Do you suffer from Indigestion

Indigestion is largely due to a debilitated condition of the stomach. In this condition the stomach is unable to digest food—this is, extract the nutriment from it. Therefore, the food lays in the stomach and ferments, causing pains, fullness and heartburn. You almost dread meal-times because of those terrible indigestion pains afterwards.

But—try taking a wineglassful of 'Wingarnis' a quarter of an hour before meals. You will find that 'Wingarnis' will give a 'tone' and a vigour to the stomach and enable it to perform its functions in a natural manner. Don't continue to suffer needlessly. Take 'Wingarnis' to-day. Will you try just one bottle?

Begin to get well FREE.

'Wingarnis' is made in England, and you can obtain a liberal free trial bottle—note a mere taste, but enough to do you good by sending 6 cents stamps (by pay postage) to COLLEMAN & CO., Ltd., Wingarnis Works, Norwich, England. THE HEIR OF Lancewood

CHAPTER XXXII.

From this abyss of shame and horror there was no escape; and darker troubles were gathering round her. The fear of her secret becoming known had been some little restraint on Lady Neslie—now that Vivien knew it, there would be no restraint at all. Vivien understood the vain, shallow nature well enough to be sure that Valerie would seek to revenge her disgrace upon her—that for bravado's sake she would be more defiant and insolent than ever. She had never dreamed of her father's wife marrying again. It was an evil she had not foreseen; now it was one she had to dread. And when her ladyship married it would doubtless be one of those soi-disant military men whom she had so much affected—not an English gentleman. What would become of Lancewood then?

There was no clause in the will to prevent her marrying and bringing any husband she chose to Lancewood; it was to be her home until Oswald attained his majority. She might have married Monsieur de Nouchet and made him master of the Abbey. If she had the idea of marrying in her mind, it was most likely that she would carry it out.

"And I am powerless to prevent it," she thought; "powerless even to give advice! I can do nothing."

No sorrow that had fallen over her touched her as this did; and that what she dreaded would come to pass she felt sure. Lady Neslie would marry again if she chose.

She tried to imagine what she should do—what Lancewood would be like with one of these loud-speaking, cigar-making, billiard-playing Frenchmen as its master. Valerie and her consort would not have the power to pull down the building or to cut down the trees; but, if Oswald proved to be what he gave promise of being, they would be able to win his consent to anything.

Vivien remembered well that one day, when they were speaking of some fine old cedars, Lady Neslie said:

"As soon as Oswald comes of age I shall persuade him to have those trees cut down."

What would happen to Oswald if his mother brought a husband to the Abbey? She recoiled from the thought. It had been bad enough when her father brought a new wife home; what would it be if that wife, in her turn brought a new husband? The morning sun found Vivien Neslie still pondering this, the greatest sorrow that had befallen her. She could not recover from the shock.

All day she went about with a white face and sad eyes. Gerald Dorman watched her anxiously—he saw that something was wrong with the woman whom he so passionately loved. There was little rest or peace in the Abbey that day—it was filled with guests. Vivien's only haven was her own room; in every other place she was liable to interruption and intrusion. Lady Neslie's friends would have admired her; some of the gentlemen declared that she was one of the most beautiful women they had seen in England, but dreadfully proud. They made one or two attempts to talk to her, but they were great failures. The ladies of the party quietly ignored her, which was far more pleasant than if Vivien had ignored them. She was perfectly correct in her judgment of Lady Neslie. The fact that Vivien knew her secret simply increased the lady's dislike of her. Still Valerie felt quite secure that her secret was safe in Vivien's hands. "For the honor of the Neslies she will never betray me," she thought.

On the following morning when the two met, Valerie introduced the subject.

"That was a fine scene last night Vivien," she said. "Has that absurd man gone?"

"He left this morning," replied Vivien—"so Holmes tells me."

"As though I should place myself and my fortune in his power!" exclaimed Miladi. "What an idea!"

"Valerie," said Vivien, "you have so little good taste that it is useless for me to appeal to that; but, if you have any sense of shame left in you, you will never mention what happened last night to me again. I at least can blush for such scenes. They are the first of the kind at Lancewood, and they are a disgrace to the place. Pray do not mention them. Will you answer me this, Lady Neslie? Have you any thought of marrying again?"

"Certainly, if I receive a suitable offer," she replied. "You may rely upon one thing, though, Vivien—I shall not choose a needy Frenchman."

"But you do intend to re-marry, Valerie?" Miss Neslie repeated.

"Yes, if the Fates are willing. After all, you are a sensible girl, Vivien. You take things very quietly and very discreetly. I know you will not repeat any of those horrible stories that Henri told you last evening."

"That I certainly shall not," said Vivien; and so their interview ended. It was evening before Vivien found a chance of escaping from the house. Then the people she dreaded to meet were out in the grounds; but none of them, she knew, would trespass in her own nook—the garden where the sun-dial stood. She had resolved upon consulting Gerald Dorman; he was a true friend, he would give her sound advice. She sent a little pencilled note to his room, saying that she should be glad to see him, and asking him to join her in the little rose-garden. There it was all quiet and calm. After the turmoil of the day it was pleasant to sit there and think for a few minutes of her lover; she laid her head against the old sundial, while the western wind brought the scent of the roses to her, and she closed her eyes that she might the better think of her love.

The sweet balmy wind, the long sleepless nights she had passed, produced their effect. In a few minutes Vivien slept, and Gerald Dorman, presently appearing, found her there. He looked long and sadly at the pale, beautiful face. Then, remembering her proud, sensitive nature, he thought that perhaps she might not be well pleased to wake and find him watching her there. So, with a trustful instinct of what would please her best, he went back a few steps, and made noise enough to awaken her. He saw the pain of that awakening—how her sad, sorrowful thought seemed to return to her one by one. Looking up suddenly, she saw him and her whole face brightened.

"Mr. Dorman," she said, "I have sent for you because I must have a friend and confidant. I can choose no better than you."

He sat down by her side, and neither of them imagined how that talkative would end.

"I am not surprised, Miss Neslie," said Gerald, after a thoughtful pause. "From the very first I felt that Lady Neslie was not what she seemed to be. I may even say that I am relieved. The truth, I felt sure, would be known some day, and I dreaded worse than this."

"It is bad enough," Vivien remarked sadly, adding, "but my worst fear is this. If she chooses to remain an abbess, I do not see the anything can be urged against it."

"Nor, I," said Gerald. "I feel sure that she will marry; and then, at least until Sir Oswald comes of age, her husband will be virtually master. The Abbey will be no home to you then, Miss Neslie."

"I shall never leave it, no matter what happens. I shall remain until the end—until I die. My remaining here is the only hope for the place."

He longed to ask her if she would never marry—to remonstrate against the idea of her whole life being wasted through the folly of a false, fat woman; but he did not dare. He said—

"I do not believe that, when Sir Oswald uttered those words as a specific direction to you, he intended that your whole life should be spoiled by them."

"My father trusted me," she said simply; "I must obey."

"Look!" cried Gerald. "I should not be surprised if in a few months the Comte de Calloux were master here. I hear on all sides that the ladyship favors him, and that Monsieur de Nouchet has been dismissed."

Vivien looked in the direction indicated, and there, in the light of the setting sun, she saw Miladi with the count. They were walking down the broad terrace, the count all devotion, all attention, "my lady" lovingly, laughing with all her usual grace. She wore a dress of white which looked almost golden in the shade of the setting sun. She wore rubies round her white throat—rubies that shone with a blood-red light; and as Vivien looked, she saw the count bend down and kiss Valerie's jeweled hand. She looked at him with some curiosity; he was a tall, handsome man, with dark shrewd eyes and a cruel mouth.

"Do you think," she asked Gerald, "that any of these men love Lady Neslie—really love her for her own sake?"

"No," he replied, "I do not. I think they love Lancewood and its renown. Lady Neslie is incapable of love; and, though she may infatuate and bewilder a man, I do not think she could ever win real love. She is too shallow, too false."

Vivien thought, as she watched the two on the terrace, that they certainly looked like lovers. She did not like the count. There was something suspicious, mercenary, cunning about him. He would not perhaps gamble after the fashion of Monsieur de Nouchet, but he would use his power mercifully. She sighed deeply. "Alas for unhappy Lancewood," she thought—"unhappy indeed if it falls into his hands!"

Then another scene occurred. On the terrace just beneath them the little Sir Oswald was playing with a young nurse-girl. She did something to displease him. He raised the whip with which he was playing and struck her a violent blow on the mouth. The girl cried out with pain. Miladi and the count went to see what had happened. Weeping with pain, the girl made her complaint.

"You should manage him better," said her ladyship. "You know his spirit."

"Apparently Sir Oswald knows how to use his whip," said the count.

"They are my servants," cried the boy, passionately, "and I shall do what I like with them!"

"A fine spirit indeed," said the count; but there was a gleam in his eyes, a line round his mouth, which told Vivien more plainly than words could have done how he longed to take the whip and use it on the boy.

Lady Neslie turned away with a light laugh.

"You must mind, Oswald, that you do not offer to beat a man so, or he might hurt you," she said; and, as she walked away with the count obsequiously bowing by her side, the two witnesses of the little scene looked at each other.

They had not time to exchange a word before the head-nurse came. It was Sir Oswald's bed-time.

"Is it?" said the child. "You may take me if you can."

He lay down on the ground, resisting, struggling, striking out violently. He was finally overpowered and carried off amidst violent shrieks and cries.

Vivien looked after him with flashing eyes. A sudden, almost intolerable sense of her wrong came over her. She thought of what she would have done for Lancewood—how she had loved and lived for it. She thought of her love, crushed down and well nigh hopeless—of her vain attempts to preserve the stainless honor of her name. She gazed down the long vista of years, and saw Lancewood, her honored home, a by-word in the country, a scene of low dissipation—she saw it disgraced, dismantled, its glory faded, ruined far more cruelly than if its walls had been blackened by fire. She clasped her hands with a cry of pain. All the pride of her nature rose in hot rebellion. She would have perished her life in that one moment to save Lancewood. She was beside herself with anger, with pride, despair.

"If that child were dead," she said, "all this would be ended. The power and the rule of that false, cunning woman would be over and Lancewood saved. I do not wish to hurt him—but, oh, if he were to die, how changed it would all be!"

"His death would be the means of saving Lancewood," agreed Gerald. "But children of that description seldom die," he added.

He started, for Vivien was looking into his face with a strange expression in her dark eyes. For half a minute a weird fancy crossed his mind that another soul was looking at him from her eyes.

"I wish," she said, hurriedly, "that he could be got rid of without being hurt—that he could be carried away into some far-off land. He is so young that he would forget all about his home—and it is not better; it never ought to be his. Really that Lancewood were razed to the ground than fall into the hands of the child of a strolling player."

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World—Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

As a business the child learns that the sulks pays. The final issue is that a large number of self-willed, unbearable young men and women go out into the world, either to get beaten into a decent shape by the kicks and blows of their fellows, or else to become soured and spoiled by general dislike.

To teach the child not to give way to temper the mother must control her own. She must speak of the bad mood as a very dangerous thing. She must be gentle and firm as a good trained nurse with a sick patient, she must study both the disease and the cure. Thus she will succeed at last, and her encouragement should be that talent and genius are no protection to her child in the great world. Education is not a safeguard from danger, but the man or woman who has self control, who can face disappointment with a quiet heart and resolute will, is superior to danger, is beyond temptation; and can walk with sure steps in dangerous places.

Fashions and Fads.

ished to-day that most of the passengers on board the Arabic were Canadians returning home. The majority were English people going to the States and possibly to Canada.

RATHER CONFLICTING.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.
A despatch to the State Department from the American Consul at Liverpool, given out late to-day, gave the names of the following four American passengers not on the list of the Arabic's survivors: Mrs. Josephine L. Bruguiere, James Hoaliland, Edmund F. Woods, and Thomas Elmore.

SEVERAL AMERICANS INJURED.
QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 20.
Several American survivors of the Arabic disaster, were injured. All the Americans lost their personal effects. They were to leave to-night for Liverpool.

TO GATHER AFFIDAVITS.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.
Late to-day Secretary Lansing announced that he had instructed the embassy in London, and the United States Consuls in the vicinity to gather affidavits from Americans aboard the Arabic.

WILSON AND THE ARABIC.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.
Official details upon which President Wilson will decide whether the sinking of the Arabic was an act deliberately unfriendly to the United States, were still lacking to-day, and meanwhile the President and all other administration officials, while realizing fully the gravity of the new situation between the United States and Germany, were keeping their minds open. President Wilson left the White House early to motor to Philadelphia to visit his oculist, and motor back this evening. When he has a deep problem on his mind it is the President's habit to seek seclusion often riding through the country side. No officials here doubted that he was giving hours of thought to the Arabic case. Only two official despatches have been received. They gave the fruits of independent investigation merely transmitting reports of the White Star Line. The United States will decide its course upon reports of its own officials. Ambassador Page forwarded the White Star report that the ship was torpedoed without warning. Vice-Consul Thompson, of Queenstown, made a similar report. Neither accounted for Mrs. Josephine Bruguiere nor Dr. Edmund Woods, the two Americans still missing. While officials here are keeping their minds open during the hours which will be required for assembling official evidence, they are thinking about these points: Whether any Americans have been lost; whether the Arabic actually was torpedoed without warning; whether the Arabic by having been conveyed on the beginning of the voyage had under international law partaken of the character of a mail ship.

PROPERTY LOSSES.
LONDON, Aug. 20.
It is understood that the Arabic carried between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 worth of American securities for New York. These were all insured, but underwriters at Lloyd's and various marine insurance companies busy this morning looking into details and arranging claims. One firm alone has $1,250,000 worth of securities in the sunken vessel. It is understood that same are being purchased in America to cover these.

THE BOVIC SAFE.
LONDON, Aug. 21.
The report that the White Star Liner Bovic had been sunk is untrue. The ship was seen in the Gulf of Riga.

PENETRATED GULF OF RIGA.
PETROGRAD, Aug. 21.
The German fleet have penetrated the Gulf of Riga, and are engaged with the Russian warships defending the coast according to an official statement issued to-night by the Russian War Office.

SPANISH STEAMER SUNK.
LONDON, Aug. 20.
The Spanish steamer Peria Castillo and the Norwegian steamer Sverresberg have been sunk by a submarine. Three of the crew of the Peria Castillo were saved. The fate of the others on the craft and of those on the Sverresberg is unknown.

NOT CONFIRMED.
QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 20.
The report was circulated here to-day that the White Star Liner Lapland had been sunk. There was no confirmation. It is considered probable that the Lapland was confused with the New York City, torpedoed yesterday, whose crew landed here to-day. The Lapland is a Red Star Liner under charter to the White Star Line. She sailed from New York on Aug. 12 for Liverpool, and is due there late to-day or early to-morrow.

THE BOVIC REPORTED SUNK.
NEW YORK, Aug. 20.
Advices received here to-day bring the report that the White Star Liner Bovic has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. The Bovic has been employed in the Australian service. She was 6,500 tons. The Bovic when she sailed from here, was loaded to capacity with general cargo. She carried no passengers.

A WEEK'S SHIPPING TOLL.
LONDON, Aug. 20.
An official statement given to-day, places the loss of British shipping for the week ending Aug. 18th, as 12 vessels, eleven sunk by submarines and two by mines. Gross tonnage 22,790.

GERMAN HEADQUARTERS STATEMENT.

BERLIN, Aug. 20.
The usual daily statement from the German army headquarters was issued to-day, several hours after the bulletin announcing the fall of Novo Georgievsk. It says that the complete garrison fortress consisted of 85,000 men. Of these, the statement adds, more than 20,000 were captured in yesterday's battle. The complete garrison from Berlin stated that the entire garrison was captured. The Germans are not clear, however, whether a considerable part of the total 85,000 escaped.

SUBMARINE VICTIMS.
LONDON, Aug. 20.
The Benbrackie, 3,300 tons, and Beterm, 1,797 tons, have been sunk. In both cases the crews were saved. The Samara, of Glasgow, 3,172 tons, and the Gladiator, of Liverpool, 293 tons, have also been sunk. The crew of the Samara are proceeding to port in a trawler. Of the Gladiator's crew, 35 are in lifeboats, which are being towed into port by a trawler. The New York City, 2,970 tons, gross, which left Bristol for New York on Aug. 16th, is another victim. Crew saved. Her captain and crew of 53 men landed at Queenstown to-day.

SATURDAY, Aug. 21, 1915.

The Kit of Our Soldiers

One of the soldiers of the Newfoundland Regiment, when he was stationed at Acreknow Camp, Hawick, on July 23rd, sent a letter to his brother in the city, in which he says: "Anyhow, if I don't get to London, the money won't go astray, as I've got to get a pair of boots, underclothes, cap, puttees and several other articles of clothing."

The brother brought in the letter to the Evening Telegram Office, wondering why his brother should be spending money on his kit, as he understood it was provided free of charge. This morning we phoned Capt. Montgomerie, the local adjutant of the Regiment, and drew his attention to the matter. He said that the British War Office provides the equipment and kit of the soldiers after they leave here. There is a regular scale of kit issued. To the best of his recollection it includes among other things two suits of uniform, three pairs of underclothing and two pairs of boots. The Women's Patriotic Association also sending out extra articles of comforts which are distributed. Often, however, a soldier for one cause or another determines to have extra clothing, or it may be for one reason or another determines to replace articles of his kit before the regular free issue is made, and in such cases he obtains it from the stores or it is charged against his pay.

The Munition Problem.

There can be no doubt that the deadlock on the Western front, the great drive against the Russians in the East, and the speedy reduction of Russian fortress is due in the main to the superiority of German supply of munitions. Germany was well provided with munitions before the war began, and after the war started and the engineering plants and organization lost most of their trade in implements of peace, these plants and organizations were diverted to the supply of munitions and this has enabled them to maintain and probably improve the superiority in this respect, which they had at the commencement. The problem before the Allies is to wrest that superiority in the machinery of war from the enemy. This takes time, but progress is being made. For instance, Canada is said to be turning out far more shells per day than the plants available before the war could have turned out in a year. Diversions of like nature are Steel Head Shields Worn by French.

Paris, Aug. 14.—Pending the manufacture of the new steel helmets for the French army, 700,000 steel head shields have been sent to the front. This is the only species of armor that the soldiers have been permitted to use, as most of the cuirasses, chest protectors, head protectors, coats-of-mail and bucklers offered proved to be almost as dangerous as the enemy's bullets. The head shield, however, as it is used, was recently proved by statistics to have saved a great many lives.

CANADA'S TRADE AND THE WAR.

A statement just issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce shows the effect of the war upon Canadian trade. For the fiscal year ending March 31st last there was a decrease in imports of nearly 163 million dollars as compared with the year ending March 31st, 1914. Exports, however, show an increase of over four million dollars. An encouraging feature of the report is that for the first time in many years the balance of trade is in Canada's favor, the total imports being $455,471,471, while exports are valued at $461,442,509. The imports of coin and bullion swell the total figures considerably, showing an increase of over 116 million dollars. Exports of agricultural products show a decrease from $198,220,029 to $134,746,059, though animal produce increased from $53,249,119 to $74,200,743, and manufactures from $57,442,452 to $85,539,501.

Sir Ian Hamilton.

Sir Ian Hamilton suggests the romance of war, says Alfred G. Gardner in Atlantic Monthly. In temperament and appearance he is the cavalier, and very little effort of the imagination is needed to picture him fighting a forlorn battle for the hopeless Stuart cause.

He is without the tragic seriousness of Montrose, perhaps without that depth of intensity that give Montrose so enduring a hold on the imagination; but it is the spirit of Montrose that he recalls in his mingling of the poet and the adventurer, and if there is any distrust of him at all, it proceeds from the pedestrian fear that a man who looks so much like an embodiment of romance cannot at the same time possess the humdrum qualities of the organizer of victory.

Now Sir Ian Hamilton has not only committed the fatal error of publishing poetry, but he carries in every lineament the impress of the poet and of the man of romantic ancestry and taste. He is the painter's soldier, and with his tall, spare figure, his mobile, aristocratic features and dark eyes, gives the impression that his main function in life is to adorn the walls of the Royal Academy and then to die a heroic death on behalf of some mistletoe loyalty, and with a cavalier jest upon his lips.

And, indeed, there is no doubt that the natural instinct of the man is a chivalrous intrepidity rather than a calculating caution. The withered hand and wrist serve as a reminder of that. For they a souvenir of that memorable day, thirty years ago, when the young lieutenant of the Ninety-second Highlanders shared in the disaster on Majuba Hill, and gave the first conspicuous expression of the stuff that was in him.

But though he has the Highlander's love of the charge, it would be a profound mistake to regard him simply as a brilliant adventurer of the battle field. He is that, but he is more than that. When Lord Roberts, not long before his death, was asked whom among the generals of the British Army he regarded as the ablest commander in the field, he replied, "Ian Hamilton." The judgement was disputable but not indefensible; and it was founded, not on Hamilton's audacity, but on his knowledge and on his coolness in directing the complex movements of the battle field.

Like General French, he has been a serious student of war all his life. As a youth he went to Germany and from the old Hanoverian, General Dammer, acquired the strategy that had made the Prussians the military masters of Europe. And since then he has learned to apply and qualify that science by the actual experience of war in many fields—in India, in Egypt, in South Africa.

CATARRH NEVER STOPS IN SAME PLACE REACHES THE LUNGS—DEVELOPES CONSUMPTION

TO STOP A COLD QUICKLY AND PREVENT CATARRH, USE "CATARRHOZONE."

Nothing more serious than the common cold.

If it gains headway you can't stop it from running into Catarrh, deafness, or serious throat trouble.

Catarrh spreads very fast. From nose to throat it goes in a day. Soon the Bronchial tubes are affected and before you know it, unless very healthy the lungs are hit, and it's too late.

While you have the chance, drive colds and Catarrh right out of the system.

You can quickly do so by inhaling the rich piney vapor of Catarrhozone.

D'Annunzio in Sky Comforted Trieste.

Tells How He Flew Over City in Aeroplane and Dropped Message to the People.

Venice, Aug. 16.—Lieutenant Gabriele d'Annunzio, authorized by his military superiors, has consented to give some particulars of his flight over Trieste, in an aeroplane driven by Naval Commander Miraglia d'Annunzio. The latter, who has perfected himself as an aviator since he entered the army, received his first lessons from the American aviator Curtiss, with whom he flew for the first time at Brescia some eight years ago.

The poet said the martyr city of Trieste, "Sister Queen of the Adriatic with Venice," looked more imposing than ever in her desolation, seen from a height of over 3,000 feet. Their first thought, despite the attacks of the enemy, who immediately fired from all quarters on the aeroplane, was to throw into the city little sandbags surmounted by Italian flags, containing d'Annunzio's message to the people of Trieste. It read:

"Courage, brothers! Courage! Perseverance! We will free you soon. We are fighting without cessation, in Trentino Province, in Cadore, in the Carnia Alps, on the Isonzo, we daily gain ground. Every effort of the enemy is repulsed by the valor of our soldiers, every impudent lie of our enemy is pricked by our bayonet. We have already over 20,000 prisoners. Soon the whole Carso will be conquered.

"I tell you, swear to you, brothers, our victory is sure. Italy's flag will soon be hoisted on your Arsenal, on the sacred Hill of Giusto.

"Courage, Perseverance! Your martyrdom approaches its end. Our rejoicing is imminent.

"From the height of these Italian wings, which the brave Miraglia conducts, I send you this message and my heart.—I, Gabriele d'Annunzio, in the sky of our fatherland."

Bulgarian Loan Held Up

London, August 16.—A Rome despatch to The Daily Telegraph says: "New difficulties have arisen in connection with the payment of the first part of the German loan to Bulgaria. Austro-German bankers are imposing extraordinary conditions which Bulgaria cannot accept. It appears that the bankers cannot dispose of so much gold and offer an equivalent amount in German and Austrian paper. In fine, the loan runs the risk of postponement or abandonment.

"Difficulties of a similar kind have also arisen between Bulgaria and Turkey in regard to the Dedeagach-Adrianople Railway. Turkey is proposing conditions which are extravagant and unacceptable."

BRITISH SHIPBUILDING.

Lloyd's Register for the quarter ended June 30, shows a most remarkable activity in British shipbuilding. There are four hundred and forty-two steamers, aggregating more than a million and a half tons, under construction for the merchant service, twenty-one of them being over ten thousand tons gross. We are building seven and a half times as much tonnage as the Germans have sunk since the "blockade" began. As the prevailing high prices are in part due to the shortage of shipping, it is perhaps legitimate to regard those employed in ship construction as engaged in war work.—Pall Mall Gazette.

MUKHTAR PASHA RECALLED FROM BERLIN FOR TALKING.

Athens, Aug. 14 (Dispatch to the London Daily News)—Mukhtar Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador at Berlin, has been recalled at the Kaiser's request, because he reported to Constantinople that Germany and Austria were in the last stage of exhaustion and that the first serious German repulse would bring destruction.

He recommended the Porte to employ discretion, pointing out that if Germany lost she would use Turkey as the scapegoat.

Gen. Von Der Goltz, on hearing of the report, immediately cabled, demanding Mukhtar's recall.

BRITISH THEATRE.

The excellent programme provided by the management of the above house was greatly enjoyed yesterday by many patrons. Madame Timmons was—as is usual—in most magnificent voice; both of the selections being beautifully rendered. On Monday a most extraordinary treat is promised. Mr. Cameron has arranged a splendid programme of features including a choice three reel production entitled: "The Queen of the South Seas" which Madame Olive Timmons and Mr. P. J. McCarthy will sing the duet: "Love's Dream" and they will be accompanied by Mr. A. H. Allen. This latter announcement will undoubtedly cause intense interest in the city as this galaxy of music and talent can not possibly be surpassed.

"WHEN YOU'RE A LONG, LONG WAY FROM HOME."

Mr. Harvey Collins, Irish Tenor, sings: "When you're a long, long way from home," a late New York hit, and "When I was a Broth of a Boy," one of Chas. Olcott's fine ballads, at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day; don't miss hearing Mr. Collins in these two numbers. The picture programme is a first class one, see the regular advertisement in another part of this paper for particulars. Go to the Crescent to-day and see this fine show, you are sure to like it.

ROYAL PUNCH AND JUDY SHOW TO-DAY.

Everyone was delighted with the Russells last night, for their act "A Tip on the Cup" is one continual laugh. On Monday to-day for the complete change of programme when Olive Russell, the lady baritone singer, will be heard in songs. This lady has not been heard yet, and she has a wonderful baritone voice; the only lady baritone in the profession that is a real baritone. Today for the children's matinee the Royal Punch and Judy Show will be seen, also Don the children's delight. Don't miss this big show; there are lots of beautiful pictures.

"Don't Worry."

Don't worry about things that you can't help.

Worry kills success, some people are worrying all the time about some things that have happened or might happen. Drive out of your mind completely your past troubles and misfortunes, they cannot be helped now. Usually the coming events that you worry about are not really so bad when they actually happen, and many times the thing most dreaded and worried about never happens. You will get a lot of undesirable things passed out to you in your life which you can't help, and all the worrying you do over them is simply a waste of energy, which might be better employed in the solution of problems of real help to your present and future.

A better preparation is not to be found for helping you to get over all your unnecessary worries than:—STAFFORD'S PRESCRIPTION "A." It gives you Nerve, Will Power and Strength to fight against all your troubles.
