For Love of a Woman,

New Romeo and Juliet.

CHAPTER I.
BEHIND THE FOOTLIGHTS.

"I never was so sorry in all my life," he said. "To think that I should have given you all this trouble! And—frightened you, too!" he added, for she had sunk down upon the bank and was trembling a little as she wiped her hands.

"No, no, I am not frightened," she said. "But it—it was so sudden."

He looked round and bit his lip. "Great heavens!" he exclaimed, remorsefully, "I—I might have fallen on you!"

A faint smile played upon her lips for an instant.

"You nearly did so as it was," she said.

He drew a long breath, and his eyes sought her face penitently.

"It was abominably careless of me," he said in a low voice. "But I had no idea that there was anyone here. I did not think of looking over the hedge."

"It is a very high one," she said, and her lips quivered with a little shudder, as she recalled the moment in which she saw him fall.

He glanced at it carelessly.

"Polly would have done it if it hadn't been for the brook! I'd forgotten that there might be a drop this side, and—"

"He stopped short, his eyes fixed upon her dress, upon which were two or three red spots staining its whiteness. He put his hand to his head. "Your dress!" he said. "Look there! I've spoilt it!"

She looked down at the stains—they were still wet—and felt for her handkerchief. It was lying on the grass.

"Will you let me?" he said pleadingly; and he took out his own handkerchief and tried to wipe out the spots.

"Never mind," she said. "It does not matter."

"And your hat and book!" He picked them up and glanced at the latter. "Romeo and Juliet!" Your were reading! What a nuisance I have made of myself. I shall never forgive myself, nor forget your kindness! If you hadn't been here—"

He stopped.

She seemed to be scarcely listening to him.

He sat down, almost at her feet, and fastened his collar, his eyes resting on her face. He had seen many beautiful women, this young man, but he thought, as he looked at her, that he had never seen anyone so perfectly lovely.

With a vague feeling of wonder he noticed that her hair was dark, almost black, and yet her eyes were blue. They were hidden now between the long, dark lashes, and yet he knew they were blue, for he remembered noticing it in the first moments of wandering consciousness.

Was it this strange contrast, the blue eyes and black hair, that made her so lovely? Or was it the shape of the thin, delicate red lips? He tried to answer the mental question, but his brain seemed in a whirl.

It was not the effects of his fall, but the witchery of her presence.

She was so perfectly still, her face set in quiet gravity, that he feared to speak or move, lest he should disturb her. Then, suddenly, she looked up with a little start.

"I must go," she said, almost to herself.

"Oh, no!" he pleaded. "Wait and rest for a little while."

She turned her face toward him with a smile, but her eyes were half-veiled by the long lashes.

"It is you that should rest?" she said.

"Oh, I'm all right," he said. "But you have had a fright, and are—unsettled, and no wonder. I'm afraid you'll never forgive me," he added, remorsefully.

"Forgive?" she repeated, as if she had not understood.

"Yes," he said, "I'm afraid, if ever we meet again, that you will think of me as—the clumsy fellow who nearly rode over you, and—gave you all this trouble."

"No," she said, simply, "there is nothing to forgive."

She raised her eyes to his face for a moment as she spoke. He was still bareheaded, and his hat lay a shapeless mess in the brook, and the water had formed the yellow hair into short crisp curls on his white forehead, and in his dark eyes lingered the look which they had worn when he had first returned to consciousness—a look of hankering, reverent admiration.

She took up her hat and put it on

DRESSMAKER SAVED FROM OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Time.

Ithaca, N.Y.—"Three years ago I suffered from pains in my right side, so severe that I could not raise my feet from the floor. Pains would shoot down my limbs and through my back, and the doctor said I had an abscess. I was in bed two weeks with an loobag on my side and expected any day that I might have to go to a hospital for an operation. A friend came to see me and told me of your wonderful medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it, and after taking six bottles I feel well and strong, do my own work and do dressmaking for others. I cannot speak too highly of your medicine and recommend it to others who suffer with female trouble. It is a Godsend to ailing women, and you may use my name at any time."—Mrs. PERMILLA HULSIZER, 218 E. Fall St., Ithaca, N.Y.

Women who suffer from any such ailments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

slowly. A spell seemed to have fallen on her. She thought it was the reaction after the excitement.

"I must go," she said. "But you? Shall I send someone to help you?"

He rose, reluctantly, and laughed softly.

"To help me!" he said. "But I am all right. I never felt better. It's not my first tumble by many; and besides, I've not far to go. But you will let me see you home? I've faltered—I should like to tell your people, and thank them—"

"No, no," she said, her eyes following the direction which he had taken when he said that he had not far to go.

"I am staying at the Towers," he said, responding to her look. "You know the Towers?"

She shook her head.

"I am staying with my uncle. My name is Neville—Cecil Neville—"

He stopped, as if he expected or wished that she would tell him hers; but Doris remained silent. "That's my uncle's horse, and I hope I haven't lamed her," he laughed.

"Oh, no! Poor thing!" said Doris, pitiously. "It wasn't her fault."

"No, it was all mine," he said.

"And I may not go home with you? Will you let me call and thank you—properly—to-morrow?"

She raised her eyes with a fleeting glance.

"It is not necessary," she said. His face fell. She lingered a moment, and she turned away.

"Good-afternoon."

He glanced up at the sky.

"Good-night," he said, slowly. "Good-night" in so low a voice that it seemed almost a whisper.

She walked through the clump of trees for a hundred yards perhaps, then stopped with a start.

In the spell that had fallen upon her she had forgotten her book. She looked round and saw that he was standing where she had left him. She waited, and presently he moved, and going to the brook, knelt down and bathed his face and head. Then he went towards the horse, and calling to him, got into the saddle. Not till he had got some distance did she venture to return.

Her book was there, and beside it the handkerchief with which he had tried to remove the stains from her dress—they were there still.

She took it up and looked at it dreamily—the whole incident seemed almost a dream—and saw in a corner, worked in red silk, the initials C. N., and above them a coronet.

She was about to drop the handkerchief where she had found it, but instead she thrust it out of sight in the bosom of her dress.

Then with a smile she opened the book.

By a strange coincidence it opened at the page upon which appeared the words that had proved such a stumbling-block to her, and half-unconsciously she murmured:

"Good-night! good-night!"

What was it that made her start and brought the warm blood to her face?

Only this: that now, for the first time, the words seemed to possess their real meaning. She had learnt how to speak them!

"Good-night! Good-night! Parting is such sweet sorrow That I shall say good-night till it be morrow!"

She ought to have been glad. Why, then, did she utter a little cry, almost of dismay, and cover her face with her hands?

CHAPTER III.
"IF I SHOULD FAIL!"

Doris sped homeward; but, fast as she walked, her thoughts seemed to outrun her. Had she fallen asleep by the brook and dreamt it all? She could almost have persuaded herself that she had, but for the handkerchief hidden in the bosom of her dress.

"Cecil Neville!"

She repeated the name twenty times, and each time it sounded more pleasant and musical. There was no need to call up the remembrance of his face, for that floated before her mental vision as she hurried on with downcast, dreamy eyes.

"Am I out of my senses?" she exclaimed, at last trying to rid herself of the spell by a light laugh. "Anyone would think I was playing the part of a sentimental young lady in a three-act comedy. It was rather like a play; but it's generally the hero who saves the life of the principal lady. I didn't save his life, though he says I did. How he said it! Why can't one speak like that on the stage, now? Cecil Neville!"

She took out the handkerchief and looked at it.

"And this is a coronet. What is he, I wonder? A duke or an earl or what? And what does it matter to me what he is?" she asked herself in the next breath. "I may never see him again, and if I did we should meet as strangers. Dukes or earls have nothing in common with actresses. I wish I could forget all about him. But I can't—I can't," she murmured, almost piteously.

"Oh, I wish I had stayed at home—and yet I don't either," she added, slowly. "If I had not been there, perhaps he would not have come to, and might be lying there now!" She shuddered. "How brave and strong he looked riding at the hedge! It was a mad thing to do. And yet he made light of it. Ah! it is nice to be a man—and such a man! Cecil Neville! I wish he had not told me his name. I cannot get it out of my head. And he lives with his uncle at the Towers. Perhaps Jeffrey knows who the uncle is. I must tell him." She sighed. Somehow she felt a strong reluctance to speak of the afternoon's adventure; but she had never had any secrets from Jeffrey, and she added, with another sigh, "Yes, I must tell him. He will be angry—no, he is never angry, but he will be—what?—sorry. And yet I could not help it. It was not I who rode at the hedge, and—I wonder what he thought of me when he came to?" A burning blush rose to her face, and she stopped still to contemplate the new phase of the question. "I—I had his head upon my lap! Oh, what could he have thought? That I was forward and impertinent? And yet, no, he did not look as if he did, and—and he thanked me and asked me to forgive him—how many times! Cecil Neville. There—and she laughed impatiently—"that is the last time I will think of his name—or him!"

With this prudent resolve she hurried on, and burst into the little room out of breath, to find Jeffrey seated at the table and waiting for his supper.

He looked up with his keen glance, and nodded.

New Relief For Constipation,
"LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

Chinese Delegates
Signed Under Protest
Rather Than Satisfactorily

SIGNING THE TREATY.

WASHINGTON, June 28. The signing of the Peace Treaty was begun at 10.30 Washington time. The Official report to the State Department said President Wilson signed after the Germans. Dr. Heilmann Mueller and Dr. Johannes Bell, German representatives, signed for Germany at three fifteen. A few minutes before three o'clock fifteen enlisted men from the British, French, and American armies entered the Hall amid cheering. The Chinese delegates shortly before the hour set for the signing of the Treaty refused to sign. At 2.50 o'clock all delegates were seated, except the Chinese, who did not attend. The Germans entered the Hall at exactly three o'clock. Premier Clemenceau called the session to order at 3.10 o'clock. Premier Clemenceau put direct questions to the Germans whether they were willing to sign and execute all the terms. The other delegates did not arise when the Germans entered the Hall. The Germans who were first to sign, did so at 3.13 o'clock. The American delegates came next, led by President Wilson. The British followed the Americans. At 3.44 o'clock cannon began to boom, announcing the completion of the ceremony of signing. The signature had not, however, as a matter of fact, been completed, for at that time the smaller nations were still signing in alphabetical order. The proceedings were formally closed at three forty-nine o'clock.

SIGNS UNDER PROTEST.

VERSAILLES, June 28. General Jan Christian Smuts, one of the delegates representing the Union of South Africa, signed the Treaty under protest. He objected to certain territorial settlements, making a lengthy statement. General Smuts said that indemnities stipulated could not be accepted without grave injuries to the industrial revival of Europe. He declared it would be to the interest of Allied Powers to render the stipulations more tolerable and moderate.

SIGNING THE TREATY.

WASHINGTON, June 28. The signing of the Peace Treaty was begun at 10.30 Washington time. The Official report to the State Department said President Wilson signed after the Germans. Dr. Heilmann Mueller and Dr. Johannes Bell, German representatives, signed for Germany at three fifteen. A few minutes before three o'clock fifteen enlisted men from the British, French, and American armies entered the Hall amid cheering. The Chinese delegates shortly before the hour set for the signing of the Treaty reiterated their intention not to sign. At 2.50 o'clock all delegates were seated, except the Chinese, who did not attend. The Germans entered the Hall at exactly three o'clock. Premier Clemenceau called the session to order at 3.10 o'clock. Premier Clemenceau put direct questions to the Germans whether they were willing to sign and execute all the terms. The other delegates did not arise when the Germans entered the Hall. The Germans who were first to sign, did so at 3.13 o'clock. The American delegates came next, led by President Wilson. The British followed the Americans. At 3.44 o'clock cannon began to boom, announcing the completion of the ceremony of signing. The signature had not, however, as a matter of fact been completed, for at that time the smaller nations were still signing in alphabetical order. The proceedings were formally closed at three forty-nine o'clock.

SIGNS UNDER PROTEST.

VERSAILLES, June 28. General Jan Christian Smuts, one of the delegates representing the Union of South Africa, signed the Treaty under protest. He objected to certain territorial settlements, making a lengthy statement. General Smuts said that indemnities stipulated could not be accepted without grave injuries to the industrial revival of Europe. He declared it would be to the interest of Allied Powers to render the stipulations more tolerable and moderate.

TREATY STIPULATIONS.

PARIS, June 28. In the completed Peace Treaty, signed to-day at Versailles the newspapers say, were certain stipulations which it was hoped would hasten ratification of the treaty by the German National Assembly. The Journal says the Allies, following the German example of 1871, stipulated that the liberation of German prisoners would be dependent upon ratification of the treaty at once. The prisoners would be released without delay.

FLED FROM KEIL.

LONDON, June 28. The German submarine destroyer U-21 arrived at Gothenberg yesterday, after having fled from Keil. The commander and fourteen sailors were on board, of whom seven say they intend to go to South America.

THE FINAL SCENE.

VERSAILLES, June 28. World peace was signed and sealed in the historic Hall of Mirrors at Versailles this afternoon, but under circumstances which somewhat dimmed the expectations of those who had worked hard and fought during long years of war and months of negotiations for this achievement. The absence of the Chinese delegates, who at the last moment were unable to reconcile themselves to the Shantung settlement and left the Eastern Empire outside the formal purview of peace, struck the first discordant note in the Assembly. A written protest which General Jan Christian Smuts lodged with his signature was another disappointment to the makers of the treaty. But bulking larger was the attitude of Germany and the German plenipotentiaries which left them, as evident from the official programme of the day and from the expression of M. Clemenceau, still outside any formal reconciliation, and made actual restoration to regular relations and intercourse with the Allied Nations dependent not upon the signature of the preliminaries of peace to-day, but upon ratification by the National Assembly. To M. Clemenceau's stern warning in his opening remarks that they would be expected and held to observe the treaty provisions loyally and completely, the German delegates, through Dr. Haniel Von Haimhausen replied. After returning to the hotel they stated that had they known they would be treated on a different status after signing than the Allied representatives, as shown by the separate exit before the general body of the conference, they never would have signed. The general tone of sentiment in the historic sitting was one rather of relief at the uncontrollable end of hostilities, than of complete and unalloyed satisfaction.

EX-PREMIER DEAD.

LONDON, June 28. William P. Schirmer, Premier of Cape Colony from 1898 to 1900, and former High Commissioner for South Africa in England, died in London to-day.

WOULD TAKE EX-KAISER'S PLACE.

BERLIN, June 28. Dr. Bethmann Hollweg, former German Chancellor, has formally asked the Allied and Associated Powers to place him on trial instead of the former Emperor. The former Chancellor says he assumes responsibility for the acts of Germany during his periods of office and places himself at the disposal of the Allies.

GREEK OFFER TO MOSLEMS.

SALONIKI, June 28. The Greek Government has decided to offer every encouragement possible to Moslems who wish to remain in Greece and renounce their Turkish nationality.

R-34 READY TO CROSS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 28. The British dirigible R-34 is expected to arrive in the United States on July fifth or sixth on the first flight across the Atlantic to be undertaken by a lighter than air craft. This announcement was made here to-day by the British Air attaché who requested that American merchant ships on the north Atlantic to radio weather reports to Cape Race for both the outward and return voyage of the dirigible. The R-34 will land at Long Island and will remain only long enough to replenish its fuel and supplies.

WILL PRESENT TEXT TO-MORROW.

PARIS, June 28. The text of the Peace Treaty will be presented to the Chamber of Deputies on July 1 by Premier Clemenceau, L'Echo de Paris says. The former Premier Viviani is said to have been interested with the drawing up of the general report on the treaty. Premier Lloyd Gorge, the paper adds, will address the British House of Commons on July 1 on the peace negotiations.

DISORDERS IN ROME.

ROME, June 28. Serious disorders marked anti-Government demonstrations in Rome last night. The demonstrators attempted to reach the residence of Premier Nitti, but were driven back by large forces of military police. Order was finally restored after midnight.

SINN FEIN HEADQUARTERS RAIDED.

DUBLIN, June 28. Sinn Fein headquarters was raided this afternoon and the building searched by a large force of military.

With Eczema.

You Can Depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to Bring Relief and Cure.

The obstinacy of eczema is well known. The fact that Dr. Chase's Ointment has been able to cure in even the most severe cases is the best proof of the extraordinary healing powers of this standard ointment. Cures such as are described in these letters give you some idea of what you may expect from this treatment.

Mrs. Frank Wadge, Midland, Ont., writes: "One of my boys had an attack of eczema, and although I tried different preparations for this trouble, as well as medicines from four doctors, we could not get satisfactory results. Finally, I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and from the first I found it gave good results. We used a good treatment of this ointment, and in a short time the eczema was cured. I have also used the ointment with great success for a roughness and rash on my face, which caused me a great deal of trouble. After applying Dr. Chase's Ointment I found instant relief."

"I might also mention that Dr. Chase's Catarrh Powder has proven of great benefit to me. I had difficulty with a stoppage in my nose and head, but the Catarrh Powder relieved it, and I have not been bothered in this way since."

Mrs. P. H. Veale, 19 William street, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment having used it with splendid results where all others failed. My little girl, aged 3½ years, broke out in small yellow blisters, which turned into scabs. They came out in different places on her face, and although I tried a great many salves and ointments, none of them did her any good. I got a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and after a few applications, I could see the effects of it. Whenever I saw a new spot appearing I would apply the ointment, and before the box was finished she was entirely cured of those horrid sores."

If you would like to try Dr. Chase's Ointment at our expense, send a two-cent stamp to pay postage and we shall mail you a sample box free. Full size box 60 cents at all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Laid to Rest.

WILLIE DUNPHY. The funeral of Willie Dunphy, the victim of the motor accident, at South Side, Holyrood, took place on Saturday and was one of the largest in the history of the town, thus attesting the almost universal sympathy felt for Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dunphy, the parents of the ill-fated boy. Rev. Father Finn conducted the burial services at the home of the dear dead boy, and this being finished he briefly addressed the assembled mourners speaking feelingly of the sad accident and offering on behalf of himself and the congregation consolation and sympathy to the afflicted parents in their hour of deep sorrow. The funeral appointments were in charge of Undertaker Martin of St. John's who had had his man and horse and beautiful hearse come over from the city to take part in the funeral arrangements and to solemnize the ceremonial. The handsome casket enclosing the remains, were removed from the room by the undertaker and his assistant, and placed on the hearse-in-waiting, and the large funeral procession formed in line to march to the South Side cemetery. The school boys and girls were marshalled by Constable Grouchy and Miss O'Neill (teacher of the High School) and preceded the hearse and the mourning friends and sympathizers followed behind. The route of the large procession was marked by dropped blinds, and when the cemetery was reached, the remains of a dearly beloved boy were interred in the family plot beside those of his grand-parents, the bright rays of the sun illuminating his early grave. To lose such a bright and promising child truly brings a deep and heavy shadow but it must be remembered that light sometimes will break through and that there will be a glad and happy reunion in the great beyond. Willie has gone to a bright and beautiful home beyond the grave, and the spirit of the dear child will only wait a brief period when in sweetest and in love he will meet his mother and father to separate no more. Enough said. Human consolation is weak, but Mr. and Mrs. Dunphy have received a large number of messages and notes of sympathy from all parts of the Dominion breathing sorrow and sympathy at the news of their sad bereavement. God bless them in their hour of sorrow, is the wish of AMICUS.

Holyrood, June 24th, 1919. (The Telegram most sincerely sympathizes with the bereaved parents, and adds its message of condolence to those already received.)

The Twilight Mystery.

There is a glow in the northern sky so long after sunset, just now that people are curious to know what it all means. It is not uncommon to attribute it to the "Merry Dancers," or Northern Lights. The real solution of the mystery is that this is the season of no-night. Since the days of William the Conqueror, it has been recognised that real night begins when the sun is eighteen degrees below the horizon.

At this time of the year that limit is not reached at midnight, and twilight reigns all night in a greater or lesser degree, according to the northern or southern latitude of the observer. A long spell of dry, calm weather renewment. God bless them in their hour of sorrow, is the wish of AMICUS.

Holyrood, June 24th, 1919. (The Telegram most sincerely sympathizes with the bereaved parents, and adds its message of condolence to those already received.)

It should be remembered that while astronomical twilight ends when the sun is eighteen degrees below the horizon, civil twilight ends when the sun has gone down only six degrees. By that time dusk is deep enough to put a stop to outdoor work.

In May, June, or July, by causing an excessive amount of dust to accumulate in the air, will make the all night twilight much brighter.

The famous "Midnight Glow" of a few years ago was due to this accumulation of dust in the atmosphere during a period of drought.

It should be remembered that while astronomical twilight ends when the sun is eighteen degrees below the horizon, civil twilight ends when the sun has gone down only six degrees. By that time dusk is deep enough to put a stop to outdoor work.

When Terra Nova's Sons Met the Might of Germany.

The Battle of Beaumont Hamel, July 1st, 1916.

(By No. 38 L.-C. John J. Ryan, Royal Nfld. Regiment.)

Those who lived and those who died, they were one in noble pride— Of desperate endeavour, and duty nobly done."

Three years have slipped by since Newfoundland planted her first big spoke in the wheel of fame, drenched with the blood of her youth, but surmounted with a halo of glory at Beaumont Hamel on the Somme. It was there her series of greater sacrifices took root, being afterwards crowned by such achievements and noble attempts as those witnessed at Guedecourt, Monchy, Ypres, Cambrai, Ledgehem and other parts of the battle line.

The Newfoundland Regiment was initiated in the hardships of trench life in France during the clean up, after a rainy winter, on the ground where the name of England's Oldest Colony will go down in history marked by the hundreds of little white crosses that forged for her a bond in the fellowship of freedom. The warm spring sunshine came as a boon to the fighting forces, but the hard work of line reconstruction was increasing. Rumour spoke in the trenches, camps and villages of a mighty battle, but men laughed, and gave expression to the feeling of all ranks that "it would be better to die in the open from the plunge of a German bayonet than to be murdered in a trench from the fire of a German shell." This was true. It has been proved so over and over again that the battle on the Hun parapet was less killing to the nerves than the long "wait and see" attitude so conspicuous during the latter part of 1915 and the opening months of the following year.

The main intentions of the big issue were camouflaged by the reticent methods of the staff. Though we expected a grand Franco-British attack, we were also prepared to think our fight was to be one of defence. Aeroplanes reported the arrival of vast quantities of building material behind the enemy lines. This proved the Hun was preparing for something unusual, and the contentions were various and many; but when great guns of tremendous calibre rolled through the villages under cover of night, the impression that an offensive was being contemplated became more popular. During the month of June we were certain that the big battle was to be launched from the British side, and the rehearsal of an attack in the semi-cultivated fields surrounding Louvecourt confirmed our expectations. But a few days of June remained (we were quartered in this village) when an order from Divisional Headquarters commanded the concentration of the 88th Brigade at a certain meadow on the outskirts of our billets. At the appointed hour, General De Lisle of the 29th rode up and took the salute in front of the Newfoundlanders. Then in a few words he lifted the screen of secrecy and told us of the day we were to charge across No Man's Land and take over the third system of German defences. He spoke of the confidence he placed in his men and the unlimited supply of shells at the disposal of our artillery, equal to forty miles of motor lorry loads, each having a capacity of three tons. The supply of guns were such as to be unable to place more on the front than the "good-bys" and "good luck" he went round to the other battalions and addressed them likewise.

The remaining days were spent in final preparation for the great event. Thousands of trench mortar bombs were conveyed to the front for use in the demolition of the German wire. Raiding parties were funged into the lines at night and the Hun nerves tested by the shock barrage that time and again deluged his trenches. The second raid of the Newfoundlanders was a crowning success, though attended by many casualties. The failure of the first caused a spirit of determination to push the second right to the German dugouts, but some of our men were killed, wounded or captured during the fight that was marked by illuminating flares, bursting shells and crackling machine guns. Private Phillips of "A" Company was awarded the Russian Cross of St. George and afterwards the Military Medal for gallant conduct in the raid, but was killed at Guedecourt before the Russian honour was presented him.

On the night of the 29th June, officers, non-commissioned officers, messengers and runners grouped around the war map spread on the table at Company Headquarters. Captain Ledingham pointed out the important parts of the German front to be stormed by the Division. I can well remember the instructions given us. We were to start from St. John's Road (the new trench built by ourselves) and cross two support trenches and the firing line, then pass through the gaps in our own wire and walk across No Man's Land. The first and second system of Hun defences were supposed to have been captured by the other brigades, and then had to cross the first on foot bridges carried by the troops. Passing over Station Road and the second line, we would halt near Pusieux Road whilst our artillery hammered the third system, our objective; and then on lifting the barrage we were to go right in and fight on its possession. It looked easy for the map-section. It looked easy for the map-section.

A farewell concert was given at Brigade Headquarters, and on the last night of June, when the sun had hidden its face from the horrors of the battle front, the Newfoundland Regiment, nine hundred strong, swung around the zig-zag roads from Louvecourt to the line. The French villagers watched us go. Some cried but others cheered and wished us the luck that France was hoping for. Never before did the battalion look so splendidly equipped and cleared for action. Marching through the intervening villages, we reached the suburbs of Mally at dark. In this hamlet the boys had many a good night's rest, but it was now in the melting pot of German destruction. A great shell screamed overhead as we trudged out across the fields so as to give the former communicating lines a wide berth. The Hun batteries were pouring showers of shrapnel on the main road, and our own "big lums" sent over an occasional leviathan to clear the atmosphere. On reaching the communication trench (Tipperary Avenue) we had to halt for quite a long while, as other regiments on their way in had blocked the entrance and it was impossible to get through for some time. This waiting in such a dangerous position was very trying to the nerves. At any moment the enemy was likely to start a bombardment and cause serious casualties, as shells were bursting none too far away. It was somewhere about midnight before we settled down to our jumping-off place in St. John's Road.

The night was cold, damp and extremely uncomfortable. The heavy artillery steadily shelled the communications of the enemy, but nevertheless an ominous silence was hanging over the men of the Newfoundland Regiment. No projectiles of any description touched St. John's Road during the night, yet we longed for the heat of the morning. A plentiful supply of water was brought in, and we took an occasional drink with bread and canned meat. Few of us were inclined to sleep. It was the last night on earth for hundreds.

With the break of the day small guns joined in the scrap and dropped some shells on the Hun's first system. Restless and impatient we waited for the hour to strike. At seven o'clock our artillery commenced to blow up the whole German front. At eight the fire had increased to a thunderous crashing of steel and explosives and the ground shook with the terrific cannonading. For sixty minutes this avalanche of death kept up its strength. At nine o'clock the big guns went skywards, taking with it the village and many yards of Hun trench. The Royal Fusiliers, who formed part of the attacking force on the left, moved forward with machine guns to occupy the crater, but were held up by a murderous fire from the enemy, and the Welsh Borderers, Iniskilling and Lancashire Fusiliers, with their supporting battalions, were practically annihilated by the deadly fire of the enemy. An officer rushed back into our trench, his head and face mangled and blood. He told us the attack was a failure, that the regiments were wiped out, but the orders came down the line "Newfoundlanders Advance." We scrambled out and kept together as best we could. My eyes were fixed on the black burnt hillside where lay the Hun lines unconquered. I hardly noticed myself going over the ridge and crossing past and crackling round everywhere. I glanced to the left. The sections were going on in splendid formation. I was so excited that I didn't realize a wall of uncut wire was barring our path. I can remember the wire-cutters working like niggers to get through, but one died and hung on the wire. The other died and hung on with bullets, and the sections came piling in, but we had no means of advancing. The "typewriters" were quick. The men dropped like wheat to the scythe. The German artillery was now in the fray. A great projectile plunged into our group, and when the smoke cleared, but three or four of us lived to crawl out of the hell.

The gaps to our right and left were choked with high explosives, and men who tried to get back with their wounds, never crossed that line of death. Life has never seemed so dear to me as it did at that hour, but there was no getting away from it. When the fire had decreased, some of our boys managed to find the lines and get through to a first aid station. Others crept part of the way and dropped, crying out for stretcher bearers. Lieut. Frost is credited with having gone out two or three times and carried in men on his back; whilst Private Jack Reardon worked like a Trojan to get the badly wounded out of No Man's Land. All day the Huns shelled our lines making the rescue work hard and dangerous. A fleet of ambulances rushed through the villages with the more serious cases, but many died before help could be given them.

Capt. Bert Butler assembled the remnants of the battalion and put us in a dugout near Constitutional Hill. This trench was partly levelled by gunfire. Q.M.S. Cleary lay dead about half way through it, but nobody dared wait to remove his body as the shelling was perpetual. All night explosives were bursting in the saps and the front line, but a scattered unwounded straggler returned.

turned from the shell holes. Burying parties brought in a few of the dead and placed them in the trenches for identification. This work was continued for days. On the second and third, rain poured out of the heavens partly filling the lines and making our work of rescue a hardship. The battle on the right was kept going strong, and when the sun again made its appearance the glittering bayonets were quite discernible a mile or two distant. With a pair of binoculars we could see the bombing fights between British and German, yet the artillery showed very little activity.

Quite a large number of our dead were still out in front when we were relieved by the 48th Division and sent back to Engelebimer. This village was evacuated by the inhabitants on the eve of the battle and now lay in ruins. Signs of a hasty departure of the inhabitants were quite evident, but one old gray-haired peasant refused to leave, though the French police so many times by the French police. It was here Lieut. Owen Steele received his fatal wounds. A large shell having burst in a barn a few yards from where he was standing outside the officers' mess. Here also we were visited by Sir Almyer Hunter Weston, commanding the 8th Army Corps, who spoke about our day in the battle saying, "Newfoundlanders, you have done better than the best." Truly, we did what we could, but not a man expected such a glowing tribute after so terrible a failure. General De Lisle and staff are rumored to have said, "They went as if on parade until they could get no further." Though our English, Scottish, Irish, and Welsh friends did their utmost for the Newfoundlanders, it is England's way of doing things. She suffered seventy-five per cent. of all casualties, yet we are lauded to the skies by her newspapers, and the home regiments worked silently for the cause victorious.

After being transferred to the huts in Mally Wood, the remnants of the battalion were again sent into the line, reinforced by a small draft from Rouen. Remaining there a couple of days, we moved to Acheux. The work of reorganization was quickly pushed, and in ten days the little body of Newfoundlanders marched back through Louvecourt, cheered by the villagers. We were leaving Beaumont Hamel for ever.

HABITS OF THE MIND.

"The happiness of your life depends upon the quality of your thoughts, therefore guard accordingly."—Marcus Antoninus.

When we speak of good habits we usually think of outward habits involving action, such as taking cold baths, saving money, answering letters promptly, keeping appointments punctiliously, etc.

Likewise, when we speak of bad habits we think of such overt acts as sitting up too late at night, being slovenly about personal cleanliness, being extravagant and careless about money matters, procrastinating, etc.

But besides these outward physical habits there is another set of habits, good and bad, which affect our lives just as deeply as those to which we are wonted to give more attention. I refer to the habits of the mind.

How Many of These Habits Have YOU?

What are your habits of mind? Do you ever take stock of them? If you haven't you might like to, and to facilitate such a process, I've jotted down a few mind habits that occur to me. You will doubtless be able to add others to the list.

The habit of concentration. The ability to control the mind, to regulate it, restrain it, direct it, as one does the body, is the foundation of all good mental habits.

The habit of refusing to fret one's self over future ills that may never materialize and that one cannot do anything to avoid or mitigate, anyhow. Who was it said, "The habit of looking on the bright side of things is worth a thousand pounds a year?"

A Habit All Executives Should Have.

The habit of making decisions after reasonable and careful consideration and then putting the matter completely aside and refusing to go back over the ground.

The habit of never letting yourself flummox and rage inwardly about grievances or annoyances or irritation or antipathies.

The habit of waiting patiently—mentally waiting I mean—when waiting is necessary, and not straining ahead mentally in useless and demoralizing impatience.

Do You Translate?

The mental habit of translating (as I haven't space to tell you what I mean by that I'll let you guess and tell you to-morrow).

The habit of thinking instead of dreaming.

The habit of thinking only of what you are doing at the moment and not letting your mind wander to what you are going to do next. (I suppose that is really a subhead of the habit of concentration.)

Someone has said, "We first make our habits then our habits make us." And of no habits is this more true than the habits of the mind.

Newfoundlanders! Advance!

Such were the words of the order, given on that fateful morning of July 1st, 1916, which sent the first battalion of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment to practical annihilation from the concentrated fire of German field batteries, machine guns and rifles, on the stricken field of Beaumont Hamel. And to the everlasting credit and honor of the regiment and the dominion, not one man shirked the issue. Where others had failed they made the forlorn attempt to succeed at a cost which we know only too well. Mowed down by a storm of projectiles and shells the gallant remnants of Newfoundland's first regiment, pushed their way forward and even forward, in hope of retrieving the misfortunes and losses of the first attack. Into an inferno of shot and explosive they advanced, their one hope being to reach the objective for which their advance was ordered. But human flesh and blood could not prevail against the iron and steel of the German guns, and with three-fourths of the battalion killed and wounded, the remainder had to admit failure, but not dishonor. Demigods could not have done more. The best blood of Newfoundland spilled over the battle field gave proof of the high courage and gallant attributes of the sons of Terra Nova. The dauntless heroism exhibited in pushing home the attack to almost within the enemy lines, was further evidence of the daring and spirit of the wearers of the Caribou badge. Animated by the desire of victory and to show how little they valued life, they kept on in the face of sudden and certain death. The honor of Newfoundland was at stake, and notwithstanding the reverse received at Beaumont Hamel, the men from the land of the fern, were afterwards more feared by the Germans than were any of the other units comprising the Allied forces. The deaths of so many gallant gentlemen have been lamented, in the homes from which they came, in the towns that gave them birth, and in the churches of the dominion. Their memories are held dear by all, and the splendid part of it is that their glory will ever live. They died that the world might be made free for democracy, and the scroll of fame contains no names that will shine more brightly than those who made the Supreme Sacrifice on Saturday, July 1st, 1916. Others after them

"Took up our quarrel with the foe,
And from their falling hands held high the torch," and now that for which they fought has been accomplished and peace once more reigns over a world at rest. Those fine souls who sleep under a foreign sod, will wear a smile of contentment to-day because the rights and liberties for which they died have been safeguarded: their militant labors recompensed, for with their spiritual eyes they have seen the passing away of autocracy and the birth of a new age of freedom from despotism.

It is meetly appropriate that at the Memorial Services tomorrow, reference will be made to the signing of the Peace Treaty, and a greater sentiment of elation will be manifest, for that reason. The spirits of the departed fighters will be present at all the celebrations, whether in the dim religious light of the churches or under the blazing glare of the sun, and their influence will be imposed upon all who take part. They rejoice with our rejoicing, and lament over the sorrows of all to whom the anniversary of Beaumont Hamel brings thoughts of dear ones shot-torn and wracked by high explosive, whose bodies are far away over the sea, and upon whom the gaze of parent, brother and sister will never rest. Duty claimed their bodies and they gave them freely and gloriously. Earth holds their mortal remains, but the souls have winged their way to the immortal realms of light, and in the presence of the Omnipotent God they have received that reward for which all humanity yearns.

"Better than the best," they "fought the good fight, they finished the course, they kept the faith."

Their record is contained in the fine tribute which Sir Douglas Haig paid them, and in which also he honors the land which produced the men who made such praise possible.

"Newfoundland may well feel proud of her sons. The heroism and devotion to duty they displayed on the 1st July has never been surpassed. Please convey my deep sympathy, and that of the whole of our armies in France in the loss of the brave officers and men who have fallen for the Empire, and our admiration of their heroic conduct. Their efforts contributed to our success, and their example will live."

We Shall Remember Them.

They sleep beneath no immemorial yaws;
Their resting place no temple arches hem;
No blazoned shaft or graven tablet woos
Men's praise—and yet, we shall remember them.

The unforgetting clouds shall drop their tears;
The winds in ceaseless lamentation wall,
For God's white Knights are lying on their biers,
Who pledged their service to restore the Grail.

They gave their lives to make the whole world free;
They cared not to what flag they were assigned,
The Starry Banner, Cross, or Fleur-de-lis—
Their sacrifice was made for all mankind.

For them the task is done, the strife is stilled;
No more shall care disturb, nor zeal condemn;
And when the larger good has been fulfilled,
In coming years we shall remember them.

How can the world their deeds forget?
In France white crosses everywhere lift pallid hands,
Like silent sentinels with sword and lance,
To keep their memory safe for other lands.

What need have they for holy sepulture?
Within the hearts of men is hallowed ground—
A sanctuary where they rest secure,
And with Love's immortality are crowned.

And far-off voices of the future sing,
"They shall remain in memory's diadem";
And winds of promise still are whispering
That same refrain, "We shall remember them."
James Terry White.

Disorderly Watchman Arrested.

On Saturday night the police, going their rounds, were called to Tessler's wharf, and as a result of their visit arrested the watchman on the schooner Klondyke, who was acting in a manner which can only be likened to that of a Bolshevik on the rampage. Resting against the guardian of the waterfront had to be bound hand and foot with many rattoms of small Manila rope, and in this trussed-up condition was taken to the police station. He appeared before the Magistrate this morning.

The King's Message.

The following message from His Majesty the King has been received through the Secretary of State for the Colonies for publication:

"The signing of the Treaty of Peace will be received with deep thankfulness throughout the British Empire. This formal act brings to its concluding stages the terrible war which has devastated Europe and distracted the world. It manifests the Victory of the Ideals of Freedom and Liberty, for which we have made untold sacrifices. I share my people's joy and thanksgiving, and earnestly pray that the coming years of Peace may bring to them ever increasing happiness and prosperity."

The official notification of the signature of the Treaty of Peace was received by the Governor at 11 p.m. Saturday, 28th June, 1919.

MR. TILLEY CONTRADICTS STATEMENT IN STAR.
(Special to Evening Telegram.)
GRAND LAKE, To-day.
I wish to contradict the article which appeared in Dally Star of 27th from Curling, evidently written from Grand Lake, stating that two young men Willie and Charlie Tilley, sons of C. W. Tilley, postmaster, Grand Lake, were before the court and convicted of house breaking and larceny from Whitakers here, and proofs brought to prove their guilt. The two young men in question are two small boys, aged ten and twelve but with more brains than the mean contemptible author of that false and malicious article, who wrote to try and blacken my two little boys characters and injure me in my official capacity and was too cowardly to come out under his own signature. No evidence was brought forward to prove the boys guilty. A suspended sentence, without conviction is practically a dismissed case. I did not pay court charges, and refused absolutely to do so unless my boys were convicted. Unless the Star apologizes for this slanderous statement, I will institute proceedings against that paper for defamation of the character of my children.
C. W. TILLEY.

Cause and Effect.

The California Fruit Grower's Exchange counts on spending one half cent on every dozen of Sunkist Orange Marmalade, Sunkist Orange Jelly and Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade they sell, for advertising.

Last year, among other advertising done, there were seven full page advertisements run in the "Lady's Home Journal". A full page in the Lady's Home Journal costs the nice little sum of Seven thousand dollars for one insertion. This means that the California Fruit Grower's Exchange must have sold Eight million four hundred thousand dozen of Sunkist Marmalades to foot this little advertising bill alone. And they did it! Did it easily, too! The answer is this: The California Fruit Grower's Exchange could not have sold considerably over One hundred million jars of Sunkist Marmalades last year unless the quality was there—unless the folks that bought the first pot sung out for more. And you'll be doing the same shortly. Sunkist Orange Marmalade, Sunkist Orange Jelly and Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade are absolutely pure and cost only a few cents more than the kinds that are made of glucose, gelatine and other matter that you would not care to eat if you knew you were eating it. Keep your eye out for the Sunkist brands which will shortly make their appearance at your grocer's. Trade supplied by P. E. Outerbridge, Sole Agent.

Robbed of Money.

Peter Barron, employed at the General Hospital, is the poorer to-day for $340.00, this little amount having been borrowed from his pocket by a person yet undiscovered. On Thursday Barron and some others were at work in the early morning, leaving off for breakfast at 8 o'clock. His coat was left hanging in the boiler room, and when he returned and felt in his pockets found the roll, which had been in a wallet, gone. Suspicion was immediately fastened upon a man who had been seen hanging around the boiler room, an ex-prisoner who had, during a term of service in the Pen, been working about the Hospital grounds. Report having been made to the police, search was begun, but the suspect has not yet been located.

Celebrating Peace Signing.
News of the actual signing of the Peace Treaty was received in the city yesterday morning at 9 o'clock with considerable joy, and for the remainder of the day formed the principal topic of conversation. The firing of the Signal Hill gun, ringing of all church bells, the blowing of steamers' sirens and the flying of gay bunting, soon told that the fateful document had been signed and ratified, and immediately everybody became joyous and happy. Aboard the Briton and the French cruiser Somme, celebrations took the form of musical treats and during the evening the tars from either paraded the streets singing patriotic airs and generally enjoying themselves. A pyrotechnic display from the Briton was given during the night.

Racial Differences.
The old, old racial differences were revived Saturday night on Queen St. when a number of "colored gentlemen" and a corresponding number of local "gentlemen" tried results in a game of catch (and hit) as catch can. The dandies from the sunny regions were more than a match for the citizens, and a swift retirement, quite unpremeditated, was made by the latter. This time it was not the negroes who were at fault.

New Steamer Makes Port.
The new steamer Cerro Gardo, Capt. R. M. French, reached port Saturday evening, bringing a large quantity of flour from Montreal. The Cerro Gardo, which is making her first trip is 265 feet long, 2,223 tons gross and 1,349 net, and has a speed of 19 knots. She carries a crew of 35 all told and has a carrying capacity of 29,000 barrels.

Celebrating Peace Signing.

News of the actual signing of the Peace Treaty was received in the city yesterday morning at 9 o'clock with considerable joy, and for the remainder of the day formed the principal topic of conversation. The firing of the Signal Hill gun, ringing of all church bells, the blowing of steamers sirens and the flying of gay bunting, soon told that the fateful document had been signed and ratified, and immediately everybody became joyful and happy. Aboard the Briton and the French cruiser Somme, celebrations took the form of musical treats, and during the evening the tars from either paraded the streets singing patriotic airs and generally enjoying themselves. A pyrotechnic display from the Briton was given during the night.

Racial Differences.

The old, old racial differences were revived Saturday night on Queen St. when a number of "colored gemmen" and a corresponding number of local "gentlemen" tried results in a game of catch (and hit) as catch can. The darkies from the sunny regions were more than a match for the citizens, and a swift retirement, quite unpremeditated, was made by the latter. This time it was not the negroes who were at fault.

Lost Week's Pay.

PEACE AT LAST!

Now that the Peace Treaty has been really signed we hope that Umpire Clemenceau will insist that the Huns keep to the batting list and make Bill Hohenzollern face the pitcher. Instead of allowing them to put in a pinch hitter, viz: Von Holweg. Incidentally we hope the pitcher will have his "bean-ball" ready when the time comes.

DON'T YOU AGREE?

A Fan writes us protesting against our statement that the Lions will win the pennant this year. "You're a liar," says he, "they won't cop." He's right about our being a liar, but only time can prove the truth of his other statement.

It is rumored that if the CUBS don't win to-morrow afternoon's game, Harvey Thomas intends getting a whole new team, with which, he asserts, he can win every game for the next three years. How are chances for a place, Harv?

When you're feeling sort of drifty and would rather sleep than eat, when your walk once brick and fifty is performed with dragging feet; when you feel that all life's pleasure is like a trained out cup—then you need this stirring measure—"BATTER UP!"

Keener far will wrow your vision, And the Umpire you won't doubt—'Till you hear his cruel decision—"BATTER UP!"

MYRTLE, the Fem-Fan, (yes, she's in again) writes to enquire if, with a runner coming home from third, the ball hits the umpire's head, it scores? No! Myrt! No! The umpire can't even feel it.

Incidentally, umpires don't need any spring training. They can miss 'em without practice. KE-RECT!

Millions of people earnestly believe that Charlie Chaplin is the funniest man on earth when it comes to slapstick comedy—but, did those good people ever see Brazeil try to lay down a sacrifice bunt. Oh, Boy!

Never before in the world's history has such havoc and devastation been brought upon the people of the earth as was launched against them in the summer of 1914 by the German autocracy. No previous war approached the almost immeasurable magnitude of the Colossal Conflict. Its history, therefore, is the history of four years unparalleled in the annals of man.

From the outset the men of our land put their might into a war whose ending will blend the people of the lands into one world-nation.

To the men whose names are writ in glory—the gallant dead, who paid the sacrifice supreme, and whose memory we commemorate on to-morrow—we pause in our day's labor to greet them—and to extend our fullest sympathies to those who hold them only as a memory—a memory we are proud to share.

Here is an assortment of about-the-house wear, simple, sturdy garments for house cleaning and for morning occasions.

This is your opportunity to get your summer's needs in House Dresses right now, when you can have the longest wear of these pretty garments.

Methodist Conference.

CARBONEAR.
(FRIDAY AFTERNOON.)

The order of the day was the report of the Conference Standing Missionary Committee. Dr. Fenwick, Superintendent of Missions, in his usual business-like way, presented the report. His statements were very inspiring, and far exceeding our expectation. The results as far as finalized are as follows:

- St. John's District, $12,527; Carbonear District, $5,241; Bonavista District, $4,862; Twillingate District, $6,475; Burin District, 4,610. Grand total for Conference, $33,315. An increase of 38 p.c. over last year's total giving.
- Highest aggregate increase:
- St. John's District.
(1) Gover St. Church—$871.
(2) Cochran St. Church—$690.
- Carbonear District.
(1) Carbonear—$324.
(2) Heart's Content—$293.
- Bonavista District.
Wesleyville—$288.
Newtown—$224.
- Twillingate District.
Springdale—$193.
St. Anthony—$214.
- Burin District.
Burin—$175.
Grand Bank—$171.

After the reading of the report, Mr. Arthur Mews moved the following resolution:

WHEREAS, as a fitting climax to one hundred years of missionary endeavor, and acting upon the report of the committee of fifty, which was made after a careful survey of the whole missionary field; the General Conference of 1918 authorized the organization of a campaign, extending over five years for the raising of the sum of eight million dollars for general missionary purposes;

RESOLVED, that this Conference heartily and loyally accepts the objective set by our General Conference, and pledges itself to do its utmost in the raising of our proportion of the said eight million dollars.

The General Secretary of the Missionary Society, the Rev. Chas. A. Manning, then addressed the Conference. He spoke on the Inter-Church campaign giving an outline of the work to be carried out. A discussion followed after which it was resolved that this Conference adopt the principle of raising our proportion of the proposed Missionary and Superannuated Funds, and appoint a committee to divide upon the method of its accomplishment. This committee to be the members of the Annual Conference Missionary Committee with power to add to their numbers.

The order of the day now was a devotional half hour. Intercession for Yvonne was the subject for consideration.

RESOLVED, that previous to the Missionary Anniversary, a full statement of the Conference Objective shall be made in each congregation, and wherever practicable a Day of Intercession shall be observed, that vision may be given our people, to see the needs of the world as Christ sees them; and that there may be given a realization of the great privilege bestowed on our church in being able to, by the consecration of ourselves, and of our wealth, to supply these needs.

The above resolution was moved by Rev. Dr. James and seconded by Dr. Fenwick, and unanimously adopted by the Conference.

All the members felt when the Benediction had been pronounced, that the session had been one of the most helpful and inspiring of the Conference.

(Night Session.)
A special session of the Conference was held on Friday, at 7.30 p.m., Dr. Bond in the chair.

The order of the day was the continuation of the discussion of the report of the Missionary Society.
The Conference was especially honored with the presence of the Rev. Chas. A. Manning, B.A., General Secretary of the Missionary Society; an able successor of the late Rev. J. Allen, M.A.

There was also present the Rev. A. S. Soper, B.A., a returned missionary from China. The people of Newfoundland are particularly interested in Mr. Soper, as he is one of the Newfoundland young men who has considered the missionary work to be the grandest and most blessed of any. He unhesitatingly left all that was dear in order that he might accomplish the work to which God had called him. There is still room for many more of the sons and daughters of Newfoundland in the foreign field.
Mr. Manning thrilled the vast congregation that had gathered together with his eloquent address on the work that is being done in the Home Mission Field. Too much emphasis cannot be laid on this important work if we would save Canada for the Empire, and claim it for God. No work has felt more the stringencies of the war, than the mission field of Canada, principally because of the noble and heroic sacrifice of the probationers and ministers. Five hundred laid aside the ministerial duties to which they had been called, for the laying down—their duty as required—of their lives upon the battle fields of Europe. Forty missions in Alberta Conference alone, last year were without a minister. There are vast stretches of territory in the North of Alberta, called the Peace River country without a single minister. Then think of the racial problem facing Canada. There are 110 languages spoken in this dominion; large communities where the boys and girls are being taught foreign languages. Now if we would lay the foundation of a greater Canada, we must have one language, and that language must be the English tongue.

Many soul-thrilling and inspiring instances were related showing the noble work done by the Methodist ministers and missionaries among the foreign element in Canada. If we would save the foreigners within our dominion, and prevent our beloved land from becoming the Balkan States of America, the people of the Methodist Church must reinforce the work that is being done by laying their wealth, as well as their services on the altar of God.

Mr. A. S. Soper, B.A., then addressed the Conference on the work that is being done by our church in China. Those who were privileged to hear Mr. Soper, will not soon forget the beautiful, inspiring, educative and sympathetic address which he gave. He told the Conference of the influence of the visit of Dr. Bond to China. Even to-day the ministers and members of that young church send their greetings to him. In our church in China, there are 8,000 Christians, 7,000 Sunday School scholars. I am glad to be a member of this Newfoundland Conference, and shall ever hold my membership with you as long as I am a missionary.

And I have determined to spend my life in China. Let me say that there is no church in China so honored as the Canadian Methodist Church; and I want to take this privilege of thanking you and all the Methodist people of Newfoundland for holding the ropes. For it is only through your unselfish devotion to the cause of missions that we, out in China can do service for God. There is a tendency to-day toward independence. I believe that the great idea of the church is not so much independence as missionary. If you neglect the missionary idea, your vision will cease to keep the missionary spirit aglow. When I left the city in which I had been laboring, the people were greatly interested in my leaving. Although it was very early in the morning, yet they were all up and had their houses decorated, and offerings presented to their gods, in order that their gods might protect us on our journey home. The boys of the schools with their teachers lined the road for a mile outside the city to bid us goodbye. Let me say here that there is no greater investment than the missionary work; sending out the Gospel of Christ to those people, giving those people in this old country a Christian civilization. The same spirit of sacrifice that took us to China would have taken us to France. Soon after the war had commenced we wired Dr. Endicott of our readiness to leave all and go and fight for our motherland, in defence of honor and justice. We acquainted the British representative of our willingness to go; not only to go ourselves but to take at least 800 coolies with us. He replied, saying "No, stay here by the people. You can do more good right here than if you were to go to Europe and take 8,000 coolies with you." It was true that we were needed there in China, for the German officers were there spreading false reports. They were telling us that the Germans were at Paris; France was bled white, England was invaded, Americans would never reach Europe, and it was only possible for the Allies to hold out two months longer. We replied that even if those things were so, even if the war was protracted for twenty years longer you will never win (Applause). On Nov. 15th when the signing of the armistice was made known in China, a great demonstration of the Chinese soldiers and officials took place; and at that demonstration I was asked to tell them about the wonderful achievements of the mother country.

Easter Service.
Let me tell you about our last Easter service in China. At that service ten Sunday school boys from our church stood around the communion rail for Christian baptism. Christian baptism stands for a great deal in China. It meant much for them. Some of them as they stood there were dishonored by their parents, as the water was dropped upon their heads, that very moment a pen blot-tered out their names from the ancestral register. Yet they were conscious that God was with them and that they dwelt under the shadow of the Almighty. As we stood there in that church, which had often been visited by a great revival, a man came up the aisle with a basket on his arm. The basket was full of heathen paraphernalia. I asked him what he was going to do with the gods, etc. He said I have come for Christian baptism, and to confirm my desire to live and work for Christ who died for me. I desire to burn all those relics of heathenism. I have come, through the testimony of a young man, who told me about the wonderful meetings you were having here, and I attended the week night meetings and felt the power of Christian influence; I simply must burn my idols and make a public confession of my faith in Christ. Let me tell you a story about one of our young men who is training for the ministry. When a boy he took very sick; his father did everything for his recovery, for he was his only son. In order to drive the evil spirit out of the child he made offerings to the family gods. He even cut a hole in the child's throat so that the evil spirit might escape from the body, but to no avail. He then took a hot iron and made a red mark on his forehead, yet weeks passed and the child got no better. He thought something drastic must be done in order to drive the evil spirit from the boy so he took hot needles and drove them under the finger nails, yet to no avail. Then he came to me to see if something could not be done to help his child. We took him to the hospital, and soon under the care of a skilled physician he got better. The man went home and said to his wife, "Wife what about the boy?" Mark you that was the first time he had taken his wife into consideration. "We must send him to the mission school, for I have lost faith in our gods." You ask does it pay to contribute to missions. Yes! You receive a 100 p.c. for your money. You talk about a full and a free salvation. I ask of you ladies and gentlemen to give even at the point of sacrifice, that these people in foreign lands might, too, have a free and a full salvation.

—J.A.W.
SATURDAY.
In spite of the inclemency of the weather a large number of ministers and lay-brethren attended the Saturday morning session of the conference.

The business of the session was principally the discussion of educational issues of our church.
Dr. Curtis read a resolution asking the conference to pledge itself to the scheme of raising $100,000 in the outports for the establishment of a Methodist College Home in the city. After the reading of the resolution a keen discussion took place. Several laymen such as Messrs. A. Mews, J. C. Puddister, A. S. Soper, ably supported the resolution.

The erection of a new College Home in the city in fact will have the hearty cooperation of all the Methodist people in the outports. If as a church and people we are to keep abreast of the times, if we are to be in the van, in the educational movements of this 'omnium we simply must rally around this project. Methodism must be strong at the fountain head if it would be a power in the outports.

Outports Campaign.
In view of the fact that the present day and age is demanding more College-bred men and women than ever before, and because of the man increasing opportunities for such men and women here in our own country, the efficiency of the Methodist College in St. John's due to its insufficient capacity, has dropped below par. In former days the present college was sufficient, but to-day it is a truth, although a sad one, that Newfoundland young men and women have had to be turned away and denied entrance into the Methodist College because of its already being filled to capacity.

To-day the citizens are realizing more and more in various countries all over the world what Higher Education means and during the last month St. John's has shown the real spirit that is going to make Newfoundland rank alongside of the most progressive countries in the land. The people of St. John's have proven their worth and done their part toward a larger and better College. They have raised approximately $250,000 for the Methodist schools of their city, 20 per cent. of which (50,000) is to be used for extension purposes of the Newfoundland Methodist College. Approximately 50 per cent. of the students in the Methodist College come from the Outports, therefore since St. John's has shown so much interest toward a larger and better College, it is believed that the Outports will show as much interest and prove that they too, are going to stand back of their country and its young people by carrying through to a successful close a campaign for funds for the Newfoundland Methodist College Extension to be used as follows:

1. To build a new residence that shall accommodate 100 boy and girl students; this building to be erected on the new site on LeMarchant Road. To have dining rooms, laundry, etc.
2. Renovate and prepare present residence for class rooms, to accommodate the overflow from College Building, and provide for new extension courses.
3. Establish Commercial Department, for training stenographers and bookkeepers. This will be inaugurated as soon as room can be provided and teachers secured.
4. Establish Domestic Science Department.
5. Payment for lot on LeMarchant Road.
6. Necessary repairs on the main College buildings. The balance necessary to complete the College Extension Fund will be sought—through a campaign in all the Outports later in the year.

The Methodist College in St. John's is the only one on the entire Island, and therefore must be large enough to supply the demand for the whole of Newfoundland.

Wedding Bells.

HALLERN-SHAW.

A pretty wedding took place Sunday evening at the R. C. Cathedral, when ex-Private Bernard Shaw of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, Little Hearts Base, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Katie Hallern of St. Vincent's, daughter of Frances and Mary Hallern. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Greeng. The bride was charmingly attired in white silk with hat to match. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Florence Hallern, who was neatly attired in pink Georgette crepe and black picture hat. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Fred Newton, brother-in-law of the groom. After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the home of the bride's brother, 15 Barter's Hill, where a reception was held and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The bride was the recipient of many useful and valuable presents. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Shaw a bon voyage over the matrimonial sea.

Salvage Speaks.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—Quite recently a letter appeared in the Advocate from Salvage written by one who is clerk in the Union Store there. Of course this young man, who is only about 18 or 19 years of age, must be some business man and moreover some authority politically, or otherwise, and no doubt has large ideas, which have been handed down to him by his master Coaker. This young chap Peters, from Melrose, in his child like letter takes upon himself to speak for the intelligent people of Salvage and Salvage Bay, when he comes out in the Advocate—and mind you over his own signature too, and tells that Mr. Morine has no chance there. Well, well, to be sure, what may we expect next? Coaker is foolish enough God only knows but some of his poorly paid little clerks should take thought for to-morrow as to how they should live, and demand something more than barely enough to pay their board. Did you ever work for Coaker, boys? Well if you didn't, you should ought to. I never did, neither do I want to, but taking you into my confidence for a few minutes, I will tell you that I have heard that Coaker is continually writing all kinds of abuse about everyone else and everything good about himself, and when he can't write or shout praises enough about his great self, he gets after his clerks to help him out, and if the poorly paid fellows don't do this they are threatened with dismissal. The slavery of old is nothing compared to what it would be under the Coaker rule. Come on Mr. Morine and your two men. You, Morine, have fought for us before and we shall need you worse now than ever before.

Yours truly,

A UNION MAN.

Digby Arrives.

S.S. Digby, Capt. Chambers, D. S. J., reached port at 1 p.m. yesterday, from Halifax, after a run of 70 hours, delay having been caused by foggy weather and the presence of icebergs, which made progress slow. She brought quite a large freight, and the following passengers—G. and Mrs. Glennie, Miss M. O'Reilly, Miss M. Scatcho, Miss E. Alderice, Lady Outerbridge, Miss M. Moore, Miss M. Turner, M. J. Kennedy, L. Trask, Misses J. and J. Sparkes, Miss Lawlor, Miss Simons, Misses Gibbs (2), Miss Campbell, L. V. and Master Myers, Misses M. and A. Harris, W. Mitchell, Master J. Emerson, Jno. Collins, J. O'Brien, H. French, J. R. McLeod, Miss K. Fraser, and Miss Cleary. The ship will set away again to-morrow afternoon for Liverpool.

Schooners Collide.

On Saturday, during dense fog, when about 15 miles S. W. by S. from Cape Race, the schooner Tommie G. and Jean McKinley collided, the former being struck on the port bow, and almost cut down to the water's edge. The foremast snapped off at the deck and in falling carried away the jib-boom and headgear rendering the Tommie G. almost unmanageable. The McKinley was undamaged and stood by the wrecked ship until daylight, yesterday, when a line was put on board the Tommie G. by Capt. Stockley and an attempt at towing was made. The fog becoming thicker towing had to be abandoned and the vessels parted company. Later the Digby came along and passing a line brought the damaged schooner to port. The Tommie G. was from Gaultois, fish laden for Oporto, the McKinley being bound to Carbonara to land.

Our Peroxide Cream has many good points, and it is easy to explain the growing popularity of this elegant toilet cream. It is exquisitely soft and soothing to the skin, it quickly relieves sunburn and the results of drying winds, making it a delightful summer cream. It is pleasantly perfumed, and as it disappears at once, it may be used at any time in the day without inconvenience. Altogether a fine cream. Price 40c. a pot.

Methodist Conference.

During the last few years the facilities of the College have been very inadequate for meeting the existing needs. For instance, the Residence Building will only care for forty-five outport students at the present time, and this number forms an extremely small percentage of the number which ought to be cared for and which will be cared for under the larger and more comprehensive program as outlined.

There are no Boarding Houses for the students in St. John's, and it is too risky for them to room outside. As the Methodist College is not only an institution for learning, it is an institution to build men and women of the highest type of character, to allow the students to go outside would be to obstruct one of the largest aims of the College. To overcome these difficulties it is the purpose of the ways and means committee of the College to have constructed a Residence Building which will provide dormitory rooms for the students from the Outports. This is to be built on the new site on LeMarchant Road. The Methodist church in common with the other great churches to-day is facing a critical moment in her educational program. The number of young men and women desiring educational advantages is annually increasing. The church has not enlarged its equipment and building noticeably for a quarter of a century. Either her young people must be trained in other denominational Colleges or go untrained. The leadership of the Methodist College is imperilled for England cannot at present find ministers and Newfoundland must train her own leaders.

The Conference then had the pleasure of hearing Prof. DesBarres, B.A., B.D., one of the Theological Professors of Mount Allison University, in Sackville, N.B.

In the course of his address Prof. DesBarres spoke very highly of the warm reception he had received while attending the Conference.

I desire to bring before you he said the fact, that there is such a thing as a Mt. A. tradition, or Mt. A. spirit. It is not easy to define that tradition or spirit, for within Sackville or at the Front that spirit remains true. Students come to the University, thinking only what they will get it of for themselves. They come into contact with other students and some learn that life must not be self-centred, but must be lived in the interest of others. When he enters the College Residence he is called upon to pay Caution Money. At first he cannot understand it. Why should he be made to pay for fear some of the property is destroyed by others. Then he gradually comes to see that he is not only responsible for his own behaviour, but also for the mis-demeanor of his fellow-students. It is but leading him to accept the great and solemn principle we see on every hand.

Mr. Allison has a University Library, with at least 14,000 volumes. These have been presented to Mt. A. by her former students.

Then I would speak of the Inter-collegiate sports. All students are urged to enter into these games. It not only develops man's physique but helps him to play the game of life. Wellington once said that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the fields of Eton. The first problems of the future will be solved by those who pass through the Universities of our land. There are also the Intercollegiate debates. The students coming from Newfoundland have always taken an important part in these debates. This last year one of your own young-men from Carbonara was one of the three M. A. students that won further laurels for old Mt. Allison.

Our University has sent over 500 of its students over the seas to defend the honor of our empire. 200 of these were wounded, while 67 made the supreme sacrifice. Thirty of our students received various decorations. This is certainly very gratifying, especially when you know that Mt. A. is only a small College. It means that nearly every student of military age responded to the call. When our University was founded, it was to meet a great need. Mt. Allison University has given to the church some of its ablest leaders. None of the Maritime Conferences can afford to ignore our University. The life of our church here is inseparably bound up with the welfare of Mt. A.

Dr. Chown, at the close of Prof. DesBarres' address said that it was certainly one of the finest and instructive educational addresses he had ever heard.

The session then closed with the Benediction. J.A.W.

help going back convinced that a very serious responsibility lies at the doors, not only of those who can make these requirements of civilization possible in Newfoundland, but also at the doors of those who do not "do their best" to see that they are put on a basis that will not cripple their efficiency by any political, denominational or unscientific control. I hope to visit St. John's shortly and would be glad to meet any persons interested in this problem, and to whom the experience of twenty-seven years' experimenting in outpost district work would afford any information or suggestions that would be of value.
There is, however, one other aspect of this problem which is serious and which must be discussed. It is the financial side, and that of the nurse. In our experience, the most important factor in winning back a sufferer to life and health is the nurse. No one who has practised among the poor, the uneducated or the isolated but is well aware of that fact. Not the casual visit of us doctors, but the faithful, devoted and continuous service of the trained nurse is what turns the scale in favor of life. If I were not a surgeon I would ask for no other role in life before that of a district nurse like that of the late heroic Nurse Dickinson. The capacity of women is no longer in question. Side by side with men in universities and colleges, they have demonstrated their equality if not their superiority in mental ability. In factory and workshop, in agriculture, yes, and on the field they have shown, that given a chance they will prove they can average as well as men can. Long ago, Joan of Arc demonstrated that emancipated from the disability of female attire she could lead troops to victory. The sympathy of women is more readily stirred than that of men. The patience and devotion of women is an estimable factor in the fight with sickness and death. I repeat without any reserve that experience teaches us that they are every whit as valuable as a doctor.
In the long, sparsely populated portions of the coast a hospital is not possible. To get a really first class surgeon to remain in a district you must give him sufficient work, that is, a sufficient number of cases as will really occupy his time and talents. A real clinic should be established at places like Twillingate, Bay of Islands, etc., and in between what we call a nursing unit every fifty miles or so. That means a small house presided over by a nurse, trained additionally in minor surgery, obstetrics and rudimentary dentistry. The place should be like Forteau, with hot and cold water, steam heated, a small operating or receiving room, dispensary, a ward or wards with two beds only, and the nurse's living quarters. Forteau is an admirable example. Like Topsy it "grew" by experience. It is inexpensive and nearly self-supporting, being in a moderately populous part of the coast. We are now establishing one in Flower's Cove and we hope later in Conche. There should be one in White Bay also. The following is an example of what such nurses can do. Our nurse at Conche this spring had a case of a man who had stabbed himself. His intestines came out. The priest gave an anesthetic, the nurse cleaned and sewed up the wound and tended it. When the ice permitted, five weeks later, she brought in her already convalescent skipper to St. Anthony. These places should be on the telegraph or special telephone (as Harrington is) so that they can get advice in bad cases from the central hospital and a surgeon come down. But the laboratories, the electrical and X-ray work and the main clinic half of it as they try to do in the outports and do eventually in most cases. One place has now been promised a real subsidy and an attempt to provide scientific treatment really commenced. The public health improvement in the colony following such a system would pay back every dollar a hundredfold.

St. John's has been doing nobly at the General Hospital to train nurses. We ourselves have always some nurses in training who finish and graduate either in Canada or in the United States. It shows how we are all agreed on the immense importance of real training. In St. John's, people that need a trained nurse can go to the Hospital and get nursing and operation without a cent to pay. The nurses have told me that this takes away the incentive to enter the profession and the very living from the women who, after long training, are hoping to be able at least to earn a living while they serve the country in their beautiful calling.
In the outports we have never allowed this. If a patient can contribute he is made to do so. It is no hardship. Now each little village is starting its hospital or welfare committee. If the out-of-pocket expenses at hospital are too much for the patient, he will be given his bill or accounts and he can take it to his own hospital committee. They will assess what he can and should pay, and he will get a receipt in full for the amount. St. John's itself has repeatedly told us that as the paltry government grant did not support a hospital, those who benefit by it should do so, and they are doing their best to do so. The advice given was right and good advice. Even at St. Anthony from $2,000 to $3,000 a year comes direct from patients. But in St. John's nothing is paid, and the outport taxpayer is forced to contribute to give free treatment to the people of St. John's who could easily pay for themselves.
Meanwhile it is St. John's which so far has refused even to allow the taxpayers to pay for a hospital for themselves. The wrong is a vital one, and while there is a pathetic need for trained district nurses all over the colony, the free treatment makes it almost impossible for nurses to live, and so keeps down the supply. Also, the fact that no one pays in St. John's makes men say openly they will not pay either in the outports.

The coming election should settle this question. I pray the electors not to let it pass without a guarantee from every member that he will really put his hand and heart into the matter of saving the suffering and the terrible losses caused by the present utterly selfish policy of centralizing hospital work in St. John's. It can be accomplished economically and efficiently if the Government cares two straws about the people.

The Value of Bay Hospitals

LIVE ISSUE AT THE NEXT ELECTION.
Fortunately it is, and this brave lad has a fighting chance, and his broken hearted parents will vote for "Bay Hospitals." In this short and hurried journey, I treated seven "rickety" children. These would have grown up to be inefficient burdens to themselves and the colony. Rickets, scurvy, beri-beri and other common and terribly exacting diseases are all diseases of ignorance. In reach of a nursing cottage hospital or a bay hospital they would not exist.
The electors have learned from St. Anthony that Bay Hospitals are feasible, can be efficient and can be supported. If not, why are there now patients from St. John's, Green Bay, White Bay and the south and western coast in our Bay Hospital at St. Anthony? They realize the value of a well equipped nursing unit like Forteau, or why are there always patients there? If anyone had known what it meant to rear a family with the consciousness that such help was out of reach in case of need, he would realize that a large part of the worry of life is carried on that account, and you can count on his vote for Bay Hospitals. If any member of the Government or any voter visits St. Anthony Hospital to-day, studies its records and methods which an experience of twenty-seven years has given it, or visits Forteau Nursing Cottage Hospital and studies its possibilities, and then considers the question of its finance, he could not
