WOLFVILLE, N.S., MAR. 17, 1916.

Editorial Brevities.

Ten Austrians, posing as Russians, secured work as laborers in the G. T. R. shops at Stratford, Ont. Their disguise was too thin, however, for some real Russians employed in the big plant found that their supposed compatriots were unable to speak the Russian language. The ten alien enemies were taken to an internment camp.

Bulgaria is now repenting of her alliance with Germany, and strained relations are manifest. Turkish troops have been withdrawn from Asia Minor and supplemented by German troops with artillery to defend the Bulgarian Black Sea and Aegean coast. The Germans fear a revolutionary outbreak in Turkey and a massacre of German officers. The king of Bulgaria has taken refuge at Coburg because he fears assassination. Both Turkey and Bulgaria will see for separate peace when Rumania intervenes.

March Rod and Gun has an interesting table of contents for the lover of outdoor life. Bonycauld Dale contributes the leading article on "The New Sport for the Spring Duck Shooter." F. V. Williams writes of "Jim's Fox," R. J. Fraser of "The Men who can't come back." Norman Lett describes "Three Weeks' Canoe Trip in Algonquin Park," and E. O. Perrin contributes the story of "Baronard's Trap," the hero in which sets out to capture a bear and succeeds in landing an even more valuable and a dulle unexpected prize. There are besides the regular departments devoted to Guns and Ammunition, Fishing Notes, The Trap, The Kennel, etc., are calculated to attract sportsmen who are interested in matters of this kind. Rod and Gun is published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont.

The political situation in the three prairie provinces is interesting. In Manitoba where the Liberals recently came into power there is trouble over school matters, and two supporters of the government have gone over to the opposition. It is not felt that their action will seriously embarrass the government but a party seldom gets into trouble quite so soon after its return to power, and the school question in Manitoba is a dangerous question to monkey with. In Saskatchewan and Alberta where the Liberals are also in power, scandals have arisen and serious charges have been brought against members of the government and also against several private members. There have already been several resignations. No doubt searching investigations will be held as was the case in New Brunswick, and the guilty should be driven from office.

A Washington despatch says:—A bill has been introduced in congress prohibiting the advertising of the sale of liquor. The house bill is known as H. R. 56, and the Senate bill is S. 427. It was introduced by Senator Bankhead, Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads of the Senate. The bill is very stringent providing a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years, or both, for the violation of its provisions. On the grounds that the Alabama laws prohibit the circulation of liquor advertisements to the State, Attorney General William I. Martin and Judge Samuel D. Weakley of Birmingham will appear in the Federal Court at Chattanooga and ask that the court issue an order prohibiting the Southern Express Company from accepting liquor shipments for Alabama that contain liquor advertising matter.

The liberal newspapers here in the east are extracting considerable comfort from the result of two by-elections recently held in British Columbia, when the government candidates were defeated by large majorities. However, the Bowser government can afford to lose several members, as there was practically no opposition in the house since the last election—it was all government. It is expected that a general election will be held in British Columbia some time this spring or early summer, and the fight will probably be an interesting one. The government is now busily engaged repairing its political fences and it may pull through, but it is safe to say that its majority will likely be cut down almost to the vanishing point. That the government has been wildly extravagant seems to be generally taken for granted, and the people have apparently grown tired of that sort of thing.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

You can ward off many anxious moments if, at the first sign of a Cough or Cold, you will use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It loosens the phlegm, it heals the sore throat and bronchial lining, allays fever and gives good results at once. If influenza, Bronchitis or Whooping Cough have developed, you can count on this splendid old family remedy for sure relief.

Toy Making Industries.

Ottawa, March 17.—It is a curious fact that the nation whose soldiers used little Belgian children as shields to protect them against the fire of British and French guns, the nation which rejoices when bombs dropped from Zeppelins kill innocent English children, the nation that exulted when the bodies of murdered children from the Lusitania floated on the ocean, is the one which before the outbreak of the war made toys for children all over the world. There was no sentiment in it. The Germans knew that every child throughout the world delighted to play with toys and every little girl desired a doll. It was a matter of business to supply the universal demand.

In almost every Canadian household children played with German dolls and toys. Once a year the great Canadian department stores and the wholesale houses that supplied small retail stores with toys sent their buyers to Germany to purchase toys. Since the outbreak of the war German goods of all kinds being excluded from Canada the large department stores and the wholesale houses have found it exceedingly difficult to get toys to supply the Canadian demand and similar conditions prevail in every country of the British Empire.

The Department of Trade and Commerce has recently received several inquiries from England as to whether Canadians can supply toys to take the place of the German toys now excluded from the United Kingdom. With a view to encouraging the manufacture of toys in Canada both for the home market and for export Sir George Foster has arranged for a Toy Conference which will take place in the Royal Bank Building at the corner of King and Yonge Streets, Toronto, on the 28th of March beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning. A large number of samples of German toys such as were formerly imported into Canada will be on exhibition to show Canadian manufacturers what the Germans supplied and there will be a collection of American toys to show what our neighbors in the United States have been doing to replace German toys. It is hoped that all Canadian manufacturers of toys will send exhibits so that the exhibition will be thoroughly representative. There has been a surprising development of toy manufacturing in Canada since the outbreak of the war and there are known to be not less than twenty-four toy manufacturers in Canada at the present time. There may be others. All manufacturers of children's parsonages and games are invited to send exhibits. Most of those now manufacturing toys in Canada are making them as a sideline, using waste materials, but there are a few concerns that are devoting their entire attention to the manufacture of toys. While the Toy Conference will not open until March 28, it is desired to have the exhibits in place not later than March 21, in order that everything may be well arranged. It is proposed to keep the toys on exhibition for about a week after the day of the Conference. Exhibits should be addressed, Toy Conference, Royal Bank Building, corner King and Yonge Streets, Toronto.

All the large department stores and a number of wholesale houses in Montreal and Toronto have promised to send their toy buyers to the Conference and as most of these toy buyers have been accustomed to visit Germany every year and are acquainted not only with the requirements of the Canadian market but also with German methods it is expected that they will make practical suggestions of value to Canadian toy manufacturers and those who contemplate the manufacture of toys in Canada. All Canadian toy manufacturers all department stores, wholesale houses and retail merchants who handle toys are invited to send representatives to this Conference, and any others who may be interested in making or selling toys will be welcomed.

As one of the objects of the Conference is to interest capital in the development of toy industries already established it is hoped that capitalists willing to investigate the possibilities of the industry will be present at the Conference. It is believed that many of our large industries might make use of waste materials in the manufacture of toys and it will be well worth while for such industries to send representatives to the Conference. Sir George Foster will take the chair and deliver the opening address.

Militia Orders.

Among the orders recently issued to Recruiting Officers is one regarding the Separation Allowance for wives of recruits which says that "The recruit must be married at the time of his enlistment or within thirty days thereafter, such marriage after enlistment being with the permission of his commanding officer, application for such permission being made at the time of enlistment."

These restrictions are intended to prevent improper and undesirable persons being brought on the married strength and will not interfere with any deserving or bona fide cases.

BOWLEY—WOODWORTH.

An event of local interest took place on Wednesday last, March 16th, when Lillian Frances Woodworth, only daughter of Mr. W. Woodworth, of Wolfville, was joined in matrimony to Harold Burton Bowley of Paradise, N.S. The ceremony was performed by a personal friend of the bride's family, the Rev. John Peckoc, B.A. The nuptials took place at the home of the bride and were of a quiet character, only the near relatives being present. The bride was dressed in a becoming traveling costume of navy-blue serge and wore a large picture hat. After the ceremony a substantial breakfast was provided for all present. Later the happy couple left Wolfville on the 9:45 train en route for Paradise where part of the honeymoon is to be spent.

The evening before the wedding the bride was the recipient of many gifts, which were showered upon her by a host of friends and well-wishers. The choir and congregation of the Methodist church showed their appreciation of her services as organist by presenting her with such appreciated gifts. The young ladies of the Y. W. C. T. U. of which the bride is president also organized the event by presenting a handsome wicker rocking chair. Many other gifts, too numerous to be mentioned, testified to the popularity of the young couple.

Some Other Day.

There are wonderful things we are going to do.
Some other day.
Some wonderful plans we'll carry through.
Some other day.
There are loving words we're going to speak.
There are burdened souls we're going to seek.
We are going to help the poor and weak.
Some other day.
Some glorious victories we're going to win.
Some other day.
We are going to conquer besetting sin.
Some other day.
There are beautiful flowers we're going to pick.
There are wreaths of kindness we're going to make.
We'll visit the poor, the needy and sick.
Some other day.
Ah, yes, but perhaps it will be too late.
Some other day.
For the tender words that hearts now crave.
And the wreaths of kindness which we now save.
May be kept to be laid upon the grave.
Some other day.
—N. P. Nielsen in United Methodist.

Russia has been sober for the brief period of the war, and her criminal statistics already show the wisdom of the Czar's action in banishing vodka from the land. In thirty-three precincts of Moscow for the first half-year of 1914 there was an average of 896 criminal cases a month, while for the first "sober" month there were only 266. Crime was thus reduced 34.7 per cent.—Selected.

"Newspapers have turned the searchlight on the dark, dirty dungeons and cleaned them out to make the cities pure. Liquor is the crime of crimes, the sin of sins. It is the source of three-fourths of all the crime, and it takes three-fourths of your taxation to take care of the lobster after you land him."

"Why is it anti-temperance more than anti-grocery store, or any other store? Who is against it? The church, the school, the home, the scientific world, the military world are against it. If liquor is good why don't you have breweries on the firing line? If it is not good for the soldier is it good for you? Listen. Somebody is just pulling the wool over your eyes."

FIRE'S GOOD WORK

How a Great Forest Conflagration Proved a Blessing in Disguise.

BY JAMES HARRISON.

Elmer held Watson guiltless of his innumerable offenses against him because of Watson's wife.
In the southwest, where men are apt to be vented, Elmer dwelled unharmed, mousing impressions against Elmer, holding him up to the scorn of the township. No one was braver than Watson when dealing with his cronies in front of the Westwood hotel and boasting what he would do when he next met Elmer face to face. But Elmer only laughed at Watson's threats.

The men were neighbors. Elmer owned five hundred acres and herded his cattle upon the government ranges. Watson was a sheep man and that would have been enough to cause a quarrel, had not the long fence settled by a line drawn clear across the state, separating the spheres of the two antagonists. Elmer, on his arrival at Westwood, had gone to call upon his neighbor to talk over their boundaries. But he found Watson in a drink stupor and a red-eyed girl of twenty-two cooking upon the cheap oil stove in the wretched cabin.

"Mrs. Watson," asked Elmer, "doffing his hat, "I am Elmer; I have taken the neighboring range. I came to talk over—" Then he paused in embarrassment and saw the wounded pride on her face and the angry glint in her eyes.
"Mr. Watson shall see you tomorrow," said the girl quietly, and Elmer withdrew, wondering and dismayed that such a girl should be bound to such a man.

He halted at the back of the cabin to fix his boot. Watson, thinking that he had gone, sat up on the couch.
"You—" he yelled, uttering a vile oath, "I've trapped you at last. You thought I was sleeping, didn't you, and that you could bring that man into my home? I know that you've been sneaking him while I was tending sheep on the range. I'll—"
He staggered across the cabin toward the girl. Elmer heard the cheap tin rattles upon the stove and strode back into the cabin. Watson was standing over his wife in an attitude of impending assault. Elmer took him by the shoulders and ram him back across the room.

"I don't believe in interfering between a man and his wife—ordinarily," he said. "But if you ever lay a finger upon this lady I'll shake your teeth down your rum-soaked throat, you honest—"

Watson fell back with a groan and Elmer, releasing him, departed with sudden realization of the folly of his quixotic action. It would go hard with Mrs. Watson now. He dared not look at her as he passed out of the door.
The next time he met her was when his cattle had strayed near Watson's boundary. She was seated upon the ground in the lush grasses, almost hidden by them. Elmer's keen ears had heard her sobs before he saw her.

He dismounted from his horse and went toward her awkwardly, and stood looking down at her. She sprang to her feet and faced him; her face was scarlet and the tears were still upon her cheeks.
Elmer stretched out his hands and grasped her closely. "Mrs. Watson forgive me," he said. "It just makes my blood boil. If ever I can help you—"

"No, you cannot help me," she said, turning her face away.
"But you are only a girl," he exclaimed. "You cannot have been married long. You have all your life before you; you cannot endure to be linked in this hideous way for the rest of your life."
"You must not say any more," Elmer, she answered coldly, "troubles are of your own making; must bear them alone."

She paused and her face blanch. She looked round and Elmer's shadow fell upon her. Ten yards off Watson was lying in the grass, guarding them, a sneer on his face. Elmer hesitated a moment, and strode away.
He learned something of her a few days later from some of townspeople. Emmeline Watson had been married to her husband six months before they moved west from St. Louis. She was the orphan daughter of a famous architect who had killed himself in shame at the impending bankruptcy. Ignorant of the world, she had fallen a victim to the coarse, good-looking traveling man who had told her he loved her. They were married; six weeks later she learned that Watson was a drunkard and an ex-convict. She had prevailed on him to go west, to make a new start. For a time he had tried to reform, but his evil nature had proved dominant and he had shamelessly abused and ill-treated her. Yet she seemed to cling to him all the more because of it.

Watson spread the story of his wife's encounter with Elmer through Westwood. Some day, he boasted, he would kill him. But when the next morning Watson skulked past, or turned down a side street, pretending not to have seen him. Meanwhile Elmer was deliberating. If he interfered again he would take some irrevocable step. But he knew that Watson's insinuations were true; he loved Emmeline Watson, and in the few short moments which they had had he had discerned in her own heart an answering inclination toward him. But he knew also, that so long as Watson lived she would be true to him.

He had controlled his rising passion though it went hard with him. At night, lying in his lonely cabin, he thought of Emmeline's beautiful face and clear eyes, the knowledge of her truth and honor maddened him. She was the one woman for him; as long as he lived his love for her would be as potent as that of Job's wife. His passion drove him forth to mount his horse and gallop furiously across the ranges under the stars returning exhausted, his horse sweating and foaming, on the winnowing plain of the eastern hills.

On one such night he had had a harder battle than ever before. Felt thoughts came to him. He would kill Watson. Everyone knew that Watson had threatened to take his life; he could not be convicted, or even tried. Why should he not relieve her from this fearful chain she wore? It was his. His passion drove him forth to mount his horse and gallop furiously across the ranges under the stars returning exhausted, his horse sweating and foaming, on the winnowing plain of the eastern hills.

On one such night he had had a harder battle than ever before. Felt thoughts came to him. He would kill Watson. Everyone knew that Watson had threatened to take his life; he could not be convicted, or even tried. Why should he not relieve her from this fearful chain she wore? It was his. His passion drove him forth to mount his horse and gallop furiously across the ranges under the stars returning exhausted, his horse sweating and foaming, on the winnowing plain of the eastern hills.

townspeople. Emmeline Watson had been married to her husband six months before they moved west from St. Louis. She was the orphan daughter of a famous architect who had killed himself in shame at the impending bankruptcy. Ignorant of the world, she had fallen a victim to the coarse, good-looking traveling man who had told her he loved her. They were married; six weeks later she learned that Watson was a drunkard and an ex-convict. She had prevailed on him to go west, to make a new start. For a time he had tried to reform, but his evil nature had proved dominant and he had shamelessly abused and ill-treated her. Yet she seemed to cling to him all the more because of it.

Watson spread the story of his wife's encounter with Elmer through Westwood. Some day, he boasted, he would kill him. But when the next morning Watson skulked past, or turned down a side street, pretending not to have seen him. Meanwhile Elmer was deliberating. If he interfered again he would take some irrevocable step. But he knew that Watson's insinuations were true; he loved Emmeline Watson, and in the few short moments which they had had he had discerned in her own heart an answering inclination toward him. But he knew also, that so long as Watson lived she would be true to him.

He had controlled his rising passion though it went hard with him. At night, lying in his lonely cabin, he thought of Emmeline's beautiful face and clear eyes, the knowledge of her truth and honor maddened him. She was the one woman for him; as long as he lived his love for her would be as potent as that of Job's wife. His passion drove him forth to mount his horse and gallop furiously across the ranges under the stars returning exhausted, his horse sweating and foaming, on the winnowing plain of the eastern hills.

Five Roses Flour

Not Bleached Not Blended

Note the Color of your flour—
And the Bread it makes for you.
Delicately creamy is FIVE ROSES flour.
Because it is not bleached, don't you see,
Clear—Immaculate—Desirable.
A pure Manitoba wheat flour—FIVE ROSES.
And the healthy sun-ripened spring wheat berries are naturally of a golden glow.
And the meaty heart of the polished kernels is creamy.
Milled from the cream, FIVE ROSES is delicately "creamy."
The only natural flour from Manitoba's prime wheat.
Which gets whiter and whiter as you knead it.
And your bread is most appetizing, unusually attractive in appearance.
Looks good.
And is good.
Bake this purest unbleached flour.
