CHAPTER XXII.
THE DREADED VISIT.

"Yes, I will go to-morrow," she said, then, with a little flickering blush, and that drawing together of the dark, expressive eyebrows. "I am afraid the earl will be very angry with me. Do you think he will—will scold me much, Charlie?"

"I think," he replied warmly; "never mind what I think. You go to sleep again—you look tired. I'm glad this excitement is over for a while. But it's your own fault," he said laughingly, looking back at her admiringly as he went out. "If you will be the most beautiful and charming woman in London, you must pay the penalty."

Charlie telegraphed there and then, and on the following day the old earl sat in his room alone—he would not have even his constant shadow, the doctor, to witness the meeting between his daughter-in-law and himself—awaiting their arrival.

The household had been informed of her visit, and a suite of rooms had been prepared for Lord Heatherdene and his wife. They were the best in the house; for, having consented to receive her, the old earl would do nothing by halves.

The carriage, a huge affair, with the Livermore armorials on the panels, and a full complement of footmen attending it, had been sent to the station.

The old man, his high-bred face set calmly and composedly, sat looking at the chronometer on the table beside him, a conflicting storm of emotions raging within his bosom.

He knew what he expected to see—a tall, "fino" woman, gayly, not to say gaudily dressed, a woman with stage manners and a stazy voice. The sort of woman the earl had always detested; but she was his son's wife, and he had consented to receive her; and his valet had been told to invest him in his suit of ceremony in place of the long, easy, dressing gown, which he wore during the early part of the day.

He sat with his thin hands, upon the knuckles of which the gout had set its mark, crossed over his ivory-headed stick, and his brows bent. Presently there rose that stir which an expectant arrival always produces, and a footman announced that Lord and Lady Heatherdene had arrived.

The old earl nodded, and a few minutes afterward Lord Heatherdene entered the room with his bride upon his arm.

The earl grasped his son's hand, then struggled to his feet and made the old courtly bow—alas! that old graceful salutation has gone with a great many other good things! Then, without a word, he held out his hand. He was too surprised, too astonished to speak.

Before him stood a tall girl, graceful in every line of her slim figure, with a face not only innocent of rouge but delicately pale. Not only beautiful, but aristocratic and noble in every feature. Instead of the gay, not to say gaudy, colors which he had dreaded, was a rich but simple traveling dress of a modest, quiet, neutral tint, the whole in its exquisite modesty setting off the patrician figure and face to perfection. The silken hair was plaited in tight, classic coils; the dark intellectual eyes met his searching and yet half-ashamed stare, with gentle deprecation, almost reproach.

Olive put her hand in his, and he held it, held it looking up at her with a curious look.

CHAPTER XXIII.
ON THE HEIGHTS.

"YOU are a little late, are you not?" said the earl.

And he waited eagerly to hear her voice.

"I think we are," said Olive softly.

And the old man silently breathed a sigh of relief.

"Better late than never," he said; and then—oh, wonderful to relate!—he said, with a smile, the old, courtly smile, "Welcome to your future home;" and, after a pause, he added as if in full explanation, "I am an old man, my dear, and—I did not know!"

At the deep paths of his apology, Olive's heart melted, her eyes grew moist, and she bent with a graceful, natural gesture and kissed his hand.

The old earl bit his lip, and waved his hand hurriedly.

"Go—and rest," he said, almost inaudibly.

Charlie drew Olive's arm within his own, and turned away.

When they had reached the door, the earl called after them, in his low, distinct voice:

"Don't be long."

Outside the door Charlie looked at her, with his face working.

"Are you satisfied?" he said.

Olive did not answer, and in silence they went to their room.

Olive's conquest was complete. Before a week had elapsed, the earl had entirely lost his heart.

He was never happy unless he had her near him, and it was noticed by the servants and those about him that when she was in the room his eyes followed her every movement.

The morning after their arrival the whole household was plainly and emphatically given to understand that my lady was to be absolute mistress, and that her will was to be absolute law.

It was curious and amusing to remark the anxiety with which the old man tried to make up and atone for his past conduct toward his son's wife.

He had determined, before he had seen her, to come to an explanation with his self-willed son and to elicit all the information he could respecting "the woman's" antecedents, but after that one searching glance, he had not asked, nor looked, a single question.

Olive's conquest was complete.

The whole resources of the castle were requisitioned to do her honor and give her pleasure.

"Don't you think, my dear," said the earl one morning—the third only of her visit!—as she sat by his side in his study, "that the furniture and appointments of the old place are rather shabby—hem, eh?"

Olive looked up from her work—she generally had some dainty piece of embroidery or rather fancy work at hand, and the old man loved to watch her white fingers at their task. Olive looked up with a smile.

"Dingy," she said. "No, indeed, my lord, I think they are delightful.

"Oh, you do," he said. "Hem, you are quite sure? I was thinking of having the whole place redecorated and furnished—it seems a dull, heavy kind of nest for such a dainty little bird," and he looked at her from under his brows with a fond smile.

Olive laughed.

"It all seems so shaming to me," she said simply. "I don't like gay colors, and would not exchange, for instance, this quaint old cabinet for the most finished specimen of French marqueterie."

The old man nodded approvingly.

"Very well, then, we'll let the old place alone," he said. "But if there is anything—no matter what, much or little—that you would like altered, say so, and it shall be done."

"I want nothing altered," said Olive, putting her hand in his hurriedly—she was still a little afraid of him.

"I am happy—perfectly happy."

He nodded and smiled.

"I believe you are," he said—"I believe you are. You are a good girl, and have always been, child. I can see; you deserve to be happy. I don't wonder at Heatherdene's infatuation. I always said the boy would find his heart at last, and go mad about a woman when he did find it. We Livermores are all alike. Where has he gone this morning?"

"I don't know," said Olive.

"Oh, I remember," said the earl. "He has gone over to the Peirpoints."

"To the Peirpoints?" said Olive, questioningly.

"Yes, about that horse—the horse you admired."

Olive laughed, a little puzzled laugh.

"Why has he gone over about that?"

"Why to buy it," said the old earl, "as a matter of course. Did not you say you admired it? I am sure you said so."

"I admired it," admitted Olive.

"Well, then," said the old man, "he is gone to get it. I sent him over this morning to tell Lord Peirpoint I would be obliged if he would sell it to me, as you had fancied it."

"Oh, my lord!" remonstrated Olive. "What is the matter, child?" he asked, with genuine astonishment.

"Do you suppose that I would let you want a thing and not try to get it for you? You shall have the horse, my dear; you shall have the moon if you want it, and I can get it."

The old despot spoke quite seriously. Anything short of the moon he would have got for her, if power and money could purchase it.

Charlie came back with the horse, and no one knew—or knows—how much he had paid for it, and certainly neither he nor the earl cared.

The county families, as soon as they were aware of Lady Heatherdene's presence at the castle, made due haste to pay their visits, and the earl decided to give a great dinner.

"I have been neglecting my duties," he said, wagging his white head; "the castle has been like that one in the fairy tale; all asleep and mewing with disuse. You have come to wake us up, my child. Let us have a gathering of the clans."

"Won't it be too much for you, my lord?" said Charlie, looking up from his paper.

"No," said the old man decisively. "I am not worn out yet, and I can stand Pryne and all his nostrums for another dozen of years. We'll have a gathering, eh?"

And he looked at Olive, who sat at the bottom of the table. They were at luncheon.

"If you are sure that the excitement and bustle will not be too much for you."

"I shall enjoy it," he said.

Then he looked down for a few moments.

"The people may as well have a change at the same time, Charlie. There hasn't been a tenants' ball since—oh, gad! I can't remember when. Tell Foster—that was the steward—that I want to do the thing thoroughly."

Olive knew that he wanted to celebrate his son's marriage, and her heart swelled within her.

"All right, sir," said Charlie, in his free-and-easy way; "you want a regular fare-up. I'll see Foster about it."

"Yes, yes," said the earl; "and see Mrs. Hawkes, the housekeeper, will you, Addy? We'll have some people down from town. Gad! I expect they have forgotten old Charlie Livermore, but, by the lud, I'll show them that I'm not dead yet!" And he chuckled.

"See to it, Charlie, and don't let that idiot, Foster, set about it in his usual nigardly fashion. I want it done well—you understand?"

"I understand, sir," said Charlie, laughing, but with a heightened color or nevertheless, for he read the old man's thoughts. "Oxen roasted whole, and all that sort of thing. I know."

The earl nodded, and presently Charlie got up and sauntered out—possibly to smoke a cigar, tobacco being an article tabooed at the castle.

The earl was not satisfied with giving these instructions to Charlie, but had an interview with the steward himself, and told him, in his usual plain and imperious manner, what he wanted.

"And hark you, Foster, I want no cheeseparing, no milk-and-buns affair. Spend what you like—or rather what you don't like," he added grimly. "If you haven't got what is necessary, get it. And, mind! if Lady Heatherdene wants any particular thing got or done, see that it is got and done to her orders. You understand?"

Similar instructions were given to Mrs. Hawk. Forty rooms were to be ready within the castle "with all speed"; a batch of extra servants were to be engaged; no expense or trouble was to be spared.

So also with the head groom.

A really superb equipage had been procured for Olive, and a pair of grays second to none in the kingdom; but additional carriages and horses were to be got for this occasion and the stable thoroughly overhauled.

Eczema Cured
Five Years Ago.

A Treatment Which Has Proven a Wonderful Healer of the Skin—Certified Evidence of Lasting Cure.

The old notion that eczema is a disease of the blood is refuted time and time again by the cures that are daily being effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

It matters not what the cause may have been if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment regularly you will obtain relief and cure of eczema. Here is the proof.

Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "My brother had a bad case of eczema on his legs. He was troubled nearly all one fall and winter with it, and could not work for days at a time. He tried different salves and ointments, but none cured him. One day he tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it gave almost instant relief. He continued its use, but had not quite finished the second box when he was cured. It is now about five years since then, and it has never returned. We certainly can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and are very grateful for my brother's cure."

(Rev. S. F. Coffman, Vineland, Ont., states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites and the party to whom she refers, and her statements are correct.")

Mr. J. E. Jones, 228 University Avenue, Kingston, Ont., writes: "I had eczema in my hand for about five years. I tried a great many remedies, but found that while some of them checked it, none cured it permanently. Finally I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and in six weeks my hand was completely better. I would not do without a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house if it cost $2 a box. I am giving my name to this firm so that it will get to those who suffer as I did."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 50 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint you. Insist on getting what you ask for.

"Well, then," said the old man, "he is gone to get it. I sent him over this morning to tell Lord Peirpoint I would be obliged if he would sell it to me, as you had fancied it."

"Oh, my lord!" remonstrated Olive. "What is the matter, child?" he asked, with genuine astonishment.

"Do you suppose that I would let you want a thing and not try to get it for you? You shall have the horse, my dear; you shall have the moon if you want it, and I can get it."

The old despot spoke quite seriously. Anything short of the moon he would have got for her, if power and money could purchase it.

Charlie came back with the horse, and no one knew—or knows—how much he had paid for it, and certainly neither he nor the earl cared.

The county families, as soon as they were aware of Lady Heatherdene's presence at the castle, made due haste to pay their visits, and the earl decided to give a great dinner.

"I have been neglecting my duties," he said, wagging his white head; "the castle has been like that one in the fairy tale; all asleep and mewing with disuse. You have come to wake us up, my child. Let us have a gathering of the clans."

"Won't it be too much for you, my lord?" said Charlie, looking up from his paper.

"No," said the old man decisively. "I am not worn out yet, and I can stand Pryne and all his nostrums for another dozen of years. We'll have a gathering, eh?"

And he looked at Olive, who sat at the bottom of the table. They were at luncheon.

"If you are sure that the excitement and bustle will not be too much for you."

"I shall enjoy it," he said.

Then he looked down for a few moments.

"The people may as well have a change at the same time, Charlie. There hasn't been a tenants' ball since—oh, gad! I can't remember when. Tell Foster—that was the steward—that I want to do the thing thoroughly."

Olive knew that he wanted to celebrate his son's marriage, and her heart swelled within her.

"All right, sir," said Charlie, in his free-and-easy way; "you want a regular fare-up. I'll see Foster about it."

"Yes, yes," said the earl; "and see Mrs. Hawkes, the housekeeper, will you, Addy? We'll have some people down from town. Gad! I expect they have forgotten old Charlie Livermore, but, by the lud, I'll show them that I'm not dead yet!" And he chuckled.

"See to it, Charlie, and don't let that idiot, Foster, set about it in his usual nigardly fashion. I want it done well—you understand?"

"I understand, sir," said Charlie, laughing, but with a heightened color or nevertheless, for he read the old man's thoughts. "Oxen roasted whole, and all that sort of thing. I know."

The earl nodded, and presently Charlie got up and sauntered out—possibly to smoke a cigar, tobacco being an article tabooed at the castle.

The earl was not satisfied with giving these instructions to Charlie, but had an interview with the steward himself, and told him, in his usual plain and imperious manner, what he wanted.

"And hark you, Foster, I want no cheeseparing, no milk-and-buns affair. Spend what you like—or rather what you don't like," he added grimly. "If you haven't got what is necessary, get it. And, mind! if Lady Heatherdene wants any particular thing got or done, see that it is got and done to her orders. You understand?"

Similar instructions were given to Mrs. Hawk. Forty rooms were to be ready within the castle "with all speed"; a batch of extra servants were to be engaged; no expense or trouble was to be spared.

So also with the head groom.

A really superb equipage had been procured for Olive, and a pair of grays second to none in the kingdom; but additional carriages and horses were to be got for this occasion and the stable thoroughly overhauled.

Eczema Cured
Five Years Ago.

A Treatment Which Has Proven a Wonderful Healer of the Skin—Certified Evidence of Lasting Cure.

The old notion that eczema is a disease of the blood is refuted time and time again by the cures that are daily being effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

It matters not what the cause may have been if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment regularly you will obtain relief and cure of eczema. Here is the proof.

Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "My brother had a bad case of eczema on his legs. He was troubled nearly all one fall and winter with it, and could not work for days at a time. He tried different salves and ointments, but none cured him. One day he tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it gave almost instant relief. He continued its use, but had not quite finished the second box when he was cured. It is now about five years since then, and it has never returned. We certainly can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and are very grateful for my brother's cure."

(Rev. S. F. Coffman, Vineland, Ont., states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites and the party to whom she refers, and her statements are correct.")

Mr. J. E. Jones, 228 University Avenue, Kingston, Ont., writes: "I had eczema in my hand for about five years. I tried a great many remedies, but found that while some of them checked it, none cured it permanently. Finally I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and in six weeks my hand was completely better. I would not do without a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house if it cost $2 a box. I am giving my name to this firm so that it will get to those who suffer as I did."

CAPT. JAMES' CAREER.

Chief Officer William James, sworn and on being examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I was first officer on the Florizel on her last voyage. I am a master mariner. My certificate is No. 376. I have been in her on different occasions since 1911. I went to sea when 17 years old. In Dec. 1900 I came out to Newfoundland. I am a native of Greenwick, Scotland. I am 35 years of age. I was sent out by Baine, Johnston & Co., and I then served my apprenticeship on the Lavinia, which lasted 5 years and 3 months. I passed as ordinary mate and got my certificate in 1906. I then went to sea in the s.s. Stord, owned by Revillon Bros, which voyage lasted a little over a month. I went to Hudson Bay and was chief officer. I next sailed as mate in the Clementine, owned by A. Goodridge & Sons; from her I went to the Corolla as chief. I next joined the Adventure as chief officer in 1909. I remained on her for one and a half years. I was at the ice in her. She is an ice-breaker. She had a cut-away bow and was specially strengthened. I had a lot of experience in stob ice in her. I was sometime in Goodridge's Bella Rose, and the Attila owned by Baine Johnston. I went to sea in the s.s. Aurora to London when she was sold. I went as chief officer. I joined the Red Cross Line and came out in the s.s. Stephano when she was new. I had experience in her in ice coming from Halifax and New York. I was appointed as third officer in 1911 to the Florizel. I was next transferred to the Rosalind. I was in her nine months, till navigation closed on the St. Lawrence. I was again transferred to the Stephano as 3rd officer but after one trip she was again transferred to the Rosalind and remained on her till she was sold in 1912. I was again sent back to the Florizel as third officer and remained on her till 1914. I was then transferred as second on the Stephano and was on her till she was torpedoed in October, 1916. I was on the Stephano for two winters. I was put in charge of the Neptune in Dec. 1916 for one voyage. In February, 1917 I was in charge of the s.s. Ranger. I was in charge of her till I was transferred to the Florizel on her last trip. The Neptune and Ranger were wooden ice-breaking ships. I had experience in the ice with the Neptune.

HIS LAST VOYAGE.

I was on watch at 4 o'clock till 8 pm. on Feb. 23rd. I was off watch from 8 till 4 o'clock in the morning. I was on watch when she left the harbor. The Captain and 3rd Officer came on the bridge. It was mild weather, soft and very light S.W. wind blowing. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon (Feb. 23rd), the glass stood at 29.50. I didn't notice any storm signals. We left the wharf at 7.30 yards of ice to know what the ship's speed is. I can observe that by the ice rubbing by the side of the ship. I did not take any notice of the vibrations of the engines.

At 4 o'clock a fairly strong breeze was blowing from East to S.E. with sleet. There was a good swell from the S.E. We just ran clear of the ice at 4 o'clock. We could see quite a distance about half or three quarters of a mile. I would see a light at that distance. I thought she was doing 9 knots or probably more. The log was cast at 4.30 by the Captain's orders. (The orders were given to the men on the lookout.) They mistook what the Captain said and cast the lead. The log was cast immediately the men reported casting the lead. That was between 5 to 7 minutes after. They reported 90 fathoms of wire. The Captain sent them right away to put the log over. It was 4.43 exactly, I took the time.

There were two quartermasters on the lookout—out on the bridge with me at that time. Messrs. Dooley and Gover. Molloy was at the wheel. Captain Martin came on the bridge at 4.10 from the chart room. The course was W.S.W. About 4.45 the Captain altered her course to W. by S. That was the only change during my watch. She was W. by S. when she struck, which was about 4.50, as close as I can go to the exact time. When nearing the place she struck she was gathering speed all the time on account of her being kept away. The telegraph showed full speed.

I have been on the Florizel when she was fitted with her summer and winter propellers. Her speed was about the same with each. I do not know what relations there is between the screw and the speed. I haven't the least idea of revolutions at all. There was no alterations in the weather conditions between 4 and 4.50. I was looking out ahead when she struck. I did see something white which I took to be ice. I heard no sound or anything to indicate we were near the land. At 4 o'clock from the conversation I had with Captain Martin I concluded we were on the N.E. end of Cape Ballard Bank.

AFTER SHE STRUCK.

The ship struck about 4.50, the Captain was on the bridge when we went ashore. The Captain rang full speed astern which was answered by the engine room. The Captain gave orders to get the boats ready and for everyone to get on lifebelts. The seas had smashed away everything, piling up wreckage and sweeping away some of the passengers and crew. It was not long before all the boats were gone. It was a case of holding on as best we could. We gave some assistance to those who came along and helped on the bridge. No place was safe, and many people who were holding on to the rails dropped from exposure while others died on the ship's deck. The sea came so frequently that you could not be of any assistance.

We helped Captain Kean and some others on the bridge. The bridge broke clear just at dawn. I managed to get towards the fiddley and remained there till we were taken off. I saw quite a number of passengers and crew, over 30, on the smoking room deck; they were washed away. It was too dark to see if they had life belts on. Sea after sea, you would see some of them going. I saw them go as I stood underneath the bridge. The last view when the smoking room house smashed away about 1 1/2 hours after she struck. Mr. Munn was among the last on the smoking room deck to be swept away. The smoking room deck sunk or collapsed. I was about the boats for ten minutes when they were carried away. The bridge went shortly after the smoking room. In the wheel house, chart room and on the bridge were Capt. Joe Kean, Major Sullivan, Mr. King, 2nd officer, 3rd Officer Jackman, James Miller, Jack Parsons, Charlie Snow and Molloy. There were others whom I did not know. Mr. Munn was the only one I was sure of in any other part of the ship; he was dressed in a long dressing gown which was tied in the middle. There was no confusion among the crew, they went about their duty till it was impossible to do any more. I saw some rockets fired from shore. A rocket landed about 60 or 80 feet from the starboard side of ship, and I think there was one landed on the bow of the ship. I was on top of the fiddley casing on Sunday night or early Monday morning. The sea that struck the wheel house pushed me over it. I scrambled over the wreckage and got to the fiddley between seas.

When I got there I found three Spanish firemen and a long fellow like Moore, the cook, or steward or something like that. A sea took seaman Bailey overboard. Another man hid in the ventilator. I then got down and went in below. The engine rooms and all were full of water.

Between 1 and 4 on Sunday afternoon I saw a dory coming down from the N.E., they did not get away near us. Just about dark two steamers came up the shore. It was well on in the night when I heard a whistle. It was sounding the Morse code. I could understand it. It asked how many were alive on board. One of the Marconi operators answered with a flashlight and signalled about 40 alive. Early in the morning two boats from the Prospero came alongside. One boat turned over. They had to abandon the attempt as the sea was too rough. The Home and

Ugh! Acid Stomach, Sourness, Heartburn, Gas or Indigestion

The moment "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches the stomach all distress goes.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—you stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

Gordon C. were the first to reach the scene.

(Second officer James at this juncture described the heroic rescue work of those who came to their assistance.)

Three Spanish firemen died one after the other. One Spanish fireman was kept alive by breathing on him and wrapping him in canvas. James Dwyer, waiter; Ralph Burnham and I remained in the fiddley till we were taken off. Capt. Martin and others came in the fiddley. Capt. Martin was considering the advisability of swimming ashore. He left the Marconi room accompanied by Seaman Dooley and went forward.

(To Commander MacDermott.)—I haven't the least idea how she came ashore. By the course she was steering it would take her eight or nine miles off the land. I had never known the current from N.N.W. to be reversed.

This concluded the examination by the Crown, and to-morrow Chief Officer James will be cross-examined by Messrs. Gibbs, Winter and Warren.

Noah Dauphine testified as follows: I am a native of Halifax County, N.S. I was a first-class passenger on the Florizel. My state room was opposite the Purser's office. It was No. 29. I was in bed at the time of the accident. I heard her strike. My room mate, Capt. Bellevue, came in and told me she was ashore. The ship was rolling considerably. I very seldom get seasick. Capt. Bellevue went outside on account of his bunk having got wet owing to a leaky port. I dressed myself, all except my shoes. I came along the social hall to the companion way and went aft on the port side to the smoking room. The lights were out. There was no disorder. I got through the crowd and got on top of the smoking room deck. There were quite a few there. I saw Capt. Bellevue there and by sight I knew Mr. Munn. There were about 30 or 40 people there. I was there about half an hour. I saw a number washed overboard. There was only one man standing alive when I left the smoking room. It was Mr. Munn. There were several bodies lying around. I watched a moderate time and made my way to the top of the fiddley. I was alone. I made another run to the captain's quarters on the bridge. I got half way up the ladder. I stayed there till the wheel house collapsed, about 15 minutes. In company with Charlie Snow, I made another run back to the fiddley. Then I caught a wire and crawled into the ventilator. I was clear of the sea and did not get any water on me while there. I remained there till dark. Then I came down and got in the Marconi room. I saw Chief Officer James and another man standing in front of the funnel. At the time there were 37 in the Marconi room. No one was refused admission to the Marconi room. Major Sullivan came in after I got there. I saw a rocket come from the shore. I was taken off in the second boat.

The reading was 29.90. It indicated that the wind would be from the N.E. within 24 hours. It did not indicate bad weather. I examined hatches, etc., and reported everything all right to the captain. I then went to my room. I met the second officer, Capt. Kean and Mr. Munn on deck. Capt. Kean agreed with me that the wind would LONDON, March 14. Speaking in the Commons to-day on the situation in the East, Foreign Secretary Balfour expressed perfect confidence in Japan's absolute loyalty in carrying out any decision that might be reached, and declared that in the question he had drawn no distinction between Japan and the other Allies. Considered from the point of view of securing the freedom of small nations and saving the world from the domination of one greedy power, Balfour said nothing could be more unfortunate than the coincidence between the Russian revolution and the war that was being conducted by Russia and her allies. He was an optimist about Russia, he said, but not about Russia's immediate future.

PROPER REPRISALS.

LONDON, March 14. German prisoners of war are to be distributed over areas which the enemy's aircraft is subjecting to attack in their raids, according to the Evening News to-day. This, says the newspaper, is being done because the Allied Governments have learned prisoners of other nationalities in German hands have been so placed in all towns which the German Government considers likely to be attacked.

FORD'S EAGLES.

WASHINGTON, March 14. Henry Ford's submarine chasers will be known in the Navy as eagles and will constitute the eagle class of boats.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place at Bishop's Falls, Wednesday, February 6th, when Miss Hettie Kelly was married to Mr. John Thoms, of Little Bay, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Father Finn, of Grand Falls. The bride looked charming in a suit of cream trimmed with white swansdowns and wore a wreath of orange blossoms, and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Albert Kelly, who wore a suit of navy blue silk. The ceremony and entertainment was held at the home of the bride's brother who also acted as best man. After the ceremony supper was served and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The bride was the recipient of many costly presents.

Resolution of Sympathy

At the regular weekly meeting of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association a resolution was passed extending the heartfelt sympathy of its members to the bereaved families who through the Florist disaster are left to mourn the loss of loved ones, and further, the Lodge expresses how deeply the loss of life is felt by all the members, and trust that God will sustain and comfort and give His Grace to those who suffered mental agony, and enable them by His love to say "Thy will be done."

"If They're Neat They're Cranky."

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"If they are neat and particular they're usually cranky, and if they are pleasant and easy going they're pretty sure to be slack." This dictum was uttered by a friend of mine during a conversation on—surely you can guess what. The maid question, of course. She had just acquired a new maid and was meticulously neat and particular about her kitchen, conscientious in her cleaning, very dainty and careful about the table service. My friend had been delighted with her treasure at first, as the maid who had departed had been distinctly slack.

The Other Side Of Her Qualities. And then she discovered that the new maid did not like children, was nervous and irritable if the meals were ever delayed, and thrown entirely out of her stride if unexpected company appeared (as they sometimes will do unless you deliberately establish a reputation for inhospitality).

The result of this discovery was her dictum. I think it is a very wise conclusion, don't you?

And I think maids are by no means the only ones to whom it applies.

I Do Not Like Being Run By Clock-Work.

When I went to a certain place I used to visit two friends who both lived in that town. At one home everything was always in the pink of order, meals were daintily served, and always on time, the house seemed run by clockwork. I liked the order and the repose, but I did not like the clockwork. For, alas, the guests were supposed to be run in the same way. And I do not take kindly to clockwork.

In the other home, things were run in a haphazard fashion. Meals did not always appear on time, the service was often casual, the house frequently in more or less disorder. But mine hostess was just as easy going with her guests as she was with her house. They had perfect freedom, she did not offer them punctilious attentions nor expect them in return. If one wished to telephone at the last minute that one was unexpectedly detained and could not be at home for a meal she understood perfectly.

The Reverse Of The Medal. Its just the old situation of "les défauts des qualités." The other side of neatness and particularly is exactingness with others; the other side of easygoingness is slackness. There may be people who are exacting with themselves and easy going with others but that is a height of self culture that one should not expect from ordinary mortals.

I think the best thing is to decide which faults you mind least, and which virtues you enjoy most, and select your maids, your friends, etc., accordingly.

Man and Wife Frozen to Death.

The Minister of Justice has received the following message from Magistrate Scott, who is at present in Herring Neck: "In the storm Monday, a man named Sheppard and his wife left their home at Manuel's Cove, evidently to go to a relative's home some miles away. They were missed Tuesday and yesterday their dead bodies were found on the ice. Will hold an enquiry on my return to Twillingate."

Mother! Give Child "Syrup of Figs" if Tongue is Coated.

If cross, feverish, sick, bilious, clean little liver and bowels.

WALT MASON

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver, and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then gets sluggish, stomach sour, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhea. Listen to M. W. I. See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

More Letters Recovered.

The mail bag containing letters and papers for the 11th Regiment lost on the ill-fated Florizel has been recovered. The letters are in fair condition. The papers are, however, reduced to pulp and cannot be disposed of in the usual manner. Yesterday the letters were carefully separated and dried by the officials of the Dead Letter Department and this morning were being disposed of in the regular way. All letters whose addresses are legible will be forwarded immediately while the others will be treated according to the regulations of the D. L. O. Everything possible is being done to ensure the safe and secret treatment of all correspondence.

Two registered letters have been recovered and the senders have been notified. Another bag containing papers which have been reduced to pulp and an empty parcel hamper have also been found.

THE WAR LORD.

The War Lord talks no more of art, or paints his own punk pictures; no more he makes the painters a mart with far fetched praise or strictures. The War Lord talks no more of song, or points out poets' folly, or shows where Schiller got in wrong, where Goethe jumped his trolley. The War Lord hasn't talked for moons of music, as a master, nor shown how Handel's labored tunes were simply a disaster. The arts are having quite a rest, that once he tore to tatters; the War Lord in his bright tin vest, must tend to other matters. His men are weary of his war, they're sulking and they're striking; ignoble peace they're yearning for, and this keeps William hiking. His sub campaign is falling flat, so flat the press bewails it; the War Lord, in his soldered hat, must find out just what ails it. The Russians seem disposed to flirt, and won't stand hitched a minute; the War Lord, in his pewter shirt, quits a rest, that once he tore to tatters; the War Lord, in his bright tin vest, must tend to other matters. In Loving Memory.

OF W. F. BUTLER, DROWNED FROM THE FLORIZEL.

Again the treacherous sea gives back its dead,
 The manhoods strength and winsome life,
 What has it sent instead
 To loving hearts and arms outstretched,
 There only come
 Frozen corpses, stricken and blind,
 Dead and dumb,
 And he, for whom we waited each sad day,
 (Oh! would that he were now, as when
 We went away,
 For brothers, who lay their hand in thine,
 Receive no "clasp," and make no answering sign,
 And sisters will shed, above his head,
 Their tears;
 Recount each kindly act, recalling childhood's years,
 Nor will he deem it strange that she
 Who came to him as bride,
 Is not the first, as yet, to hasten to his side,
 He knew not in his slumber deep,
 That she—
 From fruits of that dread, "Harvest of the Sea,"
 Awaits him, where the stars their rights keep,
 Over the lone mound where she has lain asleep,
 And one whose thoughts are not on storms or space
 But only prays for time to look upon his face,
 He cannot now return her fond caress,
 Nor hear her cry that she is fatherless,
 His only one, and yet, to him it was denied,
 That he should keep her, ever at his side,
 And as he gladly journeyed, year by year,
 That in a sunny clime, where "days grew dear,"
 While a father's care she should her strength renew
 And days sped glad o'er their heads and days were blue,
 "Father of the fatherless" be thou now her stay,
 And of all who have lost a father's love to-day,
 Church and Tower, and Hall, we see them as they stand,
 They are his monuments of skill and brain and hand,
 Their arch and angle, lined into its place,
 That add unto the structure, symmetry and grace,
 Head upon detail, just as his fingers planned,
 We shall, as time advances, behold the building stand,
 And he, cut short from life, from friends, from home,
 Who suffered death cold pangs out on the raging foam,
 God will be done, we say, and try to think 'tis best,
 For God has called our loved one from his work to rest.

St. Patrick's Celebration

AT HOLYROOD.

The Star of the Sea Association held their monthly meeting on Sunday last and it was decided to celebrate the Feast of the great Saint with the usual ceremonies and festivities on Monday next, the 18th inst. The members will parade to the church, assist at Mass, receive Holy Communion in a body and be treated with a pancake on Ireland's Apostle.

On Monday evening next, in the Star Hall, Miss Flynn, the talented organist, and her amateur troupe will produce the concert which has been in course of preparation for some weeks. The programme is interspersed with songs breathing a pure Irish atmosphere and crowned with a charming operetta, promising well to surpass all previous performances. A dance, at which Mr. Graney will discuss his popular notes, and a supper will follow the concert, so that a good old Irish night is in store for all the patrons of Miss Flynn and her amateur troupe.

could see about three-quarters of a mile. Further cross-examined by Mr. Warren—Owing to the chief officer Tucker, being left ashore, I took his place. I would not know much about the equipment of the ship at that particular time. She did not ship any sea up to 10.30. No water came over the boats.

To Mr. Dunfield—I have never experienced this reversed current running from the N.E. Several fishermen on the shore knew of the current. They say they saw this current for two or three days at a time running strongly. The bosun who belonged to the vessel, often noticed the current reversed. Sometimes it ran very strongly. I could not say if her bottom was clean.

To Capt. MacDermott—The officer from the bridge always superintends the soundings. The last sounding was not ordered by me, so I did not record it. Both Dooley and Gover, quartermasters, cast that lead. I always take the last myself and do not trust it to others. These men had been with Capt. Martin for some time and were to be trusted. Dooley said he got 99 fathoms.

To Mr. Warren—I am quite certain he said 90 fathoms.

MR. KIELY'S EVIDENCE.

Mr. John P. Kiely, sworn:—I am a resident of St. John's and manager of the Nickel Theatre. I was a first class passenger on the Florizel. I was in the Smoking Room when she struck. I noticed nothing unusual in the ship. There were two other passengers in the Smoking Room, one was Capt. Joe Kean and the other I don't know. We were all awake and dressed. I came out of the Smoking Room and came downstairs to get my coat. I met the stewardess at the bottom of the stairs. She came in my room and died there. I was about 5 or 6 minutes getting there. The light went

MAJOR SULLIVAN'S EVIDENCE.

Major M. S. Sullivan—I am a native of this country. I was a first class passenger on the Florizel. I was in the smoking room till sometime between 10 or 11 o'clock. I then came on deck and walked up and down with Mr. McNell. It was snowing after 10 o'clock. I then went to bed about 11.15. I was first aroused by one of the passengers at 12 o'clock. I got up and dressed. I had no special reason for getting up. I went back to the smoking room. Mr. Kiely and Capt. Kean were there. I left there at 2 a.m. I went to the Social Hall and lay down there to sleep. At 4.30 she was rolling heavily and some books were coming out of the bookcase. She was rolling badly then. Just shortly after I woke up some stewards came along and turned on the lights, they said a skylight was broken in by the sea and that water was flowing in. My stateroom was No. 2. I went into Mr. Munn's room which was No. 1. I was there a couple of minutes when Mr. Snow, the purser, came and asked if we would like some fruit. He got two oranges. Mr. Munn was in his bed. He said he never knew the Florizel to roll like that. I have travelled considerably by sea. I said I must go on deck to see what it was like. When halfway down the passage she struck. She had been rolling hard for about 10 minutes. Several of the passengers rushed out. First they thought it was heavy ice. I rushed back to Mr. Munn and said we are on the rocks. I rushed into my room for my coat and grip. We could not get out through the Social Hall so I went aft to the Smoking Room and got on the lee side. I heard Capt. Kean say if there was any chance to get a boat out. They were cutting away the tackle of one

M. C. L. I. Debate.

The subject for debate at the Institute last night was "Resolved that the present war has lessened the influence of the church as a moral and social force in the world." The affirmative side was upheld by Mr. W. H. Jones and Mr. James, the negative being led by Rev. Mr. Darby, assisted by Rev. J. H. Way and Mr. Eric Parsons. The affirmative contended that during the present war the Y.M.C.A. has taken over a great deal of the work of Christianity and that the church has little influence. They pointed out that the greatest work is done by undenominational efforts, and that everything points to a more non-sectarian effort in the future for all social reforms. The negative defined the church as the mystical and inorganic community and all those who acknowledge supreme allegiance to Jesus Christ as their Lord and Master. The negative contended that the influence of the church has not been lessened, but was more powerful than ever. The suffering and sacrifice experienced in this struggle have turned many to the Christ. Many of the members took part in the general discussion. The vote was taken and showed the negative had won their point. Mr. S. Woods presided. The debate for next week is, "Should clergymen take an active interest in politics?"

Wedding Bells.

GARLAND—ROWSSELL.
 St. Thomas's Church, Pushtorough, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Feb. 7th, the contracting parties being Miss Annie Rowsell, daughter of Mr. Jonathan Rowsell, and Mr. John Garland. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. Hall, Rector of Pushtorough Parish. The bride was attired in a dress of white silk with hat to match, was given away by her father and was attended by Miss Mary Garland, while the groom was ably supported by Mr. Philip Rowsell. After the ceremony the happy couple went to the bride's home where an enjoyable evening was spent. The bride was the recipient of many useful presents. On Feb. 9th Mr. and Mrs. Garland left for Gaultois their future home. We wish them bon voyage over life's troubled sea.

Lemons Whiten and Beautify the Skin! Make Cheap Lotion

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quart pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold cream. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.
 Just try it! Make up a quart pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful for rough, red hands.
 Your druggist will sell three ounces of orchard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.

THE RIGHT POLICY.
 WASHINGTON, To-day.
 The Administration formally embarked to-day on a policy of taking Congress completely into its confidence as to the progress of war preparation and development on the fighting front in Europe. At the invitation of Acting Secretary Crowell, members of Senate were in session at the War Department for nearly two hours, with the full membership of the War Council, and beginning next week will meet with that body every Saturday morning. Members of the House Committee will meet with the Council to-morrow, in accordance with this plan. Thus the War Department meets the insistent demand of Congress for a greater share in the conduct of the war and removes the real cause which led to the Senate Committee's criticism of the Army Council.

GENERAL REVIEW.
 LONDON, To-day.
 One million tons of Dutch shipping which will be used in sending supplies to the armies of the Allies or in the transport of troops to the war zones, will be taken over by the United States and Great Britain next Monday, thus relieving in a great measure the dire need of the countries at war with the Teuton Allies. Holland's hesitancy to come into an agreement with the United States and Britain, which would permit of the use of ships flying her flag, many of which are now lying in American and allied ports, no longer is to be tolerated, and next Monday, whether she is willing or not, her ships will be taken over under the provisions of international law, and put into uses which are highly essential to the success of the allied cause. Holland yet has time to acquiesce in the demands of the United States and Great Britain and sanction the use of her shipping, but her plea of Germany's menace no longer will avail, and there is to be no modification in the decision of the United States and the Allies to seize all the Dutch ships in their respective ports throughout the world, and use them. Liberal compensation is to be awarded the owners of ships, and all their rights will be safeguarded. In addition, the export of food stuffs to Holland will be permitted, and coal by which Holland will resume her interrupted trade with her colonies will be guaranteed. On the major battle fronts operations continue as for weeks past, being mainly artillery duels, trench raids and intense aerial activity by all the opposing forces. In operations on land, American troops continue to locate and blow to pieces with their artillery, gas projectors in Toul region, which the Germans recently have been attempting to set up in large numbers, in preparation, it is believed, for a gas attack on a huge scale. American aerial observers have been doing splendid work in spotting out the gas tubes and reporting their whereabouts to the artillery. Not alone are gas tubes throwing implements coming in for attention by American gunners, but German batteries, trenches, wire entanglements and points of military concentration and munition dumps also, are being given a practical demonstration of the accuracy of the aim of the men behind the American guns. Additional batteries have been silenced by them, trenches and wire entanglements have been torn to pieces and ammunition dumps blown up. With the return of good weather myriads of airmen are daily to be seen over the lines dropping bombs, or in aerial combat. British, French and German air services all claim numerous victories for their aviators in the fight in the air. During the first ten days of March alone, the British are accredited with 73 planes, while the German War Office asserts that on Wednesday seven enemy airplanes and their captive balloons were destroyed by the German airmen along the Franco-Belgian front. The situation in Russia and Siberia apparently is far from being settled, although the Germans and Austro-Hungarians still control the territory from Finland to Odessa, on the Black Sea. It isn't certain that the Russians will not again take up arms against them. The Bolshevik Foreign Minister, Leon Trotsky, has asserted that he will oppose the ratification of the Peace Treaty with Germany and advocate reorganization of the army for the defence of Russia. Meanwhile, influential newspapers in Germany, already, are beginning to see the loss of Germany's prestige in the Far East because of the machinations in Russia and to point out that Germany's Russian policy has "played the game brilliantly" for Great Britain, the United States and Japan. Messrs. advices from Constantinople, indicate that with the evacuation by the Russians of sections of Turkish Armenia, the Turks are again harassing the Armenians, but that the Armenians are offering resistance. Erzerum, the principal city in Armenia already has been re-occupied by the Turks. Another case of German "frightfulness" by a German submarine commander is chronicled in a report of an attempt to send the British hospital ship Gullford Castle, with 740 sick and wounded soldiers on board, to the bottom. Notwithstanding the plain marking of the hospital ship, two torpedoes were launched against her. One of the missiles struck the ship's bow, badly damaging it, but she was able to make port without difficulty.

FORMER PREMIER ARRESTED.
 PETROGRAD, To-day.
 The Russian Telegraph Agency announces that the former Russian Premier, Prince Lvoff, has been arrested by the Commander of the Northern front. It was reported from Irkutsk on March 9th, that Prince Lvoff had set up a new Russian Government in the Far East, and was awaiting the landing of Japanese troops at Vladivostok, in order to enter Siberian territory with them.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.
 PARIS (Sunday).
 An official statement issued by the War Office to-day reads: Both artilleries were active in Ban de Sept and Viou areas. In aviation actions on March 9th, two German airplanes were brought down by our pilots, and ten others fell inside of their own lines, and it is confirmed that five German airplanes were brought down on March 6th and 8th, our bombing airplanes carrying out several sorties. Fourteen thousand kilos of projectiles were dropped on stations, cantonments and aviation grounds in the enemy's zone, several fires breaking out.

BRITISH RAID BULGARS.
 BRITISH THEATRE, Mar. 9.
 In the Struma Valley, British troops successfully carried out several raids against the Bulgarian lines at Cerna Bend, after a violent artillery preparation. An enemy detachment attempted to attack north of Orcheva, but was repulsed.

LOSSES SLIGHT.
 WASHINGTON, To-day.
 Little damage to French and Italian merchant ships was done by submarines during the week ending March 9th, official despatches from Paris and Rome to-day say. The French lost no ships of over 1,600 tons and only four below that tonnage, while the Italians lost two ships of over 1,600 tons and one under. One Italian ship was unsuccessfully attacked.

BALFOUR ANSWERS QUESTIONS.
 LONDON, To-day.
 H. B. Lee-Smith, Liberal member for Northampton, who several days ago notified the Commons of his intention, yesterday asked Foreign Secretary Balfour whether he could give the House any information regarding the rumors as to the intentions of Japan in Asiatic Russia and what was the attitude of Great Britain on the subject. Mr. Lee-Smith hoped that Great Britain would follow the line of policy laid down by President Wilson, but if she did not, and gave way to the desire of Japan, she would not be acting for her own best interests; for Russia, despite what happened would remain a great country, and when she revived, democratic and stronger, Great Britain would be glad to have her as a friend. Alex. M. Scott, Liberal, Glasgow, contended that the danger to stores at Vladivostok was insignificant, in comparison with the menace with which the whole allied campaign and strategy in the East, was threatened, if there was the slightest foundation for Mr. Lee-Smith's contention that whenever foreign troops invade a country, they inevitably stay there, and annexation results. Said Mr. Balfour, it was a very bad lookout that Russia was now a derelict upon the waters with no power of resistance whatever, and that there would be German penetration from end to end of Russia that would be absolutely disastrous for Russia. I believe that the House does not know how far this penetration has already gone. I suspect that at this moment a German officer would be much safer travelling through Russia than would an Allied officer. One bank is allowed at Moscow and that is a German bank. Russia sincerely desires to resist this penetration but how can she do it when instrument to make such resistance possible has been destroyed. I do not think that Germany will try to send any great organized forces from Riga to Vladivostok. That would be an operation of great difficulty and from a purely military viewpoint an unnecessary, and even fatal waste of time. Russia is a country of surprises and it is impossible to predict her future, but the thing most to be feared for Russia is that it is Germany's intention to foster and promote disorder. It has always been Germany's game that other countries should be weak, and she knows that there is no better way than by making them divided. What would be the result of this disorder and division? Men will at last look round, and say to themselves, this condition is intolerable and something must be done, good or bad, to terminate the chaos. Mr. Balfour contrasted the French revolution, which had resulted in the creation of an army whose efficiency was the wonder of Europe, with the Russian revolution which had deliberately and completely destroyed every fighting instrument. This destruction involved also the gallant Roumanian army. He cast not the slightest aspersion on the Bolsheviks, but declared it was obvious to the world that the course they had pursued rendered them helpless in the face of German aggression. The Bolsheviks had now expressed a genuine and earnest desire to reconstitute the army and would, doubtless, welcome the assistance of Great Britain in carrying out that object, but such reconstitution of the shattered instruments of defence could not be accomplished in a day.

CABLE NEWS.

AVAILING OF NEUTRAL TONNAGE

LONDON, March 14. Because of the long delay in negotiations with Holland over Dutch ships in Allied ports and the slowness of the Dutch Government to act in this respect, Great Britain and the United States have reached an agreement to send the negotiations and to take over all such ships next week for the use of the Allies. Every precaution will be taken to safeguard the right of the owners. The ships will be insured and armed, and any ships which will be replaced at the earliest possible time after the war. The amount of tonnage made available to the Allies through Dutch arrangements is one million tons, of which seventy per cent is in the United States, and fifteen per cent in British ports and fifteen per cent in other Allied ports.

GERMANY HELD UP AGREEMENT.

LONDON, March 14. Negotiations with Holland have been in progress for many months and it was expected an arrangement would be reached last Christmas. The Germans were continually bringing pressure to bear upon Holland and the delay in reaching an agreement, operated continuously to the advantage of Germany and to the disadvantage of the Allies. Realizing the difficult position in Holland the Allies decided to force an immediate settlement. While Germany has been obstructing the employment of Dutch tonnage by the Allies she has been enjoying the use of Dutch barge tonnage on the German canals to an amount greater than the ocean going tonnage which the Allies will secure under the new arrangement.

ACTION WILL NOT FORCE HOLLAND.

WASHINGTON, March 14. Officials and diplomats here have no fears that the taking over of Dutch ships will force Holland into war, as has been predicted in some quarters. They are certain Holland will continue her policy of neutrality. The taking of all the Dutch fleets is the greatest move of its kind since the beginning of the war. The official explanation here is that Holland is in a state of duress, terrorized by the German submarine menace, and the necessity of feeding the neutral nations of the world, officials add, calls for the use of every available ton of shipping.

ENEMY AIRMEN WORSTED.

LONDON, March 14. On Tuesday two British seaplanes attacked five enemy air craft in the southern part of the North Sea. The engagement lasted thirty minutes. One enemy two-seater was shot down and destroyed, the observer of a second machine was killed and a third was driven down on the water. The engagement terminated when the British seaplanes had expended all their ammunition. Both the machines returned safely.

WAITING THE SIGNAL.

British Front in France and Belgium, March 14.—This has been another day of ideal fighting weather, but there has been no change in the situation. The British and German military machines tuned up to the finest pitch and probably as nearly perfect as it is supposed to make them, are still awaiting the signal which will send them crashing against each other. Meanwhile the artillery pounds away in thunderous duels at various points and myriad airmen are busy bombing, photographing and acting as eyes for the respective armies. The British airmen have been doing marvellous work recently. The first ten days of March as a whole have been among the best yet recorded for the service. During that period, in addition to a vast amount of reconnoitering and photographing, the intrepid Britishers destroyed thirty-nine German airplanes, brought down 46 others out of control, despite the fact that the first two or three days of the month were so stormy that aerial activity was virtually impossible. Against this total fifteen British machines are reported missing.

TROTSKY ON THE RAMPAGE.

WASHINGTON, March 14. Further indications that Leon Trotsky, former Russian Foreign Minister, will oppose the ratification by the Soviet Congress of Germany's peace terms, and that he will advocate reorganization and use of the army in defending Russia, were contained in a despatch to the State Department to-day from Ambassador Francis at Volsga. The Ambassador reported a conversation that Trotsky had with some one as late as March 11th, in which he said he considered war unavoidable and advocated an iron discipline for the army. The Ambassador added, this might or might not be significant. The former Foreign Minister expressed great interest in the report that Siberia was about to be invaded by Japan either in conjunction with the armies of other Powers or alone, and appeared somewhat sensitive regarding it.
