Rheumatism A Sneaking Disease Has At Last Met Its Conqueror

Throbbing Muscles and Swollen Joints Made Well.

RUB ON NERVILINE.

Old age knows no foe more subtle, more unrelenting than rheumatism. At first only a grumbling pain is felt. But, alas, it settles in the joints and muscles, and finally tortures its victims.

To-day the disease may be in the muscles of the back, thigh, shoulder or neck—to-morrow in the joints of the hand, toes, arms or legs. It may work with redoubled fury.

Whether the pain is constant or occasional makes no difference to "Nerviline."

Because other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged. Nerviline has cured the worst of cases. It has brought health to those in the deepest despair. It has ended years of awful suffering for those who never hoped to be well again.

There is a marvellous healing power in Nerviline which it derives from the extracts and juices of certain rare herbs and roots. It allays almost magically the awful pain that only rheumatism can describe.

Congestion is drawn out of the muscles, stiffened joints are eased and limbered up, the old time feeling of depression is cast off, and once again Nerviline brings the sufferer to buoyant vigorous lasting good health.

Every home needs good old Nerviline, needs it for earache, toothache, headache, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, stiff neck, chest colds and sore throat. Wherever there is pain, congestion or inflammation, Nerviline will cure it.

TRUE LOVE'S PASSION.

CHAPTER XIX.
A Suspicious Scene.

"There," said Cyril, "drink that, and then run away and dance. Take my word for it, Becca, there is scarcely anything in the world worth crying over," he added, bitterly, as he thought of his own trouble.

Becca took the wine in both her trembling hands and drank it, then she looked up at Cyril, with a strange expression in her face.

"You're—your very kind to me, sir," she said.

"Oh, nonsense," said Cyril, rather impatiently; he was anxious to be off. "The man who would turn from a woman in distress, you know. Are you all right now?"

But it seemed as if there were still something troubling Becca, which even the glass of unwanted champagne could not dispel.

"Mr.—Mr.—Burne," she faltered, "I ought to have told you—" Then she stopped.

"What ought you to have told me?" said Cyril, half absently.

Becca's face grew red, and she looked at his boots and plucked at the founce of her dress irresolutely and nervously.

"It's—It's something I've found," she said.

"Something of mine, Becca? Well, what is it?" and he smiled. "Don't be so frightened. I don't suppose it's anything of consequence."

"I—I meant to give it to you when I saw you," said poor Becca, faltering for the first time in her life over a fib; "but—but it slipped my mind. Here it is," and she held out the ring, which she had taken from her pocket and held in her hand while he had gone for the champagne.

Cyril took it; then he laughed.

"Oh, my ring," he said, carelessly. "Why, is that what has been troubling you? or partly, eh? What a silly child you are! Why, I don't care anything about it; and, see here, Becca, findings are keepings. As you've found it, you shall have it."

He spoke thoughtlessly, and with the carelessness characteristic of him. It did not occur to him that there was any imprudence or indiscretion in giving a two-penny-halfpenny ring to a girl who had happened to find it.

"You shall have it if you like, Becca," he said.

Becca turned her moist eyes up to him.

"Oh, sir!"

"There you are," said Cyril. "Here, hold out your hand, and I'll put it on for you."

Becca, a smile struggling upon her face, held up her hand, and at that moment two persons came to the opening of the marquee and looked out.

They were Guildford Berton and Norah.

"A lovely night, but dark," he said. "I think I did right in advising you to get a breath of fresh air, Lady Norah."

She was about to make some reply, when her eyes fell upon Cyril and Becca. Cyril's back was turned toward Norah, and Becca was too intent upon Cyril to see the pair looking at them.

"It fits as if it were made for you," Cyril said, as he slipped the ring on her finger.

Becca's eyes filled with tears as she looked at the ring—stolen property no longer, but her own, her very own. Then she took Cyril's hand and put it to her lips.

Cyril started and almost snatched his hand away, and there flashed upon him for the first time during the transaction the doubt as to its wisdom.

"Oh, come," he said, "don't make a fuss about such a trumpery present, Becca; and let me take you back to the tent."

Guildford Berton had stood looking from Cyril and Becca to Norah with a gleam of gratification in his dark eyes. He felt Norah's arm quiver as if a spasm of pain had shaken her, and saw her face grow slowly, slowly white; then in a low voice he said:

"I'm afraid we are intruding upon a little love scene, and are rather dropped. Let us efface ourselves," and he led her back into the marquee.

Norah spoke not a word until they had merged in the crowd, then she said:

"Will you take me to Lady Ferndale, Mr. Berton?" and in silence he led her to the line of dowagers at the other end of the room, and, with a low, reverential bow, left her.

Meanwhile Cyril had taken Becca's arm, and was hurrying her to the tent; but at the door Becca drew back half-shyly.

"I—I don't want to go back just yet," she murmured. "You go and leave me, Mr. Burne. I've given you trouble enough already."

"You'd like to stay in the air a little longer? Very well, Becca; go and sit down again until you feel all right," he said, and with a nod and a smile he left her, feeling if the truth must be told, greatly relieved. He entered the marquee during an interval in the dances, and at once looked round for Norah.

She was sitting beside Lady Ferndale, still pale but composed, though her heart was aching, her brain burning, with the emotion that threatened to overmaster her.

What did it mean? Could it be possible that Cyril, her hero, her god, whose faith and honor she would have answered for with her life, was false to her?

Had the scene she had witnessed been a trick of her imagination? She had seen him place a ring on Becca's finger, had seen the girl look up into his face with tear-dimmed eyes, and kiss his hand with a passionate devotion! And he had danced with her, and with her alone of all the women in the room. He had been walking in the darkness with her, making love to her—a shudder ran through Norah's frame, and her eyes filled with proud and burning tears—while she, she the woman whose heart he had won, the woman with whom he had exchanged solemn vows of eternal love, had been neglected by him.

It was insult past all comprehension, exceeding all belief. And yet she had seen those two with her own eyes!

A feeling of shame swept over her—shame for him who could be so false, for herself in that she loved and trusted him.

She longed to plead some excuse and go home, to fly from the heat that seemed to be stifling her, the hideous din of the band, the chatter and laughter which sounded like the voices of so many mocking demons in her ears.

Lady Ferndale glanced at her once or twice.

"Are you tired, Norah, dear?" she asked, tenderly. "It has been a long day."

"No—yes, I think I am a little tired," she replied, scarcely knowing what she said.

Then a wave of attraction, repulsion, swept over her, for she saw Cyril approaching them.

Her heart, her soul went out toward him, but her insulted, injured womanhood recoiled. She would have risen and moved away, but her limbs refused to obey her will, and she sat motionless, statuesque, looking straight before her.

"What a handsome man!" said an old lady to Lady Ferndale. "Who is he, my dear? I don't remember seeing him before."

"Oh, a great favorite of mine," replied Lady Ferndale. "He is Mr. Cyril Burne, who is going to be a famous artist, isn't he, Norah?"

Norah did not answer. Cyril was close upon them.

"Well, Mr. Burne," said Lady Ferndale, "have you come to make those excuses you owe me?" and she nodded and smiled at him pleasantly.

"I have come to ask Lady Norah to be gracious enough to give me the next dance, Lady Ferndale," he said, and he looked at Norah.

She did not meet his eyes, eloquent of anxious pleading. To her the look seemed full of deceit and falsehood. Perhaps he had looked in just the same way into Becca South's eyes.

"Will you give me this dance, Lady Norah?" he said, bending over her a little and lowering his voice that Lady Ferndale might not hear and notice the tender longing he could not keep out of it.

Norah raised her eyes then, and looked him full in the face, with the expression that might have sat upon the face of a queen whose pride will not permit her to resent an insult in any other way than with cold reserve and indifference.

"Thank you," she said, in tones of ice, "but I am tired," and she turned her face from him and spoke to Lady Ferndale.

The key words fell upon Cyril's heart like so many stabs. He gave her one glance of reproachful tenderness, and, not knowing what to do, whether to take his dismissal without appeal or to remain in the hope of getting an explanation with her, sat down in a chair next her, which happened to be vacant.

Even in that moment of pain and bewildered doubt it was a joy to him to feel himself near her, and he sat

Look at a Child's Tongue When Cross, Feverish and Sick

Take no chances! Move poisons from liver and bowels at once.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated; then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

The remarkable economy of the incandescent gas lamp is by no means either its chief—or even an important—claim for popularity. It meets better than any other source of artificial light the requirements of ideal light.

In the color of the light produced it is far superior to any other illuminant in general and universal use. The investigations of acknowledged authorities indicate that for the approximation of artificial daylight the gas mantle has at least one and one-half times the value of the carbon-filament electric lamp.

This quality is highly desirable, indeed absolutely essential where the approximation of daylight color values is important. For lighting shops, displaying haberdashery, suitings, gowns, millinery, etc., the incandescent gas lamp is not even remotely approached by any other incandescent lamp.

Of all the manifold advantages of gas light, perhaps the most important is its favourable effect upon the eyes. The development of the incandescent electric lamp with its intense brilliant and glaring filament has been accompanied by hitherto unheard of prevalence of eye troubles and diseases which are forcing themselves upon the attention of the medical fraternity. This is resulting in a greater appreciation of the soft mellow quality of gas light and is rapidly enlarging its field of use.—July 13, 1908.

and waited for a chance to speak to her.

How much he had to tell her! If she would only come away into some quiet corner with him, that he might explain how he had been kept in London, and— Good Heaven! he must get her away, where he could talk alone with her, for in a few hours he must leave her again—that beastly

Brittany business!—and perhaps for months.

Why did she avoid him? Was she never going to turn her head?

At last, in desperation, he said:

"What a capital ballroom this makes, Lady Norah."

Without looking at him she dropped a cold "Yes," and resumed her conversation with Lady Ferndale.

Cyril flushed hotly, then went pale, and stared straight before him, wondering what he should do.

He could not say, "Lady Norah, will you come with me? I have something to say to you"; he could not say this openly, with Lady Ferndale and all these old women sitting by; and yet he must speak with her, and alone.

He saw the people streaming toward the end of the tent into the supper-room, but with eyes that noticed nothing; and it was with a start that he found Guildford Berton suddenly before them.

"Will you let me take you into supper, Lady Norah?" he said, nodding with a cold, impassive smile at Cyril.

Norah hesitated for one second, a second during which Cyril's heart beat wildly with excitement and dread. Would she go with him, or would she remain and give Cyril his chance?

His heart felt like lead as she rose and placed her hand on Guildford Berton's arm, and, rising himself, he stood and stared after them, as they walked away, like a man in a dream.

What had he done, he asked himself, that she should treat him with such cold disdain? Ah, if she could only know what he had endured during that fortnight of absence from her!

"I'm afraid you will have to take me or some other old lady, Mr. Burne," said Lady Ferndale, eying him with a half-smile of amusement.

Cyril started, and offered her his arm, but Lady Ferndale turned to one of the dowagers.

"Lady Tressington, let me introduce Mr. Cyril Burne," and Cyril, feeling that he must be dreaming or out of his senses, gave his arm to the old lady and led her off.

It was not for the honor and pleasure of taking the Countess of Tressington in to supper that he had dashed down from London; and yet it seemed as if it would be his only reward, for when he reached the supper-room he found that the only seats vacant were at the end of the long table, and that Norah was far away from him at the upper end.

He got the old lady some chicken; he also obtained some claret cup, and he succeeded in forcing himself to talk to her; but all the time his eyes kept wandering to where Norah sat, with Guildford Berton close beside her. His handsome face was turned to her continually, his dark eyes seemed eloquent of reverential devotion; and Cyril's teeth clinched, and his face grew pale as he watched them.

NORTH OF ENGLAND REPORT DAMAGE DONE BY AIRS

LONDON, 29

Reports from the North of England indicate that the latest raid on airships was futile as the military authorities in the North of England had warned of the presence of the raiders, and all light aircraft were promptly put out. In some cases it was reported that the engines of the raiding airships were heard overhead, but the bombs were dropped. It is reported that the most of the bombs released by the raiders fell in fields in rural districts, and all light aircraft were promptly put out. Another Recruiting Meeting.

Lieut. E. Churchill and Pte. Rev. W. E. Stenlake were the speakers at last night's recruiting meeting, which took place in the British Hall. Lieut. Churchill in addressing the meeting made reference to the splendid work of the Regiment in Gallipoli, France, and in a strong, clear voice made an earnest appeal to the young men present to come forward and replace the brave countrymen who have been killed and wounded. The soldier Parson gave a brief account of his experiences since leaving his little Methodist mission in the north to come on here to enlist till he returned home after being discharged as medically unfit. Leaving old St. John's on H. M. Troopship Florizel and under the watchful eye of the British Navy they in company with over 30,000 Canadians reached England. The great review at Aldershot when "Ours" was paid a high tribute by the late Earl Kitchener, the maker of the Great British Army out of a division less in number than Canada's contribution of soldiers to the Empire. In describing the terrible conditions under which our men fought at Gallipoli he made special mention to the splendid work of Major Carty and other officers many of whom have since sealed their devotion to their God and country with their young lives.

To those who say they would be as well off under German rule British bullets were too good for them. In conclusion he hoped that the young men would come forward immediately and enlist. The C. L. B. Band, which assisted in the parade, rendered several patriotic airs at intervals and also accompanied Pte. Udle in the singing of Rule Britannia. Mr. Geo. J. Adams, who acted as chairman, proposed a vote of thanks to the speakers, band, etc., which was carried by acclamation. He announced that Mr. T. J. Edens would preside over to-night's meeting and that the speakers would be Sgt. Nugent and Lt.-Col. Parsons, both Gallipoli veterans.

The following young men came forward and offered their services for King and Country:—L. Nicholas, Hr. Grace; F. Perry, Trepassay; L. Nosworthy, St. John's; J. Neider, St. John's; S. Brien, St. John's; L. Caines, St. John's; W. Brennan, St. John's; A. Nurse, Champney's, T.B.

MASTER MARINERS SCARCE.—Owing to the scarcity of Master Mariners to take charge of our foreign going vessels a number of captains belonging to Nova Scotia have been offered good money to sail from this port. By to-morrow's express three captains from the place mentioned will arrive here and take charge of our local ships.

The Flavor Lasts

In the making of Grape-Nuts there is added to the sweet, rich nutriment of whole wheat, the rare flavor of malted barley, a combination creating a most unusually delicious taste. The palate never tires of it. People everywhere have found that is the most nutritious and delicious cereal food known. Every table should have its daily ration of Grape-Nuts.

Fined $100

For Selling Smuggled Cigarettes.

A Water Street shopkeeper was summoned to court to-day, charged with defrauding the Customs revenue by selling Patema cigarettes, which he knew were smuggled here from New York. The accused pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs by Judge Morris. Mr. C. E. Hunt, B.L. acted for the Customs and Mr. E. L. Carter appeared for the accused. During the hearing of the case Inspector O'Reilly exonerated a collector for a coal firm, who had been blamed for informing on the accused. Continuing, the Inspector intimated that several days after the Customs first heard that the sale of the smuggled cigarettes was going on, this man was called in to make a statement and had to answer any question he was asked under a heavy fine. It was also stated in evidence that the duty on one thousand cigarettes brought here from New York is $10.31.

War Crosses.

First Awarded in 1757. War crosses are far older than war medals, the latter are, in fact, a comparatively modern innovation. The oldest of these decorations is the Austrian Cross of Gold, and curious enough it bears a similar inscription (but in Latin) to our Victoria Cross. The first Gold Cross was awarded by the Empress Maria Theresa in 1757.

The next oldest European battle cross is the Russian Cross of St. George, which is of gold with a fine medallion of St. George slaying the dragon. It was founded by the Empress Catherine II. in 1769. The French Cross of the Legion of Honour was instituted by Napoleon in 1802, at the time when he was First Consul.

Germany's Iron Cross or Iron Cross was instituted by Emperor Frederick, third of Prussia in the year 1813. It is of iron, but is rather heavily gilded or bordered with silver.—Pearl's Weekly.

In Milady's Boudoir.

CHOOSING PERFUMES.

The mode of the moment is to use not only one's favorite extract of toilet water of the same color, but face powder, soap, salts, face creams and even brillantines exuding the same fragrance.

This is a very pleasant notion and so in line with good taste that it is more than a mere fad. Many women select a favorite perfume, and hold to it, and no more consider changing their particular selection than the sun would change its course. Others, not so conservative take the keenest interest in the newest that the season offers.

Even bath powders must be found which will not clash with perfumes already in use. The same care should be exercised in the selection of soap. Of course, the white castle soap of good quality has no rival, but where there are so many of the lovely little round French cakes to lure one it is indeed a trying temptation. How many women enjoy the luxury of a perfumed sponge bath? It is easily managed and will never be forgotten when once tried. After the ordinary warm bath, moisten a wash cloth in fairly hot water and partially wring out. Then sprinkle with an oddly amount of your favorite toilet water, and rapidly draw it over the body. The result is lasting.

of shoes-and-ships -and-sealing-wax-of-cabbages-&-h... DEPRECIATION. Depreciation is something which happens to an automobile after it has been driven around the block by a new owner. Nobody has ever advanced one sound reason why a $1,500 automobile should depreciate so much faster than a three-year-old colt or a milch cow, but the fact stares us in the check-book just the same. You can go out and buy a healthy, low-spirited mule and he will not depreciate to any extent until he has removed three-fourth of the owner's immediate family from this mundane sphere with both hind feet. The farm horse never begins to show any signs of wear and tear until he is twenty-four years of age, when he is spruced up and sold to some neighbor whose eyes are out on the bins. In view of these solemn facts, why is it that the average six-cylinder touring car, with a slanting windshield and a club-footed carburetor, begins to go into a decline as soon as the ink dries on the promissory note? It is a harrowing sensation to drive a new automobile 2,000 miles and discover that it has depreciated faster than a fat man on a hot water diet. Many a man has tried to trade in his old car toward a new one, only to learn that it has suffered more shrinkage than a trainload of prime steers which ran into washout. Depreciation is caused by 3,422 distinct defects which were not covered by anything in the contract. It is astonishing how many of these defects can be located at once by a sharp-eyed salesman, after the 90-day clause has expired with a mellow and disconcerting thud: When a car which is still limping around on air from the factory has been dissected by a second-hand dealer, a timid owner will be willing to trade it for a self-starting folding bed and no questions asked. Depreciation costs more than gasoline, but you don't feel it in the same spot.

TO-DAY'S Messages.

10.30 A.M.

NO REPORT.
PETROGRAD, To-day. To-day's War Office statement announces that no report has been received of any change in the conditions either in Transylvania or along the Danube.

FIVE SHIPS TORPEDOED.
WASHINGTON, To-day. Lloyds report, received late to-day, State Department lists the Braemar Castle as torpedoed; it also reported torpedoing of Norwegian steamers Oljel and Tryn and British Emydrene and Jerseyman, dates not given.

THE KAISER SENDS GIFTS.
GENEVA, To-day. Emperor William will send President Wilson, as an Xmas present, a De Luxe set of American authors especially prepared, printed and bound at the Royal printing work, Berlin. According to Budapest the German submarine Deutschland, it is said, will carry the gift on her next trip to America. The Emperor's gift to Pope Benedict will be a Bible magnificently illuminated and bound.

SERBIANS ADVANCE.
SALONIKI, To-day. An official (Serbian) yesterday says there were actions along the whole front in the course of which we advanced some hundred metres at several points.

ANOTHER AMERICAN TORPEDOED.
WASHINGTON, To-day. Official reports of the destruction of the American steamer Chemung by a German submarine was received by the American Consul at Valencia, Spain, all on board landed safely. The case appears to be similar to the destruction of the American ships

William F. Frye and Leewalana, both carrying contraband goods for which are to be awarded by diplomatic negotiations.

AIRMEN GIVEN OVATION.
LONDON, To-day. There was great enthusiasm in northwest coast towns this morning at the report of the success of the British in their fighting against the airship which was making for home when she was brought down. There was a great ovation for the commander of the British craft responsible for the townspeople who carried him shoulders high through the streets amid great cheering and shouting.

BRITISH CRUISER REPORTED SUNK.
BERLIN, To-day. The British cruiser Newcastle is reported sunk at the entrance to the Firth of Forth, Scotland on November 15th by coming in contact with a mine, according to the Overseas Agency.

THE MACEDONIAN FRONT.
LONDON, To-day. Operations in Macedonia are somewhat "beclouded" by reason of divergent reports. Berlin says north of Monastir renewed attacks by the Entente Allies failed, while the Serbian war office claims, in fighting along the whole front, the Serbians made several hundred metres.

ON ALL FRONTS.
SOFIA, To-day. Attacks on Hill 150 and the Village of Parlova were part of Bulgarian and German as likewise was the British offensive in the Vardar region south of the village of Bogereditsa. On the front in France and in the Austro-Italian theatre nothing but bombardments have taken place. South of Divinsk on Russian front, artillery duels have been in progress and considerable activity has also developed in the region of Ruga. In the Carpathians the Russians have begun another attack against the Austro-Germans; fighting is now proceeding there.

WOMEN AGAIN.
LONDON, To-day. Vice-Count Haldane, former Secretary for War, former Lord Chancellor, white speaking before the Royal Society of Arts to-day was subjected to a succession of violent interruptions from a number of well dressed women who excitedly accused him of being a traitor, pro-German and an enemy to his country, deserving to be sent to war. Women had to be ejected from the building.

STILL AFTER NORWEGIANS.
LONDON, To-day. Amsterdam Exchange Telegraph Co. quotes Berlin Lokal Anzeiger, as commenting on the report that the Norwegian Government conceded its submarine restrictions cannot be maintained as follows: "It may be supposed that a final agreement will soon be reached but in addition to the submarine question there is also trouble over the question of the position of Norway as an Independent Neutral to be considered. To maintain good relations with Germany she must alter economical politics to accommodate herself to Germany's will."

ROMANIANS DESTROY RAILWAY.
LONDON, To-day. Despatches from German armies say Roumanians destroyed the railway from Tchernavoda to Bucharest and are burning all villages and stores, etc., in retreat.

HUNS STILL PROGRESSING.
LONDON, To-day. The operations of the Teutonic Allies in Roumania have brought them appreciably nearer to Bucharest and they are still progressing from north and northwest and southwest on the northern bank of the Danube in Roumania extending from Gorgui on the railroad south of Bucharest, opposite Vidin, a short distance from the Serbian border and is now in the hands of the Central Powers. In this region opposite Vidin Louisa Palca and Rahova Bulgarians would seem to seriously menace Roumanian troops from Orsova and Turau-Severin sectors who are reported southwest.

TURKS OCCUPY TOWN.
PETROGRAD, To-day. Petrograd admits the Turks occupied the towns Adralad and Koshitogty south of Van, in Turkish Armenia.

THE GERMAN REPORT.
BERLIN, To-day. The German official statement on the air raid on England, says one airship was shot down and another did not return.

AIRPLANE BROUGHT DOWN.
LONDON, To-day. An Admiralty announcement late last night says: The Commodore at Dunkirk had been informed by French authorities that they brought down an airplane at 2.15 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, carrying two naval lieutenants.

DIPLOMATS LEAVE BUCHAREST.
PARIS, To-day. The Roumanian Government diplomatic authorities have left Bucharest and gone to Jassy, according to a Havas despatch from Bucharest. Jassy lies about 200 miles north and northwest of Bucharest and near the Russian frontier.

BRITISH CRUISER REPORTED SUNK.
BERLIN, To-day. The British cruiser Newcastle is reported sunk at the entrance to the Firth of Forth, Scotland on November 15th by coming in contact with a mine, according to the Overseas Agency.

THE MACEDONIAN FRONT.
LONDON, To-day. Operations in Macedonia are somewhat "beclouded" by reason of divergent reports. Berlin says north of Monastir renewed attacks by the Entente Allies failed, while the Serbian war office claims, in fighting along the whole front, the Serbians made several hundred metres.

South of Divinsk on Russian front, artillery duels have been in progress and considerable activity has also developed in the region of Ruga. In the Carpathians the Russians have begun another attack against the Austro-Germans; fighting is now proceeding there.

Everyday Etiquette.
"When a girl is keeping company with a young man and receives an invitation to a banquet and asks the young man to go, who should pay for it? Should the girl pay her own way and the man his? asked Eunice.
"It is quite the proper thing for the man to pay the bill and he would probably suggest it. Otherwise it would be better to get the tickets in advance and tell him you have the tickets when asking him to go with you," answered her aunt.

The Excelsior Shaving Stick makes a thick white lather very quickly, a lather which renders it comparatively easy for the razor to do its work effectively. Being super-saturated and containing no free alkali it has absolutely no unpleasant effect upon the skin. Excelsior Shaving Sticks are prepared from English soap of extra good quality, and a soap that is thoroughly dried and seasoned before being sent out. Hence, there is no unnecessary waste in using it. Price 35 cents a cake.

Learning To Exist on 40 Cents a Day.

Employees of Chicago Health Department Making Experiment.
Chicago, Nov. 22.—Twelve employees of the Chicago Health Department to-day began a two weeks' experiment to demonstrate that a person can live properly on 40 cents a day. At the first meal, breakfast, served at 8.30 o'clock, Dr. John D. Robertson, health commissioner, directed the "diet squad" to learn to eat slowly as possible, the "faster you eat, the more you eat." Forty minutes was allowed for breakfast, which consisted of fresh apples, liver, bacon, one egg, muffin, butter and coffee. Each dieter was pledged to deny himself all nourishment except the meals prepared at the school of Domestic Arts and Science. Dr. Robertson announced, however, that they might drink water, chew gum, and smoke if they desired.
The experiment is attracting wide attention, especially among physicians and economists, numbers of whom have asked for special reports of the progress. Six men and six women are making the test. Throughout the two weeks they will pursue their regular vocations in attempt to keep conditions as nearly normal as possible. At the outset the weight of all the women varied from 169 1/2 to 110 pounds and that of the men from 220 to 137 1/2 pounds. The heavyweight is Dr. A. B. Stokes, chief of the city's food bureau.
A lovely dinner gown is of fresh-colored chiffon, with front and back panels of lovely gray faille.
Some people believe that the one-piece chemise robe is intended to take the place of the tailored suit.

A Nose Fog News.

Why Sarrail Cut Off His Beard.
A good story comes from Salonica. It concerns General Sarrail and an American Journalist.
The latter landed at the port one morning, and immediately set out to present his credentials to the French Commander-in-Chief. Now, all the pictures of General Sarrail that the journalist had ever seen showed him as being heavily bearded, whereas the man he was presented to wore only a moustache.
"When did you cut off your beard, General?" asked the American, with true Yankee bluntness.
"Yesterday," he was told.
"Hurrah!" he cried. "I've got a scoop."
And he hurried to the telegraph office and cabled a column "story" to his paper in New York, beginning with the words, "General Sarrail has cut off his beard."
Returning to the Commander-in-Chief's quarters shortly afterwards, it occurred to him to ask the reason for the metamorphosis.
"Well," said Sarrail, "I overheard the other day an English Tommy remark that I looked like 'The Wild Man from Borneo.' I didn't relish the comparison. So I went and got shaved."
"Good story!" exclaimed the American, as he took a hurried leave preparatory to paying another visit to the telegraph office: "that'll make another column."—THE BITS.

Your Boys and Girls.

In dressing my small son, who used to dread the ordeal, I have found a method that hurries him through without the word "hurry" even once being used.
When it comes time for underwear, rompers, etc., the right foot (and hand) is called "Prince," and the left foot (and hand) is "Queen" and there is a great hurry to get the horses into the stalls.
"Boy" now takes such an interest in dressing that he came to me yesterday with "Prince" and "Queen" are all in their stalls and I find he has learned at three years of age, to put his rompers on himself, though they are really a little confusing sometimes to grown-ups.

Detectives Busy.

The police detectives are now busy investigating the burglary perpetrated on a Water Street store about a week ago; also, we learn, they are looking for evidence in an alleged forgery case, the nature of which is the altering and cashing of a cheque at one of our city banks.

Quarreling in Public.

By RUTH CAMERON.

The other evening, as we were walking down the street to attend a political meeting, a young couple passed me. He was scowling, she was talking in a high pitched voice, as they came opposite to us we heard her say sharply, "All right, then, why didn't you go alone?"

There was nothing very bitter in the words, but the tone was packed with bitterness. One could feel all manner of accusations and recriminations and irritabilities behind it.

They Made Us Feel Unhappy, Too.

We were in a holiday mood and across it like a dark cloud across the sun, passed the shadow of their irritability.

It is one shade more unlovely for married people to be bitter with each other.

It is one shade more unlovely for them to show bitterness in public.

To be sure, even happily married people must sometimes disagree. There would be something wrong with them, some lack of individuality, if they thought alike on all subjects. But they can think differently without saying disagreeable things, or snapping each other up, or scolding or jawing or sulking or scowling.

They Must Come To Some Agreement.

Of course many subjects on which they disagree involve action, and in these cases some kind of an agreement as a basis for action must be reached.

And, of course, there are times when either one feels strongly against some line of action pursued by the other.

But such matters can be settled as effectively without nagging or scolding. (You may think this is just words, but it isn't. If you hold it as an ideal and make some sacrifices for it, you will find out how much it can accomplish.)

And surely such matters can be settled with much more decency and dignity in private.

Nothing is more disagreeable than to be with a couple who allow themselves to quarrel in the presence of others. A friend of mine told me that she once went on a house-party where there was such a couple, and that although every other detail about the party was pleasant, these people spoiled the flavor of it.

They Spoiled The House-Party.

"We all felt constrained and uncomfortable and ashamed (though they were the ones who ought to have been ashamed)," she said, "when they quarrelled, which was every little while. And they kept appealing to the rest of us to side with them, and you know how pleasant that is."

Of course it does take a great deal of self-control not to show irritation when one feels it, sometimes. But remember this, self-control is the prime factor of real breeding. Though you follow every rule of etiquette and lack this control, you will surely be set down as ill-bred.

No Place For Slackers.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Would you please grant an humble fisherman space in your paper to air his views and make a few remarks. There are all sorts of rumors here about recruiting and conscription and various are the opinions expressed regarding the same, but the majority here are of the same opinion as myself, and that is, there was never anything as unfair as to have some of our men fighting and dying whilst others are home at ease, enjoying the good things of life, and when the British win the slackers will be the first to try and secure any privileges accruing from victory. But, Mr. Editor, that should not be so. If any man is coward enough to remain home he should be compelled to enlist and do his part and not to allow any other man to fight for him. Where are our members now? Are they afraid some of their relations would have to go? Is that the reason they are not recruiting in this district? If they had the regard they profess to have they would be stamping their district explaining to our young men the necessity for them to volunteer. J. F. is considered an honorary title, but it is dishonorable to bestow it on slackers who should be sent to the front to fight for their country whether he was willing or not, and the J.F. kept for some wounded soldier who would be worthy of honor. We have very few from the harbor in the Regiment, and Trepassy has less, but the majority of our young men are not altogether to blame. There was never any recruiting party here to explain matters and induce our young men to volunteer. If things were placed right before them they would not be behind other places. The few that belong to our harbor that could explain matters have government jobs and intend to let them and let others fight and die that they may live at ease. But, Mr. Editor, that should not be allowed. Let every man that is physically fit volunteer, or if not let us have conscription by all means and compel every man, unless he can show good reason why he should be exempted, if not all our good men will go and the only men we will have left will be the slackers, and a worse reptile never encumbered God's earth than a man that is such a coward as to hang back and willingly allow his countrymen to be slaughtered and not lift a hand to help to save them. There are a lot of young men holding Government positions in our country that should be at the front and let their jobs be taken in charge by older men or those physically unfit until the end of the war, and if they again desire to be reinstated they can honorably demand their jobs back and be a hero every man. There are lots who will differ with my opinion, but every true-hearted Newfoundlander will endorse it, and will say with me, a slacker should be left to himself and shunned like a mad dog. Hoping I am not trespassing, I remain, Yours, etc.,

THE BANK ACCOUNT.

Oh happy days when I began to put my doubloons down in brine! While you with fear the future scan, a soul serene and calm is mine. Long was I skinned around by fate, the drugs of sorrow oft I drank, before I got my head on straight, and put some guilders in the bank. I used to blow my money in as fast or faster than 'twas earned, and one could fill a good large bin with iron dollars that I burned. I blew in every kind of pelf, the mark, the kepeck and the franc, before I tumbled to myself, and put my moidores in the bank. And then I always lived on prunes, was up against the ragged edge, until, to salt down my doubloons, I made a large brass-mounted pledge. Since then on rosy paths I tread, and merrily I whoop and yell; I do not fret, I do not dread the dreary of H. C. of L. I buy my car new rubber tires, and pour rich gas into its tank; he has all things that he desires, who puts his rupees in the bank.

AN APPEAL

The Recruiting Committee of the Patriotic Association deem it necessary that the King's subjects in Newfoundland should be made acquainted with the present condition of affairs and that, by a full knowledge of the needs of Empire, the patriotism of the Colony may be stimulated.

From the beginning of the war now in progress, voluntary enlistment has been the basis upon which has been built up the Naval and Military contingents from Newfoundland. We have sent 1500 men for the Navy and 3000 for the Army. Not a few have been decorated for bravery, and all have sustained the highest traditions of the Empire and won for themselves and for the Colony undying fame.

In the North Sea, on the Atlantic, on trade routes and wherever duty has demanded, our Naval volunteers have acquitted themselves with distinction.

Wherever the Regiment has been called on to discharge its duty it has won unstinted praise. But more men are needed to finish the work, to overwhelm the enemy, and secure the blessings of a lasting peace. We therefore appeal to the men of Newfoundland to offer themselves for service and to furnish His Majesty the King with a portion of that help which the Mother Country deems necessary to accomplish this result.

The obligation rests upon us to furnish reserves to fill the ranks, and our comparative immunity from the consequences of a state of war must not be allowed to blind us to the stern need of more men, not alone that victory may be secured but that Newfoundland's place in the Colonial Empire of Great Britain may be assured. It must not be said of us that the blood shed and the treasure expended has been in vain; but if the response which is anticipated be fully realized it will be blazoned to the remotest dependency of the Crown that the boast of this Colony has been well justified—most ancient and most loyal.

This morning we were informed by an eye-witness of a brutal act perpetrated by a volunteer on a six year old boy yesterday afternoon. It appears that about 4 o'clock a crowd of children were playing and shouting on Military Road, opposite the Colonial Building, when the volunteer, who appeared to be very much under the influence, was passing by and became irritated by the shouts of the children, he grabbing a little boy named Shepherd by the neck and throat, he dashed him against a house and the wonder is that he did not inflict serious injury to the little fellow. As it was he appeared to be lifeless, his face was discolored and blood flowed from both ears, the result of the soldier's tight grip on the youth's throat. Several women near screamed for assistance and Sergeant Long, of Government House, and Mr. George Scott rescued the innocent victim from the "giant" one, who then sailed into Sgt. Long, but found the volunteer, who too many guns for him, as a few blows from the Sgt's stick, coupled with giving him a close acquaintance with a "bunch of bright sticks" put his assailant hors de combat.

St. Joseph's Bazaar Formally Opened.

Precisely at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the C.C.C. Hall, the Grand Bazaar, promoted by the ladies of St. Joseph's Parish and assisted by the parishioners generally, in aid of the new church building fund, was opened, and if the success on the opening day is to be regarded as any criterion, the entire proceeds of the affair will exceed the most sanguine expectations. The hall was artistically decorated and brilliantly illuminated in vari-colored lights presenting an attractive scene, and the colors of the Allies and the trophies of the C.C.C. being conspicuously shown. Strikingly attractive and pretty also were the booths and stalls, etc., erected around the hall and containing in profusion goods of all kinds and descriptions in plain and fancy work. The arrangements on the whole were a credit to the ladies in charge and bore eloquent testimony to their energy and untiring zeal.

The Bazaar is under the distinguished patronage of His Grace Archbishop Roche, but owing to the unavoidable absence, through illness, of that prelate, the Rt. Rev. Mgr. McDermott, V.C., declared the sale formally opened, after wishing the well-merited patronage and success it deserved. Amongst those present were Rev. Dr. Kitchin, Pastor of St. Joseph's, Rev. Frs. Renouf, Pippy, Greene and Carter, many of the Christian Brothers, Mr. J. L. Slatery, Hon. P. T. McGrath and many other citizens interested in the project. The sale then began. The booths and stalls were visited by patrons and those in charge did a brisk business, as they disposed of an abundance of goods readily and at remunerative prices. The tea tables were well patronized and those in charge kept going constantly. Those in charge of the various stalls and tea tables were Messrs. Brophy (2), Fitzpatrick, Denief, Bush, Cole, Malone, Quigley, Manning, Taaffe, Cotter, Collins, MacKey, Cloney, Moore, Foley, Jackman and Smith; Misses English, Fitzpatrick, Howlett, Murphy, Walsh, Dwyer, Moore, Carroll, Carew, Denief, Brophy and Malone. Much amusement was afforded by the Fish Pond, Grab-barrel and Guessing Competition booth. The sale was continued up to 11 p.m., the C.C.C. Band being present, discoursing patriotic and lively airs. The sale will be continued this afternoon and night.

The Brothers Collection

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—As the time is fast approaching to give us once more the opportunity, and I may say the pleasure, of contributing to the Christian Brothers Collection, I would like, with your permission, space in your paper to help bring the matter strongly before a certain section of the community—the ex-pupils. When I say ex-pupils, I mean all ex-pupils, and refer particularly at this time to the boys (now men) of other denominations, many of whom are now in good positions, or business for themselves, as the result of the good training and teaching they derived from those good Brothers.
I am one of those ex-pupils to whom I refer, and I call upon all others to contribute their share, be it big or little, in memory of the many happy moments spent at St. Patrick's.
Truly yours,
Nov. 28th, 1916. E. D. S.

Another Motor Accident.

Motor car accidents seem to be getting quite common. In all cases children are the victims and strange to say are themselves responsible. Yesterday afternoon a little girl named Mabel Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Kelly of the King's Bridge, had a narrow escape from serious injury. A motor car was going up the "Pinch," which is a fairly steep incline leading to the King's Bridge, when the little girl, who was going in the same direction, attempted to get from one side of the street to the other and crossed directly in front of the car. She was struck by the dashboard and thrown down. The car was brought to a halt and the driver picked up the little girl, who escaped practically unharmed, though she was badly frightened.

GREAT RECRUITING SONGS AND NEW PICTURES.

At Rossley's British Theatre there will be a complete change of pictures and recruiting songs to-night. Patrons are loud in their praise of the new service of films now shown. A dainty little singer who has delighted thousands of people with her great English recruiting songs, will sing to-night. On Friday night there will be the usual Friday night contest, and several names are already in. As patrons know those contests are conducted on first class principles for laughing purposes only. The Havelock contest will drive away the blues. Children under fourteen cannot compete. The rehearsals for Christmas are going ahead and will be a great novelty, something very unique and original. Elegant costumes and music from England, all new. Doors open Friday night at 6.45.

THE WHITE FEATHER.—The young ladies or others who are sending through the mails, white feathers to young men who they believe are "slackers" should be very careful that the young men in question are justly entitled to receive them, as we know of a number of cases where quite an injustice has been done. The victims in some cases are so deformed that it is apparent to the average person that they would not be permitted an examination let alone the privilege of wearing a "rejected" badge.

There is no better way of removing soiled places from rugs than with ammonia, and if it fades the color, rub with chloroform.

Hisard's Linctum Cures Diphtheria.

Worse Confounded.

Greece has loomed large in the newspapers of late, which reminds us somehow of a story I once heard concerning Mr. Asquith.
No one listening to the Prime Minister's polished diction and easy flow of words would imagine that, as a boy at the City of London School, he was timid and halting of speech and easily flustered.

One day (so the story goes) he was reciting in class, and the lines at which he had arrived ran:
"The Turk was dreaming of the hour
When Greece her knee in suppliance bent."
Young Asquith stuck in the middle of the second line, "Greece her knee," he repeated twice, and then stopped.

His form-master smiled grimly.
"Go on, Asquith," he said, "greet her knee once more and perhaps you'll get through next time."
Very many of the new suits have their coats definitely belted in at the waist, and sometimes this belt is of rich embroidery.

FADS AND FASHIONS.
Many of the prettiest coats have all the appearance of a cape when seen from the rear.
It is a pretty fancy to use the same material for a tiny girl's dress as for her mother's.
The evening slipper of brocade, with silver buckle, adds richness to the evening costume.
