CHAPTER IV.
(Concluded.)

"Don't you find this an awfully rough place in the winter—the depth of winter?" he asked, conscious of a desire to hear her speak.

She raised her head and looked round before replying.

"I don't know," she said, in the clear, liquid tone. "I have never lived anywhere since I can remember. I am used to it."

"Since you can remember? You weren't born here, then?" said Vane, idly.

"No," she replied, succinctly; "but I don't remember— She stopped.

"Do you want to know about your horse? I have tethered him in the hollow. He is all right."

"Thank you—thank you," said Vane. "I have given you a tremendous lot of trouble. You will be glad to be rid of me, and you soon will be, I hope. I should think I could go to-day."

She shook her head.

"You could not ride," she said, with quiet and assured conviction. "You are weak still. No, I watched you walk across the beach."

Vane smiled.

"Well, I do feel rather tottery," he said; "but I shall get over that presently. Not that I'm in any hurry to go, excepting on your—and your aunt's—account," he added. "By the way, do you mind telling me your name?"

"You know it," she said. "Nora."

"Nora," he repeated, and as he did so, it struck him he had never heard any name more musical, as she vociferated. "But the other?"

"Trevelian."

"That has the proper Cornish sound," he said. "And your aunt, is she called Trevelian?"

She nodded.

"Yes."

"And you live here, all alone, you two?" he said. "Monarchs of all you survey," as Robinson Crusoe would say. You've read old Robinson Crusoe, Miss Nora?"

She looked at him steadily with her wonderful eyes.

"No, I can't read," she said, simply.

Vane had some difficulty in preventing himself from starting. Not read! And yet she spoke so correctly, and with that vague, indefinable accent of refinement!

"I have never learned to read or write," she said, calmly, and without a trace of embarrassment.

"I suppose there are no schools here!" said Vane, trying to speak as if her ignorance were rather a credit to her than otherwise, and by no means extraordinary.

"No," she replied; "the nearest is at Porth. I have never been there. I have never been anywhere but here."

She moved her hand slowly, but with indescribable grace, in a sweep that took in the small bay and the rocks.

Vane tried to find something complimentary to say.

"There is too much reading and writing nowadays," he said.

"Can you read?" she asked, her lovely eyes scanning his face with frank interest.

"A little," he replied, "small words, at any rate. But I'm almost ignorant—I know very little more about it than you do, Miss Nora. What's it matter? For instance, you seem very happy. I heard you singing away like a bird. I don't often hear other girls sing like that."

"Not where you come from?" she asked.

"London," he replied, with a smile, and tilting his cap to the back of his head.

In all his life he had never imagined such an experience, such a human being as this.

"London!" She repeated the word, her dark eyes fixed dreamily on the sea. "Yes, I remember. I have heard aunt speak of it. It is—a city."

"That's right," said Vane; "and a pretty big city, with three, four millions—I don't know quite how many—people in it."

She sat silently taking in this fact her dark brows slightly knit.

"How do they all live?" she asked dreamily.

Vane laughed.

"Pon my word, I don't know," he replied. "Nobody knows."

"Is it by the sea? Do they fish?"

Vane was silent for a moment. How on earth was he to give this girl, who knew no other place than this outlandish Witches' Calderon who could neither read nor write, any idea of London?

"No," he said. "It's a long way from the sea; but a river runs thro' it. But they don't fish in it to any extent, and then only for pleasure. There are thousands of houses and streets—miles of them—and we all live jammed together, with scarcely enough air to breathe, and that, for the most part thick with smoke."

Her glorious eyes expanded with grave, delicious innocence.

"I wonder you do not die," she murmured in her musical voice.

"So do I, now I come to think of it," said Vane, with his short laugh. "But I haven't given you an idea of it yet, and I couldn't if I tried. I'm afraid. Don't you ever be persuaded to leave this beautiful place and come to London, Miss Nora."

She looked round.

"I shall never leave here," she said. "And you live in that great city?"

He nodded.

"Where? By the river? I should like to live by the river—near the water—if I lived there."

"Well, not very near," he said, "but I can get there in half an hour or thereabouts. The house I live in is called 98 St. James's Street. I live in rooms there."

She bent her brows and looked out to sea, and her lips moved.

"Ninety-eight St. James's Street," she repeated.

"Do you think you can remember it?" he said, with a smile.

She looked at him gravely.

"I never forget what I hear," she said, "or what I see—never. Is that because I can not read or write?"

"Very likely," said Vane. "And now I want to ask you a question. Miss Nora. Now, will you tell me whom you took me for the other night?"

She was silent.

"I mean," he went on, "when you came down into the ravine to me. You know you asked me if I was the excise man. You remember?"

"I remember," she said.

"Well, I should like to know what you meant. I have been puzzling over it while I have been lying in the cottage, and I can't make it out."

She worked at the net for a full minute without replying, then she lifted her eyes to his.

"Aunt said that you were a gentleman," she said; "are you?"

Vane laughed.

"I hope so."

"And that you would not ask questions," she said.

Vane colored.

"All right," he said; "I won't. Anyhow, you have been extremely kind to me, Miss Nora, and I am deeply indebted to you."

Her lips quivered and she glanced at him with something like distress in her lovely eyes.

"No one could have been kinder or more hospitable," he went on. "I can't tell you how grateful I am. I consider you saved my life—"

She sprang upright and stretched out her hand, her beautiful face working with distress and emotion.

"Don't—don't," she breathed. "You—you don't know—"

"Don't know what?" he asked, with blank surprise.

She put her hand to her lips, and then brushed the hair from her forehead, as if in great distress.

"I—I can't tell you!" she panted.

"I—I dare not! But you don't know or you would not say what you do—would not thank me—"

"What?" said Vane, astonished beyond measure by her agitation.

She leaned toward him with hands outstretched, as if about to make some confession; then suddenly a peculiar cry rang above their heads. It resembled the "Coo-ee!" he had heard her make on the night of his journey.

It seemed to recall her to herself. She sprang upright and passed her hand over her eyes.

"Breakfast is ready," she said. "Take my hand; you are weak still. Come!"

CHAPTER V.

On their way to the cottage, Vane puzzled over Nora's strange words and stranger manner. What could they possibly mean? Suddenly he connected the word "excitement" with smugglers. But he scorned the idea immediately. There were no smugglers nowadays. As well expect to meet a highwayman on Hampstead Heath, or an ancient watchman, or "Charlie" in Pall Mall, as a smuggler. That these two women could be connected with such an obsolete institution was too absurd and ridiculous to be entertained for more than a moment. This was civilized, "effete" England, and the end of the nineteenth century, not the beginning of the eighteenth. Vane was 9672-9671—A NEAT AND BECOMING HOME OR AFTERNOON DRESS.

Ladies' Dress with or without Chemise, with Long or Shorter Sleeve, and with Raised or Normal Waistline.

White linen, with blue ratine for trimming and buttons and loops for decoration is here shown. The design is unique in its shaping, and will lend itself equally well for development in gingham, chambray, flanne, eponge, serge, voile, or silk. The Chemise may be omitted. The skirt has a slightly raised waistline, but may be finished at normal waistline if preferred. Ladies' Waist Pattern, 9672, and Ladies' Skirt Pattern, 9671, supply the models. The waist is cut in 5 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. The Skirt in 5 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inches waist measure. It requires 6 3/8 yards of 4 1/2 inch material for a 36 inch size.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

Fashions and Fads.

At this moment do not trim your hat with a high-standing feather effect and alginate or paradise. They are not in fashion's favor.

High in favor are the kimono-shaped wraps, or any shape which can be wrapped and folded round the body and held together in front.

One simply must have a vest. If you cannot button one around you in time-waistcoat fashion, you must attach a vest effect to your neckwear.

With the summer afternoon dress a white ratine bag is most charming, being a delightful combination between a pocketbook and a vanity case.

Petticoats are doing their best to restore themselves to favor. One of the prettiest and newest is the crepe de chine, finished at the bottom with two ruffles of shadow lace, put on in festoon fashion.

Serge comes serenely to the front with great success. It is washable, comes in convenient widths and in checks, shadow stripes or plain colors. It is especially adaptable for the college girl.

A new boucler cap resembles a war helmet. The folds of cream net are fitted across the head with exaggerated snugness and fastened on each side under earflaps of tucked maline lace and embroidered net.

This fall we will use the clinging draperies; the wide belt, with its butterfly bows and draped and hanging pines, the kimono line for bodices and wraps and the wonderful colorings and embroideries of the orient.

Irritable, Hysterical, Sleepless, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Restores Health.

There is a message in this letter for thousands of women who are suffering from broken-down nervous systems. Sleepless nights, much irritability over little things, spells of dizziness and nervous sick headaches are among the symptoms.

You may not realize the nature of your ailment until nervous prostration comes upon you. But, in whatever stage you find yourself, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is ready to help you.

Mrs. W. J. May, 88 Annette street, Toronto, writes: "Some years ago I suffered from nervous trouble, and took Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which completely cured me. About six months ago I received a shock which again shattered my nervous system to such an extent that I was irritable and hysterical, and could not sleep nights. I began to use the Nerve Food again and was not disappointed. Improvement was apparent from the first box, and now I am entirely well." "Healthy, Wealthy and Wise."

(By Virginia Roderick.)

The tooth-brush is coming into its own as an instrument of education. About three years ago, in a Cleveland school, forty children, with defective teeth, were organized into a special class to try out the effects of mouth-hygiene. First they were submitted to various mental tests. Then their teeth were put in order, they were provided with proper brushes, pledged to brush them three times a day, and taught how to eat.

Twenty-seven went through the test period of about a year, and then the mental examination was repeated. It showed a total gain of 99.8 per cent!

Some of this "dental squad" are to form part of the exhibit at the International Congress of School Hygiene which is to be held in Buffalo August 25 to 30, with delegates from all the civilized world. These living exhibits will illustrate one of the many lines along which we are finding out our responsibilities to school children.

"What am I to think of a public school system which never taught me to eat, breathe, or walk correctly—the very essentials of living?"—Those who ask that question are legion.

We are to think that such a system will not do; and this congress, the first of its kind in America is to demonstrate that it will not. It is to prove, with sound scientific evidence, that physical health is the very foundation stone of education.

Instruction in the myriad needs and the ways of meeting them will be supplied to eye as well as ear. Supplementing the programme, there will be models of well-built school-houses, with window space occupying not less than one-sixth of the wall space, and admitting light only from the left and rear; model school kitchens and model school meals; an exhibit to show the glazed paper and polished desk-tops that so sadly damage young eyes, and the substitutes that conserve vision; fixtures to demonstrate good and bad ways of lighting schoolrooms; adjustable desks that really fit the child's body; photographs of open-air schools and summer camps; charts and pictures to show "before" and "after" in faulty mouths, and a moving picture film entitled "Toothache"; the familiar tuberculosis exhibit; the remarkable and appalling sex-hygiene exhibit, and a hundred other aspects of school health.

About seventy-five per cent. or fifteen million of our twenty million school children have physical defects. This includes the ten to fifteen million with bad teeth, five million with defective vision, six million with enlarged tonsils, adenoids, or enlarged cervical glands; five million with nose, throat, and ear troubles; the six hundred thousand who are tubercular; and the five million who suffer from malnutrition, often partly due to other defects.

To remedy these defects, and to prevent the ravages of epidemics, medical supervision is an obvious necessity. Yet of 1,038 cities (nearly ninety per cent. of the total) recently studied by the Russell Sage Foundation, only forty-three per cent. have regularly organized systems of public school medical inspection, and in only 214 of these cities does this include a complete physical examination conducted by doctors.

A thousand doctors are employed where many thousands are needed. Only sixty-nine cities have expert dental inspection. Five hundred school nurses—a recent phase of medical supervision—are doing a splendid work for both school and home, and an increase in their numbers is one of the best hopes in this field.

Medical supervision, of course, has a constructive side, which should be developed; school doctors should be essentially doctors of public health, teaching pupils, teacher, and parent—yes, and janitor!—to ride the "hobbies" of modern medicine: fresh air, pure water, plain food, and recreation.

On this side they join hands with the score of agencies specifically directed to keeping well children well.

Chief among these is the sanitation of school buildings by improved plumbing, better architecture, dustless floors, vacuum-cleaners, proper dusting, the abolition of the common drinking-cup, and modern systems of ventilation. The knowledge that the percentage of tuberculosis is higher among teachers than in any other profession should be grim reason for pushing such reforms at top speed.

Outdoor schools are another ground of hope, not only against tuberculosis but, possibly, for general school health. The two thousand children who study in furs and mittens have gained in strength, have been far less subject to colds and the usual child diseases than indoor pupils, and, besides, have attended more regularly.

Another positive point of improvement is the modern physical training. The day is past when the school turns out into the aisle for a few minutes' callisthenics, and learns from hygiene lectures or a slim, dry text-book merely that one has 200 bones and a diaphragm, instruction in cooking and eating, gymnasium, swimming-pools, the direction of play—all these are parts of a new regime which teaches the child how to live. Moving pictures are already in a few schools instructing children about their own bodies; or urging them to "swat the fly," to fight tuberculosis, to keep their mouths antiseptic.

Education Through Food.

And then there is the school-luncheon—with America miles behind European countries. In the past five years seventy-seven cities in this country have adopted the plan of furnishing their pupils plain, wholesome food at a nominal cost. In New York, for instance, lunch is supplied at a penny an article with the restriction that the first penny must go for soup. Many of the children fed in this fashion would otherwise be lurching on ice-cream cones and glossy cakes from unspeakably dirty pushcarts and small shops.

The school-luncheon proves afresh the inter-relationship between stomach and brain, between food and conduct, for it undeniably increases learning power and lessens sullenness and truancy. Besides, it teaches the child food-values, economy, healthful eating-habits, and table manners; and how to be friends with his mates.

Of course this is practically city and town work, as are nearly all the more conspicuous school reforms. The rural school is far behind.

Remember the one little room with an unjacketed stove in the middle that scorched those nearest and let the others freeze? Blackboards, with chalk-dust flying. Light shining in your eyes from windows up front. Windows open or shut to suit the comfort of those nearest. The most casual of sanitation. An unsightly playground. A teacher who taught something like twenty classes a day.

Well, however happy those memories, the results do not justify them.

Gradually, one-teacher schoolhouses are consolidating. Well-constructed buildings of three and four rooms are taking the place of the single rooms, and the graded system is gaining. Some rural schools already have modern equipment, not only in buildings, but in model farms, gardens, hen-houses, and kitchens—all as part of the curriculum. But these schools are still too few.

Important phases of school-hygiene must be omitted here—the whole vital subject of mental hygiene with its eugenic implications; the problem of schools for "backward" children; the financial soundness of a community investment in the health of its children; the hygiene of college and university—except to note that the Secretary-General of the Congress, Dr. Storey, is a physical director who has made the institution in his charge a model, with dismissal from college the penalty for neglect of eyes or teeth.

He is the man to address, at the College of the City of New York, if you will help apply the findings of the Congress in your own community. Any one may become a member by the payment of five dollars, and delegates are wanted from women's clubs, boards of health, schoolboards, charity organizations, from all towns and cities. It is the distinctive feature of this congress, in preparation, that it recognizes the absolute necessity for community backing, and a sturdy effort will be made to achieve a permanent organization for carrying out school reforms.

If that should succeed, there need be no limit to our hopes for national health.

Back to the Soil, Negro is Told.

Booker Washington Says Colored People Must Teach Each Other.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—"Go back to the soil; for the sake of your health and your prosperity; go back to the farms; go back now before the land and the opportunity is gone."

This is the message Booker T. Washington brought to the delegates of the National Negro Business League at their fourteenth annual convention yesterday. Dr. Washington said:

"Our object is to bring together men and women who have been successful and let them tell the story of their success in their own way.

"If a white man were to address a gathering of colored men to tell them of his means of success the negro instinctively feels that his success is due to his color and the lesson fails, but when the speaker is a negro the listeners say to themselves 'If this man was successful why can't I do the same thing?' and their ambition is kindled."

Dr. Washington added that the negro has better chances in the South because he supplies most of the skilled labor.

Singing.

Singing is a lippy substitute for real music which is caused by opening the mouth as widely as possible and projecting the voice into space. If the singer is not well known there is usually plenty of space for the project into, but if she has reached the point where the music critics refer to her as an "artiste," she will find the room crowded so full of double-distilled culture that the man who came in hoping to recognize something familiar couldn't get out without using a jimmy.

Some people begin to sing at an early age and keep it up without the slightest regard for the feelings of others. This is particularly true of choir singers, who hang on long after everybody would be highly pleased to have a change both in timbre and the personnel. Opera singers never let go so long as they can keep within six cubic feet of the key in which they started, and they seldom retire without getting rid of a series of frost-bitten farewell recitals.

Singing is always the result of some method. There are several different methods, but they all produce the same low-spirited sensation in the man who does not care for any form of classical music except the Traumerl with variations. Most people prefer the natural method of singing, which induces the singer to remove his collar and necktie and clutch nervously at his throat mechanism when about to climb some forbidden steep.

There are two kinds of singing—straight and wobbly. People who sing in a straight line are at a great disadvantage, for whenever they wander a few yards from the accompaniment and hold a high note with the utmost firmness and satisfaction they create a large, sour gap which is apparent to everybody who is not already in a state of coma. On the other hand, the singer who produces a tone which resembles an outline map showing the fluctuation in the price of wheat over a period of thirty years can sing in nine different keys on one intake without causing anybody in the audience to repine in short, curt syllables.

Singing is all right in its place, but most of it is so poorly placed that it hurts.

Dog Steals Like a Kleptomaniac.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 21.—Dog days have brought much annoyance to John M. Webb, a Wilmington restaurant proprietor. His dog, John, has developed kleptomaniac.

The dog began his career of crime by stealing a scrubbing brush from a nearby grocery. Mr. Webb returned the brush, apologized profusely, and gave John a whipping.

Still John continued to steal, his crimes becoming more serious. This was one of the dog's busiest days. Seeing a panama hat blown from a man's head, he seized it and ran home with it. The man followed. Mr. Webb returned the hat and apologized.

A short time later John stole a silver mesh bag from a woman he met in the street. She, too, chased him to the restaurant. Mr. Webb restored the stolen property, apologized again and gave John another whipping. He says now, however, that he is convinced whipping, will do no good and that John is an incurable kleptomaniac.

Wilmington has another remarkable dog in Sausage, mascot of the Christiana Athletic Club. Sausage, a very live dog in spite of his name, recently accompanied the club's baseball team on an automobile trip. The automobile broke down on a lonely road, so the players wrote a note to the club officials in Wilmington, tied it to Sausage's neck and started him towards the city. The note was delivered and a relief automobile sent out to rescue the ball players.

Woman Contractor.

Soharmegendorf, a growing and fashionable suburb of Berlin, prides itself on possessing the only woman builder and contractor in Germany. This is Frau Henkel, who has carried on her business successfully for four years. The fact that she was the proprietor, and manager of the firm, of Henkel became public only the other day. The public authorities were asked to inquire into the business, as there was an allegation that it was not an independent concern. They found that Frau Henkel was the real and effective manager, and that she employed her husband as master of the works. The suggestion that she was acting for someone else was unfounded.

Godless Schools

We are able to expose to-day another nefarious attempt to fool the electorate on the matter of non-sectarian schools. It will be remembered that this campaign began by the publication of a false report of a meeting at Change Islands. Mr. Peter Cowan and Mr. Coaker disposed of that falsehood and we set forth in a plain and straightforward statement that non-sectarian education was no part of the policy of the Liberal Party or the Fishermen's Protective Union. Last night, however, the editor of the Evening Herald outwitted Herod by an intentional misrepresentation of the attitude of the Fishermen's Advocate, publishing under the heading of "Godless Schools" certain extracts from the Advocate.

One of these under the sub-heading "From Coaker's Advocate" contains the following sentences: "You want free education and free education you must have, and undenominational education you must have." The manifest intention of the quotation and the heading and the suppression of material facts is to create the impression (1) that this is an editorial utterance of Mr. Coaker; and (2) that it is made in pursuance of some policy of the F. P. U. That was the intention of the Herald in publishing the extract as he did and in making the suppression. This will be absolutely clear when we point out that Mr. Coaker suppresses. He expresses first of all the fact that it is not taken from any editorial of the Advocate, and second that it is taken from a letter from a correspondent on the West Coast, where there is no Council of the F. P. U. established. We may add further that Mr. Coaker informs us that this letter was published in his absence from town. Could there be a more glaring, dishonest and deceitful attempt to fool the public on the part of Mr. Coaker? How would he like to have published extracts from letters published in the Evening Herald under the caption "From McGrath's Herald," and the fact suppressed that the opinions expressed were neither the views of the editor

Two Fishermen Drowned.

Mark Earles and Mark Whiteway the Victims.

A sad drowning accident in which two lives were lost occurred yesterday afternoon on the local fishing grounds. The victims are Mark Earles, aged 40, and Mark Whiteway, aged 40, who were returning home after the day's fishing when their boat swamped. Earles was a married man with a wife and two children lived at the north Battery while Whiteway, who was unmarried, boarded with his brother on Signal Hill. Both were natives of Western Cove.

On Monday at midnight they left their homes to go fishing and rowed off as far as Cape Spear, a distance of three miles. They found a good sign of fish and got a fairly good fare. They discontinued operations about noon when they bore up for home at that time there was a strong westerly wind raging, accompanied by choppy but heavy seas. A couple of fishermen who reported the accident said it was the roughest day for the season. Another old hand said that it was the wildest day he was ever outside the Narrows, speaking from twenty five years' experience. Whiteway and Earles were among the first to leave the Cape grounds to return home. One boat, belonging to Quidi Vidi, left about a quarter of an hour before them. The boat, which the two men that were lost were in, was coming along under full sail with a stiff breeze blowing when between Cape Spear and Blackhead a heavy squall struck the skiff and capsized it. Another story, which is supposed to be the correct one, is that the boat filled with water and sank stern foremost. The men in the Quidi Vidi boat, which was a short distance ahead, heard cries from their friends and returned to the spot where the boat went down only to find the caps of their lost friends and a water keg. A thorough search was made but nothing farther was found. Last evening the tug John Green was visiting the fishing grounds to try and recover the bodies but without success. The search for the bodies will be continued to-day but it is doubtful if ever they will be recovered owing to the depth of the water, where the unfortunate men went down.

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD AMERICAN

Aldershot, England, Aug. 27.—The body of F. S. Cody, a hero who was killed here in an aeroplane accident on August 26, was buried with military honours in the soldiers cemetery here today. Enormous crowds of people gathered to witness the funeral. The body was borne to the cemetery in a hearse, and the coffin was placed in a carriage and covered with Jack. It was followed by contingents of all arms of the army and the full strength of the royal corps. As it passed many ranks in the camp the troops out and stood with bared heads. The pipes of the famous Watch (the 42nd High Landers) headed the procession. The Scotch "Lament" which is of the other regiments played several marches.

The only military feature from the funeral was the volley over the grave.

With Military Honors.

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE WAS PAID TO THE DEAD AIRMAN.

Aldershot, England, August 11—The body of F. S. Cody, the aviator who was killed here in an hydro-aeroplane accident on August 7, was buried with military honors in the soldiers cemetery here this afternoon. Enormous crowds lined the route of the funeral procession, paying a splendid tribute to the popularity of the dead airman.

The coffin was mounted on a gun carriage and covered with the Union Jack. It was followed to the grave by contingents of all arms and the full strength of the royal flying corps. As it passed various barracks in the camp the troops turned out and stood with bare heads.

The pipers of the famous Black Watch (the 42nd Highlanders) headed the procession, playing a Scotch "Lament" while the hands of the other regiments played funeral marches.

A friend of Mark Twain once asked him if he remembered the first money he earned.

"Yes," he said, "it was at school, and a very painful recollection, it is, too. There was a rule in our school that any boy marking his desk, either with black-ink or knife would be chastised publicly before the whole school, or pay a fine of $5. Besides the rule there was a ruler; I knew it because I had felt it was a hard one, too."

"One day I had to tell my father that I had broken the rule and had to pay a fine or take a public whipping, and he said: 'Sam, it would be too bad to have the name of Clemens disgraced before the whole school, so I'll pay the fine. But I don't want you to lose anything, so come up stairs.'"

"A few minutes later I came down with a bad feeling and the $5, and I decided that as I had been punished once and got used to it I would not mind getting the other kicking. So I did and kept the $5."

India's Floating Factories.

Floating factories have become an important part of the development of the forest resources of India. In certain parts of that country the forests are only accessible through the water courses, and the great expense of erecting land plants for the utilization of the lumber resources makes such a course impracticable. Therefore, saw-mills and other manufacturing establishments are built on floating platforms and moved up the streams as they are needed. After the lumber is prepared in a sawmill, it can be packed in a way that makes transportation much more economical than any system of logging. Plants for the preparation of tanning extracts have also been established in this manner. The plants are built on flat boats, 200 feet long by 27 feet wide, capable of carrying a load of 470 tons.

Growing Topless Potatoes in Kansas

Seneca, Kan., Aug. 12—Potatoes without tops are being grown by J. C. Monney, a farmer near Onida. Two years ago Monney had trouble in getting seed potatoes. Finally a dealer offered him some which the said, however he considered poor, as they had few eyes. Monney bought some of them and picked out those which appeared to have the most eyes. He planted two rows.

Apparently the potatoes were down to the dealers low estimate. Very few sprouts appeared. Monney allowed the rows to run to weeds, but when he ploughed the ground in the fall he was surprised to find that the share threw out big potatoes where he had expected to find only a few. Most of the potatoes appeared to have no eyes but there were several small knobs on each tuber.

Stuck with this peculiarity. Monney discarded all the potatoes which had eyes and a year ago last spring planted only the eyeless tubers. Only a few sprouts appeared, but Monney kept the weeds down this time and when he dug into the ground he found a big crop of potatoes.

He had planted nearly all of the seed again this year, after discarding the potatoes with eyes, and believes that this fall he will have a full crop of no tops.

The topless potatoes are slightly different in appearance from the regular tubers but there is no difference in the taste. The crop average about the same as potatoes with tops but the big advantage in their favor is that there is no danger to them from early frosts and insect pests.

70 Mile An Hour Gale

Washington, Aug. 6.—A cyclone storm of wind, rain and hail whipped back and forth across the capital recently leaving death and ruin in its wake. Three dead, scores injured, and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property ruined were the tolls recorded.

Out of the blazing sky, with the temperature at the 100 point, came the storm roaring from the north driving a mass of clouds that cast a mantle of total darkness over the town. The gale reaching a velocity of nearly seventy miles an hour, swept the streets clear, unroofed houses tore detached small structures from their foundations, wrecked one office building, overturned wagons and carriages in the streets, and swept Washington's hundred parks, tearing huge branches from trees and, even uprooting sturdy old elms, the landmarks of a century.

Washington's well-kept streets, with their wealth of trees were littered with broken foliage, roots, debris and dead birds, as if a playful giant had carelessly swished his club up and down the city.

As the wind wreaked its havoc the rain came, and in five minutes the temperature dropped to between 60 and 70. Then the rain turned to hail, and hail stones battered on roofs and crashed through sky lights and windows.

For half an hour the city cowered paralyzed under the beating of the storm, every activity suspended. Trolley lines, telephone lines and street traffic were halted, and the Government departments suspended operations.

The wind wrecked a three-story brick office building occupied by the B. S. Saul Company, real estate dealers, and fifteen persons were carried down in the crash. W. E. Hilton, Vice-President of the Real Estate Company, Thos. B. Fealye, 65 years old, a clerk, and an unidentified man who entered the building to try to rescue those caught in the wreck, were taken from the ruins dead. Half a dozen were taken to hospitals, seriously injured, and half a dozen more were treated for slight injuries.

When the storm broke, thirty-five painters were at work on the dome of the Capitol, swarming over the curving face or swinging high on shaky scaffolding. William Reese, the foreman, hurried to the dome and got most of his men to shelter inside the big inverted bowl. But Jim Boyle, John Ford, Noble Bailey and Bruce Jones were too late. Bailey and Jones succeeded in scaling the dome in the wind and rain and gained sheltered ledge, where they weathered the storm after trying in vain to get inside.

Horses driven frantic by the wind and hail, dashed through the streets in terror until they were stopped by collision with some other strown object. At the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, wind sweeping through a huge window, sent a storm of broken plate glass hurling through the big press room. Eight or ten women were cut by falling glass, and one printer, John Rhodes, received severe scalp wounds. The crash of the glass swept panic through the big room. A number of foreigners who work as printers, fainter and fell to the floor, and the others dashed terror-stricken for the exits. For two hours the office was in an uproar.

At the Pension office the lightning ripped a corner off the roof, and crashed in a score of windows. Another lightning bolt tore a hole in the roof of the post office building, and ripped open one face of the big clock in the tower.

The wind ripped fifteen heavy planks from the floor of the historic aqueduct bridge, and a horse and wagon crossing the structure were blown into the river. The driver escaped. Or the Potomac River the tug Edith Godard Winship sank in the blow, her crew were taken off.

Smoking in Church.

LORD FARRAR SAYS SERMONS COULD THEN BE LONGER.

British Peer Thinks it Would be a Good Thing to Permit the Use of the Fragrant Weed in the Houses of Parliament While Sir Arthur Pinero Favors Same Course for the Theatre.

Smoking in public assemblies is finding many champions in England these days. Sir Arthur Pinero the distinguished dramatist, is an advocate of smoking in first-class theatres on the ground that the attendance would be increased and no real harm done to the drama. He cited the high quality of plays and big attendance found in the best music halls, where smoking is permitted, and argued that a similar concession on the part of the managers would revive interest in the legitimate drama.

The real sensation came, however when Lord Farrar publicly expressed his regret that smoking was prohibited in the British House of Commons and that the practice had been given up in church. Sermon nowadays were cut so short because of the restlessness of the auditors, and in his opinion permission to smoke, which in itself was quite harmless and dignified would permit much longer pulpit addresses.

The suggestion has raised a storm and whether or not Lord Farrar's suggestion will ever become a fact remains a debatable point. In any case many a clergyman will feel more willing to forgive Lord Farrar's desire to smoke in church, because of his evident desire for a longer sermon.

Lord Farrar is the second baron of that name and the title was conferred on his father for public service in 1893. Thomas Cecil Farrar was born in 1859 and succeeded his father in 1899. Lord Farrar is a brother-in-law of Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice, who succeeds Rt. Hon. James Bryce as British Ambassador to the United States. Lord Farrar lives at Eoking in Surrey and is widely known for his activity in public affairs. He is an ardent Liberal.

Barrier Of Sex.

The Lady Who Wants to be a Solicitor, Refused.

The claim by Miss Gwyneth Margorie Bebb, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Bebb, Principal of St. David's College, Lampeter, to be allowed to become a solicitor, was dismissed in the Chancery Court recently by Mr. Justice Joyce.

When the hearing of her case against the Law Society was resumed M. Buckmaster, L. C., cited Lord Esher's judgement, that "the common law of England prevents the discharge of public functions by women." The question was whether that included the office of attorney, and Mr. Buckmaster contended that the office of attorney was not a public function but a private employment. If his contention was right there was nothing that prevented a woman from discharging the duty.

His Lordship said she could not be a soldier or a sailor.

Mr. Buckmaster: That she could not be is less obvious.

The Judge: It is a case of disqualification of sex.

Mr. Buckmaster: The difference of sex is an act of Providence; the disqualification of sex is an act of man.

Miss Bebb, in evidence stated that she was willing to become articulated to a solicitor, and believed that was firm which would take her.

Mr. Hughes, K. C. (for the defendant), said that to admit a woman would be a departure from the tradition of centuries, and required a great deal to justify it. He contended that there was not a single authentic instance of a woman acting as an attorney in the modern sense of the word.

Mr. Justice Joyce held that the disqualification of women in the early Acts from becoming an attorney or solicitor still existed.

There was no suggestion in any statute of any intention of the legislature to make any such alteration in the law. He felt no doubt that such a thing was never contemplated by the framers of the Act of 1843, and he was perfectly certain it was not the intention of the legislature then to alter the law.

The disqualification existed, and would remain until the legislature thought fit to interfere and make the alteration sought to be brought about. The action must be dismissed.

Mr. Hughes said the Law Society was a public body, and he could therefore only say with regard to the costs that they would leave the matter there.

A Reply to Dr. Grenfell on Hospital Matters.

As a member of the deputation of passengers from the Prospero who recently suggested reforms in the transportation of sick people to and from St. Anthony's Hospital, and on behalf of the committee who visited His Excellency the Governor and other prominent persons in St. John's in this connection, I cannot let Dr. Grenfell's reply stand altogether unanswered, particularly as there are palpable inaccuracies in a few of his statements.

In the first place it was not the tourists alone who were behind the movement for improved sanitation, the majority of the signers of the petition being Newfoundlanders. Secondly, the deputation of ladies whose able work in St. John's brought the petition so well before the public consisted of half of natives and half of strangers.

It is with regret that we note that Dr. Grenfell quotes His Excellency the Governor to the effect that this deputation claimed so preposterous a thing as "a doctor at St. Anthony had inhumanly placed (a consumption patient) on the Prospero to die there." The passengers involved are, we believe, too intelligent and careful to suggest any such statement as the above. Nevertheless in the discussion in the press that followed the publication of the White Plague, it was officially stated that three persons recently had died on board the Prospero within 26 hours of the time they had left St. Anthony.

The poor creature whose plight was instrumental in bringing about the protest was obliged to travel alone and unattended save for the assistance of the ship's company. Strong efforts have been made in Newfoundland of late years to lessen the ravages of the White Plague; yet a presumably competent hospital allows an advanced case of tuberculosis to travel in a public conveyance without providing sputum cups, sanitary paper napkins, and other necessities for the prevention of the spreading of contagion. This is not allowed elsewhere, to our knowledge.

Cable News.

LONDON, Aug. 26. The Balkan Peace treaty was ratified at Bucharest yesterday. The Turks continue to advance into Thrace, and have now occupied Gumulhina, and Mastanic, according to Sofia advices.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 26. The murder of Arthur Lawton, a British subject, Eric von Thadene, a German, and Senator Eduardo Lardies in a ranch in Western Mexico, is officially reported. The British Minister has sent a notification to his Home Office. Lawton was well-connected in England, and is a son-in-law of Mrs. Nuttall, a noted archaeologist, formerly of San Francisco, and now of Mexico, who holds an honorary professorship in the National Museum. The man, at the time of their murder, had a large amount of money for the payment of their employees. They were robbed by assassins, who are characterized as bandits, not rebels. The Government has promised the British Minister that the murderers will be punished.

LONDON, Aug. 26. According to the Daily Graphic it has been virtually decided that Prince Arthur of Connaught is to succeed his father as Governor General of Canada, when the Duke relinquishes that office in September, 1914. Prince Arthur left yesterday for Balmoral. Princess Patricia will travel with her father, and the party will journey from Liverpool to Ottawa, halting a few days at Quebec, Toronto and Montreal. It is not certain that the Duchess will accompany the Duke to Canada. As the wedding ceremonies will take considerable time, it has been arranged for the Duchess to remain seated throughout. On leaving Canada it is said the Duke will regard his public career as ended, and settle at Baginbun Park, devoting his time to raising stud horses, suitable for army purposes, a project suggested after a year's close study of stock-raising in Canada.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26. Eleventh hour developments in the Mexican situation today, postponing speech to Congress until Wednesday, indicates that Huerta may, after all, withdraw or modify his proposals. President Wilson consented to the postponement at the request of Senator Gumbo, Mexican Foreign Minister, and the advice of John Lind, the adviser of the American Embassy. It is officially stated that in no case would the United States withdraw from the basic principles, including the refusal to recognize Huerta. Lind's original proposals to Huerta were: (1) cessation of hostilities, and a definite armistice; (2) an early free election; (3) Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate; (4) agreement by all parties to abide by the results of such election. Upon these proposals the Huerta government at the last moment asked for further time for consideration. There are certain supplementary proposals, as yet not divulged. It is officially stated that Mr. Lind has not been recalled, and that if he left for Vera Cruz it would be only for a short visit. He will return to Mexico City to continue the policy of absolute non-interference. From the first it has been realized that the only alternatives were friendly mediation or armed intervention. The latter is not regarded as warranted by any existing emergency. The joint session of the House and Senate was hurriedly called off.

NOHE, ALASKA, Aug. 26. The whaler Karluk, Capt. Bartlett, taking Stefansson's Canadian Polar Expedition to the Arctic, met with a serious accident in the ice off Barrow, the northernmost point of Alaska and may have to unload cargo, according to word received here from the revenue cutter Bear. The extent of damage is not known, but she is reported to have a large hole in her hull. The expedition found unusual ice conditions at Barrow, where the Karluk was caught between the drifting ice.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 26. As an indication of the personal relations established by Minister Lind with General Huerta, the Mexican President placed his private car at Mr. Lind's disposal. The offer was accepted, and the car will be occupied by him to-day on his journey to Vera Cruz.

LONDON, Aug. 26. Numerous suffragette fires in country houses and farms in Surrey and at a fine suburban residence in Finchley, are reported. The loss is heavy. Usual placards.

The children saw him eating grass. "W h a t brought h i m down to such a pass?" they asked, and gazed in wonder. A nearby sage replied: "I ween, he read the Health Hints magazine, and so he's scared, I thunder. That publication teaches man that poison lurks in every can sold by the village grocer; and every time he eats a pie or on a doughnut, eats his eye, he to the grave is closer. The milk we drink, the steak we chew, will raise a grievous howdy inside our anguished bodies; there's poison in our scrambled prunes, there's verdigris upon our spoons, and death is in our toddlers. The modern Borgias ply their trade in shops where eatables are made; they dope our loaves and fishes; there's poison in the purple ink that pooms, when they're thirstily, drink, and doot in all our dishes. And even the water from the well has germs that make the drinkers yell. If it has known no filter; what wonder, then, O children, sweet, if good old Neb has chills and stomach out of control? He's scared to death by what he reads, and so on hands and knees he feeds, and fills himself with force; no man can read the weird Health Hints appearing in the public prints, and still retain his courage."

Minimize The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimize loss due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer. Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 20 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops. The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated. We invite the attention of Farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application. The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating.

Judgment Given.

The admiralty court, London, has given judgment in the action brought by the owners, master and crew of the Leyland liner Devonian, in respect of services rendered to the steamship Mexico, belonging to the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique in the North Atlantic, during 24 days from January 30 to February 4th last. The value of the salvaging ship with her cargo and freight, was made an award of £7,000, or less than ten per cent of the value of the salvaged property. He appraised to the owners £5,000 to the master £250, and the crew £1,000. The president added to this expense the total of £250.

Trapped in Aqueduct.

Thirty-Five Workmen Miraculously Escape Injury.

New York, August 21.—Thirty-five workmen caught 440 feet underground in a section of the Catskill Aqueduct, in course of construction, under Washington Heights here, when fire broke out in the shaft house overhead, last night, were found unharmed, two hours later when the fire was controlled. Their chief suffering had been from lack of air, cut off by the pull of smoke overhead.

The fire was a spectacular one, and besides badly damaging the massive shaft building, spread to apartment houses closely adjoining it on St. Nicholas Place and St. Nicholas Ave. Two of the apartment buildings were burned out, and others damaged.

Many members of the gang which was descending the shaft when the fire broke out were on landings so near the surface that they were able to scramble back and escape. Their companions, down in the underground workings, fled 1,500 feet to the end of the section and huddled there, terror-stricken, until the air began to clear. Then one made his way to the telephone connecting with the street and told of the safety of all. Five hours after the fire started the men were hoisted a few at a time in a basket contrivance rigged up with a dummy engine.

Two laborers, two tunnel workers and a fireman were injured, among them Peter Schantuck, laborer, who became wedged between two beams at the top of the building above the shaft opening. A policeman who went to Schantuck's aid found his clothing afire. It was possible to extricate him only by shoving him from the top of the structure. The policeman did this to save Schantuck from burning to death. Schantuck fell fifty feet, and will die from a fractured skull, burns, and internal injuries. The other injured will live.

A Point in Marketing Eggs.

A very important point in marketing eggs is that they shall be absolutely clean, and packed in perfectly clean material. The appearance of any article of food determines in so large a measure its value that the utmost care should be exercised in making it look as attractive as possible. With eggs this is particularly important as their market value is considerably reduced if they are offered for sale in a dirty condition. Apart from this, it stands to reason that if an egg is allowed to remain dirty, with, perhaps, some manure adhering to the shell, it is bound to have an injurious effect upon the flavor of the contents, especially when we remember that the shell is perforated with a multitude of minute holes. The nests in which eggs are laid should be absolutely clean and the straw renewed whenever necessary. Rather than send a dirty egg to market, it is better to wash it; but there is a bloom on a new-laid egg which is a hall-mark of freshness which washing entirely removes.—Weekly Scotman.

Motor-Power From the Sun.

Charles Dickens called the sun "our servant of all work"; and indeed all power is derived from the sun though we sometimes forget it, since it comes indirectly. The sun-motor is a successful attempt to obtain power direct from the sun. In the Tropics much of the heat of the sun, especially in the sandy deserts, is never used at all, and it has been calculated that the sun's rays on one square foot of the earth's surface can produce one-third of a horse-power. The question men have racked their brains to solve is how to collect this energy. In California this problem was solved by the sun-motor. The motor itself resembles an enormous lampshade, supported on one end by a steel framework. The inside of the motor is lined with about 1,800 mirrors, 2 feet long by 3 inches broad, and these are kept at right angles to the path of the sun by means of a clockwork engine. The apparatus is so arranged that the heat from all the mirrors is focused on one point, where there is a boiler containing one hundred gallons of water. The fierce heat thus produced would smelt copper in a very few seconds, and it converts the water in the boiler into steam, the process continuing as long as the sun shines.

Since sun-motors are best worked in the Tropics, where water is scarce, the power is used for pumping water obtained from underground over the vast deserts found round the equator. Thus old Sol has been harnessed to draw water for the land which he has parched by his fierce rays.

Recital For Church Purposes.

A successful recital in aid of St. Andrew's church, was held last night at the residence of Mrs. R. H. Anderson on Rennie's Mill Road. There was a large attendance and the affair was thoroughly enjoyed. The performers were:—Miss Herder, Miss Rendell, Miss Winter, Miss Johnson, Miss Anderson, Miss LeMessurier, and Miss Arnaud. Miss Louisa Anderson acted as accompanist. During the evening refreshments were served. The promoters Mrs. D. Baird and Mrs. Anderson, are deserving of credit for the success that attended their efforts. All those who took part in the concert were pupils of Mrs. McKenzie Wood, of Berlin, Germany, who is here on a short visit, and who was, no doubt, gratified at the success of her pupils.

Your Duty.

Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friend. Its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well, you did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with shouts of alarm ringing in your ears. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "if" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more than his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance with Perce Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

The Norris Benefit.

There was a packed House at Rosley's Theatre last night for the above Benefit. Mr. Watson, Mr. Baird, the McDonald Sisters, Mr. McDonald, and the dandy six all acquitted themselves splendidly and the nice sum will be realized.

C.C.C. MEETING.—The Reserve squad of the C.C.C. met last night and it was decided to cover the asphalt floor of the Armoury with wood. The work has started and will be finished before the week end.
STOLE HAY FORKS.—Some farmers working at McDougall's place, off Falk's Hill, at bay, Monday, left their hay forks under a cock of hay and on returning found that they had been stolen. It looks as if people would lift anything now-a-days.

Ideal Danish Farms

(From Breeders' Gazette.)

Little Denmark has about one-third the area of Ohio, but much of its soil was poor and none of it highly productive. Then came the great awakening some forty or more years ago, with the beginnings of installation of co-operation among the farmers, better use of the better dairy cows, the coming of the bacon pig, the wide use of good agricultural schools. In 1911 after feeding 2,600,000 people the export of butter was $29,320,000 pounds. Great Britain alone paid Denmark $51,142,715 for butter. The exports of bacon for the year amounted to 262,282,000 pounds, worth $33,352,390.

The ordinary farm of Denmark has in it about ninety-three acres. There are many farms as small as six acres. The soil is not very good and the climate is for seven months of the year very bad. There is little wealth aside from that created by agriculture.

They say that Denmark is built upon the ideals and enthusiasm of one man, Bishop Gruntvig. Dead now for many years, his thought and his systems are as enthusiastically discussed as they were during the first half of the nineteenth century, when he was the leader in the flesh. Gruntvig held to a cardinal principle that education ought never to be given in such manner that it causes despondency and a contempt for work, but so that it "ennobles a man's work and heightens his ability to perform his best."

Denmark is covered by what might be called agricultural high schools. Their terms and courses are so arranged that the boys and girls get their educations and yet are kept in close contact with work. They read and study and work on the farms. Education in Denmark is compulsory. The boy begins his farm work as soon as he can handle a spade or feed the chickens and his school education goes right along with his work. It is to the high school that the Danish farmer owes most.

Our minister, Maurice Francis Egan, says of Danish schools: "When Denmark was in despair this wise clergyman, Bishop Gruntvig, looked into the future and saw that the Danes, to be kept in their country, must love it, and in order to love it, they must be taught to work with cheerfulness on its soil. He struck the first note in the modern progress of Denmark—education adapted to the souls, hearts, and bodies, not mere instruction. Gruntvig was a poet, as well as a clergyman, He wrote stirring songs and hymns. He knew well the educational value of music. 'You must use the talent God gave you,' he said, 'you must realize the value of the life he gave you by educating yourselves.'"

The wealth of the Danish farmer is a thing inherent in him. It lies in his healthy, active body—trained to useful work. It lies in his intimate knowledge of his own affairs and in his education having been of such a nature that he was given to believe that to make clovers grow is a work in which one may well take honest pride, to which one may well give deep serious thought. He has been taught that the cow, marvellous and intricate machine that she is, is well worth not only his deep study but his constant and loving care as well.

Not disdaining any knowledge of books, the Danes are nevertheless taught and led to see that the things nearest are the things of highest value, that the right of man is to labor, to think, to sing, to laugh, and to have a humble, reverent attitude toward nature and the soils, plants, flowers, fruits, and animals. With that attitude men will succeed; put them anywhere, on a sandbank; put them on a hillside. So it is that the Danes are making farms where heaths and wastes but yesterday.

The s.s. Kyle arrived here from Labrador ports at 12.30 to-day. In leaving, her anchor caught the moorings of Mr. Simmons' schooner Studland, and that vessel was quickly drawn from the wharf. Fortunately the schooner rounded the head of the pier without mishap, and her second anchor caught and held her.

Mr. John Brunles had a fine cow killed by the incoming train on Friday last. The animal was feeding by the side of the track and attempted to cross over just as the train was at hand.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon have returned from their honeymoon trip to Placentia and will remain here a week or so before taking up their residence at St. John's.

Mr. J. O'Grady and his bride (nee Miss Winnie Kent), who were married at Placentia on Wednesday last, were passengers on Saturday night's train. They are staying at Cochrane House, and are receiving the congratulations of all their friends, accompanied by best wishes for a long and very pleasant wedded life.

Mr. Ellet Martin, son of the late Absalom Martin, passed away Thursday last after a long illness, aged 72 years. Mr. Martin had been over to the hospital at St. John's for treatment and returned home a few weeks ago. He leaves one sister—Mrs. John F. Ash, and one brother, Mr. Silas Martin, at whose home he died, and where his sister-in-law and his niece did all possible to make his last moments as happy as possible.

Our old and well-known citizen W. H. Thompson, Esq., J.P., passed away at 1.30 yesterday after an illness extending over seven weeks. Mr. Thompson had reached the advanced age of 82 years, and always took a deep interest in everything for the advancement of our town. He was a prominent member of the Masonic Society, and the flag of that body is flying at half mast to-day out of respect to his memory.

Master George Davey, of St. John's, is here visiting his grandmother, Mrs. E. Willis.

The King Edward Brigade held their decoration service at the cemetery yesterday. The lads accompanied by the band, paraded to the last resting places of their departed comrades at 3 o'clock, and after a short service placed flowers on the different graves. They also placed flowers on the grave of the poor young negro, Samuel Padmore, who died here last year.

The Sons of England also paraded to the cemetery yesterday afternoon and put flowers on the graves of their departed brethren. A large number of our citizens were at the cemetery and took part in both services.

The barqt. Lake Simcoe got away on Saturday taking a load of seal oil and seal skins from Messrs. Murray & Crawford, for Glasgow.

Miss Lizzie Seeley, of Channel, who had been here for some months for the benefit of her health, left for home on Thursday last. She had a most pleasant visit to her aunt, Mrs. Baxter Webber, and her health was greatly benefited by the trip. Miss Clara Webber accompanied Miss Seeley to her home in Channel, and will remain there a few weeks visiting relatives.

Mr. Grace, Aug. 26, 1913.—COR.

Type printing is unpopular in Persia. The straightness of the lines offends the Persian's artistic sense, and he feels that in printed books the character of the letters is lost. Persia is to-day entirely dependent upon lithography for its own production of books. Naturally these are very rare. At the beginning of the nineteenth century a press with movable types was set up in Tabriz, and a certain number of books were printed. The effort met with no encouragement, however, and had shortly to be abandoned. The same taste which makes a Persian esteem so highly the great calligraphists makes him deplore the absence of character in a type printed book. What most delights him is well written manuscript, and he takes the same delight in the copyist's work that we take in an old master. Facing this, he contented himself with a lithograph, which is usually a facsimile of the writing of some fairly good scribe.

The Common Law

By Robert W. Chambers.
A great love story of society and studio life in New York. It has all the interest and fascination of the best society novels, and there is the added charm of the gay artists' life with its frank camaraderie, its witty small talk, its undisguised disregard of convention. The story concerns itself with the love affairs of Louis Neville, an artist of aristocratic and snobbish ancestry, and Valerie West, a gently bred girl who comes to his studio seeking employment as a model. Her unusual beauty wins her an audience and she is promptly engaged. The association thus begun rapidly progresses into pure friendship and then love. Love triumphant over tradition is the concluding note of the story. Illustrated by Gibson. Bound in cloth, 60c. copy; 2c. more if mailed.

"Stella Maris."

Sentiment, one of the characters says, is everything in life. Without it no heroic action would ever be performed, no self-sacrifice shown; everything would be just miserable. Mr. Locke can certainly not be accused of losing sight of this most pleasing human attribute. Stella Maris, with her delicate thoughts and fancies, is thoroughly charming. Risca and Herold are both quite captivating. The story as a whole is well worthy to rank with Locke's best and most successful novels. Special Colonial Editions—paper, 50c.; cloth, 75c.

THE IMPERIAL OIL CO., LTD.
Gentlemen,—With reference to POLARINE OIL, we desire to say that we operated six Winton Six-Cylinder Cars on the Cariboo Road in 1912, and these cars travelled 32,480 miles during the season. We used POLARINE exclusively, and found it superior to any other oil which we had previously tested, and while the cars were operated under all sorts of climatic conditions, we were so well pleased with the results obtainable from the use of POLARINE OIL that we propose to use nothing else on the eight Winton Cars which we will operate this year.

Company Manners.

BY MARY CAMERON.

A young woman who had promised to meet her mother and younger sister at two o'clock, one afternoon, was a twenty-five minutes late for the appointment.

And this was her excuse, "I'm awfully sorry, but just before I started from home Mrs. Rich called me up on the telephone. She kept talking and talking and I couldn't shut her off without being rude."

She delivered this explanation with an air of having avoided a lesser rudeness by committing a greater.

Nay, more than that; to have told the friend that she had an appointment and would have to call her up another time would not have been a discourtesy at all, whereas to make two people wait for twenty-five minutes for anything except absolute necessity was certainly discourteous conduct.

Evidently, she was influenced by that tenet which so many of us hold—that rudeness to one's own family is not rudeness.

The completeness with which many people drop all pretence of good manners the moment they enter the bosom of their families would be amusing if it were not so sad. The phrase "company manners" rises up out of the language to accuse us.

If we love our own flesh and blood better than outsiders, as presumably we do, we ought to be more careful in the home than anywhere to observe all those forms of politeness which have their foundations in true courtesy.

And yet how seldom we do! No one with any breeding at all would ever think of entering a friend's room without knocking, but how rare are the families whose members extend the same courtesy to each other!

Almost every mother teaches her children that to interrupt while others are speaking is one of the cardinal sins against good manners; and yet how often do you find a home dinner table at which the members do not constantly interrupt each other?

That one should not contradict is another rule of good manners, which is no empty form but rests on a firm basis of consideration and kindness. But I have often heard the members of supposedly well-bred families contradict each other with absolute freedom and without any apparent sense of discourtesy.

As I read this over, it seems to me that I am writing truisms. And then again, as I think how many people there are who ignore the self-evident facts, I am not at all sorry to have reminded them of them.

Cyclone Cut Wide Swath at Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Aug. 22.—Struck by the full force of a small cyclone which cut a swath across the country last night and which heralded one of the worst electric storms in years, the new $60,000 coal unloader, the construction of which had only been completed two hours previously was blown down at the New Ontario Dock, and this morning is a worthless mass of fantastically twisted steel. By almost a miracle there were no fatalities.

A gang of five men was just about to approach the unloader when the recollection of the "way" in which the lightning played around the steel work in last week's storm prompted them to remain in the adjacent office until the storm was over. The unloader was of double tramway type and was one of the most up-to-date on the Great Lakes. With its great capacity it would have unloaded an eight thousand ton vessel in one day. Already there are a number of vessels coal laden en route from Eastern coal ports with cargoes consigned to the dock. At six o'clock, the construction superintendent said: "Well all you want now is to attach the chains and start work."

At eight o'clock when the first blow was struck, it tottered for a moment, divided in the centre and fell into the lake. The wind rushed over the dock tearing up trees in its way and across to the court house, where more trees were uprooted. In a well defined track across the city there is hardly a tree standing while windows galore were blown in. The wind storm only lasted a very few minutes but torrential rain followed causing the blocking of sewers and a chain of lakes along the Main Street. The coal company is owned by the Playfair interests.

Changes in Wo ds.

How, for instance, "Boor" was Transformed into "Neighbor."

Word building is as much a piece of carpentry as in house building; only it takes longer, sometimes a century or more, and by that time the word's first meaning is usually changed.

For example, the old word for "neighbor" was "sth." One's good neighbor was known as one's "good sth." This became shortened to "godsith" and later to "gossip." Then the word's whole meaning changed to neighbor, but applied to the sort of talk exchanged between good neighbors.

Take the word "farmer," too. The old word for farmer was "boor." And "boor" later was used for describing farmer-like or rough persons. The farmer living nearest to one was known as the "neighbor," and this phrase in course of time was twisted to "neighbor."

You've heard the proverb, "Little pitchers have big ears." Well, it doesn't refer to the utensil that holds water or goes to the corner side door. "Pitcher" was a slang term with some such meaning as our word "chap" or "fellow." Thus "Little fellows have big ears" is a more sensible rendering of the proverb.—Chicago Journal.

Distilled Water Has Its Disadvantages

(Canadian Public Health Journal.)

Word comes of investigations carried on by a number of French naval surgeons into the use of chemically pure water as a drink, which may be of interest to some of our readers.

To make water chemically pure it has to be distilled, and the continued use of distilled water as a beverage reduces the strength of the physical organisms, because it is free from all germs, it contains nothing but oxygen and hydrogen. The mineral salts are left behind during the process of distillation, and the mineral salts are really indispensable.

As long as life persists in the body, these surgeons declare, the elimination of mineral salts goes on, and this means the rapid demineralization of the organism.

Demineralization, it is explained, leaves one's system in such a state that the natural tendency is to become tubercular. It was found that there were numerous cases of tuberculosis among the young sailors of the French navy and this was after long investigation by the surgeons of the navy, attributed to the demineralization of the water.

The distilled water was used in the belief that it was the best for the sailors, and the naval authorities were anxious to make every condition as healthy as possible. Just now the surgeons are studying the best means of treating the distilled water used aboard the ships with mineral matter. Of course pure water is wanted, but as conditions are now it is held that ordinary drinking water would be even better than the chemically pure if the latter was responsible for the increase of tuberculosis in the navy.

Few people continually drink chemically pure water, and for the reason the dangers could not well be learned until this discovery was made. There are a number of ways in which the germs in water may be eliminated at the same time the mineral salts left in the fluid. Distilled water is scarcely palatable at the best and it is these very necessary mineral salts that make it really palatable.

An effort is being made to provide further proof of the dangers of chemically pure water as maintained by the surgeons of the French navy by means of experiments on animals.

Are High School Ideals Unreal?

The Passing of Our Old Ideals of What the Good Business Lad Should Be -- The Teaching Modern Business Demands.

Not long ago, writes Mr. James P. Lipton in The Popular Scientific Review, the merchant, the manufacturer, the teacher, the young man, and the public in general were under the spell of the boy's magazine, wherein the first prize—the prize of partnership in the business and marriage with the "old man's" daughter—was awarded to the boy who keeps his hands clean, brushes his shoes, picks up stray pins on the office floor and carefully saves the twine from his employer's parcels. To do these things is indispensable; but besides this, the aspirant for partnership (and the daughter) must also—according to the story-books—write a perfect hand, never make a mistake in addition, never forget a message, never have a deceased grandmother on the afternoon of the ball-game, never think of aught except mastering every detail of the business, never be anything, in short, but the kind of prig that real, non-blooded boys are not.

The so-called Manchester school of political economy was built around a supposed economic man wholly unlike any human being ever born. Consequently there were promulgated for nearly a century a host of solemn fallacies, which have given and are still giving, endless trouble to civilized society. In much the same way the supposed demands of business upon boys have crystallized around these story-book heroes and have led the business man, the boy and the boy's teacher into all sorts of difficulties, misunderstandings and wild-goose chases after educational impossibilities.

A Neglected Cold May Cause Consumption.

Thousands of people die every year from the effects of this dreaded disease which, if treated in its first stages with of Tar and Cod Liver Oil and other medicinal extracts, will cure the diseased lungs and give strength to the patient. Sold everywhere.

mar, rhetoric, etc. be cut down to their lowest terms and fewest principles, throwing out all processes and exercises which are obsolete, little-used or cumbersome, putting in all the short-cuts and labor-saving devices which are of general application; and that those subjects, such as history, economics, political and economic geography, etc., which make for breadth of view; those exercises, such as rightly conceived manual training, ordered games, fresh-air drawings, etc., which make for quickness and control of the body; those general school relationships which promote team-play, loyalty, the spirit of working together for a tangible and desirable end, be fostered.

Miser's Money to Servant Girl.

Rewarded for Giving Wanderer Cold Biscuit and Cup of Coffee Twenty-Four Years Ago.

A $27,894 rewarded for giving a cold biscuit and cup of coffee to a man who appeared to be a hobo, in 1886, was bestowed upon Mrs. Mattie Hannun in the final settlement of the Marshall McMurrin estate at Evansville, Ind. Mrs. Hannun was paid $27,894 in gold and received a deed of property valued at $10,000. Twenty-four years ago Mrs. Hannun who lives in Vincennes, Ind., was Mattie Drain, a servant girl, nineteen years old. One day McMurrin, who was then a wanderer, called at the house where the Drain girl worked and asked for something to eat. The man of the house ordered McMurrin away, saying he did not make a practice of feeding tramps. Miss Drain, however, took pity on the man and fed him. This so impressed the man that he went to the house of a neighbor and wrote his will on a piece of brown paper with the request that it be given Miss Drain. The girl kept the piece of paper, little thinking it would ever be of any value to her.

Twenty-four years later McMurrin, who had become an eccentric poet and miser, was found demented in a shack on the Stringtown road, near Evansville. He was removed to the Southern Indiana hospital, where he died in a few days. Following McMurrin's death at Mrs. Hannun, hastened to Evansville from Vincennes and filled the McMurrin will in the probate court. No other will was filed. Relatives of the dead man in Kansas City and New York came and had one of their own number named as administrator of the estate. In the meantime Mrs. Hannun began steps in circuit court to claim all the dead man's property. Her suit was contested by relatives. In the first trial the jury failed to agree. The second trial was held and the jury decided that the will held by Mrs. Hannun was genuine and that she was the rightful heir. The relatives of the still living relatives of McMurrin decided not to appeal the case.

Consequently, not merely what the business man, but what modern business itself, demands of the high-school graduate is rational and orderly speed. Therefore in demanding of the high school graduate rational and orderly speed, modern business asks the teachers of those young men and women:—
1. That they do everything possible to send into business life sound animals who appreciate the value of good health and who know how to conserve it;
2. That they give those pupils such studies and exercises and in such a way as to result in activity of mind, thorough co-ordination between mind and body, well-trained senses and an eagerness to work and to learn;
3. That all the school work be so carried on as to foster a spirit of team-play, a sense of the value and power of working together for the common weal;
4. That to this end the teacher subordinate the memorizing of facts to the inculcating of promptness, obedience and loyalty;
5. That the studies which make for breadth of view and variety of interest be emphasized, and those which make for mere information, technique and drill be minimized;
6. That to accomplish this, subjects like arithmetic, bookkeeping, grammar, rhetoric, etc., be cut down to their lowest terms and fewest principles, throwing out all processes and exercises which are obsolete, little-used or cumbersome, putting in all the short-cuts and labor-saving devices which are of general application; and that those subjects, such as history, economics, political and economic geography, etc., which make for breadth of view; those exercises, such as rightly conceived manual training, ordered games, fresh-air drawings, etc., which make for quickness and control of the body; those general school relationships which promote team-play, loyalty, the spirit of working together for a tangible and desirable end, be fostered.

Strong man does motor car feat once too often.

Holds Back Two Autos, But is Torn to Pieces Later.

Paris, Aug. 4.—The famous strong man known as Apollon is reported to have met his death at Vichy in the course of a sensational performance. One of his most dangerous feats was to harness his arms by chains to two motor cars, which were then driven in opposite directions. Apollon had already succeeded once in holding both machines, but in answer to applause he attempted to repeat his exploit. To the indescribable horror of the spectators he was unable to keep his balance, and he was seen being dragged by one of the motor cars, while the other was still steering in the opposite direction. The motors were stopped instantly but too late, as the unfortunate man was found to have been horribly lacerated all the muscles of the right side of his chest being torn. Some reports state that he died almost instantly, and others that he was carried away in a dying condition.
