufferings, strengthen their weakness and in due time bring them out of the bondage into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

"Preserve Thou in quietness and in Thy holy fear all who shall come into this house at any time to worship Thee. Grant that here the tempted find strength and security, the sorrowful comfort, the young guidance, the aged hope, the wounded healing, the weary rest, and the sinner forgiveness and peace of heart.

"These things we ask, O Blessed God, in the confidence that Thine ear is ever open to our prayers. Wherefore we glorify Thy Name, praising Thee, and saying, Salvation be unto our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever. Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God, for ever and ever. Amen."

Then shall be sung:

The Anthem

The 150th Psalm—Cesar Franck

"Hallelujah! Hallelujah!
O praise ye the Lord, praise God in His temple.
Praise ye the Lord in the firmament of His power.
Praise ye Him for His mighty acts,
Praise ye Him according to His majesty.
Praise ye Him with the sound of the trumpet,
Praise ye Him with psaltery and harp,
Praise ye Him with the timbrel,
Praise ye Him with the dance,
Praise ye Him with the organ and stringed instruments,
Praise ye Him upon the loud cymbals,
Praise ye Him upon the high sounding cymbals,
Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord.

The Sermon

It shall be concluded with the ascription of praise:

"Now unto God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost be ascribed in the Church, as is most justly due, all might, majesty, dominion, glory, and honor, world without end. Amen."

The Benediction

"The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of His Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord; and the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you and remain with you always. Amen."

EVENING SERVICE.

Rev. D. R. Drummond, D.D., Minister of St. Paul's, Hamilton, will occupy the pulpit at the evening service and Rev. Stuart C. Parker, M.A., B.D., and Rev. Frank W. Beare, B.A., assistant, St. Andrew's Church, will act as officiating ministers. The service is to be opened with an organ prelude.

Processional Hymn 295

Thereafter the Minister shall say, "O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of His praise to be heard: which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved. For Thou, O God, hast proved to us: Thou hast tried us, as silver is tried. We went through fire and through water: but Thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place."

Let Us Pray

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing His praises unto Thy Name, O Most High; to shew forth Thy loving kindness in the morning, and Thy faithfulness every night. We will exalt Thee, O God, our King, and praise Thy Name for ever and ever. For Thy great and manifold goodness to us; for the mercy wherewith Thou hast overshadowed our way until now; for the preservation and upbuilding of this congregation through a hundred years; and for the grace Thou hast vouchsafed unto Thy servants, leading them in Thy way, and teaching them, we give Thee most humble and hearty thanks. But chiefly with all the Churches, we thank Thee for the gift of Thine only begotten Son in Whom we have hope of an eternal life beyond the reach of years. And we beseech Thee to confirm in us this so great hope, and to grant that in the assurance of Thy never-failing love we may live happy and blessed lives: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

Hymn 325

Then shall be read the lesson:

by Rev. Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley

"It came even to pass as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord: and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of music and praised the Lord saying: 'For He is good, for His mercy endureth for ever': Then the house of the Lord was filled with a cloud, so that the priests could not stand to minister, for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord. Then the minister shall say—

"Let Us Pray

"Almighty God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Maker of all things, Judge of all men, we cast ourselves down before Thee in deep humiliation because of our manifold sins and wickedness. We have broken Thy holy laws; we have abused Thy mercies and made light of Thy judgments; we have turned aside from Thy covenant, and have not feared Thy holy Name. With shame and sorrow we confess that we have sought to live without Thee in the world, resting upon ourselves alone. We have continued in pride, vainglory and ingratitude; we have not walked worthy of our high calling in Christ Jesus, neither have we used our many gifts and privileges for Thy glory.

"Unto Thee, O Lord, belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against Thee. Spare Thou them, O God, which confess their faults unto Thee. Mercifully absolve them from all their sins; and for the glory of Thy name, turn from them all those evils which they most righteously have deserved.

"Turn us again, O Lord of Hosts; cause Thy face to shine upon us, and we shall be saved.

"Blessed Lord, Who has taught us that for our life's redemption there is but one thing needful, help us to choose that good part which shall not be taken away from us. Grant us grace to seek before all else Thy kingdom and Thy righteousness, to love nothing which Thou lovest not, and follow no leading but the leading of Thy Spirit.

"Deepen also in our souls, we pray Thee, the sense of our need of Thee; increase in us the spirit of self-sacrifice and service, of charity and steadfast faith; and bring us through all the changes of this life purified and strengthened, and made more meet to stand in Thy presence.

"Hear also our prayers which we offer for all men, especially them which are of the household of faith.

"We commend to Thee the Church in this land. We pray for Thy servant our King, and for his representatives and ministers among us, beseeching Thee on behalf of all who bear rule and are set in places of authority, that they may fulfil their several ministries as in Thy sight.

"We commend to Thy mercy the sick and bereaved, the poor and the friendless, all that are sore beset by temptation and all who bear heavy burdens. Glorify Thyself, O God, and manifest Thy works in their deliverance and comforting.

"And we bless, bless Thee, O God, as we remember the way by which Thou hast led this congregation, for Thy fatherly care which hath never failed us. We bless Thee also for those of this company who dwell now with Thee in Paradise, who through faith wrought righteousness, and out of weakness were made strong. May the memory of their devotion be ever dear to us. Grant that we may be followers of them even as they were followers of Jesus Christ; and that at the last we all may be gathered together at the Holy Table which Thou shalt spread in the day of Thy triumph, when Thy Blessed Son shall drink of the fruit of the vine new with us in Thy Kingdom."

"Our Father which art in Heaven: Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen."

Then shall follow:

The Offering

Hymn 19

Let Us Pray

"O God, who didst teach the hearts of Thy faithful people of old by sending to them the light of the Holy Spirit, grant us by the same Spirit to have a right understanding of Thy saving truth. Visit this congregation with Thy love and favor; and illumine our minds more and more with the brightness of the everlasting Gospel; through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

The Sermon

It shall be concluded with the following ascription of praise: "Now unto Him that is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the presence of His Glory with exceeding joy; to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

The Benediction

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen."

Processional Hymn: 53

GOD, Thou art my God alone;
Early to Thee my soul shall cry;
A pilgrim in a land unknown,
A thirsty land whose springs are dry.

O that it were as it hath been!
When, praying in the holy place,
Thy power and glory I have seen,
And marked the footsteps of Thy grace.

Yet, through this rough and thorny maze,
I follow hard on Thee, my God:
Thine hand, unseen, upholds my ways;
I safely tread where Thou hast trod.

Thee, in the watches of the night,
When I remember on my bed,
Thy presence makes the darkness light,
Thy guardian wings are round my head.

Better than life itself Thy love,
Dearer than all beside to me:
For whom have I in heaven above,
Or what on earth, compared to Thee?

Praise with my heart, my mind, my voice,
For all Thy mercy I will give;
My soul shall still in God rejoice;
My tongue shall bless Thee while I live.

Amen.

Then the Minister shall say—

LORD, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. A thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night. So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Let us Pray

O LORD our God, the lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, look with favour upon us, the children of a day, whose earthly life is as the grass, which in the morning flourisheth and groweth up, and in the evening is cut down and withereth. Help us as we contemplate Thine eternal glory to measure the love which Thou hast manifested toward us, in that Thou hast opened even to us the gates of eternal life. And grant unto us such grace that having this hope in us, we may purify ourselves even as He also is pure, Who with Thee, the Father, and the Holy Ghost, One God, is worshipped and glorified, world without end.

Amen.

Then shall be sung—

Hymn 86

ALL people that on earth do dwell,
Sing to the Lord with cheerful voice.
Him serve with mirth, His praise forth tell;
Come ye before Him and rejoice.

Know that the Lord is God indeed;
Without our aid He did us make;
We are His flock, He doth us feed,
And for His sheep He doth us take.

O enter then His gates with praise,
Approach with joy His courts unto;
Praise, laud, and bless His name always,
For it is seemly so to do.

For why, the Lord our God is good;
His mercy is for ever sure;
His truth at all times firmly stood,
And shall from age to age endure.

Amen.

Then shall be read a Lesson from the Old Testament—

Deuteronomy VIII

Then shall be sung the Hymn—

Te Deum Laudamus

WE praise Thee, O God: we acknowledge Thee to be the Lord.
All the earth doth worship Thee: the Father everlasting.
To Thee all angels cry aloud: the heavens, and all the powers therein.
To Thee cherubim, and seraphim: continually do cry,
Holy, holy, holy: Lord God of Sabaoth;
Heaven and earth are full of the majesty: of Thy glory.
The glorious company of the apostles: praise Thee.
The goodly fellowship of the prophets: praise Thee.
The noble army of martyrs: praise Thee.
The holy Church throughout all the world: doth acknowledge Thee;
The Father of an infinite majesty: Thine honourable true and only Son;
Also the Holy Ghost: the Comforter.
Thou art the King of Glory: O Christ.
Thou art the everlasting Son: of the Father.
When Thou tookest upon Thee to deliver man: Thou didst not abhor the Virgin's womb.
When Thou hadst overcome the sharpness of death: Thou didst open the kingdom of heaven to all believers.
Thou sittest at the right hand of God: in the glory of the Father.
We believe that Thou shalt come: to be our Judge.
We therefore pray Thee, help Thy servants: whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy precious blood.
Make them to be numbered with Thy saints: in glory everlasting.
O Lord, save Thy people: and bless Thine heritage.
Govern them: and lift them up for ever.
Day by day: we magnify Thee;
And we worship Thy name: ever world without end.
Vouchsafe, O Lord: to keep us this day without sin.
O Lord, have mercy upon us: have mercy upon us.
O Lord, let Thy mercy lighten upon us: as our trust is in Thee.
O Lord, in Thee have I trusted: let me never be confounded.

Then shall be read a Lesson from the New Testament—

Hebrews XI 1-10; XI 32—XII 2

Then the Minister shall say—

Let us Pray

ALMIGHTY and Eternal God, Whose mercy endureth for ever, we bring Thee thanks and praise for Thy blessings, more than can be numbered, which Thou hast bestowed upon this company of Thy people.

We thank Thee for the grace Thou gavest to our fathers, putting it into their hearts to build an habitation for Thy glory, sustaining them under many burdens, and causing the trial of their faith to redound to Thy praise and honour. We thank Thee for Thy goodness unto us their children in the Gospel, to whom Thou hast given to dwell in a land illumined with the light of truth, and to enter into a rich inheritance, gathering where we have not strawed, reaping that whereon we bestowed no labour. We bless Thee for the memories with which this day is fraught, the remembrance of a heavenly love which changeth not with years, of a Blessed Saviour Who is the same yesterday and to-day and forever, and of a Gracious Comforter who dwelleth with us as He dwelt with our fathers. For the cloud of witnesses with which this day we are compassed about; for the remembrance of lives lived in simple faith and charity, and laid down in hope; and for the precious example of sorrows borne without murmuring, bounties enjoyed with humility, and hardness endured with patience and courage, we give Thee thanks.

Gracious Lord, accept our praise, and grant unto us that by the thought of Thy mercy and favour to us and to our fathers through so many years, we may be stirred up to serve Thee with greater zeal in our generation, and, looking unto Jesus, to run with patience the race that is set before us.

We humbly acknowledge that our hearts have not always been lifted up to Thee as we lift them up this day. We have forgotten Thee, regarding neither the gifts Thou hast given unto us nor the commandments Thou hast laid upon us, sinning against Thee by the waywardness of our will, the coldness of our affection, and the poverty of our endeavours.

We beseech Thee to pardon us. There is forgiveness with Thee, that Thou mayest be feared. Let Thy forgiveness be extended to us. Cleanse us from our sins, secret and open, and from every thought displeasing to Thy holiness; and grant that with a peaceful soul and quiet mind we may fulfil the number of our days in this present world, and in the world to come may have part in the joy of Thy kingdom.

Grant that we may ever love the thing which Thou commandest and desire that which Thou dost promise; so that, among the sundry and manifold changes of this life, our hearts may surely there be fixed where true joys are to be found.

Here, O God, we dedicate ourselves anew to Thee and to Thy service. Perfect this our offering, we beseech Thee: let the fire of Thy love consume in us all sinful desires of the flesh and of the mind, that, devoted to Thee in singleness of heart, we may work Thy works continually and, following the example of Thy Blessed Son, may ever seek those things which are above, where He sitteth at Thy right hand; Who hath taught us when we pray to say:—

To be said by both Minister and Congregation

Amen.

Then shall be sung—

Hymn 74

GOD, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home:

Under the shadow of Thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is Thine arm alone,
And our defence is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her frame,
From everlasting Thou art God,
To endless years the same.

A thousand ages in Thy sight
Are like an evening gone,
Short as the watch that ends the night
Before the rising sun.

Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly forgotten, as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be Thou our guard while troubles last,
And our eternal home.

Amen.

Then the Minister shall say—

Let us Pray

GOD, our Father, Who knowest the desires of all hearts, and Who yet hast taught us to make supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks for all men, we humbly beseech Thee to receive these our prayers which we offer unto Thee.

We pray for all mankind that peace may prevail in the world, and that all men may be saved, being brought to the knowledge of Thy truth and of the redemption which is in Jesus Christ Thy Son.

We pray especially for the good estate of Thy Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church. Cleanse her from every impurity, strengthen her every weakness, bring back to her all who have wandered away, and add daily unto her those who shall be saved.

Remember Thy people in this land. Bless the Church whereof this congregation is a part. Build her up, repairing the breaches in her walls and strengthening her bulwarks, that she may be a strong tower to all who in her shall seek peace.

Remember this congregation. As Thou wast with the fathers, so be with the children, building them as living stones into the temple of Thy kingdom.

We pray for His Majesty, King George, that Thou wouldst grant him a long and happy life, faithful counsellors, loyal subjects, a prosperous reign, and at the last a crown of glory.

We pray for our gracious Queen Mary; Edward, Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family.

We pray for the King's representatives in this Dominion, and in this Province, that they may ever seek Thy glory and the good of Thy Church.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 17) Mr. and Mrs. (Isabel) John King - Pamphlets and clippings n.d., 1930
National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

We pray for the Parliament and Legislatures of this land, for the rulers of this city, and for all who are set in places of authority, that Thou wouldst inspire them with wisdom and grant unto them Thy blessing.

We pray for all schools, colleges, and universities, especially for those of this province, and this city, beseeching Thee to grant that in them the fear of Thee and the reverence of Thy Word may reign.

Bless the Navy, Army, and Air Force of our nation, that they may be distinguished by loyalty and valour, temperance and godliness.

Bless all our Empire. In particular we pray for this Dominion. Preserve our peace and defend our liberties, prosper our trade and commerce, give to us healthful and seasonable weather, bless our husbandry, and crown the year with Thy goodness.

And we beseech Thee to remember in Thy mercy the poor and needy, the fatherless and the widow, the sick and the dying. Relieve their needs, sanctify their sufferings, strengthen their weakness, and in due time bring them out of bondage into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

Preserve Thou in quietness and in Thy holy fear all who shall come in to this House at any time to worship Thee. Grant that here the tempted may find strength and security, the sorrowful comfort, the young guidance, the aged hope, the wounded healing, the weary rest, and the sinner forgiveness and peace of heart.

These things we ask, O Blessed God, in the confidence that Thine ear is ever open to our prayers. Wherefore we glorify Thy Name, praising Thee, and saying, Salvation be unto our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever. Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever.

Amen.

Then shall be sung—

The Anthem

The 150th Psalm—César Franck

Hallelujah! Hallelujah!

PRAISE ye the Lord, praise God in His temple.
Praise ye the Lord in the firmament of His power.
Praise ye Him for His mighty acts,
Praise ye Him according to His majesty.
Praise ye Him with the sound of the trumpet,
Praise ye Him with the psaltery and harp,
Praise ye Him with the timbrel,
Praise ye Him with the dance,
Praise ye Him with the organ and stringed instruments,
Praise ye Him upon the loud cymbals,
Praise ye Him upon the high sounding cymbals.
Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord.
Hallelujah! Hallelujah!

Then shall follow—

The Offering

Then shall be sung—

Hymn 599

GOD of Bethel, by Whose hand
Thy people still are fed;
Who through this weary pilgrimage
Hast all our fathers led:

Our vows, our prayers, we now present
Before Thy throne of grace;
God of our fathers, be the God
Of their succeeding race.

Through each perplexing path of life
Our wandering footsteps guide;
Give us each day our daily bread,
And raiment fit provide.

O spread Thy covering wings around,
Till all our wanderings cease,
And at our Father's loved abode
Our souls arrive in peace.

Such blessings from Thy gracious hand
Our humble prayers implore;
And Thou shalt be our chosen God,
And portion evermore.

Amen.

Then the Minister shall say—

Let us Pray

GOD, Whose word is quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword, grant unto us that we may receive Thy truth into our hearts in faith and love. By it may we be taught and guided, comforted and upheld; that we be no longer children in understanding, but grow to the stature of perfect men in Christ, and be prepared to every good word and work, to the honour of Thy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Amen.

Thereafter shall be preached—

The Sermon

concluding with this Ascription of praise—

NOW unto God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost be ascribed in the Church, as is most justly due, all might, majesty, dominion, glory, and honour, world without end.

Amen.

Then shall follow the—

Benediction

The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of His Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord; and the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you and remain with you always.

Amen.

Then shall be sung the Recessional—

Hymn 310

FOR all the saints who from their labours rest,
Who Thee by faith before the world confessed,
Thy name, O Jesus, be for ever blest.
Hallelujah!

Thou wast their Rock, their Fortress, and their Might;
Thou, Lord, their Captain in the well-fought fight;
Thou in the darkness drear their one true Light.
Hallelujah!

O may Thy soldiers, faithful, true, and bold,
Fight as the saints who nobly fought of old,
And win, with them, the victor's crown of gold.
Hallelujah!

The golden evening brightens in the west;
Soon, soon to faithful warriors cometh rest;
Sweet is the calm of Paradise the blest.
Hallelujah!

But lo! there breaks a yet more glorious day;
The saints triumphant rise in bright array;
The King of Glory passes on His way.
Hallelujah!

From earth's wide bounds, from ocean's farthest coast,
Through gates of pearl streams in the countless host,
Singing to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.
Hallelujah!

Amen.

Processional Hymn: 295

THE Church's one foundation
Is Jesus Christ her Lord;
She is His new creation
By water and the word:
From heaven He came and sought her
To be His holy bride;
With His own blood He bought her,
And for her life He died.

Elect from every nation,
Yet one o'er all the earth,
Her charter of salvation
One Lord, one faith, one birth,
One holy name she blesses,
Partakes one holy food,
And to one hope she presses
With every grace endued.

Though with a scornful wonder
Men see her sore oppress,
By schisms rent asunder,
By heresies distrest,
Yet saints their watch are keeping,
Their cry goes up, 'How long?'
And soon the night of weeping
Shall be the morn of song.

'Mid toil and tribulation,
And tumult of her war,
She waits the consummation
Of peace for evermore;
Till with the vision glorious
Her longing eyes are blest,
And the great Church victorious
Shall be the Church at rest.

Yet she on earth hath union
With God the Three in One,
And mystic sweet communion
With those whose rest is won.
O happy ones and holy!
Lord, give us grace that we,
Like them, the meek and lowly,
On high may dwell with Thee.

Amen.

Then the Minister shall say—

OBLESS our God, ye people, and make the voice of His praise to be heard: which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved. For Thou, O God, hast proved us: Thou hast tried us, as silver is tried. We went through fire and through water: but Thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place.

Let us Pray

IT is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto Thy Name, O Most High; to shew forth Thy loving kindness in the morning, and Thy faithfulness every night. We will exalt Thee, O God, our King, and praise Thy Name for ever and ever. For Thy great and manifold goodness to us; for the mercy wherewith Thou hast overshadowed our way until now; for the preservation and upbuilding of this congregation through a hundred years; and for the grace Thou hast vouchsafed unto Thy servants, leading them in Thy way, and teaching them, we give Thee most humble and hearty thanks. But chiefly, with all the Churches, we thank Thee for the gift of Thine only begotten Son in Whom we have hope of an eternal life beyond the reach of years. And we beseech Thee to confirm in us this so great hope, and to grant that in the assurance of Thy never-failing love we may live happy and blessed lives: through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Amen.

Then shall be sung—

Hymn 325

WE love the place, O God,
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The joy of Thine abode
All earthly joy excels.

We love the house of prayer,
Wherein Thy servants meet;
And Thou, O Lord, art there,
Thy chosen flock to greet.

We love the word of life,
The word that tells of peace,
Of comfort in the strife,
And joys that never cease.

We love to sing below
For mercies freely given;
But O we long to know
The triumph song of heaven!

Lord Jesus, give us grace
On earth to love Thee more,
In heaven to see Thy face,
And with Thy saints adore.

Amen.

Then shall be read the Lesson—

2 Peter III

Then shall be sung—

The Anthem

Rev. Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley

IT came even to pass as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord: And when they lifted up their voice with trumpets and cymbals and instruments of music and praised the Lord saying: For He is good, for His mercy endureth for ever: Then the house of the Lord was filled with a cloud, so that the priests could not stand to minister, for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord.

Hallelujah! Hallelujah!

Then shall be sung—

Hymn 145

WHEN all Thy mercies, O my God,
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view, I'm lost
In wonder, love, and praise.

O how shall words, with equal warmth,
The gratitude declare
That glows within my ravished heart?
But Thou canst read it there.

Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
My daily thanks employ;
Nor is the least a cheerful heart
That tastes these gifts with joy.

Through every period of my life
Thy goodness I'll pursue;
And after death, in distant worlds,
The glorious theme renew.

When nature fails, and day and night
Divide Thy works no more,
My ever-grateful heart, O Lord,
Thy mercy shall adore.

Through all eternity to Thee
A joyful song I'll raise;
For, O! eternity's too short
To utter all Thy praise.

Amen.

Then the Minister shall say—

Let us Pray

ALMIGHTY God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Maker of all things, Judge of all men, we cast ourselves down before Thee in deep humiliation because of our manifold sins and wickedness. We have broken Thy holy laws; we have abused Thy mercies and made light of Thy judgments; we have turned aside from Thy covenant, and have not feared Thy holy Name. With shame and sorrow we confess that we have sought to live without Thee in the world, resting upon ourselves alone. We have continued in pride, vainglory and ingratitude; we have not walked worthy of our high calling in Christ Jesus, neither have we used our many gifts and privileges for Thy glory.

Unto Thee, O Lord, belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against Thee. Spare Thou them, O God, which confess their faults unto Thee. Mercifully absolve them from all their sins; and for the glory of Thy name turn from them all those evils which they most righteously have deserved.

Turn us again, O Lord of Hosts; cause Thy face to shine upon us, and we shall be saved.

Blessed Lord, Who hast taught us that for our life's redemption there is but one thing needful, help us to choose that good part which shall not be taken away from us. Grant us grace to seek before all else Thy kingdom and Thy righteousness, to love nothing which Thou lovest not, and follow no leading but the leading of Thy Spirit.

Deepen also in our souls, we pray Thee, the sense of our need of Thee; increase in us the spirit of self-sacrifice and service, of charity and steadfast faith; and bring us through all the changes of this life purified and strengthened, and made more meet to stand in Thy presence.

Hear also our prayers which we offer for all men, especially them which are of the household of faith.

We commend to Thee the Church in this land. We pray for Thy servant our King, and for his representatives and ministers among us, beseeching Thee on behalf of all who bear rule and are set in places of authority, that they may fulfil their several ministries as in Thy sight.

We commend to Thy mercy the sick and bereaved, the poor and friendless, all that are sore beset by temptation, and all who bear heavy burdens. Glorify Thyself, O God, and manifest Thy works in their deliverance and comforting.

And we bless Thee, O God, as we remember the way by which Thou hast led this congregation, for Thy fatherly care which hath never failed us. We bless Thee also for those of this company who dwell now with Thee in Paradise, who through faith wrought righteousness, and out of weakness were made strong. May the memory of their devotion be ever dear to us. Grant that we may be followers of them even as they were followers of Jesus Christ; and that at the last we all may be gathered together at that Holy Table which Thou shalt spread in the day of Thy triumph, when Thy Blessed Son shall drink of the fruit of the vine new with us in Thy kingdom.

To be said by both Minister and Congregation

Our Father which art in Heaven: Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory, for ever and ever.

Amen.

Then shall follow—

The Offering

Then shall be sung—

Hymn 19

THE Lord's my Shepherd, I'll not want.
He makes me down to lie [leadeth me
In pastures green; He
The quiet waters by.

My soul He doth restore again;
And me to walk doth make
Within the paths of righteousness,
Even for His own name's sake.

Yea, though I walk in death's dark vale,
Yet will I fear none ill;
For Thou art with me; and Thy rod
And staff me comfort still.

My table Thou hast furnishèd
In presence of my foes;
My head Thou dost with oil anoint,
And my cup overflows.

Goodness and mercy all my life
Shall surely follow me:
And in God's house for evermore
My dwelling-place shall be.

Amen.

Then the Minister shall say—

Let us Pray

O GOD, Who didst teach the hearts of Thy faithful people of old by sending to them the light of the Holy Spirit, grant us by the same Spirit to have a right understanding of Thy saving truth. Visit this congregation with Thy love and favour; and illumine our minds more and more with the brightness of the everlasting Gospel; through Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Amen.

Thereafter shall be preached—

The Sermon

concluding with this Ascription of praise—

NOW unto Him that is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy; to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever.

Amen.

Then shall follow the—

Benediction

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all.

Amen.

Then shall be sung the Recessional—

Hymn 254

ALL hail the power of Jesus' name!
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
To crown Him Lord of all.

Crown Him, ye martyrs of your God,
Who from His altar call;
Extol the Stem-of-Jesse's Rod,
And crown Him Lord of all.

Ye seed of Israel's chosen race,
Ye ransomed from the fall,
Hail Him Who saves you by His grace,
And crown Him Lord of all.

Sinners, whose love can ne'er forget
The wormwood and the gall,
Go, spread your trophies at His feet,
And crown Him Lord of all.

Let every tribe and every tongue,
Responsive to the call,
Lift high the universal song,
And crown Him Lord of all!

O that, with yonder sacred throng,
We at His feet may fall,
Join in the everlasting song,
And crown Him Lord of all!

Amen.

KIRK'S STORIED PAST REFLECTS IN SERVICES OF FERVENT WORSHIP

St. Andrew's Rededicated in Memory of Devoted Pioneers of Presbyterianism—Premier Sits Near Pew Where Parents Sat

ACTING MODERATOR PLEADS FOR FAITH

A hundred year ago the brave pioneer settlers of little York had just realized their dream of erecting a church in which they could worship their God in the traditional manner of their Presbyterian upbringing, and in which their children, born far from the homeland, could nevertheless be brought up in the same manner as their forebears had been, in the lands far across the sea.

Their Church Home.

A hundred years ago St. Andrew's Church was dedicated to its high service by the handful of sturdy Presbyterians who had sacrificed much to have their church built. It became the meeting place of the intrepid colonists; it became their church home, in the best sense of the word. It was the centre of their little world.

And though the tiny town of York is now the great city of Toronto, and thought there are many, many Presbyterian churches scattered throughout its length and breadth, yet the old church at Simcoe and King Streets still remains the logical, the actual centre of Presbyterianism in Toronto, just as it was when it was first built in 1830.

That this is so was evident from the huge congregations which attended the services held yesterday in celebration of the kirk's centenary. At the morning service more than 1,000 people were there, many of them sitting in the very pews in which their ancestors have sat before them, and many of them making a special journey to Toronto that they might attend the all-important celebrations in the church home of their childhood days, where they loved to worship, until, by some chance or other, they left to make their homes elsewhere.

Wide Influence.

Among the worshippers last night was Premier Mackenzie King, seated where his parents used to sit in the past. For the influence of St. Andrew's Church is felt not only in Toronto. As Rev. Dr. A. J. MacGillivray, Acting Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, said when he preached at the morning service yesterday, "St. Andrew's contribution to the life of the city and the country is inestimable."

The service yesterday morning was conducted by Rev. Stuart C. Parker, the minister, and Rev. Thomas Eakin, Ph.D., D.D., now Principal of Knox College, and formerly minister of St. Andrew's.

The hymns sung yesterday were the ones known and loved and sung by the early pioneers who were responsible for the foundation of the sacred building.

In the morning "God, Thou Art My God Alone" was the processional hymn, with which the service opened, and the other hymns were: "All People That on Earth Do Dwell," "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," "O God of Bethel, by Whose Hand," and, as the recessional, "For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest." The anthem was the Cesar Franck rendering of the 150th Psalm, "Hallelujah, Hallelujah, Praise Ye the Lord." Dr. Norman Anderson was organist.

Great Future Ahead.

Taking as his text the verses of the thirty-second chapter of the Book of Jeremiah, which tell of the purchase by the prophet of the field Ananoth, Rev. Mr. MacGillivray described this transaction as one which was unsound from the matter-of-fact standpoint of business, but one which brought the prophet unlimited blessings. He added that land was not at a premium in Judah at that time, and that Jerusalem was suffering from an unparalleled financial depression. "Is it not given to us to see visions, and dream dreams and weave them into our lives and conduct?" the preacher demanded. "We too may have that unwavering confidence that will see beyond any present distress to a great and glorious future.

"Faith in one's fellow-citizens is commendable from a patriotic point of view," he said, "and when normal yearning comes to give expression to that which is most valiant in their own religious experience the depths of life are touched and quickened."

Stating that a Church's value cannot be summed up, since it influences the character of the entire nation, the Moderator paid tribute to the far-reaching influence of St. Andrew's Church not only throughout the City of Toronto, but throughout Canada. "Invest your spiritual experience in the church," he urged the great congregation.

" . . . Has Never Failed Us."

Last evening a congregation which filled the church to capacity joined reverently in the service of praise and hymn, presided over by Rev. Mr. Parker, assisted by Rev. Frank W. Beare, assistant minister. As "We love the place, O God, wherein Thine honor dwells" rang out with true significance, hearts stirred with memories of services held in the historic old church for more than half a century. With devout thankfulness men and women followed the minister as he read the prayer: "And we bless Thee, O God, as we remember the way by which Thou hast led this congregation, for Thy Fatherly care which has never failed us," recalling those days a century ago when a little consecrated band of Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland laid the foundation of St. Andrew's.

Marked by the beauty of the spirit of humility, the prayer in the closing sentence sounded a note of consecration. It were as though the torch of faith laid down by the pioneer and the many members of the church who had passed beyond was being lifted high by the congregation now worshipping in St. Andrew's.

"Ever Dear to Us."

"We bless Thee also for those of this company who dwell now with Thee in Paradise, who through faith wrought righteousness, and out of weakness were made strong," read the prayer. "May the memory of their devotion be ever dear to us. Grant that we may be followers of them even as they were followers of Jesus Christ, and that at the last we all may be gathered together at that Holy Table which Thou shalt spread in the day of Thy triumph, when Thy blessed Son shall drink of the fruit of the wine with us in Thy Kingdom."

"Real living has to do with character," said Rev. Dr. D. R. Drummond, minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Hamilton, preacher at the evening service, making a plea for "old-fashioned homespun honesty," purity, sincerity, loyalty and sacrifice, which had been held high by St. Andrew's Church for 100 years.

"Should the church be satisfied with the rich heritage behind her?" questioned the minister, challenging the congregation to consecration in undertaking the unfinished task of the church.

Value of Memory.

Basing his remarks on the text, "Then beware lest thou forget the Lord," Dr. Drummond contended that there was, of course, a time to forget—one must resolutely forget sorrow and failure. But there was also a time to remember the goodness and mercy of God. Remembrance should not consist only in the abundance of things.

"Memory makes men," claimed the preacher, adding that "memory begets grace on grace in the Christian character. Memory is a hope that sets us on our way, and memory is the chief agent of the Holy Ghost in renewing endeavor."

As Canadians, men and women had reason to lift their hearts in gratitude, claimed Dr. Drummond, who spoke with depth of feeling of the remembrance Presbyterians held of their great traditions and heritage.

Announcement was made of the congregational reunion which will be held this evening, beginning at 8 o'clock, and which will be addressed by Right Hon. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada; his Honor Lieut.-Governor Ross; Mayor Wemp; Rev. James F. Sweeny, Lord Bishop of Toronto; Moderatoor of the United Church; Rev. Dr. A. J. MacGillivray, Acting Moderator of General Assembly; Moderator of Toronto Presbytery; Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, Dr. D. R. Drummond, and Principal Thomas Eakin. Following the service a social hour will be enjoyed by the congregation.

A children's centennial service was held yesterday afternoon, when the pupils of the Sunday school, together with the adult classes and the parents, held an open session in the church.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNIVERSARY IS MARKED BY RECEPTION

Hundredth Birthday of Church Is Occasion of Delightful Function—His Honor and Mrs. W. D. Ross Receive Members of Congregation—Ballroom Banked With Flowers

The 100th anniversary of the founding of St. Andrew's church was the occasion of a most enjoyable reception and tea this afternoon when His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. William D. Ross were host and hostess to the members of the congregation.

Mrs. Ross wore a charming gown of figured chiffon, fashioned with the new cape, and black slippers of crepe, with cut steel buckles, and Miss Susan Ross was in a dainty frock of cream colored lace, with slippers of brown.

Tea, with the members of the church assisting, was served in the ballroom where the dais was banked with potted plants and ferns, and the table was arranged with a profusion of bright spring flowers. In attendance were Colonel Fraser, Colonel Rhodes, Captain Haldenby, Captain Robertson, Captain E. E. Trent, Lieut. W. E. Patterson, Lieut. Ross Wilson, Lieut. W. M. Campbell, Lieut. J. A. D. Craig, and Lieut. K. N. Lander.

RECALL ASSOCIATIONS OF CHURCH'S CENTURY

St. Andrew's Congregation Urged to Treasure Memories.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Hamilton Pastor Preaches Sermon for Hundredth Anniversary.

Associations make life, and memory is the faculty that keeps them potent and fresh through the passage of time.

With these words, Rev. D. R. Drummond, minister of St. Paul's Church, Hamilton, stressed before the congregation of St. Andrew's Church at its centenary celegration last night the value of the heritage of tradition that the hundred-year-old congregation has created.

Twice yesterday a thousand people filled the church which began with a mere handful of devout citizens in a tiny building at Church and Adelaide Streets a hundred years ago. And the Premier of the Dominion was among the thousand that came to the service at night.

"Associations create depths in our beings that are awakened at the touch of memory," Dr. Drummond said. "A faded flower, a golden curl, a little shoe, will reach a heart that nothing else can touch. And as with individuals, associations gather around our homes, our churches, or even places of business, associations of tears and laughter, sighs and smiles, that impart a quality that nothing else can give."

"Memory makes men," Dr. Drummond contended as he outlined the traditions which men have endeavored since time immemorial to live up to.

"And so we have a great tradition of love and liberty, a regard for holy things, a heritage to guard and pass on. We own to-day things of which our fathers never dreamed, radio, airplanes, and so on, but what avail all these things if souls of men and women who use them are not greater, more Christlike than before.

"It is wonderful to travel at 60 miles an hour, but if you are a rogue and a fool when you enter the train and you are a rogue and a fool when you leave it, what avail the fact you traveled at 60 miles? News can be flashed in the 30th of a second, but if it be news of divorce, and suicide and scandal, what matters that it can reach us so fast?"

The influence of St. Andrew's Church upon education, legislation, industry and the life of Toronto could not be estimated, Dr. Drummond said, as he urged the congregation to continue to build the church's character.

A plea to the congregation to redouble its interest in the work of the church was made by Rev. A. J. MacGillivray, moderator of the general assembly for 1926, at the morning service.

Rev. Stuart C. Parker, pastor of the church, conducted the formal order of services.

CENTURY OF SERVICE FINISHED BY CHURCH

Premier King Will Unveil Memorial Tablet at St. Andrew's

The value of the heritage of tradition that St. Andrew's Presbyterian church has created in its 100 years of existence was stressed before the congregation at the centenary celebration service last night by Rev. D. R. Drummond of St. Paul's church, Hamilton. "Associations make life," the preacher said, "and memory is the faculty that keeps them potent and fresh through the passage of time."

Yesterday saw the opening of a week's program of celebration at both morning and evening services. The congregation, which started 100 years ago as a handful of people, now number more than a thousand, occupying every available bit of seating accommodation in the church. At the evening service a member of the congregation was Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, who will officiate this evening at the unveiling of a tablet in honor of the memory of his father and mother, who were life-long members and active workers for St. Andrew's church.

Dr. Drummond, in his sermon, outlined the traditions which men have endeavored since time immemorial to live up to and declared that memory makes men.

The speaker at the morning service was Rev. A. J. MacGillivray, who, in reviewing the record of the congregation of St. Andrew's church, made a plea to the congregation not to slacken in efforts but redouble them in the years to come.

The formal order of services were conducted by the minister, Rev. Stuart C. Parker.

CENTURY OF SERVICE FINISHED BY CHURCH

Premier King Will Unveil Memorial Tablet at St. Andrew's

The value of the heritage of tradition that St. Andrew's Presbyterian church has created in its 100 years of existence was stressed before the congregation at the centenary celebration service last night by Rev. D. R. Drummond of St. Paul's church, Hamilton. "Associations make life," the preacher said, "and memory is the faculty that keeps them potent and fresh through the passage of time."

Yesterday saw the opening of a week's program of celebration at both morning and evening services. The congregation, which started 100 years ago as a handful of people, now number more than a thousand, occupying every available bit of seating accommodation in the church. At the evening service a member of the congregation was Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, who will officiate this evening at the unveiling of a tablet in honor of the memory of his father and mother, who were lifelong members and active workers for St. Andrew's church.

A CENTURY OF SERVICE.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday celebrated its 100th anniversary. Toronto's "Auld Kirk" has attained a truly venerable age in this young land.

In the past hundred years the church itself has undergone many changes. The city has been almost miraculously enlarged and improved. Canada has attained manly stature in the British family of nations. The whole world, from a purely material standpoint, has made strides unknown to the centuries gone before.

Yet the eternal verities for which St. Andrew's was born remain unaltered. It is characteristic of the institution itself that it has kept its eye steadily on its guiding beacon, and kept its feet firmly on the path it set out to tread.

MACKENZIE KING UNVEILS TABLET

Premier Officiates at Ceremony in Toronto Presbyterian Church

TORONTO, March 4.—(C.P.)—In St. Andrew's Church, where the Presbyterians of a new land have knelt in worship for a hundred years, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, last night unveiled a tablet to the memory of his parents, long members of the congregation. The unveiling coincided with the centennial of the church, and the Prime Minister made the informal ceremony the occasion of a tribute to the work and place of the church in the fabric of society. Religion, he declared, was the very breath of life, without which the state and other organizations of man's making, were doomed to be hollow and without force.

It was a distinguished gathering which attended the memorial unveiling and the celebration of the church's century of life. The Hon. W. D. Ross, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario, was present, with some of the most eminent of the Canadian clergy. It was hailed as a symbol of the new order of inter-church friendship that there sat on either side of the Prime Minister of the Parliament which passed the act of union of 1925, the acting Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and the Moderator of the United Church. Their presence was made the more notable by the fact that St. Andrew's was a storm centre of the bitter church union controversy which raged a few years back.

The brass table which Mr. Mackenzie King unveiled was erected by his sister, Mrs. Janet King Lay, of Barrie, and himself, to the memory of their father, Dr. John King, K.C., an elder of the church, and their mother, Isabel Grace Mackenzie "with loving gratitude for their self-sacrifice and devoted lives and in hallowed memories of St. Andrew's Church."

PREMIER KING LAUDS ST. ANDREW'S RECORD

Unveils Memorial Tablet at Church's Centenary Celebration.

EVENING OF MEMORY

Other Denominations Send Greetings to Presbyterian Brethren.

Memories of tragedy and comedy, sentiment and romance, threatened disruption and renewed strength, ambition and affluence, were recalled at last night's centenary meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, in the church auditorium. They were memories weaving a strong and enduring fabric whose threads stretch not only the length and breadth of the Dominion, but throughout the British Empire.

Among those who helped to piece the fabric was Premier Mackenzie King, who unveiled a tablet in memory of his father and mother, on behalf of his sister and himself.

He told of the association of his family with St. Andrew's Church in Berlin and later with St. Andrew's in Toronto, the latter lasting for a period of more than half a century. In fact, he said, the family tree dated back to the foundation of the church itself. And in that home life there was no association so dear as that between the home and the church.

"If St. Andrew's Church, a single church, has had the influence we know and believe it has had, what must be the influence of the church on national life and throughout the world," he asked.

Central Institution.

"The church would have no place but for the world in which it finds itself. It is but one institution, but it should be the central institution of all. Its mission is to breathe upon the others the spirit of life. The state will find its noblest expression and the fulfilment of its highest destiny only as its life approaches in expression the aims and ideals of the noblest and highest individual life.

"If we would serve our country in the truest and surest way, let us, with the Hebrew, believe that God continues to work for continents as well as men. With the Founder of our faith, let us believe that all life is sacred, and that human life, however shattered and sordid at times it may appear, carries within itself the reflected image of the divine. In this belief, and this only, will our country realize its highest destiny."

Premier King listed the time-honored institutions: The home, the church, the institutions of learning, the learned professions, government in its legislature, executive and judicial aspects, the defence forces on land, on the sea and in the air, and the financial, commercial and idustrial institutions of our land. There were, too, the agencies which stimulated art, literature and opinion in their different forms of expression.

"But let me remove from the group, for the moment, the church and its influence, and ask what the result would be," he said. "What, in a word, would our human society be to-day—what would our nation be to-day—were all the institutions which are, as it were, their supporting columns, to be beyond the orbit of the influence of the church and the inspiration of its teachings?

Proud of Memories.

"It is something like this, it seems to me, which we have to bring to our minds in order to get a true picture of the part which St. Andrew's Church has played in the century of its existence in this community and in our country. As we think of the distinguished and learned and devout men who have filled its pulpit, week in and week out, over the period of the century; of the officers and members who have zealously and earnestly helped to conduct its many activities; of the men and women, who, under the inspiration of its ministrations, have entered upon and carried on their several vocations, with more of determination for the right, and more of Christian charity, may we not, indeed, be proud to feel that the privilege is ours of paying some slight tribute to the part which St. Andrew's played in the making of our country what it is to-day?"

Lieut.-Governor W. D. Ross brought greetings from the province, and stressed the "value beyond computation of St. Andrew's Church."

Alderman Carrick stated that the church was the biggest police force in the community. That point had been established in the City Council during a debate on the taxing of church property. He brought the congratulations of the council, Mayor Bert Wemp and of Metropolitan United Church of which he is an elder.

Rev. Dr. W. T. Gunn, moderator of the United Church, spoke on behalf of that body. Right Rev. Bishop Sweeny brought greetings from the Anglican Church. Rev. Dr. A. J. McGillivray, past moderator of the Presbyterian church, felt that St. Andrew's might well be considered one of the shrines—one of the landmarks of the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. Thomas Eakin, principal of Knox College, outlined the contributions which St. Andrew's had made to the community, and Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater brought congratulations from Old St. Andrew's Church.

CHURCH MEMORY BEST SAYS PREMIER KING

Speaks at Centenary Celebration of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church

UNVEIL TABLET

All Attempting to Establish One Christian Faith, Disagree on Small Things

In our home and social life there are no associations closer than those of the home and church, Premier Mackenzie King said last night at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, King and Simcoe Sts., in an address at the meeting in celebration and commemoration of the founding of St. Andrew's church in Toronto on March 3, 1830. "The memories I cherish most are for the most part connected in some way with the church," he said.

Pointing out that in making up a nation, there was grouped the home, the church, the institutions of learning, the forces for defence and the business institutions, Premier King said: "Take away the church and what have you left? That is the question, I think, that presents to us the significance of a meeting of this kind.

"We can see how its influence spreads to every part of the country when we think of those connected with activities of the church and of those adherents who have gone away from services with an inspired desire to live better and do better."

Premier King also pointed out that all the churches were attempting to establish one Christian faith, however they might disagree on lesser things.

Officiates at Unveiling

Previous to delivering his address, Premier King officiated at the unveiling of a tablet in honor of the memory of his father and mother, who were active members of St. Andrew's church for many years. "It was not until my father had passed away that I realized how much of his life had been given so zealously to the life of the church," he said.

The premier stated he was happy to know that 100 years ago, in the group which organized as St. Andrew's was his mother's father.

Rev. Stuart Parker, minister of St. Andrew's, presided at the meeting, which was attended by an audience which filled the church to capacity and which included members of congregations of Presbyterian and other churches in all parts of the city.

Congratulations and greetings to St. Andrew's congregation from the Ontario government were extended in an address by His Honor W. D. Ross, lieutenant-governor. In the unexpected absence from the city of Mayor Wemp, the congratulations of the city council and board of control were extended by Ald. W. A. Carrick, who said he had attended service in the original St. Andrew's and was able to recall the memory of many familiar figures in the days when that church was still in use.

Much Congratulation

Letters of congratulation and good wishes were received from Archbishop McNeil of the Roman Catholic church and from the congregation of Cooke's Presbyterian church.

The congratulations and good wishes of the United Church of Canada were extended in an address by the moderator, Rev. W. T. Gunn, D.D., who told of having formed the habit many years ago of saying "a little bit prayer" for St Andrew's whenever he chanced to pass the church, struggling on right in the heart of the downtown section of the city.

In extending the congratulations of the Church of England, Right Rev. J. F. Sweeny, lord bishop of Toronto diocese, referred to St. Andrew's as a church of strength, and said that the observance of the 100th anniversary of a church in Canada means more to the people here than the observance of a 500th anniversary in the old country does to the people there.

Other speakers were Rev. J. A. MacGillivray, D.D., moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in 1926; Rev. J. R. P. Sclater, D.D., of St. Andrew's United church, another branch of the original St. Andrew's Presbyterian church; Rev. D. R. Drummond, D.D., of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Hamilton, and Rev. Dr. Thomas Eakin, former minister of St. Andrew's church, who now is principal of Knox College.

Following the close of the meeting, a reception was held in St. Andrew's Institute building.

"It was not until my father had passed away that I realized how much of his life had been given so zealously to the life of the church," he said.

The premier stated he was happy to know that 100 years ago, in the group which organized as St. Andrew's was his mother's father.

Rev. Stuart Parker, minister of St. Andrew's, presided at the meeting, which was attended by an audience which filled the church to capacity and which included members of congregations of Presbyterian and other churches in all parts of the city.

Congratulations and greetings to St. Andrew's congregation from the Ontario government were extended in an address by His Honor W. D. Ross, lieutenant-governor. In the unexpected absence from the city of Mayor Wemp, the congratulations of the city council and board of control were extended by Ald. W. A. Carrick, who said he had attended service in the original St. Andrew's and was able to recall the memory of many familiar figures in the days when that church was still in use.

Much Congratulation

Letters of congratulation and good wishes were received from Archbishop McNeil of the Roman Catholic church and from the congregation of Cooke's Presbyterian church.

The congratulations and good wishes of the United Church of Canada were extended in an address by the moderator, Rev. W. T. Gunn, D.D., who told of having formed the habit many years ago of saying "a little bit prayer" for St Andrew's whenever he chanced to pass the church, struggling on right in the heart of the downtown section of the city.

In extending the congratulations of the Church of England, Right Rev. J. F. Sweeny, lord bishop of Toronto diocese, referred to St. Andrew's as a church of strength, and said that the observance of the 100th anniversary of a church in Canada means more to the people here than the observance of a 500th anniversary in the old country does to the people there.

Other speakers were Rev. J. A. MacGillivray, D.D., moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in 1926; Rev. J. R. P. Sclater, D.D., of St. Andrew's United church, another branch of the original St. Andrew's Presbyterian church; Rev. D. R. Drummond, D.D., of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Hamilton, and Rev. Dr. Thomas Eakin, former minister of St. Andrew's church, who now is principal of Knox College.

Following the close of the meeting, a reception was held in St. Andrew's Institute building.

TABLET IS UNVEILED BY PREMIER KING TO REVERED PARENTS

Old Church Is Crowded to Witness Impressive Ceremony

BIRTHDAY CAKE IS CUT

"St. Andrew's, God bless her!"

The old grey church on King Street was filled last night to her farthest corner. A great congregation was met to remember with thanksgiving the March night in 1830 when St. Andrew's Church was born of faith and loyalty in the hearts of the Scottish people of the little town of York.

Remembering that night 100 years ago, the people of St. Andrew's remembered with thankfulness as great the men and women who through 100 years had given unfaltering loyalty to their church, and received from her their faith.

A commemoration within a commemoration marked the night, one to be long cherished in memory by the people of St. Andrew's Church. The Prime Minister of Canada unveiled during the service a tablet set in the west wall of the church in memory of their father and mother by himself and his sister, Mrs. Janet King Lay.

"O God of Bethel, by whose hand
Thy people still are fed—"

Many hundred voices joined in the Scottish paraphrase as the tablet was unveiled.

Son of His Father.

Following its unveiling, Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King spoke, not as the Prime Minister of Canada, but as the son of his father and the grandson of his grandfather.

"May I say how proud I am to be among a number of those who have met together to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the founding of St. Andrew's, an event of very real significance in the life of the city and of our country. How happy I am, too, to be able to feel that my mother's father was numbered among the few members of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada and citizens of York who met together 100 years ago to establish in this community a church in association with the Church of Scotland," he said.

For Quarter Century.

"And may I express to Dr. Parker, the members of the Session and the congregation the thanks of my sister, Mrs. Lay, and myself for permitting us to place upon the walls of this church the tablet to the memory of our father and mother which it has just been my privilege to unveil.

"During the residence of my father and mother in Toronto, it was with St. Andrew's, Toronto, and its congregation that the association had its relationship for nearly a quarter of a century, as is recorded on the tablet which has just been unveiled.

"As we think of the distinguished and learned and devout men who have filled its pulpit, week in and week out, over the period of a century; of the officers and members who zealously and earnestly have helped to conduct its many activities; of the men and women who, under the inspiration of its ministrations, have entered upon and carried on their several vocations, with more of determination for the right, and more of Christian charity, may we not indeed be proud to feel that the privilege is ours of paying some slight tribute to the part which St. Andrew's has played in the making of our country what it is today."

On the tablet just unveiled, the speaker said, he and his sister had tried to give expression to the continuity of life in the Christian Church. Tracings were there copied from the cross of St. Martin in Iona, the birthplace of the Scottish Church.

"May I say that our thought was to express in some way, however small, on the tablet itself what 100 years ago inspired the thought of establishing in Upper Canada a Church in immediate association with the Church of Scotland. The tracings are there, some of those that are to be found at Iona in Scotland, and which serve to link Christianity in Scotland with Christianity at the place of its birth.

The Right Relationship.

"In all this, it seems to me, we find some indication of the right relationship of Church and State. The Church would have no place but for the world in which it finds itself. It is but one institution, but it should be the central institution of all. Its mission is to breathe upon the others the spirit of life."

Lieutenant-Governor Speaks.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario spoke not only of St. Andrew's great past, but of her living work, at last night's thanksgiving service. Alderman Carrick, representing Mayor Wemp, brought the good wishes of Toronto to St. Andrew's Church.

"I say to you, 'St. Andrew's, God bless her!'"

Rev. Dr. Gunn, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, brought greetings from his Church, and added his own blessing on St. Andrew's.

"I have never," he said, "for many years passed St. Andrew's without, as the Scots have it, 'putting up a little bit prayer' that God would bless St. Andrew's and the work she is doing."

Rev. Dr. MacGillivray, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church; Rev. Dr. Eakin of Knox College; Rev. Dr. Drummond of St. Paul's Church, Hamilton, leaders of Presbyterianism in Canada today, honored the memory of the founders of their faith in the new country, and spoke words of loving recognition of St. Andrew's work in Toronto and in Canada.

The Right Rev. Dr. Sweeny, Bishop of Toronto, spoke of his early memories of St. Andrew's Church, when it really was "New" St. Andrew's, and wished it a happy future, if not as a "United church," then at least as a united congregation.

"Whether daughter, mother, granddaughter or stepniece," Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater of St. Andrew's United Church, Carlton Street, was not sure of the relationship of his church to theirs, but in any case he brought the sincere greetings and good wishes of the congregation of one St. Andrew's to the congregation of the other.

Many Good-Will Messages.

Letters and telegrams of congratulation were read by Rev. Stuart Parker, who presided. They included greetings from Most Rev. Neil McNeil, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto; from the Kirk Session of Cooke's Church, and from Rev. Dr. E. D. McLaren of Vancouver.

A reception followed the service. Mrs. R. G. Hector, a member of the congregation of St. Andrew's since her christening in the old church, 83 years ago, cut the century birthday cake of St. Andrew's Church.

ST. ANDREW'S FIGHT FOR 'POPISH' ORGAN TRACED BY MINISTER

CENTENARY CONCLUDES

The first harmonium in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in 1850 piped part of the congregation out of the church. It literally started an uproar. Such "desecration and profanation"—and, worse still, "such an appurtenance of Popery"—was too much for the stern Scottish pioneers of York, who sang their hymns unaccompanied.

The uproar died down for a while as the little harmonium stayed on to replace the tuning-fork for congregational singing—and then, less than nine years later, it broke out afresh: "the bandmaster from the barracks," the first church organist, almost lost his job when the Synod informed the church authorities that "they would have to silence the harmonium as much as they could."

Appeals to Synod.

They silenced it as much as they could and pressed upon the Synod appeal after appeal to let the bandmaster play a little harder—with the result that the authorities and the bandmaster won.

And this is how it came to pass that Dr. Norman Anderson was able to play Mendelssohn's Sonata No. 1, F Minor on a powerful organ as the prelude to services in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church last night.

The story of the first harmonium was told from the pulpit by Rev. Stuart C. Parker, the minister, when the congregation observed the closing celebration of the church's centenary anniversary.

Leader in Battle.

"St. Andrew's was one of the first churches in Canada to fight the battle—and it was a battle—for the use of instrumental music for church worship," he said. No one has regrets now. The liturgy today is acknowledged all the more beautiful for the organ. But the church suffered in the battle. Many left its membership, yet today their descendants may be found in the congregation.

He related how great was the prejudice in Scotland against any of "the appurtenances of Popery" which had been discarded at the Reformation.

"If such was the situation in the Old Country, what could be expected from a few stern and simple immigrants," he said.

"They left the church because they believed a harmonium was a desecration and profanation," he said further. "They were accustomed to singing without music—an impressive thing, sometimes. But, more often than not, the precentor with his tuning-fork was at the third line of the hymn when the congregation joined in."

Rev. Mr. Parker also related how St. Andrew's had been a pioneer in liturgy and architecture for the Presbyterian Church and how it had fought for religious tolerance in Canada. He told how the church always had been of great spiritual as well as material help to its congregation.

A CENTENARY

St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, has attained to the full measure of one hundred years' history and celebrated the anniversary in a manner worthy of its standing and traditions. Sunday morning, the second day of March, marked the opening of the commemorative services when Dr. A. J. MacGillivray of Knox Church, Guelph, ex-Moderator of the General Assembly, preached and by reference to the courageous act of Jeremiah in buying the field of Amathoth, summoned the congregation to a new venture of faith, worthy of their past, and in keeping with the demands of the time. Dr. Drummond of St. Paul's Church, Hamilton, was accorded the privilege of delivering the message in the evening. His was a plea to guard against forgetting God and emphasis upon the contribution made to character by keeping in vivid recollection the mercy and loving kindness of God. "Life is lost by forgetting; life is saved by remembering all the way God has led us." A beautifully prepared order of service for morning and evening with hymns, anthems, and prayers, printed in full, was placed in the hands of the worshipers and contributed greatly to fellowship in the service. Rev. Stuart Parker, M.A., B.D. conducted the services and was assisted in the morning by Rev. Principal Eakin, a former minister, and in the evening by Rev. F. W. Beare, M.A., assistant minister. A special children's service was held in the afternoon.

Monday afternoon State and Church were blended informally when His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and Mrs. Ross were at home to fifteen hundred invited guests including the members of St. Andrew's congregation and friends and the ministers of Toronto Presbytery and their wives. The Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Ross and Mr. Parker received the guests in the State Drawing-room. This was a very happy gathering. According to report the guests ranged from Canada's Premier and his sister, Mrs. Lay, to one faithful charlady who had telephoned her mistress that she could not come on Monday as she was "going to tea at Government House".

Monday evening was marked by the great rally of the congregation with its friends. As on Sunday, the church was completely filled. The minister, Mr. Parker, presided and the program consisted of addresses with music by the choir. Distinguished guests were there in the persons of the Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. W. D. Ross, and Rt. Hon. W. L Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada. A special ceremony which marked the occasion was the unveiling of a tablet placed to the memory of John King, M.A., K.C., and his wife, Isabel Grace Mackenzie by their surviving children, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and Mrs. Janet King Lay. His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor brought greetings from the Province; Alderman Carrick represented the City Council of Toronto in the unavoidable absence of the Mayor; Dr. W. T. Gunn, Moderator of the United Church, spoke for that body; and Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeney spoke for the Anglican Church. Dr. A. J. McGillivray, as ex-Moderator of the General Assembly, represented The Presbyterian Church in Canada; Dr. J. R. P. Sclater brought greetings and congratulations from Old St. Andrew's Church, Dr. Thomas Eakin, Principal of Knox College and a former minister, delivered an address. The principal address of the evening, however, was that of the Premier, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. This, we are happy to say, appears in this number. A social gathering was a fitting conclusion to this splendid meeting. Honor was paid at this adjourned gathering to two worthy people, the oldest members of the congregation, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hector of Toronto. To Mrs. Hector fell the honor of cutting the centenary birthday cake. This was a very artistic production which constituted the support of a replica of the first St. Andrew's Church.

In brief, the history of St. Andrew's begins with a meeting of Scotch folk early in 1830, who proposed to seek organization as a Presbyterian congregation in connection with The Church of Scotland. The first church was erected in that year but was not completed, so far as the spire was concerned, until 1850. In 1875 the present structure, often spoken of as the Cathedral of Presbyterianism in Canada, was erected, during the pastorate of Rev. Dr. D. J. Macdonell.

Many notable citizens and outstanding ministers have their names associated with the worship and the activities of St. Andrew's Church, among the former being William Lyon Mackenzie, grandfather of the Premier; H.R.H. the Princess Louise with her husband, the Governor- General, the Marquis of Lorne; the Duke of Connaught; and Lieutenant-Governors of Ontario. Premier King and Mr. Edward W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, as boys, sat with their parents in the family pews. The present Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and his family occupy a pew in St. Andrew's.

Since the church was established at the corner of King and Simcoe Streets, the ministers have been Rev. Dr. D. J. Macdonnell, Rev. Dr. W. J. McCaughan, Rev. Dr. Armstrong Black, Rev. T. Crawford Brown, and Rev. Principal Eakin. Rev. Stuart Parker has been minister since 1923. His work has been fruitful and his service to the Church at large in the time of crisis was most helpful.

St. Andrew's has won some renown for having been one of the first congregations to battle for introduction of the organ to the service of the sanctuary.

Special noon-day services were held during the week on Tuesday and Wednesday. On the former day, Rev. W. Barclay, M.A., B.D., of Central Church, Hamilton, preached, and, on the latter, Rev. Jos. Wasson of Calvin Church, Toronto.

On the morning of the second Sunday the Communion service was held.

At the evening gathering on Monday many congratulatory mesages from near and far were received.

Dr. MacGillivray in his address on Monday evening referred to the generous consideration given the Church at large by St. Andrew's congregation in placing at its disposal the Institute for church offices and meetings of every character until organization of the continuing Presbyterian Church was complete. This service, as Dr. MacGillivray said, was without stint and without charge.

The first General Assembly following the disruption was held in St. Andrew's.

Mr. Parker in his sermon on the evening of the second Sabbath dwelt upon the history and accomplishment of the congregation during the years. A complete history of the congregation is in the course of preparation by Mr. Parker.

A few inspiring words from speakers may be cited:

Church services have a value beyond computation—His Hon. Lieut.-Gov. Ross.

Associations make life and memory is the chiefest factor for good—Dr. Drummond.

St. Andrew's has mercifully been delivered from that pestilential nuisance, the theological crank—Principal Eakin.

We too may have that unwavering confidence which looks beyond apparent distress to a great and glorious future—Dr. MacGillivray.

I have not told the complete story of the leadership—always upward—which this old congregation has exercised in this land during its long history. I have been content with a few great things.

I want the memory and the contemplation of them to have a double effect on all who worship here. I want them to make us all glad to belong to a congregation which, in the past, has been of such definite service. But I want them also to make all of us resolved that, in the days to come, we shall be true to that tradition of progress and initiative in all that is good; and steadfast in the tradition that has been handed down to us. If we do this we shall not only serve—all must serve or die—but, by God's grace, shall win greatness by serving more than any other.—Rev. Stuart Parker.

God planted fear in the soul as truly as he planted hope or courage. It is upon just occasion a kind of bell or gong which rings the mind into quick life and avoidance upon the approach of danger. It is the soul's signal for rallying.—Beecher.

THE CHURCH

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, C.M.G., M.A., LL.D.

An address delivered at the celebration of the centenary of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto

May I express to Dr. Parker, the members of the Session and the congregation the thanks of my sister, Mrs. Lay, and myself for permitting us to place upon the walls of this church the tablet to the memory of our father and mother, which it has just been my privilege to unveil.

With the home life of our family, from its beginnings, I can recall no association closer or more continuous than that of the church; I can think of no friendships of our parents greater than those which, from time to time, were shared with its ministers and members of their families and, of the memories which to-day are most cherished, the larger number, one way or another, have some relationship to the particular church of which as a family we were adherents or members

While we lived in Berlin, (now Kitchener), Ontario, that association was with St. Andrew's Church, Berlin, for a period of twenty or more years. During the residence of my father and mother in Toronto, it was with St. Andrew's, Toronto, and its congregation that the association had its relationship for nearly a quarter of a century, as is recorded on the tablet which has just been unveiled, though so far as a family relationship is concerned, the association with this church may be traced to the foundation of the congregation itself.

It was not until the time of my father's death that I began fully to appreciate how completely the life of organized society and of the nation depends upon a few time-honored institutions, and upon the loyalty with which the highest and best traditions of these institutions are maintained by the individuals who accord them support..

In my father's case, these were the institutions of the Home, which he and my mother ever made their first care and consideration, the Church, the institutions of learning, and the learned professions. The last three mentioned institutions were represented by an association with St. Andrew's Berlin, to the management of the affairs of which he gave much attention, and St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, of which, in the latter part of his life, he was an elder; the University of Toronto, from which he graduated prior to Confederation, and of the Senate of which he was a member for thirty-seven consecutive years; and the legal profession, of which he was a member before the time of his marriage, and which, during the period of his residence in Toronto, led to an association of twenty-one years with Osgoode Hall as one of the lecturers of the Law Society. With journalism and with politics he had a life-long association, but it was more intermittent and fugitive in character.

What I realized when my father was gone, as I had never realized before, was the extent to which his life had been given to the institutions of the Home, the Church, the University, and the legal profession and to a continuous effort to promote and to maintain, in the case of each, the highest standards and traditions; also I realized as never before the extent to which the institutions, of which the ones I have mentioned were representative, are of the very foundation of our organized social and national life.

The mention of the Church together with other institutions which support our organized social and national life brings me to the event which is being celebrated this evening, namely, the One Hundredth Anniversary of the founding of St. Andrew's Church. May I say at once how proud I am to be among the number of those who have met together to commemorate this event, which is one of very real significance in the life of this city and of our country. How happy I am, too, to be able to feel that my mother's father was numbered among the few members of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada and citizens of York who met together, one hundred years ago, to establish in this community a Church in association with the Church of Scotland.

It has interested me very much to observe what the records disclose of the interests and professions of those who met together to form the original congregation. Particularly have I been interested in the fact that, among the number, were members of parliament, officers and members of a Highland regiment, and men who, in the early thirties, were prominent in the financial, commercial, and industrial life of this community.

Here are three other time-honored institutions upon the quality and integrity of whose standards so very much depends. Parliament is one of the oldest and most honored of institutions. There can be no privilege, as there can be no responsibility, greater than that of having an immediate association with the making of a nation's laws, their administration, or their enforcement. The defence of one's country, must, it seems to me, be accorded a place of equal honor. This generation need not be reminded of how completely the cause of freedom, liberty, and right had to depend upon those who, in the defence forces of the realm, whether of land or of sea or of the air, were prepared to sacrifice, and, indeed, did sacrifice, in countless numbers, their lives in their country's service. We have only to consider the change that has come in this city between the time at which this church was founded and our own day, to discover the significance, in our organized social and national life, of great financial, commercial, and industrial institutions, and of how much depends upon the standards of integrity and the ideals by which their policies are shaped.

Let me bring together mention of the different institutions of which I have just spoken: the Home, the Church, the institutions of learning, the learned professions, government in its legislative, executive and judicial aspects, the defence forces on land, on the sea, and in the air, and the financial, commercial, and industrial institutions of our land. I might add mention of the agencies which stimulate Art in its many branches, and Literature and Opinion in their different forms of expression. Let me remove from the group, for the moment, the Church and its influence, and ask what the result would be? What, in a word, would our human society be to-day—what would our nation be to-day—were all of the institutions which are, as it were, their supporting columns to be beyond the orbit of the influence of the Church and the inspiration of its teachings?

It is something like this, it seems to me, which we have to bring before our minds in order to get a true picture of the part which St. Andrew's Church has played in the century of its existence in this community, and in our country. As we think of the distinguished and learned and devout men who have filled its pulpit, week in and week out, over the period of a century; of the officers and members who zealously and earnestly have helped to conduct its many activities; of the men and women who, under the inspiration of its ministrations, have entered upon and carried on their several vocations, with more of determination for the right, and more of Christian charity, may we not, indeed, be proud to feel that the privilege is ours of paying some slight tribute to the part which St. Andrew's has played in the making of our country what it is to-day?

If what I have said is true at all, with respect to this church and congregation, in its relation to the life of the community and the nation, what must it mean to human society and to the world to have the Church itself—using that word in the only truly Christian meaning of it, not as pertaining to one or other particular denomination, but to all who uphold Christian teaching—maintained as the central institution of human society? Its mission surely is as broad as the confines of the world itself.

Happily, the sources of its power are not of to-day, or of yesterday, but run back through the centuries to the birth of Christianity itself, to the prophets and inspired writers of ancient times, yes, to the very Fount of Inspiration itself.

It is some such thought as this which my sister and I have striven to give, I will not say expression, but indication, in the tablet which we have placed in this church. In our family plot in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, will be found an exact reproduction, in the matter of proportions and design generally, of the St. Martin s Cross at Iona. This cross was erected while my mother and father were still with us. I need not remind the members of this congregation that the St. Martin's Cross at Iona marks what is alleged to be the birthplace of Christianity in Scotland. In joining with other members of the family in arranging for that memorial, I gave a good deal of study to the symbolism of the St. Martin's Cross, and to the Celtic designs to be found on what remains of the ruins of the early religious edifices at Iona. Some of these have been accurately reproduced on the cross at Mount Pleasant Cemetery through the great care which was given its workmanship by Mr. McIntosh, a member of this congregation. Mr. Alexander, another member of the congregation to whom was entrusted the work of engraving the present tablet, has been kind enough to work into its design sufficent of the symbolism of the cross to link together the two memorials.

May I say that our thought in suggesting that this be done was not alone that of having an association between the memorial to my parents in this church and the memorial which appears over their graves; but rather to express, in some way, however small, on the tablet itself what one hundred years ago inspired the thought of establishing in Upper Canada, a church in immediate association with the Church of Scotland. The tracings are there, some of those that are to be found at Iona in Scotland, and which serve to link Christianity in Scotland with Christianity at the place of its birth.

But I have said that the sources of the power of the Church run back to even earlier days. In the quotation from the paraphrase which has just been sung, which appears upon the tablet, an effort has been made to indicate that other and more ancient source. There are two sources of inspiration which have served mankind through the ages. Coming down to us from the Ancients, two great streams of influence have helped to mould the thought and strengthen the purpose of men, Hellenism and Hebraism, in other words, Culture and Religion. "Greece has written her spirit in books and on tablets of stone which time has spared for our reading." The spirit of the Hebrew is to be found in the writings of the Sacred Books. Its dominant idea is that of a divine law of righteousness, of an all-pervading spiritual existence, and of a great hope which has sustained the world. The idea was, however, too often associated with the thought of a particular race or a particular nation. Under Christian influence and teaching, the national was broadened into the universal, by imparting a divine conception to the whole of life. To individuals Christ spoke of love; to communities He spoke of peace.

In all this, it seems to me, we find some indication of the right relationship of Church and State. The Church would have no place but for the world in which it finds itself. It is but one institution, but it should be the central institution of all. Its mission is to breathe upon the others the spirit of life. The State will find its noblest expression and fulfilment of its highest destiny only as its life approaches in expression the aims and ideals of the noblest and highest individual life. If we would serve our country in the truest and surest way, let us, with the Hebrew, believe that God continues to work through the centuries, and has work for continents as well as men. With the Founder of our faith, let us believe that all life is sacred, and that human life, however shattered and sordid at times it may appear, carries within itself the reflected image of the divine. In this belief, and in this way only, will our country realize its highest destiny.

MISSIONARY AND DEACONESS TRAINING HOME

In the lapse of but a few weeks this splendid institution will close for the season. Of the company of girls in training twelve will graduate. For six of these employment has already been secured. The remaining six, well equipped for the service of the Church, will be available for work in any part of the Dominion. The employment of these graduates so that they may efficiently serve the Church and justify the pains and expense incidental to their training is a matter of imminent concern. There should be places for all of them to perform the distinctive service to which they have been called. As the Church has proceeded upon the assumption that the Missionary and Deaconess Training Home is a necessary part of of her equipment, so it should be assumed that there are places in our congregations for all the graduates of that institution. Ministers who contemplate employing deaconesses should give the matter early consideration and enter into communication with Miss Winifred Ferguson, the Superintendent. In large congregations a capable deaconess will prove one of the most helpful members of the staff of workers. In outlying districts their work has been beyond praise. To the energy of one of our deaconesses we owe the organization of a church, the holding together of the people without a minister, and ultimately the erection of a well equipped edifice and the induction of a minister.

A CENTENARY

St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, has attained to the full measure of one hundred years' history and celebrated the anniversary in a manner worthy of its standing and traditions. Sunday morning, the second day of March, marked the opening of the commemorative services when Dr. A. J. MacGillivray of Knox Church, Guelph, ex-Moderator of the General Assembly, preached and by reference to the courageous act of Jeremiah in buying the field of Amathoth, summoned the congregation to a new venture of faith, worthy of their past, and in keeping with the demands of the time. Dr. Drummond of St. Paul's Church, Hamilton, was accorded the privilege of delivering the message in the evening. His was a plea to guard against forgetting God and emphasis upon the contribution made to character by keeping in vivid recollection the mercy and loving kindness of God. "Life is lost by forgetting; life is saved by remembering all the way God has led us." A beautifully prepared order of service for morning and evening with hymns, anthems, and prayers, printed in full, was placed in the hands of the worshipers and contributed greatly to fellowship in the service. Rev. Stuart Parker, M.A., B.D. conducted the services and was assisted in the morning by Rev. Principal Eakin, a former minister, and in the evening by Rev. F. W. Beare, M.A., assistant minister. A special children's service was held in the afternoon.

Monday afternoon State and Church were blended informally when His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and Mrs. Ross were at home to fifteen hundred invited guests including the members of St. Andrew's congregation and friends and the ministers of Toronto Presbytery and their wives. The Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Ross and Mr. Parker received the guests in the State Drawing-room. This was a very happy gathering. According to report the guests ranged from Canada's Premier and his sister, Mrs. Lay, to one faithful charlady who had telephoned her mistress that she could not come on Monday as she was "going to tea at Government House".

Monday evening was marked by the great rally of the congregation with its friends. As on Sunday, the church was completely filled. The minister, Mr. Parker, presided and the program consisted of addresses with music by the choir. Distinguished guests were there in the persons of the Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. W. D. Ross, and Rt. Hon. W. L Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada. A special ceremony which marked the occasion was the unveiling of a tablet placed to the memory of John King, M.A., K.C., and his wife, Isabel Grace Mackenzie by their surviving children, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and Mrs. Janet King Lay. His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor brought greetings from the Province; Alderman Carrick represented the City Council of Toronto in the unavoidable absence of the Mayor; Dr. W. T. Gunn, Moderator of the United Church, spoke for that body; and Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeney spoke for the Anglican Church. Dr. A. J. McGillivray, as ex-Moderator of the General Assembly, represented The Presbyterian Church in Canada; Dr. J. R. P. Sclater brought greetings and congratulations from Old St. Andrew's Church, Dr. Thomas Eakin, Principal of Knox College and a former minister, delivered an address. The principal address of the evening, however, was that of the Premier, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. This, we are happy to say, appears in this number. A social gathering was a fitting conclusion to this splendid meeting. Honor was paid at this adjourned gathering to two worthy people, the oldest members of the congregation, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hector of Toronto. To Mrs. Hector fell the honor of cutting the centenary birthday cake. This was a very artistic production which constituted the support of a replica of the first St. Andrew's Church.

In brief, the history of St. Andrew's begins with a meeting of Scotch folk early in 1830, who proposed to seek organization as a Presbyterian congregation in connection with The Church of Scotland. An address delivered at the celebration of the centenary of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto

May I express to Dr. Parker, the members of the Session and the congregation the thanks of my sister, Mrs. Lay, and myself for permitting us to place upon the walls of this church the tablet to the memory of our father and mother, which it has just been my privilege to unveil.

With the home life of our family, from its beginnings, I can recall no association closer or more continuous than that of the church; I can think of no friendships of our parents greater than those which, from time to time, were shared with its ministers and members of their families and, of the memories which to-day are most cherished, the larger number, one way or another, have some relationship to the particular church of which as a family we were adherents or members

"Greece has written her spirit in books and on tablets of stone which time has spared for our reading." The spirit of the Hebrew is to be found in the writings of the Sacred Books. Its dominant idea is that of a divine law of righteousness, of an all-pervading spiritual existence, and of a great hope which has sustained the world. The idea was, however, too often associated with the thought of a particular race or a particular nation. Under Christian influence and teaching, the national was broadened into the universal, by imparting a divine conception to the whole of life. To individuals Christ spoke of love; to communities He spoke of peace.

In all this, it seems to me, we find some indication of the right relationship of Church and State. The Church would have no place but for the world in which it finds itself. It is but one institution, but it should be the central institution of all. Its mission is to breathe upon the others the spirit of life. The State will find its noblest expression and fulfilment of its highest destiny only as its life approaches in expression the aims and ideals of the noblest and highest individual life. If we would serve our country in the truest and surest way, let us, with the Hebrew, believe that God continues to work through the centuries, and has work for continents as well as men. With the Founder of our faith, let us believe that all life is sacred, and that human life, however shattered and sordid at times it may appear, carries within itself the reflected image of the divine. In this belief, and in this way only, will our country realize its highest destiny.

MISSIONARY AND DEACONESS TRAINING HOME

In the lapse of but a few weeks this splendid institution will close for the season. Of the company of girls in training twelve will graduate. For six of these employment has already been secured. The remaining six, well equipped for the service of the Church, will be available for work in any part of the Dominion. The employment of these graduates so that they may efficiently serve the Church and justify the pains and expense incidental to their training is a matter of imminent concern. There should be places for all of them to perform the distinctive service to which they have been called. As the Church has proceeded upon the assumption that the Missionary and Deaconess Training Home is a necessary part of of her equipment, so it should be assumed that there are places in our congregations for all the graduates of that institution. Ministers who contemplate employing deaconesses should give the matter early consideration and enter into communication with Miss Winifred Ferguson, the Superintendent. In large congregations a capable deaconess will prove one of the most helpful members of the staff of workers. In outlying districts their work has been beyond praise. To the energy of one of our deaconesses we owe the organization of a church, the holding together of the people without a minister, and ultimately the erection of a well equipped edifice and the induction of a minister.

A CENTENARY

St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, has attained to the full measure of one hundred years' history and celebrated the anniversary in a manner worthy of its standing and traditions. Sunday morning, the second day of March, marked the opening of the commemorative services when Dr. A. J. MacGillivray of Knox Church, Guelph, ex-Moderator of the General Assembly, preached and by reference to the courageous act of Jeremiah in buying the field of Amathoth, summoned the congregation to a new venture of faith, worthy of their past, and in keeping with the demands of the time. Dr. Drummond of St. Paul's Church, Hamilton, was accorded the privilege of delivering the message in the evening. His was a plea to guard against forgetting God and emphasis upon the contribution made to character by keeping in vivid recollection the mercy and loving kindness of God. "Life is lost by forgetting; life is saved by remembering all the way God has led us." A beautifully prepared order of service for morning and evening with hymns, anthems, and prayers, printed in full, was placed in the hands of the worshipers and contributed greatly to fellowship in the service. Rev. Stuart Parker, M.A., B.D. conducted the services and was assisted in the morning by Rev. Principal Eakin, a former minister, and in the evening by Rev. F. W. Beare, M.A., assistant minister. A special children's service was held in the afternoon.

Monday afternoon State and Church were blended informally when His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and Mrs. Ross were at home to fifteen hundred invited guests including the members of St. Andrew's congregation and friends and the ministers of Toronto Presbytery and their wives. The Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Ross and Mr. Parker received the guests in the State Drawing-room. This was a very happy gathering. According to report the guests ranged from Canada's Premier and his sister, Mrs. Lay, to one faithful charlady who had telephoned her mistress that she could not come on Monday as she was "going to tea at Government House".

Monday evening was marked by the great rally of the congregation with its friends. As on Sunday, the church was completely filled. The minister, Mr. Parker, presided and the program consisted of addresses with music by the choir. Distinguished guests were there in the persons of the Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. W. D. Ross, and Rt. Hon. W. L Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada. A special ceremony which marked the occasion was the unveiling of a tablet placed to the memory of John King, M.A., K.C., and his wife, Isabel Grace Mackenzie by their surviving children, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and Mrs. Janet King Lay. His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor brought greetings from the Province; Alderman Carrick represented the City Council of Toronto in the unavoidable absence of the Mayor; Dr. W. T. Gunn, Moderator of the United Church, spoke for that body; and Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeney spoke for the Anglican Church. Dr. A. J. McGillivray, as ex-Moderator of the General Assembly, represented The Presbyterian Church in Canada; Dr. J. R. P. Sclater brought greetings and congratulations from Old St. Andrew's Church, Dr. Thomas Eakin, Principal of Knox College and a former minister, delivered an address. The principal address of the evening, however, was that of the Premier, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. This, we are happy to say, appears in this number. A social gathering was a fitting conclusion to this splendid meeting. Honor was paid at this adjourned gathering to two worthy people, the oldest members of the congregation, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hector of Toronto. To Mrs. Hector fell the honor of cutting the centenary birthday cake. This was a very artistic production which constituted the support of a replica of the first St. Andrew's Church.

In brief, the history of St. Andrew's begins with a meeting of Scotch folk early in 1830, who proposed to seek organization as a Presbyterian congregation in connection with The Church of Scotland. The first church was erected in that year but was not completed, so far as the spire was concerned, until 1850. In 1875 the present structure, often spoken of as the Cathedral of Presbyterianism in Canada, was erected, during the pastorate of Rev. Dr. D. J. Macdonell.

Many notable citizens and outstanding ministers have their names associated with the worship and the activities of St. Andrew's Church, among the former being William Lyon Mackenzie, grandfather of the Premier; H.R.H. the Princess Louise with her husband, the Governor- General, the Marquis of Lorne; the Duke of Connaught; and Lieutenant-Governors of Ontario. Premier King and Mr. Edward W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, as boys, sat with their parents in the family pews. The present Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and his family occupy a pew in St. Andrew's.

Since the church was established at the corner of King and Simcoe Streets, the ministers have been Rev. Dr. D. J. Macdonnell, Rev. Dr. W. J. McCaughan, Rev. Dr. Armstrong Black, Rev. T. Crawford Brown, and Rev. Principal Eakin. Rev. Stuart Parker has been minister since 1923. His work has been fruitful and his service to the Church at large in the time of crisis was most helpful.

St. Andrew's has won some renown for having been one of the first congregations to battle for introduction of the organ to the service of the sanctuary.

Special noon-day services were held during the week on Tuesday and Wednesday. On the former day, Rev. W. Barclay, M.A., B.D., of Central Church, Hamilton, preached, and, on the latter, Rev. Jos. Wasson of Calvin Church, Toronto.

On the morning of the second Sunday the Communion service was held.

At the evening gathering on Monday many congratulatory mesages from near and far were received.

Dr. MacGillivray in his address on Monday evening referred to the generous consideration given the Church at large by St. Andrew's congregation in placing at its disposal the Institute for church offices and meetings of every character until organization of the continuing Presbyterian Church was complete. This service, as Dr. MacGillivray said, was without stint and without charge.

The first General Assembly following the disruption was held in St. Andrew's.

Mr. Parker in his sermon on the evening of the second Sabbath dwelt upon the history and accomplishment of the congregation during the years. A complete history of the congregation is in the course of preparation by Mr. Parker.

A few inspiring words from speakers may be cited:

Church services have a value beyond computation—His Hon. Lieut.-Gov. Ross.

Associations make life and memory is the chiefest factor for good—Dr. Drummond.

St. Andrew's has mercifully been delivered from that pestilential nuisance, the theological crank—Principal Eakin.

We too may have that unwavering confidence which looks beyond apparent distress to a great and glorious future—Dr. MacGillivray.

I have not told the complete story of the leadership—always upward—which this old congregation has exercised in this land during its long history. I have been content with a few great things.

I want the memory and the contemplation of them to have a double effect on all who worship here. I want them to make us all glad to belong to a congregation which, in the past, has been of such definite service. But I want them also to make all of us resolved that, in the days to come, we shall be true to that tradition of progress and initiative in all that is good; and steadfast in the tradition that has been handed down to us. If we do this we shall not only serve—all must serve or die—but, by God's grace, shall win greatness by serving more than any other.—Rev. Stuart Parker.

God planted fear in the soul as truly as he planted hope or courage. It is upon just occasion a kind of bell or gong which rings the mind into quick life and avoidance upon the approach of danger. It is the soul's signal for rallying.—Beecher.

THE CHURCH

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, C.M.G., M.A., LL.D.

An address delivered at the celebration of the centenary of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto

May I express to Dr. Parker, the members of the Session and the congregation the thanks of my sister, Mrs. Lay, and myself for permitting us to place upon the walls of this church the tablet to the memory of our father and mother, which it has just been my privilege to unveil.

With the home life of our family, from its beginnings, I can recall no association closer or more continuous than that of the church; I can think of no friendships of our parents greater than those which, from time to time, were shared with its ministers and members of their families and, of the memories which to-day are most cherished, the larger number, one way or another, have some relationship to the particular church of which as a family we were adherents or members

While we lived in Berlin, (now Kitchener), Ontario, that association was with St. Andrew's Church, Berlin, for a period of twenty or more years. During the residence of my father and mother in Toronto, it was with St. Andrew's, Toronto, and its congregation that the association had its relationship for nearly a quarter of a century, as is recorded on the tablet which has just been unveiled, though so far as a family relationship is concerned, the association with this church may be traced to the foundation of the congregation itself.

It was not until the time of my father's death that I began fully to appreciate how completely the life of organized society and of the nation depends upon a few time-honored institutions, and upon the loyalty with which the highest and best traditions of these institutions are maintained by the individuals who accord them support..

In my father's case, these were the institutions of the Home, which he and my mother ever made their first care and consideration, the Church, the institutions of learning, and the learned professions. The last three mentioned institutions were represented by an association with St. Andrew's Berlin, to the management of the affairs of which he gave much attention, and St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, of which, in the latter part of his life, he was an elder; the University of Toronto, from which he graduated prior to Confederation, and of the Senate of which he was a member for thirty-seven consecutive years; and the legal profession, of which he was a member before the time of his marriage, and which, during the period of his residence in Toronto, led to an association of

Dear Mrs. Wookey:

The other day I came across an old silk gown of my father's, and his "K.C." coat and vest. I mentioned this to Max, and in replying he suggested that I send them up to you, as you had been so kind in offering at different times to make over little suits for the boys. The "K.C." coat might make one good suit at least. Max thought that the gown might make a light coat for summer wear for himself, for use when lying about the porch.

I expect to be going to Denver in about a fortnight's time. I doubt if there would be a chance for you to do anything with these garments in that little space of time. If, however, there should be, and you would send me a parcel by Dominion Express collect, I should be glad to take it with me when I go.

With the best of wishes for the New Year,

Believe me, dear Mrs. Wookey,

Yours very sincerely,

The Right Hon. MacKenzie King,
OTTAWA.

E - 56 - King, MacDougall.

Dear Sir,

I beg to state that enquiry has been completed in both the Canadian and the United States Postal Services, as regards the ordinary letter containing a Bank Draft for $200.00, posted on the 8th March, by you, for the Right Honourable MacKenzie King, addressed to,

Mrs. D. MacDougall King,
916 Washington St.,
Denver,

but it is regretted that no trace of the article in question can be obtained.

It is probable that the letter was sent out on train 506 via Montreal, since you state it was posted at the Station at 3.30 P.M. This would necessitate its going around by way of Albany, N.Y., connecting with the New York and Chicago train. This would cause a certain amount of delay in reaching its destination, but it does not ordinarily follow that the loss of the letter is accounted for by this fact.

As.....

As you are perhaps aware the absence of provision for the recording of ordinary mail increases the difficulty of having it traced. The enquiry can be conducted only in a general way, with a view of ascertaining if there is any recollection of the article on the part of the persons who handled it, or if the loss may be due to irregular conditions at any point where it would have been handled. Full enquiry in this regard has not disclosed any irregularities, which would serve to explain the disappearance of the letter in question.

Yours truly,

Charlotte Wookey re May

96½ Washington St.
Denver, Colo.
Dec 27th 1924.

To the Right Hon. W. L. M. King.

Dear Mr King

I take much pleasure in thanking you for your card expressing your kind wishes for Christmas & the New Year, and reciprocate them very heartily. I thank you also for your most acceptable and dainty little gift.

It reminded me so much of your dear Mother who in my mind is inseparably connected with all things sweet & dainty

We have had a very anxious time in connection with our dear Arthur. Poor lad, he has had a siege of suffering.

No one could have thought, on Dec 2nd when May received a message from Corona School that Arthur had fallen during recess & his arm broken, that the matter would be so serious —. Having had recommendations to reduce the swelling.

Dr Schrader called may aside before she left. & told her that the fracture was so serious because of its locality, that the arm would have to be opened & the bones wired - its neck broken within half an inch of the shoulder joint. Nothing could be done till the swelling went down, so that an x-ray picture could be taken.

She at once told him if that were the case she must have another opinion, & wish he agreed. During the eve. as we talked this matter over, we felt that if such a serious operation were necessary there must be an older head to take charge of it, & she called up Dr Goldie Jones, in whose care Arthur had been a fallen arch.

She found Dr Jones has been very ill with Grippe & was still confined to bed. Then she called up her own surgeon Dr Brennan, although he is not an Orthopaedist. She laid the matter before him and he promised to go round in the morning & help with the case" as he so tactfully put it till Dr Jones should be on his feet again. It was three or four days before the swelling subsided sufficiently to allow of an x-ray to be taken. Drs. Sherman & Schroder put the arm out in an horizontal position, with weights attached varying from 2 lbs. to 12 lbs. as Arthur could bear them. Meantime fragment x-rays were taken for Dr Jones to study. As soon as he was able to be out he went to the Hospital & decided to put Arthur again under ether & change the position of the arm as the strong spring biceps muscles work together drawing the bones into coming into alignment.

He told the carpenters to work to build a "Balkan frame" much used in the War for leg fractures. The arm was put into a cradle & it was slung at an angle of forty-five degrees vertically. He lay in that till Xmas Eve with 12 lbs weights on.

MEMORANDUM

MR. McGREGOR:

Will Mr. King approve stopping payment of the draft issued by the Bank of Montreal in favour of Mrs. D. Macdougall King?

Mr. Russell, Bank of Montreal, says that stopping payment might result in a little delay in negotiating the draft, should the letter come to hand as a result of the enquiry now being instituted by the Post Office; a duplicate draft could, however, be issued.

The Post Office Department report that there were no developments to-day. A report has not yet been received from Denver; the authorities there are interviewing those concerned, and will consult Mrs. King.

MR. McGREGOR:

re Letter to Mrs. D. Macdougall King

Mr. King's letter to Mrs. King enclosing the draft for $200. was mailed by Perryman on the 3.30 pm train on March 18th.

My recollection is that Mr. King addressed the envelope when at the office in the East Block just before 3 o'clock.

This afternoon I arranged for an immediate investigation to be made by the Post Office Department; I communicated with the office of the District Superintendent of Postal Service (Mr. Maloney, Enquiry Section). In addition, Mr. Atwater, Chief of the Inspection Division of the General Superintendent's Department will co-operate with Mr. Maloney in connection with any telegraphing to United States officials which may be necessary to expedite the enquiry .

4.55 pm. Mr. Maloney reports that they have sent a telegram of enquiry this afternoon to Denver P.O. A reply has not yet been received, but is expected tomorrow morning.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

THE FOREIGN SERVICE
OF THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

AMERICAN CONSULATE GENERAL
Ottawa, July 22, 1940

Mr. W. J. Turnbull,
Prime Minister's Office,
Ottawa.

Dear Sir:

This will refer to our telephone conversation regarding the re-entry into the United States of Mrs. MacDougall King.

It is understood that Mrs. King was born in the West Indies —(?) and lives in Denver, Colorado, and that she entered the United States with her late husband some years ago.

Presumably Mrs. King is still a Canadian citizen but if Mr. King was an American citizen and if she married him prior to September 22, 1922, she would be considered under United States law as an American citizen and could re-enter the United States by producing her husband's American birth certificate or his naturalization papers and a copy of the certificate of marriage performed prior to September 22, 1922.

However, assuming that Mrs. King is still a Canadian citizen she would require a new immigration visa to re-enter the United States. In order to obtain this she would first need a Canadian passport, secured from the Passport Office under the Department of External Affairs, and some additional documentary evidence is required for the visa. If Mrs. King secured her immigration visa subsequent to July 1, 1928 she was given an immigrant identification card and this should be presented in applying for a new immigration visa because it can be used as a substitute for a birth certificate and it would show her legal entry into the United States which need not be confirmed. In the absence of the immigrant identification card the birth certificate would be required if available and it would be necessary to confirm the date and port of entry at which she was legally admitted into the United States.

The

The consular officer would also need some evidence regarding Mrs. King's ability to support herself in the United States, such as a letter from a bank, addressed to the United States consular authorities, stating her financial resources, or a letter from her employer (if employed) in a similar vein. She would also need a medical examination. The Consulates General at Montreal and Toronto are staffed with public health surgeons in a position to give this examination without charge but in Ottawa, where we do not have a public health surgeon, an examination must be secured 1/ from one of the physicians named on the attached list who will
2/ fill out the duplicate form which is also enclosed.

With the Canadian passport and the above evidence Mrs. King can call at this office and secure an immigration visa on which the mechanical work takes about three hours. The visa fee is $10 United States funds or $11.20 Canadian funds and upon entry into the United States it is understood that the immigration authorities will collect the head tax of $8.

It is hoped that the foregoing will answer your inquiry and 3/ an extra copy of this letter is enclosed in the event you wish to transmit it to Mrs. King.

Very truly yours,

Avery F. Peterson
American Consul

Dear Mr.King:

Arthur got as far as Buckhorn, about twenty five miles north of Peterborough, which is the Hall's Bridge post office and his mother and he are stopping at the Windsor Hotel there. The engine of his little cruiser did not go very well and he has been repairing it and I think his mother is quite satisfied to stop at the summer resort during the hot weather.

The night they came Mrs. Gordon and I invited them to Buckhorn Lodge where we had supper and a visit, and the night afterwards we all went to Glen Oaks Hotel on the Mississaga Lake. Mrs. King says that the Doctor used to hunt at Mississaga Lake and she thinks that this is the lake. Of course I do not know as I was not acquainted with him at the time. She says she is enjoying her trip very much.

She picked up the Globe and Mail on the verandah when she was waiting for Mrs. Gordon and myself to get back from a motor trip the night she came when she found the good news that she was the grandmother of a baby born at Rochester.

I trust you will have a little relief from the onerous duties that have devolved upon you and the session looks as though its end is almost in sight.

This is just a line to thank you for your kindness to Mrs. Macdougall King during her recent visit to Arthur. I much regret that, until today, I have not had a chance to send so much as a line of acknowledgment to your kind letter of the 26th of July.

The recent session has been a very strenuous one. In more ways than one, however, it has constituted a record.

Such tissues are nearly always to be found in the nose and throat and very often in the bronchial tubes.

Now, having ascertained why "a cold" takes place, let us next consider some of the chief causes. Three factors—moisture, low temperature and air in motion—enter into the causation of nearly every cold and it is generally necessary for these factors to play upon the system, for a greater or less length of time, in order that they may accomplish their dreaded work. The soles of the feet, especially when damp, are particularly liable to form the portal through which a cold may enter, and the back of the neck, being situated very near to the heat centre, forms another very vital point that needs to be carefully guarded.

Sitting in a draft, going from a warm to a cold room, exposure while perspiring, poorly covered feet, and especially wet feet, may be mentioned as every day causes.

In the consideration of the treatment never was a truer proverb written than "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." It is in endeavors to prevent a cold, however, that so many people go sadly astray. Chest protectors, large mufflers and heavy bed clothing are every day responsible for many coughs. Chest protectors undoubtedly do great good in the right place, but when used where they are not really indicated they may do incalculable harm by causing the wearer, on the least exertion, to break into a perspiration, thereby rendering himself many times more susceptible to a cold than formerly. Better far to replace a chest protector by an extra sole on the back and to wear only such clothing as is required for comfort.

Again, if we are to escape "taking cold," it is necessary that we should pay strict attention to every day hygienic principles and keep our bodies in every particular in a healthy condition. It is hardly necessary to state that the more an individual is "run down" in health and strength the more prone is he to become a victim of any disease and more susceptible particularly to the action of cold.

In conclusion, let me urge the necessity of having "a cold" treated immediately after contracting. In many instances a single consultation with a scientific physician on the day of, or the day after, contracting a cold may mean a complete amelioration of all symptoms in from twenty-four to forty-seven hours, but the longer we put off treatment of a proper kind the more difficult will a recovery prove and the more money will we waste on cod liver oil and patent medicines.

Medical Hints to the Home.

(By D. McDougall King, M. D.)

"Taking Cold."

"Taking cold" is a phrase we hear talked about every day and a condition of which we see examples nearly every day and yet there are very few of us who, when the question is put, could give a satisfactory explanation of the reason an individual "takes cold." In fact this is a condition physicians have argued over for years and it is still doubtful whether the correct theory has been reached.

Every individual's body is controlled by nervous centres, situated in the brain and spinal cord, and each of these centres has its own function in the body to look after. The heat centre, the one of which I wish to speak especially at present, sends out impulses, from its situation in the base of the brain, to the tissues or nutritive processes of the body and heat is thereby produced. In other words, this heat centre regulates the heat in the body by sending out nutritive impulses and the more impulses or stimuli supplied to the tissues the more heat is, in consequence, formed.

Now suppose the body to be in an overheated condition, as the result of exercise, and to be subjected to a draft so that a portion of its surface becomes rapidly cooled. The heat centre continues to send out, in just as great an amount, the impulses of nutritive activity to the tissues, but, in the chilled portion of the body where the blood vessels are contracted as the result of the cold, the impulses are shut out and so some of the other tissues nearer the centre of the body receive an extra supply. But excess of nutritive activity constitutes what is known as inflammation and this excess of activity or inflammation is most likely to take place in tissues which have been subjected to a previous inflammation or are at the time suffering from a chronic inflammation.

MAKING MEN AND WOMEN

feel his responsibility for continuing the work, perfecting himself in subject matter and in theory.

Principal White referred to the duty of the teacher to pay attention to the moral nature of the children under his care. He censured the colored supplements published in the newspapers in the city and elsewhere. These supplements, he said, were hurtful to the children in many ways, and the association should express its disapproval of their continuance.

Following the president's address, Mr. J. C. Welch's class gave a couple of choruses in most commendable style.

Liberty and Schools.

"The Relation of the Public Library to the Schools" was the subject of an interesting paper given by Mr. Lawrence J. Burpee, librarian of the Public Library. He commented on the facilities for self-education that the library offered in every possible field, from carpentering to metaphysics, but said the public school boys and girls would not profit by this if they used it as a playground. He was of the opinion that the library committee would allow the school pupils to use as many books as they wanted, on the understanding that they should be returned if required at any time.

He showed how the library officials and teachers could co-operate, and said that suggestions from the latter would be acceptable. An additional $2,000 had been voted for the purchase of books, and with some of this volumes specially adapted to supplementary reading in the Ottawa Schools would be purchased.

In the new Library there was a circulating department, a reference department, and a children's department. He then went on to describe the building, the reading room etc. and claimed that the staff employed is hardly large enough. Among the 10,000 odd books a fair proportion are for children, consisting of light fiction, fairy books, illustrated works on history and geography, books of travel, works of industry and invention etc. These books were there for the use of the children and he asked the co-operation of the teachers in getting them into their hands.

For boys and girls in the upper classes of all the schools, the whole resources of the Library are available. He suggested that it might be a good idea for the teachers to bring their classes to the library on certain days, of course one class at a time.

The paper was listened to with much interest and discussed by many.

A brief discussion followed Mr. Burpee's paper and was led by Miss O'Meara and Mr. W. Hardy. Mr. Hardy suggested the appointment of a library committee by the association. Dr. Glashan also spoke on the possibilities for good which the library now presented to the teachers and scholars.

Dr. King's Paper.

This afternoon Dr. D. M. King read a paper on "Medical Inspection of the Schools." Inspection is a suggestion he made to the public school trustees some time ago regarding which there has been some discussion. "Medical inspection is not a fad," said the doctor. "It is an institution of twenty-five years' standing in many of the continental cities and during the last ten years has been adopted by the most representative cities of the United States. Its value has been shown, for example in Boston; during one year of the inspector's work 17,449 pupils were at various times refused admission to the schools and out of this number 468 were suffering from acutely infectious diseases.

"In Canada the law forces a child to attend school but makes no proper provision for its protection against contagious disease. To the teacher is left the responsibility of sending a child home and in the majority of instances, should she be able to detect an infectious disease, which is highly improbable, and send the child home, she will imperil herself with unfair criticism on the part of the parents.

"Again the Canadian law is so indefinite in its discrimination of healthy and unhealthy children that it is possible for the healthy child to be kept from seeing the inside of a school house door while the hectic tubercular may educate himself for the grave and open the portal of disease to many a fellow pupil.

"The city health officer, with the work he has already in hand, could not be expected to undertake the medical inspection of school children, in the way the work should be performed and further the most incipient causes of infection are the case of which the medical health officer, or in fact any other physician, never hears.

"The plan to eradicate the above mentioned difficulties is based on the scheme followed out with great success in the city of Boston. Five physicians, on a salary of $300.00 each should be appointed to make daily visitations to the schools of their district. At each school any suspects picked out by the teacher should be carefully examined and sent home if found in a condition dangerous to the other pupils."

Dr. King went on to give the details of his plan such as regular visits to schools, and keeping records on cards, and concluded, "Thus, each child's physical and mental record will be on file. The teacher will know whether her pupil is mentally incapable or lazy. The drill master will know what children require a special physical exercise and the parents will know whether to chastise their children or put them in the hands of their family physician."

School Hygiene.

Dr. Law in a valuable paper on "Hygiene in the Schools," claimed special importance for his subject, as one-fifth of the population of the country is in the schools and at a time of life when great attention to health is necessary. He laid special stress on the selection of a school site with plenty of play ground and the attention to providing room and air space in the building, overcrowding being avoided. Good light is necessary and should be from left to right. Heating and ventilation are of great importance. For the larger schools steam and hot water are generally advised and for the smaller schools hot air. A temperature of 65 to 68 degrees should be maintained and an adequate change of air provided. The doctor recommended automatic flushing for closets. Chairs and desks should be accommodated to the size of the pupil and the teacher should be competent to make this most of all conditions. Children not in good health should not be kept in the school and eyesight and digestion require special attention.

Greatest Work of the Educator, Says Principal White.

OTTAWA TEACHERS' CONVENTION

Dr. White Condemns the Comic Supplement—Librarian Burpee on use of Library—Medical Inspection of Pupils by Dr. King.

With a large and representative attendance, the annual meeting of the City of Ottawa Teachers' Association was opened in the Normal school hall this morning and will conclude tomorrow. The president, Principal White of the Normal school presided.

Before the president's address several matters of business were disposed of. A vote of thanks was passed to the city council for granting the request for representation on the public library board. It was decided to continue the practice of several years ago of sending delegates annually to the meetings of the Provincial Association in Toronto.

Principal White in his address discussed the mutual relations of training schools and teachers. There were two opposite points of view in regard to the function of training schools. One view regarded the young teacher as serving an apprenticeship in these schools and being turned out a finished teacher, able to take his or her place among the oldest and most experienced teachers. The other view of the training school was that it was a place where the student received an intelligent conception of teaching and where enough practical teaching was given to see how the theory of teaching was to be applied but which did not turn out [illegible] The function of educational teachers. The [illegible] cation was to give an intelligent idea of the principles of teaching and the practical work should be directed to make this evident to the teacher.

The academic side of the teacher's training had been placed on a much higher plane than formerly, but whether high enough remained to be seen. The academic term was short and should be utilized to the best advantage. The power of initiative which the teacher of a school has to exercise and the responsibility for the mental development of the scholar were very great.

Many teachers judged their work by the success of their scholars in examinations and not by the turning out of men and women. If teachers set before them the failure or success of the individual without reflecting on the reason for failure or success and not make any use of the principles underlying education, the practical side of the work will overshadow the theory. When a certificate was granted a teacher for life, a teacher did not always "History should be assisted by its co-relation with literature, in the historical plays of Shakespeare and the poems of Tennyson. Take for example, "Revenge," "The Burial of Wellington," "Defence of Lucknow," "Epitaph of Gordon," some of which are much better worth memorizing than some that are so set for this year's entrance pupils.

Mr. F. C. Perney, in the discussion, said in part: "It is true, what has often been said, 'History was never better taught than since we have had such an abominable text book.' But as other studies may be made to assist history, so history should be made to assist other. The story of trial by combat is suggested by 'The Rev. Champion sfood,' in The Deserted Village; feudal times are easily taken from 'My Castles are my King's alone' in Marmion. Carlyle will find sympathisers in his radical assertion, 'History is not only the fittest by the only study, for it includes all others.'"

Mr. J. C. Spence, B.A., followed with pertinent remarks to the effect that history should be taught thoroughly, on account of the effect it has on the minds and lives of pupils, who are stirred to emulation of the great good characters whose lives should be introduced by their biographies.

Mr. Robert Stothers, B.A., referred to the aptness of Mr. Putman's application of the study of history to citizenship, as the model school headmaster is a member of the city council.

Nature of Humor.

The evening session was all taken up with the lecture by Mr. S. W. Dyde, D.Sc., LL.D., professor of Mental Philosophy of Queen's University, Kingston, on "The Nature of Humor."

The hall was crowded again, and a rare treat was furnished by the professor, who was warmly complimented by his two former professors, Dr. John Thorburn, M.A., and John MacMillan, in the vote of thanks. Dr. Dyde defined humor, and gave numerous examples from Scott and Shakespeare.

This morning the teachers transacted business, heard Dr. Glashan on "Music in the Schools"; Dr. Dyde on "Literature in Public Schools," the discussion being taken up by Miss Sproule and Mr. R. J. Brown; and Mr. A. H. McDougall, B.A., was heard on "Elementary Practical Geometry," the discussion being taken up by Mr. I. Norris and Mr. C. Medcalf.

DANGEROUS BRIDGE.

Conductor Knocked From His Car on Sussex Street.

Charles Baker a conductor on the Ottawa Electric railway was badly injured about the head and face yesterday afternoon. He was collecting fares on an open car on the Rockliffe line an when crossing Sussex street bridge he swung by a passenger on the footboard, his head coming in contact with one of the iron girders on the bridge. He was knocked to the ground and afterwards carried in a semi-conscious condition into the fire station nearby.

Dr. King was called and found the man suffering from a nasty cut on the head and right cheek. The wounds were dressed and he was taken to his home on Gloucester street. It is not thought the injuries will prove serious. The accident happened about two o'clock in the afternoon.

At the teachers' convention last night Dr. D. M. King urged medical inspection in the schools suggesting the appointment of physicians to watch over the physical welfare of the children.

A MEDICAL INSPECTION.

For Protection of School Children.

URGED BY DR. KING.

Prof. Dyde of Queen's Addresses Teachers' Convention.

The Ottawa teachers yesterday afternoon continued their very interesting beneficial annual convention with papers and live discussions upon school subjects.

Dr. D. M. King came forward with an address upon Medical Inspection of the Schools, repeating more fully the arguments he urged recently before the board of public school trustees.

The doctor outlined a plan for Ottawa suggesting that the work of inspection be divided among five physicians at a salary of $300 per year each. These would advise on suspected cases of disease and in addition make a thorough inspection of healthy children noting predispositions to disease or hereditary weakness. These would be noted on a card that would constitute a guide to parents, teacher, and drill master as to the course to be taken with the pupil.

Sir James Grant addressed the meeting upon the resolutions recently adopted by the convention upon Tuberculosis.

Dr. R. Law spoke upon School Hygiene, advocating adequate ventilation, improvement in the personal hygiene of the children and the prevention of the spread of disease. He also considered that the board of health should co-operate with the schools in securing perfect hygiene. The discussion was taken up by Dr. Sinclair and Mr. Thorne.

Mr. J. H. Putman, principal of the model school, gave an excellent paper upon History that was full of interest to those present. It was discussed by F. C. Perney and J. C. Spence.

The musical performance of the morning was repeated by a continuation class of girls from Glashan school under the direction of Mr. J. C. Welch. They acquitted themselves so creditably that the audience demanded an encore which was given with good effect.

The evening session was devoted to a public lecture by Prof. Dyde of Queen's university, upon the Nature of Humor. The lecture while deep and well thought out was delivered in simple attractive language permeated with a refreshing essence of that of which the lecture itself treated. After dealing closely with his subject Prof. Dyde read with fine elocutionary powers several selections from authors illustrating their characteristic humor.

The lecture was attended by a very large gathering of teachers, normal students and the general public. At the close a cordial vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer on the motion of ex-Principal MacMillan of the Ottawa collegiate and Dr. Thorburn. Principal J. F. White presided.

During the evening Miss Mamie Bahin gave a very sweet rendition of The Rose and the Breeze from the Red Feather. She was enthusiastically encored and responded with a pretty Irish song. Miss Anna McCullough played the accompaniments with good musical ability.

Mr. J. E. Miller gave an excellent tenor solo which elicited an enthusiastic ecore.

SMOKE AND CONSUMPTION.

WE OFTEN hear that smoke increases the consumption rate; that smoky towns have a high consumption rate and vice versa. Oliver, the greatest English authority on trade diseases, says there is ground for this opinion, but that the increase in other forms of lung disease is greater than the increase in consumption.

Ascher, in Germany, infected a group of rabbits with tuberculosis. Half of them were kept in clean air and half in smoky air. One hundred days later all the rabbits kept in smoky air were dead, half those kept in clean air were alive. This half lived a month longer. In another group the animals lived in smoke fifty-two days, and those in pure air, ninety days.

It is pretty certain that consumptives living in a town where the air is smoky die more quickly than do those living where the air is purer. But Oliver says the better sign that the people are being poisoned by smoke is when deaths from pneumonia and bronchitis increase more rapidly than those from consumption; or where, as is often seen now, the consumption death rate decreases and the pneumonia-bronchitis rate increases.

Rubner, the chief health officer in Germany, is of the opinion that the "human lung cannot be exposed to smoke without undergoing some structural alteration. Soot is composed of unburned carbon, in the meshes of which are sulphuric and muriatic acids and tarry matter."

All over Germany it has been observed that, when a town becomes a smoky town, the death rate from pneumonia goes up. Oliver says the proportions between deaths from nontubucular lung disease in smoky towns is 180 to 100; in clear-air towns, 47 to 40, and in country districts, it is 14 to 11.

In smoky Waldenburg the pneumonia-bronchitis rate is 2.93; the consumption rate is 1.77. In the textile town of Wusterwalterstorf (a clear-air town of the same size ten miles away), the rates are 2.23 and 1.83—an increase of 30 per cent in the pneumonia-bronchitis rate over the town ten miles away.

The disproportion between the pneumonia rate and the consumption rate of Pittsburg is even greater. In Chicago the consumption rate is going down, and the pneumonia rate is going up.

Campbell will join her in town, on his ... way to Ottawa.

The marriage of Miss May Wookey, daughter of the late Rev. C. A. Wookey, to Dr. Macdougall King, son of Mr. and Mrs. John King of Ottawa, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother in Collier-st., the Rev. Horace Peckover performing the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her mother, wore her traveling dress of navy blue silk poplin, with hat to match, and carried a shower of roses and lily of the calley. Miss Gladys Wookey was her sister's bridesmaid, and wore a gown of yellow satin veiled with ninon, a black velvet hat and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Mackenzie King, Ottawa, the groom's brother, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. King left almost immediately on a visit to several American cities, and will reside in Ottawa on their return.

Sir Maxwell Aitken, M.P., is at the Windsor, Montreal, from England.

A NOTABLE BOOK OF GREAT LOCAL INTEREST

NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER.
D. Macdougall Kind, M. B.
Fleming H. Revell Co., N. Y., $2.

OF unusual interest to Denverites is this book, as Dr. King was at one time a patient at Phipps Memorial sanitarium. In 1917 his book, "The Battle With Tuberculosis and How to Win It," was published. In midsummer of 1919 he became a victim of progressive muscular atrophy. Tho he successfully fought tuberculosis, the latter affliction warned the slow approach of death. During the time left he began the present volume, with just the reverse of the condition in writing his first book. That was undertaken in a spirit of returning strength and renewed activity. The last volume proceeded with comparative freedom of movement to a crippled and bedridden condition and finally complete paralysis of the greater part of his body. There was no hope of recovery—only the certainty of death.

Tho unable to hold a pen or dictate a word, this important book was completed before the end came on March 18, last. Early in January, Dr. King's brother, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada and prominent Canadian liberal leader, arrived in Denver. Dr. King, whose home was at 966 Washington street, was buried in Toronto.

"Nerves and Personal Power" is a non-technical but thoroly scientific book on self-control. Dr. King's easy conversational style is indeed pleasing and his comparisons are made with familiar objects and phenomena. Everything is quickly and easily understood. In no way is one's faith or belief torn down. On the contrary, the deeply reverent manner in which he approaches scientific questions does much to upbuild one's faith and reinforce belief. He conclusively shows why and where recent medical and scientific research is bringing to light the foundations of faith in Christianity. His principles of psychology as applied to one's conduct and health mean constant self-control in every-day life.

To read this important book is to better understand the wonderful human machine and the brain that directs it, as well as the desires, thoughts and impulses controlling every action. Perhaps the most unusual thought left in the mind of the reader is that it carries a sustained and dominant note of hope, courage and cheer, notwithstanding the author's knowledge of the end so certain and so near.

OUT OF JOINT WITH THE MORAL ORDER.
Andrew W. Archibald, D.D.
The Strafford Co., Boston, $1.50.

Of peculiar significance is this volume of sixteen studies written in popular rather than academic style. In each chapter the author has based his thought on a Biblical incident or phrase, but has added much present moment interest by enlightening rays from literature, history and the classics. He recognizes the moral order of the universe to which he relates man. He believes that from the lawlessness and disorder following the war there must be a return to the fundamentals of Christianity. Tho his chapter headings are unique—for instance "Sour Grapes and Edged Teeth," "Half-Baked People," "Holiday, Workaday, Holy Day," "Some Biblical and April Fools," "Damascus Blades," etc., they cover and surround serious discussions, all of which may be read and re-read with profit. As he truthfully says: "We must return to the orderly and the normal. We must build again from the bottom."

FRACTURED HIS SKULL

Wilfred Jubinville Lies at Point of Death in Water Street Hospital.

Wilfrid Jubinville, of 278 Water street, a stonemason, fell yesterday from a swinging scaffold on the addition in course of erection on the Creighton Street Public school, fractured the base of his skull and received other injuries. He lies in the Water Street hospital and his recovery is problematical.

Jubinville, it appears, was pulling up a swinging trestle on which he was seated when the rope broke and he fell to the ground, a distance of about 16 feet. Besides injuring his skull he had his jaws fractured and received cuts about the face. Dr. McDougall King was called to attend him and had Jubinville sent to the Water Street hospital.

¶ Dr. King was first and foremost a scientist—but he was also deeply reverent in his whole approach to all scientific questions, as well as a strong believer in the reality of spiritual forces and a spiritual world.

The Christian Advocate (N. Y.) says:

"His book is the most profitable reading to those who may be under the affliction of nerves. Its teachings are sound; its philosophy is beneficial; its outlook upon life is optimistic and wholesome; its suggestions are practical and workable."

Some Principles of Psychology as Applied to Conduct and Health

¶ A book on self-control which Doctors may safely recommend: It is non-technical, yet it is scientific. It contains nothing which any man or woman cannot read with complete understanding. Technical terms have been eliminated, and all explanations are made simple and perfectly clear by comparisons with familiar objects and phenomena. The style is chatty and easy, like the informal conversation of an intimate friend.

¶ Dr. King's treatment of his subject is unusual in that it is profoundly reverent. The book is so written as to build up rather than to tear down faith. None can say that its teaching turns the readers from dependence upon the great, unseen Power to a reliance upon their own efforts.

REPETITION

Know Yourself! AN EASILY READ BOOK WHICH EXPLAINS WHAT EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW Be Strong!

Nerves and Personal Power

"A Book of Golden Good Sense"

By DR. D. MACDOUGALL KING

Author of "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It," etc.

The Way to Self-Control

The great "American complaint" responds quickly to a reading of this book

"Dr. King goes to the root of the matter and shows how the character-defects on which functional nervous disorders depend may be remedied. The fundamental attribute of efficient character is self-control. The book is written for the 'average man' and is in the plain terms that he understands; it is also a book that practicing physicians may read with profit."—Journal American Medical Assn.

"Herein we find a discussion of 'the nervous machine,' instincts and emotions, environment and adaptation. It is the author's belief that we can attain success and contentment through self-control and through the intelligent effort to derive all possible good from our surroundings."
—New York Herald.

"Dr. King was first and foremost a scientist—but he was also deeply reverent in his whole approach to all scientific questions, as well as a strong believer in the reality of spiritual forces and a spiritual world. In his new book he succeeds in a remarkable way in relating the new knowledge, so to speak, to the old, which for generations, men have been taught to reverence."—Christian Advocate.

"A work which will live and be of benefit to those who read it. The author goes into various phases of the subject, and has given us a book which is of exceptional value and which may pave the way to a better understanding of those cases of nervous conditions which confront us."
—Western Medical Times.

"The circumstances under which this informing, helpful book was written give its pages a high authority. The author, through personal experience, realized the point of view of a sufferer. Apart altogether from the human value of the book is its scientific. Dr. King assembles much material from philosophy, and other sources having a direct bearing on this subject, which will be important in medico-legal controversies and social service work."
—The Boston Transcript.

"A valuable educational book for the physician to use in the treatment of his neurotic patients. Not only have I found it helpful to myself, but I know of no book on the market which so persuasively pointed the way to self-control."—Dr. Donald C. Balfour, Mayo Clinic (Minn.).

WITH INTRODUCTION BY RT. HON. W. L. MACKENZIE KING. $2.00

The London Times says: "It explains itself. Dr. King starts with the nervous system and the rolés of instinct, emotion, and volition in human activity. To reduce, as he has succeeded in doing, the nerve system to a shape in which it can be shortly stated and easily understood by readers of no special training is a highly creditable achievement. Dr. King knows how to enforce such simple lessons for each day's work with an acuteness and wit that enchant while they convert. A book of golden good sense.

The Homemaker

The Three

Correspondence

Dear Homemaker.—"Stick-in-the-Mud" wishes to know if some one can help her with her extremely nervous condition. I have not felt the same since my illness, and I have tried two simple remedies I heard of before I left England two years ago. A war widow of whom I heard was so bad with her nerves that she consulted a specialist and paid a big fee for the following advice: Take a warm bath every night before retiring, and after being in the warm water five to ten minutes, and while still sitting in the bathtub squeeze a sponge of cold water down the spine twice. This gives a slight shock, but if one is not very weak it has a wonderfully invigorating effect, and, being in the warm water, one reacts quickly. Of course, good food, plenty of sleep, fresh air and rest were also suggested.

The other simple remedy is a wine glass of camomile tea, every morning. Steep the camomile flowers in boiling water and let cool. I make sufficient to fill a quart sealer, using one ounce of the flowers at a time.

I hope to hear that these remedies have proved useful, and thank you, dear Homemaker, and every one else for the cheerful letters and useful hints—which are so much needed by new homemakers. Chick.

"Robin" says: "Some one was inquiring about nerve trouble. I have been afflicted with it for 25 years and have had medical treatment for a long time. I still have it, but find I am much better if I take things quietly, and get out in the fresh air some part of every day when at all possible. To take an hour or even half-hour's rest is good for the trouble. I gave up going to church in the evening, and found this a help, as the crowded church seemed to upset my nerves. I fought against this for some time, as I am a great church woman. I have also kept away from all crowds, and do not go to picture shows. I have very little company, and try to make my work as light as possible. I hope this may help."

Thanks so much to all those who have striven to help "Stick-in-the-Mud." Thanks to "Chick," also for other help, which has been clipped and sent to the correspondent who asked for it.

Dear Homemaker,—I would like to tell "Jeanne" that I plant a row of [illegible] bed, County Kent, but hope some of the neighbors may.

When you have such head noises it is time to see an ear specialist for fear of deafness coming on. Please don't neglect it.

[illegible] you for your kind words

AMONG OURSELVES

TROUBLESOME NERVES AND A BRAVE HEART.

"Whenever I get in a fog and can't see clear, and so tired out I can't eat, and plumb run down, I say to myself: 'Your folks ain't ever flunked yet, and you keep your head up where the Lord put it. He put it up.' Folks see me laugh a lot. I do. I couldn't learn to play on the pianner, though I'm clean crazy about music. I couldn't learn none of the things I yearned for inside. So I said to myself: 'You learn to laugh; laugh hearty.' And somehow it's helped a lot, laughin' has. There's many a time I done it to keep tears back. Ain't nobody but has tears to shed some time or other. But 'tain't no use in keeping a tank of 'em to be tapped at every slip up. When I get so I can't keep mine back any longer I goes to the wood-house and locks the door and has it out. But that's just when I'm tired out and there don't seem nothin' ahead. I tell the Lord about it. Tell Him there ain't nothin' human can help—just Him. And if He don't I'm done for. Ain't ever seen a time yet that when I come right down to it and says, 'Lord, I need you,' that the help ain't handed out. I mean help to take hold again and keep on laughin.'"

"Mrs. Neverthrough" sent this quotation from Kate Langley Bosher for "Stick-in-the-Mud." It was just part of one of "Mrs. Neverthrough's" characteristic letters, in which she said:

"I really started out to write to 'Stick-in-the-Mud,' and you see where I have landed—among the flowers, babies, pork and beans and poetry. That's better than in the mud—but, neighbors, I have been deep in it and still have bits of it clinging to me, but, of course, I am busy brushing it off. I use various brushes. The Homemaker's Page is one of my good brushes. Another one is, 'If you don't get to be the boss of your ailments, they'll boss you,' 'You are not as bad as you have been,' and 'You are living, anyway; so why worry?'

"'Stick-in-the-Mud,' you say you wilt, and 'Muddy-at-Times' says she stammers. I think I could go one better, for I would shake and weep. Perhaps I am to be excused a bit more than you two, for I had an operation, as well as nerve trouble. Well, it was babyish; but what could I do? I pinched myself and called myself down, and all the rest of it. But I am smiling today, and, as the Homemaker said, with a smile of great happiness, keeping a brave heart.

"I don't know whether this will help 'Stick-in-the-Mud' or not, for the saying is so true: 'One man's meat is another's poison.' But it started me on the right track, and did me good: 'Health Through Will Power,' by James J. Walsh, M.D., Ph.D., Sc.D., etc. I trotted to the library on purpose to be sure of the right name, and brought it home with me to read again.

"I found another splendid book, 'Nerves and Personal Power,' by D. MacDougall King, M.B. I have brushed some mud off already with the bit I have read again. So, you see, in trying to help 'Stick-in-the-Mud' I have helped myself. That's the way it always works out."

That's the way it always works out! How very true. That is why the neighbors get so much out of the page. They give so much. And all that they give comes back to them in other forms, the forms that help them most.

"Trust" says, on the same subject: "Lest the cure for nerves suggested by 'Merry May' be found discouraging to some, a leaf out of one's own experience might not be out of place. During some years of nervous depression I found the Bible so full of disturbing thoughts I was tempted not to read it at all. Then, as again and again a favorite verse kept coming to me (namely, Phil. 4:8), God seemed to be saying, 'You cannot stand everything. Why not take what you can assimilate? Just as a wise mother does not attempt to feed her baby with the same food she gives her grown-up sons and daughters, so I, your Heavenly Father, have lots of easily digested and necessary food for my weak and hungry children.'

"So I browsed in the Psalms, and wherever I could find anything that fitted into life helpfully. Now I can read anywhere, and have learned to hand over the disturbing things to the Great Author of the Book to keep for me till the Book of Life is opened.—Rev. 20:12."

"Has any old fellow got mixed with the boys?
If he has, take him out, without making a noise.
Hang the Almanac's cheat and the Catalogue's spite!
Old Time is a bluffer—we're twenty tonight!"

It was University of Toronto class of medicine of 1902 which hurled defiance in Old Father Time's face. The occasion was the first reunion of the class since graduation, twenty years ago, at the King Edward Hotel last night. None of the doctors, who came to the banquet from the length and breadth of the Dominion, felt any older than twenty when all gathered around a common board.

Touching tributes were paid to the members of the class who had passed beyond. Among the classmates so remembered were: Dr. D. M. King, brother of Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King; Dr. W. J. Chambers, Dr. W. S. Dakin, Dr. W. P. James, Dr. D. McBane, Dr. A. D. McEachren, Dr. F. A. Short, Dr. H. J. Sullivan, Dr. W. T. Wallace and Dr. W. D. Young.

Many of the members of the class of 1902 have achieved fame in the medical world. Of the small class, two have become professors in London, England, schools, while many of the members have received appointments from foreign Governments. Dr. O. Klotz is connected with the Rockefeller Foundation in Brazil. Dr. W. R. Michell served as medical officer with the Shackleton Antarctic expedition. Dr. R. H. Mullin was appointed Provincial Health Officer in British Columbia, while Dr. H. E. Roaf was appointed a lecturer in physiology in Guy's Hospital, London, and Dr. A. E. Schell is now Assistant Director of Medical Services in Ottawa.

Among those present at the old-time reunion were: Drs. W. J. Bell, J. E. Davey, A. Fisher, J. J. Fraser, J. A. S. Graham, V. E. Henderson, E. T. Holdge, J. L. Huffman, J. R. Irwin, W. R. Michell, A. Moir, C. H. Montgomery, N. T. MacLaurin, G. W. Ross, L. L. Stauffer, O. C. J. Withrow and A. B. Wright.

Mackenzie King's No. One Fan Rejoices at His Victory

By BETTY CALDWELL
Rocky Mountain News Writer

Denver's most enthusiastic partisan in the election held in Canada Monday was Mrs. MacDougall King of 946 Washington st. No one could have been more pleased at the outcome.

Mrs. King is a sister-in-law and enthusiastic admirer of W. L. Mackenzie King, re-elected prime minister. She and her husband, the late Dr. MacDougall King, came to Denver from Ott wa 30 years ago.

Read King Speech

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. King was enjoying reading an account in a Canadian paper of a campaign speech the prime minister made in Ottawa Friday.

"It's a fine statement of the position of the Liberal Party," Mrs. King said, "and it's delicious how he went for Bracken, the leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, which represents the vested interests in Quebec and Montreal."

Mrs. King said she is glad that her brother-in-law is to be at the peace table, and that she feels he will be a great influence for good.

"He has been misrepresented like all public men, and hated by those who differ with him, just as was President Roosevelt," Mrs. King said. "But whether you agree with his politics or not, he's a grand man, a rare character."

She said that her husband, three years the younger, and his brother were as close to each other as two brothers could be.

Came From Winnipeg

"After my husband's health failed his brother once came all the way from Winnepeg to spend the afternoon of his birthday with him," she said. "Our twin sons were one month old when my husband's health broke, and no human being could have been kinder than Mackenzie was. Since my husband's death 23 years ago, he has been as much a father to the boys as an uncle could be."

Mrs. MacDougall King

Mrs. King last visited Prime Minister King in Ottawa in January, 1944. The last communication she received from him was a message on V-E Day. Monday night, when informed by The Rocky Mountain News of his re-election, she sent a congratulatory telegram.

Brought Up a Liberal

Mrs. King and Prime Minister King have never gotten into any arguments about politics during their more than 40 years of friendship, she said.

"My father, an Englishman, worshipped two men — Oliver Cromwell and Gladstone," she explained, "so of course I was brought up to be a Liberal."

Mrs. King said her mother-in-law told her many stories of the boyish pranks of her husband and his brother but the prime minister, now in his 70s, probably wouldn't like having them recalled.

"Mr. King has been prime minister continuously for 18 years," she said. "He had been leader of the opposition before his election, and the morning he was to be sworn in by the governor general, he sat down and wrote to his brother.

"When he'd been sworn in and crossed the hall to the offices of the prime minister, he took a piece of the official stat'onery and wrote my husband: 'The first act I do as prime minister is ... to you.'"

King Never Married

Mrs. King said that the prime minister keeps a large oil painting of his mother, now dead, on his d sk, and that it is the maid's most important duty to keep filled with flowers a silver vase by the picture.

"You know he has never married," Mrs. King remarked. "He always says that he never found a woman to equal his mother."

A valued possession of Mrs. King is a picture sent by her brother-in-law showing him with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at the Quebec Conference.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Dr. King Suggests a System Medical Inspection.

WHAT IT INVOLVES.

Would Prove Great Advantage in Preventing Disease and Checking Other Irregularities.

A plan for a medical inspection of schools and examination of pupils was submitted to the public school board last evening by Dr. Macdougall King, who recently commenced practice in Ottawa, and who has made a special study of sanitation, etc. Dr. King was given the privilege of addressing the board and submitted his plan in a very concise manner.

"In looking over the statutes and regulations regarding public and high schools, I have been struck by the conspicuous absence of properly organized plans for the preventive treatment of disease, which commonly have their origin during a child's sojourn at the public school. It appears that all unsanitary arrangements, all predisposition to disease, all signs of tuberculosis, anaemia, spinal curvatures, etc., have to be detected by an inspector of whom a medical education has not been required by the act, and who consequently cannot be expected to discover any but the most flagrant of disease producers. It is for these reasons that I beg permission to present to the public school board of Ottawa a scheme which, if adopted, should not only meet with the greatest of popularity, but will bring such encouraging results as to be adopted throughout the province and Dominion.

"The greatest need is obviously the appointment of a medical inspector of public schools, to be chosen from among the general practitioners of the city, the period of appointment and salary to be fixed by the board. The duties of such inspector to be as follows:—

"1—To make a thorough inspection of all public schools and pupils, at least twice a year, paying especial attention to and reporting fully to the board on the following points: (a) Sanitation, cleanliness, ventilation, heating, sewerage, plumbing, water supply, disposal of refuse, etc.; (b), condition of the pupils with special attention to predispositions to tuberculosis, anaemia, rheumatism, spinal curvatures, melancholia or insanity and other chronic conditions, and the existence of defective eye-sight and hearing, decayed teeth, ulcerated mouth, diseased throat, skin diseases, over study, etc.; (c) special attention to such pupils as may be delinquent, with a view to ascertaining the existence of any pathological cause.

"2—To send reports to the parents of children, suffering with any affection, advising them to consult the family physician and have such affection regulated before allowing the child to return to school.

"3—After having once made a complete inspection, to examine all newcomers before they are enrolled on the school lists.

"4—To answer the call from any school to attend: (a) any case of emergency occurring in the school; (b) any case of suspected disease; (c) any condition requiring the advice of a doctor.

"5—Periodically to give a practical address on the subjects above mentioned, to public school teachers, and to preface a list of instructions for their use throughout the year.

"6—To prepare a short, practical and simple list of instructions to the pupils, to be placed in every class room and given to every pupil.

"Such a measure would greatly minimize disease among children attending the public schools, and further, would cut short the crying need of protection to the healthy pupils. Should the board so desire, I shall be pleased to present statistics and methods from representative cities of Great Britain and the United States, that will verify and prove the benefits to be derived from such an institution. In conclusion let me state, that the scheme here outlined is but a rough and ready embodiment of an excellent principle, and, of course, must be subject to much overhauling and revision of details and cannot be made perfect until put into practice; but if anything is to be done in this, one of the greatest needs, definite action should be taken and the sooner taken the better."

On motion the matter was referred to the management committee and Dr. King will be asked to attend when it is discussed.

aspection should not be left to public school boards. It is a subject of provincial concern. No matter how great the necessity is, there are boards that will not do their duty on account of expense. From an economical point of view school medical ispection should be adopted without loss of time. If it were there would be less occasion for hospitals.

Dr. King is to be heard from again on this question, and now that a doctor, and a progressive and able one, too, is Minister of Education, there should be little difficulty in making it compulsory for school boards to provide for medical inspection.

SCHOOL MEDICAL INSPECTION.

Dr. D. Macdougall King's address to the Public school trustees on the subject of medical inspection for the schools is one deserving of more than passing notice.

It is now well established, for instance, that tuberculosis is contagious. The "white plague" is our chief enemy from a health point of view. Societies have been formed to cope with the evil. It seems to us that Dr. King's suggestion is the best that has yet been made.

Under our system of education all classes of children are brought together, and, especially in our cities, diseased members get into the flocks. It is not an uncommon thing to hear a teacher say of some pupil, "Poor thing, she has not long to live."

It is a hackneyed expression, but it is none the less true, that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." On the whole Canadians are a healthy race and in the country districts this inspection is hardly necessary, but even there it would do good. But it is another matter in our cities. They are filling up with mixed races who, according to the government reports, are bringing to our shores all the ills that flesh is heir to.

If the inspection advised were in practice many young lives would be saved, much suffering would be prevented and the health of the whole community would be better.

Of course there will be objectors. There are objectors to every forward movement. It will be said what is to become of children taken from the schools? How are they to be educated? What is the use of educating them for the grave? Send them to farms or to sanitaria where they will be made strong enough to receive education.

If the government discovers cases of disease in flocks and herds it has them slaughtered or put in quarantine. It cannot Oslerize the young, but it could provide proper sanitaria where unfortunate children, removed from school, for some taint of nature in them, might have their bodies made strong and their minds educated.

MEDICAL MEN TO INSPECT PUPILS

Preventive Treatment of Diseases in Children.

DR KING'S PROPOSAL

Would Subject Every Child Entering School to a Rigid Medical Examination.

Special Correspondence of The News.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—Exceptional interest attaches to a suggestion which has been laid before the Ottawa School Board by Dr. Macdougall King. It is now under advisement by that body, and has met with unusual expressions of approval in the local press. Briefly, Dr. King proposes a scheme for a systematic medical inspection of the Public schools, covering not merely the sanitation of the buildings and the application of the rules of hygiene, but the scrutiny of every child for signs of infectious disease, for symptoms of other troubles, and for congenital defects which may impair its efficiency. He advocates preventive treatment of the whole school population.

The statutes and regulations governing Public and High schools, Dr. King has pointed out, make no provision for preventive treatment of the diseases which commonly make their first appearance during a child's sojourn in school. "All unsanitary arrangements," he said, "all predisposition to disease, all signs of tuberculosis, anaemia, spinal curvatures, etc., have to be detected by an inspector of whom a medical education has not been required by the Act, and who consequently cannot be expected to discover any but the most flagrant of disease producers."

or insanity and other chronic conditions, and the existence of defective eyesight and hearing, decayed teeth, adenoid mouth, diseased throat, skin diseases, over-study, etc.; (c) special attention to such pupils as may be delinquent, with a view to ascertaining the existence of any pathological cause.

"3—To send reports to the parents of children suffering with any affection advising them to consult the family physician and have such affection registered before allowing the child to return to school.

"6—To prepare a short, practical and simple list of instructions to the pupils, to be placed in every class room and given to every pupil."

A Success Elsewhere.

The proposal thus clearly outlined is in full accord with the experience and practice of primary schools elsewhere. In London, for example, a highly organized system exists of inspecting children and notifying parents of physical conditions which demand attention and medical attendance. Many cities of continental Europe take similar precautions, and New York maintains an advanced system which includes a staff of school nurses, and follows children to their homes in cases of need. Other American cities have this adjunct to their educational systems.

One feature of Dr. King's scheme is its practical side. The outstanding difficulty of course in any effort at such a system is the danger of trenching upon the field of the family doctor, who might resent treatment of his regular patients by physicians paid by the public. This proposal aims at excluding the medical inspector from treating the children with whom he deals in his official capacity. His duty is to urge the calling in of the family physician; in cases where parents are poor or indisposed to take medical advice, the regular machinery of the outdoor dispensary and the hospital can be used. Practically, he would send patients to, instead of filching them from, the family practitioner.

One more duty might profitably be added to Dr. King's list. Physical training conjoined with military drill is now greatly in favor, and unquestionably the physique of lads is enormously improved by the gymnastic drills and exercises which are in use and which are likely to be introduced still more widely. The value of these would be greatly increased if all were carried on under medical advice. On a boy's entry into the class he might be inspected and the character of the exercise suited for him prescribed; it would rest with the drill-sergeant to do the rest. In this way the risk of occasional cases of over-exertion would be averted, and the beneficial physical effect of military training would be emphasized.

Merits Consideration.

The proposal merits careful consideration in every city of Canada. If it is important to ensure sound mental training to the children of the State, it seems equally essential to give them the best possible chance of health and bodily vigor. The obligation is the stronger because we force the children into buildings where a proportion of them, through ignorance, over-study, the development of latent defects may contract serious physical deformities—round shoulders, curvature of the spine, over-straining of the eyes, the whole list of ailments which result from excessive mental work.

HYGIENE IN CITY SCHOOLS

Paper by Dr. Law Read at the Teachers Convention.

ALD. PUTMAN'S FINE PAPER ON HISTORY.

Discussions Were of Great Value. Dr. Dyde on "The Nature of Humor."

At the teachers' meeting in the Normal school yesterday the afternoon session was better attended than the morning, if possible, and the fare was of a highly meritorious kind, consisting of papers by Dr. McDougal King, on Medical Inspection of Schools; by Dr. R. Law, city health inspector, on School Hygiene, and by Ald. J. H. Putman, B.A., on History. Mr. J. C. Welch's class sang two selections with very fine effect.

Dr. King made a strong plea for medical inspection in the schools of the city. He cited the success of the scheme in Boston, New York, Chicago and other American cities, giving details of the plans followed. He pointed out the benefit to be devired from a medical inspection of school children in preventing the attendance of those infected with contagious diseases which might escape the notice of teachers. By such inspection also each child's physical and mental record could be obtained definitely and kept on file.

In the discussion on the paper Mr. James Thorne took exception to the scheme on the ground that it is not [illegible] especially, where the general health is so good. In American cities, he said, the foreign element is more ignorant than in Canada and foreign children require close inspection. Better use could be made of the necessary appropriation in establishing play grounds which would do more to promote the health of the children.

On school hygiene Dr. Law spoke briefly. He laid particular emphasis on the importance of the sites for schools, which should have plenty of room for playgrounds. Room space and ventilation were also shown to be of great importance.

Sanitary arrangements came in for special mention, and the doctor recommended automatic flushing closets. He touched also upon a phase that came within the scope of the previous speaker's paper, "Medical Inspection," in so much as that sickly pupils should be allowed to attend and their eyesight and digestion of all should be given special attention.

Dr. Sinclair introduced the discussion in a carefully prepared paper. He pointed out that all Ottawa teachers have received either half a year or a full year of special training in school hygiene. He held that if a school physician were appointed he should possess (in addition to his regular equipment as medical expert) a scientific and practical knowledge of children and of the schoolroom conditions which obtain in Ottawa. His opinion was that such medical assistance would be of considerable value.

Paper on History.

Mr. J. H. Putman, B.A., head master of the Model school, read a splendid paper on History. "That it is a fundamental study," he said, "is admitted, for as yet none has proposed to leave it out of the curriculum. It teaches us positive, direct and explicit lessons on duties of citizenship, for it is only as we affect character that we are training citizens.

"The objections to the study are: Too little time; the text book dull, uninteresting and useless; and a dislike for the study and the difficulty in interesting the children in it. The real trouble is that the study is put off till the children are too old, in the third or fourth forms. There is good foundation for the complaint against the textbook. But the course to be followed was away from the textbook.

SUGGESTS AN INSPECTOR

To Guard Against Disease in Schools.

Important Matter Brought Before School Board by D. M. King—Committee Will Deal with the Matter.

D. Macdougall King brought an important matter to the attention of the public school trustees last night. It is practically a suggestion to have a medical inspector at the school. His address is given almost in full and the matter will be dealt with by a committee, when Mr. King will go further into details.

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Public School Board—In looking over the 'Statutes and Regulations regarding Public and High Schools,' I have been struck by the conspicuous absence of properly organized plans for the preventive treatment of diseases, which commonly have their origin during a child's sojourn at the public school.

"The only references, either direct or indirect, to the great work that might be done, by way of the prevention of disease, is found under the following headings: Infectious diseases, page 30 and 95; inspection of schools, 55 and 5; public health act, 95 and 96; temperance, 4 and 49; use of tobacco, 96; ventilation and cleaning, 42, 50, 97 and 98.

It appears from page 56, sect. 4, that all unsanitary arrangements, all predispositions to disease, all signs of tuberculosis, anaemia, spinal curvitures, etc., have to be detected by an inspector of whom a medical education has not been required by the act, and who consequently cannot be expected to discover any but the most flagrant of disease producers.

"It is for these reasons that I beg permission to present to the Public School Board of Ottawa a scheme which, if adopted, should not only meet with the greatest of popularity, but will bring such encouraging results as to be adopted throughout the Province and Dominion.

"The greatest need is obviously the appointment of a medical inspector of public schools, to be chosen from among the general practitioners of the city. The period of appointment and salary to be fixed by the board. The duties of such inspector to be as follows: A. Sanitation—Cleanliness, ventilation, heating, sewerage, plumbing, water supply, disposal of refuse, etc. B. Condition of the pupils, with special attention to predispositions to—Tuberculosis, anaemia, rheumatism, spinal curvitures, melancholia or insanity and other chronic conditions, and the existence of defective eyesight and hearing, decayed teeth, ulcerated mouth, diseased throat, skin diseases, over study, etc. C. Special attention to such pupils as may be delinquent, with a view to ascertaining the existence of any pathological cause.

"2. To send reports to the parents of children suffering with any affection, advising them to consult the family physician and have such affection regulated before allowing the child to return to school.

"3. After having once made a complete inspection, to examine all newcomers before they are enrolled on the school lists.

"4. To answer the call from any school to attend: (a) Any case of emergency occurring in the school; (b) any case of suspected disease; (c) any condition requiring the advise of a doctor.

"5. Periodically to give a practical address on the subjects above mentioned to public school teachers, and to preface a list of instructions for their use throughout the year.

"6. To prepare a short, practical and simple list of instructions to the pupils, to be placed in every class room and given to every pupil.

"Such a measure would greatly minimise disease among children attending the public schools, and further, should cut short the crying need of protecton to the healthy pupils.

"Should the Board so desire, I shall be pleased to present statistics and methods from representative cities of Great Britain and the United States that will verify and prove the benefits to be derived from such an institution.

"In conclusion let me state that the scheme here outlined is but a rough and ready embodiment of an excellent principle, and, of course, must be subject to much overhauling and revision of details and cannot be made perfect until put into practice; but if anything is to be done in this, one of the greatest civic needs, definite action should be taken, and the sooner taken the better.

A Battle of Life With Death

This is the relation of a war in which the armies were numbered by the billions, not millions.

The author of the tale came to Colorado possessed of not much else to aid him in his warfare but the "will to live." His doctors had pronounced the fatal sentence. As he was a physician, they did not hesitate to tell him plain truths about himself. He admitted the diagnosis so far as it went, but believed that they had left out something in their reckoning. He was not going to say die.

It was a hard battle against what appeared to be tremendous odds, but he won, because within him was the hereditary essence of determination and the scientifice advantage of being able to fight back with effect.

In return the victor has written a treatise and guide for others not so well prepared as he was on account of his professional training. The title of the work is, "The Battle With Tuberculosis and How to Win it—A Book for the Patient and His Friends," by D. MacDougall King, M. B.

The title does not tell all of what is contained inside. The book is not gruesome. It is an intensely interesting story, told in plain language, of the struggle that takes place whenever a foothold is gained by the insidious enemy that is ever abroad, watching for opportunity to strike below the armor belt or penetrate a weakened armorplate. It tells us a whole lot of the psychology of micro-organism, perfectly understandable to the layman, and it is a sound treatise on good health and how to maintain it, in addition to informing the unfortunate how best to defend themselves and overcome the foe.

Terms are introduced from the trenches and they do not appear incongruous in telling the incessant struggle that takes place between the two armies, the army of humanity and reconstruction and an army determined on destruction as cruelly planned and as relentlessly carried out as the ruin that was wrought in Flanders and northern France.

In the introductory the author states his reason for the publication: "As a result of many conversations, not a few confidences, and witnessing the little comedies and tragedies by the million and billion. Wherever the rays penetrate the bacilli fall as from a flow of liquid fire.

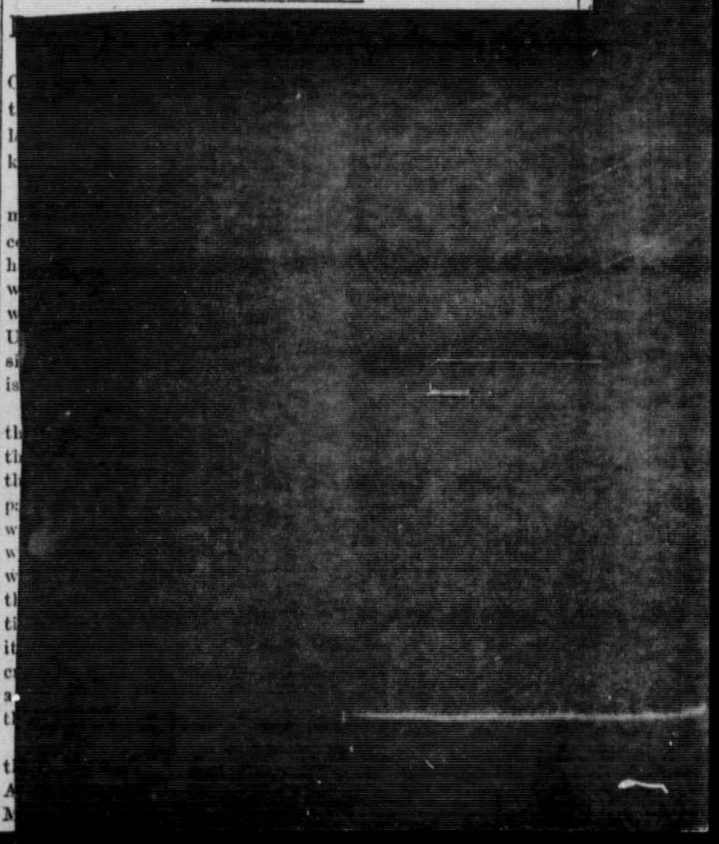

Inside the human body there is present an army of defense. If it is unprepared, careless, indifferent and without reserve strength, the enemy is likely to win. If the army is in proper shape and properly generally the odds are greatly in its favor. This is nature's provision, without which there would be no preservation of the species. In fact, nature has ruled that righteousness ought to win even in this struggle in the microscopic world; but quite often man interferes with nature. The white cell in the blood is the guardian of the body; but the guardian must be properly housed and fed and cared for; otherwise he will be at a disadvantage. The body is fortified like the great series of trench lines on the western front. Every trench or lymph-space is provided with a communication trench, and this network leads back thru well defined lines of communication, from the blockhouse to the trenches, from the latter to the highway, the heart and lungs and other organs. Sentinels are stationed at many points to give warning.

A pin-prick in the finger and the wireless sends for aid to battle the poison germs that gained entrance. In a little while the finger appears red. This means that the defenders have discovered the invasion and have called for assistance, with the result that the blood vessels in the vicinity have dilated in order to allow a much larger army of defense to reach the scene of hostilities. After the battle the dead enemy is found outside in heaps and with it the brave defenders, which accounts for the abscess and pus about the wound.

When the tubercle bacillus gains a foothold the struggle is prolonged and uneven and doubtful often to the last hour of supreme effort by the good angel within. All sorts of strategy have to be resorted to in order to be rid of the evil germ. Quite often it is impossible to drive him out and then resort is had to digging him in, surrounding him with reinforced tissue, walling him in and starving him to death.

But this higher strategy can only be undertaken when the fighting forces are in trim and unimpeded. The human body must be brought into condition and position to permit the white cells to carry on their battle—that began as the world battle began the other year, with them illy prepared and on the defensive—and to this a large part of the work is devoted. Rest for the body, proper food, proper surroundings, proper recreation and environment where the sun may assist are essentials.

The book is of high literary merit and altogether out of the ordinary.

With Tuberculosis and How to Win It—A Book for the Patient and His Friends," by D. MacDougall King, M. R.

Terms are introduced from the trenches and they do not appear incongruous in telling the incessant struggle that takes place between the two armies, the army of humanity and reconstruction and an army determined on destruction as cruelly planned and as relentlessly carried out as the ruin that was wrought in Flanders and northern France.

In the introductory the author states his reason for the publication: "As a result of many conversations, not a few conflicts, and witnessing the little comedies and tragedies that ordinarily are enacted behind the scenes of sanatorium life, the author, a doctor and a patient, has become increasingly convinced that the great number of deaths occur, not because the disease is terribly virulent, for in most cases it is not, but simply because the majority of patients do not understand, or even begin to comprehend, the significance of the reasons underlying the only treatment that will bring success. This book is written in the hope of setting forth in a simple and interesting, but none the less comprehensive and convincing manner, the fundamental scientific facts which help to answer the patient's constant inquiry—Why must I do this?"

Before the defenses can be prepared and before the battle that may come can be waged properly, the enemy must be understood. This enemy is the poison germ. The battle army is made up as in a regular army, too. There are scouts and spies, heavy and light artillery, infantrymen and cavalrymen. Sometimes one battalion attacks and if it is driven off it calls for reinforcements and the defender is attacked from several quarters. Each battalion of germs has its own characteristic and its special ammunition and poison gas. One type of germ is likened to cavalry that charges with sudden shock and startling effect; or, one may see in the violence, the conflagration and destruction of the brief five to nine-day attack of pneumonia, the work of heavy artillery. Infantry attack is represented by the typhoid germ, slow of approach, but determined and full of destructive instinct.

But the one battalion that deserves the "Death's Head" scroll of Prussianism is the tubercle bacillus. It is cruel, and relentless and will wait for a long time to work devastation.

"What irony that men should struggle to slay each other while in their midst there stalks an enemy common alike to man and beast, ever working misery and sorrow and dealing destruction and death," writes Dr. King.

Aye, and when the human armies have left the field, the other army will have its revels. The man to man struggle now going on is preparing the ground for the second war, which will furnish a continuous feast for years to come.

This white plague enemy is extremely hard to destroy. It is impossible to kill him by freezing and he can stand boiling for quite some time. A regiment can be transported on the foot of a houseFly. The germ is everywhere.

The defense!

This most insistent foe of the human kind loves darkness like the human sinner. Sunlight he hates. This is where Colorado comes in, why it has been chosen by science as the battleground wherever possible, why it is being urged upon the authorities today at Washington as the place to save thousands of national defenders who will be run down in the trenches and be fit subjects for the germ enemy to strike at with effect later on.

An Ottawa Doctor's Tragedy.

THE BATTLE OF TUBERCULOSIS AND HOW TO WIN IT. J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia, $1.50 net. By Dr. D. MacDougall King, M.B.

Of Canadian National importance is the publication of the above volume of Dr. MacDougall King, formerly of Ottawa, and now of Denver, Colorado, brother of the Hon. W. Lyon MacKenzie King, former Minister of Labor in the Laurier Cabinet. Dr. King's life has been one of the tragedies of the Canadian medical profession, and he has embodied in the volume just issued the story of how he made the best of that tragedy and was enabled to undertake again his life work after four years' battling with the tubercular germ in his own system.

Dr. King, an able physician, had established for himself an excellent practice in the Capital of the Dominion, and was looking forward hopefully to a useful life to be spent in the service of his fellow-men in practising his profession as a doctor, when he was assailed with tuberculosis of the active variety, which manifested itself after an attack of influenza complicated by double pneumonia. "It spread rapidly to every lobe of the lungs, on both the right and the left side of the chest, and later attacked the larynx or throat. It enforced a complete confinement to bed for over two years, and at times made thought of recovery seem impossible. But now, just four years since the disease made its appearance, it has become so quiescent as to permit of a limited amount of work, and life would seem to hold for the writer the prospect of years of personal happiness and also of service to his fellow-sufferers."

With his wife and two children and his brother, he set out for Denver, Colorado, and the volume contains the story of the plucky fight which Dr. King put up against the dread disease.

The story throughout is a parallel in the life of an individual to what is taking place in the life of nations in Europe. It is a fascinating book, even to the man who is in good health, but to the person who is at all afflicted with tuberculosis or with any lingering disease, the perusal of the book would bring great help and comfort. It is illuminating and educative, and both doctors and patients will find in it a text-book of optimism.

The book is dedicated to Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King and to the doctor's own wife, both of whom have unselfishly devoted themselves to Dr. King and have enabled him in no small way to get back at least some of his lost health. Dr. King in his introduction pays a tribute to the "kindness, encouragement and advice" received during the dark first months of illness from Dr. Roderick Byers, Medical Superintendent of Laurentian Sanatorium, St. Agathe, Quebec.

It is indeed "a book for the patient and his friends."

TUBERCULOSIS IN CANADA.

"The Battle With Tuberculosis, and How to Win It," by D. MacDougall King, M.B. (Lippincott). A subtitle describes this work as "a book for the patient and his friends." During a sojourn of eighteen months as a patient at sanatoria in Canada and the United States, and a residence of two years in a health resort, the writer has had opportunity to meet many sufferers from tuberculosis and to come much nearer their secret thoughts, hopes and misgivings than was ever possible during ten years of medical practice previous to his illness. As a result of many conversations, not a few confidences, and witnessing the little comedies and tragedies that ordinarily are enacted behind the scenes of sanatorium life, he is no longer in doubt as to why tuberculosis, which the scientist knows tends kindly toward arrest, is such a fatal disease. He has become increasingly convinced that the great number of deaths occur, not because the disease is terribly virulent, for in most cases it is not, but simply because the majority of patients do not understand, or even begin to comprehend, the significance of the reasons underlying the only treatment that will bring success.

Fighting Tuberculosis

Publicity is one of the most powerful weapons in the fight against tuberculosis. Scientists are constantly at work devising new modes of treatment, but if the knowledge is confined to the expert few, the enemy has a tremendous advantage. There are certain general principles which can be easily understood by the general public, and they ought to be widely disseminated.

This is the object aimed at by Mr. D. Macdougall King, M.B., in "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win it; a Book for the Patient and His Friends," published by the J. B. Lippincott Company. Mr. King is a son of the late John King, a well-known Toronto barrister, and is a brother of the Hon. Mackenzie King. He is not only a doctor but a patient, so that he can take both points of view. The disease in his case was of the acute variety, and manifested itself after an attack of influenza complicated by double pneumonia. It spread rapidly, enforced a complete confinement to bed for over two years, and at times made recovery seem impossible. Now, four years after the disease made its appearance, it has become so quiescent as to permit of a limited amount of work, with the hope of some years of happiness and service.

Dr. King is a strong advocate of the sanatorium. Its advantage is that all the conditions are shaped for the treatment of the disease, so that in obeying the rules you follow the line of least resistance. At home, for instance, if a visitor arrives you are expected to consider him, to give him your time, not to ask him to sit in a room with the windows open if he does not like it. At the sanatorium somebody else has the unpleasant duty of informing the visitor that he must conform to the rules. At home if a hemorrhage or other serious thing happens a doctor may not be within easy call. At the sanatorium the doctor is ready for any emergency. At home you are regarded as a menace to the health of others. At the sanatorium all this is provided for. There is little chance of one patient reinfecting others. Employes enjoy remarkable security from infection.

As to the kind of sanatorium to choose there is useful advice. Climate, while not negligible, is less important than rest, food, and fresh air. It is foolish to consider a long journey to a health resort, unless the patient intends to stay at least six months, and has $250 outside of his traveling expenses with which to finance his visit. Anxiety about money, about making both ends meet, works against cure.

Cheerful obedience to rules is something the patient owes to himself and to the institution. One of the incidental advantages is that the patient receives an education in the treatment of the disease which may be useful to him and to others.

But there are in the United States one million tuberculosis patients and only 600 sanatoriums, with 35,000 beds. So the vast majority of patients must be treated at home, and the home must be modelled on the plan of a sanatorium. Space will not permit us to repeat the directions In general, they call for sunshine, ample ventilation, exposure to the outside air with ample clothing, a room with washable floors and walls, affording no lodgment for dust. There are instructions as to diet, of which milk and eggs are the staples. The use of special cups for sputum is strongly insisted upon.

Quack medicines are to be avoided. Little use is made of drugs in the treatment of the disease, and there are no cure-alls. Rest, sunshine, fresh air, nourishing food, and regular habits, patiently and carefully observed, are the prime requisites for cure.

Cheerful obedience to rules is something the patient owes to himself and to the institution. One of the incidental advantages is that the patient receives an education in the treatment of the disease which may be useful to him and to others.

But there are in the United States one million tuberculosis patients and only 600 sanatoriums, with 35,000 beds. So the vast majority of patients must be treated at home, and the home must be modelled on the plan of a sanatorium. Space will not permit us to repeat the directions In general, they call for sunshine, ample ventilation, exposure to the outside air with ample clothing, a room with washable floors and walls, affording no lodgment for dust. There are instructions as to diet, of which milk and eggs are the staples. The use of special cups for sputum is strongly insisted upon.

Quack medicines are to be avoided. Little use is made of drugs in the treatment of the disease, and there are no cure-alls. Rest, sunshine, fresh air, nourishing food, and regular habits, patiently and carefully observed, are the prime requisites for cure.

Fighting Tuberculosis

Publicity is one of the most powerful weapons in the fight against tuberculosis. Scientists are constantly at work devising new modes of treatment, but if the knowledge is confined to the expert few, the enemy has a tremendous advantage. There are certain general principles which can be easily understood by the general public, and they ought to be widely disseminated.

This is the object aimed at by Mr. D. Macdougall King, M.B., in "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win it; a Book for the Patient and His Friends," published by the J. B. Lippincott Company. Mr. King is a son of the late John King, a well-known Toronto barrister, and is a brother of the Hon. Mackenzie King. He is not only a doctor but a patient, so that he can take both points of view. The disease in his case was of the acute variety, and manifested itself after an attack of influenza complicated by double pneumonia. It spread rapidly, enforced a complete confinement to bed for over two years, and at times made recovery seem impossible. Now, four years after the disease made its appearance, it has become so quiescent as to permit of a limited amount of work, with the hope of some years of happiness and service.

Dr. King is a strong advocate of the sanatorium. Its advantage is that all the conditions are shaped for the treatment of the disease, so that in obeying the rules you follow the line of least resistance. At home, for instance, if a visitor arrives you are expected to consider him, to give him your time, not to ask him to sit in a room with the windows open if he does not like it. At the sanatorium somebody else has the unpleasant duty of informing the visitor that he must conform to the rules. At home if a hemorrhage or other serious thing happens a doctor may not be within easy call. At the sanatorium the doctor is ready for any emergency. At home you are regarded as a menace to the health of others. At the sanatorium all this is provided for. There is little chance of one patient reinfecting others. Employes enjoy remarkable security from infection.

As to the kind of sanatorium to choose there is useful advice. Climate, while not negligible, is less important than rest, food, and fresh air. It is foolish to consider a long journey to a health resort, unless the patient intends to stay at least six months, and has $250 outside of his traveling expenses with which to finance his visit. Anxiety about money, about making both ends meet, works against cure.

Cheerful obedience to rules is something the patient owes to himself and to the institution. One of the incidental advantages is that the patient receives an education in the treatment of the disease which may be useful to him and to others.

Brother of the Hon. Mackenzie King is Very Ill at Denver

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, who had expected to be the guest at a wedding in Ottawa the other day received such serious news that afternoon concerning the condition of his only brother, Dr. D MacDougall King, that he took the train for Denver (Colo.)instead.

The news that Dr. King's long illness is now expected to terminate fatally has been received in Ottawa with keen regret, where the prime minister's brother practised medicine for six or seven years and where he had a host of friends. His plucky uphill fight for life during the ensuing eight years and the cheerful fortitude with which he faced life during that time have added to the great impression which his personality made while in residence there.

He was married in 1911 to Miss May Wookey, of Toronto, and not much more than a year later his constitution was so weakened through his arduous efforts during a typhoid epidemic that he was taken down by a severe attack of pneumonia. This gave way to the tuberculosis, which he combatted with his usual courage. He removed to Colorado with Mrs. King and their twin sons, Arthur and William Lyon Mackenzie King, jr. His book "The battle with tuberculosis and how to win it," published by Lippincotts, tells this story well. It had a great sale in Canada and the United States. He seemed to have won his battle, but it is thought he resumed his practice too early. Complications set in and there began a gradual decline which, however, did not seem to be the result of tuberculosis. He himself recognized that the end was certain and, in full view of his end, wrote another book not yet published to cheer those similarly troubled.

Sympathy for the prime minister is especially keen because, since the outset of the war, he has lost his father, his mother and one sister, Miss Isabel King. Excepting Dr. King, the only surviving member of the prime minister's family is Mrs. Lay, of Walkerton (Ont.)

KING ANSWERS ONLY BROTHER'S DEATHBED CALL

Premier Hastens to Denver, Col., in Reply to Urgent Summons

END EXPECTED SOON

Dying Physician Writes Two Books Addressed to Tuberculosis Victims

(Staff Correspondence of The Globe.)

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, who had expected to be the guest at a wedding in Ottawa today, received such serious news yesterday afternoon concerning the condition of his only brother, Dr. D. MacDougal King, that he took last night's train for Denver, Colorado.

The news that Dr. King's long illness may soon terminate fatally has been received with keen regret in Ottawa, where the Prime Minister's brother practiced medicine for six or seven years, and where he has a host of friends. His plucky, uphill fight for life during the past eight years, and the cheerful fortitude with which he carried on, have added to the great respect which attached to his personality while he lived here.

Graduate of U. of T.

Dr. King was graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto. The South African war was then in progress, and he went to the front in the Medical Service. While there he contracted enteric fever, which it is believed permanently weakened his constitution and left the way open for a graver malady later. On his return to Canada he came to Ottawa to practice, drawn here mainly because of his brother, as there was a great attachment between the two.

He practiced first in New Edinburgh, and later moved to a more central part of Ottawa. He was married in 1911 to Miss May Wookey of Toronto, and not much more than a year later, his constitution weakened by increasing toil during a typhoid epidemic, he was stricken down by a severe attack of pneumonia. This developed into tuberculosis.

Writes a Book.

He removed to Colorado with Mrs. King and their twin sons, Arthur and William Lyon Mackenzie King, junior, where he wrote his book, "The Battle With Tuberculosis, and How to Win It," published by Lippincotts, which tells the story of his own battle with the dread disease. This book had a great sale in Canada and the United States.

He seemed to have won his battle, but it is thought he resumed his practice too early. Complications set in, and there began a gradual decline, which, however, did not appear to be the result of tuberculosis, but he himself recognized that the end was certain, and in full view of this he wrote another book, as yet unpublished, to cheer those similarly situated.

Sympathy Keen.

Sympathy for the Prime Minister is especially keen here, because, since 1914 he has lost his father, his mother and one sister, Miss Isabel King. Excepting Dr. King, the only surviving member of the Prime Minister's family is Mrs. Lay of Walkerton, Ontario.

The Prime Minister will be away at least ten days.

PREMIER LEAVES FOR COLORADO; PATHETIC VISIT TO BROTHER

Called to Bedside of Dr. King, Who Makes Plucky Fight for Life.

Special to The Star by Staff Correspondent

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The premier left last night for Denver, Colorado, on a somewhat pathetic mission. His brother, Dr. King, who lives there, has long been fighting for his life against the dread scourge of tuberculosis and a year ago, before starting on his western tour, the premier snatched time to pay what he expected would be a farewell visit. Good nursing, however, has brought Dr. King through another year, but his condition is now very serious and the premier, who has been debarred during the past year by the pre-occupation of public duties from visiting Denver, has now seized the first opportunity after the election to hasten to his bedside. Meanwhile colleagues will have time to get in touch with the work awaiting them in their respective departments.

His Condition Uncertain.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 3.—Dr. D. Macdougall King, only brother of Hon. Mackenzie King, is ill in his home here of tuberculosis. His condition is uncertain, physicians say, although he has been subject to a steady decline since he came here three years ago from Ottawa.

The prime minister's only brother, Dr. Dougald Macdougall King, graduated from the University of Toronto in 1903 with the degree of bachelor of medicine and practised his profession in Ottawa. Sometime prior to the war, after an attack of influenza, complicated with double pneumonia, he developed tuberculosis and was obliged to give up his practise and for nearly two years lived in a Sanitarium. Later, with his wife and little children, he took up permanent residence in Colorado. He fought the disease so pluckily and so successfully as to be able to write a book entitled "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It," which found a place in the military hospitals during the war. The volume was inscribed "Gratefully and affectionately dedicated to my wife and to my brother."

DR. D. M. KING

Only brother of Hon. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada. Dr. King is critically ill in Denver. The premier is now on his way to Colorado for what may be the farewell visit.

MR. KING'S RETURN TO SPEED BUSINESS

Premier Home Today or To-morrow.

(By Canadian Press)

With the return of the prime minister, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, from Denver, Colorado, which may take place today or Thursday, it is expected that many matters which have been awaiting his decision will be cleared up. During his absence cabinet council has been meeting frequently, but has been dealing chiefly with routine work, it is understood. There are, however, a number of important matters, including some appointments, which are expected to be dealt with and these are expected to be under review during the week. Cabinet council met yesterday afternoon, but at its close the acting premier, Hon. W. S. Fielding, stated that he had no announcements for the press.

Hon. Mr. King was expected to leave for Ottawa on Sunday last, which would bring him here some time today, but at his office last evening it was not known whether or not he was yet actually on the way.

STOCKMEN IN GOOD CONDITION, IS CLAIM

Farmers in Best Shape Since War, Says Head of War Finance Corporation on Visit Here.

At no time since the ending of the world war has the condition of the live stock and agricultural interests been so good as at present, in the opinion of Eugene Meyer, Jr., chairman of the War Finance corporation who spent yesterday in Denver. The corporation, he said, had distributed $300,000,000 to these interests which is the cause of improved conditions.

Mr. Meyer said that bankers had ceased calling in their loans, which forced live stock men to market their stock before it was fit, and that the big export demand for meat was having a further stimulating effect upon the industry. As to agriculture, he declared that the farmers had readjusted themselves, and with the aid of war finance money were prepared for the coming season.

Mr. Meyer conferred at the Brown Palace hotel yesterday with a number of men identified with the War Finance corporation and received reports of conditions direct from the Colorado committee of the corporation composed of Albert A. Reed, Lou D. Sweet, W. B. Morrison, George P. Trotter of Pueblo and D. T. Stone of Grand Junction.

Mr. Meyer left Washington March 9 and he has visited Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth, and he left last night for Salt Lake, Spokane, Boise, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Albuquerque and Phoenix and several other towns and will visit Minneapolis and some of the Eastern cities on his way to Washington. He is accompanied on this trip of general inspection of conditions by Mrs. Meyer, G. C. Henderson, general counsel of the War Finance corporation; F. B. Harrison, his assistant, and Edward G. Lowry, correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

RETURNS WITH BODY DR. MacDOUGALL KING

Premier Leaves on Journey to Toronto.

(By Canadian Press.)

DENVER, Col., March 21.—Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, premier of Canada, arrived in Denver this morning and attended the funeral services of his brother, Dr. D. MacDougall King. After the services, which were held at 11 o'clock this morning, the body was shipped to Toronto for burial. Premier King left at 2.40 p.m. with the remains. He expects to reach Toronto Thursday, where interment will take place in the family vault.

The premier will travel by way of the Union Pacific to Chicago, where he will transfer to the Grand Trunk for Toronto, arriving at four o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Dr. King died last Saturday after a long illness. Two months ago, when he became critically ill, the premier came to Denver to visit him, remaining several days. Dr. King was regarded as an authority on medicine, and had published several books on medical subjects. He came to Denver several years ago.

Dr. King is survived by his brother, the premier, his widow, Mrs. May King; two sons, Lyon Mackenzie and Arthur, and by a sister, Mrs. H. Lay of Canada.

DEATH OF DR. KING BROTHER OF THE PREMIER

The Premier Left for Denver. The Burial will be in Toronto.

OTTAWA, Mar. 20—The funeral of the late Dr. MacDougall King, brother of Prime Minister King, who died Saturday morning at Denver, Colorado, will take place privately in Toronto on the arrival of the body of the late Dr. King from Denver. This was announced before the departure of the Prime Minister for Denver last night. The burial will take place in the family plot in Toronto.

OTTAWA, Mar. 20—With the Prime Minister called to Denver, by the death of his brother, Dr. MacDougall King there is some conjecture as to the course which will be followed by the Government during his absence. Premier King will be absent from Ottawa this week, and it was expected that this week would see the conclusion of the Debate on the Address. There are, it is stated, some half dozen members most of them belonging to the Progressive party who have announced their intention of participating in the debate. There is also a possibility that one or more of the cabinet ministers may have something to say, but the rank and file of Liberals and Conservatives seem to be about finished. If the Government desires to protract the debate in view of the Premier's absence it might go on until the end of the week, but indications point to its conclusion by Tuesday or wednesday evening.

It seems unlikely that the absence of the Prime Minister will cause delay in introducing the next number on the sessional programme. Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, who will be acting Premier while Mr. King is away, is one of the most experienced Parliamentarians in the House and quite able to carry on proceedings. The end of the fiscal year is approaching rapidly, and estimates must be brought down if the work of the Government is to go on. With but a little more than a week left in March, an interim supply bill providing for one-sixth of the total amount of the estimates seems a foregone conclusion. Last session's votes for supply lapse on March 31.

PREMIER'S BROTHER DIES IN COLORADO

Dr. Macdougall King Had Practice Here Until 1913.

Dr. D. Macdougall King, aged 44, who formerly practiced here, and brother of the Prime Minister, Hon. W, L. Mackenzie King, died at his home in Denver, Colorado, early Saturday morning. The Prime Minister left Saturday evening for Denver to take charge of the body, which will be brought to Toronto for interment in Mount Pleasant cemetery. The funeral which will be private, will probably be held on Friday next, it was announced before the departure of the Prime Minister.

Dr. King gained an international reputation as an authority on tuberculosis, a disease from which he had suffered and cured himself. While able to conquer the germ of tuberculosis he had finally succumbed to the complications brought on by the disease, namely muscular atrophy. Among the medical works, of which he was author, the most widely known are "The battle against tuberculosis and how to win it", and "Nerves and personal power". His treatise on tuberculosis was adopted by the medical clinics of the Department of Soldiers' Re-Establishment and the medical section of the United States Army.

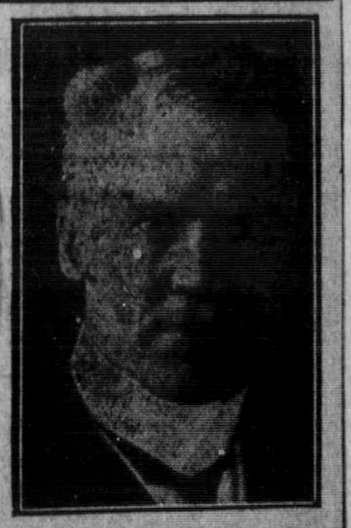

Born in Berlin, Ont., later Kitchener, he received his early education there. He later attended the University of Toronto, where he had nearly completed his course in medicine at the outbreak of the South African War. Enlisting with the Canadian Medical Service, he served throughout the war, returning with the rank of captain. He practised for a few years in Toronto and in Northern Ontario before coming to Ottawa in 1906. He established a practice in New Edinburgh, residing on Charles street. Later he established himself in the Kenniston Apartments, on Elgin street. In 1912 he married Miss May Wookey, of Toronto.

When with the army in South Africa Dr. King contracted enteric fever. Resulting from this he had an attack of pneumonia, which developed into tuberculosis while in Ottawa. Realizing that the climate did not agree with him, he left with his family in 1913 for Denver, Colorado, where he waged a successful battle against this disease. It was from the study of his own ills that he was able to gain the knowledge which has proven so invaluable to the medical world.

While residing in Ottawa, Dr. King was for many years secretary of the local Anti-Tuberculosis Society. He attended MacKay Church. He was a tennis enthusiast, and played cricket.

Dr. King's father was a noted lawyer, Mr. John King, K.C., for a long time lecturer on law at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and a Fenian Raid veteran. He is survived by his wife and two twin sons, Lyon and Arthur, aged nine; his brother, Premier W. L. Mackenzie King, and one sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, of Barrie, Ont.

The late Dr. King was well known in Ottawa and Toronto, having practiced in both cities before his departure for Denver when he became a victim of tuberculosis which, however, he had overcome only to become stricken with muscular atrophy from which death ensued on Saturday. The deceased physician was well known as the author of a widely read book on his battle with tuberculosis and also of "Nerves and Personal Power", another medical work. He was the only brother of the prime minister, whose father, mother and one sister have all died within the last five years. Dr. King's wife and two children, and one sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, Barrie, Ont., are the other surviving relatives.

The prime minister will return to Ottawa following the funeral, which will probably be held on Friday next.

Premier's Brother

DR. D. MACDOUGALL KING, who waged a winning battle against tuberculosis but died of muscular atrophy in Denver, Colorado, in his 44th year.

PREMIER LOSES ONLY BROTHER DR. D. M. KING

Passes Away At Denver After a Lingering Illness, Aged 44 Years.

Dr. D. Macdougall King, aged 44, who formerly practised here, and brother of the Prime Minister, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, died at his home in Denver, Colorado, early Saturday morning. The Prime Minister left Saturday evening for Denver to take charge of the body, which will be brought to Toronto for interment in Mount Pleasant cemetery. The funeral which will be private, will probably be held on Friday next, it was announced before the departure of the Prime Minister.

Dr. King gained an international reputation as an authority on tuberculosis, a disease from which he had suffered and cured himself. While able to conquer the germ of tuberculosis he had finally succumbed to the complications brought on by the disease, namely muscular atrophy. Among the medical works, of which he was author, the most widely known are "The battle against tuberculosis and how to win it", and "Nerves and personal power". His treaty on tuberculosis was adopted by the medical clinics of the Department of Soldiers' Re-Establishment and the medical section of the United States Army.

Born in Berlin, Ont., later Kitchener, he received his early education there. He later attended the University of Toronto, where he had nearly completed his course in medicine at the outbreak of the South African War. Enlisting with the Canadian Medical Service, he served throughout the war, returning with the rank of captain. He practised for a few years in Toronto and in Northern Ontario before coming to Ottawa in 1906. He established a practice in New Edinburgh, residing on Charles street. Later he established himself in the Kenniston Apartments, on Elgin street. In 1912 he married Miss May Wookey, of Toronto.

When with the army in South Africa Dr. King contracted enteric fever. Resulting from this he had an attack of pneumonia, which developed into tuberculosis while in Ottawa. Realizing that the climate did not agree with him, he left with his family in 1913 for Denver, Colorado, where he waged a successful battle against this disease. It was from the study of his own ills that he was able to gain the knowledge which has proven so invaluable to the medical world.

While residing in Ottawa, Dr. King was for many years secretary of the local Anti-Tuberculosis Society. He attended MacKay Church. He was a tennis enthusiast, and played cricket.

Dr. King's father was a noted lawyer, Mr. John King, K.C. for a long time lecturer on law at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and a Fenian Raid veteran. He is survived by his wife and two twin sons, Lyon and Arthur, aged nine; his brother, Premier W. L. Mackenzie King, and one sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, of Barrie, Ont.

DELAY IN HOUSE MAY BE RESULT DR. KING'S DEATH

Premier Expects Be Away Week For Brother's Funeral—Vote Expected Soon.

With the Prime Minister called to Denver by the death of his brother, Dr. MacDougall King, there is some conjecture as to the course which will be followed by the Government during his absence. Mr. Mackenzie King will be absent from Ottawa for a week. It was expected that this week would see the conclusion of the debate on the Address. There are, it is stated, some half dozen members, most of them belonging to the Progressive party, who have announced their intention of participating in the debate. There is also a possibility that one or more of the Cabinet Ministers may have something to say, but the rank and file of the Liberals and Conservatives seem to be about finished. If the Government should desire to protract the debate in view of the Premier's absence, it might go on until the end of the week, but indications point to its conclusion by Tuesday or Wednesday evening.

It seems unlikely that the absence of the Prime Minister will cause delay in introducing the next number on the sessional programme. Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, who will be acting Premier while Mr. King is away, is one of the most experienced Parliamentarians in the House and quite able to carry on proceedings. The end of the fiscal year is approaching rapidly, and estimates must be brought down if the work of the Government is to go on. With but a little more than a week left in March, an interim supply bill providing for one-sixth of the total amount of the estimates seems a foregone conclusion. Last session's votes for supply lapse on March 31.

As soon as the debate on the Address is concluded, the personnel of Parliamentary committees will be announced and committee work will start. Some important matters come before the committees for consideration. As the Prime Minister stated to a delegation recently, the question of the re-establishment of the Canada Wheat Board will be taken up by the committee on agriculture probably immediately after it is constituted. Further re-establishment measures for returned men will come before the committee on pensions and re-establishment. A committee may be formed to look into the unemployment situation and suggest steps for its relief.

DR. MACDOUGALL KING DEAD

BROTHER OF PREMIER

Death Took Place in Denver Sanitarium After Long Fight Against Tuberculosis—Funeral in Toronto.

News was received in Toronto on Saturday by Mrs. C. A. Wookey, 181 Lowther ave., of the death at Denver, Col., of Dr. D. H. MacDougall King, brother of the Prime Minister of Canada, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. Information was also received that the Prime Minister left Ottawa Saturday night with the intention of going to Denver and bringing back his brother's body for burial in Toronto. The funeral will probably be on Friday.

Deceased was born in Kitchener 44 years ago, and was well known both in Ottawa and Toronto, in both of which cities he had practised before moving to Colorado. Deceased's death was due to muscular atrophy and tuberculosis. The infection was caught whilst performing his duties as doctor.

Deceased went to South Africa with the Army Medical Corps during the South African campaign. He graduated from the University of Toronto. During his long fight with tuberculosis he wrote a medical work, "The Battle With Tuberculosis and How to Win it." At the time of his death deceased was an inmate of Colorado Sanitarium. Surviving are his widow, two sons, his brother, Hon. W. L. M. King, and Mrs. H. M. Lay, Barrie, Ont., a sister.

Sympathy for Premier

Canadians, irrespective of politics, will extend sympathy to Hon. Mackenzie King in the death of his only brother, Dr. MacDougal King, at Denver, after a brave 10 years' fight against tuberculosis. Dr. King practiced medicine in Ottawa for several years, where he was recognized in his chosen profession as clever and conscientious. His collapse in 1912 was due to overwork. Following an attack of pneumonia he developed tuberculosis and was forced to seek relief in Colorado.

Dr. King, a true scientist, studied closely his own case, and several years ago published a volume entitled, "The Battle With Tuberculosis and How to Win It." This book has had wide circulation in medical and scientific circles. Dr. King himself believed he had won his fight against the dread disease and returned to private practice. Apparently, though, he took the step too soon.

DR. D. M. KING'S BODY ON WAY TO TORONTO

Prime Minister Accompanying Remains of His Brother

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Denver, Col., March 21.—Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada, arrived in Denver this morning and attended the funeral services of his brother, Dr. D. Macdougall King. After the services, which were held at 11 o'clock this morning, the body was shipped to Toronto for burial. Premier King left at 2.40 p.m. with the remains. He expects to reach Toronto Thursday, where interment will take place in the family plot.

The Premier will travel by way of the Union Pacific to Chicago, where he will transfer to the Grand Trunk for Toronto, arriving at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Dr. King died last Saturday, after a long illness. Two months ago, when he became critically ill, the Premier came to Denver to visit him, remaining several days.

BURIAL TODAY OF DR. D. M. KING

Hon. W. L. M. King Will Arrive With Remains This Afternoon

SERVICE IS PRIVATE

The casket containing the remains of the late Dr. D. Macdougall King, accompanied by his brother, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, will arrive in Toronto from Denver, Colorado, at 4.10 o'clock this afternoon.

Advices received last night from the Premier intimated that it was not the intention to hold any formal funeral services in the city. According to Hon. Mr. King's message, the remains will be taken direct from the train to the family plot in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. There the burial committal service alone will be held, the formal funeral service having taken place at Dr. King's home in Denver. The ceremony at the grave will be conducted by Rev. John Inkster, a lifelong friend of the family of the deceased, and, by request of the Prime Minister, will be strictly private.

THE PREMIER OF CANADA ATTENDS THE LAST RITES OF HIS BROTHER, DR. D. H. M. KING.

DR. D. M. KING BURIED IN THE FAMILY PLOT

For Fourth Time in Five Years Premier King Stands by Grave of Near Relative.

MANY TRIBUTES SENT

Last Sad Rites Performed in Presence of Few Intimate Friends Yesterday.

For the fourth time in the last five years, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, stood beside the graveside of one of his own immediate family. In the presence of a few close friends, he stood with head bowed late yesterday afternoon while the body of his brother, the late Dr. D. MacDougall King, which he had brought from Denver, was laid to rest beside those of his father, mother and one sister, in the family plot at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

A funeral service was held at Dr. D. Macdougall King's late residence at Denver, Colorado, on Tuesday morning. It was conducted by Rev. J. K. Hall, formerly of Canada. The pallbearers were: Dr. Henry Sewall, Dr. G. W. Holden, medical superintendent of the Agnes memorial sanatorium; W. E. Hutton, attorney; Mr. Hugh McLean, attorney; J. F. Welborn, president Colorado Fuel and Iron Company; and Edward T. David, all of Denver. After the service the remains were brought here by train which left Denver at 2.40 p.m. on Tuesday last and arrived at Toronto at 4.10 Thursday.

Relatives Met Premier.

Mrs. H. M. Lay, sister of Dr. King, and her husband, Mr. H. M. Lay, manager of the Bank of Commerce at Barrie, Ont., were at the station to meet Mr. Mackenzie King, who brought back his brother's remains for burial. Mr. Percy Lindsay, cousin of Dr. King, his sister-in-law, Mrs. G. G. S. Lindsay, and her sons, also Dr. Harold and Mr. Robert Wookey, and Miss Gladys Wookey, brothers and sister of Mrs. D. Macdougall King.

Three open cars were required to convey the wreaths and other beautiful floral tributes which accompanied the body from Denver, and awaited the arrival of the remains at the Union station. The prime minister and his sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, preferred not to make mention of the names of friends who had sent floral tributes.

A brief service was conducted at the grave by the Rev. Mr. John Inkster, and Rev. Dr. Thos. Eakin, each of them college friends of the prime minister and life-long friends of both him and his brother. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. A. B. Winchester.

Amongst the floral tributes was a wreath from the class of 1902, faculty of medicine, University of Toronto, of which Dr. King was a member, and from the Nusigma fraternity, of which he was also a member.

Sun Burst Forth.

At the conclusion of the service the sun, which during the ceremony was hidden from view by dark clouds, shone brilliantly upon the flower-laden grave whilst the benediction was being pronounced.

It was ascertained that the Denver physicians who attended the late Dr. King attributed his death to progressive muscular atrophy, which attacked him between two and three years ago. Though stricken with tuberculosis nine years ago, Dr. King recovered sufficiently to write a book "The battle with tuberculosis and how to win it." It was after having resumed his practise of medicine in Denver that progressive muscular atrophy set in, and he was again confined to bed. At this time he commenced the writing of another book, "Nerves and personal power," which he completed only a few weeks before his death; this book is now in the hands of the publishers. A touching incident in connection with Dr. King's death was that a letter was received on the day he died from the publishers of his first book, announcing a new edition.

Class Represented.

Class-mates of Dr. King at Varsity, graduates with him in medicine in 1902, were represented by Dr. V. E. Henderson, Dr. T. M. McLaurin, Dr. Arthur H. Wright, and Dr. O. C. J. Withrow. Accompanying them was Dr. W. B. Thistle.

Others present were Sir Wm. Mulock, N. W. Rowell, K.C., Jos. E. Atkinson, Wellington Hay, leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, W. J. Bragg, M.P.P., Capt. Jack Ramsden, M.P.P., ex-Controller Ramsden, James Pearson, and T. L. Church, M.P.

SIMPLE SERVICES AT LAST RITES

Dr. D. Macdougall King Laid to Rest in Mount Pleasant Cemetery

Impressive in its simplicity was the service held yesterday in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, when Dr. D. Macdougall King, brother of the Prime Minister of Canada, was laid to rest. Rev. John Gibson Inkster, minister of Knox Presbyterian Church, conducted the brief service at the graveside, assisted by Rev. Dr. Thomas Eakin, both of them lifelong friends of the Prime Minister and his brother.

Rev. A. B. Winchester, under whose pastorate the late Dr. King united with the church, pronounced the benediction. Many people from Kitchener, where Dr. King had been a member of the Presbyterian Church, were present at the service. Among other prominent Toronto people present at the funeral were Sir William Mulock, T. L. Church, M.P., and J. H. Spence.

DR. D. M. KING BURIED IN THE FAMILY PLOT

For Fourth Time in Five Years Premier King Stands by Grave of Near Relative.

MANY TRIBUTES SENT

Last Sad Rites Performed in Presence of Few Intimate Friends Yesterday.

For the fourth time in the last five years, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, stood beside the graveside of one of his own immediate family. In the presence of a few close friends, he stood with head bowed late yesterday afternoon while the body of his brother, the late Dr. D. MacDougall King, which he had brought from Denver, was laid to rest beside those of his father, mother and one sister, in the family plot at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

A funeral service was held at Dr. D. Macdougall King's late residence at Denver, Colorado, on Tuesday morning. It was conducted by Rev. J. K. Hall, formerly of Canada. The pallbearers were: Dr. Henry Sewall, Dr. G. W. Holden, medical superintendent of the Agnes memorial sanatorium; W. E. Hutton, attorney; Mr. Hugh McLean, attorney; J. F. Welborn, president Colorado Fuel and Iron Company; and Edward T. David, all of Denver. After the service the remains were brought here by train which left Denver at 2.40 p.m. on Tuesday last and arrived at Toronto at 4.10 Thursday.

Relatives Met Premier.

Mrs. H. M. Lay, sister of Dr. King, and her husband, Mr. H. M. Lay, manager of the Bank of Commerce at Barrie, Ont., were at the station to meet Mr. Mackenzie King, who brought back his brother's remains for burial. Mr. Percy Lindsay, cousin of Dr. King, his sister-in-law, Mrs. G. G. S. Lindsay, and her sons, also Dr. Harold and Mr. Robert Wookey, and Miss Gladys Wookey, brothers and sister of Mrs. D. Macdougall King.

Three open cars were required to convey the wreaths and other beautiful floral tributes which accompanied the body from Denver, and awaited the arrival of the remains at the Union station. The prime minister and his sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, preferred not to make mention of the names of friends who had sent floral tributes.

A brief service was conducted at the grave by the Rev. Mr. John Inkster, and Rev. Dr. Thos. Eakin, each of them college friends of the prime minister and life-long friends of both him and his brother. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. A. B. Winchester.

Amongst the floral tributes was a wreath from the class of 1902, faculty of medicine, University of Toronto, of which Dr. King was a member, and from the Nusigma fraternity, of which he was also a member.

Sun Burst Forth.

At the conclusion of the service the sun, which during the ceremony was hidden from view by dark clouds, shone brilliantly upon the flower-laden grave whilst the benediction was being pronounced.

It was ascertained that the Denver physicians who attended the late Dr. King attributed his death to progressive muscular atrophy, which attacked him between two and three years ago. Though stricken with tuberculosis nine years ago, Dr. King recovered sufficiently to write a book "The battle with tuberculosis and how to win it." It was after having resumed his practise of medicine in Denver that progressive muscular atrophy set in, and he was again confined to bed. At this time he commenced the writing of another book, "Nerves and personal power," which he completed only a few weeks before his death; this book is now in the hands of the publishers. A touching incident in connection with Dr. King's death was that a letter was received on the day he died from the publishers of his first book, announcing a new edition.

Class Represented.

Class-mates of Dr. King at Varsity, graduates with him in medicine in 1902, were represented by Dr. V. E. Henderson, Dr. T. M. McLauren, Dr. Arthur H. Wright, and Dr. O. C. J. Withrow. Accompanying them was Dr. W. B. Thistle.

Others present were Sir Wm. Mulock, N. W. Rowell, K.C., Jos. E. Atkinson, Wellington Hay, leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, W. J. Bragg, M.P.P., Capt. Jack Ramsden, M.P.P., ex-Controller Ramsden, James Pearson, and T. L. Church, M.P.

THE PREMIER OF CANADA ATTENDS THE LAST RITES OF HIS BROTHER, DR. D. H. M. KING.

The Star photographer shows here scenes of the funeral service in Mt. Pleasant cemetery, when Premier King buried his brother beside his mother, father and sister. On the left stands the King monument and on the right is seen the Premier, who was photographed without his knowledge as he stepped forward to place a floral wreath on the grave. The cross in the first picture has an interesting history. Chosen by the Premier in 1916 in honor of his dead parents, it is an exact duplicate on a slightly smaller scale of the famous St. Martin's cross, of which the original has stood since the 12th century on the lonely island of Iona, off the coast of Argyleshire, Scotland. It was on this island that christianity came to Scotland with the landing of the Irish St. Columbus of whom St. Martin was a later disciple. The carving on the cross is the conventionalized Celtic vine pattern, the vine being symbolical of the sacrament. The original cross is of sandstone and stands 15 feet high. The King monument is of granite and is 22 feet high.

First Reunion in Twenty Years Brings Together Medical Men Whose Lines Now Are Cast the World Over, but All of Whom Remember "Alma Mater"

TOUCHING TRIBUTES TO THOSE GONE ON

"Has any old fellow got mixed with the boys?
If he has, take him out, without making a noise.
Hang the Almanac's cheat and the Catalogue's spite!
Old Time is a bluffer—we're twenty tonight!"

It was University of Toronto class of medicine of 1902 which hurled defiance in Old Father Time's face. The occasion was the first reunion of the class since graduation, twenty years ago, at the King Edward Hotel last night. None of the doctors, who came to the banquet from the length and breadth of the Dominion, felt any older than twenty when all gathered around a common board.

Touching tributes were paid to the members of the class who had passed beyond. Among the classmates so remembered were: Dr. D. M. King, brother of Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King; Dr. W. J. Chambers, Dr. W. S. Dakin, Dr. W. P. James, Dr. D. McBane, Dr. A. D. McEachren, Dr. F. A. Short, Dr. H. J. Sullivan, Dr. W. T. Wallace and Dr. W. D. Young.

Many of the members of the class of 1902 have achieved fame in the medical world. Of the small class, two have become professors in London, England, schools, while many of the members have received appointments from foreign Governments. Dr. O. Klotz is connected with the Rockefeller Foundation in Brazil, Dr. W. R. Michell served as medical officer with the Shackleton Antarctic expedition. Dr. R. H. Mullin was appointed Provincial Health Officer in British Columbia, while Dr. H. E. Roaf was appointed a lecturer in physiology in Guy's Hospital, London, and Dr. A. E. Schell is now Assistant Director of Medical Services in Ottawa.

Among those present at the old-time reunion were: Drs. W. J. Bell, J. E. Davey, A. Fisher, J. J. Fraser, A. S. Graham, V. E. Henderson, E. T. Holdge, J. L. Huffman, J. R. Irwin, W. R. Michell, A. Dr. D. Macdougall King

Although obliged on account of his health to seek a milder climate the name of Dr. D. Macdougall King, who died at Denver, Colorado, March 18th, remained on the membership roll of St. Andrew's up to the last. He was born at Kitchener (formerly Berlin, Ont.) the son of John King, K.C., and the only brother of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, premier of Canada. After completing his studies he went to South Africa during the Boer war, in connection with the medical branch of the service. On his return he practised in Ottawa for a time but failing health necessitated his removal to the milder climate of Denver, where he continued the practice of his profession. He made a brave fight for his life, but at last had to succumb. A book published by him, entitled "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win it" contains much valuable information, largely the result of his own experiences. At the time of his death he had just completed the manuscript of another book, on Nerves, which has since been published. He left a wife and two boys (twins), also one brother and one surviving sister. Both his parents predeceased him.

'DEAD' AFTER BATTLE GETS DEGREE OF M.D.

London, Ont., June 3 — (CP) — More than 3,000 persons applauded a record graduating class of nearly 700 students of the University of Western Ontario and its affiliates here yesterday at the annual June convocation featured by color and pageantry.

On account of the unusually large number receiving degrees, diplomas and certificates, there was no convocation address, and four graduates were hooded at one time. It was the first time more than one candidate has been hooded at one time.

Among the graduates with B.A. was a nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Harry Morrison Lay, whose mother is the former Janet King, the prime minister's sister.

A Canadian veteran officially reported killed in action at the battle of Dieppe, received his degree of doctor of medicine. He was Dr. William Alexander Ewener, London, who was left for dead, but "someone, I don't know who, picked me up and put me in one of the little rescue boats."

This was his second convocation at Western. He received his B.A. last fall.

Among the graduates with B.A. was a nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Harry Morrison Lay, whose mother is the former Janet King, the prime minister's sister.

A Canadian veteran officially reported killed in action at the battle of Dieppe, received his degree of doctor of medicine. He was Dr. William Alexander Ewener, London, who was left for dead, but "someone, I don't know who, picked me up and put me in one of the little rescue boats."

This was his second convocation at Western. He received his B.A. last fall.

THE WILL TO WISDOM.

A STUDY IN MIND CURE.

NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER. By D. MACDOUGALL KING. (Revell, 8s. net.)

The full title of this work, "Nerves and Personal Power; Some Principles of Psychology as Applied to Conduct and Health," is of a kind to suggest a rather formidably technical treatise. It is, however, only necessary to open it at any page to find a succession of clean, simple, and hard-hitting sentences, which explain themselves, and carry the impact of a strongly marked personality.

About that personality it is natural to desire to know more, and the introduction to the book, by Mr. Mackenzie King, the Canadian Prime Minister, is at hand to satisfy this curiosity. Mr. King there tells how his brother, at the age of thirty-five, while practising medicine at Ottawa, was suddenly attacked by acute tuberculosis, a legacy in part from his services in the South African War. Instead of succumbing to fear, he resolved to fight the disease, and after three years' treatment, reinforced by his splendid will-power, he mastered it, and was able to turn his experience to profit by writing his book "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It."

It seemed that a prospect of renewed health and work was now opening before him. But in 1919, some three years after his recovery, he was assailed by the unmistakable beginnings of progressive muscular atrophy, due to organic nerve degeneration. The choice now before him was between an existence prolonged for some years by abstinence from all effort and an endeavour to complete at least his intellectual life work at the cost of hastening the end. He chose the path of service, and the present book, completed with the last remnants of his strength, is the legacy of this heroic spirit to his fellows. It is not only the fruit of sacrifice, but of successful experiment, for Dr. MacDougall King showed in his own person, till vanquished by overwhelming organic disease, the recuperative power of mind upon the organism.

THE NERVOUS MACHINE.

Professing to offer a method for the cure of the manifold troubles upon which the usual medical verdict is "There is nothing organically wrong; it is only 'nerves,'" Dr. King starts with a brief sketch of the nervous system and the rôle of instinct, emotion, and volition in human activity. These first hundred pages are a very remarkable essay in popular psychology, for the task before their writer was not easy. To reduce, as he has succeeded in doing, the complex sensori-motor activities of the human organism to a shape in which they can be shortly stated and easily understood by readers of no special psychological training is a highly creditable achievement.

The chief result of these opening chapters is to establish on a firm basis the reality and importance of conscious Will, which is here given the title of the "Moral Self." Dr. King's "Moral Self" appears to be substantially identical with James's and MacDougall's doctrine of Will as the fiat or re-inforcing energy that selects between competing ideas or percepts, which tend alike in their own nature to issue in action.

It is, accordingly, by recognizing the unique dignity of this "Moral Self" and training the character so that it always prevails that Dr. King believes the cure for nervous disorders is to be found. A troubled nervous system is the result of yielding to unwise impulses, but the effective way of conquering "temptations" is not to oppose their issue in act, which means strain and fatigue, but to kill the wish before it gathers strength. But to this, Dr. King maintains, there is no path but through the acceptance of the rule of "wisdom" as the law of life. "The first step towards moral conduct," he repeatedly quotes, "is the control of the immediate impulse," but this control cannot be established without disabling conflict, until the general principle of obedience to reason is embraced.

> Worry is nothing but mental conflict, and fear of not getting one's own way. Here there is lacking the genuine desire to follow whatever be true. . . . The selfish interest prefers to shove the matter through without consideration, for fear, if reason be applied, it may interfere with personal gratification. It is the being unwilling to be wise which causes the trouble.

CONTROL OF IMPULSE.

How is this disciplined will to be gained? Only, Dr. King insists, by the path of humility, by learning to control the irrational whim in trivial things, until in grave crises the reckless impulse likewise gives place to reason. It is perhaps in this last and minutely practical section of his book that Dr. King is at his best. He knows how to enforce such simple lessons as the importance of a regulated time-table for each day's work with an acuteness and wit that enchant while they convert. What could be better than the dry humour of his picture of the ill-regulated housewife, drifting from one "emergency" to another, worried and jaded by a thousand trifles that should have been foreseen or disregarded? Or consider again this home thrust:—

> In what manner does criticism prevent you from doing things in your own way? What is the character of the force which checks you? Is it aught but some fragment of truth contained in the criticism? If it be untruth, what reason to heed it? What we feel to be restricting is not in the criticism, but in ourselves. Through the criticism, a distasteful fragment of truth which interferes with the gratification of our desire is accentuated in our consciousness and is exposed possibly to the knowledge of other people.

There is perhaps in this passage as elsewhere in the book a touch of over-simplification. What of the bad criticism which unduly discourages the man who takes it for good? Dr. King over-estimates the accessibility of "truth" in several places. There are a considerable number of vital issues which cannot be solved for us, as he suggests, by authorities "at our very doors in public libraries." But he had, no doubt, principally in view in his book the homelier problems of day-to-day living. He had a perfect right to work with self-chosen limits, and within them he has written a book of golden good sense.

Self-Control in Everyday Life

The book under review is one on self-control, which doctors may safely recommend. It is not technical, yet it is scientific. It contains nothing which any man or woman cannot read with complete understanding. Technical terms have been eliminated and all explanations are made simple and perfectly clear by comparisons with familiar objects and phenomena. The style is chatty and easy, like the informal conversation of an intimate friend. Dr. King's treatment of his subject is profoundly reverent. The book is so written as to build up rather than tear down faith. None can say that its teaching turns the reader from dependence upon the Great Unseen Power to a reliance upon their own efforts. The study of psychotherapy is attracting considerable attention. What is destructive in much of the discussion is its excessive materialistic trend. Some of it can only serve to sap the foundations of one's spiritual and moral beliefs. Dr. King was first and foremost a scientist—but he was also deeply reverent in his whole approach to all scientific questions as well as a strong believer in the reality of spiritual forces and a spiritual world. In his new book he succeeds in a remarkable way in relating the new knowledge, so to speak, to the old, which for generations men have been taught to reverence. Dr. D. Macdougall King's book helps to reinforce Christian teaching by showing wherein recent medical and scientific researches are revealing the foundations of Christian faith and belief in directions hitherto unexplored and unknown. The book is an admirable example of fine letterpress turned out by the Revell Press of New York, the Toronto agent for whom is Thomas Allen.

Dr. King has already achieved truly well deserved fame for his treatment of tuberculosis and how to win the battle over it, and other volumes. The aim of this present treatise is to give the public a much needed understanding of those factors in everyday living which on the one hand tend toward serious weakness and on the other make for personal power. From the author's viewpoint everybody at times suffers from symptoms which are popularly termed "nervous," for nervousness is a matter of degree rather than of kind. Whether "nerves" take the form of unreasonable impulsiveness or of serious obsessions occasioning bodily pain, the fundamental cause and radical cure of both are essentially the same. It is realized that nervous individuals, who most urgently require the teachings of this book, unfortunately will be those least likely to derive direct benefit from it. In the treatment of even the most serious functional neuroses, however, there comes a time when the patient is ready for a closer knowledge than the physician has time to convey of the reasons underlying nervous disability and of the course to be followed to prevent a relapse. To all such sufferers as well as those entrusted with the care of nervous invalids it is hoped the book will make a special appeal. The author of this brilliant work is a brother of the Prime Minister of Canada, W. L. Mackenzie King, who formerly practised his profession in the city of Ottawa. This distinguished medical man was suddenly stricken with influenza complicated by double pneumonia. Tuberculosis developed and spread rapidly, and so virulent did it become that all thought of recovery was regarded as impossible. His home in Ottawa had to be broken up and he became a patient in the sanatorium at Ste. Agathe, and later at the Phipps Sanatorium in Denver, Colorado. For over a year he never saw either wife or children. It was after his third year of fighting with the disease that he commenced the writing of the book entitled "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It." Dr. King served with the British forces in the South African war and did much good work with the Canadian Army Medical Corps. Apart from the scientific value of Dr. King's treatise, to know of the suffering which inspired its conception and the fortitude which made possible its publication is to glimpse something of those higher levels of human greatness ot which men and women are capable of rising in adversity and which uplift all who pause to dwell upon the secret of spiritual attainment in human lives. This is altogether a great book, which should be in the hands of well informed people. Wordsworth said:—

"Who, doom'd to go in company with pain,
. . . . . .
Turns his necessity to glorious gain."
—The Happy Warrior.

Dr. D. Macdougall King laid a present and an abiding happiness in this labor of love which he has bequeathed to the world. There can be nothing but admiration for such an admirable character.

For over a year he never saw either wife or children. It was after his third year of fighting with the disease that he commenced the writing of the book entitled "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It." Dr. King served with the British forces in the South African war and did much good work with the Canadian Army Medical Corps. Apart from the scientific value of Dr. King's treatise, to know of the suffering which inspired its conception and the fortitude which made possible its publication is to glimpse something of those higher levels of human greatness ot which men and women are capable of rising in adversity and which uplift all who pause to dwell upon the secret of spiritual attainment in human lives. This is altogether a great book, which should be in the hands of well informed people. Wordsworth said:—

Self-Control in Everyday Life

NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER. By Dr. D. MacDougall King, with an Introduction by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. Toronto: Thomas Allen.

The book under review is one on self-control, which doctors may safely recommend. It is not technical, yet it is scientific. It contains nothing which any man or woman cannot read with complete understanding. Technical terms have been eliminated and all explanations are made simple and perfectly clear by comparisons with familiar objects and phenomena. The style is chatty and easy, like the informal conversation of an intimate friend. Dr. King's treatment of his subject is profoundly reverent. The book is so written as to build up rather than tear down faith. None can say that its teaching turns the reader from dependence upon the Great Unseen Power to a reliance upon their own efforts. The study of psychotherapy is attracting considerable attention. What is destructive in much of the discussion is its excessive materialistic trend. Some of it can only serve to sap the foundations of one's spiritual and moral beliefs. Dr. King was first and foremost a scientist—but he was also deeply reverent in his whole approach to all scientific questions as well as a strong believer in the reality of spiritual forces and a spiritual world. In his new book he succeeds in a remarkable way in relating the new knowledge, so to speak, to the old, which for generations men have been taught to reverence. Dr. D. Macdougall King's book helps to reinforce Christian teaching by showing wherein recent medical and scientific researches are revealing the foundations of Christian faith and belief in directions hitherto unexplored and unknown. The book is an admirable example of fine letterpress turned out by the Revell Press of New York, the Toronto agent for whom is Thomas Allen.

Dr. King has already achieved truly well deserved fame for his treatment of tuberculosis and how to win the battle over it, and other volumes. The aim of this present treatise is to give the public a much needed understanding of those factors in everyday living which on the one hand tend toward serious weakness and on the other make for personal power. From the author's viewpoint everybody at times suffers from symptoms which are popularly termed "nervous," for nervousness is a matter of degree rather than of kind. Whether "nerves" take the form of unreasonable impulsiveness or of serious obsessions occasioning bodily pain, the fundamental cause and radical cure of both are essentially the same. It is realized that nervous individuals, who most urgently require the teachings of this book, unfortunately will be those least likely to derive direct benefit from it. In the treatment of even the most serious functional neuroses, however, there comes a time when the patient is ready for a closer knowledge than the physician has time to convey of the reasons underlying nervous disability and of the course to be followed to prevent a relapse. To all such sufferers as well as those entrusted with the care of nervous invalids it is hoped the book will make a special appeal. The author of this brilliant work is a brother of the Prime Minister of Canada, W. L. Mackenzie King, who formerly practised his profession in the city of Ottawa. This distinguished medical man was suddenly stricken with influenza complicated by double pneumonia. NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER. D. Macdougall Kind, M. D. Fleming H. Revell Co., N. Y., $2.

OF unusual interest to Denverites is this book, as Dr. King was at one time a patient at Phipps Memorial sanitarium. In 1917 his book, "The Battle With Tuberculosis and How to Win It," was published. In midsummer of 1919 he became a victim of progressive muscular atrophy. The ne successfully fought tuberculosis, the latter affliction warned the slow approach of death. During the time left he began the present volume, with just the reverse of the condition in writing his first book. That was undertaken in a spirit of returning strength and renewed activity. The last volume proceeded with comparative freedom of movement to a crippled and bedridden condition and finally complete paralysis of the greater part of his body. There was no hope of recovery—only the certainty of death.

Tho unable to hold a pen or dictate a word, this important book was completed before the end came on March 18, last. Early in January, Dr. King's brother, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada and prominent Canadian liberal leader, arrived in Denver. Dr. King, whose home was at 966 Washington street, was buried in Toronto.

"Nerves and Personal Power" is a non-technical but thoroly scientific book on self-control. Dr. King's easy conversational style is indeed pleasing and his comparisons are made with familiar objects and phenomena. Everything is quickly and easily understood. In no way is one's faith or belief torn down. On the contrary, the deeply reverent manner in which he approaches scientific questions does much to upbuild one's faith and reinforce belief. He conclusively shows why and where recent medical and scientific research is bringing to light the foundations of faith in Christianity. His principles of psychology as applied to one's conduct and health mean constant self-control in every-day life.

To read this important book is to better understand the wonderful human maching and the brain that directs it, as well as the desires, thoughts and impulses controlling every action. Perhaps the most unusual thought left in the mind of the reader is that it carries a sustained and dominant note of hope, courage and cheer, notwithstanding the author's knowledge of the end so certain and so near.

"NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER." Some principles of psychology as applied to conduct and health. By D. Macdougall King, M.B. (Toronto: Thomas Allen.) Price, $2.00.

The introduction to this work by Dr. King's brother, the Prime Minister of Canada, describes the remarkable circumstances in which the book was written. For more than nine years before his death, which occurred in the spring of 1922, Dr. King had been a sufferer from acute tuberculosis. During the third year of the disease he had so far recovered strength that though unable to resume the active practice of his profession he was able to compose his book on "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It," much of it being dictated from his bed. Recovery seemed to be proceeding slowly until, in the summer of 1919, he suddenly experienced a physical weakness which was diagnosed as progressive muscular atrophy. The case was hopeless, but Dr. King's spirit was unsubdued. Forgetting his own illness except in so far as his experience might be valuable to others, he set to work on the book which has now appeared, and continued his task with increasing physical weakness until he could not hold a pen or dictate a paragraph.

But for this introduction one would have supposed that the author was a man in the very prime of strength and buoyant with health. It is the easy, friendly, cheerful talk of a physician to whom a patient has come suffering with "nerves," to use the common expression. The physician says there is nothing organically wrong, but he does not mean that there is nothing wrong when there are such things as obsessions as to illness, persistent thoughts of a worrying kind, tiredness, irritability and depression. Anybody who tries to persuade you that the symptoms of which you complain are not real does not understand the situation. When you suffer, there is no denying that the suffering is bona fide.'

The symptoms, however, are to be considered less than the cause, which may be described generally as lack of self-control, and the remedies prescribed all take the form of self-discipline, including regularity of physical and mental habit. The course of life must, as far as possible, be determined by will power, by planning, not by drifting and easy yielding to circumstances. In Dr. King's advice, there is nothing faddy or fanciful. He says, for instance, that a man who is a crank about his food, knows about all its properties and its effects on his internal organs, has got hold of the trouble at the wrong end. If he would eat three plain meals a day, five hours apart, he would soon forget his stomach. After giving advice as to plain food, fresh air, exercise, etc., he says:

"Consider for a moment the folly of putting a stimulating medicine in a stomach which rebels against means at habitually irregular hours, or which staggers under six to ten ocurse meals served as often as three times a week. Think of the absurdity of prescribing tonics for people who are too sedentary to walk a mile. Consider the crime of giving bromides, veronal aspirin and what not to people who are so irregular in going to bed and in getting up that Nature rebels and shows her disapproval by causing insomnia. Reflect on the nonsense in giving medicine, electricity, hydropathy or anything other than honest education and persuasion, to correct an insatiable love of pleasure."

It must not be understood from these passages that the author is seeking in sympathy with the nervous patient, or belittles his sufferings. But he does insist that he must be at least one of the agents in his own cure, passing by self-control from strength to strength, controlling thought and feeling as well as action. Emphasis is laid upon work as a means of discipline. It is useless, he says, to expect to find anything worth while which in the beginning you would "like" to do. "At first any true work is hard. It is in the mastery of what is difficult that happiness lies. Why, therefore, seek what is easy?" The work chosen should be such as requires development, not the hobby of a week or a month. Service to society should be regarded as essential to a healthy life. "To neglect your duty to society, because you are relieved of the necessity of serving, sooner or later will bring the lack of self-respect which is manifested in discontent and mental suffering. You must face the fact frankly, you cannot gain or keep self-respect unless you take an adequate part in the total toil of the world."

When so terse and bracing a message comes from a deathbed, we must be convinced that the author had himself attained to self-control in a high degree, and that his advice is worth heeding. It is not the cheap and easy advice. "Don't worry," but a conscientious study of the causes of worry and weakness of will.

Think of the absurdity of prescribing tonics for people who are too sedentary to walk a mile. Consider the crime of giving bromides, veronal aspirin and what not, to people who are so irregular in going to bed and in getting up that Nature rebels and shows her disapproval by causing insomnia. Reflect on the nonsense in giving medicine, electricity, hydropathy or anything other than honest education and persuasion, to correct an insatiable love of pleasure."

It must not be understood from these passages that the author is lacking in sympathy with the nervous patient, or belittles his sufferings. But he does insist that he must be at least one of the agents in his own cure, passing by self-control from strength to strength, controlling thought and feeling as well as action. Emphasis is laid upon work as a means of discipline. It is useless, he says, to expect to find anything worth while which in the beginning you would "like" to do. "At first any true work is hard. It is in the mastery of what is difficult that happiness lies. Why, therefore, seek what is easy?" The work chosen should be such as requires development, not the hobby of a week or a month. Service to society should be regarded as essential to a healthy life. "To neglect your duty to society, because you are relieved of the necessity of serving, sooner or later will bring the lack of self-respect which is manifested in discontent and mental suffering. You must face the fact frankly, you cannot gain or keep self-respect unless you take an adequate part in the total toil of the world."

When so tonic and bracing a message comes from a deathbed, we must be convinced that the author had himself attained to self-control in a high degree, and that his advice is worth heeding. It is not the cheap and easy advice, "Don't worry," but a conscientious study of the causes of worry and weakness of will.

"NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER." Some principles of psychology as applied to conduct and health. By D. Macdougall King, M.B. (Toronto: Thomas Allen.) Price, $2.00.

The introduction to this work by Dr. King's brother, the Prime Minister of Canada, describes the remarkable circumstances in which the book was written. For more than nine years before his death, which occurred in the spring of 1922, Dr. King had been a sufferer from acute tuberculosis. During the third year of the disease he had so far recovered strength that though unable to resume the active practice of his profession he was able to compose his book on "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It," much of it being dictated from his bed. Recovery seemed to be proceeding slowly until, in the summer of 1919, he suddenly experienced a physical weakness which was diagnosed as progressive muscular atrophy. The case was hopeless, but Dr. King's spirit was unsubdued. Forgetting his own illness except in so far as his experience might be valuable to others, he set to work on the book which has now appeared, and continued his task with increasing physical weakness until he could not hold a pen or dictate a paragraph.

But for this introduction one would have supposed that the author was a man in the very prime of strength and buoyant with health. It is the easy, friendly, cheerful talk of a physician to whom a patient has come suffering with "nerves," to use the common expression. The physician says there is nothing organically wrong, but he does not mean that there is nothing wrong when there are such things as obsessions as to illness, persistent thoughts of a worrying kind, tiredness, irritability and depression. "Anybody who tries to persuade you that the symptoms of which you complain are not real does not understand the situation. When you suffer, there is no denying that the suffering is bona fide."

The symptoms, however, are to be considered less than the cause, which may be described generally as lack of self-control, and the remedies prescribed all take the form of self-discipline, including regularity of physical and mental habits. The course of life must, as far as possible, be determined by will power, by planning, not by drifting and easy yielding to circumstances. In Dr. King's advice, there is nothing faddy or fanciful. He says, for instance, that a man who is a crank about his food, knows about all its properties and its effects on his internal organs, has got hold of the trouble at the wrong end. If he would eat three plain meals a day, five hours apart, he would soon forget his stomach. After giving advice as to plain food, fresh air, exercise, etc., he says:

"Consider for a moment the folly of putting a stimulating medicine in a stomach which rebels against meals at habitually irregular hours, or which staggers under six to ten course meals served as often as three times a week. Think of the absurdity of prescribing tonics for people who are too sedentary to walk a mile. Consider the crime of giving bromides, veronal aspirin and what not, to people who are so irregular in going to bed and in getting up that Nature rebels and shows her disapproval by causing insomnia. Reflect on the nonsense in giving medicine, electricity, hydropathy or anything other than honest education and persuasion, to correct an insatiable love of pleasure."

It must not be understood from these passages that the author is lacking in sympathy with the nervous patient, or belittles his sufferings. But he does insist that he must be at least one of the agents in his own cure, passing by self-control from strength to strength, controlling thought and feeling as well as action. Emphasis is laid upon work as a means of discipline. It is useless, he says, to expect to find anything worth while which in the beginning you would "like" to do. "At first any true work is hard. It is in the mastery of what is difficult that happiness lies. Why, therefore, seek what is easy?" The work chosen should be such as requires development, not the hobby of a week or a month. Nerves and Personal Power

Some Principles of Psychology as Applied to Conduct and Health. By D. Macdougall King, M.B.

Macdougall King will be remembered by many residents of Ottawa; he practised medicine here until his health failed in 1913. A competent physician, he had the spirit of public service as well, and the writer of these lines recollects his activity about 1905 in putting forward a plan for preventive medicine among school-children; the lapse of years has confirmed the soundness of his project. He was an unusually attractive man—one can without sentimentality describe his face as sunny. The story of his long illness and of his two books is a record of high and intelligent courage, marked by two difficult, apparently contradictory and yet really consistent decisions; the tale is told by his brother, the Prime Minister, in a moving introduction.

When he found himself stricken by tuberculosis, Dr. King came to the conclusion that by a resolute following of a course of treatment which included much rest he might recover. While he was mending in 1915 and 1916, he wrote "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It," a book which has been of genuine assistance to many patients afflicted with this disease.

Working as a convalescent, he proceeded with his task very slowly. "Undue intellectual effort is just as perilous in the recovery from tuberculosis as excess of physical effort," says Mr. Mackenzie King, in the introduction. "For the greater part of a year the most he dared venture, by way of either research or composition, was from a fraction of an hour to an hour twice a day. Part of the book was written while he was lying on his back; much of it was dictated from his bed." The book was published in 1917, and Dr. King was resuming his interrupted career when a second blow fell—he became a prey to progressive muscular atrophy. He knew that this illness was mortal, and that the only uncertainty was as to the length of time before he must succumb. "Again there were alternatives in the prospect that presented itself, the acceptance or rejection of either of which lay largely with himself. He could cease work altogether, intellectual as well as physical effort, and so arrest the disease and hope to live on, possibly for years; or, while compelled to abandon the practice of his profession, he could persist in intellectual work with the certainty, however, that every hour's effort would hasten the progress of the disease." He had this book on his mind, and he elected to live a shorter time and to write the book. "By actual calculation of months," Mr. Mackenzie King says, "he believed he could complete it before the end came." Like Browning's Grammarian, he raced with Death. "He began in such fullness of strength as he had regained: to work, first, with comparative freedom of movement; then, crippled and bed-ridden; finally, with complete paralysis of the greater part of his entire body . . . Before the end came, in the spring of 1922, he was unable to hold a pen or to dictate a paragraph, but he had completed his self-imposed task. His last days, ever with the assistance and constant ministrations of his wife, were given over to attempts at revision of the manuscript and to correspondence concerning its publication."

Such is the affecting history of this book, and it is a part of the story that, written as it was in the valley of the shadow, it is addressed to the general public, and that its purpose is to assist the victims of a very cruel class of maladies. It is a popular treatment of the newer psychology with reference to its bearing upon the diseases and disabilities commonly described as nervous. Beginning with a description in non-technical terms of the nervous system, it proceeds to an exposition of the influence of the intellect and the will through that system upon health and conduct. "The ancient dynasty of the brain," he says, "consists of an hierarchy of rulers, each of whom not only at one stage of evolution held supreme command, but still lives, and seeks to rule. The intellect is the latest claimant to the throne, and is a usurper of very limited power. Unless the intellect has the support of the moral self, its barbarous predecessors will arise in their might and bedevil its ideals, pollute its wishes, and establish confusion by permitting the alternate sway of contending factions. Without the moral self we should be but marionettes which, to the stimulus of outside forces, dance on the stage of life, are driven hither and thither, and take no part in the shaping of destiny.

As the self asserts itself, the more are we able to choose a line of action independent of, or even in opposition to, outside forces; the more are we at liberty to exercise free will; the more do we enjoy freedom."

Such is Dr. King's way of putting the war between our members and our mind, of which St. Paul wrote. In his view, "the true criterion of good or evil is an inward sense of happiness or of suffering. Our real goodness is proportional to the amount we build up. Our evil is relative to the extent to which we retard direct progress. Goodness lies not in believing but in doing. Undoubtedly believing is an important fundamental to doing, but there is no virtue in any belief by itself. The virtue lies only in the progress which the belief stimulates. The value of a belief is not to be estimated by the people who entertain it, but by the fruits of their lives." And again: "The distinction which too long has been made between goodness and wisdom is, from a health standpoint and for practical purposes, as imaginary as it is unreasonable. Where in the world of goodness can one find anything which is unwise; where in the world of wisdom anything which is bad?"

This intimate connection of physical and moral health is the keynote of the book. A treatise on nervous disorders, written by a dying man, it is a firm demand for courage, resolution and a systematic and well-ordered way of life, in small things as in great. "Have you thought of the damage to your volition that arises through giving in each day to your lethargic feelings? It is folly to suppose that you can run away from 95 per cent. of the hard things in life and successfully challenge the remaining five per cent." The excerpts which have been quoted suggest that the author is chiefly concerned with moral questions, but the book contains definite suggestions for psychological treatment of nervous troubles, and illuminating details of the psychological causes of many physical symptoms. The central thesis that the moral qualities use the nervous system to control the physical nature of man is pressed with force, with reiteration, and with copious illustration. It is a book which will prove of value to many in perplexity over the conduct of life.

THE WILL TO WISDOM.

A STUDY IN MIND CURE.

NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER. By D. MACDOUGALL KING. (Revell, 8s. net.)

The full title of this work, "Nerves and Personal Power; Some Principles of Psychology as Applied to Conduct and Health," is of a kind to suggest a rather formidably technical treatise. It is, however, only necessary to open it at any page to find a succession of clean, simple, and hard-hitting sentences, which explain themselves, and carry the impact of a strongly marked personality.

About that personality it is natural to desire to know more, and the introduction to the book, by Mr. Mackenzie King, the Canadian Prime Minister, is at hand to satisfy this curiosity. Mr. King there tells how his brother, at the age of thirty-five, while practising medicine at Ottawa, was suddenly attacked by acute tuberculosis, a legacy in part from his services in the South African War. Instead of succumbing to fear, he resolved to fight the disease, and after three years' treatment, reinforced by his splendid will-power, he mastered it, and was able to turn his experience to profit by writing his book "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It."

It seemed that a prospect of renewed health and work was now opening before him. But in 1919, some three years after his recovery, he was assailed by the unmistakable beginnings of progressive muscular atrophy, due to organic nerve degeneration. The choice now before him was between an existence prolonged for some years by abstinence from all effort and an endeavour to complete at least his intellectual life work at the cost of hastening the end. He chose the path of service, and the present book, completed with the last remnants of his strength, is the legacy of this heroic spirit to his fellows. It is not only the fruit of sacrifice, but of successful experiment, for Dr. MacDougall King showed in his own person, till vanquished by overwhelming organic disease, the recuperative power of mind upon the organism.

THE NERVOUS MACHINE.

Professing to offer a method for the cure of the manifold troubles upon which the usual medical verdict is "There is nothing organically wrong; it is only 'nerves,'" Dr. King starts with a brief sketch of the nervous system and the rôle of instinct, emotion, and volition in human activity. These first hundred pages are a very remarkable essay in popular psychology, for the task before their writer was not easy. To reduce, as he has succeeded in doing, the complex sensori-motor activities of the human organism to a shape in which they can be shortly stated and easily understood by readers of no special psychological training is a highly creditable achievement.

The chief result of these opening chapters is to establish on a firm basis the reality and importance of conscious Will, which is here given the title of the "Moral Self." Dr. King's "Moral Self" appears to be substantially identical with James's and MacDougall's doctrine of Will as the fiat or re-inforcing energy that selects between competing ideas or percepts, which tend alike in their own nature to issue in action.

It is, accordingly, by recognizing the unique dignity of this "Moral Self" and training the character so that it always prevails that Dr. King believes the cure for nervous disorders is to be found. A troubled nervous system is the result of yielding to unwise impulses, but the effective way of conquering "temptations" is not to oppose their issue in act, which means strain and fatigue, but to kill the wish before it gathers strength. But to this, Dr. King maintains, there is no path but through the acceptance of the rule of "wisdom" as the law of life. "The first step towards moral conduct," he repeatedly quotes, "is the control of the immediate impulse," but this control cannot be established without disabling conflict, until the general principle of obedience to reason is embraced.

> Worry is nothing but mental conflict, and fear of not getting one's own way. Here there is lacking the genuine desire to follow whatever be true. . . . The selfish interest prefers to shove the matter through without consideration, for fear, if reason be applied, it may interfere with personal gratification. It is the being unwilling to be wise which causes the trouble.

CONTROL OF IMPULSE.

How is this disciplined will to be gained? Only, Dr. King insists, by the path of humility, by learning to control the irrational whim in trivial things, until in grave crises the reckless impulse likewise gives place to reason. It is perhaps in this last and minutely practical section of his book that Dr. King is at his best. He knows how to enforce such simple lessons as the importance of a regulated time-table for each day's work with an acuteness and wit that enchant while they convert. What could be better than the dry humour of his picture of the ill-regulated housewife, drifting from one "emergency" to another, worried and jaded by a thousand trifles that should have been foreseen or disregarded? Or consider again this home thrust:—

In what manner does criticism prevent you from doing things in your own way? What is the character of the force which checks you? Is it aught but some fragment of truth contained in the criticism? If it be untruth, what reason to heed it? What we feel to be restricting is not in the criticism, but in ourselves. Through the criticism, a distasteful fragment of truth which interferes with the gratification of our desire is accentuated in our consciousness and is exposed possibly to the knowledge of other people.

There is perhaps in this passage as elsewhere in the book a touch of over-simplification. What of the bad criticism which unduly discourages the man who takes it for good? Dr. King over-estimates the accessibility of "truth" in several places. There are a considerable number of vital issues which cannot be solved for us, as he suggests, by authorities "at our very doors in public libraries." But he had, no doubt, principally in view in his book the homelier problems of day-to-day living. He had a perfect right to work with self-chosen limits, and within them he has written a book of golden good sense.

'Nerves and Personal Power' Is Book Dr. King Dictated While on Death Bed

Physician, Stricken During Practice in Denver, Is Author of Volume Called Powerful Contribution to Christian Teaching.

Dr D. Macdougall King, author of "Nerves and Personal Power," created that persuasive volume by dictating it to his wife from his deathbed. She faithfully transcribed every word, completing the last chapter just three weeks before his death.

Several months were consumed in the compilation of the book, for even in the beginning Dr. King did not have strength enough to devote more than two hours daily to the gigantic task. The completed volume is a true monument to the theme it preaches — self control. Instead of being the last failing effort of a sinking and enfeebled brain, it is declared by physicians and scientists who have reviewed it to be a powerful contribution to present-day Christian teaching. One doctor calls it an "introduction to psychotherapy, clear from all metaphysics and occultism, and free from all the disagreeable features of freudism."

Dr. D. Macdougall King.

Nine years before his death Dr. King was practicing his profession in Ottawa, Canada, when at the age of 35 he was stricken suddenly with influenza, complicated by double pneumonia. Tuberculosis of the acute type manifested itself after this attack, and so virulent was the disease that recovery seemed all but impossible.

Fight Nearly Won.

A year or two before he had married, of which union twin sons had been born. In them and the love of his wife lay the hope for recovery. For their sake he determined to make the fight, so they removed to Denver. Three years later the disease had become quiescent and he began his first book, "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win it," which he hoped might prove of service to fellow sufferers.

Four years after the disease made its appearance he was able to do a limited amount of work. In 1916 he resumed his practice and he continued steadily to regain some measure of health and strength.

Three years then passed without much occasion for concern. Suddenly, in the summer of 1919, without warning or apparent cause, he experienced a physical weakness which was accompanied by a contraction of the muscles of the right hand. The symptoms were clear and unmistakable. He diagnosed the case, which subsequently was confirmed by fellow physicians, as progressive muscular atrophy, owing its origin to some organic nerve degeneration.

Physicians said, as he well knew, that he might have prolonged his life by ceasing all physical and intellectual work. He did forego the former, but he continued his intellectual pursuits without wavering, without a murmur. Prolonged idleness to him was unthinkable.

Task Is Completed.

He began his work in such fullness of strength as he had regained; first, with comparative freedom of movement (he was naturally left-handed); then, crippled and bed-ridden; finally with complete paralysis of the greater part of his entire body. Before the end came, in the spring of 1922, he was unable to hold a pen or to dictate a paragraph. But he had completed his self-imposed task. His last days, ever with the assistance and constant ministrations of his wife, were given over to attempts at revision of the manuscript and to correspondence concerning its publication.

Those who visited him in his declining days say that his cheerful spirit radiated a wonderful and beautiful light, a true demonstration of that aphorism, "patient endurance is Godlike."

Out of this affliction came this latest volume, just off the press. It contains no idle words. It brings the physician's touch of hope and healing to those who out of their weakness would be made strong. It glimpses something of those higher levels of human greatness to which men and women are capable of rising in adversity and which uplift all who pause to dwell upon the secret of spiritual attainment in human lives.

Four years after the disease made its appearance he was able to do a limited amount of work. In 1916 he resumed his practice and he continued steadily to regain some measure of health and strength.

Three years then passed without much occasion for concern. Suddenly, in the summer of 1919, without warning or apparent cause, he experienced a physical weakness which was accompanied by a contraction of the muscles of the right hand. The symptoms were clear and unmistakable. He diagnosed the case, which subsequently was confirmed by fellow physicians, as progressive muscular atrophy, owing its origin to some organic nerve degeneration.

Physicians said, as he well knew, that he might have prolonged his life by ceasing all physical and intellectual work. He did forego the former, but he continued his intellectual pursuits without wavering, without a murmur. Prolonged idleness to him was unthinkable.

Task Is Completed.

He began his work in such fullness of strength as he had regained; first, with comparative freedom of movement (he was naturally left-handed); then, crippled and bed-ridden; finally with complete paralysis of the greater part of his entire body. Before the end came, in the spring of 1922, he was unable to hold a pen or to dictate a paragraph. But he had completed his self-imposed task. His last days, ever with the assistance and constant ministrations of his wife, were given over to attempts at revision of the manuscript and to correspondence concerning its publication.

Those who visited him in his declining days say that his cheerful spirit radiated a wonderful and beautiful light, a true demonstration of that aphorism, "patient endurance is God-like."

Out of this affliction came this latest volume, just off the press. It contains no idle words. It brings the physician's touch of hope and healing to those who out of their weakness would be made strong. It glimpses something of those higher levels of human greatness to which men and women are capable of rising in adversity and which uplift all who pause to dwell upon the secret of spiritual attainment in human lives.

Dr. King's Book Helpful In Everyday Life, Declares Head of D. U. Department

BY D. E. PHILLIPS,
Head of the Department of Psychology and Education of the University of Denver.

Nerves and Personal Power, by D. Macdougall King. (The International Press.)

I have read with pleasure and profit Dr. D. Macdougall King's book, "Nerves and Personal Power." It will pay anyone to read this book.

In these days, nine-tenths of all works dealing in any way with psychology go to one of two extremes: Either they utterly discredit the everyday and well-known facts concerning the influence of mind on health, or they accept some extreme theory as speculative as any Hindu philosophy ever was. Dr. King's book belongs to the well-balanced type.

It covers subjects of everyday interest. A simple and comprehensive chapter on "The Nervous Machine" would be of much help to anyone in understanding the laws of health. There are practical chapters bearing on such topics as "Unhealthy Mental Habits,' "Suggestion and Suggestibility," "Suppression and Dissociation," "The Control of Everyday Activities," "Self-Control in Ordinary Living," "Control of Anger and Love." These and other chapters are all intensely practical. The book is written in a style to appeal to the general reader, and yet due respect is paid to scientific accuracy.

The book is not open to criticism from the standpoint of the practical advice which is given. If anyone would read and even partially obey the instructions in the chapter on "The Control of Activities" the results could not help but be beneficial. The most excellent warnings are found in the chapter on "Unhealthy Mental Habits." For example, the unhealthy state of body and mind produced by fear is quite adequately treated. At the same time we are warned that fears which are based on reason are normal and useful. Nervous apprehension when fears are groundless and unreasonable has a most destructive influence upon the individual.

The book contains two psychological principles that might be open to dispute and criticism. I refer to his chapter entitled "The Criterion of Good and Evil." Like all treatments of this kind, we sooner or later fall into general statements that must have an interpretation. This is true of the following definition of evil: "Evil is synonomous with disintegration or interference with direct progress, whether it be our own or another's, or with all the world of large." No thoughtful person can avoid indorsing the essence of this statement, but the trouble comes in the interpretation of what is progress, and in how far individual progress should be subordinated to collective progress.

From the standpoint of a psychologist the underlying doctrine of the book most open to question is the assumption of will power which may be independent of other mental qualities operating and directing life and its activities. To many this may be the charm of the book, but the popular mind has never conceived the problems of conduct in the light of biological, scientific facts.

Again, I wish to state that the book will be found both enlightening and helpful.

'Nerves and Personal Power' Is Book Dr. King Dictated While on Death Bed

Physician, Stricken During Practice in Denver, Is Author of Volume Called Powerful Contribution to Christian Teaching.

Dr. D. Macdougall King, author of "Nerves and Personal Power," created that persuasive volume by dictating it to his wife from his deathbed. She faithfully transcribed every word, completing the last chapter just three weeks before his death.

Dr. D. Macdougall King.

Several months were consumed in the compilation of the book, for even in the beginning Dr. King did not have strength enough to devote more than two hours daily to the gigantic task. The completed volume is a true monument to the theme it preaches — self control. Instead of being the last failing effort of a sinking and enfeebled brain, it is declared by physicians and scientists who have reviewed it to be a powerful contribution to present-day Christian teaching. One doctor calls it an "introduction to psychotherapy, clear from all metaphysics and occultism, and free from all the disagreeable features of freudism."

Nine years before his death Dr. King was practicing his profession in Ottawa, Canada, when at the age of 35 he was stricken suddenly with influenza, complicated by double pneumonia. Tuberculosis of the acute type manifested itself after this attack, and so virulent was the disease that recovery seemed all but imposible.

Fight Nearly Won.

A year or two before he had married, of which union twin sons had been born. In them and the love of his wife lay the hope for recovery For their sake he determined to make the fight, so they removed to Denver. Three years later the disease had become quiescent and he began his first book, "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win it," which he hoped might prove of service to fellow sufferers.

Seeing and Believing.

Men have always been prone to mint a half-truth, or even an untruth, into a brief and catchy phrase, and to pass it uncritically into circulation with the other currency of thought and speech. The habit provides a way of escape from the painful process of repeated thought. The coin of fancy is trustfully accepted as full-value metal until some surly critic, driven by his gadfly, detects the false ring and insists on its withdrawal and replacement. "Seeing is believing" is a sad case in point. It is a well-worn adage, so well-worn, indeed, as to be well-nigh worn out. It was once the watch-word of the hard-headed materialist, the man who was going to stand no nonsense about things that could not be seen and handled. It would be a rash man who would to-day proclaim and act upon its literal accuracy. Its validity received a shattering blow when it became possible to produce, by way of reductio ad absurdum, a photograph of an eminent Victorian statesman, known for an almost Puritanical strictness of life, standing at the door of a squalid tavern in a low London haunt. The cinema has hastened the work of demolition. There we may see any day, and enjoy, astounding feats of skill, strength, and endurance which we do not for one moment believe. The man who must see with his own eyes before he can believe is indeed an anachronism and an absurdity. His scepticism, logically applied to the micro-organisms which control the balance of his physical being, would of itself suffice, could it be maintained in practice, to release him quickly from all power of seeing and all necessity of believing. Eyes are found to be of no more use than legs for solving the ultimate problems of existence. In the ironical way of things, the wheel has come almost full circle. It is far nearer the truth to say that believing is seeing. How near the truth it is, even in the material sphere, will be owned by anyone who has kept an appointment at a crowded rendezvous. The expected friend is seen, and almost greeted, many times before he comes in the actual flesh. This inverted formula is the soul of many a first-hand and first-rate ghost story. It is the compelling force behind clouds of witnesses to "spiritual-"istic" manifestations reported with undeniable conviction and sincerity. The eye of faith usurps the function of the eye of the flesh. But it is possible and necessary to take a yet further step, and to declare that believing is not merely seeing, but also being. The wonders of suggestion and auto-suggestion are a commonplace of discussion. There are few so intellectually poor as to be unfamiliar with the idea that the generation and the fostering of belief will lead to the realization in hard actual fact of that which is believed. The prescription in its personal application has become a household catchword. The truth which it seeks to express must receive powerful reinforcement from such a book as Dr. MacDougall King's "Nerves "and Personal Power," reviewed recently in our columns. There is set out the doctrine of the creative power of belief inspired by conscious will, a power not merely made matter for theory and precept, but nobly and signally illustrated by the example of the author's life. It seems to many that, under this guise, a new force has been brought into the world. But, though the bottles are new and attractively modern, the good wine in them is old. Twenty centuries ago Virgil described his oarsmen redeeming a hopeless race by virtue of this self-same inspiration: "Possunt, quia posse videntur." Nor is its ancient warrant merely pagan. When all is said, the believing which is both seeing and being, and, as being, necessarily doing also, is not in essence distinguishable from the faith that removes mountains.

MACDOUGALL KING'S "Nerves "and Personal Power," reviewed recently in our columns. There is set out the doctrine of the creative power of belief inspired by conscious will, a power not merely made matter for theory and precept, but nobly and signally illustrated by the example of the author's life. It seems to many that, under this guise, a new force has been brought into the world. But, though the bottles are new and attractively modern, the good wine in them is old. Twenty centuries ago VIRGIL described his oarsmen redeeming a hopeless race by virtue of this self-same inspiration: "Possunt, quia posse videntur." Nor is its ancient warrant merely pagan. When all is said, the believing which is both seeing and being, and, as being, necessarily doing also, is not in essence distinguishable from the faith that removes mountains.

NERVES AND PERSONAL POWER. Some Principles of Psychology as Applied to Conduct and Health. By D. Macdougall King, M.B. With Introduction by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. Cloth. Price, $2 net. Pp. 311. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company, 1922.

That there is something the matter with medicine "as she is spoke," the success of Christian science, to use only one instance, amply testifies. The patients whom Weir Mitchell wrote about in "Fat and Blood" forty-five years ago only represented with peculiar shrillness the dissonance that is disturbing the harmony of life in many of us today. Emile Coué and his kind have exploited one way, the most mechanical and ephemeral, by which morbid mental and nervous activities may be suppressed. But King goes to the root of the matter and shows how the character-defects on which functional nervous aberrations depend may be remedied. The fundamental attribute of efficient character is self control, and "self control is not volition, is not effort." It is not by suppression that undesirable impulses are to be neutralized; thus treated they are only put to sleep. "But how kill the impulse? By giving up the desire." Thus renunciation becomes the cornerstone of character, and character the habitation of happiness. Happiness is not composed of a sum of pleasures, but can come in no other way than through successful striving of the moral self to adapt the body and the mind to their physical and mental environment. The goal of self discipline is wisdom, which is truth in action. The emphasis usually laid on "goodness" has confused the issues which determine character. "Goodness lies not in believing but in doing. . . . There is no virtue in any belief by itself. . . . Let us lay the whole stress on wisdom and drop . . . the word goodness." Wisdom is the product of research and application. Self discipline is equal to any emergency of life. Let any one who thinks himself a hopeless invalid read page 285 of this book: it is a description of King's own situation and depicts the joyful victory over physical disaster. He writes of the hopeless invalid: "His suffering is no worse than his inability to direct his thoughts. . . . It [invalidism] gives a man singular opportunity of deriving from the commonplace more than an ordinary amount of self respect." The book is written for the layman and is in the plain terms that the layman understands; it is also a book that practicing physicians may read with profit. We are accustomed to hear preachments to the sick and weary from the pulpits of the well and strong, and to discount their value as at best but precious platitudes. But here we have a message that is one long war cry of triumph sounded through two years of physical torture up to within two weeks of his end, by a medical hero not only dauntless in the face of death but with a personality growing progressively finer and better and happier until life failed.

Nerves and Personal Power

Physicians are not wont to blow the trumpet, even for a brother in the profession. It is perhaps because experience has taught us that one quiet word is worth more than a volume of eulogy. But to feel in one's heart that some fellow-worker is a credit to the profession, and to find, without too many words, some way of letting him know it, is fortunately not an uncommon experience to us of the medical profession in Canada.

Sometimes, however, such an opportunity is taken from us by the hand of Death, and it is then that one would, if one could, say something in appreciation of the doctor's heroism and the doctor's triumph—of the battle that he has fought and the victory that he has won. To this, indeed, words are inadequate, but as they are all that we have, we must use them.

Such a hero was D. Macdougall King, M.B., and with such feelings many in Canada and the United States will read Dr. King's last book "Nerves and Personal Power."* It is not his first book. He made a valuable contribution to the medical literature of tuberculosis in "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It." That book was a help, not only in sanitarium work, but in the general effort towards marshalling our forces against this disease.

In the present volume, which Dr. King modestly describes as "Some Principles of Psychology as Applied to Conduct and Health," we have a remarkable treatment of this subject. We can remember at the moment no better book on psychological medicine for people who ought to be well. In other words, while this book is suitable for a medical library, it may be given with confidence to a great number of our patients, provided only that they are intelligent, that they want to get well, and that they are willing to learn, and to take some trouble with themselves.

Of the general effect of the book we can only say, in a word, that we have read no other book calculated to do as much good and as little harm, or let us say, no harm at all, if you

Nerves and Personal Power

Nerves and Personal Power. By D. MacDougall King. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company.

THE circumstances under which this non-technical yet scientific book was written gives its pages a high authority. The author, through personal experience, realized the point of view of a sufferer. A physician in the city of Ottawa, at the age of thirty-five, was suddenly stricken with influenza complicated with double pneumonia. Then he waged successfully a battle with tuberculosis for over five years. The "happy warrior" after winning, was faced with a losing fight. Crippled and bedridden, as the result of organic nerve degeneration, he finally succumbed to complete paralysis. Yet, through all this progressive muscular atrophy, he reveals the true physician's touch of hope. A rare spiritual attainment is recorded.

Apart altogether from the human value of the book is its scientific. Dr. King assembles much material from philosophy, psychiatry, and other sources having a direct bearing on this border line subject, which will be important in medico-legal controversies and all social service work. Having shown in chapters on "instincts" "environment" "discrimination" and "subconscious self," how it is that symptoms of nervousness owe their origin to failure of the "moral self" to make the body conform to natural law, the author indicates at the end of the book how these symptoms may disappear.

The author is not disturbing in his psychology, for the whole discussion is an effort to find a middle way between extreme puritanical teaching and the sophistry of those who decide to get all the pleasure posible, "while the going is good."

DYING DOCTOR AS AUTHOR.

BATTLES WITH TWO DREAD DISEASES.

CONSUMPTIVE WRITES FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

The story of a doctor's brave fight against two dread diseases which attacked him is related by the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King) in the preface to "Nerves and Personal Power" (George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., 10s. 6d.), a book which his brother, Dr. D. MacDougall King, wrote during the last months of his life.

The Canadian Premier tells how his brother was practising his profession in Ottawa when, at the age of 35, tuberculosis attacked him and spread rapidly It was particularly virulent in its form, and recovery seemed beyond hope, but for his family's sake he decided to go to Colorado, where after a three years' fight with the disease he was sufficiently restored to be able to take up his practice again. For the benefit of other sufferers the doctor wrote a book entitled "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It."

"He believed," says Mr. Mackenzie King, "that once a patient could be brought to see that like rewards wait upon courage and discipline, whether the battle be against a human foe or against disease as one of the common enemies of mankind, the humblest private in the ranks of human sufferers might come to recognise himself a general commanding the forces of life in the resistance to death."

SECOND ATTACK.

Two years after Dr. King had resumed his practice, he was stricken with progressive muscular atrophy. He knew that in the case of this disease one form of victory alone was possible, and "that was the triumph of spirit over unconquerable odds."

Again, to pass on to fellow-sufferers and to his profession some benefit from his own tragic experience, he determined to write another book, which, by actual calculation of months, he believed he could complete before the end came. In his book on tuberculosis he had begun with fractions of hours, working up to portions of days of sustained effort. In writing the second book ("Nerves and Personal Power"), he began in such fullness of strength as he had regained; worked first with comparative freedom of movement; then crippled and bed-ridden; finally with complete paralysis of his entire body.

"All the while he faced knowingly not the possibility of restored life, but the certainty of approaching death.

UNABLE TO HOLD A PEN.

"Before the end came he was unable to hold a pen or to dictate a paragraph, but he had completed his self-imposed task. His last days, ever with the assistance and constant ministrations of his wife, were given over to attempts at revision of the manuscript."

The doctor's posthumously-published book abounds with a wonderful optimism, and is full of stimulating counsel to invalids.

"He believed," says Mr. Mackenzie King, "that once a patient could be brought to see that like rewards wait upon courage and discipline, whether the battle be against a human foe or against disease as one of the common enemies of mankind, the humblest private in the ranks of human sufferers might come to recognise himself a general commanding the forces of life in the resistance to death."

SECOND ATTACK.

Two years after Dr. King had resumed his practice, he was stricken with progressive muscular atrophy. He knew that in the case of this disease one form of victory alone was possible, and "that was the triumph of spirit over unconquerable odds."

Again, to pass on to fellow-sufferers and to his profession some benefit from his own tragic experience, he determined to write another book, which, by actual calculation of months, he believed he could complete before the end came. In his book on tuberculosis he had begun with fractions of hours, working up to portions of days of sustained effort. In writing the second book ("Nerves and Personal Power"), he began in such fullness of strength as he had regained; worked first with comparative freedom of movement; then crippled and bed-ridden; finally with complete paralysis of his entire body.

"All the while he faced knowingly not the possibility of restored life, but the certainty of approaching death.

UNABLE TO HOLD A PEN.

"Before the end came he was unable to hold a pen or to dictate a paragraph, but he had completed his self-imposed task. His last days, ever with the assistance and constant ministrations of his wife, were given over to attempts at revision of the manuscript."

The doctor's posthumously-published book abounds with a wonderful optimism, and is full of stimulating counsel to invalids.

NERVE TRAINING

Nerves and Personal Power. By D. Macdougall King. Allen and Unwin. 10s. 6d. net.

What is Psychology? By Charles W. Hayward. Allen and Unwin. 7s. 6d. net.

BOTH these books deal less with scientific psychology than with the practical possibilities of personal nerve training and control. The preface which the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King has contributed to his brother's posthumous work is in itself a document of no mean importance as showing the influence which a dominant will can exercise over the physical microcosm. Dr. Macdougall King was struck down at the age of 35 by tuberculosis, followed by a complicated nervous breakdown, and the last nine years of his life were a desperate struggle against mortal illness. There is a very pathetic and at the same time inspiring quality in Mr. Mackenzie King's account of the way in which his brother turned even his physical disabilities to a useful end. Though he was only able to devote a few minutes every day to work, he studied his own case so closely as to be able to produce in 1917 a valuable treatise on tuberculosis from the point of view of public health. When tuberculosis gave way in his case to a still more deadly disease, scientifically diagnosed as progressive muscular atrophy, he again undertook to " pass on to fellow-sufferers and his profession some benefit from his own tragic experience," and the book now before us is the consequence. We have read few pages more ennobling or inspiring than this plea for the cultivation and exercise of personal will-power, taken in conjunction with Mr. Mackenzie King's moving description of the circumstances in which it was written. Alike to nervous sufferers and to those who are in charge of their cases, the book is full of golden words, and it is a wonderful instance of the power of the human mind to triumph over physical disability.

Dr. Hayward's book takes for its aim " to make psychology understood by the people." It is marked by a fiery enthusiasm and a quenchless optimism which will appeal to the unscientific reader. It deals largely with the importance of environment as the chief influence in building up a strong and healthy psychical nature, and its remarks on education are full of good sense. There are some excellent chapters on auto-suggestion, in regard to which Dr. Coué has not, perhaps, shown any great advance on what was known to Virgil when he summed it all up in the famous remark, possunt quia posse videntur.

B. K. says that, in replying to inquirers for books on nerves, I could well have included "Nerves and Personal Power," by the late Dr. D. Macdougall King (Revell), which he has found most valuable for the lay reader. I have a double use for this book, the one indicated and that I may call it to the attention of the wife of the resident physician of San Quentin prison, for whom I recently compiled a strange and beautiful list. The books on it were to be used by men in the prison hospital and are by or about men who put up a brave fight under serious physical handicaps, like the "Autobiography of Dr. Trudeau" (Doubleday, Page), or the lives of Stevenson by Balfour (Scribner), or Mason (Stokes). Without stopping to look up a name I set down two solid pages of names and titles without going further back than modern literature. The "Journal of Marie Lénera" (Macmillan), who at fourteen was made dear even to me (the noblest and is surely of the highest literary quality of recent literature of confession, and there is Bashkirtseff's "Journal of a Disappointed Man" and "A Last Diary" (Doran), and the flashing glimpse of Parkman in Maud Howe Elliott's "Three Generations" (Little, Brown)—the pale man in black spectacles who tramped with a sort of desperate energy and then sat exhausted, her friend's father, who was "writing a very important book, but he can only work on it twenty minutes at a time." Dr. Macdougall King had won in a long fight with tuberculosis when a progressive muscular atrophy declared itself. Facing certain death, he set down the things he had learned to live by in this valuable book, "Nerves and Personal Power," "The Healing Power," by Helen Boulnois (Dutton), is a little book just written by an ex-invalid who has become a world traveler.

SCIENCE LEADER DR. CRILE DIES IN CLEVELAND

Co-Founder of Famous Clinic Won Honors in Wartime Surgery

Cleveland, Jan. 7 (AP). — Dr. George Crile, famed 78-year-old surgeon-scientist, who believed he performed the first direct blood transfusion, died today after receiving 25 of them in recent weeks.

Subacute bacterial endocarditis, a growth of germs which blocked the heart valves, caused death. His physician, Dr. Charles Hartsock, added that Dr. Crile had been confined to Cleveland Clinic since Nov. 11, more than a month longer than was known previously.

Dr. Crile.

The internationally known scientist spent more than 50 years in research on the nature of life and the loss of energy that attended death, studies which brought new surgical methods and medical theories. He was injured returning from a research trip two years ago when an airliner plunged into a Florida swamp, but recovered from double pneumonia and other ailments to resume his work at the clinic, which he helped found.

Concerned with preserving the natural function of organs, Dr. Crile successfully "blocked" nerves by anesthesia to prevent surgical shock.

Because of his success with goitre surgery, he often was referred to as a specialist in this branch. It was estimated he removed 25,000 goitres.

Cleveland Clinic World Famous.

His interest in surgery lay chiefly in the desire to test findings of the research laboratory, although he worked with the patient as his ultimate objective.

"The clinic," he once said, "is the crucible of the research laboratory."

To the Cleveland Clinic, of which he was co-founder, surgeons from all parts of the world journeyed to observe and discuss his methods. Disaster visited the clinic on May 15, 1929, when fire, laboratory explosions and poisonous fumes from burning X-ray films killed 124 patients and employees.

In the Spanish-American war of 1898 he was brigade surgeon with the rank of major, 2nd Army Corps, in Cuba and Puerto Rico. At the outbreak of the first Great War a plan for American university hospital units was started and Crile organized the first one at Western Reserve. With him as director, it sailed for Neuilly, France, Dec. 28, 1914, serving until April 1, 1915, when it was replaced by the Harvard unit.

When America went into the conflict, Crile scored another "first" when he organized the Lakeside unit, afterwards known as Base Hospital No. 4 of the United States Army. A bronze tablet at Rouen commemorates the work of the Lakeside unit. Its organizer received the Distinguished Service Medal of the United States in 1919, was made an honorary member of the military division, Companion of the Bath, by England in 1919, and chevalier of the French Legion of Honor in 1922.

After the war Crile and two colleagues, Drs. Frank E. Bunts and William E. Lower, conceived the idea of the Cleveland Clinic. Crile was born in Chili, O., Nov. 11, 1864, the son of Michael and Margaret Deeds Crile. He was christened "George Washington," but dropped the middle name in later years.

Acid-Alkali Balance.

In his research in blood chemistry he discovered the vital significance of an acid-alkali balance in an organism. His finding was clinically important because it showed that positive acidity is established when death occurs.

He noticed that in death the loss of energy was a constant factor. Under his scalpel and microscope went the organs and tissues and cells of more than 2,000 animals in the course of a long quest to detect energy controlling organs and compare their sizes with energy characteristics of different animals. His experiments indicated that the brain, heart, thyroid and adrenal glands and sympathetic nervous system controlled energy.

On this basis Crile pursued research toward relation of these organs to such diseases as high blood pressure, failures of circulation resulting from emotion or fatigue, heart disease, diabetes, overactive thyroid glands and stomach ulcer—ailments peculiar to man in his most civilized state. The study aimed also at a definition of civilized man in terms of energy, and ultimately to determine whether relative size of energy organs would explain man's diseases and powers. For animal specimens used in this work Crile searched the far corners of the earth.

Early in his research Crile evolved a method of overcoming "traumatic shock," the medical term which describes the method by which the sensation of pain is conveyed to the brain through the nerves leading to the part affected.

Kinetic System Theory.

Before the Medical Society of the State of New York Crile theorized on what he called "the kinetic system." He said this "system" consisted of a chain of five organs—brain, suprarenals, liver, muscles and thyroid—whose primary function was the transformation of latent energy into heat and motion. Deficiency in any link of the "kinetic chain," he said, caused loss of heat, of muscular or emotional reaction, of mental power and of the ability to combat infection.

His ultimate goal was development of his method for treatment of hypertension, or high blood pressure. The method involved removal of the abdominal nerve centre known as the celiac ganglion and severing of the nerves leading to the adrenal glands.

During his war service in France, Crile sought to determine how long wounds might go unattended before there was danger of tetanous infection (lockjaw). With others who made similar studies, he was credited with saving the lives and limbs of hundreds of soldiers as a result of this work and the development of methods for treatment of shock.

Some who watched the deft surgeon perform operations said he possessed a sense of "showmanship" that flashed in his technique. Associates, however, said the only element of showmanship was his "skill which amounted to artistry."

His manner was brisk and confident. He dominated groups and meetings, and fellow-surgeons, some of whom disagreed with his theories, frequently remarked about his personality. "He never slumped," a research collaborator said of him in describing his vitality.
