THE LAST SUPPER.

"And when they had sung a hymn they went into the Mount of Olives."

What song sang the twelve with the Saviour?

When finished the Sacrament wine?

Were they bowed and subdued in behavior

Or bold as made bold with a sign?

Were the hairy breasts strong and defiant,

Were the naked arms heavy and strong?

Were the bearded lips lifted reliant,

Thrust forth and fall starchy with song.

What song they! What sweet song of Zion,

With Christ in their midst like a crown!

While here sat St. Peter, the lion!

And there, like a lamb, with head down

On all work turned out.

Sat St. John, with his silken and raven

Rick hair on his shoulders, and eyes

Lifting up to the faces unshaven

Like a sensitive child in surprise.

Was the song as strength-hermen swinging

Their necks, full of hope, to the sea;

Or low, like the ripple wave, singing

Songs on their loved Galilee?

Were they sad with forebodings of sorrows

Like the birds that sing low when the breeze

Is tip-toe with a tale of to-morrows—

Of earthquakes and sinking of seas!

Ah! soft was their song as the waves are

That fall in low musical moans;

And sad should I say as the winds are

That blow by the white gravestones.

Interesting Story.

WIRED LOVE.

DOTS AND DASHES.

BY
ELLA CHEEVER THAYER.

'T he old, old story, in a new, new way.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

It was, of course, no continuation on his part that caused these emotions. He did not wish Cyn to throw herself away in matrimony, that was all; and so strong were his feelings on this point that he could not banish the idea from his mind all the rest of the evening, and was noticeably thoughtful.

But he was very gay; even unusually, wildly gay on the way home, and kept Mrs. Simonson, whom he escorted, in such a state of laughter that she burst three buttons, and was all "wheezed up" when they reached the hotel.

"Why are you so thoughtful to-night?" Clem asked Nattie, as they walked down their street behind the rest, in the wake of Jo's gait and Celeste's meaningless giggle. Celeste was clinging to the arm of the unwilling, but helpless Quimby, and chatting of the handsome tenor.

With a slight start, Nattie replied to Clem's question, "I do not know. Am I?"

"Yes; you have hardly spoken a word all the way. Is anything the matter?" asked Clem, and she, looking moodily to the ground, did not see the anxiety in his eyes as he spoke.

"Nothing!" she replied; then started him by bursting out passionately,

"I am tired of living with no object; with nothing but a daily routine. Can it be there is no better place in the world for me? That my life must be always thus? I cannot be contented!"

Clem stopped short and stared at her agitated face.

"I never knew you were not happy, Nattie," he said, gently.

"Oh! I am not unhappy; I am only discontented," Nattie replied.

"You are somewhat contradictory in your statements," said Clem, as they went on again, for she also had stopped.

"Is it office troubles that annoy you? Poor little girl, it is a monotonous life!"

Nattie flushed at the tenderness in his voice.

"That is one thing," she replied, a little tremblingly, "but I want something to work for, as Cyn has. I am ambitious; my present position can never content me; I am haunted all the time by an uneasy consciousness that if I was smart I should be doing something to get ahead; and yet, I don't know what to do!"

"I remember you once said something about becoming a writer; why not try that?" suggested Clem.

They had reached their own landing at the hotel, and paused. The remainder of the party had disappeared.

"It seems so hopeless," Nattie answered, dispiritedly; "there is no opening anywhere."

"But it will never do to wait for that, you know. If the world is a closed oyster, we must open it. Isn't that the way Cyn did?" said Clem, half surmising the realization of the difference between Cyn's brilliant success and her own plodding along that had caused her dejection; and as he spoke, he took her hand in his, but Nattie snatched it quickly away.

"Ah! Cyn!" she said in sudden and uncontrollable jealousy, "of course you could never expect me to compare with her!"

Clem looked at her a moment, then some emotion flashed his face, and he would have spoken had not Miss Kling, disgusted with her inability to catch a word from inside, opened her door, saying sharply,

"Are you coming in, Miss Rogers?"

"Certainly," Nattie replied quickly, and already ashamed of her jealous outburst. "Good night, Clem."

"But will you not come over and congratulate Cyn on her success?" he asked, detaining her. "I heard a carriage just stop, and think she is in it."

"Not to-night; to-morrow," said Nattie, hastily, and left him before he could again urge the request.

"Oh!" said Miss Kling, as Nattie closed the door behind her, "was that Mr. Stanwood who came home with you?"

"Yes," Nattie answered, briefly. "I should hardly have thought Miss Archer would have allowed it!" remarked Miss Kling, with a sneer.

"I don't know why she should have forbidden it!" replied Nattie, coldly, yet looking somewhat startled. Poor Nattie's nerves were decidedly unstrung to-night.

"You do not mean to say that you are ignorant of what every one else knows?" queried Miss Kling, with a malicious sparkle in her eyes; "that they are just the same as engaged?"

Nattie turned a very pale face towards her.

"I—I think you are mistaken," she faltered.

"Mistaken! no indeed!" said Miss Kling, positively; "I should think your own eyes might tell you that! Why, Mrs. Simonson says, Miss Archer has thought of nobody but him since he came into the house, and that he was in love with her, from his actions and the attentions he pays her, and Celeste told me the same thing, long ago. But I suppose Miss Archer is willing he should go home with you. She is, of course, jealous of you!"

There was a sneering emphasis in Miss Kling's last words, that made them anything but complimentary, as Nattie felt; but saying only, in a voice she vainly tried to steady,

"You may be right," she went into her own room, and locked the door behind her.

She knew now! knew what that first romantic acquaintance, that dejection at the companionship lost in the obnoxious red-head, that joy when Cyn was restored to her in Clem, that unsatisfied desire to have him back on the wire, all to herself; that suppressed jealousy of Cyn, led to—and what it all meant; that she loved him! and he, did he, as they said, love Cyn? alas! who could help loving bright, beautiful Cyn? To attract him to herself was only the romance of their first acquaintance—and even this Cyn slightly shared; it was not Cyn's fault. Nattie could not be guilty of the petty meanness of disliking her friend because she possessed attractions superior to her own. But if he loved Cyn, then, indeed, had the curtain fallen on the sad ending of her romance; the lights were out, and all was darkness. If he loved Cyn? Nattie, with the first full knowledge of her own feelings, could hardly hope otherwise, remembering their intimacy, his marked attention to her, his praise of her, and her winning beauty and talents. Yes, it must be that he loved her! Oh, why must Cyn be given everything, and she—nothing? What kind of fate was it that marked out the broad, sunny road for some, and the sombre, uneven pathway for another? Must her life be one of lonely discontent, a telegraph office at the beginning, and a telegraph office at the end? was this to be all?

"No!" thought Nattie, raising her head proudly, and looking at the red and swollen eyes that gazed at her from the opposite glass. "Life shall give me something of its best; if not of love, then of fame! and I will work and persevere until I gain it!"

Yet, for all her resolution, Nattie sobbed herself to sleep. Not so easy is it to renounce love, and look forward to a life barren of its best and sweetest gift.

And after this there was a change in her observable even to the undiscerning Quimby. Shadows had fallen over her face, lurked in her gray eyes and around the corners of her mouth. The old restlessness had given place to a settled gloom. She was less often seen among the gay circle that gathered in Cyn's parlor, pleading every possible excuse for staying away, and when with them, to his surprise and delight, and to Celeste's dismay, she devoted herself to Quimby, to Jo—to any one rather than to Clem. For most of all had she changed to him. Afraid of betraying her secret, and unable to control the pain that overpowered her when in his presence, now she knew her own heart, she avoided him in every practicable way, and seldom, even over their wire, talked with him. She was always "tired," or "busy," when he called her now.

Clem, surprised and puzzled by this unaccountable change, at first endeavored to overcome her coolness, but ended by becoming cool in his turn, and talked and joked with Cyn more than ever. And if a touch of the shadows on Nattie's face sometimes crept over his own, she, in her self-engrossment, did not observe it.

If Quimby's hopes burned brighter at this state of affairs, and he was consequently happier, Jo, for some reason unexplained, was not. In fact, he was decidedly queer; now gay, now horribly cynical, not to say morose.

Truly, Cupid, viewed in the character of a telegraphist, was far from being a success; for he had switched everybody off on to the wrong wire!

Cyn, gay unconscious Cyn, no more dreamed of Clem being supposedly in love with her, than she did that Jo was so filled with thoughts of her, that had he been a different kind of a man, one would have called him desperately in love. But Cyn, unconscious of all this, saw, and with sorrow, the ever-increasing coldness between Nattie and Clem. For she had quite set her heart on the romance that had commenced in dots and dashes culminating in orange blossoms—a Wired Love. But now, to her vexation, she saw her anticipations liable to be set at naught, and herself unable to obtain even a clew to the trouble. Like the "line man," who goes up and down to find why the wires will not work, she could not find the "break" anywhere, and decided that romance, whether "wired" or taken in the ordinary way, were certainly very unwise things to manage.

"It seems to me that you do not use that wire very often now," she said one evening to Clem and Nattie, the latter of whom she had forcibly dragged forth from the solitude of her room. "Were it not for me, it would rust. Why, I used to hear your clatter far into the small hours, but now—"

"Now we are more sensible," concluded Nattie, leaning over the piano to look at some music. "One gets tired of talking in dots and dashes after a time!"

Poor Nattie's troubles made her bitter sometimes.

"Yes, one wants a person they don't know to talk with, in order to make it interesting!" added Clem, not to be outdone.

"Good gracious!" thought Cyn, dismayed at the result of her probing. "This is really dreadful!" then she exclaimed impulsively,

"I hope you have not quarreled, you two!"

"Oh! dear no!" replied Nattie quickly, "what shall we quarrel about?"

But Clem, after looking at her for a moment, advanced and held out his hand, saying frankly,

"I believe we have been cross to each other of late, although how it happened I do not know! So let us make up and be good!"

Cyn looked up hopefully at this, but Nattie, who could hardly conceal her agitation, replied coldly,

"I do not see that anything has been the matter!" and placing a limp hand in his for an instant turned away.

Clem bit his lip, then took out his watch, saying,

"I believe I have an engagement to-day town this evening. I shall have to leave you now, I fear, ladies."

Nattie celebrated his departure by bursting into tears that she vainly tried to hide, and was detected in this situation on the sofa by Cyn.

Cyn's arms were about her in a moment, and Cyn's voice, said lovingly,

"What is it, dear? Tell me what is the matter lately? Trust me with it. Is it about Clem?"

With a determination, very brave and unselfish, but unfortunately entirely uncalculated for, not to mar Cyn's happy love by her sorrow, Nattie checked the tears, of which she was ashamed, and answered,

"No! I am very weak and foolish. The idea of my crying like a school-girl! I am only unhappy because—because—I am nobody!"

And this was all the information the sympathetic and perplexed Cyn could obtain.

Sitting that night on a low cricket before the fire with her dark hair unbound—and it was fortunate for Jo's peace of mind that he could not see her just then, because she was such an interesting "study"—Cyn thought it all over, and could not, as she told herself, make out what it was all about.

"I thought everything was going on so smoothly," she mused, "and now here is what Clem himself would term a cross on the wire! and no one can find out where it is! Doesn't she love him. I wonder? I should, if I was she! Does he love her? if he does not, he is no kind of a hero! Ah! I know what would test the matter! a crisis! Now, for instance, if the house would only get on fire, and Nat burn up—that is, almost—and Clem save her just in time—that is the sort of thing that brings these heroes to terms in the dramas! but I suppose—everything is so different in real life—Clem would not wake up in time, and she would burn to a crisp—or some one else would save her first—Quimby, for instance, he is always doing something he ought not! no, I don't think it would do to risk it! nevertheless, I am convinced that a crisis is essential to complete the circuit, telegraphically speaking, or in other words, to bring down the curtain on everybody, embracing everybody, with great éclat!"

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Are we to have no change in our Statute Labor Law for another year? The business of the Provincial Parliament must in the nature of things be near its close, and we have not observed that any reference has been made to it other than what appeared in the Provincial Engineer's report. We had hoped that during the present session something would be done in that direction, so that the present unjust and unsatisfactory Statute Labor Act would not appear in the 5th series of the Revised Statutes.

We have been requested to publish the following from the Municipal regulations:

"That no horses, mares, geldings, cattle, sheep, geese, or swine be allowed to run at large in King's County, except in that part being or lying eastward, south of the lower end of Gaspercaux as far west as the Duncan Hollow, (so called) thence southerly up the mountain by the Lawrence Davis House, thence south past the John Fuller House to the Township line. A fine of 25 cents on each horse, mare or gelding, and 12 cents on each sheep, goose, or swine, half to be paid to complainant, and half to the School Section therein, in addition to poundage and charges."

The matter of cattle running at large in the Township of Horton has been a vexed question for a long time. So far as we can remember the first objection came from the outlying, or mountain, districts, and petitions were freely circulated and presented to the old Court of Sessions praying that some regulation might be made to prevent parties living in the most productive parts of the Township, near the dykes, from sending their cattle to those remote districts where good pasturing could be found for a portion of the summer, but which, after a short period, became scarce when many of the cattle thus sent out became unruly and broke through the inclosures of those living in the neighborhoods destroying their crops. On the reception of these petitions and upon proper representations being made to the Court of Sessions then sitting it was on motion resolved that no cattle &c. should be allowed to run at large in the Township of Horton; but during the same session the above resolution was reconsidered and amended, allowing them to run at large in all that portion of Horton lying south and east of certain bounds as set forth in the above cited regulation which has been continued from year to year since.

The regulation passed at the last meeting of Council goes considerably further and imposes certain fines in addition to the poundage and other charges and specifies how they are to be appropriated, but fails to provide a way by which they can be collected. If it were intended that the fines should be collected along with the poundage and that the animal impounded should be held as security until paid, it should have been so stated in the regulation. And further there should be some way provided to sell or dispose of such animals as should not be claimed within a certain time, thereby relieving the poundkeeper of any risk which he in ignorance of duty might incur. We have never been able to understand why the south eastern portion of the Township of Horton should be under a different regulation from that of any other part of King's Co. and think it extremely doubtful if any one can. Those living in that locality or a large proportion of them have always been opposed to this innovation upon their rights and claim that they should not be inflicted with the nuisance of large droves of cattle tramping and peaching up their streets, hooking and tearing down their fences, opening and exposing their enclosures, subjecting their crops to destructions, while they are compelled to keep their own animals at home or within the limits assigned them, or run the risk of having them impounded and to pay expenses.

SABBATH SCHOOL MISSIONS.

The Wolfville Baptist Sabbath School met in the Baptist Church on Sunday afternoon, April 5th, to hold a Mission Service in place of the usual quarterly review. The day being fine there was a large gathering of parents and friends of the pupils; while the attendance of the scholars was unusually good. The exercises were entirely missionary in their character, questions especially relating to this subject were asked by the superintendant, and suitable scriptural proofs in reply were repeated in turn by one or more members of each class. Appropriate music was rendered by the children and teachers, under the direction of Mr. Burpee Witter, assisted by Miss Maggie Bishop at the organ. John W. Barrs, Esq., who has been superintendant of this school for over twenty-five years, in a brief report showed the school to be in good working order. The attendance larger than usual for a winter session. The average (stormy Sundays included) was 125 scholars, and 16 teachers. The treasurer's report showed that last year the school contributed $66 for the library and $100 for missions, also that contributions for the quarter just ended were greater than any previous quarter, and it was expected that at the end of this year it would exceed the amount collected last year. Mr. Everett Sawyer in a short but very pleasing address told the children about the countries and the people to whom they sent their money. The various mission stations in which Canadian Baptists are especially interested were pointed out on a large map, and a brief reference made to each of the workers now in the "Foreign Field." Professor Keirstead following, spoke of destitute places in the lower provinces, where the Gospel was seldom preached, and where Sunday Schools were almost unknown. Of the efforts of the Home Mission Board to send the "glad tidings" into poor localities and the good resulting therefrom. Addresses were made by Rev. Geo. Curry, a missionary from India who has been spending a few months in his native land, and by Dr. Rand. The latter gentleman spoke of the need of "systematic benevolence," referring to the school method pursued by the Superintendent and teachers among their classes in this school which was followed by grand results, and which was worthy of being imitated by other Sunday schools in this Province. The exercises ended with a poem, "The Macedonian Cry," recited by Miss Carrie Kempton. This was rendered most admirably, and only the day and the place prevented the listeners manifesting their pleasure by hearty applause. Truly, as the Superintendent stated, "The best was kept till the last." The audience were all deeply interested in the service, and departed hoping that before many months, teachers and scholars, parents and friends might be gathered together for a similar service.

CORRESPONDENCE.

(We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents.)

REPLY TO "LEGAL RATES."

DEAR ACADIAN:—In your last issue a correspondent asks if the commissioners of the Grand Pre or any other dyked marsh have the power to build a piece of new dyke inside of the old one, without first obtaining the consent, in writing, of two thirds of the proprietors? and quotes Sec. 4, Chap. 40 of Revised Statutes. There are always people who are continually finding fault and trying to make trouble, as well as people who jump at the first chance to evade the payment of their just debts. Some such people have lately been trying to make trouble about the rates on the Grand Pre and I suppose "Legal Rates" is one of them who takes this opportunity to get himself noticed. I would tell "Legal Rates" that Sec. 4 is not the whole Chapter, and the commissioners probably knew what they were about before commencing the work, and had as good legal advice as even the Grand Pre Attorney General could give. If "Legal Rates" is not satisfied with the action of the commissioners he can turn them out—that is if he and his friends are able to do it.

ONE WHOSE RATES ARE PAID.

LETTER FROM MR. HARRINGTON.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

GENTLEMEN,—I notice in your issue of the tenth of April "Escaped the Draft," by "Patriot." I should consider "Patriot" a little more patriotic. A condemnation of one without a reason does not make right or wrong or give any general information to the reading public. If politicians, hungry office seekers, and land grabbers have gone to the North West and encroached on the rights of the inhabitants and their grievances and representatives treated with contempt, can anything less than what has already happened be expected. Would they not have a better plea and as good a right to come here and drive us from our holdings as we to go there and do so by them. Our ancestors usurped this country from their race, but I have not heard of any instance of their attempting to do so with us. What has this great Canada Pacific Railway done for us, or what is it likely to do any more than it has already, to overburden us with debts and taxes. At this present time many of our best and most worthy and enterprising people are leaving the country in disgust never to return. To escape the draft is natural, either naval or military, leave their certificates and pass off under assumed names and like spirits of the deep, not there when called for. Playing sailor or soldier boy is all very well so far as pay and rations go, but to be called into active service is another thing. The only inducement that I can see to bring the volunteers forward would be to give them each double holdings and two daughters of the West as an inducement. Should the natives, as they say, get behind their Winchester, and volunteers enough sent to disperse them, the female supply will likely be far in excess of the demand—what then?—another tax for Emigration Agency to supply the deficiency, would it not be more economical to give them each three? I remain, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

W. HARRINGTON.

P. S. Thanking you for past favor trusting you will give this publicity,
W. R. H.

Our North West Rebellion.

WINNIPEG, April 16th.—The Hudson Bay authorities received a dispatch to-day from Battleford stating that the Indians were rounding up all stock across the Saskatchewan and driving it off. Gen. Middleton camps with the troops to-night at a place named Clark's general, 18 miles from Clark's crossing, where he expects to arrive by to-morrow night.

FORT QU'APPELLE, April 16th.—Another day has passed and no news has been heard from Fort Pitt, although every effort is being made to ascertain the actual condition of affairs at that point. As stated yesterday, a messenger was sent from Battleford for the purpose of communicating with the besieged garrison and was captured by the Indians. It will be a very difficult matter to get a messenger through the Indian lines. The report that Fort Pitt has been captured is generally credited, but no confirmation has been received from any authoritative source and there, therefore, remains hope that the place has not been captured.

CLARK'S CROSSING, N. W. T., April 17th.—Troops arrived on the banks of the Saskatchewan, at this place, about 11.30 this morning. A flying column, with General Middleton, came here last night to seize the ferry at the point. A report reached here this morning that half-breeds had seized Riel and Dumont, and were holding them as prisoners, but this is not credited. Weather the past two days been very cold and wet with a strong wind blowing in the face of the troops, which made marching very difficult. They will probably remain here till the 10th Royal Grenadiers arrive and also forage for horses. The Royals are expected to arrive to-morrow evening.

WINNIPEG, April 19th.—A despatch received here to-day by the Hudson Bay authorities from Calgary via Edmonton, pronounced the report regarding the massacre of Frog Lake as false. This seems to confirm the idea entertained all along by Archbishop Tache that he doubted the reliability of the report of the atrocity.

CLARK'S CROSSING, N. W. T., April 21st.—A despatch just received from Battleford says a messenger just returned from Pitt says that Pitt has fallen. Two police have been killed, and it is feared the whole party has been massacred. An Indian told a messenger that Indians had gone down the river, but this is not credited.

CLARK'S CROSSING, N. W. T., April 22d.—News from Battleford says Fort Pitt police, 21 in number, had a fight on Wednesday last with about three hundred Indians of Big Bear's and Little Poplar's bands. One policeman, D. L. Cowan, son of Wm. Cowan, Ottawa, was killed.

WINNIPEG, April 22d.—The latest news from Clark's crossing just before the wire went down indicates that Middleton would not reach Batoche's before Friday morning, upon which day exciting news may be expected from the seat of rebellion.

SASKATCHEWAN CROSSING, via SWIFT CURRENT, April 22d.—Col. Otter is pushing on a flying column of cavalry, artillery, one galling gun, scouts and infantry in wagons to-night. He has advanced about sixty miles from the river. Indians were seen on bluffs on the north shore of the river, but they appeared to be friendly. There is no truth in the rumor that one of Riel's spies was captured near here, as the intruder was simply an old Indian on a begging expedition.

1885-CALDWELL & MURRAY.-1885

To our Customers in Wolfville and elsewhere.

We have not had time to paint our Store, whitewash the hitching post, or straighten up our wood pile this spring, but we have cleaned up the old paint, washed the windows, and are selling that unsightly pile of wood as quickly as we possibly can.

What has kept us so busy? Why we have been selecting, receiving and putting in store one of the finest stocks of Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, and Furniture, etc. that we have ever had the pleasure of showing in this place before.

We are a good deal like the proverbial singed cat, better than we look, and don't try to look better than we are.

We now ask you to come in and see for yourselves that we can back up what we advertise.

Prof. Ward gives a vocal and instrumental concert in the Church at Gasperau this evening assisted by pupils of his school.

The past year has been a very prosperous one for Acadia College. The Dr. complimented the students on good conduct and on their work.

CARPETS! CARPETS!—Caldwell & Murray have received, ex str. Cal. edonia, from London a large assortment of All Wool, Union, Tapestry and Hemp Carpets.

FROM SEA.—The first arrival from sea this season was the Schr. Mary Grace, Card, from Parrsboro', with coal to W. J. Higgins, which arrived yesterday morning.

ROOMS TO LET.—Four or five good sized rooms in the upper part of a house, situated in a central part of the village. Will be rented at a moderate sum. Apply at this office.

Mr. E. S. Crawley is becoming quite an expert in the art of Photography. We were shown some very fine photos, taken by him, of Dr. Bars' flock of "Brahmas," a few days since.

We are now furnishing Letter and Statements, Business Cards, Shipping Tags, and all kinds of plain and ornamental printing at extremely low prices. Samples and prices furnished on application.

The examinations in the different departments of the Public School take place next week, and we hope a large number of the parents will attend. In the past there has not been enough interest manifested in this very important institution.

The public are beginning to anticipate a literary treat, as R. J. Burdette will lecture under the auspices of the Acadia Athenaeum, in College Hall, Wolfville, on the 6th of May. Subject, "Home." 1 ins.

The weather during the past week has been remarkably fine for this time of year, and the streets are still dry and dusty. The farmers are beginning to sow, and gardens are being made ready for the seed. A good warm rain would be very beneficial.

BRONCHITIS.—Dr. H. D. Ruggles, of Weymouth, writes: "In a case of obstinate Chronic Bronchitis, which had baffled the usual treatment in such cases, EAGLE'S PHOSPHOLEINE acted like a magic, and I ascribe the recovery entirely to the use of it. I have also found it to be a valuable remedy in Consumption and other wasting diseases."

CARTS! CARTS! CARTS!!—Middleton says he received carte blanche from the Government to crush out the rebellion, and hang the ring-leaders etc.; but Caldwell & Murray have their Carts from Montreal and will supply them to the children very cheap. 30c. will buy a good cart; 90c. will buy a better one. $1.25 will buy a splendid Canadian express in complete running order.

A life saved for thirty-five cents! A lady in Boston had Diphtheria and was almost dead from strangulation, but was instantly relieved and finally cured by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Every family should have a bottle ready for instant use.

ENTERTAINMENT.—The Vestry of the Methodist Church was well filled on Friday evening last to hear Mr. D. W. Campbell's lecture on "The World," and all seemed much pleased with his fine description of the different countries he had visited and with the beautiful dissolving views. Mr. Campbell lectures to-night in the Presbyterian Church on "London" and no one should miss hearing him. He is a fluent speaker and his views of the different places in and around London are very fine. Give him a full house.

Profitable investment. One dollar's worth of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders fed to a coop of thirty hens will yield a profit of three dollars, besides preventing all manner of diseases. Be sure to get Sheridan's. The large 25c packs of other makes are worthless.

Born.—At Victoria, B. C., on April 20th the wife of Rev. Walter Bates, of a son.

EUREKA!

Found! a Plum Tree that will not Black Knot!

The Masters Plum Tree has stood the test 40 years in Kentville, King's County, Nova Scotia. Chas. A. Masters, of Kentville, found this tree growing on lands now owned by Judge G. A. Blanchard forty years ago, and removed the tree to his garden in the village, where it now stands a healthy bearing tree, and is now owned by me. There are scores of trees throughout the village in bearing from 4 to 20 years old which bear every year, and not a vestige of black knot appears on one of them. The tree is an annual bearer of rapid growth, growing tall not spreading. The Plum is quite large, purp-e color, and of excellent quality. It is the best preserving plum grown, and sells higher than any plum brought into the market. Last year, while the crop was immense, this plum readily brought $3.00 per bushel, $1.00 more than any other variety offered for sale. We have several hundred first class trees to offer for the spring planting and intend to plant 6,000 root grafts here. That this is the best and most profitable Plum Tree to plant, that is grown in the Dominion of Canada, and that it will not black knot we refer the planters of this delicious fruit to F. S. Masters, Barrister, of whom we purchased the original tree; also to Chas. A. Masters, G. A. Blanchard (Judge), J. R. Blanchard, H. B. Webster, M. D., J. E. Mulloney, M. D., Otho Eaton, John Byrne, T. E. Smith, J. A. Shaw.

OUR COUNTRY'S CALL.

BY FRED B. WOODS, WINSOR.
Hark! our country's voice is calling,
How it thrills the spring-time air!
Soldiers of the sea-girt city,
It to you doth summons bear.

Haste ye brave men to my succour,
Haste ye to the fur Northwest;
Riel is rising in rebellion,
Helpless settlers are distressed.

Haste and quell the dark disorder,
Bring the rebel chief to shame;
Do not let a murderous outlaw
Tarnish your fair country's name.

Soldiers of the sea-girt city,
All men's eyes are fixed on you;
Some have said that ye are cowards,
Mean, ignoble, base, untrue.

Soldiers of the sea-girt city,
We believe you're strong and brave
Men who rather than dishonour,
Quick would choose an honour'd grave.

Go! and may success go with you,
Make the rebels quickly yield,
Go! and if Love's prayers availeth,
God himself, shall be your shield.

Soldiers of our great Dominion,
Brave men only may be free!
Show by deeds your land is worthy
Of the grandest destiny!

—Halifax Herald.

SHUT OUT.

Here is a pathetic story which comes to us from the prairie country of western Louisiana; a vast tract of swamps and cypress forest, sparsely settled by the Acadians who emigrated here to escape persecution a century ago, and have not in that time changed their language or their habits.

About fifty years ago Françoise Lassalle, the wife of Jean Lassalle, living near Bayou Lafourche, was struck with leprosy. Her husband cared for her until he died, then she was left alone in her little house, with its garden and orchard. She had no children.

The hunger within her for human companionship grew intolerable at times, it is probable, for she would creep on Sundays to a hill overlooking the chapel, and sit there watching her neighbors going in to worship. Many a prayer went up for "la pauvre Mere Lassalle," as they saw the crouching figure far away under the trees.

For a year or two she was busied with her orchard, grafting orange trees and trimming peaches. One September, a notice was affixed to the church-door in the night, stating on a certain day Mere Lassalle would hide herself in the marsh, in order that the children might take the fruit from the orchard. At the bottom was written, "Pray for the leper."

The children went, followed by their parents, and had a happy afternoon. When they had all gone, a lonely figure crept back to the house, to find many little tokens of neighborly kindness and sympathy.

Year after year this day came round in which the lonely woman thus came near to her kind, although she could neither see them nor hear their voices.

One September it passed without the usual pitiful message from her. Some of the neighbors ventured to the house. The humble body of the leper was there, but Mother Lassalle at last had gone to those who had loved her so well in old days, and who had been waiting for her long.

PRINTER'S FEE BILL.

The following fee bill is posted in a conspicuous place in a Western newspaper office.

To call a man a "progressive citizen," when it is known that he is lazier than a government male, $175.

Referring to a deceased citizen as "a man whose place will remain vacant," when you know he was the best poker in town, $175.

Calling a female a "talented and refined lady, a valuable acquisition to society," with variation, $271.

Calling a man a "liar" during a campaign with proportionate reduction if the fight becomes warm, 79 cents.

Referring to an old citizen as a "relic of antiquity," 81 cents.

Calling a newly-made lawyer a "legal light of which the profession should feel proud," $1.18.

To say a merchant "has the best stock of goods in the city," when he does not spend a dime for advertising in half a century, $333-33.

Reporting a man to have made a "thrilling speech," when two thirds of his audience fell asleep under his melodious voice, $52.50.

To say a man is "sober" when such has not been the case in fifteen years, $18.20.

For calling a new-made bride a "queen of society," $1.70.

For saying of an amateur newspaper, which looks as though it had been run through a cheese press, with shoe blacking or coal tar for ink, that it is a "model of typographical neatness," $1.709.

For referring to a political speech as a "masterly effort," $4.

For saying that "Mr. Blank, through the earnest solicitation of his friends, has consented to the use of his name before the approaching convention," $25.

For referring to a man as "the oldest abolitionist," 5 cents.

*Must be paid invariably in advance.
