Liverpool was excited over the last fire there. The scene, the papers tell us, "surpassed all Dantesque imaginings, and glints of light were revealed in the heavens which only a Dore could have sketched." It was a pier that was burned.

Le Bien Public states that M. Masson, M. P., has gone to Manitoba to prevail upon such friends of Riel as were opposed to his renomination. It adds that his journey is useless, as Riel will undoubtedly be the candidate. Opposition it holds is useless.

A terrible thing has occurred at the English Bar. Some eminent counsel have returned retaining fees. Such a thing was never known before, and the Inns of Court have ordered an inquiry into the matter, with the view of administering proper pun'shment for such up professional conduct.

There is still trouble as to the sort of statue that shall be placed on the Vandome column in Paris. Some want the Imperial Napoleon, others prefer the Liftile Corporal, others would like the God dess of Liberty. One of the piquant suggestions is that a magnificent political weathercock would be both ornamental and useful.

A pupil in a school at Dumfries, Scotland, was awarded a volume of Bunyan's state that a magnificent political weathercock would be both ornamental and useful.
