CHAPTER IX.

Decima looked from side to side, then raised her eyes to his face. "It sounds nonsense," she said. "But—but, yes! I will help you. But you will not need me."

He was silent a moment, then he said, very quietly: "I think—I am sure—I shall need you; and I will come and ask your father to permit you to render me your help."

The clock in the turret struck the hour hoarsely, and Bobby, who had been studying a fishing group with keen interest, started.

"I say, Decie, we shall have to make a rush for it, if we are to be home in time for dinner."

"I will order a carriage," said Gaunt; then he laughed grimly. "I forgot. There is no carriage. Put there shall be the next time you come, Miss Deane."

They went down-stairs to the door, and Decima held out her hand. "Am I forgiven?" he said, as he took it in his; and his eyes sought hers gravely.

"Yes, quite!" she said, frankly. "Good-bye, and thank you for showing us the house."

He did not utter the conventional response of "Thank you for coming," but as he shook hands with Bobby, said:

"I hope we shall see a great deal of each other, Deane."

As the two went quickly down the steps, he stood at the open door and looked after them. Then, when they had disappeared in the avenue, he turned back into the hall and stood gazing round him absently, a strange look on his face. All the brightness which had now and again flashed over it disappeared, and his eyes and brows were gloomy.

Mr. Bright stood a little apart and watched him with the intendment of devoted affection.

"This is a happy day for Leafmore, Lord Gaunt," he began presently. Gaunt started slightly, raised his head, and looked at him as if he had forgotten his presence.

"Oh, I beg your pardon, Bright!" he said. "Come into the library."

"My Back Is So Bad"

PAINS in the small of the back, lumbago, rheumatism, pains in the limbs all tell of defective kidneys.

Poisons are being left in the blood which cause pains and aches. The kidneys, liver and bowels must be aroused to action by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

There is no time for delay when the kidneys go wrong, for such developments as hardening of the arteries and Bright's disease are the natural result.

Decima and Bobby hurried on. "We shall be late," he said; "and that will give cook an excuse for treating our internal economy with cold glances. I'll get my rod; and you hurry on and dig the governor out of his den. I say, what an afternoon of surprises! Fancy that being Lord Gaunt himself! What a splendid fellow he is! Not a bit like what I pictured him. I don't wonder at Bright's enthusiasm. What did you think of him?"

"I—I don't know," said Decima. She could not bring herself, at that moment, to tell Bobby of her previous meeting with Lord Gaunt.

Bobby sniffed contemptuously. "That's so like a girl. You don't know. I suppose you'd think any amount of him if he were a pretty young man with curly hair and the rest of it. Now, I call him a splendid specimen; a man! Do you understand? And awfully kind, too. Made us free of the house, by George! It's a rare piece of luck for us, his deciding to settle down here. It won't be my fault if we don't see a good deal of him. Here's my rod; now, you cut off as fast as you can, while I pack up; you know your way."

Decima hurried on. The meeting with Lord Gaunt and its dramatic incidents confused and bewildered her. She could scarcely ask herself if she had acted rightly in being so—so friendly with him. Why had she gone so far as to consent to help him? What would Aunt Pauline say if she knew of it? But she had tried to cut him, had actually cut him; and then he had pleaded his case so well—was it so artfully?—and—She put her hand to her brow, and pushed the soft brown hair from it with a gesture of perplexity and helplessness, and resolved to think no more of him until she could do so quietly in her own room at bedtime.

She reached The Woodbines, and pushed open the door of the laboratory. As she did so, she was surprised to hear her father's voice. He was talking rapidly, and in the excited tones which she had already learned to know.

She shaded her eyes—for the sunlight poured in after her and dazzled her—and the first thing she saw was Mr. Theodore Marshon. He was seated on the carpenter's bench, his small, dapper form bent rather grotesquely, his feet resting on a stool, one hand nursing his chin, the other holding a big cigar, the fumes of which filled the room and made her choke.

His attitude, and not only his attitude, but the expression of his small eyes as they rested on her father, reminded her, in the flash of a moment, of one of the monkeys at the Zoo.

Her father was pacing up and down the room, a model in his hand, his hair all ruffled over his head, and he was talking in the excited, rhapsodical fashion in which he had talked to her on the previous night.

"There is a large, an enormous fortune in this idea, for it is a great—and, above all, an original idea. My dear sir, I assure you—and I know what I am saying—that there is wealth beyond the dreams of avarice in this invention of mine. What is this?"

"Father," said Decima, as he stared at her vacantly, "it is I—Decima!"

Mr. Marshon got off the bench and removed his hat, which he had worn tilted at the back of his head.

"How do you do, Miss Deane?" he said, and a faint flush stained his face. "I have taken the pleasure of calling on Mr. Deane, and he has been explaining—"

"Yes—yes!" broke in Mr. Deane. "Very kind of Mr.—Mr.—" he hesitated for a moment—"Mr. Curzon."

"Marshon," suggested the owner of the name.

"Pardon, Marshon. A gentleman of great intelligence, my dear Decima. I have been telling him of my new invention—concentrated electricity."

"A great invention, Miss Deane," said Marshon. "I think very highly of it. In my humble opinion, there's money in it—a lot of money."

Mr. Deane wagged his head with proud satisfaction.

"A gentleman of great experience and intelligence, my dear Decima."

"I am glad," said Decima, looking from one to the other with slightly drawn brows.

Mr. Theodore Marshon's eyes dwelt on her face. "Of course I haven't heard the whole of it," he said. "But your father is going to explain and bring the drawings when you come to dine with me on Tuesday, Miss Deane."

The troubled look grew more distinct on Decima's face. "Are we—are we going, father?" she said.

"Yes, yes! Why not?" said Mr. Deane testily. "Mr. Marshon is much interested in the idea—are you not, Mr. Curzon?"

"Very much," said that gentleman; and his small eyes devoured the girl's face. "Awfully; I'll cut off now, sir. I shall expect you on Tuesday, Miss Deane."

He held out his hand, and it closed over Decima's with a pressure which made something within her rise with resentment.

She said nothing, not even "good-bye;" but, after he had gone, stood with downcast eyes as her father, pushing his hand through his tangled hair, and pacing to and fro, muttered: "A very sensible, intelligent young man! He understood me. And he is rich. He can help me—can help all of us! With his money and my brains—Eh? What did you say, Decima? Dinner! Already?"

And, with a reluctant sigh, he suffered Decima to lead him out of the room.

CHAPTER X.

Decima slept soundly that night. Why should she not? for as yet love had not come to trouble her. But she dreamed, and in her dreams Lord Gaunt and Theodore Marshon were inextricably mixed; their voices, the one deep and musical, the other sharp and metallic, clashed together; and once she started uneasily, as if she felt Mr. Marshon's thin, claw-like fingers imprisoning hers.

At breakfast Bobby was full of Lord Gaunt's sudden decision to live amongst them, and Decima listened almost in silence. Mr. Deane displayed little or no interest, as he absently ate what was put before him, and shuffled off to his laboratory.

"I'm going down to the village, Bobby," said Decima, "to make my first essay in housekeeping. What shop do I go to?"

Bobby grinned. "What shop, you simple infant? There is only one shop—Mrs. Topper's. It sells everything—excepting what you want; but Mrs. Topper will offer to get it for you, say, in a month. There is nothing she will not promise to get you, from a needle to—a to a needle-gun. Go and make her acquaintance. She'll be glad to see you, for you'll be something fresh to talk to."

"Conversation Topper," we call her, for she's got a jaw that would fit a medium-sized crocodile. She never leaves off when once she begins, and you'll find you'll have to make a bolt for it. I always edge toward the door and shoot off in the middle of one of her sentences, and she follows me and shouts it down the street. You'll like Mrs. Topper. But, say, what's this about dining with that fellow Marshon? The governor tells me he has accepted for Tuesday."

"Yes," said Decima, reluctantly, "she put on her hat. 'We shall have to go, Bobby, I am afraid.' Bobby shrugged his shoulders. 'Any one can get over the governor. He'd dine with the de—' 'Bobby!'"

"Just you wait till I've finished. The deacon of the Wesleyan chapel, if he promised to listen to his account of a new invention. Well, I'm off. Give my love to Lord Gaunt, if you see him, and tell him that, notwithstanding his being such a bad lot, I rather like him, and will consent to fish his river as usual."

He went off with a cigarette in his lips, and Decima, having interviewed the cook, went down to the village.

It was a pretty, rambling cluster of houses, with the one shop Bobby had so graphically described standing a little way back from the green. Decima looked about her with interest, and noticed that the cottages, though picturesque, were in anything but good repair. Most of the roofs were of thatch and wanted renewing. The windows were small and, she fancied, were not made to open. The doors, some of them, were below the surface of the street or lane, and she knew that the houses must be damp, for the walls were streaked with green. The sign of the inn—the Gaunt Arms—swung by one hinge and the inn itself clamored loudly for new shutters and a coat of paint.

In a word, she felt that the place had been neglected, just as the Hall had been.

Restoration of Imperial Government in Peking

Republican Administration Overthrown--U. S. Marines Accused of Barbarities--American Farmers bemoan approaching bankruptcy--Lunenburg Schooner Won Fishermen's Race--Canada Fixes Sugar Price at 21 Cents.

REVOLUTION IN CHINA.
SHANGHAI, Oct. 13. The Peking Government has been overthrown by General Chang Tsoo Lin, Governor of Feng Tien, who has proclaimed a monarchy, according to a rumor current here. If the coup has taken place, it is the supposition here that it is an effort to restore to the throne former Emperor Hsuan Tung. General Lishut, commander of the Government troops in the Province of Kiangsi and leader of a powerful political clique, committed suicide here yesterday, declaring his action was due to developments at Peking and failure of the measures he had advocated.

THE LEAGUE WANTS REPORT.
LONDON, Oct. 13. The League of Nations has sent a telegram to Col. Chardigny, at Kovno who is in charge of the League of Nations Commission there asking him to report fully on the Vilna situation, as to what treatment the members of the commission have been given, and assuring him of the support of the League. The Poles unofficially have been informed that the League considers the Vilna situation extremely grave and a violation of former Premier Paderewski's statement at the Paris meeting of the League Council that the integrity of Lithuania would be respected. The case will be considered at the Brussels meeting of the Council in October.

POLISH GOVERNMENT DISAVOWS GENERAL'S ACTION.

PARIS, Oct. 13. Count Maurice Zamayski, Polish Minister to France, visited M. Leygues, President of the Council, last night and informed him the Polish Government expressly disavowed General Seemouski's action in occupying Vilna, the Lithuanian capital, and will take all measures to withdraw the troops from that town.

CHARGE AGAINST U. S. MARINES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13. Evidence of "practically indiscriminate killing" of Haytian natives by United States marines was brought to the attention of Colonel John Brussel, commanding the Marine Forces in Hayti, in a confidential letter written by Major General George Barnett, commandant of the Corps, in October 1919 calling for a thorough investigation of conditions.

THE FARMERS WAIL.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13. "General bankruptcy and ruin is inevitable" unless some immediate remedy is found to relieve the present price situation as it affects farmers, says a report submitted to the Agricultural Conference here to-day by a committee appointed to study the situation. The Commission blames the Federal Reserve system for the present prices, charging that it "has arbitrarily withheld from assisting the basic industries of the United States to maintain a level of prices that would at least meet the cost of production."

A POLITICAL DODGE.

BOSTON, Oct. 13. A request by the League of Nations Day Committee, headed by President Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University, that the Governors of all States proclaim Sunday October 24 as "League of Nations day," to promote a better understanding of the Covenant was refused by Governor Coolidge to-day. To the suggestion that the people on that day be invited to read the Covenant in their homes and other places and that the announcement be made also through the schools, Governor Coolidge replied that the people of the State would resent the intrusion upon their worship on Sunday and that he would not undertake to make innocent children advocates of what they do not understand.

BANK ROBBERED.

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 13. Four men held up the Bank of Alameda County, at Alvarado, to-day shot and seriously wounded August Hay, President of the Institution and escaped with fifty thousand dollars.

THE SCHOONER CHAMPIONSHIP.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 13. Fishermen here are stirred by the challenge of the Halifax Herald for a race for five thousand dollars between the schooner "Dela-wana" which on Monday won the championship of the Nova Scotia fishing fleet, and a crack schooner of the Gloucester Fleet. It is not likely that the challenge will be passed unaccepted. The race, as arranged, will be a forty mile triangular affair off Halifax and the winner will be proclaimed the schooner champion of the North Atlantic. It is thought that the "Catherine Burke" of this port will be the logical entrant.

RIOTING IN LONDONDERRY.

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, Oct. 13. Rioting broke out here last night when rival factions clashed. Revolvers, bottles and stones were employed during the fracas. Several persons were wounded. The military dispersed the combatants.

SHIPPING STRIKE OFF.

DUBLIN, Oct. 13. The shipping strike ended to-day. The men resumed work at the request of the Lord Mayor. Commander-in-Chief in India.
A man of high character, great ability, and wide experience has gone to India to take command of the British Army in the Eastern Empire. He is first Baron Rawlinson, who will be remembered as the General commanding the Fifth British Army in France during the decisive and closing period of the world-war. Throughout the war he was one of the leaders of British troops and probably his leadership did as much as that of any one other man holding equal rank to break the power of German arms. Besides commanding the Fifth Army he was also a member of the Army Council.

General Lord Rawlinson, raised to the peerage last year, is the son of a soldier, Major-General Sir Henry Rawlinson, and was born on February 20, 1864. His early education was received at the famous old public school of Eton, and passing from there he entered upon those studies which qualified him to enter the army and take up his father's calling. He graduated from the Royal Military College at Sandhurst and from the Staff College at Camberley. He then took commission in the King's Royal Rifles.

Active service came to the young officer in 1887 when he was appointed Aide-de-Camp to Sir Frederick Roberts, later Lord Roberts, then Commander-in-Chief in India—the post that the former Aide now holds.

The years between that time and the present have been filled with service.

The young officer served with the Mounted Infantry in the Burma campaign, after which he returned to England and entered the Staff College. A little later came the Sudan campaign through which he served as Aide to Lord Kitchener, the Commander-in-Chief. He took part in the battles of Atbara and Khartoum.

His next field of activity was South Africa. He helped defend Ladysmith against the Boers and later commanded the Mobile Column which did much to break down the guerrilla warfare carried on by the Boers after their armies had been broken up.

He took part in the world-war from the start, and when the end came he was commanding an army.

Lord Rawlinson has now gone to India to command the forces that defend one of the most important parts of Britain's far-flung frontiers.

League Meeting.

The Self-Determination for Ireland League of Newfoundland held a large and enthusiastic meeting last night in the O'Donel wing, St. Patrick's Hall. Quite a number of new members were enrolled, and the question of extending the organization to the outports was discussed and referred to a sub-committee to arrange the details in connection with same.

Other business of minor importance was also discussed after which the meeting adjourned.

Citizens Discuss Establishment of Children's Hospital

SMALL ATTENDANCE AT COLLEGE HALL MEETING.

The meeting of citizens held last night in the College Hall to discuss the Children's Hospital project was poorly attended, and not as representative as it should have been. On the platform with His Excellency the Governor, who presided, were Rev. Drs. Bond and Jones, Rev. Hemmeon, Mayor Gosling, Councillor C. P. Ayre, Dr. Fraser, Dr. Fallon and Col. Martin, S. A. Among those in the audience were the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, Dr. Greene, C. J. Fox, M.H.A., Major H. Outerbridge, G. R. Williams, Lady Horwood, Mrs. Goelling, Mrs. H. Outerbridge, Mrs. V. P. Burke, Miss MacKay, Mrs. Julia S. Earle, Miss Furlong and many other ladies of the W.P.A. His Excellency in his opening remarks expressed regret that the attendance was not larger, and after an explanation of the absence of Lady Harris who has not yet fully recovered from the effects of her recent sea voyage, outlined the purpose for which the meeting was called, describing in detail how Waterford Hall had been acquired as a gift from Sir Edgar Bowring. "It is generally agreed said his Excellency that a Children's Hospital is a necessity and what is now required is funds to maintain it." The present is a difficult time to procure money for any object. Newfoundland has just passed the crest of the wave of unnatural prosperity. It is now a time to save. He was not a pessimist, but the black time has come and we must look round and be careful. There is no cause for alarm but we must be cautious. We must not expect large sums from Water Street which has been the milch cow of the past; nor from the Government. The Government have all the calls they can attend to. There is only one alternative, that is to support the object by general subscription. A small contribution from each citizen of $1 a year or $5 per family would help the movement and in order to obtain this the city must be divided up in sections. The only way out is to ask for personal support. This is a difficult plan and will involve a lot of hard work. The response will come because child life is so important. It is said the cost of upkeep would be about $20,000 a year. It will be more likely $30,000, of which the Govt. finds $10,000. It is up to the city to face the facts in practical form and finish the work begun. Another point is that Waterford Hall is bound up entirely with the W.P.A. Sir Edgar Bowring says it is to be run by no other than the W.P.A. A bad feature of the many undertakings by social organizations is the sloppy unbusinesslike way things are conducted. It is essential that business methods be adopted. In closing His Excellency asked the ladies present to express their opinions on the resolutions which would be put to the meeting and not wait till they went forth to discuss them in their drawing rooms.

The following resolutions were then moved:

First Resolution:

RESOLVED, That whatever may be the result of its deliberations this public meeting representing the people of St. John's express to Sir Edgar Bowring their earnest thanks for his generous offer of Waterford Hall to be used as a Children's Hospital.

Proposed by Lady Horwood; seconded by Mrs. Goelling.

Second Resolution:

RESOLVED, That in view of the extreme mortality prevailing among infant children much of which could be prevented, this public meeting binds itself to support a practical proposal for maintaining the nucleus of a Children's Hospital which may hereafter be a credit to St. John's.

Proposed by Rev. Mr. Hemmeon; seconded by Rev. Dr. Jones.

Third Resolution:

RESOLVED, That this public meeting appoint a representative committee to consider and report whether it is possible to obtain sufficient annual support, spreading over all the citizens of St. John's, to (1) Carry on the Waterford Hall scheme; or (2) As an alternative support existing Children's Hospitals or other smaller efforts as a beginning and generally on the questions suggested by the second resolution.

Proposed by C. J. Fox, M.H.A., seconded by Dr. Grieve.

Rev. Mr. Hemmeon, in proposing the second resolution, spoke at some length. He regretted existing conditions in the city which cried out for better care of child life. Everyone loved the child. Someone had said that the civilization of a community was best judged by the condition of the children. It was bad enough to see the aged man or woman walking the streets in search of a house to live in or even see our aged placed in the poor asylum, but it was infinitely worse to meet children poorly clad and emaciated through our own neglect.

Rev. Dr. Jones, in seconding the resolution, spoke very feelingly. He touched on the moral aspect of the matter, the obligations of the state and the great need for a Children's Hospital. He supported the movement in every way, and expressed the hope that the great work undertaken would be accomplished.

Mayor Gosling also spoke to the resolution, and gave a brief outline of the work of the community nurses in the city for the last few years. While he saw the great necessity for a Children's Hospital, he thought the first essential in protecting child life was community nursing. Prevention was better than cure. When community nursing was taken up in St. John's, infant mortality was 260 per 1000. In the first six months of the present year it had dropped 78 per 1000. During the last few months it had increased again 48 deaths alone occurring from gastro intestinal trouble. A heavy mortality from this cause always followed a hot dry summer such as we have experienced. He held that the supply of impure milk was responsible for many of these deaths and was sorry that flagrant violations of the law were going on from day to day. He had applied to the Government in the matter but nothing had been done. The only help given was the establishment of milk dispensaries by the W.P.A. where pure milk was obtainable, and he would wish to see one on each street corner so that all children could be supplied. He did not think a hospital could be run successfully by a volunteer party. It should be in charge of an official body with a responsible head.

Mr. G. R. Williams, while not opposed to the general idea did not think that private enterprise should be interferred with. Dr. Fraser had opened a Children's Hospital and invested his money, and deserved the thanks of the community. The site, requirements and management of any proposed hospital should be fully considered before anything was done. If Waterford Hall was not suitable, Sir E. R. Bowring should be so informed, who with his usual generosity might do something else in the matter. He regretted that the attendance was not larger, and in his opinion it was not representative.

Mrs. J. S. Earle, speaking to the resolution also regretted the attendance was not larger, but felt it was due to the unfavorable weather. She also made an appeal on behalf of the children, and offered as a suggestion that if Waterford Hall was not suitable for a Children's Hospital that probably Sir Edgar Bowring would see his way clear to offer it for a reformatory for the misguided youth of the community.

Major Outerbridge did not see the necessity for two children's hospitals in the community. In Toronto, with 500,000 people, there was only one such hospital. In his opinion no hospital could be efficiently conducted except by the city or government. If Waterford Hall was not suitable it should not be considered, and if it was decided that the W.P.A. were not capable of running it, it should stop at that. With the passing of the new Charter, when the women would have a say, he believed they would all vote for a city hospital.

Mr. C. J. Fox, in proposing the third resolution, voiced the regret of the other speakers that larger numbers had not turned out to hear such an important matter discussed. He agreed with Rev. Mr. Hemmeon that the civilization of a community was best judged by the care it took of its children. In the House of Assembly he had advocated for a house of correction for juvenile offenders, but nothing had come of the matter. He was a witness day after day to children being sent to the penitentiary for minor offences, which was only putting the brand of Cain on our citizens. We were moral murderers, and if 2,000 years hence some one was to resurrect St. John's it would put the curse of shame on our generations then unborn. St. John's owed a debt of gratitude to Dr. Fraser, for his splendid efforts to save child life. He was doing a splendid work and should be commended. He believed in the general principles outlined in the resolution.

Dr. Grieve, seconding the motion, began his remarks by referring to a meeting of the W.P.A. and the medical fraternity. The latter were unanimous that Waterford Hall was unsuitable for a Children's Hospital. The best place to treat acute diseases was in a city hospital. Speaking as a medical man he would not think of sending a child suffering from an acute disease, particularly in winter time, to Waterford Hall. Any doctor would hesitate sending a patient suffering from broncho-pneumonia such a distance from the city. Waterford Hall, however, could be used as a convalescent home for children, or for children suffering from chronic diseases such as rickets, scurvy, meningitis, etc., which takes months and sometimes years to cure. What was wanted in acute cases was a hospital near the doors of the sufferers.

Dr. Fallon spoke along the same lines as Dr. Grieve. He had no hesitation in stating that Waterford Hall was unsuitable as a Children's Hospital. It was too far distant from the city, and no medical man would risk sending a patient there in winter time. Such an institution, however, was needed, and the matter, in his opinion, rested on individual effort, not on the state. If a building was undertaken an architect should be employed and plans made so that if additions were necessary in the future they could be made at little cost. In the matter of raising funds we should be asked to pay so much per head.

Dr. Fraser regretted that only three members of the medical fraternity had attended the meeting; he said that all the kindly references to him had been brought about by his rushing into print. He had changed his mind while listening to the different speakers, and now felt that there was need of a further hospital. He thought that a body of women were quite competent to run a Children's Hospital. They were doing so in New Glasgow and Charlottetown, and why not here? Though he had listened to the different speakers, nothing of a definite character had been brought about. He offered two suggestions,

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHO WANTS TO BE A WASP?

RUTH CAMERON

Some friends were showing us a curious wasp's nest the other evening. It was built against the stone foundation of the house behind a hedge of sunflowers and followed the color and formation of the stones so closely (you can imagine what a word culled from the war and since used to extinction, promptly came to mind to describe this conformation) that we could hardly pick it out.

We weren't peering in your windows."

As we bent closer to see the nest better, one of the inhabitants on business bound issued from the house. It really was funny to see the haste with which we backed away. "Oh, no, mister," we seemed to be saying, "we weren't going to peek in your windows."

"Queer," said the Authorman, "how much respect we seem to have for that gentleman."

"Yes," said someone else. "Now if that had been an ants' hill and a couple of them came out, we would probably be poking them with a straw to see what they would do."

"And yet who wants to be a wasp?" said I.

"Oh, I don't know," said the Authorman. "I don't know but there are times and places when a sting has its uses."

The Sting Has Its Uses.

And when you come to think of it, rather fancy he's right.

I thought of Mr. Wasp again and of the respect he inspires when I heard two men talking about an insurance agent.

Said one man, "I lost a train to-day all through the persistence of a con- ditioned insurance agent. How they come cling! I've told him over and over again that I've got all the insurance I'm going to take for the present, but he'll come into my office and hang on like a leech."

"I," said the other man, "am never bothered with insurance agents and you needn't be if you pay the price. When they come to me I tell them once pleasantly that I have considered the matter carefully and taken that insurance I need, and then if they come again after that I tell them not pleasantly. It isn't pleasant for me either, but I consider it worth

Morals and the Movies.

Recently on both sides of the Atlantic the movies have been under fire. At the conference of Catholic charities held last week in this city much was said of the bad effects a certain class of screen drama is liable to have on the youthful mind. Particular stress was laid on the suggestiveness of scenes which, while not necessarily lascivious or libidinous in themselves, are yet likely, in the case of the unsophisticated boy or girl, to arouse passionate emotions or to impart undesirable information before due time. There is force in this contention, and film censors everywhere ought to give it proper consideration before issuing a license to any production.—Washington Post.

Approves the Grey Scheme.

The sentiment of America is for Irish freedom; so is that of England. The trouble lies in deciding upon the exact form. It is almost an established fact that the grant of governmental freedom must come by one or more steps, unless it is to be argued that the Sinn Feiners can ultimately succeed in crushing the British Government, and that is beyond sound reasoning. Therefore, why should not the Grey plan be the first and greater step in bringing about a satisfactory peace, which every friend of Ireland and England and every advocate of world peace hope for? It would do honor to the Sinn Feiners; it would honor Britain.—Syracuse Journal.

HERITAGE.
They worked for us. Those ages old Whose lives seem as a story told, The countless dead of years gone by Who knew the self-same stretch of sky And walked beneath the self-same sun, Dreaming of wonders to be done, Were toiling in the long ago That we a better world might know.

From lip to lip were handed down Stories of conquest and renown, Which we might learn, and in our day Struggle to be as brave as they, Who dared to spend their strength and might For what they then believed was right.

Out of the ancient glory glows The splendor that our record knows, For as old Homer sang his songs And unto us he now belongs; The treasures of human strife Have kept the best of every life For all who choose to come and take. So shall the progress which we make Be kept to spur some brave youth on In days long after we are gone.

He cannot die who serves the truth, Sets high example unto youth, Gives to the world some useful deed, Or labors for a human need; For though his age may pass away And all his flesh return to clay, The good he did shall always give New courage to the young who live.

EVENED UP.

WILT MASON

With Fate, unfair, I used to quarrel, because my hair was dingy sorrel. My neighbor, Horn, had raven ringlets, that might adorn the brows of kinglets. I envied him his tresses shining, and life seemed grim, and I was pining. The years have sped, as years skeddaddle, and Horn's bald head looks like a saddle. And I have hair to feed the chickens; to Horn's despair it grows and thickens. I envied him when we were younger; now in his glim I see soul hunger. I see his eyes with envy kindle; oh, how he'd prize my hair all brindle! I envied Mott his unearned riches, when I was hot from toll in ditches. All jealous-eyed I used to worry to see him ride in gorgeous surrey, while I chased hogs through prickly hedges, or whacked up logs with rusty wedges. But now he eats things predigested; by pies and meats he'd soon be basted. The doc doles out his daily vittles; a Brussels sprout he slowly whittles, and feeds to Mott the sickly shavings, which makes Mott hot and starts his ravings. Is his life sweet, or sad and tiring? And I can eat what I'm desiring. Vain envy seems, when swift years trim it; of all bad dreams it is the limit.

Fashions and Fads.

While in Paris the high collar is established, its adoption here is doubtful. Side tunics with a slightly circular cut are good with the long body line. Slashed tunics and filmy lace at neck and sleeves are noted on fall suits. The influence of the Moyaen-age styles is noted in every sort of costume. The collars and cuffs of boys' white wash suits are trimmed with ruffles. A new fall note is seen in the appliques of velvet or of silk on sheer grounds. Fur coats which are cut in Paris are very much fitted and show a snug waistline. The satin shawl collar of a Paris gown ties in a huge bow at the waistline in front. A serious velvet evening gown features a closely draped skirt and a one-sided train. An accessory to the smart costume is a hand-made bag of chiffon velvet to match. A green-and-gold brocade evening gown has a huge embroidered motif on the hip. An ostrich-trimmed dress of crepe de chene has a long, full skirt and a low fitted waist. With a flare at the hips and wrinkles above the waist, Paris accepts the waistline. A quaint dance frock has a low bertha of embroidered net and straps of tiny rosebuds over the arms. Two characteristics of the latest models are the high fur-trimmed collar and the leg-of-mutton sleeve. With the simple black frock is worn a small hat with a downward swirl of coq feathers. A beautiful blanket robe coat is developed in tan and black and has large carved wooden buttons.

Stranger Than Fiction.

Just the other day a real Rip Van Winkle came to light, no whit less strange or mystical than Washington Irving's creation. In 1895 Alexander Bell left his home in Indiana for the Tennessee Mountains, where he intended to visit his brother. That is the last time he was seen by his friends, and the last he remembers until he reappeared just the other day. His children have grown up, his wife has remarried and two wars have been fought and won, all of which he knew nothing about. Modern science will probably label Bell's case as aphasia or something like that and old Rip may have been afflicted with the same disease for all we know. At any rate, never forget that the world of adventure and strange romance is all about us and not at all the exclusive possession of old story books. We may expect to see a real live Peter Pan almost any day.

Mediums Lynched in Olden Days.

In the sixteenth century they had a rough and ready way of dealing with spiritualists and quite a number of persons who wrote and spoke on that subject were put to death. In the reign of Queen Mary an act was placed on the statute book, which made it a capital offence for any person "to propose to hold communications with the dead," and later the penalty for such an offence was made burning at the stake. In 1520 a man named Edward Barber, who lived at Ongar, in Essex, was ordered by a local magistrate to be put in the stocks for three days and subsequently to stand trial for pretending that he had received messages from a dead person and for "telling divers persons that he had done so." This luckless spiritulist, however, was never sent for trial, as on the last night of his confinement in the stocks he was burned to death by some of the villagers.

Sidewalk Erections.

Numbers of these have been in evidence on Water Street, for most of the present year, and some are still there. Like-wise on the back thoroughfares. No great objection could be made to these structures if only sufficient space were left between the outer wall and the kerb for the people to pass abreast, or if the builders had the courtesy to lay an extension bridge from the kerb to the gutter. In only one case has this been done. The city sidewalks are narrow enough when unobstructed, but when bad and awkward bridges are built to cover in the place where other erections are being made, without regard to encroachments on the rights of pedestrians, such become a public nuisance, and should be frowned upon by the municipal authorities and prohibited, unless due care is taken to give passersby going in opposite directions ample room to pass, without some of them having to step off the kerb into the filthy accumulations allowed to gather on both sides of the street. A little more care on the part of contractors and a little more expenditure would obviate all this, and not produce the curses and complaints frequently heard at these particular points. No other city in the world would permit such a condition of things, but in St. John's anything is allowable, and to a warm climate with the public. The exceedingly narrow space of sidewalk left at certain points on Water Street, where building operations are being carried out, are more than objectionable, but all that apparently the people can do is to grin and bear them, and hope that soon the unsightly-looking erections will be removed—but then they will only be succeeded by others, unless the populace kicks.

In well ordered cities the law provides that sidewalk bridges or sheds shall be erected during building operations, and in order that the public shall be protected it is distinctively laid down in the code that such erections shall be substantial and extending so far as practicable from building line to kerb. Those so erected in St. John's are neither bridges nor sheds, and are truly eyesores and inconveniences to the public. They take up practically all the foot space, the whole length of their line on the sidewalks and cause a jam of foot passengers at the points of beginning and end, especially during meal hours and after the stores have closed. And to this inconvenience another may be added, caused by men carrying boards and lengths of other construction material on their shoulders, to the imminent danger and damage of others. There should be some regulation introduced to prevent this. Then again there is the ever-present boy with the hand or push cart who carelessly and nonchalantly propels his vehicle along the sidewalk, regardless of who may be in the path of his progress. Numerous other illustrations may be cited, which produce discomfort and annoyance to those who are the only ones legitimately entitled to use the sidewalks. Were the main street of this city kept clean things might not be so bad, but people distinctly object to stepping off into the muck and ruck which fringe the sides of the street next the kerb. The one way out is for the civic authorities to insist that contractors leave sufficient passageway between the wall of their protective structure and the kerb for pedestrians to pass each other without jostling or taking to the dirty and ill-kept pavement.

When women get running for office, husbands will be ruined buying their wives the latest style of hats to throw into the ring.

"Well, that's better than paying the dollar a bit he's been paying in the restaurants, isn't it?"

Canadian Press, which supplies Newfoundland with foreign news, does not apparently take much interest in the Lunenburg Fishing Schooners' Race, scheduled for last Saturday. If so, the compiler of the local press message has studiously omitted any mention of it, or of the result.

Senator Harding has assured the workman that he never said a dollar a day was enough for him; he has assured the farmer that he never said a dollar a bushel was enough for wheat. The barbers are now waiting to be assured that he never said a dollar was enough for a haircut.—New York Illustrated News.

The late Lord Murray, of Elbank, had a fund of good stories. One of his best related to a Scotsman. During a visit to Russia he attended the service at a Russian church. When the acolytes passed down the aisle swinging the censers, he heard one of them singing in what appeared to him to be familiar tones. Listening carefully he heard him chant: "If it will nae dae ye ony guid, it will nae dae ye ony harm." (English version: "If it won't do you any good, it won't do you any harm.") After the service he interviewed the acolyte, whom he found to be a brother Scot.

Cold water, 'tis of thee we sing,
And may there be a frightful slump
In Beer and all that kind of thing,
And Heaven bless the Parish Pump!

The helters roaming o'er the lea,
The sheep that munch the new-mown hay,
Are Water-drinkers all, and we May hope in time to be as they.

The ape and tiger drink no beer,
Nor does the hippopotamus,
And what is good for them, 'tis clear,
Should be quite good enough for us!

They have arranged to remedy the defects to-day and the rink will be in first-class condition to-night.

Almost Got Away With Third Wife.

A young man of the West End who is said to have had a bad record with the Regt., and who lately returned here from across has got himself into a lot of trouble, if the reports of his doings are found correct. It appears that the man had a wife and three children here, but when across he met with a Scotch lassie, whom he married. Tiring of the second wife he came home to his first wife and confessed. He was taken back but shortly afterwards he refused to furnish any money for the support of the family. He was subsequently brought before court and agreed to pay $30 per month, this he afterwards failed to do and the wife had to again seek the protection of the law, with the consequence that the young man is now in jail for 30 days pending an investigation. Had the husband paid the allowance it is likely that he would have avoided trouble but in investigating why the allowance was not paid, it leaked out that he had had up with a third young woman and was preparing to elope with her.

There passed peacefully away, at Sydney, on Sept. 28th, George Cleary, beloved son of the late Richard and Elizabeth Cleary, of Argentina. IN LOVING MEMORY of Sergt. Edward Joy, who died October 14th, 1918, at Devonport, England.
"The tie that earth has broken
And severed two years ago,
Fond memories of you, my darling
Will eternal peace bestow.
You suffered much, you murmured not
I waited day by day,
Until at last with broken heart
I heard you had passed away.
Softly at night the stars are shining
On a lonely, silent grave,
Where thou dost lie my dearest Edward
Whom I loved but could not save.
But God has called you from me,
The one I loved so well;
And how I miss you darling,
Only God alone can tell.
You died in a far-off land
God knoweth what is best;
May the Sacred Heart of Jesus
Grant your soul eternal rest."

Schooner Roy Bruce

Splendid Addition to Our Mercantile Marine.

It must be admitted that the vessels in our mercantile marine to-day cannot, as a rule, compare with those of half a century and less ago. In those days we had such clippers and ocean grayhounds as Baine Johnston's barque, Narwhal, brig Ann Johnston, brig Walter Baine, barque Constance, brig Othello, brig Dante and many others. Job Brothers & Co. had the barque Netherton, barque Snowden, barq. Blanche, barq. Fanny and many others. Walter Grieve had the splendid barque Carpasian, commanded by the veteran, Capt. Joseph Gosse, still hale and hearty; and other first-class ships. McBride had the brig Ticino, Runnymede, Vesta and Spray; J. & W. Stewart had amongst their fleet the brig Balclutha, barque James Stewart, and brig Glancus; P. & L. Tessler were owners of the Petunia (commanded by the veteran Capt. Charles Nichols, at present of H.M. Customs), barque Kaimla, brig Maria, etc. All these ships were built in England or on the Clyde in Scotland, and were beautiful models of marine architecture, and well upheld the reputation of the Newfoundland mercantile marine, as well as the hardihood, pluck, perseverance and agility of our sailors.

At various times of later years, vessels have been added to our fleet which for beauty of model, durability and sailing qualities can compare favorably with the fleet of any other country on this side of the Atlantic, but these vessels are of Colonial build, and, as a rule, are schooner rigged. One of them has been lately added to our local fleet—the schooner Roy Bruce, built at Shelburne, Nova Scotia, by the Shelburne Shipbuilders' Limited, launched a few weeks ago, and arrived in St. John's during the present week. The owner of this splendid vessel is the genial Capt. Robert F. Hollett, of Burin North, though young in years, a veteran in experience, as well as a keen and successful business man. The Roy Bruce is classed for 12 years in the Bureau Veritas. Capt. Hollett believes in the old adage "no man is so well served as he who serves himself," and putting this motto into practice, he visited Shelburne while his vessel was in course of construction, and it is needless to say that not the smallest detail escaped the eagle eye of the experienced master mariner.

The Roy Bruce was contracted for in February last, and is 195 tons gross and 149 tons nett. She is built from the best wood procurable, with topides of Oregon Pine. The interior of the cabin is finished with Douglas Fir, and the vessel is all iron-stamped. The length is 120 feet, 27 ft. beam, and 10 ft. 8 deep. She has an engine for heaving up anchors and hoisting sails, etc., also a pumping engine. The cabin is one of the most commodious and comfortable, as well as beautiful of any ship in port, with all modern appliances and necessaries. The spars are of Oregon Pine, and the standing rigging and running gear are of the very best quality. She carries a large and well-built life boat and a jolly boat. The fore-castle and galley are below deck, which makes it more comfortable for the crew. The Roy Bruce carries fore-sail, mainsail, mizzen, four jibs, two staysails and three gaff topsails. Capt. Hollett had not much chance of judging her sailing qualities on the passage down, but he is confident it will take a smart vessel to get away from her, when the opportunity offers. Anyhow, the genial captain will soon have an opportunity of judging her standing as an ocean greyhound, as she is now open to charter, and we are confident that the good ship Roy Bruce and her capable captain will hold their own against all comers. T. H. Carter & Co. are the agents.

To be used to help adjust the unnormal differences between the decreased prices of our fish and the increased prices of our every day requirements!

To the Public of Newfoundland---St. John's in Particular:

Our main industry—fish—is not bringing prices that it has the past four years. Canada is not getting the same prices for her dependable products, the United States of America is still worse off than Canada and Newfoundland, losing her enormous export trade due to the war; consequently the immediate depression in all three countries, and from same causes the whole world.

In Canada and the States merchants are trying to adjust the purchasing power of the people with their earning power, by disposing of the millions of dollars worth of Merchandise at unprecedented reductions.

Here in Newfoundland face the same conditions that other countries are now going through.

STARTING FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 15, and continuing for Three Weeks

We, THE LONDON, NEW YORK and PARIS ASSOCIATION OF FASHION of St. John's, connecting ourselves with no other firm in this town, have decided to offer to the general public of this country a weapon in the form of $120,000 worth of wearing apparel for Men, Women and Children at prices that will forever be remembered by our population as a duplicate of prices gone by.

Words and unfulfilled deeds are not worth the paper they are written on these days.

The only method to adjust things to-day in our Newfoundland is by our method.

WE OFFER MERCHANDISE AT AN IMMENSE LOSS TO OURSELVES

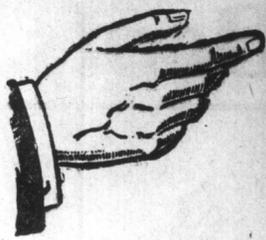

but we do it merrily, because we are compelled to do it now or later; and just when everybody requires their Fall and Winter Wares, we feel justified in giving the public the benefit now, because later our effort would be as nil, because the public would be all bought up and consequently would not be able to stand behind this most beneficial movement for all concerned.

WE WANT THE WHOLE TOWN TO MARCH DOWN HERE FOR THE NEXT 3 WEEKS. We must have the backing of the whole town, otherwise our effort will be useless; and we believe every Man, Woman and Child in this town are waiting patiently for the day when everybody will do as we are to do.

America's Blunder.

Fate of the Wooden Ships.
 By the transfer of an item of $250,000,000 from the assets to the liabilities account of the Federal balance sheet, announced from Washington on Aug. 3, a dispute is recalled which had far-reaching consequences. The enormous item thus written off as loss represents the cost of the 800 wooden ships built hastily in 1917 to transport the American Army abroad despite the menace of German submarines. General Goethals, then General Manager of the Emergency fleet Corporation, opposed the building of wooden ships as more costly and less effective than steel ships. Mr. Denman, Chairman of the Shipping Board, disagreed with him, and as a result of the lively conflict that ensued Colonel Goethals sought other fields of activity. Then, when it transpired that the judgment of Goethals was correct, the forced retirement of Mr. Denman followed and there was a complete reorganization of the Shipping Board under Chairman Hurley. Many of these wooden ships were still unfinished when the end of the war approached and the contractors speeded up their work in order not to lose their profits. The ships are still a cause for considerable expense, yet are said to be practically useless. They lie at various ports, a peacetime white elephant, awaiting purchase by private firms.—Current History.

Matrimonial Boom in Japan.

Japanese find a close connection between money and marriage by reading the lessons of the financial depressions in Japan. The passing of easy money-making has caused a rush to the Japanese matrimonial agencies and women are leading in the rush. In prosperous times the agency customers are men looking for wives, but now, say matrimonial managers, the old order is reversed. In view of the approaching "hard times" women seem to be seeking safety in the protection of husbands. One result of the feminine advances is a marked increase in marriages.

Japan's Ivory Carving.

Japan takes the credit for the finest ivory carvings in the world. If your treasures should become broken, and the pieces are not lost, they can be repaired. The dismembered fragments must be fitted in place and held there by using a cement which is not affected by moisture.

A cement which cannot hold its own in spite of moisture is of no use, and for this reason ivory must have water in order to preserve its beauty.

Exposure to the dry air any length of time causes fine lateral cracks to appear, and when once they come a masterpiece is ruined forever.

By way of illustration as to the possibilities of the Japanese expert repairer, suppose an ivory carving represents a hunter, his gun and game bag. A dead bird, too large for his game bag, is slung over his shoulder, while a wounded live bird is held by a cord tied around its leg.

The wounded bird is crying out with fear and pain. The skillful Japanese artist has been able to separate the upper and lower bills of the bird, showing clearly that the mouth is open, although the bills are not much thicker or wider than the point of a stub steel pen.

Delicate Workmanship.

If by any accident one or both of the bills have been broken off and lost, the Japanese importer can send the piece back to his own country, perhaps to the very artist who made the carving, and in due time have the treasure returned to its owner in all its former beauty.

This is what the Japanese carver has done: He has carved out a new bill and with the tiniest dowl-pin attached it. A correspondingly small hole has been made in the bird's head and so skilfully done that the keenest eye cannot detect the break.

No Canadian or European "restorer" would have either the ability or the patience to do this, but even if his patience and skill should be found equal to the demand, if he is an honest and well informed man he would not undertake the work for you. He knows he could not live on the price for which you could get the work done if you knew where to send it. It is only in Oriental countries, where living is cheap, that this is possible.

In Japan no carvings are made in factories. The artist works in his own studio. At the bottom of the piece when it is finished the maker carves his name, initials or sign. In due time this distinguished mark comes to have a commercial value with art dealers, just as the name of a great writer has with editors and publishers.

In Tokio there is an art school in which an average of about 500 pupils a year study art under different masters. In ivory carving there are native teachers, but in this the Japanese are but following out the rule which governs their conduct in all matters of education and progress. That is the person who is best fitted for the profession is given the chair.

In other branches of art taught in the Tokio schools European and other masters are employed, but for ivory carvings the Japanese, for the simple reason that they have no equals at that particular work. Moreover, the best ivory carving, even in Japan, come from Tokio and its environs.

The length of time which a Japanese artist must give to his apprenticeship work upon ivory before he can become sufficiently skilled to earn a living at his chosen profession depends upon a number of things, such, for instance, as natural taste and industry.

In this, as in other arts, but few ever become great, but if a carver, after he shall have been under his master's instructions for five years, has reached the place where his works will sell, which by no means must be taken to imply that he can sell enough of them to live on the proceeds, he has no reason to be ashamed of himself or feel discouraged as to the progress he has made.

But the man must be made of that kind of stuff which loves art for art's sake, for his labor will always be but poorly paid. Though a little piece not more than four inches high may retail in Canadian and European art stores at a price ranging between $50 and $150, but a small part of this sum ever reaches the Japanese artist. Those hair-fine carvings tell their own story of the weeks and months of patient labor expended in their making.

Sidelight on Wagner.

An interesting sidelight on Wagner is given in the recently published reminiscences of a British diplomat. Twice a week, we are told, the master-musician, used to play at the house of Baroness von Schlieffitz, wife of the Minister of the German Royal Household. "Two grand pianos were placed side by side, and the master played us his gigantic works. His playing finished, a small, very-plainly appointed supper-table was placed in the middle of the Fest-Saal, at which Wagner seated himself alone in state." Then all the great ladies of Berlin would bustle about, waiting upon the musician. Plates of sauerkraut, liver sausage, black puddings, herring salad, cheeses of various kinds, raw ham; and raw smoked goosebreast would be piled upon the table amid much fussing amongst the fair amateur waitresses. They would jostle and reprove one another for ignorance of the master's gastronomic tastes. "Meanwhile Wagner, dressed in a frock-coat and trousers of shiny black cloth, his head covered with his invariable black velvet skull-cap, would munch steadily away, taking no notice whatever of those around him."

Punishment Up-to-Date.

A new form of punishment has been devised by a schoolmaster, in the South of England. The boys who are troublesome would otherwise get thrashed

"army corps," called by the master the "Brainless Army." These boys are marched up and down the class each day until they are shamed out of the particular form of bad behaviour to which they are addicted. The march takes the form of a procession round the classes, the very smallest scholar getting a glimpse of the Higher Form boys in disgrace. Walking in pairs, the boys have to keep in step to the hand clapping of the classes through which they pass. This punishment has done much to reform some boys, and has dispensed entirely with the use of the cane. As the master says, he gets at the vital need for all punishment—making the boy conscious of the sense of shame. This is really a mental process, and the novel form of punishment used at his schools claims to get at and stabilize this sense, thereby effecting a permanent cure of the bad boy.

1920 EXHIBITION ARRANGED.

Tuesday night's meeting was a most successful one, Pres. LeMessurier, C. G. and Sec. Calver with many members being present. The principal business was the arranging of the annual Poultry Show to be held Dec. 1st, 2nd and 3rd in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Harvey Road, Edge Landry of Truro as usual will be a judge to decide the prize winners. It was decided to award only one set of prizes for the Bantam Rock class—light feathered birds being not accepted as the true requirements of the breed for judging purposes.

Secretary Calver read a very interesting letter from Mr. W. K. Chancey of Grand Falls, who won the silver cup last year offered by His Excellency the Governor for the outport exhibitor winning the most number of prizes on his birds. Mr. Chancey has another big string of feathered beauties to send to the next exhibition.

The Reid N.M. Railway will be asked to arrange the annual shopping excursion and poultry show rates to be given to parties visiting the show on these dates. Treasurer W. R. Butler will have full charge of fitting up the shops and preparing the exhibition.

Mr. Assistant Secretary Stan Smith will be publicity manager and releasing agent in connection with a securing of the ribbons. Judge M. Lynch will be special prize officer. The Prize and Classification committee will be headed by President H. W. LeMessurier, C.M.G., Miss Walter Reid and Misses. The delegation sent by this Association to the Island last month reported officially that they had met a cordial reception at the Iron Is., and the Field Poultry Association wished the St. John's poultry members present to convey their thanks and appreciation of the twelve prizes presented by the association for competition at the Island Poultry and Vegetable Show to be held there in the Orange Hall on Oct. 26th, 27th and 28th inst.

Mr. R. A. Squires, Prime Minister, is presenting a cup for this year's show. The largest number of Blue Ribbons. This cup will become the property of the first exhibitor who wins a silverware 3 times. The committee Tuesday night decided to award a special silver cup to the exhibitor winning the most number of prizes. This cup will be a one year prize and the winner will have it keeps.

Mr. J. T. Lamb, watchmaker of Water Street, is also contributing a special prize. Mr. Stephen Emberly has been appointed inspector of the distribution results, and will report next meeting on the hatching of the 2500 eggs sent to outport and other people by the Poultry Association members last spring. It is hoped this year if space permits to exhibit special pens or coops of surplus birds for sale, so that any visitors to the show can purchase birds which suit their requirements at reasonable prices. There is no doubt about it, President LeMessurier and those associated with him have been doing a public service in a quiet way by maintaining interest in breeding good birds, distributing the eggs all over Newfoundland and conducting poultry shows annually for the past eight years superior to any show in Eastern Canada, save that of Amherst, Nova Scotia. If the country generally had more exhibitors of its farm products, live stock, manufactures and raw materials no doubt the results would more than justify their initial cost.

The Poultry Club Tuesday night had present as their guest Mr. Walter W. McCoubrey, of Idylwyde Farm, State Road Lexington, Mass. Mr. McCoubrey is keenly interested in poultry generally, having been a breeder of black leghorns, buff wyandottes and white leghorns, and a visitor at the big Boston show. He was pleased to note the enthusiasm and knowledge of the business possessed by the N.M. members and leaves for his home this week.

Tribute to W. P. A.

27th September, 1920.

Dear Miss Mackay,—As Waterford Hall has now been completely vacated as a Military Hospital, the Government desire to express to the ladies of the Women's Patriotic Association their warmest appreciation in regard to the administration of Waterford Hall as a hospital, and to the care of over 350 men from the Regiment who were treated there.

The ladies of the W.P.A. certainly have established a record for administrative ability in relation to the running of the hospital at Waterford Hall, and the unselfish service which they have rendered in this connection will not be forgotten by the 350 men who were treated there, nor by the Department of Militia, who were so greatly aided by your work.

The War has brought out the fact that no more faithful, zealous and effective workers were to be found than the ladies of the various volunteer organizations who did so much, especially in connection with the nursing of the wounded and sick.

Will you kindly convey to the ladies of the W. P. A., the hearty thanks of the Government for the noble and unselfish services rendered by them in connection with the hospital at Waterford Hall.

Yours sincerely,
ARTHUR MEWS,
Deputy Colonial Secretary.
Miss Mary Mackay, M.B.E.,
Secretary W.P.A. City.

Well Received at Halifax
Mr. J. Bell, our local runner, and Mr. J. I. Vinnicombe, his manager, who were in Halifax representing Newfoundland in the Marathon Race, returned by the Sackem yesterday. Both Bell and his manager speak in glowing terms of the treatment accorded them in Halifax, especially from Newfoundlanders, many of whom reside there. Messrs. Frank Rice, Andrew McKay and James Jackman were especially zealous in looking after their wants and making their stay in the Nova Scotia capital a pleasant one, and all are looking forward to next year's contest when it is hoped that Newfoundland will send a team to take part. Rodgers, who won the 10 mile marathon, also won the 5 and 6 mile contests, his time being 10 miles, 62 minutes, 15 seconds; 6 mile, 22 minutes, 23 seconds; 5 mile, 28 minutes, 35 seconds. In the six mile contest Charley Patterson, who is well known in St. John's as the fast skater and hockeyist who played for Halifax on several occasions, took second place. He also took part in the 10 mile race and was amongst those who finished.

Boy Scouts Celebrate Anniversary.

LOCAL JAMBOREE A GREAT SUCCESS.

The Gower St. Troop of Boy Scouts celebrated their second anniversary last night in proper style. At eight o'clock 110 were present in the basement of Gower St. Church, and the proceedings began with a concert. Scouts Eddy and Stacey and P. L. Howard put on the first number, a comic sketch, "Only Fifty Cents." The second number was a song by A. P. L. Ralph Jardine. Miss Vasey swung the clubs much to the delight of the audience. Mrs. E. W. Forbes sang "The Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond" and the boys joined in the chorus. The concluding number was a clown stunt by J. Mayo, L. Stacey and A. Howard. At 8.30 a route march was held with full band and torches. The line of procession was up Long's Hill, LeMarchant Rd., Boncloddy St., Pennywell Rd., Military Rd., and Gower St. to Church. At Government House grounds a halt was made and three cheers were given for His Excellency, the Chief Scout of Newfoundland. A halt was also made at the Dickenson Monument. The Last Post was played while the Scouts stood at the salute in honour of a lady who possessed the true scout spirit, and gave her life in "being useful and helping others."

When the Scouts reached the Church at 9.15 they found nine well-spread tables, and everything awaiting their reception. "A" company was seated on the West side of the room, and "B" company on the East. The eight patrols in each company were seated two at each table as follows:—Caribou and Beaver; Eagle and Otter; Bull-dog and Raven; Seagull and Curlew in "A" Co.; Seal and Owl; Lion and Hawk; Tiger and Peacock; Fox and Panther in "B" Co. A Patrol flag stood at both ends of each table to mark the places of the Patrols. Along the front of the room was the guest table, at which were seated Hon. R. K. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Leamon, Rev. and Mrs. E. W. Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Peters, Rev. C. H. Johnson, Commander Penn and Scout-masters George Duncan, Robert Francis, Stephen Tizard and Chas. Garland. Regrets were sent from Assistant Commissioner and Organising Secretary, Jas. Murdoch on the inability of himself and Mrs. Murdoch to attend, also from Mr. Fred. W. Ayre on his unavoidable absence. As soon as the company was seated a solo was sung by Mrs. Gordon Christian, accompanied by Mr. Christian. After singing grace the Scouts proceeded to show their hearty appreciation of the good things set before them. The Menu was as follows: Roast Beef, Hot Potatoes, Gravy, Baked Beans, White Bread, Brown Bread, Cake of all kinds, Tea, Apples and Oranges and Fruit Syrups. The tables were served and the repast was prepared by the young ladies of Miss Ada Horwood's "Sunshine" Bible Class, and they did splendid work. After the appetites of all had been satisfied the following toasts were drunk:—"The King," proposed by A. S. M. Lieut. Chas. Garland. After singing a verse of the National Anthem, the ten scout laws were repeated in concert. Rev. C. H. Johnson, M.A., proposed the next toast "The Scout Law." He showed how eight of the laws could be easily remembered from the initial letters in the words "Scout Law." S stands for "Saving"—a scout is thrifty. C for courtesy—a scout is courteous. O for obedience—a scout obeys orders. U for usefulness—a scout's duty is to be useful. T for truthful—a scout's honour is to be trusted. L for loyal—a scout is loyal. A for animals—a scout is a friend to animals. W for words—a scout is clean in thought, word and deed.

Mr. W. H. Peters proposed the next toast "The Gower St. Troop." He spoke of the great value of scout training in preparation for citizenship in the coming days would show the benefit they had received during their scout-hood days in their after-careers in life. He paid a well-merited tribute to Rev. Sam Soper, Missionary to China, and the splendid nation-building work he is doing among the boys over there. The Scout Song was then sung. "A" Company was called on to sing the first verse, and they sang it in good style. "B" Company was then advised to try to do a little better. It was left to the judgment of the guests to decide which verse was sung best, and the unanimous vote accorded the palm to the Patrols of "B" Company. For a minute or two the applause nearly loosened the plaster. The entire Troop then sang the chorus:—

"Now we wear the badges, the Boy Scout brass badges,
We wear them with pride and joy.
To be thrifty and useful, loyal and truthful,
Is the ideal of each boy.
When trouble is brewing, our bit we'll be doing
To hammer down Britain's foes;
With the Scout Law still binding, our loss will be finding Why the Newfoundland Scouts arose."

The next toast "Our Guests," was proposed by A.S.M. Robert Francis. Commander Fenn of H.M.S. "Briton" responded. He was glad that the Army and Navy were both represented at the banquet. It was up to the Scouts to carry on the work of both branches of the service. Next week—Oct. 21st—is Trafalgar Day. Let every Scout remember Nelson's immortal signal: "England expects every man to do his duty." At the conclusion of this toast, the Scoutmaster announced that there would be a contest next Tuesday evening at the regular meeting of the Troop in honour of Trafalgar Day. The contest between the two companies would be to see which one could score the largest number of points in bringing in facts concerning the life of Nelson.

The last toast was proposed by Hon. R. K. Bishop. Mr. Bishop affirmed his conviction concerning the great value and untold possibilities of the scout movement. During his recent stay in London at the time of the Jamboree he had run across the Scouts in all directions, and had greatly admired their fine appearance and the services they were constantly rendering. The greatest gathering in recent times in the world had been the gathering of 10,000 Boy Scouts from all the world in Olympia, and when that grand man, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, had been proclaimed by the votes of those 10,000 as Chief Scout of all the world, it must have been one of the happiest and most gratifying moments in his life.

At the conclusion of the banquet, the toast-master, Rev. E. W. Forbes, tendered the thanks of the Troop to all who had contributed to its success, especially to Mr. O'Regan, Mr. Campbell and Mr. Thompson for generous gifts of roast beef, to Burt and Lawrence for fruit, to Mr. Power, of Bowring Bros. for the loan of torches, and to the young ladies of the Sunshine Class for their invaluable help. Subscriptions were received from two of the guests towards banquet expenses, for which thanks were tendered (before their receipt.) Mr. George Duncan, A.S.M., who leaves shortly for Nova Scotia, and whose departure is greatly regretted, said a few words of farewell and well wishing.

During the evening Miss Dorothy Peters, the accompanist of the Troop, was called to the platform along with Mrs. E. W. Forbes, the Scoutmaster's bride. Miss Peters was presented by the scout-mistress (Mrs. Forbes), on behalf of the Troop with a Swastika Thanks badge for services rendered. This is a silver badge with the Swastika Lucky cross and the Scout Emblem, and entitles its wearer to the services of a scout at any time needed.

A Great Trotter.

Burt Axworthy, 2.08%, recently imported by the genial and wily Minister of Agriculture, is really some horse. Burt Axworthy is sired by Dale Axworthy, he by the mighty "Axworthy" 2.15, who was the son of the immortal "Axtell." Burt Axworthy was a great colt trotter taking a record at 2 years of age of 2.29%, reducing his record at three to 2.15%, and entering the select list at 6 years with a record of 2.08%; he was then purchased by a noted Canadian horseman, where he since has been until we find him with us. We welcome this good horse, and no doubt the friendly "Doc" will be seen dusting up the strotches and smoking around the turns of the new track—with "Rhoda Mack" 2.20% right at his wheel. The proverbial cigar, which the good "Doc" so much enjoys, will surely be lost in the effort of respiration when "Burt" straightens his tail and sets sail up the strotches of the new "Track." For goodness sake, horsemen, wake up that committee appointed to select a site.

Truth About Czar's Assassination.

The correspondent in Russia of one of the London, England, papers has obtained at last authentic news of the murder of the Czar and the Russian royal family.

It establishes what we already knew of "the tragedy of July 16, 1918. On that day the Imperial family and their attendants—eleven persons in all—were led into a small room in the house, where they had been imprisoned, and shot to death with revolvers. After death, the bodies were taken to the woods and completely destroyed."

The narrative is based "upon evidence obtained by a properly constituted legal investigation," and in the correspondent's possession are depositions signed by eye-witnesses. He is able to present what, in effect, would be the case for the prosecution if the affair were before a Court of Law. This evidence, overwhelming in its completeness and continuity, was built up by the patience and skill of one investigator, Nicholas Alexeevitch Sokolov.

"This gentleman, a magistrate, had left his home and family in Penza to avoid service under the Reds, and had managed, after innumerable hardships and hairbreadth escapes, to cross, disguised as a peasant, into Siberia. He walked the last 25 miles footless, his feet one mass of sores and blisters. An ardent sportsman, he had lost an eye through the carelessness of a comrade. He had made a name for himself in the investigation of famous criminal cases.

He was relentless, tireless, full of resource in the pursuit alike of murderers and beasts of prey. The Czar case called for the exercise of all the skill that the most genial and courageous of magistrates could display. Sokolov never faltered. It is, thanks to him, that an overwhelming mass of evidence has been built up into a structure that cannot be overthrown—that still continues to grow.

He was appointed to investigate this horror by Koltchak, the "Supreme Ruler."

Tortured and Maltreated First.

At Ekaterinburg, on the night of July 16, 1918, the Imperial family and their faithful attendants—eleven persons in all—were led into a small room in the house where they had been imprisoned and shot to death with revolvers. There had been no trial of any kind. Before their death the captives were subjected to ill-treatment amounting to horrible torture, mental if not physical. After death the bodies were taken to the woods and completely destroyed. These acts had been premeditated and the murders elaborately prepared.

"It is established beyond doubt that the ex-Czar fell a victim to his loyalty," says the correspondent. "He had refused offers from the enemies of Russia's Allies proposing that he should endorse the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk. Attempts to inveigle him into an unholy alliance undoubtedly preceded the murder. All the Romanovs who died violent deaths were, like the Czar, inconvenient to German as well as to International plans. So many tales have been circulated regarding the fate of the Romanovs, in most cases without the slightest approach to the truth, that I consider myself bound to relate the circumstances which have (1) placed in my possession the complete history and documents of the case; and (2) imposed upon me a moral obligation to publish the truth to the world.

What Correspondent Saw.

"I visited the house where the victims had lived. It belonged to a certain Ipatiev, a merchant who held the rank of captain in the Engineers. By one of the ironies of fate he bore the name of the monastery whence the first Romanov sallied to assume the Crown of all the Russians. The Ipatiev of Ekaterinburg was, however, of Jewish origin.

"The lower floor was tenanted by Ipatiev himself, on the understanding that no strangers should be admitted. The small basement room—the scene of the murders—was sealed up. I saw it a few days later. Sokolov took me over the premises, explaining step by step the enactment of the tragedy. We stood in the little room, noted the trace of the bullets, the direction of the bayonet thrusts, and splashes of blood on the walls. The room had been a shambles, and all the washing and scouring that, according to the evidence, had followed the murders could not remove tell-tale signs. We knew from the depositions of witnesses and the mute, gruesome language of the death-chamber where each of the victims sat or stood when the assassins fired their revolvers. The bullet-holes in the walls and in the floor had been carefully cut out; human blood had been found in the wood and on the bullets.

"Obscene drawings and inscriptions covered the upper walls. Obviously they were the work of uncultured peasants. Their character showed only too clearly how deeply the conscience of the people had been revolted by the Rasputin scandal."

Bodies Were Burned.

"Soon afterwards I was in the woods 10 miles north of the city, where the peasants had found jewellery and other relics of the murdered family. I saw the tracks, still clear, of heavy lorries crashing through the trees to a group of disused iron-ore shafts.

"All went in one direction, ceasing near a pit round which a vast collection of clues had been discovered; precious stones, pearls, beautiful settings of gold and platinum, some hacked, broken, bearing traces of fire; metal buckles, hooks, buttons, corset-frames, pieces of charred leather and cloth, a human finger intact, a set of false teeth. The character, condition, and numbers of these various articles were in themselves sufficient to indicate the sex and age of the victims, and the manner in which their bodies had been disposed of.

"First on the scene had been the peasants. For three days and nights they were cut off from the city by a cordon of Red Guards placed around the wood. Knowing that the Whites were at hand, they thought the Reds were burying arms. Vague rumors had reached them of the death of Nicholas II. As soon as the cordon had been removed they rushed to the spot.

"Woodcraft and native astuteness quickly opened their eyes. 'It is the Czar that they have been burning here,' they declared. On this very spot, a year later, I found topaz beads, such as the young Princesses wore, and other gems, by scratching the surface of the hardened clay surrounding the iron pit."

Such was undoubtedly the end of the Imperial dynasty of the Romanovs, once the richest and greatest monarchs in existence.

A Black Eye to Baseball.

THE RECENT EXPOSURE DISCUSSED.

That the game of baseball has received a bad blow if not a near knockout as the result of the throwing of games by several of the Chicago White Sox stars in the last world's series played with the Cincinnati Reds there is no doubt. The whole affair as unearthed by the Cook County jury provides one of the biggest scandals that the sporting world has ever known, and its effect on the national game of the United States will probably be felt for many a day. In itself the story of the whole affair is a sordid one. The games were sold by eight players, namely, Eddie Cicotte, star pitcher of the Chicago team; Charles Risberg, Buck Weaver, Joe Jackson, Happy Felsch, Chick Gandil and Fred McMullin, to a number of gamblers, who no doubt made a big clean up on the series. Five of the players were afterwards double-crossed by the gamblers, who refused to come across with coin.

One of the direct results will be that the eight players, who are implicated, will be thrown out of the game and action taken against the gamblers, who approached the players to throw the games. An indirect result of the affair which will be by far the worst one will be that the sporting public will become suspicious of baseball as a sport and it will be hard to convince some that the game is strictly on the square. Its effect on the game as a whole can be determined somewhat by the attitude of the fans toward the coming world's series. The whole business only goes to show that there is practically no game that is entirely free from the taint of the gambling evil. Baseball in the big leagues previous to 1919, was no doubt clean, but now that the sporting public know that games have been sold, they will not take quite the same interest in the world's series games as formerly. The throwing of the series to Cincinnati puts baseball on a par with horse racing, which has had the reputation of being the worst sport for crooked work, the home of the gambling evil. What will be the effect of the exposure? That is no doubt a question that is uppermost in the minds of the big league baseball magnates to-day.

Aerial Foes.

A Swiss aviator has recently been in combat with another bird of passage—a large and powerful eagle. The bird evidently resented pretty strongly the aeronaut's entry into his domain, for he gave chase, and annoyed him for some considerable time, says a correspondent. Before landing, however, he took every possible means to rid himself of his tormentor. He looped the loop, nose-dived, righted the machine again, completed a series of circles, but all to no avail. The eagle had him every time. This incident occurred some 5,000 feet above St. Moritz, and created quite a stir. That birds and insects take more than a passing interest in the strider man has made in the flying world is described by a French naturalist and airman. During the war he was in charge of a captive balloon, and says that the numbers of birds and insects attracted to his aerial craft were numerous. They not only came to look, but to stay, and he was thus able to secure many rare specimens.

THE SHOE MEN.

Fiction Has Changed.

Victorian Era Differed From the Present Day.

"Now, we have been a remarkably contented people," writes "Abydos" in the English Review.

"The Victorian writers grew up with our imperial and industrial wealth, and as men did not then write for the masses, and the classes formed quite a specific isolation among themselves, their subject-matter more or less had to be the conventions, just as Punch in the old days was little more than an equestrian class paper. Writers shunned analysis, psychology, the depths, because the 'gentlemen' of insular England, who was the sole buyer of books, hated criticism; he hunted, drank port, or wore a silk hat. Great art springs from tears."

"Our fiction is superficial because insular England was so contented, so rich, too pleased with itself to suffer criticism; consequently our fiction was artificial and unsexed till well into the eighties, when George Gissing first wrote honestly about the squalor and poverty of London, and was hated for his seriousness accordingly. Our fiction is seen to be spe-meral to-day because our national attitude can no longer be self-deception. Bernard Shaw unhorsed the 'gentleman,' and to-day women have entered the field. For the first time in this country sex is now recognized (Dickens never touched it.) We admit sex and even sex analysis in fiction to-day. But Byron had to leave the country for a kiss.

"The war has bayoneted Mrs. Grundy. It - women who are writing to-day, probing, groping, unravelling; they surely will have a message, and from the depths, for women are always in and out of the essentials, and it was no woman who wrote 'Peter Pan.' Their fairies are of this world. In this, their sex epoch, they will probably revolutionize the whole scope and purpose of fiction."

When Father Shaves.

When father shaves his stubby face At nine on Sunday morn. There always stasis about the place A feeling most forlorn. An awful silence settles down On all the human race. It's like a funeral in the town When father shaves his face. He gets his razor from the shelf. And drops it up and down. And mutters wildly to himself. And throws us all a frown. We dare not look to right or left. Or breathe in any case. Even mother has to tiptoe quiet When father shaves his face. He plasters lather everywhere. And daubs the window-pane. But mother says she doesn't care. She'll clean it off again. She tries to please him all she can. To save us from disgrace. For he's an awful nervous man. When father shaves his face. We try to sit like mummies there. And live the ordeal through. To hear that razor rip and tear. And likewise father too. And if it slips and cuts his chin. We jump and quit the place. No power on earth could keep us sane. When father cuts his face.

Lunch Basket is Empty Now When He Gets Through

Melville's Appetite is Splendid Since He Began Taking Tanlac—Indigestion Gone.

"I was never much of a hand to praise any kind of medicine, but I can certainly say something good for Tanlac," said Claude Melville, of Fairville, N.B., the other day. During the World War, Mr. Melville was with the Royal Artillery in France, as an expert. Since coming to Canada from England a year ago, he has been employed by the Nashwaak Pulp Mill. "Six months ago," he continued, "I was as healthy a man as walks the streets of St. John, but about that time my stomach got out of fix and I just went down hill in a hurry. After every meal I suffered horribly from the sharpest kind of pains in the pit of my stomach. "Often I couldn't eat a bite and many a day I went to my work after taking just a few mouthfuls for breakfast, and then carried home my lunch basket in the evening nearly as full as when I started out in the morning. "It was very unusual for me to get a good night's sleep, and most of the time I woke up in the morning feeling as tired as on going to bed. I had an aching in my joints something like rheumatism, and felt so weak and bad I didn't know what to do. I lost weight and strength continually, had to lay off work for three and four days at a time, and frequently it looked like I would have to quit the job altogether. "But Tanlac has certainly changed all that for me. My appetite picked up from the start, and now I can tell you my lunch basket is empty when it goes home in the evening. Everything agrees with me and I have already gained back ten pounds of my lost weight. "At night I sleep like a top and don't hear a sound or make a move till morning. The long and short of it is, I am free from all my aches and pains and feel like a different man altogether. From now on you can put me down as a firm believer in Tanlac." Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph by Salmoner, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in Millertown, by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamesport by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Frazer—adv.

Short Lived Rejoicings.

When the French Revolution broke out Liberals the world over rejoiced; similar rejoicings were manifested when the Russian revolution took place. Slowly the conduct of the French revolutionaries alienated the sympathy of mankind; more slowly sane men and women—even those of Radical persuasion—are growing disgusted with the turn of events in Soviet Russia. Reds who were deported from the United States to Russia, among them Emma Goldman, write of their disillusionment in the "land of freedom." Bertrand Russell, well-known as an English Communist writer, went to Russia to learn the truth; and found it very unpalatable indeed. Mrs. Snowden, a noted leader in British Radical Labor circles, also went to Russia to find out at first hand the value of the Soviet brand of Communism; and she has written in her book some very bitter criticism of Lenin and Trotsky's administration and of their curtailment of the people's liberty. No doubt some of the reports which emanated from Petrograd were garbled by prejudiced writers, but it would seem as if those who continue to hold to the belief that the Russian system as practised in Russia is the most conducive to liberty, are those who willfully close their eyes to the truth: even that testified to by their own leaders in thought.—Montreal Star.

Constable of the Tower.

One of the greatest "Constables" the Tower of London has ever had was the Duke of Wellington, and he has left his name indelibly imprinted on its history.

The hero of the Peninsular War, the victor at Waterloo, the great general who overthrew Napoleon, a duke and a prince, he accepted the constabulary not as an empty honor or an added perquisite, but to do his best for the Tower as its titular head, writes Sir Francis Younghusband in Chambers' Journal.

It was in 1826, eleven years after Waterloo, that the Duke took over office and at once his orderly mind began to work. Constantly clad in tight white overalls and a blue coat (the coat still hangs in the White Tower) he would mount his horse at Apsley House, and take his morning ride down to the Tower, a good seven miles' ride, much of it through unsavoury slums. There what did he find? The old Tower, through the neglect of ages, falling into decay and disrepair, great gaps in the crumbling walls, the loose towers fast becoming ruins. Every passage and roadway within was blocked with squalid huts, mean buildings, and lean-tos. The moat was a fetid ditch into which the garrison and the inhabitants had emptied their filth for centuries. Only on the top was there a shallow layer of water slightly freshened by the rising and falling tide, whilst beneath lay filthy slime to the depth of a man's height. Within the circle of this noisome ditch and inside the ruined walls of the Tower lived not only the garrison, but a dense population of men, women and children who had in one way or another acquired a right to reside there. Amidst these congenial surroundings the microbes of every imaginable disease lived and flourished, and among them carried off more victims than did the axe of old.

The Duke took some little time to get his bearings, and still more important to procure money for his reforms; for, as after all great wars there was not much money in the Treasury to spare on sentiment, or even on sanitation. But his effort was made when he impressed Queen Victoria, so that she took a personal interest in the old Tower. Henceforth what seemed a hopeless task became, with perhaps a set-back here and there, a settled policy which was steadily carried on even after the old duke's death.

One of the first improvements to be taken in hand was the draining and cleansing of the moat. To effect this the river was shut out, a modicum of the filth and slime removed, and then six feet of dry earth and rubble were rammed in, thus making a hard, dry surface. At the same time the wretched hovels which disgraced the interior were gradually removed, and with them the superfluous population which had no duties to perform in the Tower, and were only an encumbrance and a source of disease.

The restoration of the lesser towers and the repair of the broken-down walls was not allowed to be a patch-work affair. In the person of Salvin, a first-class architect, and one imbued with the spirit of the place, the Tower obtained a true and sympathetic friend. Using the old plans and sketches of the Tower as it had been at its zenith, Salvin drew up a complete scheme of restoration. This comprehensive plan, though it took several decades to complete, has resulted in the old Tower of London being now erect and firm as ever. There was one portion, however, which needed little repair—namely, the White Tower, which stands sturdy and strong as it did when William the Conqueror first held his court within its massive walls.

The Duke of Wellington was Constable of the Tower for twenty-six years, and on his death the appointment went first to one of his old comrades, Field-Marshal Viscount Combermere, and then to another Peninsular veteran Field-Marshal Sir John Fox Burgoyne. From that time onwards the office of Constable has invariably been held by a soldier, sometimes a field-marshal, and sometimes a general. So far as it has been possible to trace them, there have been about 136 Constables since the Tower was built.

Very soon after William the Conqueror started to build the Tower (Sir Francis says) he appointed one of his Norman followers to give military advice during its construction, so that it might be impregnable from all sides, and when it was completed to the king's satisfaction, to take command of the fortress and its Norman garrison. This officer the king named "The Constable of the Tower," and the first to bear the title, was Geoffrey de Mandeville. This Geoffrey de Mandeville was a stout soldier who had fought with William in many battles and skirmishes on the Continent and had borne himself with conspicuous courage and resources at the battle of Hastings.

How Persian Women Live.

To study the simple life in perfection one ought to go to Persia, where no furniture is used in the houses. The inside walls are covered with fine white plaster decorated with lovely mouldings, and little arches of white plaster spring up in every direction, and serve as tables and dressers. In the Andarum, or women's part, all the windows are of stained glass, through which the Eastern sunlight enters and casts charming coloured reflections on the snowy interior. No chairs are required, because Orientals sit on the floor, while everywhere the Persian lady goes she takes with her, as part of her luggage, a thin mattress stuffed with cotton wool, on which she can repose either by night or day.

As there is no furniture, sweeping and dusting are unknown in the Persian home. Also the laundry is not serious, for women wear the same clothes to sleep in as they do when up. These are changed once a month, when the lady attends the public bath, the Hamam, accompanied by a maid, who carries her clean garments on a tray. Here she is scrubbed from head to foot with pumice stone (sapp is unknown), her eyes are blackened with indigo, and her hair, and also the palms of her hands and the soles of her feet are dyed red with henna.

The hair of the Persian woman is her great beauty, and is usually long enough to sit upon. From early childhood it is closely plaited with white cotton, which is supposed to give it a downward tendency and to make it grow.

When a Persian lady goes abroad she wears wide trousers of bright grass-green silk over her scanty indoor clothes, and is closely veiled. No man may look at her, and she might be a jewel in a casket too precious to be worn in public. No wonder some of the better educated women are beginning to rebel against the restrictions which have imprisoned them for centuries in tolerance and inertia.

White House Dress.

SOME OF THE TRADITIONS OF GENERAL WASHINGTON.

When President Wilson, because of illness, received the King of the Belgians while propped up in bed, and told the Prince of Wales that the bed in which he lay had been occupied by Baron Renfrew, later King Edward VII, and Abraham Lincoln, he added traditions to the host already clinging about the White House.

President Wilson's enforced disability recalls the premeditated negligence—worn slippers, yarn stockings, and old suit—by which Jefferson sought to impress the British Ambassador with American democracy when that official arrived in full official dress to present his credentials," observes a bulletin of the National Geographical Society. "Early morning callers on John Quincy Adams had to cool their heels until that President finished three chapters in the Bible and walked down back of the White House for a swim in the Potomac. To 'drop in' at the White House evenings, quite the sociable thing to do during Jackson's terms, meant finding the Chief Executive before an open fire, in an old loose coat doing duty as a smoking jacket, puffing at a long pipe with a bowl of red clay. "No room at the White House is better known to the public than the East Room, of late years the scene of brilliant receptions and White House weddings. It, too, has memories of a cruder democracy when all Washington flocked there to 'follow about the servants who carried refreshments, seizing upon whatever they could get," and upon one occasion two "ladies" perched upon the chimney piece to get a better view of the colorful scene. "Strange were the gifts to Presidents of earlier years. Strangest of all, perhaps, was the cheese sent to Thomas Jefferson, with the admiring inscription, 'The greatest cheese in America for the greatest man in America.' It was conveyed to Jefferson by a six-horse team. He insisted upon paying for it, and it lasted for more than a year, being the piece de resistance of many a state dinner in the meantime."

Selling Human Bones.
 The keeper of a public cemetery of a small Bohemian town near Prague excavated the older parts of the graveyard, and sold all the old bones he could find for industrial purposes, as he found that certain manufacturers paid more for human bones than for those of animals. He had been earning money in this way for several years before he was detected and suspended from the post.

A MEATLESS HOT PIE

Another Use Discovered For These Oxo Cubes.

Here is a recipe calling for no meat other than the concentrated beef-goodness to be found in the familiar Oxo cube.

Peel and slice sufficient potatoes to half fill a large pie dish, add few small onions, also sliced. Put into cold water, bring quickly to a boil, boil one minute, then drain.

Put back in pie dish with few slices of tomato, season with pepper and salt and flavour with herbs. Dissolve one Oxo cube in 1 pint of hot milk and pour over mixture. Put few bits of butter on top and bake for two hours in moderate oven. It's delicious.

Eat Raw Cabbage and Live Longer.

"Vitamines" and "antiscorbutics" are terms that are bandied about quite fluently these days. We see many an article discussing the vitamine value of various foods in popular style.

The modern housewife is directly concerned when preparing her food to retain as much as possible of these vitalizing ingredients to safeguard the wellbeing of her family.

One of the most valuable vitamines bearing foods is cabbage in the natural state. Cook it and you lose 70 per cent. of the protective value. Why bother to cook cabbage when it is so much more healthful, more delicious, when raw?

Heretofore oranges have been considered the advance guard in warding off scurvy and riches, especially in the case of children fed on sterilized milk. But when they cost 10 cents a piece there are a great many who cannot fortify themselves with this medical food luxury. Science disclosed the fact only the last year that cabbage is quite as effective as an antiscorbutic (scurvy fighter) as the golden fruit.

To be sure, invalids and infants cannot eat cabbage, so the orange still reigns supreme in nursery and sick-room, but for normally healthy persons who want to keep themselves fit, we recommend the cabbage as it stands.

There are several ways in which cabbage can be served raw, so its retention need not pall on you. Always have it very crisp and cold, but do not soak it in water. Shred it very finely; a little sharp knife serves the purpose just as well as a shredder. Another word of warning: Don't marinate the cabbage in dressing. This makes a tough, wilted mass, and the cabbage propaganda will fail if it is presented in this defective plight.

Cabbage combined with ham or chicken, apples or pineapple, as well as with preferred salad dressing, is delicious, and once you get the raw cabbage habit you will be an addict for life—and your life will be longer.

Engineer's Daring Conquered the Desert.

The Prince of Wales, when he decided to make his recent journey from Perth to Adelaide, by means of Australia's first trans-continental railway, paid a high compliment to the daring and skill of the Australian engineers who conquered one of the world's most formidable deserts.

It was the late Lord Kitchener who suggested the line, pointing out that for strategical and other reasons Western Australia should be linked with the other States of the Commonwealth by an iron road.

But the great Victorian Desert lay between a barren, inhospitable and waterless stretch of country, over a thousand square miles in area. Not a rivulet is to be found in the whole of this vast region. It is one dreary expanse of sand and limestone rock, relieved here and there by salt-bush, which even cattle refuse to eat. Worse still are the intense heat and the blood-sucking insects which abound.

The heat meant a five years' battle against terrible odds. It was only completed just before the Armistice.

The survey work alone occupied two years and cost $100,000, the total expenses of the undertaking amounting to over $35,000,000. Camels had to be requisitioned to carry the surveyors and their stores. The chief engineer records how it was impossible to use ink, as it instantly dried on the pen and the leads dropped out of the shrivelled pencils. To secure relief from the rays of the midday sun they had to bury themselves in holes in the sand, when they were attacked by fierce insects.

The route having been decided on, the steel rails were laid simultaneously from each end across the desert. As the country was for the most part flat, and not a river or a noticeable hill intervened, little navvying work was necessary. It was simply a case of making an even bed on which the sleepers were quickly laid. Then came the placing of the steel rails across them by means of a track-layer, and spiking and bolting them.

Very trying, however, was the heat, particularly during the summer months. It was often impossible at midday to touch the steel rails or handle a shovel without fear of blistering the fingers. The men had to be provided with rubber gloves to enable them to handle their tools and also to save their finger-nails from splitting, and wear masks as a protection against the insects. Life was only made possible by a liberal daily supply of ice, obtained from the refrigerating cars attached to the construction trains which followed them.

At intervals of fifty miles or so, water tanks were built, the intention being to use these in connection with the working of the trains. They were to be supplied with water pumped from the reservoirs at Kalgoorlie. But after two and a half years' work, during which the track had progressed at the rate of about a mile a day, the engineers realized that if a really efficient service was to be maintained the proposed method of obtaining water would have to be modified.

A Priceless Discovery.

So they sent for a boring plant, and at a point 350 miles from Kalgoorlie, began boring for water. Everyone shook their heads, declaring there was no water in the whole barren land. But at a depth of 1,300 ft. water was found.

This discovery of water not only relieved the engineers of considerable anxiety and greatly lessened their work, but it has changed the whole aspect of the country.

Sheep now graze along the track, which a few years ago was a barren

One Class Favored in Russia.

There is only one favoured class in Russia today, according to a correspondent. Strangely enough this class is composed entirely of women. They are the theatrical stars and beauties. They alone are permitted the wearing of rich garments and the possession of jewels. The Russians have always been passionate lovers of the theatre, and even under the present regime, they treat their stage favorites as so many reigning queens. Incidentally, the actresses are the only women in Russia who are permitted to wear shoes during winter weather. The peasant women of Russia always went barefoot during the summer months. Hence Russians regard bare feet as the distinguishing mark of the women of the people. Any woman who affects to wear shoes in Russia, nowadays, unless she be a favourite of the footlights, is regarded as a daughter of the despised "bourgeoisie." She is considered a fair target for insult and persecution. Even the wives of the Soviet dignitaries, such as Trotsky and Lenin, have been obliged to bow to popular sentiment. They may be seen any day in Moscow, tripping through the streets barefoot.

Extraordinary Job for a Woman.

Fifty-five years ago last August the steamer Pewabic was sunk in collision with the steamer Meteor off Thunder Bay Island in Lake Huron. Her cargo of copper grew vastly more valuable as years went on, and many were the adventurers who dreamed of salvaging it and sought to put their dreams into action. What these male adventurers failed to achieve was left to a woman to accomplish. She is Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman, the only woman in the world in the deep sea salvage business. A little creature is she, a trifle over five feet and slender and delicate of physique, but in courage and perseverance she is quite gigantic. It took three years of employment of these remarkable qualities to bring success in her first effort at salvage, but success came at last. With the raising of the first load of copper from a vessel submerged over half a century came the breaking of a world record in deep-water salvage and the climax of a story that borders on legend. Mrs. Goodman who is the daughter of the late John Burdett Campbell, a scion of a Scottish family, spent her early life in Mount Pleasant, Michigan, and after her school days she went to Toledo, Ohio, which is her present home.

A Modernized Utopia.

Dr. Hahum Syrkin, of New York, has been outlining the plan of a socialist Jewish state in Palestine, which, with the help of the much-discussed and often-abused international Jew, it is thought to establish, in view of the new order which the war has created. The association with which Dr. Syrkin is connected has had a committee at work in Palestine and in other lands and hopes to act in connection with the Zionists, who have long entertained the hope of securing a restored Holy Land as a home for the scattered people of Israel. The idea is to avoid the struggles between capital and labor, so disturbing to the peace and progress of modern peoples. In the new state it is proposed there will be no capitalists. Public utilities, resources and big industries, agriculture included, will be conducted on a co-operative plan, ownership resting with the nation. Distribution of merchandise will be carried on under a like plan. The purpose will be to produce for use, not for profit, which is the great socialist ideal. The beginning will be somewhat costly. The ownership of the land in Palestine is in various hands, the Mohammedans holding most. To re-establish the Jewish people thereon it will be necessary to obtain a new title, and this, with the other necessary outlays, is expected to call for a capital of $300,000,000. It is in providing this that the international Jew is expected to play his part. The sum is a huge one, but what has been done by Israelitish men of wealth and liberality for their poorer fellows suggests that it may be possible to raise it. The getting of the capital may be but a little part of the great task. The Jew, having no home land of his own, has homes in many lands. There are cases where his withdrawal would mean more loss to the land in which he lives than benefit to Palestine. It is doubtful, also, if a socialist commonwealth would be as attractive to the Jewish people, the opportunity for individual gain that is the great incentive to industry in the case of ordinary men. Many working Jews, it is true, are theoretical socialists, but they have become so, it is to be thought, rather from their surroundings than from study of the principles in issue. The proposal is a sign of the drift of thought among many earnest men. It seems doubtful, though, if it will be carried to the extent of making Palestine, once again, a land flowing with milk and honey.—Montreal Gazette.

Women Who Live Underground.

Among the startling discoveries made by Mrs. J. R. Forbes, the well-known woman traveler, who lately returned after wandering for several months from Morocco to Syria, was a tribe of women who live underground. They are to be found in caves in the Tripoli mountains, and come up only once in the course of their lives. That is when they marry and change their abode for that of their husband. Being continually in their underground caves a remarkable change takes place in their appearance. They become very white in the face, and their eyes become dark and brilliant. As they grow older they are seized with a passion for dyeing their hair with henna. In the daylight these women are almost blind; in fact, they stagger about as though under the influence of drink. Their houses are spacious enough for them to keep all their live stock belowground, including their camels. Another curious adventure of Mrs. Forbes was into the harem of the Syrian sheikh Mohamed Abdulla. At a feast at which she was entertained a sheep was roasted whole, and, by way of doing tribute to his guest, Mohamed Abdulla extracted the sheep's eye whole with his hands and proffered it to the Englishwoman.

The British Pilgrim Delegation.

Notwithstanding former State Senator Brennan's opposition to celebrating the Pilgrim tercentenary, essentially on the ground that the Pilgrims came from England the event is to be fittingly observed, and in happy concurrence with a delegation of people from the country whence the Argonauts of Faith sailed in 1620. These representatives have already been cordially welcomed to New York city and it would indeed be strange if, all exigencies of national propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding they were not welcomed with still greater earnestness in Boston and Plymouth, where the Pilgrim tradition is still and in spite of everything, a dominant influence in the local life.

There is one very interesting thing about the coming of the British delegation to join themselves to our national celebration of the Pilgrims' landing which Mr. Brennan and those who share his view seem to have quite forgotten. This is the fact that the participation involves the formal confession on Britain's part of a national error. The Pilgrims left England because their worship and their preaching were hampered by episcopal regulation and interference. They came here, as the English poet has expressed it, seeking "freedom to worship God." That it was a grievous error for Britain thus in effect to turn them out, history has certainly proved. The greatness achieved by the commonwealth which the Pilgrims founded on the principle so blindly denied in England is time's proof that the exclusion was wrong. To the British people of the early seventeenth century, probably no less than to the hierarchy, the refugee Separatists were a wicked and a stiff-necked generation. When they sailed and quite in spite of the local goodwill of old Plymouth and Southampton—the British nation said "good riddance to bad rubbish." In the persons of the British delegates to the tercentenary celebration, England to-day says quite a different thing. It exalts the exiles' names as champions and upholders of the true Anglo-Saxon spirit. Can even the most fanatical anti-British really object to such a national amende?

As a matter of fact, the two nations that are concerned in the celebration, this separate and free American nation and Britain the motherland of the Pilgrims and their offspring and successors, are very well agreed on the principles and sentiments that are involved in the observance and need no excuse or apology for the joint proceeding. America recognizes the fact that some centuries of national sturdiness of opinion and independence in public conduct had a good deal to do with making the Plymouth Pilgrims the stiff-necked generation that they were. They were not nurtured though for a little time, they had been sheltered in Holland; they were not a German, or a French, or a Scandinavian product; they were Englishmen, with The English, for the past, have, permost in them. This fact it will certainly be entirely decent for us to acknowledge in the celebration. The English, for the part, have, as we have seen, confessed their error in turning the Pilgrims out, and they also acknowledge fully the vast and deeply momentous consequences to them and all the world of the founding of the Pilgrim state in the American wilderness. The ground is clear for an honorable welcome to the British delegation, and for a hearty concurrence in the proceedings connected with their visit—Boston Transcript.

Prince at Panama.

RENOWN'S FAST TRIP THROUGH GREAT CANAL.

In record time for a vessel of her size, H.M.S. Renown, which is bringing the Prince of Wales home from Australia, passed through the Panama Canal. After a smooth voyage from Acapulco, Mexico, she arrived at Panama where the Prince was received with every courtesy by the American authorities. Salutes were fired and his flag was honored. No halt was made and the Canal was immediately entered, the Renown negotiating it successfully in a trip lasting seven hours. Every lock was found cleared and every possible facility was offered. Dredgers are still at work clearing away stones and earth brought down by a landslide in the Culebra Cut. This delayed the Renown on the outward voyage, but a huge quantity of earth has been removed with the result that the Canal has been so broadened at this dangerous point as enormously to reduce the risk of future slides. At Gatun Locks the Prince went ashore, embarking upon a launch under the charge of Mr. Markham, one of the heads of the Canal Department, who undertook to show His Royal Highness some target fishing. Gatun Lake was traversed by the Renown at a speed of 13 knots. On arrival at Colon she was moored at Cristobal Wharf, where the Prince gave a dinner on board to the President of the Panama Republic, the Governor and other officers of the Canal.

If a Testator

although seeing the benefits to be derived from a Trust Company's administration, hesitates about cancelling any appointment he may have already made, the Montreal Trust Company can be named to act with the Executor or Executors already appointed. In this way the Trust Company co-operates with the Testator's appointees in the administration of the Estate.

This plan is very acceptable when the Testator's wife is named as Executor. Few women have the necessary business training to enable them to carry on the administration of an Estate, but with the co-operation of the Montreal Trust Company the Testator's wife can be appointed with full assurance that the Estate will be well looked after.
