How Scores of German Soldiers Are Returning to Their Homes.

Nearly $1,000,000 Loss Done by a Fire in London---Spectacular Event in China.

Hanover, July 13 .- Scores of Ger- | India docks today destroyed a numman soldiers are returning from China with the expeditionary corps, either in chains or closely guarded on board ship. Upon the arrival of each vessel the prisoners are immediately taken to the penitentiary, having been already court-martialed in China. Despite the rigid secrecy of the authorities it has leaked out that the disgraced men are being punished for atrocities committed during the sacking of Pekin. A member of the expeditionary corps states that the crimes of which these soldiers have been convicted were chiefly those mentioned in the so-called "Hun" letters, out of which the Social Democratic press made so much capital. It is recalled that the government press denied the truth of those letters in a half-hearted nanner, convincing the reading pubic that the alleged atrocities had really been committed. Among the imprisoned soldiers are many officers, some of whom are in duress owing to their alleged cowardice before the enemy.

SPECTACULAR EVENT IN PEKIN. Pekin, July 13.-The departure from Pekin of Prince Chun, younger brother of Emperor Kwang Su, who has been selected formally to apologize at Berlin for the murder of Baron Van Ket-teler, was a spectacular event. A special train took Prince Chun and his suite from here to Taku, from which port he will proceed by steamer to Shanghai. He sails from Shanghai on July 20 for Genoa, and will proceed directly from there to Berlin by rail. Prince Chun came to the railway station in Pekin on horseback. He was in the various professions, with a vic gorgeously attired in the royal yellow, of bringing them back to China, at and followed by a long procession, government expense, where they will composed of members of his staff, their be eligible for office. and followed by a long procession, servants and the luggage. Here he was met by the present German minister to China, Dr. Mumm Von Schwarenstein, a German military band and a guard of honor, and two of his brothers. Two German officers formerly attached to the staff of Field Marshal Count Von Waldersee will

trouble to fright. After the boy's return from Buffalo he applied the treatment the specialist recommended and soon his head was as smooth as plate-glass. Then the eyelashes and eyebrows dropped off. The specialist says that at least a year, and perhaps longer will be required to effect a cure, and possibly there may be none then. in favor of the boy is his youth.

He suffers no discomfort except in the bright sun, when absence of eyebrows and eyelashes make him blink. He is growing very sensitive owing to the fact that rough boys of his own age try to pull off the close-fitting cap he wears, to see his bald head, and he doesn't like that.

The specialist says that the first sign of the return of hair to his head will be a fuzzy growth, not unlike lawn grass, which will soon disappear, leaving the head bald again. will come a second growth of bristles as stiff as those in a tooth brush, and requently of a reddish color, though the natural color of the hair may be black. Port Huron, Forest, Essex, Exeter, Watford, Oakdale and Wanstead, with bands. A monster procession was formed on the market and marched out to the fair grounds, where speeches and games took place. The following were the speakers: Mayor Graham, Rev. W. T. Cluff, of Strathroy; Rev. Mr. Willmott, Appin; A. L. Gurd, Petrolia; Rev. T. H. Brown, Delaware; Rev. T. W. Hodgins, Seaforth. The day was fine and everything passed off pleasantly.

AT LUCKNOW. AT LUCKNOW.

The Orange demonstration at Lucknow, representing the counties of Huron and Bruce, was the largest ever held in this district, over 30 Orange lodges, with colors, besides Orange Young Britons and Lady True Blues being represented, and fully 8,000 people were present. The streets were decked with green cedars, the stores displayed flags and banners, while arches, streamers, bunting and mottoes spanned the roadway. The procession mustered at the Queen's Park cession mustered at the Queen's Park, and, headed by the village council, paraded to Caledonian Park, where a programme of speaking and music was carried out, at which Lieut.-Col. Scott, district deputy grand master, Ontario West, presided. The speaker of the day was Alex. Muir, of Toronto. His oration WAS LEFT was one of great fervor. Assisting him also were A. H. Musgrove, Wingham, and the local and visiting clergy. A concert held in the evening concluded the celebration.

AT STRATFORD. The Orangemen of Middlesex, Perth and Huron united in celebrating the Glorious Tweifth at Stratford, and succeeded admirably. The weather was perceeded admirably. The weather was perfect for such a gathering, and the procession probably was the largest of its kind ever seen here. Forty-five lodges were represented. The celebration proper took place at Queen Victoria Park, where games were indulged in and addreses were delivered by H. B. Morphy, Mayor Stamp, John Scarlett, Thomas Magwood, John McMillan, Rev. Wm. Walsh and others. It is estimated that upwards of 5,000 visitors came to town today.

AT WINNIPEG The Orangemen of the city celebrated the Twelfth by holding monster plenics at Carman, Neepawa and Boissevain. The day was very bright and hot.

AT MONTREAL. Orange lodges of this city paraded from their lodge rooms to Bonaventure depot in the morning, taking the train for Huntingdon. They celebrated the day at a picnic held by the different lodges in that strong Orange district. The annual church parade will take place on Sunday afternoon to St. Bartholomew's Church, Beaver Hall Hill.

AT OTTAWA. The local Orangemen paraded to the Central station and took the train for Wakefield, where a big celebration was held. About 400 Orangemen were in line in the local parade. The flag was flying from the city hall in honor of the day. It was flown last Twelfth of July for the first time.

Supreme Lodge Adopts Drastic Plan to Save the Knights of Pythias Insurance Order.

Chicago, July 13.-Having get rid of child's play. Nearly every one of the John A. Hinsey, whom it charged with the troubles which have befallen the Endowment Rank, the supreme lodge of the Knight of Pythias devoted Thursday to reorganizing the insurance branch and making impossible any such misfortunes in the future. Its most important action was an increase in rates of 51 per cent on specialty. Great quantities of them the average.

This drastic measure is expected, according to C. F. S. Neal, the new head of the Endowment Rank, "to drive away at least 20,000 members at the start," but at least 20,000 members at the start," but it seemed the only way out.
Besides this, the supreme lodge formally pledged the entire membership and assets of the order for the speedy payment of the death claims due and for the maintenance of all the certificates now in force.

It is understood that plans are already on foot to hold together- the thousands who are expected to secede and make them the nucleus of another Pythian insurance order, to be conducted independently and free from the restraints imposed by supreme lodge control.

Most of the day was devoted to revision of the insurance rules and the protection of the death claimants. A number of plans were discussed, but the final decision was to sell such securities as could be disposed of without too great a sacrifice and pay off the death claims as fast as possible. Many would have to wait, and, to reassure them as well as the certificate holders, the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

"Resolved, by the supreme lodge of the Knights of Pythias, that the lodge recognizes not only its legal but also its moral and fraternal responsibility to stand behind and protect every beneficial certificate issued by and in force in the Endowment Rank of the Knights of Pythias; ment Rank of the Knights of Pythias; and we hereby pledge to every holder of said certificates all such legislation as may be needed to fully protect the holders of said certificates and produce full and prompt payment of all claims due

MAKING FIREWORKS

It is Not Child's Play for Those Who Prepare Pyrotechnics.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.] The manufacture of fireworks is not gerous work to do every day. The men and women who work there make spinning wheels, roman candles, sky rockets, whistles, nigger chasers, flying pigeons and a number of other big and little things filled with colored explosives. The cannon cracker is a

There are some interesting departments in the factory. The men who charge rockets and candles, for instance, have an interesting work. The explosives are first mixed in separate houses by skilled workers, who are all men. These workers understand the mixing of chemicals and powders, and their work is secret, for each concern has its own mixtures and formula for producing many different colors of

The cases for the candles and rocketc are wrapped from brown paper by the young women in the wrapping department. They are then taken to the charger, together with the powders, and he loads them just as the pioneer loaded his rifle, using a ramrod and ramming each charge home until the rod leaps from the barrel. As many as 30 charges are placed in some of the candles. The charger calls these loads stars, each color of powder being a star. He knows how to place them to get red, white and blue fire in succession, and he works in a little house where he has no more room than he needs to turn around. This is a necessary precaution at a fireworks factory, for the powders placed in rockets, candles, spinwheels, etc., are easily ignited, and would greatly endanger life and property if handled in considerable quantities in one place. The men mix the powders and chemicals and load the paper cases made for rockets, candles, etc. The women and girls wrap the cases and pack the fireworks when they are ready to be shipped. A. H. Brawn, secretary of the company, said: "While American manufacturers have become very aggressive in recent years, they are still behind the Chinese and Japanese in the manufacture of fireworks. The little twopacks-for-a-nickel firecrackers, for in-stance, are not made in this country. American workmen cannot afford to compete with the Mongolians in their manufacture. There are 60 firecrackers, all hand-made, in an ordinary pack, and the man who makes them gets less than a cent for the pack. American workmen would starve on such earnings. "The manufacture of firecrackers is Marie Curtis, wife of "Sam'l of Po- a comparatively new industry in this sen," declares herself a bankrupt in country. We make candles, rockets, spinwheels and many another article, as well as the Asiatics can make them, but we are behind them in fancy fireworks. The big day mortars, for instance, are not made here. Everybody has seen them. They are fired into the air in daylight, and at their explosion release figures of animals, birds, men, etc., which go sailing through the air. The Japs and Chinese make those. The figures are made of rice straw paper, which is lighter

It will be seen by the advertising columns that the Government of Ontario proposes holding a timber sale by public auction on the 17th September next. Some of the berths are those which were intended to be sold on the 15th March last, but were withdrawn as the prevalence of smallpox prevented prospective buyers from examining and estimating. Several townships in the vicinity of Sault Ste. Marie are also offered. These townships have been surveyed for a great many years, but being inaccessible were not required for settlement. Now owing to the good land in the vicinity of Sault Ste. Marie being all taken up and the construction of the Algoma Central Railway giving miners and settlers easy access to those townships a number are going in and the timber is exposed to danger from fire. It is therefore, considered expedient to dispose of the pine timber so that the township car be thrown open for sale or settlement and that the province may get the benefit of the value of the Chicago, July 13 .- If money shall not be forthcoming from the Knights of Pythias in the way recommended by the Supreme Lodge, it is likely a special assessment of 50 cents will be put on every member of the order for the benefit of the endowment rank. The only immediate action which will be taken by the board of control will be, it is said, the instituting of some foreclosure suits in an endeavor to rescue as much as possible of the money. Final action of the Supreme Lodge was practically unanimous for the higher rates, which place the whole burden on members of the endowment rank, only four delegates voting in the negative. By a compromise agreement, however, it was ordered that when the old death losses were paid off and a surplus began to accumulate, the board of control should have authority to pass a regular monthly assessment as often as possible.

Theodore Lahache, of Sherman. Texas, was elected a member of the board of control of the endowment rank, to succeed Mr. Hinsey, who resigned under fire. It was decided that the main office of the rank should continue in Chicago for the present, and not be moved to Indianapolis as had been proposed.

"Pay Chairs" in N. Y. Parks.

A contemporary summarizes particulars of the little domestic rebellion in New York, in which public sentiment has scored a signal triumph by compelling Park Commissioner of a chair all day if he wished to sit place within the party councils by virthere so long. Nobody was compelled tue of no superior to use one of these seats unless he thought it was worth the money to never great, but simply rose to promhim. The patrons of the New York inence by clinging to the skirts of the parks did not take this view of the matter, however. They took a sounder one. They regarded the commission- credited, defeated, dishonored forever public rights, and they denounced the commissioner for allowing the free parks to be exploited for private profit. The newspapers trained their guns on the commissioner. It was charged that free settees had been removed out of shady spots to make room for pay chairs. The $500 paid into the park fund by the commissioner was regarded as no equivalent for the presence of the obnoxious chairs. and it was remarked that the commissioner had applied for a suspiciously small appropriation for free seats this People of aggressive natures began sitting in the concessioner's green chairs and refusing to pay the nickel demanded. The chief of police took sides against the commissioner, and ordered the patrolmen not to arrest people for refusal to pay, but simply to "maintain order." Then the concessioner hired lusty attendants, who undertook to do thir own police work. The result of this state of affairs was a series of daily conflicts between the public and the fee collectors. An increasing number of men made it a point to sit in the pay seats and defy the collectors. The latter retaliated by throwing out the usurpers with violence, and Madison Square Park became the scene of daily riots. Heads and legs were broken, blows were exchanged chairs were smashed, and numerous arrests were made on both sides for disturbing the peace. "Finally Commissioner Clausen has capitulated and restored peace by revoking the concession, while the board of estimate and apportionment has emphasized the public triumph by appropriating $20,000 for free settees in the parks. This is the right solution of the difficulty. The commissioner's plan was a mistake, and the method by which it has been corrected is a good illustration of the power of public sentiment when directed against public officials" As germane to what has taken place in New York, we contend that an ample supply of free seats ought to be supplied in Victoria Park. At present, ople rush for the few seats about the Land stand, and the constant shuffling of feet along the gravelly bit of ground causes clouds of disagreeable dust. Victoria Park belongs to the citizens, and it should have plenty of seating accommodation in various

The same is true of the city's Springbank Park. There should be an abundance of seats-many of them with backs-and they should be without money and without price. By the way, there seems to be a lively division of opinion as to whether theatrical entertainments of any kind should be permitted in any of the public parks, the ground of those who object being that any attractions at either Victoria or Springbank Parks had better be those-such as band music, and the like-which cannot be objected to by any, and which are entirely free, even as to plenty of seats. At all events the citizens, who own these parks, should, in view of the discussion in New York, be careful about allowing any usage to grow up which leaves it in doubt as to where the ownership of the public parks really

Practical Piedge Work vs. "Resolution" Work.

Mr. Dougall, the new president of the Dominion Alliance, pointed out in his opening address that "prohibition, it can. without a temperance country, would be a questionable gain, and might be a disadvantage," and he urged the necessity of "having the people thoroughly educated and enthused for temperance," as a means of getting prohibi-There will not be much need for prohibition when the people decide that they do not want liquor. The distilbrewers and tavern-keepers are not in business for fun, but for profit, and the short way to drive them out of business is to cease to patronize them. Is it not possible that the philanthropists who clamor for prohibition would do more good by pointing out to individuals the advantages of total abstinence? Mr. Massey, of Toronto, said in one of the Toronto churches a few months ago that he had not heard a real temperance sermon for many years.—Hamilton Times.

We would like to refer again to the plan of Bishop McEvay and other Catholic bishops, in pledging their lads to abstain entirely till twenty-one. Were every Sabbath school in Canada, with vigor and tact, to push such an idea-the minister personally attending to it, as Bishop McEvay does-the results for the individual and the country would be incalculable. There is now too much dependence placed on the passing of resolutions; toe much of appealing to and denouncing governments; too much verbal blather; and too little practical, personal work in ism possessed men of the present age, the way of making abstainers.

Plain Speaking.

The new Conservative monthly, The Tory, published at Toronto, continues to indulge in plain speaking. It charges that many of the Opposition leaders are incompetent, discredited, and not well calculated to lead to victory. Let The Tory speak for itself:

"But before the present leaders can expect any large degree of support, financially or otherwise, from the rank Clausen to revoke the privilege given and file of the party in Ontario, they must give some greater evidence than they have shown up to the present time that they possess the energy, the intelligence, and the vitality to carry the Province in the face of the powerful influences opposed to them. "The deadliest enemies of the Conservative party today are not ouside

They are a miserable crew of discredited politicians who find solely on account of historic associations. At the best these men were immortal dead. When they tried to stand alone they fell like withered branches from the tree of time, disin the eyes of every lover of the party Their day is past. They shall not lead us longer. The Tory has no desire to waste any time or space in discussisng them. We have a greater and creative work to do. But let them not stand in the pathway of progress. They must not play with fire.

Publishing Love Letters.

Of recent years there has been a somewhat curious tendency among publishers to bring into publicity the love letters of distinguished person The supply has evidently been caused by a demand on the part of the people for such reading. We have, for instance, the letters of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett; the love letters of Victor Hugo; an anony mous volume of amorous effusions entitled "An English Woman's Love Letters"; and now we hear that a box full of letters written by Dickens to he successful who, regardless of riches, a lady who afterwards became his can appreciate the beautiful in art, in wife are soon to be given to the pub- literature or in nature, and possesses the

And if we knew that these men would never for a moment have thought of allowing their letters to be made public, how can we bring ourselves thus to trespass?"

Restraint and Freedom.

The subject of restraint and freedom in living is one that has come inprominence with the rush and turmoil of the twentieth century. Apart from liberalizing tendencies in matters pertaining to religious belief, there is a laxity in matters pertaining to actual living that is extremely undesirable. There is a great necessity for discipline and self-denial. The time has come when the problem of making a living has become, for the great majority, a matter requiring no small amount of calculation and contrivance. With the multiplication of luxury and advance in the standard of living, there is a strong tendency towards undue participation in the unnecessary. Self-denial, even from the point of view of pleasure, is a good thing. It adds spice to life by way of variety. Too much indulgence in pleasure becomes as monotonous and tiresome as uninterrupted labor. True satisfaction in life is often missed simply through a too ardent desire to drink deeply of the cup of pleasure.

The Chicago Tribune thinks office and factory buildings might be kept reasonably cool during the hottest weather by running ammonia pipes through the various rooms. ### The Passion for Wealth.

Many a man has sacrificed the best part of himself in his struggle for success. He has given up his friendships, torn up all tender ties of his early years, sacrificed everything which he then held dear, to the goal of his ambition. In his mad rush for the "almighty dollar," all that is beautiful in his social life has been lost sight of. He has developed his moneygetting powers, the faculties which grasp and hold, at the expense of all his nobler qualities.—Success. qualities.—Success

How often is this the case! To such an extent has the spirit of commercialthat the dollar sign is almost universally looked upon as the indicator in the scale of success in life. Were it not for the prevalence of this idea of success we should be in a position to obtain greater satisfaction out of every healthy endowment which an all-wise Providence has bestowed upon mankind; for, after all, as the poet says, "not enjoyment and not sorrow is our destined end or way." A man's life is well spent if it affords hima measure of satisfaction. Now, satisfaction may be sought in many different ways; a man may seek honors, or pleasure, or society, or the cultivation of a taste for the beautiful in art, literature, or in nature; or he may seek satisfaction in wealth. With most of these he will be confronted with disappointments. Entire satisfaction is not to be found in any one of them. Man is, in his nature, infinite, and cannot obtain ideal happiness in the finite. A greater degree of satisfaction can, we believe, be obtained from poetry, art or music, which are the natural offspring of the human heart. These differ from mere inventions, as a tree differs from a log of wood. They assert their title to such immortality as the things of earth may claim, and for this reason satisfy to a large extent the infinite in man.

Probably the least measure of enjoyment is to be found in wealth, especially when all one's energies are directed towards that one object. Wealth is at best only a means to an end; for riches can never be looked on as ends in themselves. Wealth has been termed "latent power," but as power is only useful when applied, money, as such, is good only when serving some legitimate human purpose. The dollar mark is an indicator of a business or mercantile man's success; but such a man should not content himself with mere pecuniary gain. How often, in middle life, a man, whose ideas of life have been tainted with commercialism, becomes aware of the fact that he no longer loves music, nor poetry, nor does he care to linger by the wayside at eventide to drink in the glories of the sunset; his only source of delight is his business. How often is the story of the millionaire the tale of a life of assiduity and accumulation, with finally a breaking down of the system and a premature grave, through attempts to administe. his vast accumulations! Is not he successful who can in as large a measure as possible curtail his desires? Is not he successful who seeks superior excellence in his calling, or profession? and is not power to make others see and feel as he does? The pages of the world's history are strewn with examples of such menmen who were rocked in the cradle of versity. The world has seldom dealt liberally with its real successes, its

Cost of Vacations.

[Chicago Tribune.]

During the present summer it is estimated that at least 10,000,000 people in the United States will take vacations. A statistician assumes that each of these people will spend an average of $10 on his vacation expenses, the conclusion being that the vacations taken this year will cost, in the aggregate, $100,000,000. The question is raised whether the benefit received from vacations is proportionate in value to this vast expenditure of time and money. It is pointed out that with $100,000,000 public libraries might be established all over the country and half a dozen great universities properly endowed, still leaving money enough to carry out several much needed reforms. Would it not be worth while, the writer asks, to refrain from taking vacations for one year and put all the money so saved to a more useful purpose? But the man who asks the question promptly proceeds to answer it in the negative. To almost every individual, he declares, a vacation is worth all he pays for it. A week or two, properly spent, may improve the health and add to the vigor of a workman in almost any industry to such an extent that he will money lost by doing more and better work during the remainder of the year. The money spent in vacations, vast as the sum is in the aggregate is not to be mourned as a loss. It is on the average, profitably expended Instead of complaining of the large number of people who now take vacations, an effort should be made to give every man who works steadily a season for rest and recreation during

The Party System.

[Goldwin Smith, in Toronto Sun.] When we say that the party system cannot last forever we are triumphantly asked what we mean to put in its place. That is the grand question for the coming generation. The difficulty of answering it off-hand does not prove the perfection or permanency of the party system. But those who think to pose us with it seem to assume that the party system prevails everywhere, and that no other is known. The party system does not prevail, nor has it ever prevailed, in any country save Great Britain and her colonies, including the United States. In other countries under constitutional government not the party system, which requires the division of the constituency and its representation into two parties, and two only, but that of sections prevails. This is the case in France, Germany, Italy, Austria and Spain. In France, Germany and Italy especially there are so many sections that it is possible to find a majority sufficiently large and solid to support a government. In Switzerland neither the party nor the sectional system pre vails. The executive council is elected for a term certain by the Federal Assembly, and the referendum operates independently of party. Recent discussions have called attention to the instrument of government, the constitution of the English protectorate, framed by men of great political sagacity and remarkable experience, when England had for the moment completely emerged from the feudal state and faced the problem of organic construction, which we are now called upon to face. The constitution embodied in the instrument of government is parliamentary, but it is not formed upon the party system; on the contrary, it excludes party. Long buried out of sight, under the ruins of a lost cause, it may again attract notice when the great problem of which it is an attempted solution shall practically present itself once more.

Are Sane People Put In ?

[Chicago Tribune.]

John Ross, of Chicago, who was committed to an insane asylum in Indianapolis a week ago on the evidence of four young doctors and a justice of the peace, has been declared sane by the superior court. There has been no doubt of his sanity from the time he was taken in custody to the time of his formal release. The question now to be investigated is that of the moto a madhouse without even the founized by a prolonged struggle with ad- has been presented to the Indianapolis body to determine whether the perpetrators of this outrage are guilty of a criminal act or are only the careless accomplices of a bad system. This case is believed by some to lend color to the suspicion that there is an organized conspiracy to charge same people with insanity in order to col-lect the paltry fees which the Indiana law unwisely allows in such cases. It is to be hoped that this suspicion will be discovered to be without foundation. One would be loath to believe that any men would be guilty of so diabolical a practice as that of imprisoning sane persons among lunatics. It is more likely that the case of John Ross is an isolated one with special conditions of some kind to explain it. These conditions at best cannot excuse the young doctors for tes-

It is a constant invitation to unscrupulous persons to bring insanity charges against sane persons. The investigation is more urgent because the fees are paid whether the person is insane or not, so that he might be dismissed and his case scarcely heard of by the public. Such a temptation should not be allowed to exist. The law should tend to discourage rather than to en courage the imputation of insanity, for such a charge may injure a man or woman by the mere statement of it. People are inclined to shun a man or woman who has been called insane, even though the statement be proved

A Wonderful Will.

[New York World.] George Q. Cannon, late president of the Mormon Church, was evidently a man of genius. When he died a few weeks ago, full of years and honors, he left four widows, thirty-three children, and an unspecified number of grandchildren. What Tennyson said of the Light Brigade applied with equal truth to the Patriarch Cannon:

In spite, however, of the onerous burden of providing a "full dinner-pail" for the quartet of Mrs. Cannons and the two dozen and nine children who rose up to call them blessed, the Patriarch Cannon died in a prosperous and property - holding condition. And his will, just probated, is a wonder. He has left a separate home to each of his widows, and an acre of land and $2,000 in cash to each of his thirty-three children as they come of age. The remainder of his real estate, valued at 800,000, he leaves to the whole family, which is to be incorporated as "a com-munity of interest," presumably under the benign laws of New Jersey, and called the "George Q. Cannon Associ-ation." And every Cannon of them all, and his or her descendants, is to have a block of the stock after the estate has accumulated for forty years untouched. Thus is the prosperity of the father be visited on the children to the third and fourth generations. And the widows four, the thirty-three children and the unspecified grandchildren are all reported as perfectly satisfied.

The man who could draw a will for such a family, where a contest might easily have been developed into a riot, and please everybody, may not have been a saint, but was surely no com-

GLASGOW EXHIBITION

An Interesting Account of Its Magniada's Exhibit.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

Glasgow is the commercial capital cf Scotland, and one of the largest cities In Britain. We cannot now attempt a sketch of its recent history, but old as the city itself is, its progress must have been very great during the past century, and especially in the last generation. On this visit I had not much time to wander round the great city and note the varied signs of progress. and I did not even get into the new municipal buildings, which are so highly spoken of, as my time was taken up with visits to friends in Paisley, and down the Clyde. I was reminded by a friend, when speaking of the weather, that in Scotland it did not need the bore us over the Atlantic was built permission of England in order to rain, in the Clyde, and the one that I exto which remark I replied, "No, I sup- pect to bring me back, at Sutherland, pose you have home rule in the mat- where I pen these words. Values are generally steady. the university celebrations, and the first time I passed Greenock it was not raining, though I could not say as ing the Industrial Hall and threading of the population of the province as a much when I passed the same spot a your way along the grand avenue, the result of the large numbers of new few days later, as it was soaking wet. There had indeed been much more fine interesting, costly and unique. GREAT INDUSTRIAL SHOW is secured. This is an important feature. The exhibition will advertise the city, and make known to many strangers the beauties of the west of Scotland, for those who have come from a great distance will not be content merely to see the fair, but in the hands of Scotchmen the exhibition must also pay for itself, and leave a surplus for the benefit of the permanent art galleries. Glasgow is a city that is famed for business enterprise and good management, so one expects to find there not only an exhibition that is worth seeing, but one that pays its own way, and leaves behind a substantial building as a memento of itself. We must have not simply art and science, but also these desirable things, plus five per cent.

The exhibition here is not simply for that

Another matter dealt with by newspaper correspondents was the

of the waiters. Many of these had been brought from London, and judging things by the London standard they had evidently thought that it did not matter so much about wages, as the "tips" would make things right. It turned out, however, that the Glasgow air was not so favorable to "tips." and many of these waiters were in rather a poor predicament. One correspondent suggested that unless the managers were prepared to give much better wages they might out up a notice reminding the public that the waiters needed a little encouragement. By the by the day I came from London, I read of a case taken into court there, in which it transpired that the waiter at an Italian restaurant had no wages at all, and actually paid his assistant out of his own poc ket. ut I do not think it is so gigantic some of the people imagine. The uide published by the Glasgow Evenng News says: "Roughly speaking. a hundred broad acres are occupied by the buildings and grounds, for this is the Titan of exhibitions, so far as this country is concerned." Americans and Canadians, who are used to big things and yast spaces, are not the surface to Mrs. Know-well, when they met in the street. "Why where have you been for a week back?" "Oh. Just down to the store for a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil." and Mrs. Surface, who hates puns, walked on. But she remembered, and when she contracted a weak back there was another customer for Eclectric Oil.

apt to be very much impressed by "a hundred broad acres." One thing, however, we must admit, namely, that the site of this particular exhibition is well chosen, and is exceedingly picturesque. "Imagine a vast natural ampitheater cut in two, and one of the sections removed. The remaining Good Amount of Trade for This tude-Its Character-The Ques- half is Kelvin Grove. There is no need to describe the treasure brought from all parts of the world; that can sefely be left to the imagination of any reader who knows the meaning of the word "exhibition." It so happens that one of the exhibits that arrested my is favorable both in retail and wholeattention during my brief visit was the wonderful

As the men cheered and the thief begged for mercy the woman, who is small and fragile in appearance, swung the whip with increased vigor, until the wretch who was taking the drubbing fell to the floor, pleading that the punishment might cease. Then, although the police had been summoned, the thief was allowed to go free

> The man for whom the spirit of the whipping post was revived gave his name as T. A. Browne, 147 Peoria street. Browne was urgent in his denials that he had stolen Mrs. McGill's purse until the police were sent for, when he weakened and produced the pocketbook. Heat in Kansas and Missouri Is Scorching the Corn Crop.

Corn Went Up by Leaps and Bounds on the Chicago Market-Boom in Wheat at New York.

IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, July 12 .- Advices to board of trade and grain commission houses shots were exchanged, but in which today are that the drouth in the southwest is unbroken. It is said the damage outside of Kansas and Missouri less there is relief within ten days the corn crop situation will approach a calamity.

A message from Topeka, Kan., declared the prospects are for a crop of only 50,000,000 bushels of corn, although last year's crop was 163,000,000, and that of the previous year 237,000,000 bushels. The loss on hay and potatoes also is great-second only to the loss of corn. It is estimated that the farmers of Kansas and Missouri already have sustained losses reaching $50,000,-000. It was but natural that hundreds of reports, of which the above are fair samples, should have been reflected in the course of prices on the board of trade. Corn for September delivered opened at 52c to 52%c, compared with the close yesterday at 51%c to 51%c. Prices continued upward with a few reactions on profit taking. At 12:35 p.m. September corn has risen to 541/4c, or 10%c above the price one month ago, shortly before the heat and drouth be-

than a month ago. This market held steady at the advance. FLURRY IN STOCKS IN NEW YORK.

New York, July 12.-Prices of stocks were set up only to be knocked down again this morning. The action of the market was very feverish and era general decline at the opening, but searched and said it was a case of determined and systematic support bought with considerable animation up to last night's level and above. Net morning's reports from the corn belt and the strength of the opening corn market sent prices of stocks crumbling again. The corn grangers led, but the old list was affected, the eastern trunk lines conspicuously so. The market showed signs of being oversold in the afternoon, and the bears bought to cover with some urgency. The forecasts of a favorable bank statement tomorrow helped to rally the market. The recoveries ran from 2 to 4% in the principal active stocks. The market was unsteady in advancing, and kept sagging again, but there was no recurrences of the acute weakness. GRAIN MARKETS EXCITED. All grain markets on the produce exchange today were excited and very much higher. The wheat market especially showed increased activity, outside buying being a feature for the first time since the advance in corn began. Prices here sold up 21/2 cents during the forenoon, September reaching 72%c at New York and 68%c at Chicago. In the local pit the excitement was so intense that wheat frequently sold at differprices at the same Commission houses were fairly flooded with orders from country customers, who were filled with the bull fever in consequence of the big corn advance. Foreign markets all came strong and higher, and crop news from the Northwest was considerably less favorable, reporting damage to wheat in the Red River Valley. The poses, owing to the bad corn crop outon a big scale and prices were up to the highest point of the season. Trade aggregated one of the largest day's totals in a year or more, especially as to corn. Prices jumped cents during the day in corn, making 61/2 cents advance for the week. Orders poured into the market so fast that brokers could scarcely execute them at the prices desired, and the usually small crowd around the corn ring was increased to such an extent that at times it almost rivaled that in the wheat pit. The farmers have taken the bull side into their hands, and in feeding their stock with wheat, and unless rain comes very soon many fear only half the corn crop will be gathered, where only a month ago it looked as if one of the largest yields on record would be harvested. by the authorities. All that is known is that the island is between here and Nanaimo, 50 miles away, and that it is hard to find. The Japanese will be given food every few days and made comfortable, although closely guarded, until a settlement is reached, or until their island prison is located by the authorities. Two provincial constables were out in Japanese boats today and effected the arrest of six white fishermen. These are charged with molesting Japanese and their cases will be heard tomorrow. A shot was fired from another boat the time of the arrest, and the arrested men themselves tried to bluff the constables at the time of the MR. arrest by firing in the air. No one was hurt by the shooting.

OLD-TIME PUNISHMENT OF QUACKS.

In the reign of Edward VI., one Briggs, a poulterer, in Surrey, was set in the pillory at Croydon, and again in the borough of Southwark, during the time of the fair, for cheating people out of their money by pretending to cure them with charms by only looking at the patients.

In the time of James I., the Council dispatched a warrant to the magistrates of the City of London to take up all reputed empirics, and to bring them before the censors of the college, to examine how properly they were qualified to be trusted either with the lives or limbs of his majesty's subjects. One, Dr. Lamb, a noted quack, was brought before this judicial ordeal. He had acquired an immense fortune by his pretended medicines, but was at last obliged to confess that he knew nothing of physic. Read and Woodhouse, two other contemporary quacks, were likewise brought to justice, and confessed the same.

The main duty of those who care for the young is to secure their wholesome, their entire growth: for health is just the development of the whole portions; first the blade, then the ear, then, and not till then, the full corn in the ear; and thus, as Dr. Temple forced and usurp the capital it inherits, if it be robbed by you, its guardian, of its birthright, or squandered like a spendthrift, then there is not any ear, much less any corn; if his left sat a young man who had the blade be blasted or dwarfed in our contracted the habit of profanity, and haste and greed for the full shock and growth and harmless passing of the time are more to be cared for than what is vainly called accomplishment. -Dr. John Brown.

SUBMARINE PHOTOGRAPHY.

Many efforts have been made to use the photographic camera for taking pictures below the surface of the sea, but thus far without any satisfactory results except in one way. By exposing the most sensitive plates at various depths it has been ascertained with definiteness how far sunlight penetrates beneath the waves. This was long a disputed question among scientists, but the test described has proved the correctness of the theory common held, that there is practically illumination beyond 600 feet. In other words, below that level he camera sinks into the absolute blackness of the oceanic abyss. The notion of taking, photographs under the surface of the sea is so extremely picturesque that it has led popular writers to speak confidently of the prospects for getting pictures in this manner of the marine animals themes, but by natural and easy sugin their native haunts, and to suggest gestions, to lead the conversation a

Now let us thank the Eternal Power; the probable usefulness of the camera to divers; but it is to be feared that ideas of this kind are wholly illusory, and that snap-shots in the depths must forever remain out of the question. Even at a very small depth long ex-posures would be necessary, and most animals would not be willing to sit for their portraits by the hour, though possibly a sea anemone or an oyster might be so accommodating. Only the other day, however, it was gravely stated in the scientific column of a reputable New York newspaper "scienific men will use the camera for many researches now impossible. into the life of submarine animals."

The mere fact that it is declared by the inventor to have the flavor and nutritive properties of meat, while actually of purely vegetable ingredients, would amount to little were it not that the chemistry section of the patent office has indorsed the claim as truthful. As a matter of fact, the compound appears to contain protein and other elements, utilizable in the body for making flesh and blood, and for fuel, in about the same proportions as in beef or mutton.

WHEN SILENCE IS COMMENDABLE.

We always feel an added respect for the person who is careful to maintain a discreet silence in regard to his or her own family affairs. To discuss the failings of any member of one's family, even with one's most intimate friend, betrays a certain coarseness! and weakness of character. The households are rare, if such there be, where the members at all times agree on all subjects that may arise for discussion, and where no friction is ever caused by differences of opinion. Pride and a sense of the fitness of things should, however, prevent any discussion or retailing of family jars or differences to outsiders.

THE COUNTENANCE INDICATES THE HEART

Above all things else, a well-regulated, pleasant countenance, without a smile, is the best possible recommendation for man or women. When we meet a woman with a nose a good deal turned up, and vinegar strongly pretty fierce.

marked in the countenance, we involuntarily conclude that there is not much happiness in the household over which she resides. When we meet a young lady with an airy countenance, with a strong tendency to simper, we are inclined to think that there is not much probability of her having a whoever will earnestly endeavor to household to preside over. Men who go purify the tone and raise the character about with a sour countenance, with about with a sour countenance, with a good deal of snap in it, are apt to be uncomfortable customers; such men should be avoided-if unmarried, they should live until fairly tamed before marriageable young ladies should be permitted to approach them. On the whole the countenance is a great institution, and though it is not even skin deep, it yet is a great tell-tale, and often makes or mars a fortuneor a wedding-for the fortunate or unfortunate possessor. The counten-ance speaks the heart, and, therefore, to be able always to carry an agreeable one to recommend you, be sure that the heart is right toward all men -and women too, heaven bless them

TO BOYS.

When a boy is patient and persevering, and conquers difficulties, it is a sign he will make his mark in the world. If he worries, and frets, and stews, it is a sign he is likely to die prematurely, or to live to little purpose. If he is in a hurry to spend each coin as he gets it, he will never be rich, but a spendthrift. If he hoards up his pennies and will not part with one for any good cause he is likely to be a miser. If he is careful and economical and generous, he may or may not be rich, but he will have the blessing of God, and if he is Christian who attends to his religious duties, he will never want. If he is obedient to his parents he has the promise that his "days shall be long in the land." If he is lazy and indif-ferent, and neglects his duties, he will grow up a dunce, and men cannot respect him. If he reads papers, instead of bright, helpful literature, he will likely end his days in prison or upon the gallows. If he loves his religion, and his church, and his Sabbath school, he will be good and useful, and occupy an honorable position among men. Are you patient and persevering prayerful and careful?

A WORD TO WIVES.

Much nonsense is said and writter on the question of how a woman can best hold a husband's love. The only true solution of that question lies in the home itself. Let a young wife keep within her husband's means, give him a comfortable, attractive home to come to from his work, and let her fill that home with her woman-charm and development and love for her husband and she need never trouble herself as to the best methods to pursue t endear herself to her husband. more wives would strive to be a res and comfort to their husbands by the legitimate means which God has given them to win and hold a run's love, there would be no occasion for fear as to whether they were their husband's ideals. A young wife may hold her husband's attention and love for a while because she is pretty and well dressed. But the prettiest girl or bestdressed woman soon becomes uninteresting to a man when he finds out there is nothing more to be admired in her than her looks or her dresses.

have been vouchsafed. We are not, however, left entirely in the dark on this subject. The little we know leads to many a reasonable surmise, for since there is a certain fixed consistency in the realm of spirit as well as of matter, it is safe to build a future out of the capacities and longings of human nature. The scientific imagination predicts with considerable assurance the kind of physical life which exists on the planets of our system, and its statements are received with undoubting confidence. In like manner the student of the soul may venture withgiven environment must result from our passage into the immortal life. It

We have neither time nor abilit to provide food for the soul, because so much time and energy are required to provide food for the body. Millions of men are hardly conscious of their immortality, because from cradle to grave they spend their best selves in keeging a roof over their heads and earning bread for their children. The radiance of infinite wisdom and love will beckon us toward the ideal, the universe will be our schoolroom, and God himself our teacher. We shall begin then with a condition which is now almost inconceivable, but which will be unutterably blessed. Under such influences there must needs be an awakening of dormant powers, and the dimmed and blurred souls of earth will have an eternity in which to become archangels.

I believe that everyone has the breath of God in his nostrils. That breath constitutes personality-a personality which will persist forever. It will not be absorbed in the infinite as a drop of water is absorbed by the ocean, but will maintain its separate indentity throughout eternity. Moreover, it will, amid the opportunities of another life, slowly educate itself and rise to heights not dreamed ot. No part of God can die, neither can it remain dormant. The acknowledged shortage of horses in the Stretched in his last-found home, and eastern, middle western and western corn-growing states has forced into harness many range-bred horses Thanks for the heavenly message brought that under previous prevailing conditions would assuredly have been put to other uses, or allowed to shift for themselves until they became a nuisance. An immediate result of this unsatisfied demand is that the prejudice From thy dead lips a clearer note is born hitherto existing against the branded horse is being gradually broken down. A few weeks ago a consignment of fully broken, well-mannered, rangebred horses was sold in Chicago for prices that reached $177 50, and the bidding was keen. The endurance and satisfactory bone of the ranger are well known and admired. The mammoth sales of these animals shortly to be held will offer, it would seem, an excellent opportunity for dealers to make money, and at the same time do much for the range horse breeding business. If King Edward VII. never devised another fashion he has done his duty by the hatmakers, for at least seven styles of hats are said to have been worn first by him, while it is certain that he has invented or created two

He has frequently had the credit of creating fashions which had in a reality existed in a more or less obscure manner for some time previous to their adoption by him. It is true that he has not been able always to give vogue to the style. He once wore a kind of Welsh sugarloaf hat which lasted for only a few months, and was never taken up to any extent even by those most eager to imitate the royal headgear. On the other hand, men of distinction in life and fashions have worn hats of a style that never adorned the head of the present king. He has, however, created in the full sense of the word certain fashions that have survived, and foremost among these is the low-crowned silk hat, which in the history of fashion will always be associated with his name. His fidelity to this style of headdress has been remarkable. He clung to it when on the sands of Egypt, Said Pasha received him, and he were it while going down rapids of the St. Lawrence river. He always wore at Goodwood until two years ago, the black instead of the white top hat. When he finally changed to the cooler color his example was followed with enthusiasm by the class that waited the imitation of the styles

Physical and Mathematical Relations Based on Constant Phenomena.

[H. M. Curry, in Signs of the Times.] It is the prevailing opinion that the doctrine of predestination is held only by the ignorant class of men, and that the mere elements of an education are sufficient to free one from the influence of such a baleful, absurd and unreasonable doctrine. If there is any just ground for this opinion, it can be shown that scientific truth is incompatible with the doctrine of decree, and also that no well educated person has ever believed the doctrine of predestination.

It is a well-known axiom of logic that all truth harmonizes; now, if it can be shown that scientific truth harmonizes with the doctrine of decree, then it must be conceded from the standpoint of science, that the doctrine of decree is true. It can not only be shown that science and decree are in perfect harmony, but it can be shown that decree is at the

FOUNDATION OF SCIENCE,

If two times five were ten today, but might have been eight yesterday, might be twelve tomorrow, how could there be any possibility of the science of arithmetic? But two times five are ten today, two times five were ten in the spring is ploughed under as a yesterday, and two times five will be ten forever. It is this very fixedness of tural building in which stands the the relation of numbers that renders and law depends upon decree. the science of arithmetic a possibility. This fixedness argues decree. So, then, it appears that arithmetic, the most common and elementary of all the

The elementary theorems of algebra, such as the square of the sum of two quantities is equal to the square of the first plus twice the product of the first by the second, plus the square of the second, and "the difference of the sales-commission firms for the coming ways divisible by the difference of the season it is plain that many buyers quantities," the binomial theorem, with its wonderful possibilities and a ranger or nothing if they desire to other data which form the science of

The six ratios of trigonometrical functions, which lie at the bottom of the science of trigonometry, are forever and unchangeably true. All the principles that go to make up the sciences of analytics and calculus, are no exception to the rule. So, then, in the realm of mathematics, from the most fundamental operation in arithmetic, to the most abstruse problem in the differential calculus, all depends upon these vendues will have size sufficient the permanent fixedness of principles, the same fixedness of principles confronts us. What seems to be more at random than a falling body? Yet a falling body is so completely under the control of law, that although its velocity changes with every instant of time, if its time of falling be known, its velocity for any second may be computed. If the distance fallen be known, the time of falling may be readily found. The laws of falling bodies might be stated here, but space does not justify it. The swaying of the pendulum, that lazily swings to and fro in the old clock on the wall. is most accurately regulated by law; this were not so, how could it be utilized to regulate the motion of the clock? The laws of the pendulum are such, that if the length of the pendulum is known, the time of vibration may be found, and vice versa. The freezing and boiling points are marked on the thermometer; if water should freeze at one temperature today, and at another tomorrow, this could not be done. If water should boil at one degree of heat today and at another tomorrow, how completely would the common industries of life be thrown into utter confusion. Experiment has revealed the laws of freezing and boiling points of liquids, also the fusing and solidifying points of metals. Each liquid has its respective boiling and freezing points, and these points remain constant under the same pressure. Recent discoveries have ascertained that electricity, that most subtle, mysterious and wonderful of all nature's forces, is controlled by law, in all its operations. A number of these laws have been stated, and may be found in any recent treatise on electricity. Nowhere in the operations of nature God's power and presence so strikingly exemplified in little things as in chemical action. The law of definite weight, which lies at the foundation of the science of chemistry, is one of the most wonderful of all the laws of nature. The law stated is as follows: When two elements unite with each other they always unite in a fixed definite ratio by weight." As an illustration of this law, iron and sulphur unite to form an iron-sulphide: in this reaction 21 ounces of iron will always unite with just 12 ounces of sulphur; if we should try to make 22 ounces of iron unite with 12 ounces of sulphur, we would have one ounce of iron left, and if we were to try to make 13 ounces of sulphur unite with 21 ounces of iron, we would have one ounce of sulphur left free. In the union of hydrogen and oxygen to form water, one atom of oxygen always invariably selects two atoms of hydrogen; this is not only true in the union of hydrogen and oxygen, but the same law holds true in all chemical com-binations; each element has its displacing power, that is, one of its atoms always selects a certain number of atoms of the element with which it unites. Here we see law controlling the very atoms of matter and regulating with unerring accuracy chemical affinity and all chemical reaction. The law of conservation of matter exemplifies the truth of the Scripture which says that "What the Lord does shall be forever, nothing can be put to it, and nothing can be taken from This law stated is as follows: The sum of the weights of the substances before the change is exactly equal to the sum of the weights of the new substances after the change.' This proves that in chemical changes, although new substances are formed, that no matter has been created and nene has been destroyed. THE DARWINIAN THEORY of the origin of species should be true, this law would neither be contradicted nor violated thereby. All those lines demarkation which divide the animal and vegetable kingdoms into subkingdoms, orders, genera and species, remain permanent, and these not remain so without law; the data for these sciences depend upon law, When David said: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the fir-

The chief that without decree it could not exist. glory of this science is the law of universal gravitation: "Every particle of matter in the universe attracts every other particle with a force that varies directly as the product of the mass, and inversely as the square of the distance between them? great law not only lies at the bottom of the science of astronomy, but it upholds, balances and sustains the universe; it is by this law that God hung the universe upon nothing; this law is the word of God's power, by which he upholds all his universe: this law is the bands of Orion that cannot be loosed, and the sweet influence of the Pleiades, that cannot This law first broke up the chaotic mass of nebula that once filled the space now occupied by the moons and planets. This law gathersystems, and systems into a universe. It guides the huge planet that sweeps through the regions of space, and balances the mote that floats in the sunbeam; it suspends the water dust that composes the clouds in midair, and chains the mighty ocean to his destinpowerful, instantaneous, universal law but the presence, power, and decree of the Almighty God, the Creator, upholder and disposer of this universe? KEPLER'S LAWS of planetary motion might be mention-

Some go in Where is the scribe? The man who has not seen predestination in science has not seen the soul of science. The man who would charge the belief of predestination to ignorance, is himself ignorant both of the knowledge of wherein he professes to be learned. Someone may say that it is true that law reigns in those things which have been referred to, but man is an intelligence, and is not subject to such mechanical laws. To this objection I answer, first, that logic and psychology are recognized sciences, not natural sciences, but called mental sciences; sciences of mind, and not of matter. Since fixed and uniform operations as established by natural law, must furnish data for natural science, fixed operations established by law must furnish data for mental sciences. Second, that the Scripture ascribes the operations of the mind to law. Does not the inspired writer say, "I see another law in my members warring against the law of my mind"? mans vii., 23). Here he speaks of the law of the mind and the law in his members; so that to deny that the which every man is subject to. To the above objection I would answer in the third place, that the wickedness and depravity of the human constitution are as universal, permanent and perpetual as any of the laws or operations of nature; where is there a single exception? Where was there ever single exception in the the human family? tion is one of the chief methods of scientific investigation and reasoning; it is the process of reasoning from particular examples to general laws. Most of the theorof mathematics have beer discovered and proved by the method of induction. The principle of reasoning is, that if a certain thing is found to hold good in a number of cases, it is assumed that it will hold good for the next case, and then that it will hold good for any case; thus a general truth is discovered and proved from particular examples. Try the method of induction in the case of the depravity of the human family; it can be shown by example that this man is a sinner, and that that man is a sinner, and that the third man, and the fourth man, and the fifth man a sinner, and is a truth exemplified among people in all places and at all times, that all men are and have been sinners. There can be found no exceptions; then the general truth may announced upon the authority of logical induction, that universal depravity is true, and no theorem in mathematics, and no recognized law in natural science, has ever been discovered and proved by a more valid process of reasoning. would not hesitate to announce a law upon the result of such an investiga tion as this. Then, from a scientific standpoint, there must be a law governing not only the physical reproduction, but the moral nature of man. The man who attributes the natural depravity of the human family to the transgression of the first man, aside from decree, is a fatalist, and holds a POSITION THAT SCIENCE CON-

DEMNS. Men who hold that God created the first man holy, and that he fell either apart from the purpose of God, or contrary to that purpose, and that as a result of that haphazard fall, his posterity is necessarily sinners, have chemical compound? Where could Biblical or the scientific side of the directly employed in the formation of the child from the embryo to the birth as it was in the formation of the first man from the dust of the earth? Does he not form the child today as strictly according to his will as he formed the first man? Does he not form every germ of life that comes into existence today, whether it be plant, animal or Does he not develop into an individual every germ that reches that state, no matter what kind of life it be? Is not his hand as actively and as particularly engaged in the formation of the chick in the shell as in the formation of men or angels? How else could he be the Creator, upholder and disposer of all things?

Although science bears witness to the doctrine of predestination, yet it can never reveal God; it honors God and proclaims his glory, but it is the man who hath an ear to hear that receives its testimony. Science proclaims the reign of law throughout the universe, and law proclaims decree. The voice of science joins the voice of inspiration in the sublime proclamation that "all his works praise him."

Only a few of the laws of the different sciences have been cited; time would fail me to tell of all of them; nowhere are we encompassed with a greater cloud of witnesses to the reign of law than in the sciences. I do not know whether there is any spiritual comfort in what I have written or not, but I do confess that I like to see the doctrine that is dear to my heart established even by natural evi-Pleasant Plains, Ill.

DRIVES QUEER TEAM

A Florida Man Who Employs Alligators to Tow His Boat.

Jefferson Lee, who lives on the St. John's River, in Putnam county, Fla., has the most extraordinary team in the country. It is a team of alligators that Mr. Lee uses to tow his boat up and down the river when he goes to market. Mr. Lee has to go six miles down the river to his postoffice, and it is a hard pull against the current coming back. He noticed how swiftly alligators swam, and it occurred to him that it might be a good idea to turn the alligators that abound in the St John's River to some account. He captured a pair of young alligators and raised them in his yard. He taught them to swim and drag a weight behind them, and he also taught them to turn either to the right or left by pulling ropes fastened to their teeth on either side When the alligators were big enougn he put a harness that he had constructed on them and harnessed them to his boat. They swam well and pulled the boat through the water at a good speed. By pulling on the reins that passed through the mouths of the alligators, Mr. Lee was able to turn his strange water team in any

Mr. Lee made a point of never feeding his alligators until after they returned from a trip, when he would immediately reward each one with a fine meal. The alligators seem to be willing to perform their task of pulling his boat, and when he turns them out of the pen in which they are stabled and starts them for the water, they shuffle down to the boat in the liveliest style. and after they are hitched they plunge into the water with grunts of delight Mr. Lee says his strange team has never run away nor kicked out the dashboard of his river craft, but that they have one fault, for which, however, he does not blame them. They sometimes sweep their powerful tails in a curve through the water, and once slashed one of the boats small bits and threw Mr. Lee and a party that he was taking boat riding into the river. They would all have been drowned had not the alligators swum back to them and permitted the party to climb on their backs, after which the alligators swam swiftly to the shore and all of the party were saved. Mr. Lee now hitches his team twenty feet in front of the boat, so that the sweep of their tails will not endanger the craft.

Mr. Lee's success has created great interest among all of his neighbors, and now many alligators are being trained for duty as sea horses.

A Big Apple Tree

John H. Holmes, Norwich, writes to a Woodstock paper: I read a report in your valuable paper written by a correspondent of the Plattsville Echo, of a big apple tree on one Thomas Marshall's farm, con. 11, Blen-heim, and I thought 1 knew of one, if not several of them, that measured over not several of them, that measured over seven feet around the trunk, and I with the owner, James P. Johnson, con. 7, lot 21, South Norwich, Springfield postoffice, measured a Blenheim Pippin tree on his farm that was eight feet, eight inches in the smallest place around the trunk, and city feet from the ground there are seven six feet from the ground there are seven limbs, and the largest one is six feet around it, and they average over four feet, seven inches. The tree is 34 feet high and has a circumference of the top of one hundred and seventy-one feet. There are buildings also on two sides of the tree which has doubt retards the There are buildings also on two sides of the tree which no doubt retards the spreading of the top to some degree. The Ribston Pippin tree of Mr. Marshall's is the first extra large one of that kind I have ever heard or read of. The parties buying for export and their packers sometimes mark Blenheim Pippins, Ribston Pippins. They do not know the difference in the two apples. The Ribston trees as a rule do not grow extra large in trunks or tops, but the Blenheims are very strong growers on nearly all soils. very strong growers on nearly all soils Now as regards quantity the above tree bears, Mr. Johnson has never measured the production of the tree, but every

CHICAGO, July 12.—Cattle—Receipts, 2.—500; good to prime steers. $5 10 to $6 20! Mr. Campbell has in this volume* he gives a picture of the life he led as a Northwestern pioneer. It is, as he himself defines it, "a personal narrative—the history of my early years and of my travels and adventures, strange and thrilling enough, in the territories around Hudson's Bay * * * the first complete picture of these scarce-known regions and their primitive inhabitants as they were when first the white trader ventured among them." The narrative runs to 327 pages. It is fittingly dedicated to Lord Strathcona, and in a chatty way throws faithful and most interesting sidelights upon not the least momentous chapter of Canada's early history. Indeed, remembering the several narratives which early pioneers have given us from time to time, we think it no exaggeration to say that

Mr. Campbell was, it seems, born in the Lewis, and the Lewis we are told is "physically the father of St. Kilda." The title of the volume is "The Father of St. Kilda," Not being Scots ourselves we must say we pre-fer the sub-title, "Twenty Years in Isolation in the Sub-Arctic Territory of the Hudson's Bay Company." It at least tells us what the book is about. Passing over the narrative of Mr. Campbell's early days, we find him at sixteen years of age "unmarried, a bright lad of more than ordinary studious habits, and of spotless character as far as I know of him." The quotation is from the Free Church minister's certificate of character with which the young Highland lad set out from Ness to conquer the new world. It was a terrible business getting to Hudson's Bay in those early days, 41 years ago. But get there the Prince of Wales ultimately did, though his encounter with a "tremendous polar bear." Like a true countryman of Robert Bruce and Prince Charlie, he waved a "red comforter over his head, "ran as fast as he could to meet the Arctic king," and, of course, the bear retired." We commend the method to Arctic and Antarctic explorers today. And here we get a picture of the native of these sub-Arctic regions and Detroit. as Mr. Campbell first encountered Out of the unspeakable desolation men came to us, dwarfed in size, dark olive in color, oily in appearance, here they live out their short nightless summer and long sunless winter in an isolation not always splendid. * * round the ship, their eyes rolling in frantic delight, this remnant of a prehistoric race sat at ease in the open hole in their kayaks. Each carried a harpoon line coiled on a tripod in front of him, a long spear on one side and a dark skin bag inflated as a buoy in the narrow stern at his Their costume was in its way picturesque. Their long, coarse black hair hung loose over their seal-skin jackets, which in turn overlapped their shaggy bear-skin breeches, and these again their seal-skin boots. Some of them were adorned with a apparently, essayed to mount the ship's rigging, but his nerve failed, and, with heavy drops of oily sweat breaking on his brow, he returned to deck, almost paralyzed, and in a fainting fit. Their language was altogether unintelligibly ugly, far beyond the understanding of any of us, whether Gordon (from Lochinvar), the Isles. Talk of pandemonium, or a certain place let loose! These are but pale figures with which to describe the sounds, and, as one powergave way to shrieks of laughter. Fort York was gained, and soon afterwards young Campbell's destination was fixed 900 miles southward at the Hudson Bay post on the Red River. Another long, toilsome jour-ney lay ahead of him, but he was young and halesome, and it had few terrors for him. In the course of his narrative of this inland voyage, he takes opportunity to describe for us the Indian's canoe:

"Certainly the white man has invented nothing to equal it for the purpose for which it is made. It is light, and, I have been told, durable. It is still constructed, just as in the prehistoric days before the white man came. It is made of the rind of the cane-birch tree, which, when mature, is tough and lasting, and very much side is turned out to form the bottom. and the different sheets are sewn together by long split roots of the spruce, which are also used to sew the bark to the gunwale. All is lined inside by long strips of cedar split very thin, placed lengthwise, and held in position by eight semi-circular ribs of cedar set closely together, their ends being cleverly caught between the inner side of the bark and the gunwale. Seams are carefully made tight by the gums of any coniferous tree. A canoe is from 10 to 20 feet long, and so equipped with a flint-lock gun and powder and shot an Indian can traverse the continent from ocean to ocean without

The Red River settlement in those days was, of course, civilization itself as compared with Fort York. Here is a picture of the Hudson's Bay depot nder young Campbell's supervision:
"My emporium was crowded every day with customers ready to purchase goods for cash, or to barter with their furs and agricultural produce. A record of all articles sold was entered in a sales book. The currency was sterling, and consisted chiefly of promissory notes issued by my company, re-deemable by bills of exchange granted at 60 days' sight on the governor and the committee of the company in London. These bore a high premium in the United States. The notes were of two denominations, one pound and five shillings. Besides the notes, there was a good deal of English gold and silver in circulation. Yet it was an isolated kind of life he passed. The narrative is full of remembrances of this fact: "Our officials, when they wished to become benedicts, often married Indian girls. Many, however, did not care to do so, and would petition the company to select wives for them and send them out by the next boat. Their wishes were, as a rule, complied with, and the selection was nearly always satisfactory. Among the archives of the company are fund receipts from factors running thus: 'Received per Lapwing, Jane Goody, as per invoice. in good trim;' 'Received per Osprey Matilda Timpins, returned per Lapwing as not being in accordance with description contained in invoice.' And there came a time to Mr. Campbell, as come it must to all of us (so he assures us), when "a woman ceases to be regarded with carelessness, and the idea of woman in its pomp of loveliness and purity dawns upon the young mind." To be precise this momentous date in the case of young Campbell was Nov. 9, 1895. On that day he was smitten by the charms of a dusky beauty of the prairie, and it is a red-letter day in his life. Can it be a mere coincidence that Nov. 9 is also the anniversary of the King's birthday and the day of the Lord Mayor's show?

And so we might follow Mr. Campbell through his pleasant ambling narrative. There were, of course, anxious and exciting days in store for Fort Garry when Riel got the upper hand, and when one, Donald A. Smith, brought his tact, force of character, and statesmanship to bear upon an ugly situation. For this narrative the reader must go himself to Mr. Campbell's pages. He will find there material to amuse and to instruct.

I have sought you this morning to ask you. I have not done so, believe me, without mature consideration; my future happiness is bound up in my love for Douglas, and I have sought you this morning to ask you—to entreat—to implore, if necessary—to sanction our continued engagement, for I have never ceased to be engaged to him."

"You well know the result of your appeal, Andree," he replied, angrily. "I will never do so."

"For a moment they stood thus face to face, regarding each other in silence more meaning than any words. "This raving is quite useless, Andree. If you will recollect, you will find that I never approved of your engagement; but that rather than oppose your wishes, I gave a consent which then, perhaps, I had no good reason for withholding. But you know that circumstances alter cases. Douglas Lancaster is no longer in a position to marry you. You don't care for poverty—possibly not—you have never tried it; but those who have done so will tell you differently. I care very much tell you differently. I care very much that my daughter should wed the son of a ruined—excuse a hard word, but I can find no other term so correct or suitable—ruined swindler."

She litted her head haughtly, but her lips quivered for a moment or two and she could not speak.

"Is it just that the sins of parents should be visited on their children?" she asked. "If Mr. Lancaster was unfortunate, Douglas, at least, had no personal share in the ill-doing."

"It is a case in which the innocent suffer more than the guilty," Sir Edward answered, yet more angrily. "How many are suffering now for the sin of one. How many families have been ruined; into how many homes, once so happy, has desolation been carried by the misfortune, as you call it—the crime is the better term—of one man?"

He paused a momen, and went on with increasing passion:

"Would it suit you, Andree, to have your husband pointed at as a disgraced, dishonored man, the son of a scoundrel who escaped punishment only by death? Would you be happy, thinking that hundreds of women and children were homeless because his father was a thief?"

"Hush, hush, hush!" she cried, passionately. "Papa, you are crue!"

It is recent an event to be recalled to remory." Sir Edward began, "You your memory," Sir Edward began, "You know also that under the present cir-cumstances there must be an end to the engagement which existed between your sister and Douglas Lancaster. He himself has seen the necessity of this; it was impossible he should not do so. But it seems incredible and strange in my eyes; your sister refuses to see how very obvious this is, and thinks matters can remain on their former footing."

Andree lifted her head, and her restless, shining eyes sought her brother's ace for a moment with intense eagerness avoided her glance as he replied.

"Choose," he said, again, with savage exultation over her drooping courage—"choose; your father or Douglass."

"Douglas!"
It was but one word—one soft word;
but it said much, uttered in a faint voice, which barely had power to do more than breathe it forth. It spoke of plighted vows, unalterable—of love once given, irrevocable—of a heart which might break; but it would be faithful until the break; but it would be faithful with the last, and Hugh, glancing at the fair, steadfast face, felt that Douglas Lancaster could not be pitied, possessed of such a treasure as that—the priceless treasure, the immeasurable riches contained in the heart of a true woman. "Douglas!"

"Hush, hush, hush!" she cried, passionately. "Papa, you are cruel!"

"The truth is often unpleasant, Andree, and I am speaking the truth."

"It may be so; all you say may be too true," she rejoined, with sudden calmness; "he may be ruined, disgraced, dishonored; all the more reason for me, who love him, to be faithful to him in his shame; all the more reason for you to bring the weight of your influence round to his side. Papa, be just—be merciful, if you will not be just. You know his noble nature, you know how worthy he is, how abundantly worthy of all the love I could give him. Do not force me to disobey you."

She raised herself from her crouching posture, and drew herself up to her full height with a stately, queenly gesture, and turned to leave the room; but she was obliged to pause, her knees trembled, her limbs refused to obey her; she made a few steps, swayed to and fro like a reed shaken with wind, and then fell forward suddenly, before Hugh, who had sprung forward, could catch the insensprung forward, could catch the insen-sible form in his arms.

ATHLETICS. THE COMING VISIT OF ENGLISH

ATHLETES. Montreal, July 13 .- A meeting of the epresentatives of Toronto and McGill Universities was held here yesterday to consider the correspondence received from England relative to the details of the meeting of the English and Canadian athletes. After the whole matter of the coming international meet had been discussed as far as definitely settled up to date, it was decided to form a Canadian committee for the management and completion of all details. It was finally decided to have the meeting take place on the grounds of the Montreal Athletic Association on Saturday, Sept. 14. The officials of the day will be appointed from members of the M. A. A., with possibly their number added to by Toronto representatives. The form of reception to the visiting athletes was also discussed, but owing to the meet being some time off yet, it was decided to ternoon in Alexandra Park between the Memorials of London and the Memorials of London and the future meeting the committee would be in a more final position. It was decided in a more final position. It was decided to hold meetings from time to time, so that no opportunity may be lost to-wards making the meet a great suc-

THE NIAGARA TOURNAMENT. Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., July 13.— In the finals of the singles of the Canadian championship tennis tournament yesterday morning W. A. Larned, of Summit, N. J., beat Beals Wright, of Harvard, in straight heats. Score, men's singles, final round—W. A. Larned beat Beals Wright, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3. W. A. Larned, ofuS mmit, N. J., vesterday repeated his victory of last year in the final round of the men's singles in the Canadian championship tennis tournament, and today will challenge M. D. Whitman, the present champion. Whitman has two legs on the cup, and a win today will add another cup to his list of challenge trophies. In yesterday's match Wright attempted to play from the back of the court, and did not follow his service to the net, and Larned, with his deep ground strokes, had an easy victory in straight nets. The finals in doubles and handicap singles will also be played today. The scores Men's singles, finals-W. A. Larned,

QUOITING.

LONDON CLUB. The members of the London Quoit Club have been invited to visit Port Bruce about the last of the month as the guests of Mr. Young, of that place. Mr. Young is a well-known fish dealer and assures the club that everything will be done to make their stay pleasant. He will meet them at Port Stanley and take them in his own boat to Port Bruce, there to spend a couple of days at quoiting and visiting places of interest. Mr. Young will also bring his guests back to Port Stanley. The invitation will in all probability be accepted.

WON HIS GAME.

Tough Pitcher Was Too Much for Otistown Fans.

Twas a Passed Ball and He Took His Base-With the Advance Money.

The Otistown Orangs had been beaten three times in succession by the Hiram Hooters, and in the last game the score of the Orangs was composed wholly of goose eggs. Otistown was clean daft over the situation, and after each victory had made festive parade through the Otistown streets, and the occupants had jeered and sung humiliating songs and had made mock, and Otistown hid back from the windows with flushed cheeks and downcast eyes. His church had even allowed the Rev. rthur Erskine to go into the box for the Orangs.

The Rev. Arthur was fresh from college, and admitted that he knew He had something about baseball. played on the college second nine, but the Hooters had batted the reverend pitcher out of the box at the last game with as little respect and compunction as they had shown for P. Percy Perthe drug store clerk, or Jess Laughton, who worked in the machine shop foundry and who had tried to win games for the Orangs. So there was held in the prescription room of the drug store a council of war. All of the local fans were there. The decision was that the Orangs must chip in and hire a professional pitcher. The Rev. Arthur Erskine favored this, and said that the young ladies of his church would help the expenses out by means of lawn parties. So Percy Perkins wrote to a sporting man whom he knew, and the sporting man Breezy McGuigan. Otistown had never een a professional baseball player be-

The pastor headed the local delegation that assembled at the train to meet Breezy. TO KEEP OUT OF NERVOUS PROSTRATION BY PROPER

USE OF FOOD. It is a lamentable fact that American brain workers do not, as a rule, know how to feed themselves to rebuild the daily loss occasioned by active mental effort. This fact, coupled with the disastrous effects of the alkaloids contained in tobacco, coffee and whisky, makes a sure pathway towards nervous prostration.

The remedy is simple enough. Employ the services of a food expert, who knows the kind of food required to rebuild the daily losses in the human body. This can be done by making free use of Grape-Nuts, the famous breakfast food, which contains exactly the elemental principles which have an affinity for albumen and go directly to rebuild the gray matter in the brain, solar plexus and nerve centers throughout the body. Follow your selection of food up with a dismissal of coffee, tobacco and whisky for fifteen days and mark the difference in mental ability, which means everything to the average hustling American, who must have physical and mental strength or he falls out

African campaign resolved Becher, veterans of '66, '70 and South Africa respectively. A committee appointed at a previous meeting advised that no action be taken towards securing a land grant until all had received application forms from the government and claims were proven. It was the committee's suggestion that the association, composed of the different corps mentioned, be reorganized, and that a fee of $1 per annum be collected from each member for the purpose of defraying the expenses in connection with the association. Mr. George Taylor will visit the several townships in which the grants are contained, Algoma, Nipissing, Rainy River and Thunder Bay districts, and report to the association on his return as to the most suitable lands. Mr. Taylor believes that there was not a claim there that would be worth less than $1,500-a present of $1,500 to veteran or his heirs. He suggested that it would be a good plan for the veterans of this district to secure their grants as closely together as possible for many reasons. The reports that came from Temiscaming district, about 300 miles north of Toronto, are excellent, giving it a high position as a first-class agricultural country. There was a large Canadian settlement in the Rainy River district. which had fine timber and good agricultural land along the banks of the river of the same name.

Each grant consists of 160 acres, and any veteran desiring to take up a grant at once may do so by making a deposit of $5, which will be returned to him as soon as he attains his land THE WESTERN FAIR

The time is at hand in which preparation is being made for this truly great holiday outing for the people of Western Ontario. It is confidently expected that many from across the lines will make their visit to the Pan-American the opportunity of seeing Canada's great live stock, agricultural, and industrial exhibition, which will open on the 5th of September and continue to the 14th. With the usual forethought for the comfort and convenience of the public, the management are adding to the attractiveness and general appearance of the buildings and grounds. The painters and decorators are at work, and a surprise awaits those who visit this year's fair. Thousands of dollars have been spent the last two or three years in improvements, but the ever-increasing popularity of the only "Western" makes it imperative that nothing shall be left undone to please the tens of thousands of visitors. Additions and alterations in the prize list are such as are calculated to give the greatest amount of satisfaction to
