MOTH BAGS.

Each bag is supplied with a strong wire garment hanger, and are made in six sixes, retailing from 25c to 80c each.

This bag is made from Genuine Fibre Chamois, on practically common sense grounds. It is so simply made and adjusted that it must commend itself to every person who may have something to protect. Its cheapness puts it within the reach of everyone as a protection in any climate from the all-destroying moth. It is a well-known fact that nothing is secure from the penetrating power of the moth. Silk, wool, cotton, fur, and in fact, all textile fabrics are as food. Until the adoption of fibre chamois, made from the pulp of the cedar and spruce tree, as a protector from its ravages nothing has been found to prevent them. a protector from its ravages nothing has been found to prevent them.

Fibre chamois is guaranteed moth proof. Wearing apparel stored in this bag can be hung on the wall, and no dirt or dust can get to your garments, and as a result the goods come out as fresh as they went in. It is also germ proof. No infectious or contagious disease can penetrate this bag; thus proving an obstacle to the many contagious diseases on the wing. For sale by

The Burning of the Battle Creek Sanitarium One of the Most Regrettable Incidents of the Year.

The burning of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, at Battle Creek, Mich., is one of the most regrettable incidents of the year, for Dr. Kellogg's big sanitarium was an institution that has done and was doing a wonderful amount of good. Thousands of persons with but slight hope of living have been restored to good health, and thousands more have been taught to live so that the best of good health would be theirs. While the burning of such an institution is undoubtedly a great loss to the people of this continent, it is to be hoped that it will only be a temporary one, and that the sanitarium will be rebuilt on a larger scale, with increased capabilities for going good work. In any event, "Good deeds can never die," and the good deeds of the Battle Creek Sanitarium will live forever, while the lessons in the matter of good

At the sanitarium's Canadian branch, at London, Ont., where their justly celebrated health foods are manufactured, all is life and activity. They are working overtime, and Manager Robinson is of the opinion that larger premises will very soon be required. This is another case of success being thoroughly deserved, for these Battle Creek Sanitarium foods possess merit of a remarkable nature. Granose, Granola, Life Chips, and the food-drink, Carmel Cereal, are their names, and they are manufactured in London, just as they were at Battle Creek, for the patients of the sanitarium. Originally they were foods for sick people; now they are eaten by people who are as healthy as the proverbial trout. Even trained athletes give them a preference on account of the large amount of nutriment they yield. Come to think of it, why shouldn't food that is good for sick people be good for well people? Pre-digested, rich in nutriment and wonderfully appetizing. Such foods should be good for pretty nearly any person. Try some of these foods yourself, and, when you have e aten them, you will feel like doffing your hat to them as being considerably the finest foods you know of.

Close of the Ontario Legislature. The last session of the present Leg-Islature of Ontario has come to a successful close, saddened, however, by the sudden death of the wife of the completing the tale of four years more of provincial progress under Liberal rule. The most outstanding feature of cessful effort to bring the advantages of Old Ontario to the notice of the greatest free market in the world. The results of that policy will mean great things for the Province as a wholethe greatest single Province of the Empire. Naturally much interest has attached to the discussion of the question of prohibition. Of that and germane questions, there will be ample oppor- proportion to the strength and purity tunity for consideration before the date of the referendum, Dec. 4 next. As to the strength of parties, there as nothing to indicate that Mr. Whitney, the Opposition leader, comes out of the session any stronger than he went in. When a little time has elapsed, so that men and events can be seen in due proportion, it will be found that Premier Ross has an increasing hold on the confidence of the electors of Ontario. We predict he will come back from the country with a considerably enhanced majority in the Legislature.

Leave Well Enough Alone.

It is to be hoped that the report is true that Mr. Roy, M.P.P., intends to withdraw the bill he is promoting in the Quebec Legislature to restrict the right of His Majesty's subjects in the Province of Quebec to appeal to the Privy Council. It is better that it should not be believed that any section of the Canadian people can be got to restrict the right of the subject to appeal to the foot of the throne in matters affecting his rights. For this reason we believe that the majority of the Quebec Legislature would not look with approval on a move of this kind, but even if the measure were passed, as the result of a feeling of disap- with regard to the proposed assimilapointment with regard to one or more tion of the laws regarding property pel, a widowed newswoman, who was decisions of the Judicial Committee of and civil rights in the various Prothe Privy Council, it would still have vinces, Mr. Fitzpatrick said: to be considered by the law officers of the crown in Canada, and there seems little reason to doubt that they would interpret the measure as being ultra vires of the Legislature. The people of Quebec no doubt fully appreciate the value to them of British connection and of the confederation system. and he would not lightly regard an attack on these institutions, any more than would the people of Ontario and other sections of the Dominion.

Mr. Roy will be well advised if he drops the measure

The Advertiser has been shown, by Mr. T. W. Wrighton, the first copy of the London (England) Daily News. published Jan. 21, 1846. It is a very carrying one back to names and controversies that have long since entered into historical perspective. Charles Dickens, who was one of the founders and promoters of the Daily News, contributes the first of a series of "Trayeling Letters," this one starting from Paris. If our own London had a suitpapers and documents, this first numbe worthy of an important place.

An Ex-Governor's Plight.

Ex-Governor Hogg, of Texas, is being highly praised by the United States newspapers because he has refused to attend a levee in our British namesake, because he was asked to appear in knee-breeches and silk stockings. The New York Journal asserts that Mr. Hogg "is the first American for years | England, and he got him to visit the who has shown so much independence" and that "his Texan constituents would investigation. For half a crown, he never forgive him if he arrayed himself in a flunkeyish costume." If every- a distant relative for some forty years, thing were known, Mr. Hogg may not but to obtain the money this man deserve so much credit for his refusal to go before the King and Queen with nether extremities incased with trousers. Perchance he has spindle-shank legs and he is disinclined to reveal them, or mayhap he is afraid Queen Alexandra's pug would endeavor to talke a meal out of his calves. Who can tell the inward thoughts of the great ex-governor so long as he is not put under oath? The King should settle it will be next Monday, and the declathis difficulty about uniformity of tog- rations of both parties made as to how gery on great occasions once for all. they stand on the great trade question, Why not compromise on the historic Parliament should soon be able to Knox Church Thursday evening, with garb of old Gaul, and decree that in complete its sittings. Prohibition and the Churches.

Without undue quibbling or subtlety of distinction, it is evident that many things arise out of the prohibition discussion. At present, note just one point. In several of the Protestant communions it is well known that there is a majority in favor of phohibition, and various ecclesiastical bodies have been in the habit of passing to that effect. But within these bodies there Premier. The session has been mark- in a minority of varying size who opled by much important legislation, pose this action, and oppose it very strongly when it seems to take the form of dictating to the citizen as to how he should vote on a particular measure. It is not necessary for a man the present Premier's policy has been to be an anti-Prohibitionist in order that connected with the development to take this ground. A man might beof New Ontario, combined with a suc- lieve that there is such a clear, strong, intelligent demand for prohibition that the experiment ought to be tried, and yet think that the action taken by the church courts to which he belongs is opposing the essential spirit of the Protestant faith by calling upon the members of the church to vote in a certain specific fashion. True Christian men, says this man, ought to seek to promote temperance, and will do so in of their life, but they must be free to promote it in their own way. The business of the church is to preach the Gospel, to protest against unrighteousness, and inspire men to seek truth and goodness in all the relations of life, but it cannot make total abstinence, still less prohibition, an article of faith and condition of membership, without being faithless to the essential spirit and basis of the life of the church. The church is not a temperance society in the narrow sense. The loyal member will bow to the authority of the majority when acting in its own rightful sphere, but not when it usurps authority in a province that belongs to the thought and conscience of the individual citizen. This is one side of an important question which we shall no doubt hear discussed. It is not the prohibition question itself, but it comes up in connection with it, and it is of importance because it raises a fundamental, far-reaching question.

Value of British Connection.

The new Minister of Justice (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick) is as earnest an advocate of Canadian unity and British connection as was Hon. David Mills, his predecessor. In concluding his speech on Dr. Russell's motion

"So long as we maintain the British dering his mother." connection, so long as we maintain the right to go to His Majesty, to the foot of the throne, to maintain these privileges, so long will they be respected. I say this confederation act is a covenant between the British people and the people of Canada, that the British people respect their covenants, and that any lessening of the tie be-tween us and Great Britain must be detrimental to the Province of Quebec, and to all the Provinces of the

THE LONDON AND WESTERN TRUSTS CO..

The fifth annual meeting of the London and Western Trusts Company, Limited, was held in the Company's office, on Talbot street, on the 20th of February. There was a good attendance of Stockholders, including Messrs. J. L. Englehart (of Petrolia), Sheriff Cameron, G. B. Harris, M. Masuret, M. D. Fraser, T. H. Smallman, John Labatt, Dr. Roome, R. W. Puddicombe, J. H. Nelles (of Woodstock), and others.

The President, Mr. G. C. Gibbons, in moving the adoption of the report, expressed the gratification of all concerned in the steady progress of the Company. More estates had been intrusted to them during the past year than in any previous year in their history, and there is a gradual accumulation of permanent business from this source. The Company has not so far sustained a dollar's loss, either in respect of its own or its clients' funds. The management, it will be noticed, is exceedingly conservative and careful, the expenses being kept to a minimum.

The usefulness of an institution such as this is made very manifest to all those who have had to do with estates. Here is a permanent executor, with abundant security, whose particular business it is to administer the estates of deceased persons. The books are always open to inspection by those interested, everything is in order, and the whole administration is under the direction of a strong executive of business men. While all this care and security is given, the expenses are not any greater, if as great, as in the hands of a private executor. More and more the public are appreciating the benefits of such trust companies, and taking advantage of the privilege of appointing them executor.

The President expressed the deep regret of the Board at the death of two esteemed colleagues—Mr. George Moncrieff, lately Vice-President, and Mr. D. Regan—both of whom had been directors from the inception of the company.

Mr. Englehart, Sheriff Cameron and others then addressed the meeting in congratulatory terms. The usefulness of an institution such as this is made very manifest to all congratulatory terms.

The following Board were then elected: GEO. C. GIBBONS, K.C., London.

Unnecessary to Suffer From Asthma This distressing complaint can be perfectly cured by inhaling Catarrhozone, a vegetable antiseptic that destroys the germs which cause the disease. Catarrhozone is inhaled at the mouth from a convenient pocket inhaler, and after permeating the minutest air cells, is exhaled slowly through the nostrils. It haled slowly through the nostris. It stops the cough, makes breathing regular, and eradicates the asthma so thoroughly from the system that it never returns. Don't suffer from asthma; use Catarrhozone. It will speedily cure you. Angier's Petroleum Emulsion, which now enjoys a world-wide reputation as a dependable remedy among doctors and the public generally, is known to be without an equal for the treatment of all throat, lung, stomach and bowel diseases. Its action is positive and certain. It is especially indicated in the treatment of consumption and chronic bronchitis. We have letters every day from people living in all parts of Canada, the United States and England, who, out of heartfelt gratitude, write us of the benefits received from the use of

From the innumerable letters received we have selected the few following, which are from well-known Canadians. Read them carefully. They are true, came to us unsolicited, and we believe are proof positive of the value of Angier's Petroleum Emulsion :-

CURED SEVERE LA GRIPPE COUGH :- Dear Sirs : I was very ill with grippe, with a violent cough, which gave me no rest, and a severe pain in the chest and side. I was advised to take Angier's Petroleum Emulsion. I took the first dose at night before retiring and rested comfortably. I immediately began to get better, and believe your Emulsion saved my life. MRS. PATHEY, 18 Trafalgar Ave., Toronto, Ont.

REGAINED WEIGHT, STRENGTH AND COLOR: - Dear Sirs: For some time I have been troubled with a severe cold on my chest and lungs, with a distressing cough at night. I thought I was going into consumption. I lost in weight and strength, and the color entirely left my face. I have been taking Angier's Petroleum Emulsion and have gained in weight and strength and my color has returned. I have recommended your remedy to several persons. You are at liberty to publish my testimonial if you wish, JOHN F. JONES, Clark Street, London

IMPROVEMENT IN HEALTH AND STRENGTH NOTICED BY FRIENDS:-Dear Sirs: I have used a sample bottle, two large bottles of Angier's Petroleum Emulsion and a package of the Petroleum Tablets, and with good results. My gain in health and strength has been commented on by friends. R. H. GROVE, 56 Scollard St., Toronto, Ont.

A SPLENDID REMEDY FOR THROAT TROUBLES :- Dear Sirs: I enclose you a letter from Mrs. Cameron, who speaks in the highest terms of Angier's Petroleum Emulsion. For years she has tried different remedies to give her strength, but none of them have done her as much good as Angier's Petroleum Emulsion. After using the sample we bought several large bottles, and consider it a splendid remedy for throat troubles, and for giving strength and tone to the system. I should not be surprised to learn that it has no equal in this respect. I cannot speak too highly in its favor, and wish you every success. JOHN W. ADAM, 47 Carlton St., Toronto, Ont.

CHICAGO, March 14.—Corn strength dominated grains for the greater part of the session today. There were bearish factors at work in wheat, which finally prevailed in that grain, but the coarser cereals retarded for some time the looked-for decline and itself held firm. At the close May wheat was %c to %c down, May corn %c to %c higher, and May oats %c lower; provisions closed a shade lower to 5c higher. Local receipts of wheat were 35 cars, none of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 260 cars, making a total for the three points of day at the market here today. The various lines of the products of the farm were well represented. Business as a rule was brisk, and the market on the whole was a lively one. Features of the Funeral—The Pall-Bearers—Letters of Sympathy.

Toronto, March 15 .- The bright March sun, softening the air to a mid-April warmth and freshness, failed to lighten the scene of grief and sadness when the remains of the late Mrs. Ross were yesterday borne to the tomb. The premier's colleagues in public life, his loyal followers in the legislature and hundreds of persons to whom the deceased lady had become a friend through social and public intercourse united in a demonstration of respect that is seldom paid to anyone. The streets approaching the house, at No. 1 Elmsley Place were crowded with carriages and citizens on foot, and every indication was given that the passing of her they mourned was felt to be in sense a personal loss.

CHICAGO, March 14.—Butter—Firm; creameries, 18c to 25½c; dairies, 18c to 23c. Cheese—Steady, 10¾c to 12¼c. Eggs—Easier; fresh, 14½c. The pall-bearers were the premier's colleagues and the speaker of the legislature: Hon. J. M. Gibson, Hon. Richard Harcourt, Hon. John Dryden, Hon. E. J. Davis, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Hon. F. R. Latchford, Hon. J. T. Garrow and Hon. F. E. A. Evanturel.

SOME OF THOSE PRESENT. Among the throng who were present were noticed the following: Hon. Wm. Mulock, representing the Dominion Government; Commander Law, representing the lieutenant-governor; W. S. ering in the following words: "For the last ten years of my ministion longest known to me was Mrs. Ross. She belonged to my first charge where I started my ministry over 30 years ago. She was then just stepping out of her teens, a woman of a bright, cheerful spirit, which she con-tinued to be to the end of her life, to the great benefit of her family and friends. Cheerfulness with her was not a mood induced by circumstances, but was an element of her character. Two qualities seldom found together existed in happy combination in her. maintained it to the last with sincerity friends in Toronto is so widespread in and dignity. Hers was a rich nature, whose touch made friends in every cir-

"Of Mrs. Ross' domestic virtues I venture not to speak, except as they enriched the valuable services the pre-mier has been honored in rendering to his country. Her part in these services has been so marked that, like a city set upon a hill, it could not be hid. She has taught a noble lesson to every woman in the land in her thorough and touching identification of herself with her husband's aims and achievements. When the premier and she were married, two became verily one flesh. She literally, one might say, as well as figword helpmeet. She has shown what largeness and momentum to a man's life, and that woman's most influential sphere for God is to be found in wifely realizations the choicest gills of and head, which she possessed in no ordinary degree. "The sincere and widespread sympathy manifested towards the premier and his family shows that real services, despite regrettable partisan onesidedness, is not, after all, so obscured as to pass without some degree of merited recognition. I am sure that the one feeling of the country is that divine sustainment and comfort and blessing may, in a peculiar degree, be experienced by our bereaved friend and his family in their sudden and sore afflic-

The following are among the very nany letters of sympathy received by Mr. Ross within the last day or two: Sir Oliver Mowat-How I sympathize with you in your great sorrow! I am glad that I and the rest of us at Government House had recently seen so much of Mrs. Ross that we were able from our knowledge and observation to appreciate her kindly nature, her mental and social qualities, and, in fact, all the qualifications needed in your wife. But everybody, however slightly acquainted personally, seems to have been aware of her excellencies sufficiently to perceive how much you have lost. May Almighty love soften the blow you have received, and may you be enables, notwithstanding the great bereavement, to continue rendering patriotic service to the country of your adoption and affection, the native country of the loving and beloved wife you have lost, and for which she looked with hope to increased greatness and advancement in all that is good. Sir Wilfrid Laurier-I simply write you a word to join my voice to the voice of your many friends who all would crave to offer you consolation and sympathy, but who all realize how unavailing human sympathy is to help against such a tragic blow. May God Hihself assist and comfort you.

THE PLACE VIGER

Montreal.

The expansion of the business of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which contemplates an expenditure million dollars for new roadbed, rolling stock, double-tracking parts of the road, and extensive new workshops in Montreal, also includes a very considerable addition to the hotel system of the company. The Canadian Pacific have at the present time a series of hotels from Quebec to Vancouver. The last new hotel which the company has erected, "The Place Viger," at Mon-treal, is, it is claimed, one of the most exquisitely finished hotels that tavelers or tourists from the other side or from the old country have stopped at. It was at the Place Viger that their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, now the Prince and Princess of Wales, made their first stop on their arrival in Mon-

The popularity of this hotel is due, perhaps, to the fact that the management have always endeavored to tablish, and have been successful in establishing, its title as the most refined, select and exclusive quarters in Montreal, and there are very many society people from the old country and from the United States and Canada who have enjoyed the hospitality of this beautiful house.

CHEAPEST OF ALL MEDICINES .-Considering the curative qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, it is the cheapest medicine now offered to the cheapest medicine now offered to the public. The dose required in any ailment is small, and a bottle contains many doses. If it were valued at the benefit it confers it could not be purchased for it but many times the price asked for it, but increased consumption has simplified and cheapened its manufacture.

The relation of woman's nerves and generative organs is very close; consequently nine tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despendency and nervous irritability of women arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Herein we prove conclusively that Lydin E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will quickly relieve all this trouble.

MISS W. CHILDS-BLACKBURN. DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: - I take pleasure in acknowledging the sffects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In my estimation there is no female remedy to equal it. Weakness not properly attended to, together with the close confinement at my desk brought on nervous prostration, so much so that for a year I doctored continually. I tried different remedies which only succeeded in poisoning my system, and my stomach refused food. A neighbor who had suffered with overian troubles and was perfectly cured, called my attention to your Vegetable Compound, and I made up my mind to give it a two months' fair trial. However, before one month had passed I was like a new woman, and after six weeks faithful use of the Compound I was in perfect health. It certainly is of great benefit to women, and I wish every poor suffering woman could have a chance to try it. Yours very truly, Miss W. Childs-BLACKBURN, 2922 Fifth Ave., Rock Island, Ill.

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it soothes, strengthens, heals and tones up the delicate female organism. It is a positive cure for all kinds of female complaints; that bearing down feeling, backache, displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries and is invaluable during the change of life.

How Mrs. Pinkham helped Mrs. Borst.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:- When I wrote to you some time ago for advice I really thought my days were numbered. I was so ill that I could not stand on my feet for fifteen minutes at a time. I had female troubles in many of their worst forms; inflammation and ulceration of the womb; leucorrhœa; bearing down pains; headache and backache; nervous prostration. My kidneys were out of order and blood in a bad condition. Everyone, and even my doctor thought I was going into consumption. I followed your advice faithfully for six months with the result that I became a well woman, and it cost me much less than a doctor's bill. I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life." - Mrs. SAMUEL BORST, 7 Cozy Ave., Oneonta, N. Y.

The above letter shows how unerring is the advice which Mrs. Pinkham gives to women who write her about their sickness; as the advice is free and always helpful it is not strange that she advises more than one hundred thousand sick women every year. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

REWARD. — We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $500 which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letter are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special per mission.

London Life's

Annual Meeting.

The report, in another column, of the 27th annual meeting of the London Life Insurance Company, held at the company's offices, London, on Monday last, March 10, shows that steady and solid progress is being made in all essential particulars. The cash receipts from interest on investments and premiums show an increase of nearly $25,000 over the previous year. The assets of the company increased by over $134,000, while the liabilities calculated upon a reserve standard of 4 per cent interest as regards business in force prior to 1900, and 31/2 and 3 per cent as regards business issued since then, and the inclusion of every known or ascertainable outstanding obligation of the company at the end of the year increased less than $124,000. The surplus security to policyholders has increased to over $100,000, and after deducting contingent fund, accumulating profits and paidup capital, their remains a net surplus over all liabilities and capital of over $33,000. This report is a most gratifying one, evidencing the prosperity and progressiveness of one of London's most important financial concerns. The record of the past and the personnel of the company's officers and directors give every promise for still greater advance in the future.

She Thought About a Food that would Agree with Her.

An unnatural appetite for rich and improper food is really kept alive by the use of such foods, whereas a change to healthful, nourishing and scientifically made food, will correct the unnatural appetite. A little woman up at Peekskill, N. Y., Margaret Smith, P. O. Box 193, says:

was such a sufferer from dyspepsia that life was a burden. I could hardly keep from eating all sorts of pastry, cakes and other rich foods, although they did not agree with me, nor in fact any sort of food. I became spirited and discouraged, was too weak to work and very seriously troubled with palpitation of the heart.

"Drugs seemed to make me worse rather than better. A friend said one day: I believe Grape-Nuts food would cure you, explaining that that food was made with great care and intended for the prevention and relief of diseases that were brought about by improper food.

"That was Saturday night, and all day Sunday I kept thinking about Grape-Nuts, and the first thing Monday morning I sent for a package. I had it in my mind that the food would look like nuts, and was disappointed when I found it had to be eaten with a spoon. However, I followed the directions and made a meal of Grape-Nuts and milk, which I found to be delicious, and for the first time in months, I suffered no distress after eating. "I at once began to feel hopeful that I might be cured at last. Since that day I have used Grape-Nuts constantly, morning and night, and have steadily improved in health, until now I am as well as I ever was in my life; weigh two pounds more than I did a year ago, have no palpitation of the beart and can work all day long. "At supper I have Grape-Nuts mixed with soft-boiled eggs. I make my dinner on any kind of food I desire. One of the best things about this cure by proper food is that I no longer have any desire for the rich, indigestible rubbish of which I used to be so fond."

JEWELRY PRICES GOING DOWN

Watches and Jewelry of All Kinds Now Sold at 25 Per Cent Reduction-Silverware at a Discount

The success of a sale depends upon every article sold being sacrificed at bona fide discount price. Many sales are announced and some goods are sold at less than cost, while the loss is sustained by many other articles in stock being sold at a profitable figure. When goods are marked in plain figures there should be no effort to judge whether the selling discount price is a bargain for the purchaser. Thos. Gillean, the enterprising jeweler, who is known far and wide as the reliable watchmaker and jeweler of this city, announced a 25 per cent reduction on everything in stock for the month of March. The sale has been a complete success to date, and will continue for the balance of this month. The following are some of the items:

A gold-filled watch, Waltham movewatch was originally $16. As a business-maker it was reduced to $12. The discount sale came along, and the price dropped to $9. A cut-glass bowl of best quality for looked so kingly, his breast blazing witth orders and stars. The Queen wore a yellow dress embroidered in gold. Her jewels were pearls and a dainty crown of diamonds. Miss Twining, a Canadian girl, presented by Lady Strathcona, was attired in a lovely dress of Limerick lace.

THE NAVY'S NEEDS. In an address before the London Chamber of Commerce on the lack of administrative efficiency in the British organization for defense Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford remarked that initial naval reverses similar to the military reverses experienced in South Africa would entail disasters which would be irreparable and which would be eternal in their effect. It was lack of organization which led to the remount and other scandals. His plan for insuring naval efficiency included the addition to the board of admiralty of a naval war lord of the admiralty, who would be responsible for placing before parliament the full requirements of the navy.

The government, Lord Charles added, ought to purchase coal fields at home and in the colonies. All war-ships useless for fighting purposes or valueless on account of lack of speed ought to be abolished. The reserves ought to be reorganized and, as early as possible, the whole war fleet should be mobilized, to test its organization and discover its weak points. Instancing the shortage of coal at some of the principal stations, Lord Beresford said he had succeeded, after much obstruction, in finding out how inadequate were the supplies at Gib-raltar and Malta. He represented this state of affairs to his chief; but he had to threaten to haul down his flag and publish the whole business in the newspapers in order to get the matter WANTED TO VISIT IRELAND. In an address delivered at a public meeting held in Dublin, Earl Cadogan, lord-lieutenant of Ireland, made a rather enigmatic reference to King Edward's abandoned visit to Ireland.

After declaring that nobody was more disappointed in this matter than the King himself, with whom the idea of this visit had originated, and after expressing his own conviction that his Majesty would have been most enthusiastically welcomed here, Earl Cadogan said he shared the full responsibility with the other ministers for advising the King that the present was not an appropriate occasion for a visit, and that this advice was given after the fullest consideration.

The speaker said he refrained from characterizing the difficulties which had rendered the abandoned visit inopportune, but they were well known and deplored by a vast majority of the Irish people. Earl Cadogan said he was quite sure these difficulties were only of a temporary character, and before long his majesty would be able to carry out his wish which was very near his heart, and the realization of which would be productive of the greatest possible advantage to Ireland. EIGHT-FOOT SNOWDRIFTS. Winnipeg, Man., March 15 .- The blizcard that started yesterday is still raging. Snowdrifts are six and eight feet high. Insurance Company.

The twenty-seventh annual meeting of the London Life Insurance Com-Dany was held at the Company's offices, London, Canada, March 10, 1902.

The Vice-President, Mr. Albert O. Jeffery, K.C., LL.D., D.C.L., occupied the chair, and the Manager, Mr. John G. Richter, acted as Secretary. The notice calling the meeting was read by the Secretary, after which the following report and financial statement were submitted:

TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT. The Directors of the Company beg to submit annual report and duly audited financial statement for the year ending Dec. 31, 1901.

During the year 12,468 applications for insurance, amounting to $1,618,105, were accepted and policies issued therefor.

The net premium and interest receipts of the year were respectively $271,726 83 and $50,292 76, totaling $372,019 59, and being an increase of $24,770 47 over the previous year.

The sum of $59,898 32 was paid for death claims, $13,209 05 for matured endowments, and $8,141 09 for surrendered policies and cash profits, making a total of $51,246 48 paid policyholders or their heirs during the year.

The insurance in force on the Company's books at the close of the year, after deducting all re-insurances, amounted to $6,489,041 62, under 3,294 "Ordinary" after deducting all re-insurances, amounted to $6,489,041 62, under 3,294 "Ordinary" and 43,294 "Industrial." or a total of 46,588 policies—an increase of 2,566 policies for insurance of $378,535 74 for the year.

The assets of the Company, exclusive of uncalled but subscribed capital, amount to $1,126,190 40, an increase of $134,371 24 for the year. The interest and other payments falling due during the year were in the main satisfactorily met. No losses in respect of investments were incurred during the year.

The liabilities of the Company under existing policies, and in all other respects, have been provided for in the most ample manner, the whole amounting to $1,026,133 79. The surplus on policyholders' account, exclusive of uncalled but subscribed capital, is therefore $100,056 61, and after deducting paid-up capital, accumulating profits and contingent fund, there remains a net surplus, over all

To the Shareholders of The London Life Insurance Company:
Gentlemen,—In discharge of my duty I have made a continuous audit in detail of your books for the year ending Dec. 3i, 1901, and find them accurately kept. The balance sheet is a true abstract from the books for the year. As will be seen all outside liabilities, including the Reserve Fund, are fully covered, independently of the General Surplus shown. I have carefully looked into the securities and find them in good shape. The clerical work is neatly done.

Surplus over all liabilities and capital......

The Vice-President in moving the adoption of the report, said: "In the unavoidable absence of the President, it devolves on me to move the adoption of the report under consideration. report and accompanying financial statement are, as usual, full and readily understood.

"The results of the past year's operations show that steady and solid progress is being made in all essential particulars. The cash receipts from interest on investiments and premiums show an increase of nearly $25,000

'The assets of the company increased by over $134,000, while the liabilities calculated upon a reserve standard of 4 per cent interest as regards business in force prior to 1900, and 31/2 and 3 per cent as regards business issued since then, and the inclusion of every known or ascertainable outstanding obligation of the company at the end of the year increased less than $124,000. "The surplus security to policyholders has increased to over $100,000; and after deducting contingent fund, accumulating profits and paid-up capital, there remain a net surplus over all liabilities and capital of over $33,000. 'With these remarks I beg to move the adoption of the report."

Judge Bell, in seconding the adoption of the report, said:
"As a policyholders' director it affords me pleasure to testify to the care and ability exercised in the handling of the funds of the company. The investments are not only first class in character, as evidenced by the fact that no losses whatever have been incurred during the past year, but yielding as they do an average return of over 51/2 per cent interest, are more than ordin

'I am also pleased with the liberal profits the company is paying policyholders entitled to participate therein; and taking into account the fact that the net surplus is steadily increasing there is every reason to anticipate a continuance of like satisfactory results.

"I have much pleasure in seconding the adoption of the report," The adoption of the report was carried unanimously. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the agents and other employes of the company for the satisfactory manner in which they discharged their several duties the past year. The election of directors resulted in the re-election of Messrs. John Mc-Clary, president; A. O. Jeffery, vice-president; Wm. Bowman, Geo. C. Gibbons, W. F. Bullen, A. S. Emery, Judge Bell, T. H. THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Gives Referendum Bill Its Third Reading.

After Four Divisions It Passed by 47 Yeas to 34 Nays.

Four Opposition Members Voted for the Railway Bill, Including

Mr. Marter.

Toronto, March 15 .- The chief event of interest in yesterday's proceedings in the legislature, which at an early hour this morning was still in session, was the voting of four members of the opposition with the government in favor of the railway aid bill, and in spite of Mr. Whitney's vigorous speech against the measure. Later in the evening Mr. Foy commenced an attack on the government's electric railway bill, which gave promise of lasting till a late hour.

THE PROHIBITION BILL. The prohibition bill passed its third reading by a majority of 13, Mr. Marter, North Toronto, voting with the government. The bill was debated sharply during the forenoon sitting, and for an hour or so in the evening. The discussion emphasized a divergence of opinion on the part of the opposition in regard to the measure. Mr. Crawford, member for West To ronto, started the debate with a motion, seconded by Mr. Lucas, that the whole of the referendum clause be struck out of the bill. Mr. Foy went a step further than his colleague, saying that the amendment, if carried, would kill the bill, and if it could not be killed altogether and immediately, he was quite willing that it should be killed by sections.

Mr. Marter declared his determination of voting for the amendment, "but not with the view or intention of kill-ing the bill."

Mr. Whitney reiterated his opposi tion to the whole measure, and during his address referred to the charges made that he was as good as pledged to repeal the bill if he became premier, but he did not make a very definite answer to the question. Hon. Messrs. Gibson, Harcourt and Stratton replied to these criticisms of the opposition in vigorous though brief speeches, comparing the differences of epinion expressed by Mr. Whitney and

AN EVENTFUL DAY

"I never began to use coffee until after I began teaching school, then a good, motherly old dame served such nice coffee that she got me into the way of drinking it.

I laid around the house in misery, and was a misery to everyone else. Once in a while a friend would tell me that coffee was the cause of by trouble. I reasoned with them that I only had one cup at breakfast, and that was not enough to cause the trouble, but I found that that was the secret—that one cup of coffee.

It was an eventful day in our household when I quit coffee and started making Postum. I followed the direc-tions and the result was wonderful; no other words express it. The Postum Coffee was of a rich, beautiful color, and when cream was added loked as delicious as it tasted.

A doctor who was in the house tast-

Nothing ever tasted better to me than that first, well-made cup of Postum, and never since have I tasted coffee, and I now look back with horror upon the sickness it caused. We began very quickly to see the difference between my condition under Postum and under common coffee. Later, Mr. Marter, in moving, seconded by Mr. Tucker, West Wellington, that the date of voting be changed to municipal election day, said he was not opposed to the principle of the referendum, but thought that in the present case the conditions were unfair. He also commended the government for bringing in a bill to the extent of the power defined by the Privy Council. It was better to have the bill than no

Mr. Crawford and Dr. Barr (Dufferin) spoke in favor of the amendment. Mr. Whitney opposed it on the ground that to do otherwise would be inconsistent with his expressed views on the question.

This amendment was defeated by a vote of 76 to 4. Mr. Marter moved other amendments, both seconded by Mr. Dempsey (Prince Edward), the first being that the question be decided on a straight majority vote, and when this was defeated by 76 to 4, that it be decided by a vote of 60 per cent in the affirmative.

Mr. Gibson moved amendments more clearly defining the manner in which the total vote is to be arrived at, namely, the total of votes cast for candidates in the general elections of 1898, excepting Ottawa, where the double vote exists, and only one-half will be counted; in cases of uncontested elections in 1898 the vote cast at the preceding election to be counted. This in no way changes the basis previously announced.

THE VOTE THAT PASSED THE BILL.

The bill was carried on the following division: Yeas-Auld, Aylsworth, Barber, Blezard, Bowman, Breithaupt, Bridland, Brown, Burt, Caldwell, Carpenter, Charlton, Clarke, Conmee, Davis, Dickenson, Dryden, Farwell, Garrow, Gibson, Graham, Gross, Guibord, Har-court, Hill, Hislop, Holmes, Latchford, Lee, Leys, Loughrin, Lumsden, Malcolm, Marter, Mutrie, McKay, McKee, Pardee, Pattullo, Pense, Pettypiece, Preston, Richardson, Russell, Stratton, Taylor, Truax-47.

On motion for third reading, Mr. Whitney declared he was absolutely opposed to the railway aid bill going through. Mr. Latchford gave information about proposed grants, while Mr. Stratton said the policy out lined by the opposition leader would create stagnation in New Ontario. Mr. Marter made a strong declaration in behalf of the government's policy as

Whitney raised an objection to the forfeiture clause, claiming that it was in sufficient. His ground was poorly taken and cannot have a weighty effect. The sessional business will be concluded today, but a Monday sitting may have to be held if the petty blocking tactics of the opposition are maintained to the last moment.

POLICE COURT. Hugh McCurdy and John Turner went arm-in-arm to Governor Bos ton's retreat this morning for 21 days. Both were drunk again, and Police Magistrate Love did not see his way clear to letting them go. The case of Willis Moxley was dismissed, he having paid for the damage he did. Fred Vanderburg, charged with cruelty to animals, was bailed to appear Tuesday. John Siegner, seen here be-fore, was charged with vagrancy, and with carrying a revolver. He went to the castle for 21 days.

ASTHMA'S AGONIES CURED.

MR. MUNRO GUNN FOR SIX YEARS SUFFERED FROM ASTHMA MORE THAN WORDS CAN EXPRESS-UN. ABLE TO SLEEP, INCAPABLE OF EXERTION, ALWAYS GASPING FOR BREATH-THREE BOTTLES OF CATTARHOZONE CURED.

Messrs. N. C. Polson & Co.,

Six Mile Brook, Pictou, N. S. Kingston, Ont.

Dear Sirs,—For six years I have suffered more than pen can write from Asthma. It bothered me most from August of each year until the end of December, but through the cold winter months my suffering was not so severe. Before using Catarrhozone I was unable to work or sleep and never remained one whole night in bed, for I would awaken with smothing spasms and coughing and would have to go out into the

The doctors in this part of the country said I would never get rid of the Asthma, but after using one bottle of the Catarrhozone I concluded they were wrong. I used Catarrhozone Inhaler five minutes every waking hour, and it gave me wonderful relief from the very first.

When I had used three bottles of Catarrhozone I was quite cured and never felt better in my life before than I do today. I am able to work around the farm in both wet and dry weather, and know that Catarrhozone is the remedy that cured me. I will always be glad to recommend Catarrhozone for Asthma, and remain yours very gratefully,

(Signed), MUNRO GUNN.

Catarrhozone is unquestionably a perfect cure for Asthma, as testimonials by the score from well-known, reliable people conclusively prove. In a few weeks, obstinate cases like Mr. Gunn's, that other remedies failed to relieve, Catarrhozone permanently cures. And the reason is very simple. Asthma is caused by germs, and as the Asthma microbe can't exist

WHAT IS IT * * * WHAT IS IT FOR HOW DOES IT GROW

Speltz is a species of wheat. Being comparatively new of introduction during the past couple of years its habits of growth, yield and climatic conditions have been rigorously watched, WITH THE RESULT THAT IT HAS BEEN FOUND TO BE HIGHLY ADAPTED TO THIS COUNTRY, and may be regarded as a permanent crop for stock feeding. The heads are similar in form to two-row barley. It is peculiarly adapted to poor, impoverished soils that are unsuitable for wheat or other grains. Spring frosts do not damage it. The dryer the weather the better it thrives. The past season has confirmed the opinion generally held in this grain, that it is one of the best kind to resist the effects of wet weather. Stooks which have stood out for weeks in the rain were found to be as bright as when built, and the kernel entirely free of injury. It is an immense yielder. In a feeding experiment conducted on the Brandon Experimental farm in the winter of 1901, Speltz was found to be superior to mixed grain as a feed for fattening steers. It is a magnificent feeding cereal for live stock of all kinds. Many farmers have spoken to us about its superior value for fattening hogs. Every farmer should try Speltz in 1902.

CULTURE-Prepare the land same as for oats or barley, but sow as early as spring wheat should be sown.

London and Western Trusts Company.

At the fifth annual meeting of the London and Western Trusts Company, held recently at the company's office on Talbot street, the president, Mr. G. C. Gibbons, K.C., in moving the adoption of the report, expressed the gratification of all concerned in the steady progress of the company. More estates had been intrusted to them during the past year than in any previous year in their history, and there is a gradual accumulation of permanent business from this source. The company has not, so far, sustained a dollars loss, either in respect of its own or its clients' funds. The management, it will be noticed, is exceedingly conservative and careful, the expenses being kept to a minimum. The usefulness of an institution such as this is made very manifest to all those who have had to do with estates. Here is a permanent executor, with abundant security, whose particular business it is to administer the estates of deceased persons. The books are always open to inspection by those interested, everything is in order, and the whole administration is under the direction of a strong executive of business men. While all this care and security is given, the expenses are not any greater, if as great, as in the hands of a private executor, More and more the public are appreciating the benefits of such trust companies, and taking advantage of the privileges of appointing them executor. OF GEORGE WARREN

LIBERAL RALLY * AT COLDSTREAM

In Interests of Mr. Taylor, Candidate for North Middlesex.

Rousing Speeches by the Candidate and G. P. Graham, M.P.P.-Referendum Defended.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Coldstream, March 14.-Notwithstanding the impenetrable darkness, the downpour of rain and the almost impassable condition of the roads, there was a good attendance, including several ladies, at the meeting held here Wednesday night in the interests of Mr. W. H. Taylor, the Liberal candidate for North Middlesex. Mr. Taylor, accompanied by Mr. G. P. Graham, M.P.P., of Brockville, arrived about 7:30 p.m., having driven over from London.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Mitchell, president of the Liberal Association, who, in a very pleasing speech, introduced the member for the

Mr. Taylor was given a hearty reception, showing that the Liberal party in the township of Lobo is not only hopeful, but enthusiastic, and ready for battle when the signal is given. After expressing his thanks for the support always received for Liberalism in this section, and also for the large attendance, he at once plunged into a discussion of the questions before the country, and the financial condition of the province was contrasted with that of the other provinces, and superior management and position of the former commented upon. The conversion of the cash received from crown lands into public buildings was but a transfer of assets from one form to another, and there was no loss, but rather gain to the province, and notwithstanding that more than $100,000,000,000 had been expended, the financial commission had found that a surplus of about $2,500,000 still remained. dishonesty had ever been shown, and the record was one creditable alike to the province and the government. The educational policy of the government was dwelt upon at some length, while Mr. Taylor discussed the great work of the agricultural department in a most interesting manner from the standpoint of a practical farmer. The Agricultural College and Experiment-al Farm, together with the Farmers' Institutes, had done an inamense amount of good all over the province, and farmers, stock-raisers and dairymen were reaping the benefit.

NEW ONTARIO. Coming to New Ontario, Mr. Taylor's remarks showed that he had been a very close student of the great re-sources of that territory and the development that was taking place. spoke of the rich areas of agricultural lands, the timber wealth, the pulpwood tracts, the water powers and mineral deposits, and the increase that was taking place in population by the moving in of desirable immi grants and people from Older Ontario. railway to be constructed by the gov-ernment under an act now being passed by the Legislature, would not only of great assistance to settlers, but would prove very beneficial to Older

IN THE AIR

The Germs of La Grippe A re Conveyed Through the Atmosphere.

No one can escape the La Grippe germ, because when an epidemic of the disease is prevailing the air is laden with it. The reason that every one does not have the disease at the same time is because the persons who, are enjoying perfect health are able to successfully resist and throw off the infection, while those, who for any reason are not in the best of health, fall ready vic-

The first symptoms are those of acute catarrh resembling a hard cold and if prompt treatment is applied at this time, it can be easily broken up; one of the best remedies at this stage is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, sold by druggists everywhere and if taken frely, say one tablet every hour or two for two or three days, the danger of pneumonia and serious complications will be averted.

The Rev. L. E. Palmer, Baptist clergyman of Ceresco, Mich., makes a statement of interest to all catarrh and grip sufferers. He says: "Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have certainly been a blessing to me. I have used them freely this fall and winter and have found them a safeguard against La. Grippe and catarrhal troubles from which I have suffered for years. I feel that I can freely and conscientiously recommend them." Persons who suffer from catarrh of the head and throat are very susceptible to La Grippe and such will find a pleasant, convenient and safe remedy in this new catarrh cure.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are composed entirely of harmeless antiseptics and may be used as freely as necessary as they contain no cocaine, epiate or poisonous drug of any kind.

Ontario, and would open up a new era, possibly, in the construction of railways. He hoped for and expected great things in both Old and New Ontario under the policy of progress and development as outlined by Mr. Ross in his Whitby speech, which policy is now being carried out. In conclusion he asked the electors to again return him to assist in carrying out that policy. Mr. Taylor was vigorously applauded in resuming his seat.

TRIBUTE TO LATE MRS. ROSS. Mr. Graham was given a very flat-tering reception. He first referred in feeling terms to that sad event which was uppermost in every mind, the sudden death of that noble and gifted daughter of Lobo township, Mrs. Geo. W. Ross, whom he referred to as one of the noblest of womankind, a guardian angel and helpmeet to her illustri-ous husband. "A woman she was to all the country dear," and her like will not soon be seen again; her highest aim was to be useful to others and bring sunshine to their lives, in which noble purpose she was pre-eminently successful. She was a personal friend of every member of the Legislature and was esteemed and beloved by all. The prayers of all go up on behalf of the bereaved husband and children, who have the deep sympathy of an undivided people in their dark hour of sad bereavement.

Mr. Graham then entered upon a discussion of public questions which last-ed for fully two hours, during which he was accorded the closest attention of the audience. He contrasted the policies of the parties as outlined in the budget debate. He gave in detail the sources of provincial revenue, dealing particularly with the Succession Duties Act and the Revenue Bill, and showed the fallacy of the opposition position in regard to them. He then went into the expenditures on agriculture, education, public institutions, public works and described at length the work done under these various headings, contrasting the results and the costs with those of other countries. The Sandfield McDonald surplus had all been expended, and over $100,000,000 more with it, but the people to whom the money belonged had received full value. Still there was a substantial surplus remaining. In educational management improvements had been and would continue to be made as the country advanced, and in this connection he mentioned schools of science, technical education, manual training, domestic science, etc.

THE REFERENDUM. Perhaps the most interesting portion of Mr. Graham's speech was that in which he dealt with the referendum on the liquor question, and he prefaced it by saying that the Liberal party was not afraid to discuss this question. Hon. Mr. Ross, he said, had done much to develop true temperance sentiment in the province. He had begun at the foundation by introducing temper-ance into the public schools. The premier's idea was total prohibition, but he was sworn to legislate for all parties in the general interest, and was possessed of great responsibility. The speaker went lengthily into arguwhich might be briefly summed up: The referendum is in perfect harmony with the genius of the British constitution, and legislation embodying this principle has been approved the British House of Commons and House of Lords time and again. It is found in the dates of the Union where constitutional changes are referred to the people. It has been implanted by the Legislature in our municipal law, where provision is made for the submission of bylaws on many questions to the The Legislature having imparted that power to municipalities, is proof that the Legislature possesses the power in itself, for no body can impart to another body a power it does not in itself possess

The referendum is found in many forms of church government. In the Presbyterian Church, the Barrier Act provides that great questions must be submitted to the Presbyteries before the General Assembly can enact them. In the M. E. Church in the United States the same principle applies, as well as in several other churches. In fact this principle of securing the voice of the people is inherent in almost all legislation.

In New Zealand a referendum on the liquor question is taken every time a parliamentary election is held.

ABOUT MAJORITIES. Mr. Graham cited all the bodies above named, to show that when any section of the people in church, state or society demands a radical change from existing conditions, the onus has been placed on that section to prove by a very substantial vote that there is sufficient force behind that desire for change to insure its successful operation, should the change be made. In New Zealand a sixty per cent vote was required to abolish licenses; in the States of the Union more than a majority is required in the legislature for a constitutional change; municipalities, a mere majority vote will not be accepted on certain bylaws. In the Presbyterian Church, a majority of all the Presbyteries must favor changes; in the Methodist Church three-fourths majority of the general conference or two-thirds of clergy and two-thirds of laity voting separately are required for important changes. So it is that even in bodies where all are honest, upright and conscientious, a more than majority is required for just changes. How much more requisite is it when appealing to a mixed elector-

ABOUT THE DAY. Mr. Graham presented many arguments to show the undesirability mixing up municipal or political af-fairs with the great question which was big enough to be considered all by itself. He closed by reviewing his line of argument which was most convincing, and appealing to the electors to do their utmost to secure the return of Mr. Taylor.

RESOLUTION OF SYMPATHY. 'At the conclusion of his address the following resolution was passed by meeting, this township being the childhood home of the late Mrs. Ross: Moved by C. M. Simmons, seconded by G. D. Campbell, "That we, the Liberals of Lobo township, having heard with profound sorrow of the sad affliction of the Hon. Geo. W. Ross, through the death of his wife, formerly Wiss Boston, of this township, desire to tender him our heartfelt sympathy in his hour of bereavement. We also wish to place on record our high esteem of the dear departed who has een transferred to a higher sphere of action. Her memory will always be revered in this, her native township May heaven guide and sustain her be-reaved husband and children. Signed on behalf of the Liberals of Lobo.

BUSINESS SITUATION

In the Dominion Continues Satisfactory.

Centers of Trade.

Activity Characterized the Past Week-The Outlook Across the Border.

Toronto, March 15.-Bradstreet's trade review weekly summary:

Advances in cotton goods are the leading feature in Canadian trade this week. Failures for the week number 31, as against 23 last week. Clearings aggregate $43,706,200, a gain over last week of 1.8 per cent and over last year of 37.8 per cent.

At London trade continues of fair volume for this season. The sales to retailers continue to expand, and the firm tone of the market for domestic staples encourage retailers to take on liberal quantities of goods.

Business at Montreal has been moderately active this week. There were fewer country buyers in the market compared with last week, but travelers are sending in good orders, and mail orders, especially from the far west, are very encouraging.

The industrial activity in the Maritime Provinces in the east is also causing a big demand for staple goods. The general conditions of trade are good. The outlook for business till the beginning of summer is particularly promising.

At Quebec, wholesalers, as a rule, are fairly busy in spring shipments.

Trade conditions are reported sound and healthy, and indications are en-couraging. There have been no fail-ures to speak of in this district. Active preparations are in progress for the opening of navigation.

At Toronto trade has been less active. Country merchants, however, who used this market since the first of the month, have bought largely of staple goods, and shipments are now being made on a large scale to various trade centers of the country. The demand from New Ontario points, and sales of goods in the Northwest have been larger so far than for any previous year in many departments of Wholesale business at Hamilton has been fairly active this week. The factories and mills are busy on orders ready at any time to consult with the representative of Governor Yates as to well employed at good wages. The outlook for business is outlook for business is encouraging. Values of staples and imported goods continue firm. Payments recently have been well met.

Spring trade continues to develop with the nearer approach of spring in Winnipeg and trade centers in Manitoba generally, and the merchants are taking an extremely hopeful view of the future. There is more wheat moving, and the fact that the balance of the last crop will pretty well keep the railways busy till the beginning of the next harvest in moving the grain is an indication of what the last grain. crop means to the province when it gets all marketed. There are many settlers going into the west, and large sales of land are being made.

There is a feeling of confidence in trade circles at Vancouver and Victoria. Large quantities of staple goods are coming forward from the east, and a big season's trade with the north is looked for.

Trade at Ottawa continues of fair volume for this season. The demand for spring and summer staples is expanding and a good season's trade is looked for in such lines. Retail trade is brisk in this city and promises to continue so for some time.

OVER THE BORDER. New York, March 15 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s review says: Distribution of spring merchandise is making rapid progress, the most sanguine expectations being fully realized in all sec-tions outside of the strike area.

Effects of bad weather are shown in railway earnings-for the first week of March only 1.3 per cent larger than last year, while there is an increase of 14.4 per cent over 1900. Full returns for February exhibit gains of 3.1 per cent over 1901 and 15.6 over 1900.

Consumers of iron and steel products are still anxious regarding conditions during the next three months. After July 1 it is believed that deliveries will be ample. The most important event of the week was the heavy buying of steel bars by makers of agricultural imple ments in anticipations of higher prices becoming effective on April 1. Pipes and tubes are more active as the season advances, while large contracts have been placed for structural shapes. Labor disturbances have tended strengthen the tone of textile products by reducing available supplies, which were already too large.

All divisions of the cotton goods market are affected, and a general advance in quotations will inevitably follow any protracted interruption to manufacture and transportation, owing to the healthy consumptive demand. Export business is still checked by the firm views of holders.

Complaints are also heard as to the delivery of woolen goods, but trade is only fair, and cancellations of orders for overcoatings are frequently report-

Official indications of farm reserves on March 1 were not surprising as to cause it brings good health. corn, dealers anticipating that supplies would be only about one-half last but the statement that 23 per cent of the enormous wheat yield remained in farmers' hands was not calculated to sustain values. Mild weather stimulated the production of eggs, and there was a severe break to 17 cents-a loss of over 50 per cent for the recent high price.

The sixty most active railway stocks have not varied far from an averaging of 104 during the week. Dealings were still mainly professional. Failures for the week were 232 in the United States, against 209 last year, and 34 in Canada, against 33 in 1901.

Secretary of State John Hay's Statement of the Case-New Brunswickers Captured by Boers.

Washington, March 15 .- The letter of Secretary of State Hay to Representative Hitt, regarding the application made to the state department in behalf of Dr. Hiram Thomas and wife for a request to the British authorities for passports to enter the Boer lines in South Africa for the purpose of distributing relief funds is as follows:

"Department of State, Washington, D. C., March 12, 1902.—Sir,—Referring to the resolution recently introduced in the house, I beg to make the following statement of facts: A few days ago a young gentleman called and asked whether this department would issue passports to the Rev. Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas, who were intending to go to South Africa for the purpose of distributing funds which had been collected in Illinois for the benefit of the sufferers by the war. I said at once that the department would issue the passports desired, and that I would also give Mr. Thomas a letter commending him to everyone whom I could influence and asking their assistance in his errand. Inquiry was then made whether this government would ask of the British Government permission for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas to go at will through the British military lines and camps—a suggestion which I thought impracticable. This department is representative of Governor Yates as to Dyspepsia Tablets, I bought two boxes the best means of getting into the proper hands sums contributed by charitable people in Illinois for the relief of the sufferers by the war in South I kept on using the Tablets. CAPTURED BY BOERS. St. John. N. B., March 15 .- A letter received from one of the St. John boys in the South African Constabulary gives some interesting information about a half dozen New Brunswick boys who were captured by Boers near Vaal station, while going to join a wagon escort. They were stripped of their clothing. Jos. Monteith, of St. John was left with nothing but his socks. They were released, but next day the Boers attacked the wagons, and Monteith was captured again, and once more divested of his clothing. The Boers got away with the wagons and all the plum duff and tobacco that came from England.

Wenona Beach, Mich.

West Bay City, March 15 .- A northeast gale, which blew all Wednesday night, broke up the ice floe in Saginaw Bay and piled tons upon tons of the huge chunks in a high windrow along the bay shore between the mouths of the Saginaw and Kawkawlin Rivers.

Wenona beach is hemmed in by ice 30 feet high, and the wind and water brought it so far up the shore that it will not be carried away again by a change of wind, and it will take many days of warm weather to melt the ice. A number of fishermen who had set nets in the open water when the first ice went out lost their property. ST. MARY'S RIVER OPEN.

MRS. SOFFEL CAN'T FORGET.

Weeps, Reads Novels and Does quite so positive, I ask permission to Fancy Work.

But the Accomplice of the Biddles Has Sleepless Nights and Feels Bitter Remorse.

Pittsburg, March 15.-The Dispatch says: Mrs. Kate Soffel, who aided the escape of the Biddle boys from the county jail, has just made her first and only statement since she got into her present difficulty. ere is every indication that Mrs. Soffel is a great sufferer and will never be a healthy woman again. This is indicated by the deep, dark circles around her eyes. They give the face the appearance of constant physical and mental suffering. In addition to her almost ghost-like appearance her eyes are bulging and staring. To loss of sleep is attributed the latter

She conversed with much effort. As she talked the effort weakened her greatly. At intervals she was compelled to stop and catch her breath. The one thing that Mrs. Soffel endeavored as much as possible to evade in her conversation was the escape of me of the terrible past. I try to forget at night and go to sleep, but sleep seldom comes to me."

The conversation drifted to Mrs. Soffel's husband and children. She said she had not seen her husband or had any communication with him since she left the jail. There was a tone of sadness in her voice as she talked of her four children. Enforced absence from her own offspring is a constant source of whether in source of the sadness is a constant source of the sadness in her voice as she talked of her four children. Enforced absence and willing to contribute, whether in source of worry. She is proud of her children, and talks of them by the hour, and Mas visions of them in her moments of fitful sleep.

Dr. Briggs declares that in his opinion Mrs. Soffel was the victim of hypnotic influence exercised by Ed. Biddle.

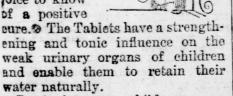

Mrs. Soffel spends much of her time in reading and doing fancywork. She has just finished a handsome tidy. When the reporter called she reluct-antly laid down the novel, "The Crisis," in which she was greatly interested. The table in her room is covered with all the leading periodicals. She reads them at intervals.

She says she is heartily sick of the newspaper notoriety which she has received, but is cheerful and hopeful that If she is ever successful in recovering her health she will have something to

GOVERNMENT OF HOSPITALS

Dr. Cl. T. Campbell Writes a Letter on the Subject.

Enumerates the Three Great Essentials in the Management of a Modern Hospital.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: When I suggested to No. 1 committee of the council a plan for placing the government of Victoria Hospital on a broader and more representative basis, the committee very courteously referred the matter to the board of hospital trustees for an opinion. The members of the board, however, promptly announced themselves as individually opposed to any change; and at their first meeting thereafter a motion to that effect was formally passed-no discussion nor explanation being necessary when the trustees were already convinced that the present constitution of the board could not be improved. That was, perhaps, a natural conclusion for them to reach. But as some people outside the board may not be say a few words on the subject. Three things are necessary in connection with a good hospital: That money should be provided; that those who supply the money should control the institution; that the latter should economically and efficiently man-

Originally, hospitals were established by the philanthropy of individuals and religious or charitable bodies. And though, in the present age, it is recognized as one of the duties of state or municipality to provide for the care of the sick-especially of the indigent classes—the charitable aid of individuals and societies is still largely utilized. Many of the best hospitals are still maintained solely by this means. And quite naturally, for the relief of the sick is an object that appeals strongly to the sympathies of the benevolent, and is one of the most fashionable forms of charity even among those not entirely actuated by motives generosity. In regard to the London General Hospital, this has not been the case. The idea seems to have been to make the municipality bear the burden; there has been no encouragement to anyone to contribute towards its support; a man who does, as some few have done, and furnishes a room, receives no acknowledgement of his gift, and if he entered the hospital as the Biddles. She said:
"I expect to be convicted, but all I want is justice. Please do not talk to resident of some neighboring county, who does not even pay taxes. We have acted on the principle that the London taxpayer must bear the full cost of hospital maintenance, and pary off a debt of over $100,000.

There is no reason why private aid should not be obtained for Victoria and willing to contribute, whether in large sums or small. I would give any person donating $2,000 or more a seat on the board of trustees or governors; those giving $100 or its equivalent should have a vote for life in the elec-tion of a representative on the board; and those who could not give more than $10 would have a vote for one year, for the same purpose. Is this not fair to those who may contribute? Will it not encourage people to contribute? Will it not tend to raise up a class of people who will feel a personal interest in the prosperity of the hospital? Great fear seems to be felt by some people that this will give the control of the hospital into the hands of the rich. My only fear is that there will not be a sufficient number of rich people willing to pay $2,000. As a taxpayer I do not think I would have any very serious objection to being relieved of my share of the taxes raised for hospital maintenance—if the money could be secured from a rich man or from any other source. Nor would the poor man's intérests be neglected-no matter who controls the hospital; for the original and main object of a public hospital is to provide the poor man with aid and comfort which he cannot otherwise obtain. And so long as he can receive in Victoria Hospital, without charge, board, attention, nursing, etc., which no man can have in his own house for less than $4 a day, his interests will not be neglected, no matter how much rich men may have to do with the man-

The alarm, however, if really felt, in regard to losing control of the hospital, is groundless. There need be no hope that the city will be entirely relieved of its burden; and until that is the case, it should have its full share in the management, and would have under the system I have proposed, as

I will show later. Opposition is also offered to my proposition to give the medical profession one representative on the board. It should be remembered that while physicians individually pay taxes, and contribute money to the support of the hospital, they do as a class what no other class does. They give their professional services without charge. And in doing that they give something absolutely necessary to the hospital's existence. It could not do its work unless it received the aid of the physicians. To acknowledge these services by giving them one representa-tive on the board would not be of any material advantage to them, for one man could not control the board, even if he wanted to do so. But it would be of benefit to the hospital. By virtue of his training and experience a physician should know more about the practical work of a hospital than others possibly can. No matter what excellent business qualities a trustee may pos-sess, it should not be a reflection on him to say that there are some things in connection with medical affairs which he may not know. The presence of a physician on the board would, therefore, be a decided advantage, especially in view of the fact that there is now no medical superintendent. As to the fear that this would be for the benefit of the Medical School, which seems to be a bugbear with some people, the only Medical School man who has spoken to me on the subject is opposed to it. He probably thinks it will injure the school. As a matter of fact, it will neither help nor hurt the school.

As to the fear that the hospital would pass out of the control of the city, would at first constitute the board, how many should be directly elected taxes the amount necessary for the hospital each year, and has to bear the responsibility for the tax rate, it seems fair for that body to be well represented on the board. That, however, is a matter of detail, in regard to which I have told the committee I was not particular. I have no objec-Expectoration, Weakness, Etc.

tions to having all the city representa-tives directly elected, nor do I object to the number being increased, if that were thought advisable. I am as de-sirous as any one can be that the city should retain control as long as it is paying the expense. And there is no danger of anything else resulting from the system I have proposed. And when it is remembered that the ment I have left on the county representative, though the county supplies no money, because there are business ar-rangements between the county and the hospital. And if I make no pro-vision for a government representative it is because I think the government's interests are sufficiently guarded by its inspector, and see no why the London hospital should be on a different basis in this respect to citizens now only elect two out of the five representatives, it would seem that my change might be an improve-by the city, and how many appointed by the council, is immaterial. As the council has to appropriate from the others. As to efficient management, that can be better secured by a board larger than the present one. It is true there is a tendency to reduce the size of municipal bodies, and that may work very well in purely business depart-ments. But when we have to govern an institution containing over one hundred sick people, and where the numerous and often diverse interests of patient, physician, nurse, employe, taxpayer and municipality have to be considered, then the duties of trustees cannot be efficiently performed by meeting once or twice a month. Their personal intervention in the details of management becomes necessary, and the board should be large enough to divide itself into committees, each having special work to do. When this is not the case it has to depend too much on its employes for information and advice, and there is greater opportunity for the growth of errors in internal affairs.

In conclusion, let me say that I have not been criticising the conduct of past or present trustees. I am willing to give them all possible credit for honesty and ability, and for trying to make the best of a bad system. My proposition is not intended as a reflec-tion on any one. But I think the system of government is not the best. And I suggest the change now, because it is only of late that the question of hospital reform has received any public attention. To suggest changes when people are contented or indifferent is useless. It is an unfortunate feature of public life, that a person can scarcely ever suggest changes in the management of public affairs without being accused of interested and improper motives. Some people are so constituted that they cannot conceive the possibility of a man proposing a measure of reform honestly believing it to be in the pub-lic interest, and without having the slightest expectation or desire of benefiting himself or injuring others. Incomprehensible as it may be to some people, however, it does sometimes occur. And in proposing a method of hospital government which would increase its revenue and improve its efficiency, I have had no other interest to serve than that of the hospital and a bottle and take it home. public. In advocating it I am do ing simply my duty as a citizen, and there my duty ends. The responsibility of adopting or rejecting it rests on other shoulders than mine. CL. T. CAMPBELL.

At the request of the executive com-mittee of the student volunteer movement, Mr. Montague Beauchamp, B.A. of Cambridge, has consented to spend a few weeks visiting the colleges of Ontario and Quebec. Mr. Beauchmap is a son of Sir Thomas Beauchamp who went out to China with a famous Cambridge band, where he has labored for the last seventeen years, having been remarkably used of God as a missionary. According to the arrange-ment which has been made for him, he hopes to be at Huron College March 25 to 27.

The accommodation for women students at the university is ample. A very comfortable and pretty sittingwhich was thoroughly refurnished about a year ago has been set apart for their use. The students have taken great pains to make their room homelike and have been most successful in this respect. The library in which are many of the current magazines is close to the sitting-room, and when the students have a spare hour they are sometimes to be found reading a thrilling story with as much, if not more, interest, than they show in Latin, his-tory, etc. At present there are severa young women taking the general course besides a good many who are attending lectures in special subjects, University Musical and Literary So ciety was held on Thursday evening, March 13, in Convocation Hall, the president, Mr. A. Carlisle, in the chair. The meeting was the last of the academic year and as a result a large crowd assembled to be entertained by a most excellently rendered programme. The following programme was given: Solo, Miss, Holmes; reading, Mr. Froggett; solo, Dr. E. Seaborn; debate, "Resolved that the university education is beneficial to women." The affirmative was supported by Miss B. Graves and Mr. Garnet Escott, while Miss Jean Dearness and Mr. J. Holmes upheld the negative. Mr. F. G. Wade, B.A., Mr. A. Calder and Dr. W. F. Tambling acted as judges. Mr. Wade, who is a graduate of the university, after complimenting the debaters, gave the decision of the judges in favor of the negative. Then followed a vocal solo by Miss Rozadda Taylor and a reading by Mr. Froggett. At the con-clusion of the meeting the president made a few remarks giving a retrospect of the work accomplished by the Literary Society this year, which had enjoyed a most successful season. The meeting was brought to a close with the national anthem.

TELEPHONES USED

They Are Putting an End to the Inconvenience of Isolation on Farms.

[New York Trifbune.] Old western plainsmen say that the barbed wire fences have done away with the old life of the prairies. So, too, in the farming country of Western New York the telephone wire wrought a change which would be astonishing to the householders who occupied the homesteads and cottages in the valley of the Genesee and along the south shore of Lake Ontario even a do ade ago. People who live in cities, where distance is reckoned by the time it takes a rapid transit car to whirl from one block to another, do not understand what such an apparently slight innovation means. There the grocer, the doctor and the caterer can be summoned or instructed at a moment's notice. Conveniences, these little things are called. In the country distance is anywhere beyond the front door that only a horse can cover with satisfactory rapidity. It is true that electric railways are joining village to village with steel bands, but electric cars run only on stated schedules, and sometimes not even then. Besides, only "main traveled thorough-fares" are followed by the "lines," and crossroads are an unavoidable neces-

Suppose, then, that John Smith lives on a crossroad miles from the nearest village. John's baby on a dark, tempestuous night, suddenly develops unmistakable symptoms of croup. What did John do ten years ago? He left the baby with its terrified mother and hitched Old Tom in the groad cart and plunged through the storm and the darkness to the village after Dr. Squillem, and then back again, three hours later, wet, weary and woeful. Or, suppose that John's house caught fire or was broken into by burgfars. Again he had to ride miles for assistance. If he had an important business engagement which he couldn't keep that day in the city, something about paying off the mortgage or reducing the note or any of those little matters which farmers advantage of the situation. His horse sometimes find themselves forced to was a favorite and he wanted to set bicker with, he had either to trust to the mails or take the train to town, just to return again. That was in the old days. What does he do now? Just steps; to the 'phone, calls up central, and in a minute is connected with whomsoever he desires to converse with. The doctor comes on the jump, the groceryman brings the flour, the lawver receives the explanations, all for a small expenditure. John understands this pretty thoroughly now, as is to be seen from the remarkable increase in the thickness of the subscribers' books of the telephone ex-

Another evidence of the rapid extent of country service is, noticeable in the institution of scores of so-called "independent" companies, which supply service for certain districts, generally in the neighborhood of a large central city, from which radiate in all directions, like the threads of an immense spider's web, the suburban connections to small villages, which in turn connect with the farm houses in their vicinity. It is a weak and unenterprising part of country these days that cannot boast telephones by the dozens, with "urban connections." In many this system is extended by a scheme of co-operation, whereby half a dozen independent companies combine their lines, so that the service may stretch other horses, and the owner got his half way accross a state.

This assimilation by the "rural districts" of what have hitherto been considered purely city conveniences is rapidly changing the condition of the countryside. The people are becoming more closely knit in their relations. the characteristics of the community and the benefits which spring from association of interests are slowly tak-ing shape, and little by little the oldtime insularity, if the word can be used in such a connection, is disappearing. It will not be long, at the presente rate of progress, before the country as a separate feature of modern life, will disappear. Every city will have its "attic plain" and the clover meadow will be the dooryard of the department

RIDING TO WIN. FAIR OR FOUL

Some Tricks Practiced in the Trickiest of Trades.

Cheating the Scales - Working the Dope "Gun" - Fooling the Ubiquitous Railbird.

The ex-turf pirate threw down his paper with an air of disgust, says a New York writer in the Cincinnati Enquirer. He had been reading of the ruling off the turf of Jockey Kennedy, who was working an electric battery at the Charleston track. There was a "horsey" crowd gathered about the exturf pirate, and they knew that something good was forthcoming.

"It appears," said the ex-turf pirate, with a yawn, "that the race track people have not yet abandoned their old tricks when there is plenty of coin in sight. Now, I remember it was only a few years ago that there was a regularly organized effort on the part of unprincipled horse owners and trainers to win by fair means or foul. This was before the turf laws were IN THE COUNTRY. so strict and stringent. The delightful laxity of discipline gave them plenty of opportunities to be crooked, and the opportunities were seized and choked to death on the instant. I have been mixed up in some raw deals myself, and some flagrant cases have fallen under my attention.

"One of the cleverest tricks ever worked on race track followers was the use of nitrate of silver in stealing weight. I will explain the process. The jockey was supposed to weigh in at 110 pounds, when in reality he only tipped the beam at 100. His very shrewd trainer, being perfectly cog-nizant of the fact, hit upon a clever scheme. He had made a small can which he had covered with the same kind of leather that was used in the construction of the saddle. This can he deftly concealed under the flag of the saddle. It was impossible to detect it. Into this can he poured 10 pounds nitrate of silver, which formed a comparatively small bulk on account of its great weight. When the jockey weighed in his own weight, together with the added weight of the can of nitrate of silver, brought the beam down to 110 pounds, the stipulated weight. Then the horse was let out on the track with the saddle in The trainer made a great bluff about throwing a blanket over the horse, and he, by a dexterous movement, snatched the can from beneath the saddle when he took the blanket off. He slipped it in his shirt

"The race was run, and as the horse was brought up the trainer again covered the animal with a blanket, at the same time slipping the can into its old position under the saddle. There you are. The horse during the race was relieved of 10 pounds of weight, which was there all right when the weighting out was performed. The trick was abandoned on the big tracks but it still holds good among the

the front feet of every street horse today are placed leather or rubber pads. The space between the foot and the pad is filled with oakum, which everyone knows contains pine tar, which is good for the feet. This man took was a favorite and he wanted to set his own price on him. Just before the races he tubbed the feet of the horse. over which were the pads. The oakum swelled. The horse's front feet rested on balls, and, although he appeared to be traveling at an awful speed, he would slip back. He might as well have been on a treadmill. The owner got his price. Before the race he removed the pads and substituted a heel and toe, which had the effect of making the animal run like a jack rabbit He pulled down a big wad of the soft. "At St. Louis another enterprising owner removed one of the plates and placed in its stead a heavy shoe. This disparity in weight made the horse lose his stride, and he rocked like a ship in a storm.

"The pestiferious rail birds were indirectly responsible on one occasion for a very clever trick. The movements of a very fast pony were piped off by the rail birds, and their reports made the animal a favorite. The owner was sore and he determined to outwit the touts. He had a special saddle made for working-out purposes. In its construction about 30 or 40 pounds of lead pipe were used. The rail birds saw that the favorite was acting badly in the morning gallops. the saddle brought this about. Naturally the touts were busy singling out price. You can bet there was no lead pipe saddle used when the clearing-up shower came along. He had to cart his winnings away.

"The dope is still in vogue," continued the old-time pirate, "and more or less of it is used on the big tracks every day. It takes science to use the 'gun' a proper way. If carelessness is employed in hurrying the needle in the horse's neck the air gets into the wound and there is an instant swelling which attracts the immediate attention of the judges.

"Care must be taken to eject the air from the syringe first, which precludes all possibility of a swelling. The dope is composed of six and a half ounces of cocaine and one-half fgrain of strychnine, a stimulant of very aggravated character. For a bad heart an injection of nitro-glycerine is used. It holds good in treating human hearts, also. For the sulking horse a mixture of carbolic acid and rose water is used. It is dropped into the deep part of the horse's shoulders, and there is a decided improvement in the horse's speed. Often bisulphide of carbon is used to increase the speed of the horse. The jockey holds a rub-ber ball in his hand, and as the horse is approaching or leaving the wire the jockey presses the ball and the chemishowered upon the horse's shoulders.

Teelle Girls Feeble Girls

. In young girls we look for abundant health and strength, rosy cheeks, firm, plump flesh and constant cheerfulness. How often, however, we meet young girls who seem prematurely old, broken down, feeble, pale, listless, thin and irritable. These abnormal and dangerous conditions are due to a general weakness of the blood, and should be cured just as promptly as possible or the whole life of the patient will be ruined.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

are the natural, logical and sure cure for feeble girls. They are not purgative pills, but a tonic-blood-building, nerve-strengthening and possessing qualities which act directly upon the organs responsible for the trouble.

It they are given to young girls who are not thoroughly healthy and normal, you will see the effect at once in a brightening of spirits, in an increase of weight and in a disappearance of all the symptoms of premature feminine weakness. These pills are the best thing in the world for women's trouble of all kinds. They are the best for young and old.

Miss Edna Packer, Everton, Ont., writes :- "About a year ago I was troubled with headaches. As time wore on my condition grew worse. I Lecame so weak that the least exertion would exhaust me, and my heart would give me great trouble. If I stooped to pick anything up I would become so dizzy that I could only walk with difficulty. I always felt tired and worn out. I tried several medicines, but they did not help me any. and after being in this condition for some months I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished the first box I felt some relief, and after using the pills for about a month I was as well as ever I had been. While sick I lost twenty-four pounds in weight, but under the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills gained it again. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life and I shall always recommend them."

These pills are the only pills of the kind, and you must be sure to get the genuine. You can tell the genuine because the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" appears on every box. If you don't find them at your dealer's write direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and they will be sent prepaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Mrs. Knott Accused of Manipulating Affairs to Keep Herself in Power.

[Detroit Evening News.] Thouble which has been brewing in the Christian Science Church for the past two years was brought to the boiling point last night, when Mrs. Annie M. Knott, principal reader, was placed on trial, to answer certain charges preferred against her, in the administration of her duties as pastor of the church as a healer. The charges preferred against Mrs. Knott covered several pages of typewritten paper, and were filed with Horace H. Rackham, clerk of the church, and by him given to Attorney W. W. Wicker, for presentation to the gathering. They chiefly assailed the "high-handed manner in which Mrs. Knott had conducted the affairs of the church," accused her of "malicious thought," which worked "evil" and "terror" throughout the congregation, and extended to her work as a healer to such an extent that an unusual number of deaths had resulted.

Names and dates and full data were given to substantiate these charges, all of which, however, were denied absolutely by Mrs. Knott. The circular still further declared that Mrs. Knott had manipulated the general election of officers for the past two years, as to assure the appointment of herself and her friends and thus keep the upper hand of power. "This trouble has been one of long standing, but culminated recently, when Mrs. Knott in open church accused certain members of things which they considered were a defamation of character," said a prominent Scientist this morning.

"She used such epithets as "liar." etc., and in one particular case—that of Arthur Cowles-declared him to be "Here's that dollar I borrowed," are not lacking in eloquent and delightful in league with anarchists and of using 'malicious personal magnetism' toward herself and others. "Mr. Cowles determinedly resented

BARRED FROM CLASSES. "All of us are not willing to sink our individual opinions and views of life into hers, and consequently she has largely brought this antagonism upon herself by her misuse of the power

"For instance, all are supposed to be entitled to entrance to the students' classes if they paid for the tuition, but it has been known for a long time past that Mrs. Knott has refused admission if she thought the person was not entirely pliable to her will, even after they had paid for the lessons. Mrs. Knott would have been deposed long ago from her position as principal reader, but, as the charges show, she manipulated the elections."

Both factions were represented by counsel, the array of legal talent having as formidable an aspect as in any court of civil law with a big case on ache, sideache, scanty, cloudy, thick the books. Nearly all of the members and highly-colored urine, diabetes,

These tactics resulted in much heated expression of opinion and an indiscriminate mingling of cat calls, hooting and cheering as one or the other side scored a point. Before long a large number of the more conservative members opposed to Mrs. Knott left the church in disgust, declaring that until Principal Knott had been removed and all further chance of continued trouble made impossible they would never re-enter the doors of the edifice. "I have nothing whatever to say, as it is an unwritten law in our church, never to speak of our affairs beyond its doors," said Mrs. Knott pleasantly, when asked about the affair of last

"Really," she added, "there is no trouble at all-that is, among the large majority of the members of the church You know in every body of men and women, religious or otherwise, there is sure to be a certain amount of discord, and perhaps that is the case with us. My reply to the so-called charges were given last night in the church, and that is all I have to say."

It is generally understood that in addition to the salary received as pastor of the church, Mrs. Knott, as a healer, has an annual income of over $5,000. Her offices are in the Chamber of Commerce, in an extensive suite of rooms on the fifth floor.

The next general election of officers will take place Monday, April 14, when the opposing faction declare they will carry the wire-pulling in their own hands, unless Mrs. Knott's resignation is filed before that time.

Statements were freely made at last night's meeting by Mr. Cowles and his friends that they would carry the matter into the civil courts

THE LADIES MUST HAVE BOOTS SHINED

New Styles of Shoes Bring Feminine Cus-

[New York Sun.]

"Every lady dat is a lady has her shoes shined nowadays," said Tommy, the bootblack in a big office building in upper Broadway. "There's no French dressing or polish that comes a bottle that'll shine up a patent leather shoe at home. It's the professional rub that counts." It is quite true that there is nothing remarkable nowadays in the sight of a well-dressed young woman perched upon one of the high chairs in the rear of a shoe shop while brushes away at her booted foot boldly in evidence upon the iron stand intended to accommodate only masculine feet.

Ever since patent leather displaced kid for women's footwear, and especially since the mannish last became popular, women have found that no home treatment will give the requisite shine to street shoes. polishes sold that, it is asserted, will impart the necessary luster, but the merit seems to be in the manner rubbing the leather.

So many women are now employed in all the large office buildings that in some cases they equal in number the men whose business duties call them into the various offices each morning. There are not only the girls employed as clerks, telephone and telegraph operators, and private secretaries, but nearly building now has its hairdressing and massage rooms, its manicure parlor, its stenographic office and lunch room and in these women only are employed. It is through these rooms that the bootblack makes his rounds each af-ternoon. The proprietor and her ternoon. aides, who may have tramped through the muddy streets and who may have a dinner engagement to keep on the way home, will invariably patronize Tommy; and then there women customers who would not dare to take the initiative under ordinary conditions, but who are conquered by the beauty of the shine which Tommy imparts, and who yield to the temptation and become his customers, re-turning whenever their shoes need

Tommy has discovered an old physiological fact which he cannot explain. That is that his ordinary shoe box with its bracket on which the foot rests during the operation, while admirably adapted to men's shoes and feet, does not adjust itself to the feet of women.

A man seated in an ordinary chair places his foot firmly on the rest, heel and toe planted thereon. A woman who endeavors to settle her foot upon it invariably tilts her foot up on the heel with the toe in the air. This may be owing to the high heels on women's boots, but the bootblack says that the same phenomena is observable even when the heels are flat.

The box seems to be too high or else woman's joints do not bend so easily as men's. They are not in the habit of sitting with their legs twisted up in the innumerable odd twisted up in the innumerable tangles that men affect in the posal of their limbs, and this may cause the difficulty. So a new shoe box for feminine customers will probably be soon among Tommy's accou-

I had for years patiently borne the disgrace, suffering, misery and privations due to my husband's drinking habits. Hearing of your marvelous remedy for the cure of drunkenness, which I could give my husband secretly, I decided to try it. I procured a package and mixed it in his food and coffee, and, as the remedy was odorless and tasteless, he did not know what it was that so quickly relieved his craying for liquor. He soon began to pick up flesh, his appetite for solid food returned, he stuck to his work regularly, and we now have a happy home. After he was completely cured I told him what I had done, when he acknowledged that it had been his saving, as he had not the resolution to break off of his own accord. I heartily advise all women afflicted as I was to give your remedy a trial."

THE OYSTER AS A CATCHER OF RATS

The Rodents Easily Taken Into Camp by an Intelligent Bivalve.

An oyster as a rat trap is a new role in which a large and muscular bivalve has recently appeared as a valuable occupant of the basement of a downtown restaurant.

In the damp and dark cellar, where this particular oyster has made his home since being dragged out of his damper bed a few weeks ago, and brought along to Richmond with a whole barrel of less intelligent oysters, there dwells a colony of rats, who have eaten oysters for so many generations that the ears of the young rats of the strain have become hard like miniature oyster shells, and upon close examination their tails are found to be growing hard, and will, no doubt, be used by the posterity of this colony as oyster openers. These discoveries beyond any doubt the remarkable in-fluence of habit and diet upon the physical development of rats, and would be given due consideration at this time but for this more unusual phenomena in nature history of a rat-catching eyster, which is to be written about just [Indianapolis Sentinel.] The scientific and religious world are The scientific and religious world are both a good deal stirred up over a recent discovery in the Pyrenees. Some people who have been getting out building stone from the Pyreneean hillside came upon a shallow cavern. While exploring it they discovered what is by far the oldest relic of the human race extant. It is the mummy—for want of a better name it is so called—of the prehistoric man.

Having been kept dry so, long and cut off from atmospheric effects, the body is wonderfully free from decay. The French government wishes to keep it so, and, therefore, as soon as the lead-The French government wishes to keep it so, and, therefore, as soon as the leading savants of France had carefully examined it, the body was inclosed in an air-tight steel case, with a glass top of sufficient thickness to endure the outward pressure of the air when that within the case had been carefully pumped out. The limbs of the body were well proportioned. From the appearance of the soles of the feet the man in life must have gone barefooted, for they were greatly calloused and hardened. In color the man was of a light brown, something between the Japanese and the Anglo-Saxon. By his side there was a stone axe, a flint knife and what is declared to be a bark-formed drinking cup. Not fat from where this remarkably preserved prehistoric man's body was found were parts of the skeleton of a woman. The pelvis and the other portion of the body clearly proved that it was a part of the skeleton of a woman, and one who was about 5 feet 5 inches in stature. Some finger joints, in an excellent state of preservation, indicated a hand small and delicately made. These remains must have been deposited where they were found, though the great natural convulsion which ensued about 10,000 years ago, occurred very soon after, or possibly contemporary with the placing of these remains where they were found. These discoveries prove that the Pyrepossibly contemporary with the placing of these remains where they were found. These discoveries prove that the Pyrenean caves, some of which are very extensive, are extremely ancient, and were in use as human dwellings during the stone age, or from 10,000 to 20,000 years ago. Then there was the Fred B. Taylor, a schooner cut in half off our coast by the steamship Trave. The people on the Trave waited to see the two parts sink, but strangely enough, they remained afloat. They became separate derelicts, and each went on a voyage of its own. The stern stood high out of the water, and the wind blew it north, but the bow, sinking low, was carried south by the cold shore current which runs from Labrador south to Hatteras between the coast and the gulf stream. The bow was destroyed off North Carolina. The stern grounded off Wells Beach.

THE PACIFIC OCEAN LOSING CHARACTER

ncrease in Ships on the Pacific Followed by

Increase in Disasters.

[San Francisco Chronicle.] The Pacific ocean is fast losing the reputation implied in the name given to it by Magellan, and which it owes to the placid appearance of its surface when he first saw it. The change is one of the inevitable results of the growth of commerce. Prior to the discovery of gold in California compara-tively few vessels sailed over its wat-There were, therefore, few casualties to report. In late years, how-ever, commerce has extended in all directions. The ocean is filling with ships, and the disasters of the sea are multiplying proportionately.

Along the California coast the ocean is placid enough to retain its reputaion as pacific. Storms are rare. not often that its waters are lashed into fury like those of the Atlantic in these latitudes. But along the Oregon, Washington, British Columbia and Alaskan coasts there is little, if any, difference between the conditions prevailing in the Pacific from those existing in the Atlantic Ocean. Mariners now dread Cape Flattery, at the entrance to the Strait of Juan de Fuca, almost, if not quite, as much as they do Cape Hat-teras, on the eastern coast. Wrecks are lining the northwestern coast of the continent as they do the northeast-ern shores of it.

As the Pacific Ocean is gradually filling with the white-winged and steam-propelled agents of commerce the ratio of shipwrecks is correspondingly rising. Perhaps we have witnessed more wrecks on this coast than we should have experienced if the same precautions against disaster had been adopted in the navigation of Pacific waters as are taken in the Atlantic ocean. The Pacific has undoubtedly been made the graveyard of many steam and sail ves-sels which were transferred to it from the Atlantic ocean because they were not considered safe to keep in commission in the latter, under the mistaken belief that milder weather and smoother water were to be found here. Others have been lost through the vicious practice of overloading, the risk being taken on account of the same error of opinion regarding the placidity of these waters. Ship-owners are, however, fast learning that rotten hulks and overloaded craft are not any more immune from disaster here than they are anywhere else. The growth of commerce and the increasing perils of navigation resulting from it demand the abandonment of both.

Educated With Boys and Co Into Business isting, operations during that time for Themselves.

[London Humanitarian.] In Holland the mass of every class go to public schools, and all mix together. Education begins at 6 years of age in the public schools, and at 12 a girl is examined and passes on for a five years' course in the higher burgh-er schools, of which Helland possesses 72. The co-education of the sexes is an admitted principle. In the primary schools boys and girls are brought up together, they learn side by side, and are on familiar terms from early childhood without the smallest ill resulting. A great point is made of lan-guages, and no Dutch girl of the upper or middle classes is considered educated who cannot speak English, French and German more or less fluently. Probably owing to the system of education in force, the women folk are in-clined to grow up somewhat independent; we are told that the prejudice against women working for a livelihood has almost disappeared, and even rich women sometimes choose a profession. They include doctors, dentists, many of them first-rate, photographers and gardeners. About 1,000 girls hold posts as assistants chemists, some 3,000 are nurses, trained in the White Cross homes, and on a par with the very best of their profession. A woman is curator of the National History Mu-seum in Haarlem, and another holds the same post at Utrecht, while a third is head dispenser at a hospital in Amsterdam. ### DIAMONDS ARE VERY POPULAR

Precious Stone in Greater Demand Than Ever Before.

The Famous Jagersfontein Mine and What It Has Turned Out Very Recently-Its Bright Future Prospects.

Of late, the one bright spot in a dreary market has been the inquiry for diamond shares, and very natural-ly attention has been chiefly directed to the leviathan De Beers and its "good second," Jagersfontein. The names of the two mines have been coupled together in many ways, and rumor was busy as to possibilities in the future when it became known that Mr. S. B. Joel had joined the board of the former. Apart from all these speculations there is a very general opinion that there is an exceptionally good time coming for diamonds. Not only is the coronation looming large, but diamonds are today more popular than ever they were, and American millionaires and British subjects with money to spare are buying them in increasing quantities. It is becoming much more generally realized than heretofore that they are not only very beautiful to wear, and a delight for the eye, but are actually good investments. More-over, the passing of the Orange River Colony from Boer rule to British should exercise a good influence over the far-famed Jagersfontein mine, though it must be acknowledged that the late Free State government was much purer than that of the Transvaal. Under all these circumstances the report and balance sheet of the New Jagersfontein Mining and Exploration Company, together with the record of the meeting in Kimberley—all of which appear in this week's issue—have been looked forward to with great interest. Jagersfontein has a unique history, and if it has never rivaled the gigantic De Beers corporation, it has always been regarded as a steady producer. HIGH QUALITY DIAMONDS.

The diamonds as a rule are of very high quality, and there have been some sensational finds. The "Pam" brilliant weighed in the rough some karats; the "Reitz," held by many to be the most beautiful stone ever discovered, 634; whilst the "Excelsior, found in 1893, holds the record as the largest diamond ever unearthed. The new Jaggersfontein Company, formed in 1887, has by a process of amalgamation, come to own the whole of the mine, and has paid steady dividends ranging from 2 to 10 per cent. In their report—which should be read in conjunction with the details given by the chairman of the meeting at Kimberley -the directors have, of course, to lament the dislocation of work consequent on the miserable war forced upon us by the folly of Paul Kruger, supplemented by the overweening ambi-tion of the former president of the country in which the mine is situated. There is a loss on the year of £13,742, after writing off the sum of £3,483 for depreciation, but during the last six months of the year no work whatever was done at the mine. During the months of October, November and December, 1900, the town of Jagersfon tein was in a state of siege, and the services of the company's employes were placed at the disposal of the military authorities. On December 2 1900. considerably to the surprise of the directors and others, the town was evacuated. The balance-sheet and profit and loss account therefore only re present six months' spasmodic work, and, under the circumstances then exwere carried on under great difficulties and upon a very reduced scale. A dividend of 6 per cent., equal to £60,-000, was declared on September 30, 1900. As matters in the country at that time appeared to be quieting down, and there seemed every prospect of the company being able to resume usual opera tions, it was thought advisable by the directors to declare this dividend, especially as a dividend had been passed on March 31, 1900. INTERESTED IN DE BEERS. It is well known that the company is largely interested in De Beers, whose shares are in such high favor, and during the year the directors have realized a further 2,000 shares of their substantial holding, the proceeds of which have been invested in National War Loan 234 per cent, and consuls 234 per cent. The investments in German Imperial Loan and Jagersfontein Mine and Estate Company's shares remain unaltered. Dividends to the amount of £18,078 have been received on these investments. With regard to the present state of affairs, no material damage seems to have been done to the machinery, but the mine has been making water. This latter trouble can, however, be speedily coped with by the powerful pumping plant already ordered. The results of such operations as could be carried on have kept up the prestige of the mines, and there must be a large amount of blue ground on the floors. Finally, the directors note that they have approached the Orange River Colony administration with a view of completing the railway connecting Jagersfontein with the main line, and have every hope that this be speedily accomplished on the cessation of hostilities.

The chairman, Col. Harris, in his speech at Kimberley, pointed out that "in spite of the difficulties recently experienced, the company continues to be in a very sound financial position,' and this may easily be verified by a study of the balance-sheet. On whole, the report is an exceedingly after a proposal is made and accepted. cheering and business-like one. The

"Lifting the King."

One of the picturesque English coronation ceremonies which have been discontinued is that of lifting the king. In the old days the monarch always slept at the palace of Westminster, on the night before the coronation. The regalia, which are still, technically speaking, in the deam and chapter of Westminster, were brought to West-minster hall in preparation for the ceremony. These were arranged the ceremony. These were arranged on a long table, the crown, the scep-ter, the spurs and so on. The king, when he descended from the palace to Westminster hall, was lifted by his nobles on to a marble chair, by the way, which perished in the ruins of the houses of parliament when they were burned 60 or 70 years ago.

The lifting of the king into this chair was a survival of the old Saxon custom of carrying the king on his shield. The custom survived up to the time of the coronation of George IV. When the monarch was seated in the chair he at once directed by pointing his finger which of his nobles should carry the various parts of the regalia to the abbey, and the procession began, debt, till at length the owner of the place had been obliged to sell it to pay Importunate creditors. Everyone wondered what kind of man the incoming tenant would be-would he live in the style befitting the old mansion, or would lived long together?" he prove to be an impudent upstart with vulgar pretensions and no ancestors? There was a feeling of relief among certain pepole when it was known that the new-comer was known as Sidney Carruthers, for this at least was a name with a fairly aristocratic flavor about it.

In a few weeks' time curiosity was gratified by the arrival of Mr. Carruthers. He proved to be a tall man of about 50, of very slender build, with perfectly white hair, and a solemn, somewhat saturnine cast of face, lit by a pair of remarkably brilliant, deep-set eyes of trated right into the very soul, and could greenish hazel color. With him came his niece and ward, a delicate-looking blonde with masses of pale gold hair, and large, dreamy blue eyes, under arching brows, and beautifully molded, almost transparent-looking temples

It was the unconscious influence of those large, mystic-looking eyes which finally captivated the wandering attention of Laurence Steer. It happened on a Sunday in July, a few weeks after the arrival of Mr. Carruthers and his niece, and the two were seated together in the pew which from time immemoral had belonged to the family at the hall. Steer saw the pair there for the first time, having been in London when they had arrived and having only just returned. He looked casually at the grave, impassive countenance of Sidney Carruthers, and then turned his gaze on the girl at his side. Laurence Steer was nearly six feet tall, and of somewhat massive build, but both strong and agile, excelling in most sports and games. Therefore, he was just the man to whom the charms of a girl like Violet Carruthers would prove irresistible. He looked with appreciation upon her slender form, graceful and lithe, at her small, daintily-poised head with its wavy hair looking bright gold in the sunlight, and noticed her small, nervous-looking white hands, with tapering fingers. Then she suddenly raised her eyes-those large, child-like eyes which yet had mething dreamy and spiritual in their depths; and these added the last fatal fascination. Laurence Steer, being young, and as yet having his heart in his own possession, felt it thrill magically as he encountered Violet Carruthers' glance.

He sought anxiously during the ensuing days for an introduction to Miss Carruthers, but failed to accomplish his object. It soon became known, moreover, that she did not go much into society, and that Mr. Carruthers was something of a recluse. Laurence Steer's father was a solicitor, and he was one day sent for by Mr. Carruthers, who wished to consult him upon a matter of business.

"What sort of-er-people are they, dad?" asked Laurence, upon his father's return from his interview with Mr. Carruthers.

"He is a clever man," said the solicitor, slowly. "A very clever man, I should say, but there's something about his eyes I don't like-there's a snaky look about them." Then he laughed. "'Pon my word, Laurie," he said, "I believe I'm giving in to a ridiculous fancy quite out of keeping with my reputation as a sensible man of law; and Mr. Carruthers' niece seems quite devoted to him." "Oh, you saw her, did you?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Steer, "and a very pretty young thing she is too, but almost too fragile and ethereal-looking for this world. I understand Mr. Carrithers has scientific tastes; he told me he prefered solitude and his books and laboratory to going into society or entertaining hosts of acquaintances"

"And Miss Carruthers," said Laurence, "is she, too, fond of solitude?"

"I don't know," replied his father; "but she seems rather shy and completely wrapped up in her uncle."

This information was somewhat discouraging; but at last the sought-for opportunity arrived. Laurence Steer met Violet Carruthers at a tennis party, and was formally introduced to her.

The first words they exchanged were merely conventional and ordinary: then when Laurence had ascertained Miss Carruthers did not care to play tennis, they seated themselves under a shady elm tree, and the conversation soon drifted into more personal topics. Steen found his companion charming. There was a child-like naivete about her, combined with a depth of heart and cultivation of mind which appealed to him irresistibly.

"Shall I see you at the Martindale's water picnic?" asked the young man.

"No, I am afraid not," answered Violet Carruthers, a little regretfully it seemed to Laurence. "Perhaps you have not yet made their acquaintance?" he questioned.

"Yes, they have called upon us" re plied the girl, "and we are invited to the pienic; but Mr. Carruthers is expecting a great professor coming to stay with him, and he arrives on the day of the pienic; so, of course, uncle cannot go, and I must stay to receive his guest." Steer mentally anathematised "great profesor." "What a pity!" he said, earnestly. "I do not know, then, when I may have the pleasure of seeing you again." Violet Carruthers flushed a little under his gaze. "I don't know," she said, shy-"But surely you like going to picnies and things of that sort, don't you?" he asked.

"No, I don't care," began Miss Car-

"Surely it is only natural for you, at your age, to like gaiety," said the young man, gently. "Have you and your uncle

"My father died about three years ago," replied Violet Carruthers. "Mr. Carruthers is my guardian; and I have lived with him since my father's death." In the cool of the evening, when the guests departed. Steer escorted Miss Carruthers home. They met Mr. Carruthers at the lodge gates. He gave a keen look at the young man as his niece introduced him, and then Laurence knew what his father meant by the snaky glitter in Mr. Carruthers' eyes. They had a cold, steely look, as if they peneread every secret thought and motive there. Steer felt as if his sudden and deep passion for the girl at his side was seen by those eyes, seen-and opposed. Mr. Carruthers greeted him coldly, but courteously.

"Well, my child," he said to Violet, "have you had a happy time?"

The girl slipped her arm lovingly through his. "I am glad it's over," she said, 'for I am always happiest alone with you, Uncle Sidney."

The words gave a little stab of pain to Steer, as he marked the blue eyes grow dark and intense, and noted the tone of affection in the girl's voice.

"Tut, tut!" said her uncle, laughing a little. "Foolish child! I am too old and too much of a bookworm for you; you should like young society. Mr. Steer there is a fitter companion for you than an old recluse such as I."

"I want no one but you," said the girl, "and I grudge every moment passed away from you."

"Good evening, Miss Carruthers," said Steer, who felt chilled and disappointed by this speech. "Good evening, Mr. Steer," replied Miss make her manner almost discourteous. to society much, but they met occasionally at social functions. He also discovered that she liked to go and read in a certain field, at the bottom of which flowed the river, and where the trees made a shady retreat from the heat of the sun. He ventured, whenever he dare to intrude, by accident as it were, upon her solitude, and sometimes she would receive him very sweetly, would talk graciously to him, and it would almost seem to him that she had divined his love for her, and was not wholly indifferent to his influence; then the next time they met she would be frigid and indifferent, apparently absorbed in thoughts in which he had no place, and he would cudgel his brains unavailingly to discover what could be the cause of this change in her. He tried, in order to make an ally of Mr. Carruthers to get upon friendly, if not intimate, terms with him. But this was difficult, for Mr. Carruthers refused to be on friendly terms with anyone. He led the life of a student, shut up for days in his laboratory, and emerging at last wan and haggard, his eyes shining with the brilliance of fever and consuming unrest. It was also noted that Miss Carruthers shared in her uncle's scientific pursuits, for sometimes she would not be seen for weeks outside the hall, and visitors became fewer and fewer when they were constantly being informed Mr. Carruthers and his niece were engaged on important buisness, and therefore could not receive them. On one occasion when Miss Carruthers had been invisible for a week or two. Laurence Steer began almost to fear he should never behold his love again, when upon strolling almost hopelessly through the meadow she frequented he saw her, to his great joy, book in hand, walking slowly towards him. She looked to his anxious eyes even more fragil than her wont. Her face was pale, even the delicate pink under the transparent skin was gone, and her eyes had violet shadows under them, and had a weary look which alarmed him.

"Surely Miss Carruthers," he said, after they had exchanged greetings, "you are not looking well. Have you been

"Oh, no," said the girl. "I have not been ill. But I think it must be the hot weather which tries me, I feel so "I have not seen you for ages," said Steer, reproachfully. "Where have you been hidden away all this long time?" "I have been very busy," she answered. "Uncle Sidney has been engaged in some very interesting scientific experiments, and he likes me to be with him when he is working." "It's abominably selfish of him," thought Steer, not daring to utter the thought aloud, "keeping the poor child shut up when she ought to be out of doors in the sunshine.'

That afternoon Violet was in one of her very sweetest moods. She allowed herself to be persuaded to turn back and sit on the river bank with Steer at her side. She blushed shyly when he begged her to give him the little bunch of forget-me-nots she wore at her throat. But she did not withhold it, and her compliance with his request filled him with hope. He ventured then to show her more plainly than he had dared to do before how much she was to him, and she received his advances shyly, but apparently with no displeasure, and he felt ne had fair ground for hope.

He determined that the wisest course

Carruthers on the subject and see if he had any reasonable objections to make to his winning, if he could, his niece's affection. She was such a child in years, he dare not ask her definitely to be his wife without the approval of her guardian. He felt, however, a strange reluctance to taking Mr. Carruthers into his confidence. He had tried hard for Violet's sake to overcome his instinctive aversion and mistrust of the man, but so far in vain. He determined however, to take what was obviously the most straightforward course, and called at the hall and asked to see Mr. Carruthers.

The servant led him to Mr. Carruthers' study and went to inform his master of his arrival. In a minute or two's time Mr. Carruthers entered the room, and with a quickly-beating heart the young man made his confession, and stated modestly but fairly confidently what his pecuniary prospects were, and then waited for Mr. Carruthers' reply.

For a minute or two after Steer spoke there was silence. Then Mr. Carruthers said, fixing those odd, brilliant eyes upon the young man's face: "I am very sorry to hear this, Mr. Steer, very sorry, both for your sake and for the sake of my poor niece. Marriage for her, alas! is out of the question. Surely, Mr. Steer, you, who will have observed her closely, cannot have failed to notice her strange manner at times?"

Laurence Steer grew pale. "What do you mean to imply, Mr. Carruthers?" he asked, striving to speak calmly.

Mr. Carruthers sighed. "This is indeed a painful subject to me, but is it possible Mr. Steer, you have not seen that my poor niece is at times unhinged?"

"Unhinged!" said Steer, hoarsely. Then "I don't believe it," he said, defiantly. "She is shut up here with you alone. She has no other companions. No wonder she becomes a little morbid at times; but I could swear her brain is as clear as yours or mine."

"It is only natural that you should wish to think so," said Mr. Carruthers. and Laurence Steer could not resist the fancy that there was a note of triumph in his voice. "Therefore, painful though Carruthers, giving him a limp, cold it is to me, I can but in fairness to you hand, and speaking so indifferently as to and to myself verify the statement I have made. I suppose, Mr. Steer, if you Laurence Steer walked home perplexed. saw my niece in one of her worst at-His perplexity increased rather than tacks, when her mind is completely diminished as his knowledge of Miss thrown off its balance, you would then Carruthers deepened. Dreading what was to come but feeling the suspense too awful to be borne Steer assented.

II. A quarter of an hour later Lawrence Steer was walking down the avenue away from the hall. His face was gray and stern, his gait uncertain. He had indeed, experienced a terrible shock. He had seen Violet Carruthers, the girl he had loved-and loved still-apparently quite unconscious in his presence, raging round the room in a paroxysm of madness, with eyes from which the childlike, trustful gaze had gone, and instead a terrible fury glared. She had seized upon an ivory paper-cutter, and gone through a ghastly pretense of killing herself, and then, with a wild cry, had fallen senseless to the ground. Mr. Carruthers had administrated some sort of draught to her, saying to Steer as he did so: "She will now sleep for some hours, and will awake herself again and quite unconscious of what has passed. You see now, Mr. Steer, my words were but too true. I have striven to keep my secret, and no one here knows of my niece's affliction. I know I need bind you by no promise to keep is as sacred."

Upon leaving the lodge gates. Steer instinctively made his way to a little wood near the roadside, whose cool depths invited him to a sure retreat where he might face this terrible trouble unseen and undisturbed. He could not fully realize this awful revelation, which had come as a deadly blow to all his hopes. Notwithstanding the evidence of sight and hearing, something more powerful than reason forbade the belief that Violet Carruthers was really insane. Her manner when with him had been changeable-erratic even-but nothing he had seen in her then had ever led him to fear that her reason was unsound. "I can't believe it," he said, doggedly. "I mistrust that man still; there is something about him that repels me, something in the look in his eyes which forces me to hate him. And yet I saw it all with my own eyes! Oh, my little love, I cannot believe it!"

Steer arrived home looking so white and ill that the quick eyes of his sister at once detected that something was wrong with him. When tea was over she drew him into the garden.

"Laurence," she said, "what's the matter, dear? You look simply awful!" He tried to smile. "Do I?" he said. "Well, little girl, the truth is-" He paused. "I've had a blow." "You have proposed to Miss Carruthers and she has refused you?" cried his sister, quickly.

Her brother's love for Violet Carruthers was no secret to her, and she had hoped, for his sake, his wooing would be successful. "No, not exactly," he said; "but you are right-that is the trouble. Miss Carruthers can never be my wife." "Oh, Laurie," cried Lucie Steer, "has that horrid old guardian of hers refused to let her marry you?" "What is your candid opinion of Mr. Carruthers?" said Steer, ignoring the question.

"I don't like him at all," said Lucie; and I think Violet would be ever so much nicer if he would allow her to do ruthers. One day, notwithstanding this as she likes. Why does he keep her shut wise resolution, he felt impelled, by an up in his old laboratory; I'm' sure she can't like living in it at her age? Why, meadow where they had last met. He

there is no nourishing property in sawdust, and no sweetening property in sand. To purchase sawdust in meal, or sand in sugar, is not merely buying something useless but something harmful, and that later will cost double for doctors' bills what pure food would have cost.

Adulteration in food is repelled strongly by everyone, because he or she feels directly its harmful effects, and has to pay dearly for the experience in health and pocket. People generally, however, do not think so much of the direful effects of adulteration in household requisites because they do not realize or have not thought out the cost to themselves of such adulteration. Size and weight of the article for a given price often overbalance every other consideration. If a woman were buying a sweeping brush, is it not better to pay a little more for the brush with double the number of hairs or bristles than to purchase a cheaper one with so few hairs that it will not take up the dust at one sweep, but requires two strokes for one stroke of the better brush? It stands to reason that the cheaper brush, requiring double the number of strokes, will wear out in half the time of the other, it will never do its work so efficiently, and will require double labor to do the same work.

In the poorer article one has to pay the same cost for the labor of manufacturing, the same cost for storing and handling, the same cost for carriage, as for the better quality. It is common sense to calculate that the best ought to be the cheapest.

When one makes a purchase it should never be because the article looks cheap, but because of its thorough suitability for the purpose for which it is required.

"I fear Miss Carruthers and I can never be anything more than friends.' said Steer. "We won't talk any more about it just now dear"

Lucie sighed and said no more, but she still cherished the hope and said that some day her brother would obtain his heart's desire, and that Violet Carruthers would be his wife.

Several weeks passed, and then Steer encountered Violet Carruthers as he was cycling through the village. He felt impelled to stop and speak to her, in spite his. Her eyes wore their old trustful innocent look, and she spoke to him with a sweetness that wrung his heart, remembering as he did the last occasion on which he had seen her, and knowing that they were separated by an impassable barrier. He dare not speak of love, but he asked her to allow him to be always her friend. "If you are ever in any trouble or danger," he said, "and need a friend's assistance, I shall deem it m!

greatest happiness if I can help you." "Thank you, Mr. Steer," said Violet, her color rising. "I know you would be a true and loval friend. I am very anxious now," she added after a pause, "about my uncle. I fear he is working too hard, and will bring on a serious illness if he goes on much longer. He locks himself up nearly all day in the laboratory, and will hardly take food or rest. I wish you could see him, Mr. Steer; I feel sure you would agree with me that he is looking wretchedly ill."

She spoke so rationally, and her eves were so clear and intelligent, Steer felt as if he must have been dreaming, and that the scene he had witnessed at the hall was only a horrible nightmare, from which he had just awakened; and yet-Mr. Carruthers had assured him that after a short period of sanity another paroxysm of madness would seize the poor child. He groaned in his heart as: he watched the mobile, expressive face. "I have not seen Mr. Carruthers for some time," he replied to her. "It is indeed a pity that he should destroy his health in the pursuit of knowledge." "That is just what I tell him." said Violet Carruthers, sorrowfully, "but he takes no notice of what I say."

Shortly after this Steer saw Mr. Carruthers driving through the village, and he could but indorse what his niece had said. His spare frame looked painfully gaunt and emaciated. His face had a unnatural look, as if sleep never visited them or brought rest to an overworked brain. "If he goes on much longer," said Steer to himself, "he will undoubtedly break down and have brain-fever or something of the kind." He felt uneasy at the thought of Violet left in the charge of this fanatic scientist, and was glad that he had made her promise to seek his aid should she ever be in need of it.

This promise was redeemed sooner than he anticipated. After their last conversation Steer had made up his mind to see as little as possible of Violet Carimpulse he could not resist, to go to the

"I am afraid he is going mad"-Steer started involuntarily-"and I dare not send for a doctor. My uncle hates doctors, and will not have one in the house, and I have no friends but you. Oh, Mr. Steer, if you would only come up to the hall with me and see Uncle Sidney, then, perhaps, you could persuade him to lie down and have some food and rest.' Steer hesitated. What if the poor child's anxiety had made her fancy that her uncle was really worse than he was? | ney Carruthers. And would not Mr. Carruthers consider him an impertinent intruder?

Violet read the hesitation in his face "Oh, don't refuse, Mr. Steer!" she said, imploring, "I am so frightened; and if you will not help me, what shall I do?" Her tears were falling by now, and this determined him. Whatever might be the consequences, he would keep his-

"Oh, thank you!" Her face lighted up as if by magic, and the look in her eyes showed him how much his compliance gratified her. "We will go now, then," she said. And side by side they walked through the meadows.

In a short time they found themselves inside Mr. Carruthers' laboratory, the door of which, fortunately for them, they found unlocked. Mr. Carruthers paid no attention to their entrance. He was standing at the far end of the room, gesticulating and speaking aloud in a hoarse, shrill voice. They stood and for occult wisdom which proved his watched him silently.

"Gentlemen," he was saying, "for many years I have devoted myself to researching in the vast field of psyschical science. I have, with infinite pains and labor, made myself familiar with the knowledge of occult arts as practiced by grayish palor, and his eyes a strained the Chaldeans and the Magi of the Egyptians in the days of old, and I have learned the secret power held by the Brahmins of India. I have witnessed, under strictly test conditions, the phenomena of so-called spiritualism, and have discovered much that is yet unknown of the nature and wonderful effect of animal magnetism, odic force and the power of mind over matter. I have studied the whole rationale of hypnotism. and I have had most conclusive and marvelous tests as to the truth and value of clairvoyance, or second sight, I have here, under by roof, a young girl, who is, when put into a trance state by me, a marvelous clairvoyante and seer. When in trance she can describe any given event taking place, at no matter what distance of time or space. The past is an open book to her, and she can reshe is younger than I am! But, Laurie, felt a premonition that Violet wanted late, with the accuracy of an eye-wit-him, and whatever pain might lie in ness, every detail of any period of histheir meeting for him would be amply tory. By means of her seership, I have before me the glorious possibility of reviewing at my leisure whole periods of time. Nothing that has occurred in the world's history since man's creation can be withheld from me, so long as my sensitive retains her wonderful powers. Up to the present I have complete sway over her; and before showing you some extraordinary proofs of the truth of what I have been saving I will show you a few instances of the power of suggestion over the mind of the sensitive."

Laurence Steer started forward with an incoherent exclamation as Mr. Carru-

"Ah, you, professor," said Mr. Carruthers, turning towards Steer and smiling wildly. "You and I are old rivals. Come, I will show you something by-and-bye which will surprise you. At present l will just show you a few simple experiments by way of preparing you for what is to follow"

Then he fixed his eves upon Violet's face. "Come here," he said, in a low, authoritative voice. As if under a spell, the girl advanced towards him.

"You are Charlotte Corday," said Sid-

The girl's manner changed: even her face seemed to alter, and its soft, round contour became set in firmer lines, and wore an expression of serene majesty She placed one hand on her bosom and bent down as if listening to someone speaking; then, with a sudden movement, the hand on her breast was withdrawn, and she struck once downwards at an imaginary figure near her.

"That, gentlemen, is the germ from which-" Mr. Carruthers said. Then he threw up his hands and fell forward. When Steer bent over him he found the man was dead: the overtaxed heart and brain had ceased to work. But, thank heaven! Sidney Carruthers had revealed in his madness, brought on by excessive study, the truth about Violet Carruthers. She was not tainted with the terrible disease of insanity; but, being sensitive to influence, she had been spellbound by a will stronger than her own.

Shortly after Carruthers' death strange things came to light in his past life. It was discovered that he was a member of a secret psychological society in France. and that he had done much in his search ideas of right and wrong were extremely crude and his whole moral nature warped and distorted. He had evidently in his niece a valuable instrument for aiding him in his studies, and he had used her as a tool in his researches and experiments. It was now obvious to Laurence Steer that on the day when he had seen Violet in a frenzy of apparent insanity. she was simply obeying the suggestion of her master, and that Mr. Carruthers had hit upon this cruel expedient in order to effectually prevent his niece's mar-riage, when he would lose his influence and power over her.

The shock of her uncle's death was great that Violet was seriously ill for some considerable time after it occurred. Upon hearing the whole story, and finding that the poor girl had no relatives or friends, Mrs. Steer took Violet Carruthers into her own house and nursed h back to health and strength. recovered, her former une unevenness of temperament had quite disappeared she was then as sweet and natural a girl as could be seen; and Laurence Steer fell more deeply in love with her ever. She, on her part, now that all in-harmonious influences were removed. harmonious influences were rem learned to like him more and more in the end he won a charming and af-fectionate wife; and the old sad memories faded of the days when she had been

WEIRD JEWELS

Owls' Heads, Snakes and Goblin-Like Fish Among Designs.

[London Leader.]

Jeweiry of the most original kind is old-fashioned gold filagree work promises to be in great favor. Among the most unique designs is a plaque de cou shaped to the neck about four inches long and one-half wide. It is of gold filagree work, rather open-spaced, the interstices being filled in with strange translucid enamel exactly of the shade of green sea water. Incrusted upon this are two weird goblin-like fish—one dark green, the other pale violet—their scales outlined in closonne gold, the eyes and the head being studded with irregular shaped pieces of pearl, opals and chrysoprases. There are several hair combs of wonderful design also. One is formed of two dull silver storks craning their necks upward around a large slab of mother-of-pearl, taken from the inner part of an oyster shell, and called a soufflure de perie, in which three incipient pearls are seen to be forming. The teeth of the comb are of carved ivory. Another ivory comb has a hydra rising angrily in a golden spray of seven snakes' heads.

There are also strange and wonderful rings of sulphur-tinted silver, wrought in designs of owls' heads, of angels with folded or outstretched wings, or of huge, uncanny spiders, set with pearls, turquoises, amethysts or moonstones in exquisite tonality of colors. There are brooches, too, and buttons in sets of transparent sea green enamel, across which lines of silver seaweed, swaying in the tide, are represented encircling some precious nearly a brooch representing a cious pearl. A brooch representing a golden fan studded with five large, round opals, forms a gorgeous background to the dark head of an Egyptian slave, carved out of black onyx.

There are any number of pendants, representing fantastic heads of women with riotous hair, or angels with demurely closed wings. There are even umbrella handles representing a hippocampus in strange gilded silver, with chrysoprase eyes. There is a thistle hatpin with a huge pearl forming the heart in the center of some violet enamel with pale gold veinings. There are buckles formed of huge flamingoes with twisted legs and wings tinted in all tones of silver and gold, and there is a huge breastplate of dull silver set is a huge breastplate of dull silver set with amethysts and chrysoprases, from which are pendant long chains of graduated pearls which reach upward to-ward two shoulder pieces to match.

"Green Goods" Fossils.

One of the most remarkable books ever published is the Lithographia Wirceburgensis, written by a Wurz-burg naturalist named Behringer, in 1726. Probably very few copies are in existence, as the author destroyed all that he could get possession of soon after the book appeared.

He had been victimized by some practical jokers, who had made a great variety of artificial "fossils" and hidden them in a quarry, to which they then enticed the professor. Behringer was overjoyed by so rich a find and had no suspicion of the trick, although many of the fossils were of a very grotesque character.

He took his treasures home, made elaborate drawings of them, and wrote a minute description of each, as well as an exhaustive commentary filled with ingenious and plausible theories. When he had published the book the jokers confessed, and then, of course, the professor did his utmost to suppress the work.

The first surgical operation ever rendered painless by ether was performed only 55 years ago in Boston, Mass., by Dr. Morton

OSTRICH LOGIC.

"When I can't see danger there is no danger." That's the logic of the ostrich which hides its head and exposes its body to the hunter. There are not a few people who seem to have gone to the ostrich to learn logic. The most dangerous enemies of humanity are the enemies which can't be seen, the disease breeding microbes which infect the blood. It is harder to get the microbe out of the blood than to keep it out, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does both, by puri

"He gave me medicine which helped me for a short time. In the winter of 1855 I got worse than I had ever been. My tonsils were enlarged and my neck swollen all out of shape; my throat was sore and I could not cure it. My husband went for the doctor, but he gave me no encouragement. He helped me a little, but it did not last long. He attended me for twelve months, when I heard of a lady whose condition was like mine, who was taking your medicine and was getting well. So I secured some of the medicine and began taking it. In one week I was able to do my cooking. When I began taking the medicine I could sit up only a few minutes at a time, and I could rest or sleep only a little while at a time. My throat was so sore at times I could not even swallow sweet milk, and my tonsils were full of little eating sores. My left side was swollen out of shape and I could hardly get my breath. The doctor said I would not get well, but three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, three bottles of his 'Pellets,' three bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and the use of salt water did the work and cured me." eruptions which come from it.

GULF STREAM RAN BACKWARD

Turned in Its Course and Bunched Up All the Water.

Vagaries of Mighty Ocean Current As Described By One Witnessed Them.

"It was an Ancient Mariner, And he stoppeth one of three-'By thy long grey beard and glittering Now wherefore stoppeth thou me!"

Capt. Jonathan Glibton of the bark Moonshine, just returned day before yesterday from a trip to the West In-dies, is one of the Gulf captains who brought to New Orleans the wonderful stories of things happening in the Gulf, in which all the ordinary laws of tides and winds and specific gravity seemed to have been treated with contempt and to have been played and fooled with, as a boy plays and fools with a young hornless goat, says the occupying the attention of Paris; New Orleans Times-Democrat. Before queer-shaped rings and brooches are being eagerly sought after, and the newspapers Capt. Glibton, like an newspapers Capt. Glibton, like an amiable and up-to-date ancient mariner, stopped every one he saw to tell about his most remarkable experiences with the erring Gulf stream, the truant winds and the agile waves; but yes-terday he was the pursued. Everybody who had read the morning paper wanted to know more about these strange tricks of nature—and in fact, some of the friends of Capt. Glibton were sceptical.

The following about the disturbances had appeared in the morning papers:
"Marvelous stories are told about disturbances in the Gulf. Captains of vessels report that nature seems to be turned upside down. The Gulf Stream, which has for centuries been flowing in a certain direction, turned around and went the other way, and the waves, instead of beating on the shore, receded from it and met together in the middle of the Gulf and formed a large bunch of water."

Capt. Glibton was very much disturbed and indignant because his assertions had been treated with the slightest trace of doubt. When seen yesterday he was in the Marble Hall of the custom house, having just transacted some business at one of the windows. The eyes of the captain were flashing, he was breathing hard, and, like a thunder god, he was replying to the nagging questions put to him by a number of doubting Thomases.

"Now, captain," said one gentleman, "do you really mean to say that the waves did not beat upon the shore, but receded and formed a big bunch of water in the middle of the gulf?"
"Yes, sir," roared the captain, "by the blood of a pig, I do mean to say it. That was not the most remarkable part of my experience. Not at all. Why, sir, I have been in the Indian Ocean in the whirl and disturbance of a typhoon and have seen waves piled on on top of another like sardines-forty feet high, sir.'

"But how could the Gulf Stream possibly turn around and go in another direction?

"Why? Why? Why?" stormed the captain, "how do I know? I don't run the Gulf Stream. I tell you my experience, that's all."
"Now, captain. I don't mean to exclaimed his questioner in a mollifying tone; "only I would like to hear your experience in full. Certainly, there are at all times in the world wonderful things that we cannot understand, and it is far from me to question your integrity just because you have come across something a little outside of the usual course.

"Yes, tell us your experience," chimed the chorus of voices.
"Well, gentlemen," replied the captain, in a gentler tone, "since you have asked me in this polite way I will accede to your request, though my re-cital will be snort and concise. Last Tuesday night the Moonshine was just about entering the Gulf. There was a gentle breeze, and we were gliding along under full sail. Suddenly a sweeping storm came down upon us. We reefed quickly and only dipped a seas. In a short while, however, the storm passed away, and we had already begun to set sail, when suddenly we saw the same storm coming back again, blowing a cloud of mist before it. Again we reefed, and again we careened until my sailors looked like flies walking on a wall. Now, no sooner had the storm left us a second time when my first mate yelled to me "What's the matter with the Gulf Stream, captain?"

"I did not have time to answer him, because I was thrown flat on the deck. All my sailors were lying down, and all were praying to beat the band. The Moonshine was whirling round and round, like a top. Gentlemen, the Gulf Stream had deliberately turned around, and we heard it going away in the opposite direction, muttering loudly to itself. In a little while our rotary motion ceased, and we were about to proceed on our way again, although my men were very much frightened. Suddenly, however, we began to go a hundred miles an hour toward the center of the Gulf. I discovered that the going away of the Gulf Stream had caused a declivity in the Gulf, and that we were sliding down this declivity just as fast as we could go. The chattering of our teeth sounded like castanets. When we reached the center of the Gulf we saw a big bunch of water made by the piling up of the By this time our motion had moderated, and we were able to steer around it as if it had been a mountain. Naturally, with the leaving of the Gulf Stream the waves would rush to the center, so this pile of water was really nothing very remarkable, although my statement with reference to it has caused a little comment. However, be that as it may. I have told you my experience and my mates and men could prove it to you, and I would have them do so, gentlemen, were it not that they are very much upset by our experiences and have been drunk for two days and two nights — which I think no man will censure, when it is considered what they have been through."

A Snow Drift Party.

An ingenious hostess provided no little amusement for her guests by what she called her "Snowdrift party." This is how it was arranged:

First of all select from a good book of quotations or proverbs 20 sentences applicable to snow. Write these 20 verses on 20 cards, one verse to each card, and number them with the numbers from 1 to 20. Now get together a half-dozen pasteboard or wooden boxes and fill these with flakes of cottonwood or white paper torn into small pieces. Hide the quotation cards away in the snow thus formed. Each guest receives a wooden teaspoon, tied with ribbon, a notebook and pencil. The boxes are distinguished by letters or numbers painted upon them and lots numbers painted upon them and lots are drawn to determine in which are drawn to determine in which search, and I had almost said it is the only healthy condition. There is swayne's Ointment.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

In the home nest every little one requires an ever watchful eye and when a trace of illness is noticeable the remedy should be promptly applied.

The little ones are frail. Their hold upon life is slight. The slightest symptom of trouble should be met by the proper corrective medicine.

Baby's Own Tablets are a scientific preparation, prepared from Dr. Williams' own prescription and have proved by their record and their success to be the ideal medicine for infants.

For Sour Stomachs,

colic, fever, constipation, all bowel troubles, irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth, sleeplessness and similar symptoms these wonderful tablets are without an equal.

Every mother should use them for the very good reason that they do not contain opiates or stupefying drugs.

They act directly upon the organs which cause the troubles and gently but effectively remove that cause and bring back the condition of perfect and hearty health.

Baby's Own Tablets have a record surpassing that of any other medicine making similar claims.

Ask the druggist for them. If you do not find them, send 25 cents direct to us and we will forward a box prepaid.

The cards, whether the author is known or not, are always returned to the box and hidden away in the snow. At the end of 15 minutes work ceases and the diggers begin on new drifts. This changing is done every 15 minutes, a player digging always in a new snowbank until the number of boxes is exhausted. When the game reaches this stage all notebooks or tablets are collected by the mistress of the ceremonies. She compares the answers in the notebooks with her own lists, previously pre-pared. # ON PATIENT should be in some way commemorative of the occasion.

Calm Resignation Is the Highest Form of Heroism.

The Steering Apparatus Which Keeps Men Clear of the Rocks of an Impetuous Temper.

But let patience have her perfect work-St. James, i., 4.

Patience is generally classed among the minor virtues, but so much of life's happiness and usefulness depends on it that we ought to give it a more prominent place. To patiently endure an environment which includes suffering and hardship is nothing less than heroism, and there are unseen and unrecorded instances in which men and women have even shown the courage of the martyr.

Patience is always yoked with other high qualities of character. Its nearest ally is self-control, and self-control is as important when you are building a character as a rudder is when a ship is launched. It is literally the steering apparatus which keeps us clear of the rocks and shoals of an impetuous and reckless temper. I would rather have patience, with perfect self-control than to have genius, for while genius is erratic and often unbalanced, these other qualities give us poise and equilibrium. Patience is grounded on resignation to the inevitable, which results in a calm endurance under exasperating circumstances, and in the conviction that it is safer to bear the ills we have than to fly to others that we know not of. When a man cultivates, patience, therefore, he becomes master of himself and master of whatever may possibly happen. It is a kingly, a royal virtue, and more deon its possession than we are apt to think. You can reckon its value by considering its opposite. Impatience is a dangerous quality. It constantly places your self-respect and your relations to your dearest friends in peril. Moreover, it makes unhappy circumstances more unhappy still. You can't rebel against your surroundings with a complaining heart without rendering yourself weak to oppose or change them. Look your life over calmly and impartially, and you will find that where you have been at odds with your lot you have made that lot so much the worse and more difficult to get away from, whereas if you had accepted the bitter experience and made the best of it you would have reaped the benefit otherwise impossible. It is equally true that where you have been impetuous of speech you have had cause for regret, while a curbed tongue has been cause for rejoicing. When you have been silent you have done better than when you have spoken. A bitter word suppressed strengthens the character, while a reckless utterance is like a bomb, which is sure to injure if it does not kill a friendship.

It is an inexorable law that threequarters of the world must drudge in order to live. You may wonder why this should be so, but you will find no solution of the puzzle. The simple, stubborn fact faces you, and it ends all controversy. Moreover, all the world, without exception, must sooner or later bear heavy burdens of sorrow and bereavement. The normal no smooth road laid down on the chart of life. We all trudge through storm and sunshine. Poverty, sickness, trou-ble, death are to be found everywhere. Kings and peasants alike have their sorrows. It is the common lot.

There is only one question to be asked and answered: How shall we make these experiences contribute to strength of character, and possibly to our welfare? Not, surely, by a restless controversy with the inevitable and the inexorable. That state of mind only aggravates the evil without even the shadow of a good result. It is your attitude of mind and heart which decides your happiness or Fight fate and you will surely be defeated; not only defeated, but soured. On the other hand, make the best of the worst, calmly and patiently use events, and extract from them whatever of good they may contain, and your days will swing along with a smoothness that will surprise you. More and better than that, your calmness and patience will have a tendency to draw to you the help of the other world, and if you and the other world come to a harmonious understanding the very complexion of your adverse circumstances will change.

In a word, the soul which follows in Joys where only fears were looked for.

There is a subtle law here, and if we can discover it and be guided by it the clouds will have a silver lining and even our sorrows will prove a bless-

God is still with us, and so are the angels of God. With patience and courage we may fit ourselves for their The s kind services, and so make good use of the roughest places over which we must travel to the rest and reward of the glorious future.

A Helpless Cripple Is Restored to Health and Strength.

Lame Back Had This Man a Prisoner for a Long Time, But at Last He Found a Cure Though Given Up by the Doctors.

Napanee, Ont., March 14.—The doctors told Simon Warner that they could do nothing for him. He had tried many medicines and treatments with no good results.

He was a helpless cripple with lame back, and for a long time his wife had to lift him in and out of bed, the pain in his back was so very severe.

In this extremity a friend's advice saved him. This man had suffered with backache himself, but had been completely cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, thus when he heard that Mr. Warner was so bad he went to home and recommended this medicine

Mr. Warner and his good wife were at first inclined to be somewhat doubt-ful, but here was the evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills do cure Lame Back right before their very eyes in the person of the man who had been cured. Surely it must be true.

So after some deliberation they decided to try, and now they are very much pleased that they did so, for in a short time Mr. Warner's Backache had vanished. He grew' gradually stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and better and stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and better and at present entered to the stronger and the s joys the best all-round good health he has had for many years.

There is not a trace of lame back remaining, not a single symptom, and the helpless man who used to be a burden to himself and his wife is now strong and a comfort to his faithful helpmate. He says: We have used in all about twenty-five boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and given some away to our neighbors. I find that when they use a box they themselves are about as strong in their recommendations as we are. "I can certainly highly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills as a sure cure for Lame Back, for they cured me, and I never heard of a worse case."

THE CYNICAL BACHELOR. A cynical bachelor listened to some women who were discussing female suffrage, and was asked by one of them for his views on the question. He replied thus with great deliberation: "I once heard of a woman who was asked how she had voted at the recent election. 'In my plum-colored gown,' was the answer." Then the cynical bachelor bowed and escaped.

Various Ways of Keeping Track of the Flight of Time.

Some Queer Methods of Measuring the Hours by Sun Dials, Water-Clocks and Other Devices.

In the United States the oldest timepiece is the famous Endicott sundial, neck at the top into which the water made in London, in 1630, and it was brought to this country the same year by Governor Endicott at the time he brought the fleet of ships laden with immigrants to settle in and around Salem, says a writer in the Boston

The society held it in trust one of his speeches he turned to a find light in unexpected places and until 1869, when it came into the postory where only fears were looked for.

> The sundial of King Ahaz, who lived 742 years before Christ, is the first dial on record in the world. This dial was a graduated instrument having degree marks of some kind which showed the daily course of the sun. The Old Testament tells us it was known in Jerusalem as early as seven centuries be-fore Christ, and the manner of its mention indicates that it was a novelty in that city at that time. The sundial took many forms. The art of dialing involved mathematical problems of considerable complexity, and it is very likely that this contributed to the knowledge of mathematics which the world possessed at that early period.

Imperfect sundials were common in Rome about a century and a half before the Christian era, so common indeed, that as new inventions nowadays afford material for the paragrapher, they were targets for the funny men of the period.

The Romans later perfected a sundial suitable to their latitude, which was much more accurate. The dial was later adopted and improved by European nations, and some more ac curate ones were made by clockmakers throughout Europe. A dial, or rather a series of dials of every conceivable description forming a structure, was erected in Whitehall, London, in 1669, by order of King Charles II. It was the invention of Francis Hall, a Jesuit and professor of mathematics at Liege. Vertical dials, inclining dials and dials for showing time, as computed by various nations at different periods, were all included and ranged on platforms.

Of these bowls or brackets appear to be have been the most attractive. One on the first platform to show the hour by fire, consisted of a little glass bowl filled with clear water. This bowl was about three inches in diameter, and was placed in the middle of another sphere, about six inches in diameter, consisting of several rings or circles, representing the hour circles in the heavens.

The hour was known by applying the hand to these circles when the sun shone, and that circle where the hand felt burned by the sunbeams passing through the bowl filled with water showed the true hour.

King Alfred measured time by burning candles

ing candles, marked with circular lines to indicate the hours. Ingenious devices were adopted to prevent draughts from striking the flame, and thus, as it were, make "time speed on its flight" by melting the tallow of the candle before it was burned, but this was a very imperfect method of timekeeping.

The gnomon, the predecessor of the sundial, was probably one of the earliest devices for the reckoning of time, and it may reasonably be concluded that the Egyptian pyramids, with their great altitude, formed part of a design for timekeeping by the shadow thrown on the desert sands. The obelisk, too, in all probability, served the purpose, for as a matter of history an obelisk at Rome was actually used for a sundial in the time of Emperor Augustus.

The rising and setting of the sun and the changes of the moon were un-doubtedly the first records of time kept by man, the shepherd of the early ages reckoning time by full moons. The lengthening of a tree's shadow gave warning that night was approach-ing, when another day or period of time would be at an end.

If we could step on board of a Malay prao we should see floating in a bucket of water a coconnut shell having a small hole in the bottom through which the water by slow degrees finds its way into the interior. The hole in the shell is so proportioned that the shell will fill and sink in an hour, when the man on watch calls the time and sets it afloat again.

The Chinese have a water clock in use at the present time which invention they ascribe to Hwangti, who lived, according to their chronology, more than twenty-five centuries before Christ.

A water clock, or time-recording machine, very similar to the Chinese instrument, and named the clepsydra, was used by the ancient Greeks in determining the amount of time speakers in court should take to make their arguments. The machine was in the form of a spherical vessel with a minute opening at the bottom and a short was poured. The running out of the water could be stopped by closing the neck. The familiar association of this device with the courts of that time is shown in many ways. In important cases of great moment to the state each party was allowed 10 amphorae, in about 50 gallons of water, as the time

The time system of early Rome was of the rudest character. The day and Being unable to reclaim the original, night each were divided into four members of the family have on differwatches, the periods of which were roughly determined by observations of the course of the sun and stars.

The Accensus watched for the moment when, from the Senate House, he first caught sight of the sun between the rostra and the Graecosta-sis, when he proclaimed publicly the hour of noon. From the same point he watched the declining sun and proclaimed its disappearance.

On the mantel in the trustees' room of the Boston public library stands a clock which was bought in Paris and sent to this country in 1890 at a cost, it is said, of $1,000, to be set up in the present building of the library which was at that time incomplete.

It is a reproduction in bronze by M. Planchon of a celebrated design of Jean Gossaert, an artist of the early part of the sixteenth century, now in the museum at Brussels.

The whole structure of the clock has been chiseled by hand and no duplicate has ever been made from it. The bronze is richly gilded and the wings on either side of the face, which are in reality doors to protect the face of the clock, are colored. It was exhibited at the Paris Exhibition of 1889, and the design was considered one of the finest works of art of its kind exhibited.

> COACHING IN OLD DAYS. [London Chronicle.]

On Dec. 21, 1843, the "Prince of Wales," the last of the coaches running between London and Bristol, was taken off the road. The decay of coaching had set in about four years earlier, and one by one the coaches had given place to the railway, after enjoying palmy days lasting about 20 years. It was on the Bristol road that the first mail coach was driven, the institution being due to the enterprise of Mr. Palmer, M. P. for Bath. The coach started from London, on Aug. 3, 1784, at 8 a.m., and reached Bristol at 11 o'clock in the night, the coaches previously driven taking from Monday to Wednesday to reach Bath. Other routes were open-ed in the following year, and the regulation pace of six miles an hour gradually increased to ten, when the railway entered into competition, carried the first mail in 1838, and killed coach-had not saved me from the river that day?"

"Someone else might have rescued you probably would, Max," his mother replied, as she toyed fondly with the curling locks which clustered, moist and shining, about his flushed forehead.

"Yes," he answered, looking up, with smile, though his lips quivered as he dashed the tears from his great brown eyes; "but there could be only one Mamma Remington in the world. I might have fallen into the hands of people who never would have loved me as you love me; or, worse yet, I might have been sent to some almshouse, to grow up with coarse, rough people."

"I do not believe you could ever have been coarse or rude, my Max," murmured Mrs. Remington, tenderly. "It was born in you to be refined and gentlemanly. I believe you must have belonged to cultured parents."

"I am not so sure about that—about my not growing up rude, I mean," Max responded, with unusual thoughtfulness in one so young, "for I know that boys who go with other boys that are rude and coarse are ant to grow like them." and coarse, are apt to grow like them; and, if I had been brought up differently, I am afraid I shouldn't have cared so much for the things I like now. At any rate, I am glad—so glad!—that it was you who found and kept me; and I love you —yes, a thousand times better than I did before."

There, dear, we will not talk any more "There, dear, we will not talk any more about it," Mrs. Remington said, seeing how excited he was becoming. "I, too, am glad that you fell to my care, for you have been a great comfort to me. God sent you just when my sore heart was most in need of comfort—when I was in danger of losing my mind. You became the one object the mainspring became the one object, the mainspring of my life, and we have been very happy together, as you have said."
"You say that all this happened in Pennsylvania?" Max asked.

"Yes, in B—, about thirty miles from Franckport, which was almost annihilated, and where hundreds of people lost their lives. When you were about five years old, my lawyer advised me to dispose of my property there and come here to Chicago to live, as I had large inter-ests here, which from time to time deests here, which from time to time demanded my personal supervision. I thought it would be better for you, too, for I knew that you could have far better advantages here. I therefore made the change, and feel that it was a very wise one, although at first it was a little hard to think of giving up the home where for a time I had been so happy."

"I wonder—" Max began, reflectively, "Well, dear?" said his mother, encouragingly.

"I wonder who my own father and mother were—I wonder if I shall ever know?"

Adele Remington looked grave.

"I fear not," she said, touching his forehead with her lips. "Doubtles they both perished in the terrible flood which swept so ruthlessly over the doomed town. I endeavored, by every means in my power, to ascertain if you had any friends living, but could gain no information upon that point; and, Max, I would not, if I were you, brood over the matter; it can do no good, and will only serve to make you restless, discontented and unhappy. I have told you this because I preferred that you should learn the truth from me rather than from anyone else; and now let us drop the subone else; and now let us drop the subject, go on as before, and be as happy as we can. Mrs. Remington smiled slightly over this way of addressing her.

Mrs. Remington had developed quite a talent for business since she had been thrown upon her own resources, and thrown upon her own resources, and after talking the matter over with her lawyer, had decided to give this property her personal supervision.

She had several friends living in Chicago, therefore the change was not so trying as it would have been had he trying as it would have been had he gone there a perfect stranger. She was given the warmest kind of a welcome, and soon found herself surrounded by a circle of people who moved in the best of society, and into which she, ere long, found herself irresistibly drawn, although, since her husband's death, she had gone but very little into company. During the years that followed she found herself very nonular: it was not found herself very popular; it was not possible for so beautiful and cultivated a woman as Adele Remington to remain long in the shade anywhere; she won every heart, and suitors soon began to every heart, and suitors soon began to seek her hand, some attracted by her beauty and real worth, others by her large wealth; but she turned a deaf ear to all such appeals. To every offer of marriage she returned a quiet but firm refusal, saying that she had given the love of her whole heart to the husband of her youth; she had none to give another, and she should never marry again. While her heart was bound up in While her heart was bound up in Max, she yet did not forget that One had once said: "The poor ye will always have," and her carriage was often found in the byways of that great city, where many a poor, pinched face brightened at her coming, and blessings for unusual comforts greeted her ears.

And, by the way, Max was a great favorite with the faithful coachman, who had insisted upon accompanying his mistress when she made the change referred to above

Upon their arrival at Elgin a friend of Mrs. Remington, and a member of of Mrs. Remington, and a member of the famous watch company located there, met them at the station and conducted them to those world-renowned works, where they spent a couple of hours in a very enjoyable manner, Max particularly becoming intensely interested in the delicate construction of time-keepers, concerning which he asked many apt and intelligent questions, which Mr. took evident pleasure in answering. The climax to the youth's enjoyment was attained when, just as they were about to leave the factory, his mother put into his hands a small square morocco case, saying with a smile:
"I am sure, Max, you will like this souvenir of our delightful trip."
The boy's face flushed and glowed with happiness as he opened the case and found within it an elegant gold watch. "Oh, mother! is it for me?" he asked,

"Look on the inside of the cover, dear," "Look on the inside of the cover, dear, she quietly returned.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nervous diseases are little understood. They have long been enshrouded in more or less mystery by the medical profession. Many who are fast falling victims of nervous prostration, paralysis, or locomotor ataxia think that they are merely not very ling.

Mr. Knight invited them home to lunch with him, after which he showed them about his fine place, then drove them for an hour around the town before leaving them at the station to take their train for home.

They had a few minutes' wait before it was due, and Mr. Knight sat in the ladies' waiting room, chatting with Mrs. Remington, while Max, boy-like, wandered out upon the platform "to look around."

He walked down to where some men were busy loading baggage upon a truck, preparatory to shipping it upon the train.

Presently he heard a whistle, and, glancing down the track, saw the locomotive rapidly approaching the station.

Just at that moment his attention was attracted by a young girl, who started to cross the track and he thought her very venturesome to attempt it when the train was so near.

He was struck, too, by her slight and delicate appearance, while he thought, that, next to his mother, hers was the most beautiful face he had ever seen.

She had nearly reached the second most beautiful face he had ever seen.

She had nearly reached the second rail when the heel of her boot caught in the track between two planks and she was instantly thrown to the ground.

She gave a quick, frightened cry, and shot a glance of terror toward the train, which in another minute she knew would be upon her which in another minute she knew would be upon her.

The engineer saw her and gave the whistle of alarm, while his practiced hand fell instantly upon the lever to stop the engine; but all who were gazing, terror-stricken, upon the unfortunate girl, felt sure that he would not be able to stop the train in season to save her.

For an instant Max was almost blinded

For an instant Max was almost blinded by the sight; his heart leaped into his throat, his face grew white as the collar about his neck, and he began to grow faint and giddy at the thought that this beautiful girl was about to be killed before his eyes.

The next moment, forgetful of self, of everything save her deadly peril and the need of immediate action, he sprang to her side, bent down, and quick as a flash of light, ripped every button on her boot from its hole granged the girl about of light, respect every button on her boot from its hole, grasped the girl about the waist and leaped back toward the platform, where a dozen pairs of hands were outstretched to snatch him and his half-fainting burden from the jaws of death, just as the panting iron monster steamed slowly over the spot from which they had so narrowly escaped.

Max sank breathless and exhausted upon a box that stood beside the loaded truck, and feeling as if he should never see or hear again, for a terrible roaring was in his ears and a blur over his eyes; but the next moment he felt his mother's arms about him, while her quivering voice, sounding afar off, murmured brokenist. mured, brokenly:

"Max! Max! my brave, noble boy! Oh,
if I had lost you!"

SOME HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES

Simple Means for Prevention or Cure of the Disease.

Fresh Air Is First Among Them-Precautions Are Easy for Rich and Poor Alike.

"There is a chance now of a decrease in the tuberculosis mortality," said a prominent New York doctor recently. "The death rate from tuberculosis has been simply outrageous in the last fifty years, and it's enough to make a man swear, to think of the number of lives that have been sacrificed to the disease just through sheer ignorance—crass idiocy.

Why, if New York had lost 26,000 lives in five years through cholera or smallpox, everybody would have been up in arms to fight the disease, yet I remember that was the pulmonary tuberculosis record for five years. And was there excitement? Bless you, no.

"I'm glad the world seems to be waking up at last, in regard to consumption, and that New York is rubbing its eyes along with the rest. We may bring down that death record in the next five years. We certainly will bring it down mightily in the next ten years.

"Of course, the positive determination of the nature of the disease was the first step. Nothing could be done until that was settled and all the doctoring was done under a false hypoth-

"Today we know the germ nature of consumption, know that a cold has nothing to do with it, and we have no excuse for fighting it to a finish. As long as there are people living in overcrowded, ill-ventilated quarters, people who are starved for air and proper food, people whose work is confining and tends to suppress the breathing capacity, there will be consumption. but even among that class, the percentage of the disease can be phenomenally lowered by common sense applied to daily living, and I believe there's little or no excuse for consumption among the classes privileged to breathe fresh air and having a simple but nutritious diet.

"Mind you, I don't say all cases of I think that any incipient consumption may be easily cured under favorable conditions, and consumption may be avoided under almost any conditions. "The trouble is that the average man. woman or child will not spend time or exertion on simple precautions. They will not believe they are in danger of the disease until they have a today that consumption even in its advanced stages can, in a very large percentage of cases, be cured by the open air treatment. Give me anv sufferer from pulmonary disease, not in its worst stage, and let me take him if I don't cure him I'll pay all expenses and a big bonus.

"But the average consumptive can't knock off work for three months, can't afford three months' idleness in the mountains. Perhaps his chances are not so good, but he can do a lot of things to better them. Under ordinarily decent conditions I believe he can cure himself. "One of my confreres said that the human organism was like a savings bank and would accept even the smallest deposits. The man who can't go to the mountains for three months can at least get an hour's exercise in the open air every day.

"Let him walk at least part way to his morning work and part way home brisk walking, with shoulders back and lungs expanded by deep, full breaths. If he lives where he can, let him get an axe and a log in a backyard or shed, and go to work with them, or let him have a punching bag in a shed or in a room whose windows could be well open, and have a go at that bag every morning, or let him swing dumbbells or Indian clubs-always in the fresh air, mind you.

"Impure air is the big basis of tuberculosis. All of us have to breathe more or less of it, but let's make the amount as small as possible.

"One reason why consumption has increased is that our houses have grown airtight. The windows now fit closely. The radiators take the place of open fireplaces. There's too little fresh air, I tell you-too litle fresh air. That's one reason why we have 26,000 cases of tuberculosis in five years. "People shut themselves in the house as soon as October is over. Nonsense!

WARDS OFF INFLUENZA

by keeping your system nourished and strengthened. If you are strong and well, colds, coughs and influenza cannot get a foothold. Take it daily in cold weather.

Winter is the time for people with weak lungs to be out of doors, provided they aren't getting wet.

"In summer doors and windows are open, and the house is endurable, but in winter the tight shut house is a regular breeding ground for tuberculosis. Even inclement weather out cf doors is better for consumptives than staying indoors.

"In very cold weather, below zero, it may do to stay in. The cold will off-set the confinement, provided the house isn't overheated.

"That old night air bugaboo has worked up more consumption cases than most things. You can't imagine how many people, even now, sleep with their windows closed and breathe im-pure air all night. It's suicide, but both poor and rich do it.

"I can make some allowances for the poor, because they are cold in winter, have little bedding, and won't be able to warm their rooms the next morning—but it's suicide all the same. Now, I'm going to talk about the poor first, the slum-livers, because there is a world of consumption among them, and conditions are most against their throwinsg it off. They must do the best they can to fight it off, and here are some of the things they must do. "First, ventilate their rooms as thoroughly as possible. Where seven or eight persons live in one or two rooms with windows opening on a small, dark court, good ventilation isn't possible, but at least they may keep the window wide open at night.

"Most of them shut it tight even when they sleep eight in a room, through the winter. They may open the window and let the air in several times a day, during the winter, too. Any outdoor air, even slum air, is better than foul indoor air, and cold is infinitely less dangerous than impure

"Then they must have outdoor exercise. They can get some brisk walking, if nothing else. Too tired? Of consumption can be cured. Some are course, they are tired, but brisk bodily too far gone when taken in hand, but exercise in fresh air will do more to rest a man or woman dead tired from stooping over desk or work table in an ill-smelling factory or workshop than had consumption and all expectorated any amount of lying down will. I freely all over the place. The other wish they could be made to understand that.

"A habit of deep breathing means a great deal. Any man, rich or poor, can around accounted for the fourteen conacquire it. Let him fill his lungs while sumptives. walking and see how long he can make poor they'll take probably patent med-icine. or six full, long breaths of fresh air, around. I know it's unpleasant to talk once in a while, and give his lungs about it, but we've got to talk about it. "They might as well eat soap as a an air bath. Let him avoid the habit remedy unless they adopt the other of stooping and contracting his chest common sense treatment. One hour of over his work, or, if his work absolutely requires that, let him counteract it outside of work hours by throwing "Of course, it is absolutely proved his shoulders back, breathing deeply, walking erect and taking muscular exercise to expand his chest and broaden his shoulders. "Anybody can learn such rudiment-

Let a man keep an overcoat in the workshop, throw up the windows and work in the fresh, cold air for a while several times a day. "Let every office, factory, and workshop be well aired during lunch hour. Of course, the regular ventilation should be good, but it seldom is. I know a

The workshop where ten men work. windows were nailed down on the first of November. They were not opened again until two weeks ago. "Then there's the question of clothes. Poor people wear what they can get, but when they spend what little money they have they may as well get the nicest thing possible. "Loose, warm clothing is, of course the ideal winter wear. Wool next the skin is best, but lightweight wool and loose-everything loose. Let them sleep in wool, too-and in garments not worn during the day.

"Heavy clothing, tight clothing suppresses the lung action. Whatever suppresses breathing capacity breeds consumption. Working girls' corsets have had more to do with inducing pulmonary consumption than all their work Fine ladies' corsets are quite as bad, but there are not the other evil conditions there to help the corsets along. "When you come to diet, there again the poor man is handicapped; but he can do better than he usually does. Fatty substances are the best lung food, the best nutriment against consumption. Cream is best of all.

"The poor man can't drink much cream, but he can drink some milk, and that's good, if it's pure. He'd better get it at some good place, even if it costs a little more and he has put up with a little less of it. "A consumptive should avoid all scorbutic diet, salt meat, pickles, indigestible made dishes, cheese, spices, all liquors, usually, in the incipient stages of consumption, the consumptive is just the one who goes in heavily for such indigestible things.

"He has an abnormal appetite, and he thinks nothing he eats hurts him, because he doesn't feel indigestion. As matter of fact, he doesn't pay with his stomach because his diseased lungs are paying for everything, and he's making them pay heavily.

"Graham bread, fruit, vegetables, are all good. Plenty of water is a good thing, too, and a thing few people sense enough to take. A quart of cold water at bedtime will often prevent a consumptive's night sweats and induce easy breathing. "Liquor and tobacco are both deadly to anyone with a tendency toward consumption, but it's a rare man that will not take the chances of consumption, rather than give them up. Alcoholism will do more to put a system into a condition receptive of tuberculosis germs than any other one thing I know

"One vital point in the fight against consumption I've said nothing about Consumption is infectious. Everybody knows that today. All the papers have discussed the fact, and the necessity for isolation of consumptives.

"Now, I believe in the isolation consumption in hospitals and public institutions, but I'm afraid a certain injustice is being done to the consumptive in this lively agitation. He's being made to feel like a pariah. People say they'd rather run the risk of infection than send members of their family into isolation and unhapipness.

"If they would only show some san-ity there wouldn't be the vital need of isolation. A perfectly well person is not going to contract consumption by occasional contact with a consumptive, but long-continued association with a consumptive is likely to breed infection. "The sputum—that is, the mucous expectorated—is the evil agent, the source of danger. People are criminally careless about it. I've known workshops where fourteen out of 20 men freely all over the place. The other four were doomed if they stayed. The fact that the first consumptive in the place distributed sputum carelessly

"In a tenement where a big family lives in two rooms a consumptive will The sputum, dried, pulverized, flying everywhere, is rank poison to every inmate of the tenement or workshop where the consumptive lives or works

"If people would learn that common sanity demands the destruction of the sputum, isolation would not be necessary, but not only the poor, but the rich also, are either criminally ignorant or criminally careless in the matter. A carefully covered receptacle should re ceive the sputum and be frequently cleaned and disinfected or rags should be used and burned as soon as possible. "What I've said about precautions for poor people whose work or constitution threatens them with consumption, or who have consumption applies to the rich, only it is easier for the rich to adopt safeguards and remedies. The rich man can have exactly the right diet, but he seldom takes it. In fact, he more often than the poor man eats the things that are worst for

"The rich man can go to a good climate. He can live out of doors for months of the year. He can have a fair supply of fine outdoor exercise all through the year. He can have well ventilated rooms and offices. "Perhaps he doesn't have or do any

"If a man with a good constitution leads a rational life under fair conditions he'll never have consumption. If he has a poor constitution, but takes the right precautions, and can afford ordinary comforts, he will not have consumption.

"If he does have consumption, and before it goes too far has proper treatment, he may be cured. That is to say, the tissue will not be replaced, but the disease may be arrested. But prevention is worth all the remedies going. "With consumption as prevalent as it is, everybody, strong or weak, should live so as to avoid it. There's no such thing as inheriting consumption. All authorities agree on that now, but a child may inherit a constitution so frail that if consumption germs come along they will find ready lodging. "Such a child should be taught from the start to form habits that will be absolute safeguards-deep breathing, thirst for fresh air, as much open air exercise as possible, sensible clothing and diet. He should preserve these habits when he grows older and becomes responsible for himself. He'll be as sound as a good nut. "The same thing holds good of the poor man and woman whose occupation and environment are conducive to consumption. They should begin the precautionary life before any sign of disease appears, and the chances are that with all their handicap they will escape

"They must avoid excesses of all kinds. Those persons who have actualacquired consumption must take that rule to heart. anger works havoc with a tuberculosis

"On the whole the outlook is bright, I believe we'll stamp out consumption here. Our conditions are better than conditions in the old country. We have more room, better buildings, more comfortable life; but the slum conditions and factory and workshop conditions must be improved, and ignorant sufferers must be educated to reason before we achieve very phenomenal results in New York."—New York Sun.

A Six-Year Courtship.

[Toronto Globe.] When a gentleman has "kept company" with a lady for six years she is fairly entitled to interrogate him as to his intentions, to reproach him if he has been guilty of a breach of faith, and to sue him or damages. But to track him to his place of employment and beat him with a club is a course which no jurist in good standing would defend. There are absent-minded lovers who might be brought to a sense of the realities of life by a gentle rap, but this is a remedy which ought to be applied with the utmost caution, Our police magistrate, going to the point in his usual direct way asked: "What are your reasons for following this man around with a club?" and the defendant replied that she had not done so, but simply defended herself. On the other hand, the complainant said that his one desire was to lead a peaceful life, free from female company. This is a desire which, while we cannot share, we are bound to respect, Few men have the good fortune to excite in the opposite sex aspirations of so violent a character as to call for legal protection.

Paine's Celery Compound

The Marvelous Spring Medicine Banishes Long Standing Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles.

Do not allow dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach troubles to continue their body-destroying work as you enter the glad springtime. While nature is arousing from her winter slumber and death and putting on a brighter and more cheerful garb—while the birds, singing their peans of welcome to a new life, so should men and women indeavor to cast off the fetters of disease and put on that new life that enables them to appreciate the joys and beauties of a new-born season. The great spring emancipator and liberator from the common diseases of life is Paine's Celery Compound. Tested for years by the ablest physicians and always triumphant in overcoming sickness, it is gladly recommended by the great majority of medical men from day to day.

Mr. John Mackenzie, justice of the peace, and clerk of the township of Sarawak and Brooke, Ont., says: "You will think me ungrateful in not sooner acknowledging to you my entire cure from dyspepsia through the use of Paine's Celery Compound; but when I tell you that I suffered all the tortures of dyspepsia for five years, and during that time having taken most of the great remedies advertised as the only sure cure for the horrible plaint, with little or no benefit, I was determined to be cured before I would be satisfied. Some of the great remedies would give me a little relief while I was taking them, but as soon as I stopped them I was as bad as ever.

"When I commenced taking Paine's Celery Compound I fully expected the same results, as my confidence in all of these things. More fool he! He's medicines was shaken; but from the not to be pitied when he pays the penalty as a poor man is. thought I was completely cured, but to make the cure certain I took four bottles more. It is now over two years since I took the last dose, and have not had the least symptom of the disease in any way. I can, from my own blessed experience, recommend Paine's Celery Compound as a sure cure and a very pleasant medicine to take."

Why Canadian audiences should feel themselves impelled to break into frantic applause whenever, a crowd of in battle by her own brother, and is alien theatrical people come out and brought to her father's house only to wave the British flag is a mystery to die in her arms. The whole play has those who understand the real feelings thus a sombre tone. As the heroine, of American companies toward the Frances Gaunt, an actress of considerflag they wave, and the people who sonorous voice, made a very favorable are cheering it. If these stage folks impression. The support was at rofollowed their own impulse, they would priately distributed, Richard G. There doing very creditable work. The play are not wanting instances where some of the leading musical organizations on the stage have developed an incipient revolt rather than sing "God Save the King" or wave the flag of the British Empire. The introduction of will come to the New Grand Monday the feature of flag-waving in such a evening, March 24, presenting Deperformance, for instance, as "The Runaway Girl" last Saturday is at the best a cheap and trashy appeal to Theater-goers of several seasons ago jingoism, and it is no evidence of patriotism to applaud loudly. Still more tiresome than this use of the national flag is the manner in which Canadian audiences greet the flaunting of the Stars and Stripes with their own ban-The outburst of meaningless and therefore foolish applause is in marked contrast to the reception which would be given the British flag in any place of amusement in the United States. It is safe to make the statement that few Londoners have ever seen the Union Jack waved on an American stage without its being quel to "The Highwayman," and which greeted by a storm of hisses which drowned what feeble applause was evoked,

J. C. Johnson, manager of the Swiss Bell Hingers Company, which appeared at the Auditorium here in November last, dropped dead on Tuesday on a train at Knoxville, Ky.

James O'Neill, who appears at the New Grand next week in his longtried role of Edmond Dantes in "Monte Cristo," after receiving his early schooling in Buffalo, went to Cincinnati with his parents, and it was their strong desire that he should enter the church. The clerical profession did not appeal to him, and the boy who was destined to later become famous as one of the foremost young romantic actors of the English-speaking stage, became a clerk in a clothing store. The Irish blood coursing through James O'Neill's veins must have impelled him to the player's life. He made his debut in the old National Theater in Cincinnati as a lad not yet 20 years old, carrying a spear among the "supers" at a performance in which Edwin Forrest was the star. In speaking of Forrest recently, Mr. O'Neill said: "Forrest was a bear, gruff as could be, and sometimes a fiend at rehearsals, especially if the actor did not know the lines of the classic and Shakespearean plays that we were producing. His idea was that every actor who had been in the business three or four years should know his Skakespeare thoroughly, as he considered it the very groundwork of all study for a stage career. To the few that paid attention to the stage manager's instructions, followed the lines of business laid down for them, and knew their parts thoroughly, he was gentle as a child. For instance, I was very nervous when playing Edgar with him in King Lear, for the first time in my life. Just before the curtain fell on the forest scene, which was a very important one for Lear and also for Edgar, I, being nervous, failed to take up my cue. Mr. Forrest very kindly prompted me without letting the audience know anything about it, as he usually did vigorously when he prompted anyone else. When the curtain fell I approached him to beg his pardon for missing the line. He said, 'Not a word. You are playing a part for the first time that requires just as much study as did King Lear.' I replied, 'Mr. Forest, I was very nervous and must ask you to excuse me.' He returned, 'I wouldn't give a snap of my finger for the actor that wasn't nervous on a first night. Good actors' first nights are always bad.' It is a peculiar fact," continued Mr. O'Neill, with a smile, "that all through my subsequent career my first nights have been very bad."

Last Tuesday's Toronto Globe says concerning "Barbara Frietchie," the great Clyde Fitch play, which comes to the New Grand shortly: "'Barbara Frietchie' is one of the best plays that have been seen on the stage of this house this season. It does not follow the lines of the historical story relating to 'Barbara Frietchie,' but ends in a tragedy, the heroine being shot by a crazy Confederate rejected lover of hers, who passes by as she flaunts the Northern flag from the window of her residence during a public rejoicing at a defeat of the Federals. Her lover, a captain in the Northern army, is shot able power and with an exceptionally Negley, G. Hazelton as Mr. Frietchie is well staged and mounted."

The famous Klaw & Erlanger Opera Company, headed by Jerome Sykes, remember with delight Mr. Sykes' laughable creation of "Foxy Quiller" in "The Highwayman," a character which stands among the foremost in comic opera. sensations of recent years. This was accomplished not only through Mr. De-Koven's music, and not only because of Mr. Smith's witty book, which tells a story brimful of fun with infinite variety, but also because of the work of the organization headed by Mr. Sykes, and including Eleanor Kent, Grace Cameron, Almira Forrest, Lillian Seville, Marion Bent, Marie Christie, Adolph Zink, the lilliputian comedian, Harry Macdonough, Arthur T. Earnest and Louis Casavant; a specially selected orchestra under Sig. A. De-Novelis, and a most magnificent series of stage pictures.

Hermann the Great, the prince of black art, will appear at the New Grand shortly. His programme of legerdemain this season comprises many new and novel problems in occult phenomena and prestidigitation.
"Noah's Ark After the Flood," "The

Lawrence Irving is at work reconstructing "Richard Lovelace." Mr. Sothern and he held a consultation after the special matinee of the piece New York, and changes were decided upon. When completed it will be more of a scenic production, but Mr. Sothern will still have the brilliant opportunities before afforded him. Possibly many of the exciting episodes only spoken of in the original will be shown by action in the revised version. Mr. Sothern intends to make a new production of "Richard Lovelace" in New York next season.

Following the announcement that Richard Mansfield will act "Ivan, the Terrible," the statement was made that Otis Skinner will also appear in the same character. Mr. Mansfield's play is taken from the book by Count Leo Tolstoi, while the version used by Mr. Skinner will be a dramatization of Alexis Tolstoi's "Prince Serebraeny." The latter is the work of Edgar Hoyer, a Daniek dramatist and was made for Danish dramatist, and was made for A. Toxen Worm, who translated it into English. Mr. Worm, by the way, serves as press agent for Mrs. Patrick Campbell, whereby he can be held responsible for many doubtful stories which have been circulated in the different cities in which the English act-ress has appeared. Mr. Skinner denies Atlantic in the steamship President.
