CHAPTER XXXVIII.

"What's this? What the devil—"

Sir Herrick looks from the bloated, insolent face of Paula to the dazed, half-bewildered glance; then he nods to Stancy, and says in his old, cool fashion:

"How do you do?"

But Stancy has taken too much champagne, and is in a jealous rage.

"What's this mean?" he demanded of Paula, ignoring Sir Herrick's civil greeting. "What d'ye mean by sneaking off in this fashion to meet this fellow?"

"Stancy! Stancy!" murmurs May, who has followed him.

"Don't Stancy me!" he snarls. "Mind your own business. She can answer a plain question, I suppose?"

And he glances at Paula.

White and trembling, not with fear of the half-drunken bully who is to be her future husband, but with shame, Paula remains silent, and it is Sir Herrick who answers, in a voice cold and suppressed, yet intense with surprise and scorn, he says:

"Permit me to explain, I met Miss Estcourt—"

"We know that," breaks in Stancy, with an insolent sneer. "We ain't blind. Besides, nobody asked you to speak. She can say what she wants, I suppose?"

Sir Herrick looks at him with an indescribable expression of cold contempt, then he glances down at the bent head so near his heart, and presses the trembling arm encouragingly.

But Paula is still silent. She has forgotten Stancy's presence, is utterly indifferent to his violence; it is of her old lover, the man she still loves, that she is thinking. What must he think of her?

"Oh, very well!" says Stancy, biting his lip and raising his voice. "If you won't speak I can think what I like, I suppose?"

"Think what you like, but suppress it," says Sir Herrick in a stern, warning voice. "Your loud voice has already attracted attention," and he motions toward the table from which several heads are turned with wondering curiosity. "Restrain yourself, sir; this is no place for an exhibition of ill-tamper, especially towards a lady!"

"Curse you impudence!" retorts Stancy, livid with passion. "Mind your own business! Come with me, Paula, this instant!"

Paula draws her hand from Sir Herrick's arm, but he holds it in his hand with a firm clasp.

"Pardon me," he says, with the cold, punctilious politeness which has marked his manner towards Stancy. "By what right do you command Miss Estcourt's company?"

"By what right?" echoes Stancy; then he laughs a coarse, brutal laugh.

"Oh, I see! She has kept you in the dark! By what right! I'll tell you; by the right a man has over his future wife, Sir Herrick Powlis."

Sir Herrick stands silent and motionless for a moment, his eyes looking far beyond the red face confronting him, looking into space, as he struggles with the agony that threatens to overcome him; then he bends his head to Paula, and says in a low whisper:

"Is this true?"

No insult could be more pronounced and deadly, and Stancy actually writhes.

"Is this true?" repeats Sir Herrick, white to the lips.

She does not speak, but she lifts her head and looks at him—a wild, imploring prayer for mercy.

He reads the truth as plainly as if she had spoken; with a bow, cold and courteous, he leads her to Stancy.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Palmer," he says. "Permit me to explain. I met Miss Estcourt in the room a few—say ten minutes ago. The meeting was unexpected on both sides. This is the simple explanation you demanded; if it does not satisfy you, I am staying at the hotel till to-morrow." And he smiles significantly.

Stancy's face goes deadly white, and his craven soul shrinks within him at Sir Herrick's ominous tone.

"I don't care whether you go or stay," he stammers. "I don't want to see any more of you. Come, Paula! Come, May!" And he takes them, one on each arm, and swaggers through.

As they pass into the ball-room, Sir Herrick follows to the door-way, and, holding back the curtains, watches them. Suddenly he sees the downcast head turn and look back, and the awful despair in the dark eyes gleam like a ghost's through the mask and sink into his soul.

With a groan he lets the curtain fall and walks blindly to the wine-table.

"Give—give me some wine," he says. "No," almost fiercely, as the footman offers him some champagne. "Brandy," and filling a glass, he raises it with trembling hands to his white lips.

Then, still almost blindly, he sets the empty glass on the table, and goes slowly out.

ing his mean heart almost to bursting. May leans on his arm trembling, Paula walks by his side calm and deadly cold, now that Sir Herrick is out of sight. Suddenly Stancy sees Alice talking to her partner at the end of the room, and pushes his way to her. Alice is seated on a lounge looking up, all attention, to the major in his court dress, but her keen eyes notice the trio approaching her, and she detects in Stancy's face that something has gone wrong. With an unflinching smile, however, she welcomes them.

"Well, my dear. Isn't this delightful? Have you danced the last, dear May? Stancy, I promised you the next—"

"Never mind that," says Stancy, with suppressed fury. "I want to talk to you. Look here—"

"Hush!" says Alice, holding up her finger warningly. "Remember we are not the only English here. Come into this ante-room if you want to shout; my dear Stancy," she adds, playfully.

Stancy drags May forward, and Paula follows calmly, one would say unconcernedly. The major, with a charming smile, offers her his arm, but she does not appear to see it.

"Now, then," says Alice, sinking into a chair in a corner of the dimly lit little room, "what is it? Has Paula been fainting, or what? For of course she has been in mischief or you wouldn't look at her in that grumpy way," and she laughs a playful little laugh.

"Michef!" echoes Stancy, with a coarse sneer. "She knows best about that. Judge for yourself if I haven't cause to complain," and he flings out his red hands. "You know I missed her; you know I've been looking for her for the last half hour. That isn't nice, is it, considering—"

"That you are to be man and wife, and that you are the most jealous monster in the world," says Alice, smilingly, and making a playful dab at him with her fan. "Well! what have you to say, Miss Truant?" and she nods her head at Paula.

Paula stands with her hand resting on a pedestal which supports a dancing faun, but she makes no answer; looks as rapt and lifeless, indeed, as the marble faun itself. If she hears the question it has no meaning for her. "Oh, my darling! my lost darling! is ringing in her ears like a knell.

"What has she to say? Nothing!" snarls Stancy. "I've asked her to explain twenty times—"

"Explain what?" demands Alice, sweetly.

"How is it that I find her closeted with that idiot Sir Herrick Powlis?"

Alice starts, and glances at the statue-like figure.

"With Herrick Powlis!" repeats Stancy, furiously. "Closeted with him in the card-room! She—she can't deny it. She gives me the slip—me, the man she is to be married to—on purpose to meet him, on purpose!"

"Oh, Stancy!" murmurs May, reproachfully, "you know they met by accident—"

"Of course!" breaks in Alice, eagerly, and with a little laugh. "How ridiculously you are, Stancy! Where are you going, Major Vericourt? Don't go till this lovers' quarrel is made up!" for the major, at the sound of Herrick's name, had actually started, and was making for the door.

He pulls up and shakes his head, and, for the first time in his life, his face betrays a true emotion—fear, positive fear.

"My dear young lady," he says, and his lips tremble, though they manage a smile, "if it is true that my nephew is in this place, it is no place for me. You will permit me to depart in—peace!" and with a nervous bow all round, he hurries, actually hurries out, and an hour later he and his valet are driving by Royal Post from Nouvelle as fast as they can go.

"Never mind that old fool," says Stancy, impatiently, "attend to me. I saw him with my own eyes; they were arm in arm, weren't they, May? I appeal to May."

"Nonsense!" says Alice, abruptly. "This is a pretty lovers' quarrel; but it has run long enough. I tell you they met quite accidentally. I know that she did not know he was here; did you, Paula?"

No answer; but the dark eyes look down vacantly.

"Of course she did not," says Alice, as if she had got her reply; "and so there's an end of it. If you are so unreasonably jealous about that unfortunate young man, I'll undertake that he leaves Nouvelle to-morrow. He's too much of a gentleman, with all his faults, to make mischief between you and Paula, who are so really devoted to each other. Come, shake hands—you can't kiss her, you know!"—with a little nervous laugh, for the intense stillness of the figure at her side is beginning to alarm her—"and make it up."

Stancy stammers and grumbles: "I'm willing, if that stuck-up idiot leaves the place at once, mind—I'm willing."

"Then come, Paula," says Alice, "shake hands. I insist upon that old-fashioned form of reconciliation—with a laugh—and be friends."

And she takes one of Paula's hands and drags it forward.

At the touch Paula seems to awake. With a slow, half-dazed air, she takes off her mask, revealing her white face and bloodless lips, and looks round. Then she looks at Stancy for a moment, and then at Alice.

"Have you told him?" she says in a low, strained voice.

"Told him—what?" says Alice, awed in spite of herself.

"That it is impossible." "Impossible! What is impossible?" "That I can—marry him. Why does he not go?"

"Paula"—and Alice strains at the cold hand in her grasp—"are you out of your senses?"

"Out of her senses, no," says Stancy, livid with passion, "not she! She is only too wide awake! It's me that has been out of my senses. She's got the money—got what she wanted—and now it's time to shuffle out of it! Oh, she is wide awake enough!"

"The money!" says Paula, with a dazed stare. Then she remembers the thousand pounds sent to Bob, and with a cry she covers her face with her hands.

"You see," says Alice, with feverish eagerness, "she scarcely knows what she is talking about. The heat, the excitement, and your jealous nonsense have upset her. Don't, for heaven's sake, let us have a scene in a place like this! Let us go home now. Get the fly for us, there's a good boy. Wait until to-morrow."

But Stancy stands glaring sullenly at the tall figure, with its hidden face. "I've been sold!" he says, with a snarl. "She never meant it from the first. All she wanted was the money. I suppose that went to that cursed lover of hers. I can see it all now. Well, let her go—a thousand pounds won't break me."

A low moan of shame and agony breaks from Paula's white lips.

"Hush!" implores commanding Alice; while May, pale and trembling, kneels at Paula's feet, murmuring words of soothing endearment. "Let us go now—it will all come right in the morning."

For this style net or brodered crepe and crepe de chine satin or silk could be combined. The design is also attractive for other combinations. The skirt is made with "pouch" drapery at the sides. The overblouse is finished with girlish ruffles to which a sash of ribbon or material may be attached.

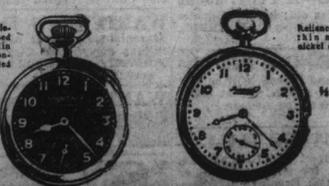

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes, 12, 14 and 17 years. Size 12 requires 4 1/2 yards of 27 inch material.

A Pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c in silver or 1c. and 2c. stamps.

Egyptian Legislature Proclaim Independence.

British Protectorate Renounced -- Jellicoe and a Canadian Navy -- Ulster Unionists Favor an Ulster Parliament -- No More Loans to Allies From Uncle Sam--Gasoline Prices May Soar.

TRYING THEIR HAND.

LONDON, Mar. 10. Fifty-two members of the Egyptian Legislative Assembly met recently at the House of Said Zagloul Pasha, who headed the Egyptian mission to the Peace Conference, and adopted a resolution proclaiming the independence of Egypt and Sudan, according to a despatch from Cairo. The resolution also protested against the suspension of the Assembly and renounced the British protectorate.

ADMIRAL JELlicoe AND CANADIAN NAVY.

OTTAWA, Mar. 10. "If Canada decides to co-operate in the general naval needs of the Empire, it may be convenient to possess a base on which to build her fleet. The base suggested, under these conditions, is a fleet unit which, it is considered, that war experience has shown, should comprise, in the case of Canada, one battle cruiser, two light cruisers, six destroyers, four submarines, and two fleet minesweepers. The naval force suggested as adequate for the protection of Canada's ports, comprises three light cruisers, one flotilla leader, twelve torpedo craft, and eight submarines, with one parent ship." The above excerpts from the report of Viscount Jellicoe, Admiral of the Fleet, on his naval mission to Canada, which was tabled in the Commons this afternoon by Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, Minister of Naval Service, indicate what his eminent authority on naval affairs considers are Canada's naval requirements, if she is to play her part in Empire affairs, and also if she is to protect her own shores. The report, which is not a lengthy one, after mentioning the subjects on which advice was requested by the Government of Canada, deals with the question of a Canadian navy under a number of specific heads. It mentions that naval assistance, in case of cruisers, destroyers, and other small vessels, rendered during the last eighteen months of the war by the United States, was a great help in the institution of a system of protecting trade by convoy, and that without this help Great Britain would only have been able to use convoys to a sufficient extent to meet the submarine menace, by abandoning some of her overseas expeditions. Four suggestions, ranging from a thirty-five million dollar fleet, to one costing five million dollars, are made by Admiral Jellicoe in his report.

Feildians Defeat Terra Novas.

Last night's clash most exciting for season—Feildians and Terras now equal—Next game decides championship.

Last evening, when the Feildians defeated the Terra Novas by 6 goals to 5—saw the most exciting game of hockey of the season. More than thirteen hundred enthusiastic fans were present. A win for the Terra Novas team—which, up to last night, had not been defeated for the season—would have given them the championship. On the other hand a win for the Feildians would put them equal with the Terras and the next game would decide. The latter team had, on the previous occasion when playing the Feildians, defeated them, this being the only defeat sustained by them. The first period ended with the score 2-2; the second with the score 4-4. In the third period the Feildians notched up two more and their opponents succeeded in scoring one, and when the gong sounded the score stood 6-5.

Tait for the Feildians played a magnificent game all through and was very effective in stopping dangerous rushes by the Terras forwards. Payne and Rendell also played a very fine game, while "Nix" was in his usual good form and stopped many "hot" ones.

For the Terra Novas, Canning, Ralph Stick and L. Stick showed up well.

The ice was not in good condition for team work as it was rough on the sides and the players found great difficulty in keeping control of the puck. The championship game will probably be played on Monday night.

Mr. J. C. Parsons was referee and the line-up:

MRS. ALICE McCLUSKEY, prominent Lewiston woman, who says she wishes she could have gotten Tanlac twenty years ago, as it would have saved her lots of suffering. Declares she is now well and happy and that she wants everybody to know about it.

"I have been trying for twenty long years to find a medicine that would overcome my troubles, but my efforts failed me completely until I commenced taking Tanlac," was the remarkable statement made recently by Mrs. Alice McCluskey, residing at No. 66 Park Street, Lewiston, Me., a well-known and most highly respected woman of that city.

"I just feel like I would give the world to meet everyone who suffers as I did and tell them about this medicine. If I could only have gotten Tanlac twenty years ago it would have saved me a lot of suffering and money."

"My principal trouble was indigestion, and for many years I could not eat meat or pastries for I would always suffer afterward. I would always have a distressed feeling after eating and nothing seemed to agree with me. Then, to add to the rest of my suffering, I contracted rheumatism in my shoulders and hips and the awful pain I suffered can never be told in words. This trouble finally got so bad I could hardly walk and my arms pained me so I could scarcely raise my hands to my head. I even had to give up my housework and was hardly able to get around at all."

"You can imagine how happy I was when, after taking only a few bottles of Tanlac, I found such a wonderful improvement in my condition! Why, it was just the medicine I needed all the time and I continued taking it until now I am perfectly well again. I can truthfully say that I am enjoying as good health now as I ever had in all my life. I have gained about 14 pounds in weight and can again do all my housework without the least trouble. I don't get tired like I did and after doing my work I can get out and walk for blocks and feel just fine when I get back home. I earnestly advise everyone who suffers as I did to take Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—adv.

Boy Scout Moving Pictures.

The moving picture entertainment held in the Methodist College Hall yesterday under the auspices of the Gower Street Troop, Boy Scouts, proved highly enjoyable to those who attended. The Governor was present in the evening, being received by a squad of Scouts. Much excitement was manifested by the Scouts when pictures of the local camp were flashed on the screen. The Methodist Guard's Band, which, under the direction of Mr. C. Peet, has of late been making splendid progress, was present, rendering many excellent selections.

"Another Irish Problem."

MR. KINSELLA'S OPINION.
 Editor Evening Telegram
 Dear Sir,—The message of March 8th from Dublin, Ireland, stating "that the Government has instituted an inquiry under the Crimes Act of 1887, regarding the relations of certain Irish banks with the Sinn Feiners; and that the object of the inquiry is to ascertain the amount and location of Sinn Fein funds, and especially, it is said, of recent large sums received from America," calls forward another Irish Problem that will prove of a certainty a tough one—if not an impossible one—to solve on the part of the English Government. The Crimes Act of 1887 (the gist of it) decides that monies collected for the purpose of building up, or aiding, or financing Revolutionary cause may be seized by the Crown, and that persons or custodians (Banks) may be prosecuted for the holding of such monies. Here is a pretty tangle indeed, particularly in view of the fact that from all parts of America have come hundreds of thousands of pounds to aid the Sinn Fein movement in Ireland. American papers to hand tell of large contributions from the clergy and laity of America to this new Irish body, and in Brooklyn, N.Y., there was collected on a recent Sunday $15,000 alone, a mere unit to the hundreds of thousands that has been and will be collected still. In an illustrated Toronto paper of date March 3rd, is shown an armored car guarding a Government Unit in a part of Galway, and the car is sippantly described as one which had done duty in the late war and had gotten its crop of Huns. When one considers that apart from Ireland herself who gave thousands of her best men to the Allies in the great war, the Colonials were largely made up of Irish descent, it supersedes Tragedy and becomes Comedy this consideration of the fact that a weapon, which had been thought necessary to bring to the destruction of the atrocious Attilian, should be turned on the Irishman in his home town. To the least discerning mind the trend of the latest Home Rule contortion (which it really is) is actually a clever effort on the part of the Premier and his convenient Government to draw up an Irish Constitution inimical to any future settlement of the Irish question. This very point was insisted on by Asquith in his successful canvass of Paisley, and he put it nicely when he declared that the present manner of settlement of the Irish question was to unsettle it. "Are we doing justice by Ireland?" asks Harold Begbie, in his book "The Lady next door" and goes on to examine the eternal misery of a broken people by every superannuated who may have the insignia of British Tammanyism. And now this last question and last problem arises "Will the contributing millions in America have their monies offered to the Sinn Fein Funds, seized?" That is the question? And it may raise another very serious issue to the now strained relationship existing between Britain and the United States under the Peace Treaty. In the Senate at Washington recently whilst the question of the position of America in the League of Nations was being discussed, one of the Senators called out "That about Ireland?" and a cheer that would have delighted the heart of Washington himself, had he been there to hear, was raised, proving, if nothing else, that a straw does show how the wind blows. It is not impossible, it is not hard, to make of at first a small question an International one, let the interests of the people be an issue and the matter becomes a grave one. The French Revolution sprung (indirectly) from a vulgar Butcher, and the Thirty Years War from a thought. Recent troubles in Ireland prove that the country is not to be undemonstrative in its oppression, and there is no Legislation ever formed that can intimidate a whole people if they fear not even Death in the espousal of a cause. 'Tis a hopeless Law, one that seeks to punish a Nation for a Nation's plea; for it is utterly impossible to down the heart's demand signed by blood and slavery,

G. Knowling, Ltd.

and sacrifice and death. Prime Ministers have ruled and have passed away. Governments have administered their little sway of power, parties and peoples have gone from the arena carrying their honors and their deeds from ken, if History does not give a line or two to mark the epoch in which they lived. But the Irish Question goes on forever. Renewed oppression means renewed rebellion; the people will not submit. That is the quintessence. Today, out of the four counties of Ireland, there are solid Sinn Fein. Munster, Leinster and Connaught are supporting the Sinn Fein movement, and never since the day when Young Ireland stepped into the breach and from the Phoenix-like spirit of the old Agitators formed a new defensive, has there been such a universal and determined force recognized. Let the Government call it the spirit of Rebellion; the act of Treason; open revolt against the Commonwealth; political disturbance, or what it will; there it is, and if it is a truth that "The voice of the people is the voice of God" then the voice of God is heard in Ireland to-day—loud and insistent. Is it known by many of my readers that as the "Wearin' of the Green" was forbidden to be sung in Ireland during the years of from 1798 to 1807, another chant is to-day prohibited by law. This is called "The Soldiers' Song"—a song which the Sinn Fein have made a National air; and which in its meaning has nothing more objectionable in it than is to be found in the French Marseillaise. The words run thus.

"In valley green, on towering crag, Our fathers fought before us; And conquered 'neath the same old flag That's proudly floating o'er us. We're children of a fighting race, And as we march the foe to face We'll chant a Soldier's Song.

Chorus.

Soldiers are we, whose lives are pledged to Ireland, Some have come from the land beyond the wave, Sworn to be free, no more our ancient airland Shall shelter the despot or the slave; To-night we'll man the Barna Weal In Erin's cause, come woe or weal. 'Mid cannons' roar and rifles peal We'll chant a Soldier's Song.

This song is being sung all over Ireland to-day, and if those who chant it are to be incarcerated, then it will be necessary to send over the whole British Constabulary (including Scotland and Wales) to handle the Ministers.

Remembering it all then, one feels like putting the terse question to Mr. John Bull. "What are you going to do about it John? and if figures count for anything, and if hard facts in the synonymy of the Irish situation as it is to-day seeks to amaze (as they assuredly do) then our John in his House of Commons should be very wary, and besides instituting an inquiry regarding the amount and location of Sinn Fein funds, he should feel the "Irish-American" pulse that may not remain normal when the source of the inquiry is found out. Thanking you for space Mr. Editor, I remain very truly,

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

ARE YOU GLAD YOU CHOSE THIS ERA?

"Better fifty years of Europe than a Cycle of Calvary."
 "This is the last night of the old year, the most wonderful year since the birth of Christ."
 That was the opening sentence of one of the New Year letters that came to me.
 It is true, isn't it? And what a tremendous thought! There have been many things in the last few years to disturb and upset and trouble the majority of us. No man (except the utterly selfish, and hardly, he) has been able to live to himself alone. Many of us have known loss and sorrow, and even to those of us who have been supremely fortunate in escaping tragedy, discomfort and change have come. The conditions of turmoil in the world have intruded themselves straight into our private lives and changed our plans and purposes and even our daily habits.
 We have had to eat dark bread, we have had to endure the cruel deprivation of one spoonful of sugar in our coffee, we have had to put three cents on our letters, we have had to get up with one delivery a day from the grocery store that formerly sent its team back for a forgotten meat cake. It has, of course, been a hard year on us.

The Only Other Era Comparable.
 But in the balance is this fact, we have been and are living in the most wonderful time in history with the exception of those thirty-two years during which, if one had been on earth, one might have met the greatest Man.
 I do not refer in this statement solely to the upheaval which has shaken the world to its foundations, though, of course, that is the single colossal fact that signalizes this era, but to all the changes, the ferment, the possibilities of this age.
 What the Man of Forty Has Seen and May See.
 Take a man of woman, say about forty years old, and think what he has seen and is likely to see. He has seen the development of the feminist era. It dawned before his day, but woman's economic development, which makes it commonplace for women to enter any line of endeavor, has taken place within the thirty years. He has seen suffrage changed from a jest to something which even its opponents admit will soon be a universal reality. He has seen tremendous changes in the relations of capital and labor (and what he may see along these lines destiny alone knows.) He has seen the development of the aeroplane from the days when it was a crank's dream, classed with perpetual motion, through the days of the first tentative flight, to-day. And what he will see further in this line in the rest of his lifetime, is one of the things that makes me think life very interesting. He has seen the greatest war in history. And perhaps, who knows,—he has seen the end of war.

One Trap—One Mouse.

Breakfast-time was still a poem to the young couple, when he would sit and beam as she poured out the coffee daintily.

"Darling," she said, when they had finished, "will you do a little business for me in town to-day?"
 He vowed he would do anything.

"I want a mouse-trap," she told him.

"Another, pet?" he asked, in surprise. "Why, I bought you one only the day before yesterday!"
 "I know you did, darling," she cooed; "but there's a mouse in that one!"

Train Stopped by Butterflies.

That insects should be able to stop a train seems, at first, impossible. It has, however, happened in several instances.

Just lately, a train going from Rome to Avezzano, in Italy, was stopped by a dense cloud of locusts, which settled on the wheels and on the rails in swarms. As the train advanced it squashed thousands of them to a pulp, and this made the rails so slippery that the train could not go on.

What is perhaps more extraordinary is that a train should be stopped by worms. This has happened on the Warwick-Killarney line, in Australia. A train suddenly stopped dead, and nothing could be done to re-start it. The wheels slid round, but would not advance. The rails were found to be covered with worms, and, as in the former case, when quashed by the wheels they made the line too slippery for the train to go forward.

This has also been known to happen in Europe, on the line from Brunn to Prague.

In Italy swarms of white butterflies have been known to settle on the railway lines, and so make transit extremely difficult.

Perhaps the most amusing case on record comes from French Guinea, where thousands of little green frogs suddenly took up their abode on a railway track.—Tit-Bits.

The Brotherhood of Man.

"The Universal Brotherhood of God and the Universal of Man," has been a popular phrase for some years. The persistent repetition of the phrase has accomplished some good, although it merely expresses a socialistic dream and has no foundation in fact. It possibly does help to keep an ideal before the people, but it is an ideal which frequently receives some severe shocks. It is true in one sense only, but it is generally applied in the wrong sense. It is quite proper to use the term as applicable only to man as a physical being, but it should always be so qualified.

The use of this popular phrase in a general way suggests a condition which does not, never did, and probably never will exist, at least not in this age. The phrase has no foundation in history, present day conditions, human nature, or Holy Writ. It does suggest a millennial condition which a large section of the human race hopes may some day be realized, but the ideal has no support in actual present day conditions. Before the wonderful dream is realized some great transformation will be necessary.

It is a grave mistake to suggest that "the Universal Brotherhood of God and the brotherhood of man" expresses a Christian doctrine. There is not a sentence in the Bible which conveys the same idea. It is true that God "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth." That is true because all men are "born of the flesh." It is however, stated with equal clearness that all men are not "born of the Spirit."

In a spiritual sense, then, which is the Christian sense, there is no such thing as "the universal brotherhood of man." From a Christian standpoint, Christians only belong to "the family of God," and they alone are brothers spiritually. Strife and war, therefore, does not injure the Christian position, as some people delight to suggest. If all men and women were Christians there would be no war. But they are not. Wars and rumors of war, therefore, instead of weakening the Christian position actually support it, and merely prove that in a spiritual sense, at least, there is no such thing as the "universal brotherhood of man."—The Sentinel.

The Price of Perfidy.

Greece is dealing sternly and promptly with her betrayers. It is true that false "Tino" is out of reach of the law, but the crew of minor traitors who courted his favor are being brought to book one by one. Colonel Metaxas, who surrendered the frontier fortress in Macedonia to the Bulgarians, who appeared before it in 1916 with a supporting detachment of German troops, has been tried, convicted of high treason and sentenced to death.

Another disgraceful affair was the surrender by General Doumanis of the 4th Greek army corps, stationed at Kavala, to the enemy, on the flimsy excuse of seeking protection from the Allies. The Greek soldiers were disarmed and taken to Germany, as if they were a gift from "Dear Tino" to Brother Wilhelm. Now Doumanis, found guilty as a traitor, is sentenced to penal servitude for life. Other members of the former Greek General Staff, convicted of having acted in behalf of German interests during the earlier part of the war, have received sentences commensurate with their disloyalty.

"Tino," the most perfidious villain of all, goes scot free for the present, but he is a man without a country, and execrated by the whole world. His name goes down to history in infamy.—Morning Chronicle.

ABATTOIRS.

At last week's meeting of the City Fathers, an application for the erection of an Abattoir within the municipal limits, met with approval, and the report of the proceedings further states that when the plans are submitted, the project will be discussed with favor. The suggested site for the erection of the building is on Water Street, west of the premises of the Standard Manufacturing Company, which may practically be said to be right in the heart of St. John's. Since the favorable reception of this proposition by the Council, much comment—not preponderantly friendly—has been heard, and there is talk of a protest being made against the establishment of a "slaughter house" so near the dwellings of the people. That apparently is the main objection, and not against the object.

Abattoir comes from the French word abattre, to slaughter, and is used to define a public slaughter house for cattle, sheep, etc. The first abattoirs were established in Paris in 1818. "In the construction of an abattoir," says an encyclopaedic article, "careful consideration must be given to the selection of the site. It must not be near dwelling houses: it should admit of extension; and control should be had, if possible, over any buildings in the immediate neighborhood. It should be easy of access, adjacent to the cattle market, and close to main thoroughfares and railways. A good water supply is most important. The abattoir must include accommodation for lairng, killing, dressing, cooling, inspection of suspected animals and meat, offices and the various buildings for the treatment of the fat, intestines and blood. The slaughter house proper ought to be separate from the rest of the building. The walls and floors should be smooth and impervious, to prevent absorption and to admit of thorough cleaning. The offal is usually removed in trucks or in barges, when near the water, to be used as fertilizer. A public health officer and a veterinary surgeon, acting in conjunction are essential to the administration of a good abattoir."

Capt. Levi Diamond.

A deplorable error crept into the leading article in yesterday's Telegram, when the impression was conveyed that Capt. Levi Diamond, the last of the old school of sealing masters, was no longer with us. The paragraph referring to the masters of the 1870 fleet was originally written: "None of these, we think, are alive to-day, with the exception of Capt. Levi Diamond, the last (but him) of the sealing captains courageous having passed away not so very long ago at a ripe old age," but owing to the omission of a couple of lines of type in the make up, the reading as printed went through. Captain Diamond, we are privileged to state is, notwithstanding his advanced age—he will be 86 next birthday—still able to get about, and takes great interest in all matters which bring back to his memory the days of long ago. That many other years may be added to his life is the wish of all his friends.

Archbishop Sends Message of Sympathy to the Diocese of St. George's.

To Monsignor Sears, Administrator, St. George's: St. John's, March 10.

On the occasion of the obsequies of your lamented and beloved Bishop, permit me to say how much I regret I cannot be present to pay last tribute to the memory of one who was not only a brother in the Episcopate, but also a warm and sincere personal friend. Not alone is the diocese of St. George's in mourning to-day, but the shadow of your Bishop's death falls over the whole Church of Newfoundland. Young, energetic, able, a cultured scholar, a lover of his country, a priestly prelate, his death creates a void it will be difficult to fill in the ecclesiastical and public life of the Colony. On behalf of the priests and people of the Arch-diocese of St. John's, I send heartfelt sympathy to the late Bishop's bereaved Diocese, to his loyal clergy, and his sorrowing people, and I pray that his gentle spirit may rest in eternal peace.
(Signed) E. P. ROCHE,
Archbishop of St. John's.

The following message from the Apostolic Delegation, Ottawa, has been received by His Grace the Archbishop:

"Apostolic Delegation, Ottawa, to the Most Rev. E. P. Roche, D.D., Archbishop of St. John's.—I deeply deplore the death of Bishop Power. Please convey my sincerest sympathy to the Diocese of St. George's."
(Signed) APOSTOLIC DELEGATE."

Gratitude.

The Management of "The Wrong Mr. Wright" feels indeed a debt of gratitude is due to one and all who helped to make the production of that Play such a gigantic success. To the performers a special word of praise is due for despite the many obstacles, not only during the week of the performance, but during rehearsals, all made a desperate effort to come on. Many of those taking part were stricken with the epidemic now in our midst, and were only convalescent at the first night of the show. It was much regretted that Mrs. Herbert Outerbridge could not play, she having given much time and attention to the preparation of the part, which was afterwards so gracefully taken by Mrs. Baxter, who came in at the last moment to save the situation. Congratulations Mrs. Baxter, we were all glad to see you once again on our Theatrical Stage.
To Mr. Kiely, the popular Manager of the Casino, we offer our deepest gratitude for giving the Casino free. Mr. Kiely is indeed the orphan's friend. To Capt. Buller and his Band we once again say, thank you, for what would a great many of our performances be, were it not for the brilliant playing of the ever reliable C.C.C. Band. The Royal Stores in the usual generous way sent a Gramophone for the occasion, and to Mr. P. H. Cowan we are indebted for the water cooler. The pretty programmes so artistically done were the work of Misses McEvoy, Betty McNeil, Margaret and Gertrude Edens and Miss Joan Rendell, and helped in no small way to augment the fund. To the public for their generous attendance, and to all concerned this blessing must assuredly follow "He who does even unto the last of My little ones doeth it unto Me." The Orphans of Mt. Cashel needed funds and they, having asked, their request was granted.—Com.

Mr. J. McIntyre, now at Havana, Cuba, sends us the annexed clipping taken from the Havana Daily Post, of February 20th, the story of Newfoundland's wonderful winter being cabled from Halifax. Most of the startling intelligence contained in this famous despatch will be news indeed. Should the "ice packs be literally black with walrus, seals and other polar creatures," the sealing fleet should not experience any difficulty in loading quickly.
"Halifax, N.S., Feb. 19.—By the A.P.—Arctic ice packs, literally black with walrus, seals and other polar creatures, are the largest within memory, according to reports brought here by sailors and overland travellers. The solid ice extends farther south than at any time within years, with the bays and inlets fringing the Newfoundland coast blocked tightly. Newfoundland is ice-bound and railroads are completely tied up. Inhabitants in the interior are suffering intensely and several deaths from exposure have resulted.
"Reports of a strange malady have been received from Gander Bay, which is without a doctor. The disease is an affection of the throat and has claimed many lives, particularly children."

MINARD'S LIMENT BURNS, Etc.

To All Members
of the G. W. V. A.

COMRADES:

The soldiers who are taking courses at the soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment School in the Synod Hall got up a petition last week, asking that they might be put under the same rules, with the same allowances and bonuses as the Canadian soldiers who are taking courses in Canada receive. It will surprise all ex-sailors and soldiers to know that during 1918 the Canadian S. C. R. paid a number of soldiers who served with the Royal Nfld. Regt., and who were taking courses in Canada, these allowances and bonuses, which soldiers who are taking courses here are entitled to, and are striving to get at the present time.

Last October, Comrade Mitchell, who was then President of the G. W. V. A., took up the question of S.C.R. allowances, pensions, gratuities, etc., with the late Government, requesting that the Nfld. sailors, soldiers and dependents be put on the same footing regarding these allowances as their Canadian comrades, and also that the various scales should date back to the time of the Canadian increases. The late Government guaranteed that they would bring up the allowances, etc., to the same scale as that which Canada had granted. However, as the Government was defeated at the last elections, they were thus unable to fulfill their promise in that direction. Six months have now elapsed, and our veterans have not yet benefited by the aforementioned increases.

Now, what effort have the S. C. R. made in connection with the allowances? It seems to me that the matter has been of little or no interest to them. Every week one can read letters written by ex-sailors and soldiers, complaining of the unfair treatment that has been meted out to them since their discharge. Many of these letters have been written by men who have been incapacitated through war service.

With few exceptions, the Committee of the S.C.R. is composed of ex-soldiers, who are members of the G. W. V. A.—the majority of them are executive members. It seems regrettable that these men are not using their position to better advantage than they are. For to keep down their less fortunate comrades is most deplorable conduct.

For example, take the case of ex-Private Milley, who stated that he would neither get a six months course or employment, and had to sell off his home and go to Canada in order to seek employment, for starvation seemed his ultimate goal in St. John's. And his is not the only case that can be quoted.

It is an authentic fact that soldiers having parents in industrial positions can DEMAND and GET courses and periods at colleges abroad with transportation and allowances. Now these cases are not what one could aptly term "deserving," and compare unfavorably with the cases which appear in the press from week to week. The salary paid to any one member of the S.C.R. Committee for attending a meeting of a few hours' duration, would have paid Pte. Milley's household expenses for a fortnight, and it is much to be regretted that such comparisons exist. I have conversed with men, some of whom are professional, who assured me that they would be honored to serve on the Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment Committee, without remuneration, and would gladly devote part of their spare time to prove their gratitude, and subsequently compensate the men who endured such hardships for them and the community at large.

Unmarried man, $69 a month, with an additional bonus of $60 on completion of course.

Married man, (wife living in same town), $45 per month; wife, $45 per month; children, 1st $10, 2nd $8, 3rd $7, 4th and subsequent, $6 per month.

Married man, (case of soldier who cannot get his course in home town) $63 per month; wife, $48 per month. Allowances for children same as above.

The soldier and his dependents are entitled to aforesaid bonuses if after two months he gets employment and discontinues course for that reason. Comrades of the Great War Veterans' Association, we must stand firm and not let our weaker members suffer. If the Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment Committee do an injustice to any of our members, we have the remedy and should apply it. Let us appoint a committee at the meeting which is being held in a few days' time to investigate all of these charges against that Department.

Yours fraternally,
C. F. GARLAND.

Steam Freighter Bought.

Mr. John G. Stone, who recently purchased a steamer, in Nova Scotia, leaves in a few days for Halifax to bring her down. It is likely that Capt. Wells, who is at present in charge of one of Farquhar & Co. steamers, will take command. The new purchase will be used between St. John's and Canadian ports as a freighter.

To-Day's Messages.

PLAN OF ACTION UNCHANGED.

LONDON, Mar. 10. The Peace Conference spent the day in trying to work out details of military and naval plans in connection with Turkey, giving particular attention to Armenia. Admiral Beatty, Winston Churchill and others were called on to give their opinions. Premier Venizelos of Greece was also present, and again insisted that the Allies should take the sternest measures against the Sultan, but the general plan of action was not changed, however. It became known to-day that the military demonstration at Constantinople is likely to take the form of Allied military control of certain governmental activities, among them being probably the war department.

IMPERIAL TRADE PREFERENCE.

LONDON, Mar. 10. Under Secretary of State Amery in the House of Commons to-day said the question of preference between the West Indies, Canada and the United Kingdom had been under consideration by the West Indian Associated Chambers of Commerce. Jamaica has not so far given any preference to Canada or to the United Kingdom.

TANGLED THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 10. Peace Treaty compromise negotiations entered a period of fevered uncertainty to-day, as the time approached for final Senate action on Article X. Working desperately for an agreement, Senators on both sides of the chamber confounded the plans of their party leaders, and threw the Senate into such a tangle that it tacitly was agreed to delay the vote for several days, in the hope that all elements might be more certain of their ground.

KEPT BACK ASSISTANCE.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11. Indications that the United States Navy Department withheld sending all the available American naval craft to European waters early in the war because of a desire to keep the main body of that nation's strength intact for possible contingencies, were contained in Admiral Sims' testimony to-day before the Senate Committee investigating the naval conduct of the war. Sims read a cablegram from the Navy Department, dated July tenth, nineteen seventeen, containing an outline of the Department's policy, and declaring that "While the successful termination of the present war must always be the first Allied aim, and will probably result in diminished tension throughout the world, the future position of the United States must in no way be jeopardized by the disintegrating of our main fighting fleet." The same cablegram, Admiral Sims said, contained this statement, "The Navy Department announces as its general plan of action following its willingness to send its minor fighting forces in any number, not incompatible with home needs, to any field of action deemed advisable by the Allied Admiralty Council, it is unwilling as a matter of policy to separate any division from the main fleet for service abroad, although it is willing to send the entire battleship fleet abroad to act as a united but co-operating unit when any emergency is deemed to warrant it." With regard to this message and statement of policy, Sims said it was "the first definite statement of policy I had received, arriving a few days over the month after we had declared war."

"The astounding features of this policy were, however, that while it stated our intention to co-operate to the fullest degree, still such co-operation was conditioned, first upon adequate defence of our own waters, and next upon the future position of the United States after the war was finished," said the Admiral. "I am wholly unable to conceive of any war policy practised in a world war of this nature, which was certain to exhaust all of the participants with the possible exception of ourselves, based upon requirements of any possible future war. I am only introducing testimony so far along as nineteen eighteen to bring out the accumulated effect of not having thrown our full weight into the war at the beginning," Admiral Sims said.

YUDENITCH FOR PARIS.

STOCKHOLM, Mar. 10. (Havas)—General Yudenitch, former commander of the Russian North-west Army, arrived here yesterday on board a torpedo boat. He is on his way to Paris.

CUSTOMS GUARD SHOTS SMUGGLER.

NEW YORK, Mar. 10. A negro, believed to be carrying shore liquor from the steamer Morro Castle, recently arrived from Havana, was shot and slightly wounded by a customs guard on the waterfront last night. This is the first shooting in a series of disturbances over liquor smuggling.

ALL ROOBERSHINE.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Mar. 10. End Hadasy of Girard, Ohio, was robbed and murdered of three thousand dollars in a taxi cab near here Tuesday night. The driver of the taxi declared that Hadasy was out in search of moonshine whiskey, with two strangers who had volunteered to act as guides.

AERIAL MAIL FATALITY.

ELKHART, Ind., Mar. 10. Lieut. Clayton Stoner of Chicago,

Government plane mail carrier, was burned to death in his airplane, when it fell near New Paris, Ind., yesterday.

INVOLVED. COPENHAGEN, Mar. 11. Whether joining the League of Nations is synonymous with the duty of opening up a standing army to be placed at the disposal of the League, to enforce the League's decisions, has been for a long time a burning question in Denmark and Norway. The Democratic majority against protests of the Conservatives in both countries, read the Treaty as giving members of the League full right to abolish its army and navy. Lord Robert Cecil, British representative of the League, in reply to an inquiry by the President of the Norwegian Storting, says: "I have no doubt that your reading of Article Eight of the Treaty is right. Undoubtedly it was never meant to put on any member of the League the burden and duty to keep up military forces."

Had to Hobble.

That clever actress, Miss Stella Campbell, set the whole company laughing at a recent rehearsal at Arms and the Man over a story she told concerning a small boy who arrived at school half an hour late.

The master (said Miss Campbell) asked the reason. "It's my boots," said the youngster, hobbling towards the master's desk. "They're new 'uns."

"How on earth can a new pair of boots make you late?" objected the master, eyeing the small boy astutely.

"Well, you see, sir, mother forgot to cut the string."

Trees Which Hate Each Other.

Trees, says a well-known naturalist, are very like human beings. They have their sympathies and aversions. Most of them like company, and grow better in clumps, but many are very particular about the company they keep. When they have what they like they flourish. When they have un congenial neighbours they are stunted and often die. If you keep your eyes open when walking in the country, you will see for yourself that these remarks are perfectly true. Observe a solitary tree standing alone in an open meadow. It is rarely so fine in size or shape as one which grows in a wood. At first sight this seems curious, for one would naturally imagine that a tree which had an unlimited supply of soil and air and light would have a better chance of prospering than another which had to share these necessities with its neighbours.

The real truth of the matter is that a young tree must be protected from the wind. If it is not it gets a set back from which it never recovers. But it does not pay to plant a young tree near to one which is already in full growth, and especially is this the case if the older tree be a pine or a Scotch fir. The pine will simply push its roots out and absolutely strangle its younger companion.

Almost all evergreens exercise an evil effect upon the so-called deciduous tree the ones that lose their leaves in winter. The worst of the whole lot is the yew. No other plant or shrub can keep up the struggle for existence beneath the black shadow of a yew tree. Even grass and weeds will not grow in such a place.

London Bridge's Predecessor.

Probably few of the millions who pass over London Bridge know much of the romantic story of its predecessor, which spanned the Thames for six centuries and a half, with its long street of houses and shops. This was the bridge that was a familiar spectacle to every Londoner and to every "county cousin" from the days of Henry II. before Magna Charta was yet thought of, to the days of people still living. Three times the bridge was in danger of being destroyed by fire—once in its infancy in 1212, again when the Great Fire laid London low, and lastly, seventeen years later, in 1583.

This old bridge had witnessed many strange happenings; but one of the oddest, and certainly the most romantic of them all, was when it served as a tilting-ground for two doughty knights of the fourteenth century. John de Wells, a valiant knight, who was Ambassador to Scotland, had boasted that there was no such cavalier north of the Tweed as the south coast produce, and David Lindsay, Earl of Crawford, had picked up the gauntlet the Englishman had thus thrown down. The duel was arranged for St. George's Day, 1390, and the scene of it was to be —of all places in the world—London Bridge.

On the day appointed the two gallant champions, John de Wells and David Lindsay, each clad in mail, took up his position.

At the first onslaught the knights met in the centre of the bridge with a terrific; but, although their lances were splintered like matchwood, each remained immovable in his saddle.

A second course had a like result, so sturdy and so equally matched were the antagonists; but in the third course the assault of the Scottish knight was so irresistible that De Wells was felled senseless to the ground.

Such was one out of hundreds of the strange sights old London Bridge had looked on before, in 1392, it vanished altogether from a city in which it was evident it had "jagged superfluous."

No Easy Job.

Mr. H. W. Forster, up till recently Financial Secretary to the War Office, and whose services have now been rewarded with a peerage, has a good fund of electioneering stories.

One that he is fond of relating concerns a certain Labour candidate—who, by the way, was unsuccessful—at a bye-election, who was making an impassioned appeal for the support of the electors.

"Fellow-workers," he said, "I'm a horny-handed son of toil, and not ashamed of it either. I'm a brick-layer, and here's my tools to prove it."

Here he produced with undignified emotion a trowel and a hammer, and the applause was thunderous.

"Pass 'em this way," cried a sympathiser. And the tools were accordingly passed.

"Those are the very tools, sir, with which I carved my way to prosperity," reiterated the candidate, "and I trust, now that your curiosity is satisfied, I may count on your support."

"That you may," was the enthusiastic response. "Anyone as could lay bricks with a gardener's trowel and carpenter's hammer deserves every one's support! There ain't no way as could do it."

War Secrets May Never be Known.

Who Betrayed Kitchener? -- Who Was the British Agent, Princess--?

By John Light in The Star Weekly.

Practically every phase of the late war has been written and re-written over and over again, but in spite of the apparently limitless reams of war literature, very little important war news, beyond the official war communiqués, was allowed to pass the censor, who, seated at his desk at the United Service Institution in Whitehall, appeared to spend his time inventing methods of keeping the British people from knowing too much about the inner workings of that mighty machine that was gradually bringing the enemy to his knees. A mysterious veil of secrecy hung over the portals of Whitehall and even to this day there are within the pigeon holes of New Scotland Yard Intelligence Branch secret papers, which, if brought to the light of day, would open the eyes of many people who have read everything they could lay their hands on in connection with the war.

There must be many people who, in discussing the late war, ask if ever these secrets will be revealed. For instance, will the finding of the Hampshire enquiry ever be published and the mystery of the death of Kitchener be solved. In connection with the tragic death of that "organizer of victory" blame has been attached by many to the British Government, but those who are cognizant of the facts can never divulge them, for they have already paid the penalty for their treachery and they lived many miles from England. Again, will the identity of that remarkable woman, Princess P—who throughout the war lived in Berlin and did valuable work for the cause of the allies, ever be known? Instances such as these could be multiplied many times, but although the war is gradually passing into history it is doubtful if the public will ever know "the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

During the period of hostilities it was necessary to maintain this rule of secrecy in order that no information might trickle through the different channels of communication to the lines of the enemy. As most people are aware, during the war England was honey-combed with secret service agents, spies—many of them employed in Government offices under the very eyes of important officials who held the secrets of the State. The walls of the Tower of London are splashed with the blood of German agents and a few British traitors, though the names of only a few who paid the penalty for their daring have been given to the public.

Combating German Propaganda.

The following story is told of the death of the most brilliant and successful agent of Germany, who was shot in that gloomy castle on the banks of the Thames. As he was being led out to face the firing squad he passed Lord Athlumney, Provost-Marshal for the London district, whose duty it was to attend each execution, remarking as he did so: "I suppose you would not shake hands with a German spy?" "No," replied the P.M., as he extended his hand, "I will not shake hands with a German spy, but I will shake hands with a brave man." Hundreds of his kind suffered the same fate during the first two years of the war.

While it was necessary for the British authorities to keep silence when the publication of certain information would be of assistance to the enemy, it became evident that while the Germans were making every effort to defeat the allies on the battlefield, they were also spending enormous sums of money on propaganda in an attempt to defeat the allies in a moral sense and at the same time to impress upon the neutral countries, and specially the United States, that the aims of the Germanic alliance were the most unselfish and honorable and that Germany was fighting solely a war of defence. Then it became necessary for the British Government to break down the walls of mystery and silence. And Mr. Lloyd George instituted the Ministry of Information and placed at its head a Canadian, Lord Beaverbrook.

The allies ever since the commencement of the war possessed the entire control of the cables of the world. Not a line of German propaganda could ever cross the ocean by means of the cable, but the Huns had a powerful wireless system which could reach the Scandinavian countries, Russia, Holland, and other countries. Often German "news" was transmitted through their wireless stations to such vessels that might have eluded the British Navy, but there were only a few cases of this kind, as the German ships did not live long to be of any real value.

Publishing the Truth.

The work that the Propaganda Department of the British Government in liaison with similar departments in the allied countries, performed during the last two years of the war has never been properly known or understood by the people of the British Empire. The bullets and the guns destroyed the bodies of the enemy, but propaganda destroyed their spirits.

In order that every phase of the British endeavor might be brought to the Ministry played a varied part and was divided into numerous branches. Also the best brains were employed. Among those who gave their services were: Arnold Bennett, E. Phillips, Oppenheim, Major Belth (Ian Hay), Sir Anthony Hewlins (Anthony Hope), Hugh Walpole, Sir Hall Cain, E. Temple Thurston, Sir H. Newbolt, Lord Northcliffe, Ben Tillet, Rudyard Kipling, Louis Raemakers, and many others whose names are known throughout the world. A special section was devoted to making known in every country the remarkable progress and expansion made in British industries, especially those captured from the Germans, such as dyes, synthetic drugs, etc.

It is impossible in so short a space to describe the multitudinous duties and varied scope of the British Propaganda Department. It played a remarkable part in opening the eyes of neutral nations, it showed the peoples of the enemy countries that their cause must end in ultimate failure. It spread the prestige of the British arms through the world. It drew nearer together the allied countries and did much to bring the United States on the side of the allies. It nailed on the head the liars in the Wilhelmstrasse. It so worried the German high command that any German soldier found with a British propaganda leaflet in his possession was shot at sight, it depressed the spirits of the German people and raised the spirits of the British nation. In short, it did much to bring about victory to the allied arms.

A Foundling Becomes a King's Favorite.

To become the favorite of a King of England at first sight and during the singing of just one song, was the golden fortune of pretty Moll Davis. One day she was an unknown actress; the next morning she was the idol of London, and the King was out buying dazzling jewels for her, and making inquiries through his emissaries into the personality and abode of the singer who had captured his heart. It is recorded that Moll was found on the doorstep of the village smithy of Charlton on March 10, 1850, and was adopted by the smith. How she found her way to London is not exactly known. It is thought, however, that a stranger passing through the village and hearing Molly's sweet voice, lured her to London, and obtained an engagement for her on the stage. One thing is certain, Moll was a beautiful girl from Wiltshire when she burst upon London, and in a very few years found herself enjoying the intimate friendship of her King, with the entire town at her feet. The turn of Fortune's wheel came when she danced a jig and introduced a new song in a play adapted from Beaumont and Fletcher. This song made Moll Davis a favorite and Nell Gwynne jealous. The King was in the house, and was enthralled. Before the merry monarch left the theatre he had sent for Moll and given her substantial and unmistakable tokens of his favor, and later she went to Whitehall, and enjoyed the inmost confidence of his Majesty. Soon Moll came into contact with the King's old favorite, the Countess of Castlemaine, and the latter did all she could to bring disfavor on the beautiful actress. But Moll flouted her hand in the lady's face, displaying the £700 ring which the King had given to her. Soon afterwards there was a brilliant Court entertainment arranged, at which Moll was to sing and dance. The Countess thought her turn had come. As Moll began to sing before the Royal and courtly audience there was a profound rustling of silks. The Countess, with great ostentation, had arisen, and with much-to-do walked out of the room. The King merely laughed, and to show that the act of the Countess had not made any impression upon him a fashionable house in Haymarket was "decorated, furnished, and completed by the order of the King" for Moll, so that she would not be at so great a distance from the Court.

M. P.'s With Claws.

The recent debate in Parliament with regard to placing a small statue of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain in the Lobby of the House of Commons at the expense of the nation reminds one that in many parts of the country there are queer stone emblems of well-known statesmen.

On the roof of Chester Cathedral, for instance, one of the ornamental water gutters consists of an effigy of Mr. Gladstone in the act of delivering one of his wonderful speeches.

On St. Giles' Church, Camberwell, there appears a gargoye of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain which certainly does not flatter him, and is very unlike the figure which will be erected in the House of Commons. Mr. Chamberlain, who was a native of Camberwell, is represented as a human-headed griffin, with claws on his feet. What makes the figure look all the more extraordinary is that it has the famous glass monocle of the well-known statesman in its eye!

On this church there are a number of gargoyes besides that of Mr. Chamberlain. There is one of Lord Salisbury, also represented as a griffin, on one side of him, and on the other is Mr. Balfour.

The bottle with a message thrown into the sea by Mr. Hawker off Cape Race, and just come to shore off Stavanger, has accomplished a voyage of 1,900 miles in six months, but is far from breaking the record in long-distance drifting, which still belongs to a bottle thrown into the sea off the Dorset (G.B.) coast in August, 1913, and picked up off New Zealand 11 months later. Another bottle, 1913, was washed up on the beach near Port Phillip, Australia, after thrown adrift in the Atlantic in April, travelling over 7,000 miles in five months. Capt. Simpson, who experimented with floating bottles for many years, found that about 10 per cent. of those he set adrift came to shore, some of them only after voyaging 10,000 miles or more.

Boom Days on the Wane.

Unless all signs fail, the high cost of living is on the wane, the seemingly impossible being brought about by the closing of the European markets to Canadian and American goods. The exchange situation is, of course, the prime factor in these pending readjustments. From all points where produce and other North American products accumulate for export, come stories of warehouses being blocked with goods for which there is no export demand. It is well known that packing houses are filled from cellar to roof, with products bought at high figures, and which cannot be sold in Europe in the present state of the money market.

If the foreign situation holds, and there is no apparent reason to believe that the finances of the various European nations are on the up-grade, or are likely to be for a long period to come, restricted sales of our products abroad will continue. Such being the case, we will, to all intents and purposes, be called upon to consume the products of our own industry. In this event, it will not be long before there is a large surplus, and this situation will, in the natural course of events, bring down prices.

Once the high cost of living problem is surmounted, other changes will come in due course. First of all, there will not be a legitimate demand for higher wages. Of course, these demands will still be made, but their legitimacy, once questioned by the barometer of falling prices, such demands must cease.

These changes cannot, of course, come about without a slowing down of industry. When packing plants can no longer ship freely their products to Europe as they have been doing in huge dimensions for some years now, there will be not only a curtailment in buying their raw materials from the stock raiser and the farmer, but also in employment in their plants. Manufacturing concerns that have also been busy on European orders will, under present monetary conditions, find a large percentage of their markets cut out from under them, and will naturally seek the home trade at perhaps materially lower prices. This, again, will have a tendency to slow down industry. In other words, there is every reason to believe that our "boom" days are on the wane, and that sooner or later we will get back to earth, and something approximating our pre-war period.—Toronto Saturday Night.

First Volunteer for Leap to Mars.

CAPT CLAUDE COLLINS OF PHILADELPHIA OFFERS HIMSELF TO BE PASSENGER IN ROCKET.

(New York Times.)

In order to aid science and to arouse the people of the nation to act to make America the peer of other nations in the air, I make the following proposal in full seriousness and stand ready to carry out its stipulation at any time. I am connected with no commercial concern, and am not making this proposal for monetary gains.

Believing the plans of a noted scientist to send a super-rocket from the earth to Mars, in the body of which a person would be stationed, can be developed into a reality, I hereby volunteer to attempt this inter-planet leap and offer to do so, gratis, in an endeavor to realize these aims of science and to successfully alight on the neighbor-world, providing the following stipulations are carried out and to reciprocate for the danger entailed, I am first enabled to make a tour of the nation by air to appeal directly to the people in an endeavor to awaken America to the menace we face in the air and to bring some action which may result in placing the United States on a par with other nations aeronautically, before possibly terminating my earth existence.

It shall be agreed that:

1. I be permitted to assist in planning the construction of the rocket and the details of the venture.

2. Communication, either by radio, light or other means shall be definitely established with Mars and a rocket similar to that which I am to make the leap, be constructed and successful planet previous to my start.

3. A board of ten prominent scientists shall agree to the practicability of the completed rocket and possible success of the same in reaching the planet with me safely.

4. Ten days before the scheduled start of the leap insurance to the amount of $10,000 shall be taken out for me in favor of my heirs, with the understanding and consummation of a further agreement be held responsible for anything which may happen to me under any circumstances.

5. Representatives of the press of New York City in co-operation with the Aircraft Manufacturers; L. L. Driggs, President of the American Flying Club; Jefferson de M. Thompson, President of the Aero Club of America; the scientist who shall make the rocket, as well as any other persons desired by the aforementioned, head of the institutions he represents, shall supervise all plans and arrangements for the proposed leap and equipment; they shall also back up and assist me in compiling addresses and successfully completing the tour of the nation and visits to all large American cities with the understanding that the airplane be furnished by the aircraft manufacturers and my expenses be covered in the usual lecture method to be later agreed upon.

This agreement shall become valid on the date signed by the first of those parties named and expire six months after that time, date of expiration being not later than Dec. 31, 1920.

Under no circumstances shall I fall to make the leap after the above stipulations have been complied with during the life of this agreement, unless with the approval of those who have become party to it.

(Signed)
CAPTAIN CLAUDE R. COLLINS,
New York City Air Police,
President Airators' Club of Pennsylvania;
Organizer Philadelphia Air Force;
International Licensed Airplane Pilot.

The Smithsonian Institution announced on January 11 that Professor Robert H. Goddard of Clark College had invented and tested a new type of multiple-charge, high efficiency rocket of entirely new design for exploring the unknown regions of the upper air and that the claim was made for the rocket that it might even be possible to send it to the moon. The announcement stressed the scientific possibilities of the device through sending recording apparatus to moderate and extreme altitudes within the earth's atmosphere, but nothing was said at the time about reaching Mars. The announcement provoked much scientific and pseudo scientific discussion of the possibilities of reaching another planet in some such fashion.

Laurence L. Driggs, President of the American Flying Club, to whom reference is made in Captain Collins's dispatch, said last night that he was personally acquainted with Capt. Collins, and knows that he had organized a club of Philadelphia flying men. Captain Collins, he said, was 23 or 24 years old, was a newspaper man before the war and was now engaged in writing a weekly column for a Philadelphia newspaper. Mr. Driggs described him as a great enthusiast with regard to flying. He was trained at Ellington Field. Mr. Driggs said, but was not sent overseas in the Air Service.

To haul logs through the deep snow in the great pine forests of Northern Arizona one big lumber concern has just put to work two whipper tanks, bought from the War Department, each tank displacing 30 horses and 14 men.

An Appeal.

The Nation's Fund for Nurses.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—The Nation's Fund for Nurses aims at endowing the College of Nursing, at which over 18,000 Nurses are registered, and creating a benevolent fund for the relief of Nurses in old age, sickness or unavoidable pecuniary trouble.

There are, I feel sure, numbers of officers and men, who during the War at some time or other had occasion to be grateful to one of the many thousands of voluntary Nurses who came forward to succour the sick and wounded.

Many of these Nurses have as a result of their service, lost their health, and means of livelihood, they received practically no pay, pension or gratuity, and are in very distressed circumstances.

Also there are doubtless many parents and relatives who will welcome an opportunity of showing their gratitude to those who cared for, and nursed their sons and brothers.

The part that the Nurses have played in the Great War is worthy of the deepest appreciation. They have done splendidly, and are worthy of a Nation's heartfelt gratitude, and I appeal to the citizens of St. John's to show their gratitude in a practical form.

I would add that the Fund has the cordial support and approval of Field Marshal Earl Haig, Lord Burnham, General Smuts, and numerous other distinguished Sailors, Soldiers and Statesmen.

Subscriptions should be forwarded to Lieut. Commander C. D. Fenn, H.M.S. "Briton," where they will be gratefully received and acknowledged.

Yours faithfully,

C. D. FENN,
Lieut. Commander, R.N.,
Senior Naval Officer.

March 9th, 1920.

What is a Billion?

In Great Britain and Germany a billion is a million millions (1,000,000,000,000). In Canada and the United States the French billion is used—one thousand millions (1,000,000,000). The French "million" and "billion" are of equal value. In France and America, the English billion is called a trillion, the English trillion a quadrillion, and the English quadrillion a nonillion, as shown by the following table, the first column of which gives the number of noughts that follow the figure "1", when the amounts are given in figures:

French.	English.
6 Million	Million
9 Billion	Thousand Million
12 Trillion	Billion
15 Quadrillion	Thousand Billion
18 Quintillion	Trillion
21 Sextillion	Thousand Trillion
24 Septillion	Quadrillion
27 Octillion	Thousand Quadrillion
30 Nonillion	Quintillion
33 Decillion	Thousand Quintillion

You will observe that in the French system each denomination is a thousand times the preceding one, while in the English system, the trillion is a million times a billion, a quadrillion a million times a trillion, etc. Hence the English quintillion is a million million times as much as the French quintillion.

Boycott the Hearst Newspapers.

The re-admission to Canada of the newspapers published by William Randolph Hearst is perhaps one of the inevitable consequences of Peace. The powers which the Government of Canada possesses under Pacific conditions to exclude publications which legally circulate in the United States have yet to be determined. No doubt the authorities would be loath to give Hearst the much desired advertisement of making him an international question, and would be equally loath to create a precedent which might be used for the suppression of newspapers in future. But though the problem is a delicate one for the Government it should present no difficulties to the Canadian public. The remedy is a boycott.

The principle of the boycott is ordinarily abhorrent to fair-minded men, but in this case it is a legitimate weapon to protect the public from a criminal infection. No reputable journalist or publisher on the continent of North America could be found who would argue that the Hearst newspapers have any virtues whatsoever. Their news is false, their policies corrupt and mischievous. They have been criminal, root and branch, from their very inception. The principles on which they are conducted violate every decent precept on which human existence is founded. Hearst has not only persistently degraded a respectable and useful calling; he has been a gangrene in the public life of his own country—the caterpillar on the leaf of journalism and politics. At present he is engaged in a conspiracy to promote a war between the United States and Great Britain, which has for its ulterior object the devastation of Canadian cities and the forcible annexation of this country. He hopes to accomplish this not merely by inflaming the United States against us as part of the British Empire, but conversely by inflaming the Canadian people against Americans. A boycott of his newspapers by the Canadian people would meet with the cordial sympathy of millions of decent Americans who would like to see the same processes set in motion in their own country.

The boycott should take the form of a refusal to deal with any news agency, news stand, shop-keeper or newspaper who sells Hearst publications. Notice should also be served on the great railway corporations of Canada that the sale of Hearst newspapers on trains will not be tolerated. This is a matter in which organizations like the Great War Veterans, the various national and patriotic societies, and the many feminine coteries like the Daughters of the Empire and the W.C.T.U. can effectively organize sentiment in their local centres. There should be no place for publications that are infamous to the core on Canadian soil.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Mainly About People.

The singer of the hour in London is Mme. Tetrazzini, who was described by one critic after her recent appearance in London as the "Marie Corelli of music." She believes in silence before her big concerts, and usually spends some days before singing without opening her lips excepting when absolutely necessary. A cynic suggested that if this practice were more common among prima donnas, many husbands would urge their wives to take up singing as a profession. Mme. Tetrazzini has received her share of gifts from unknown admirers. Perhaps the most amusing was a pair of woollen wrist cuffs. But this particular admirer did not remain anonymous. A few days later he sent a bill for $25.

After a romantic career, which began by his running away from school at an early age, Captain W. Turner, commander of the Lusitania, has recently retired from the Cunard line. The son of a well known Liverpool sea-going man, he has always had a passion for the sea, and found school life too dull. So, at the age of 13, young Turner vanished from his companions and when next heard of was engaged on a ship making a voyage round the world which would take about eighteen months to perform. On his arrival in Liverpool, more than two years later his father immediately sent him back to school. But after two months the lad had run away and signed on an ocean-going sailing ship. Adventure seems to have followed close on the heels of this grand old man of the sea, and he was in command of the famous Lusitania when she was torpedoed by a Hun submarine. Nothing less than a miracle saved him from the surging waves as the ship went to the bottom. Later he was in command of the old Ivernia, which was then commissioned as a troopship. Her sides were laid open by a German torpedo and she sank with 150 soldiers aboard. In this case the captain went down with his ship, but was thrown up again by the swirling waters and rescued by one of the crowded boats.

Loss of the President

March 11, 1841, the mail steamer "President" left New York for Liverpool and was never seen or heard of. She was a fine new boat, one of the best and biggest then afloat, and carried a full complement of passengers. Tremendous excitement was felt in England by her non-arrival. The theory was that she had been broken down, and had been carried northward into the Arctic region. Warships were dispatched to search for her in Davis Strait, and the coast of Labrador, but no trace of her was found. Meanwhile excitement increased, as week after week passed by, and still no news. Beacon fires were laid ready to light up the sky as soon as the "President's" whereabouts became known, if ever it did. Victoria, moving from Buckingham Palace to Windsor, left instructions that special messengers were to be kept in waiting at the former place both by night and day, so that news might be immediately conveyed to her. A cruel practical joke was played by a well-dressed man who was a cabin man in the Strand, and who had a sovereign and a letter, which he said contained news of the arrival of the "President," bade him to go with it at top speed to the office of the shipping company in the Strand. The man galloped his horse to his destination, shouting out good news right and left as he went. He spread like fire, till all London knew. The judges adjourned court, and coming their robes into the streets to try and catch the latest news. Even the House of Commons suspended its sitting, and members fell about and cheering. Scores of bottles were picked up containing alleged messages from survivors. According to the circumstantial account, the messengers and crew were drifting on the ice, and subsisting on shark's fins. As a matter of fact, however, no trace of the wreck ever belonging to the "President" was ever found, and the mystery of her disappearance remained a mystery.

The Bayard of India.

James Outram, who died, aged 71, at Pau, in the South of France, March 11, 1863, was one of the distinguished officers of that old India Company's army, which had to exist after the Indian Empire sprang from middle-class hands. He had made his way to the top without patronage and without help, and had won an enviable reputation not only for conspicuous courage, but also for exceptional character. The most outstanding example of his latter quality was given when he was chosen to command the force which Havelock had made the attempt to relieve Lucknow, and he tried to leave the honour of accomplishing the task to the veteran who had wrought so well to achieve it. He accompanied the force in his capacity as Chief Commissioner. But this act of self-denial wholly in keeping with his character. No man ever was more free from the taint of self-seeking; and his nobly ambitious, he made the guiding star of his career. Charles Napier had called him "The Bayard of India" before a controversy arose between them in connection with the treatment of the dethroned ruler of Scinde; and the name was recognized as familiar with Outram's Indian friends. A very perfect knight as he was, without "feet" and without reproach. All his life was devoted to the service of his country, when covered with honour, he had finally to England, his days numbered. A visit to Egypt did not restore him, and in the year of 1862-3 he went to Pau in hope of gaining greater benefit. That hope was vain, and on March 11, 1863, he died. His death was mortal of him found a fitting place in Westminster Abbey.

Odd and Interesting.

The piano movers with block and tackle were required Friday to lower into the coffin the body of Mrs. Merola from the window of her home, Newark, N.J., to the sidewalk. She weighed 305 pounds. The movers were also engaged by undertaker to bear the coffin to the grave at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery. The coffin was 26 inches wide, 34 inches deep and 75 inches long. Mrs. Merola was 43 years old. She is survived by five children, and her husband weighs 200 pounds.

Harrow, G. B., parish church could be seen until recently an unadorned grave-board, which has fortunately been lost," says the Morning Post. "It used to stand under the limes at the east end of the church-yard. The verse inscribed on it to the memory of Isaac Green, who was a churchwarden, had been attributed to Byron."

These green trees, rising to the skies, lighter than them, Isaac Green trees, they shall come when these green trees shall fall, Isaac Green trees rise above them all."
