The Meaning of a Smile. We speak in many tongues, we mean as she could. To answer Mallovs' question as to her for a speedy cloth-hopper, but ended by promising her the half, if she would but wait for the village, a mile off, and hurry up those men idling there.

With a delicious thrill of adventure Alister came out of hiding, ran past him, dodging as she did so, and stepped on toward the goal. And this time she came plump under the eyes of the high personage—the financier who was back of the new railway enterprise. He stared at her—had seen nothing anywhere to match the creature that he saw there, the pathetic creature that he saw there, she would not have checked for him, but that he reined in, almost in front of her, asking: 'Is this the nearest way to Drewett's—the spring there, I mean?'

'Keep on! You can't miss it unless you shut both eyes,' Alister said, the last word over her shoulder as she shot past.

The high personage whistled softly. When he came upon Mallovs he had an odd smile hovering in his eyes. Mallovs also saw a bit of key. After a second or two, they were the most excellent chums, understood, and both laughed.

Hit you, too, square between the eyes,' Mallovs said. 'The other nodded. After a breath, he said irreverently: 'It's not so much her good looks—I can find a dozen prettier girls in a day's ride—but something—something catches you in the breath, when you see her. What is it?'

'Remember the Dryads? We read about them in our Greek days,' Mallovs said, lifting his eyes to the sky-line. Then suddenly 'Could you possibly imagine her inimitable—with a corset on body or soul?'

Leaving, the financier, shook his head. Mallovs turned his head, urged by some invisible monitor. He said, she need not hope that to escape him—he would see that she got her pay, also the best apology he could form for his blundering. Then he was suddenly aware that she passed by—that she smiled at him, that she moved with the step of Atlanta. As she climbed the hill, one of the village fellows said, shaking his head: 'Remember the Dryads, stomp!

Her heart must be saved from such shipwreck. Thus the good saints. They kept her close. She never had a glimpse of the world outside the school. Aunt Susan taught her the three R's. Aunt Debby made and embroidered—for the rest, there were books, a whole roomful, old but good leather bound mostly, and smelling of cedar shelving. Alister browsing happily among them, learned of life as though she saw it inverted in a mirror. She had a sense of not belonging in the household. The aunts were fair, dumpy, placid—even their small tempers had not brought wrinkles, though they were past sixty.

Alister was tall and thin, rangy in motion, full of delight in freedom, vividly alive throughout. She paced for action, for air and change. When the pluing had grown so wild it was pain, Mallovs came. Not romantically, if she did spy him first from the hill of hope, Mallovs by his very look put romance out of court. He was stoutish, red of hair, freckled as to face, with snapping blue eyes, shrewdly set. Notwithstanding, he was neither common nor common-place—there was too potent an air of efficiency for that.

He was hopping mad, and very busy when he met Alister, a gaze. There was seed of rash work in running a transit line—and the men he was depending on to help him had not shown up. Worse than that, he could not go hunting for them—he had promised to meet a high personage exactly at 10 o'clock there at the foot of the hill. Spying Alister's straw hat upon top of the rise, he mistook her for a curious country lad, and shouted: 'You can't see my legs are long and light. 'Make it a hall and I'll talk to you! Alister called back. She sensed his foot at the bunch of us, an 's'airy driver' to work. Why, I don't believe she was ever off the place before by her lone self. Leaning smiled as he listened. Mallovs looked grim. There was no dryad, rather an enchanted princess, guarded by ancient dragons—he was already aware of the aunts. They might, if they chose, make a lot of trouble for the new road—its right of way must cross a corner of their land, not very big, but strategically most important. The countryside had hidden the road builders beware of the slaters. They were prone to suspicion of slaters because they didn't know them, of friends because they didn't know them. He heard other gossip that possessed him yet more clearly of the situation.

Presently Leverage went toward the wide, weather gray house, whistling, evidently thoughtful, yet alert. Mallovs was a faint of discontent with his survey. 'Wait! I want to look over the country from that hill-top,' he said offhandedly to his helpers.

As they sat down at ease he half ran up the hill. There was a clump of trees at the top—elsewhere it lay bare. He had a notion that he should find the clump tenanted. So he was not in the least taken aback, when Alister said airily: 'I don't want my money—but you have to pay it—Mrs. Danno, at the postoffice. She has nothing but a mess dog, and a big, fat, no-account husband. The money is for her and the dog—to buy it a bone, and her, well, some stockings. I saw her well poor dog.'

'You must take the money yourself, I never would dare undertake a mission so delicate,' Mallovs laughed. Alister swore up her face. 'A man who can swear so shouldn't be afraid of anything,' she murmured.

Then as though suddenly enlightened, 'Don't you be afraid of Mr. Danno—he can't possibly be jealous. It would be different if I had asked the handsome man. 'Mighty different!' Mallovs growled. 'Levering has cheek enough for anything.'

'I wonder would he dare ask them to let him stay to dinner?' Alister cried, nodding toward the house. 'O! I wish he would! It's been three years since we had company, except preachers and peddlars, and they don't count.' 'Would I count, if I came?' Mallovs demanded.

'How could I tell, unless you tried it?' she said. She was not forward, only human and feminine, repressed past endurance. 'I am going to try—depend on it,' Mallovs said, looking full in her eyes.

A month after he asked the aunts for Alister. Leverage, notwithstanding his looks, had begun himself out of the running at the beginning of the game. A good friend he showed himself, the Sisters Drewett might never have consented to the Mallovs' match, if Leverage had not admonished them.

'Suppose Alister's father turned up, only a husband would have authority against him!'

At that they gave in—joyously it must be confessed. They were not so old, but that the flavor of life delighted them. And they felt like fairy princesses themselves when, a year after the wedding, Alister's father died. The first case I took I found I was not able to go on with my work. Doctors' tonics failed me and acting on my own judgment I purchased a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished them I was really surprised at the result. The color came back to my face. I gained in strength and by the time I had used nine boxes I was back at my work as a nurse. HOW TO OBTAIN A GOOD COLOR

A Treatment to Restore the Blood Supply That Has Been Most Successful.

There is only this to tell people who are pale, weak and bloodless. You are pale and weak because you haven't enough blood and you won't be better until your blood supply is increased. You should not lose any time in increasing your blood supply, for people who neglect anatomy, often slip into a deadly decline. When you have increased your blood supply you can reasonably expect to have a good color, to have lost that tired, breathless feeling, to have a good appetite and get good nourishment from your food. Now the only quick and always effective way to get a supply of new, rich, red blood is to take—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Every dose helps to make new blood, and this new blood courses around through the veins, brings health and strength to every organ and every part of the body, making weak, ailing people, bright, active and strong. This has been proved—in thousands of cases of which the case of Mrs. George Clark, Abbotsford, B. C., is a fair sample. Mrs. Clark says: 'After spending two years and six months in a hospital training for a nurse, I began to fail, in health, was very pale and the least exertion would leave me out of breath. After graduating I came to British Columbia to take up my profession as a private nurse. The first case I took I found I was not able to go on with my work. Doctors' tonics failed me and acting on my own judgment I purchased a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished them I was really surprised at the result. The color came back to my face. I gained in strength and by the time I had used nine boxes I was back at my work as a nurse. That Farmers Policy. The remarkable idea the crops up occasionally, says the Montreal Star, that those who are opposing reciprocity are wantonly antagonizing the farmers' interests. The theory seems to be that reciprocity is a farmers' measure; and that those who are fighting it are doing so because they dislike farmers. Nothing could be more mistaken or ridiculous. No sane Canadian dislikes farmers or wishes for anything but the utmost agricultural prosperity. It is upon the success of farming that this country is being built up.

If our farmers did not prosper, our manufacturers would soon starve, our merchants would soon lose their business, our professional men could not collect their fees. We all ardently desire farm prosperity, if for no other reason than that it means prosperity for us.

But, continues the Star, we do not believe that reciprocity will help the farmers, and we do believe that it will hurt them. The average farmer runs over the list of things he takes to market, and he will see that, in an actual majority of them, the price is to-day higher in Canada than in the United States. Now how is reciprocity going to help him? It will give him access to a worse market than he has, and it will give the surplus of that market access to his own. The effect—if any—will be to cut down the prices he now gets for his produce.

The city man might possibly get a temporary reduction in some of his prices at the expense of the farmer; but the city man would speedily pay for this "penalty" advantage by a "pound" loss. That is, the next step in the tragedy will be "free trade in everything" and the factory which pays his wages, or the wages of those who deal with him, will be closed. Then early strawberries may be cheaper; but he will have no money to buy any at the lowest price. The position then is that the farmer loses first and the city man next. Still to represent this policy, which begins at "at once to cut in two the profits of the farmers, as a farmers' policy, is the height of absurdity.

At the time when census returns are being talked about, some extracts from a report made by Dr. Zeller, director of the statistical department of Stuttgart, may be of interest. He estimates the population of the globe at 1,500,000,000. Of these he sets down as Christians 534,940,000; Mohammedans are said to number 175,290,000, and the Jews 10,800,000. In Asia there are said to be 300,000,000 disciples of Confucius. The followers of Brahma are given at 240,000,000, and there are 121,000,000 Buddhists.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., JULY 21, 1911.

Editorial Notes.

The long continued drought is telling upon our excellent water supply, and citizens are urged to be economical in the use of water as possible. Every care should be taken to prevent waste. The season has been a most trying one, and while our supply is doubtless adequate for every need, there is no doubt but that a large amount of water is going to waste in various parts of the town which should be avoided. A careful use of the water now may prevent more serious trouble later on.

Wolfville people were pleased at the report, which has been circulated during the past week, that work on the new public building is to be begun next week and pushed on to completion. It is said that the contract for the work has been awarded to Mr. Hood, of Shelburne, and that the building is to cost $40,000. Mr. Hood was here at the end of last week making plans for beginning the work. According to report the building is to be of the following description:

Professor T. R. Robinson, of the South Eastern Agricultural College, in Kent, England, after a tour of Canada, said in an interview in St. John that if he were coming out here to raise fruit he would choose the Annapolis or St. John Valley in preference to the West. The land is cheaper, it is closer to the English market, and the yield is larger. Moreover, he believes a man would get more comfort out of life in the East.

Acadia's Governors Meet.

The board of governors of Acadia University held a special meeting on Friday evening of last week at which two matters of importance were considered.

Wilmot H. Thompson, junior, M. A., Ph. D., now assisting professor of classics at Yale university, was appointed professor of Latin. The growing attendance at the university, which had a freshman class of over seventy last year, has made it necessary to provide a professor of Latin and one of Greek. Dr. Robert V. Jones, who has been connected with the university for a great many years as professor of classics, will continue as professor of Greek.

Dr. Thompson graduated at Yale university, B. A., 1898; M. A., 1902, and Ph. D., 1906. He prepared for college in East Orange, New Jersey, high school and taught at Torrington (Conn.) high school, 1899-1902, and at River View Military academy, 1902-1904, and at Yale university since 1906. Dr. Thompson was appointed to the honor society, Phi Beta Kappa on account of his high standing. His Ph. D. thesis received recognition on account of its superior character. Dr. Thompson is a splendid classical scholar and will add much to the faculty of Acadia university.

The governors also decided to build an up-to-date sanitary dairy barn which will accommodate a herd sufficiently large to supply all the boarding institutions with milk. The committee was appointed with instructions to secure the latest plans provided by scientific dairymen and to provide a barn which shall be in every way thoroughly sanitary. The herd will be provided this fall, every member of which shall be thoroughly inspected before being admitted, and every effort will be made to provide milk of the best quality for the students.

Chapman Hall, which was injured by the fire on the evening of the closing, is being repaired and will be ready for occupancy at the beginning of the college year.

Prayer for Rain.

In the days of actual dependence upon and realization of the spiritual foundations of things, men were wont to turn with all the ardor of profound conviction to that inward world of the heart with the appeal for help to the unseen when visible powers had failed.

In our intellectual vainglory we have in our official attitude come to regard such a frame of mind as superstitious. The weather bureau is held by many to be the result of exploiting the fiercest beast, the severest cold, the gentlest and most gracious seasons of seedtime, or harvest. Most of the weather men are wiser than such superficial philosophers, and know the cause behind cause has still to be sought.

Our fathers in the old time before us may have been wiser than some of us imagine, when they supplicated the Power that rules the winds to look kindly on wheat and woodland, tith and vineyard, hive and horse herb. —Toronto World.

'Miss Fearsless and Co.'

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS.
Come and see what fun four girls can have when they go camping. Their chaperone, Miss Fearsless and Co., with nerves; Sarah Jane Lovejoy, from the country, and their Irish maid, Katie O'Conner; just Lizzie, the ghost, adds a little tragedy, while Miss Allan and Miss Allie, the silent sisters, offer a side-splitting novelty.

The next annual meeting of the United Baptist Convention of the Maritime Provinces of Canada will be held with the church at Bridgetown, opening on Saturday, August 10th, at 10 A. M.

No Time for the Examinations.

The Pictou Advocate contains the following timely article:
The young people who have been taking the provincial examinations the first of this month have our sincerest sympathy, for we know the tortures of trying to put down what one knows and thinks when the thermometer registers over 80. A student tells that Superintendent of Education A. H. MacKay had an article in the Journal of Education saying that it was not harder for candidates to write examinations in hot weather than for the average man to do his work. If Mr. MacKay wrote this he is away off the mark. There is no comparison between the strain on a man or woman doing his or her daily task and on a youth or maiden putting to test the results of a year's study. We have personal knowledge of students being sick for weeks after the examinations and their sickness was due largely to the heat. No employer of labor looks for the best from his employees in hot weather, but these examinations call for the very best that is in the student. We could write columns on this subject and we know that everyone that has ever taken the examinations feel as we do. Surely the brains of the educational office can devise a plan to have these examinations held in more suitable weather. Holding them two weeks earlier would avoid the hot wave we almost always have at this time of the year and a nine months' term from the middle of September to the middle of June is long enough for high school students.

The High Commissioner.

According to the best informed newspapers, Sir Fred Borden has been offered and will likely accept the office of High Commissioner for Canada in England. At present this office is held by Lord Strathcona, but he is generally understood will retire in the near future and Sir Fred Borden will be appointed to succeed him. While this appointment will hardly come as a surprise to the people of Canada, Sir Fred's name having been frequently mentioned in connection with the office, yet the appointment if it should be made will hardly be accepted as a popular one by Canadians generally.

Mentally, morally and in every other respect, it would perhaps be difficult to find a worthy successor to Lord Strathcona, who has so worthily represented this country in the old land during the last fifteen years. His high social position, his extensive and intimate knowledge of Canada, which was his home for so many years—these qualifications coupled with his great wealth made Lord Strathcona a high commissioner of whom every Canadian was proud. The Dominion Government should see to it that the gap created by the appointment of his successor is no larger than need be. —Sackville Post

Frightful Loss of Life.

Forest fires at Porcupine, Ont., last week caused the holocaust of the year. Nothing worse has ever occurred in Canada. Over 300 persons are believed to have perished.

Several mining camps have been swept out of existence causing damage to the amount of over a million dollars. The fire swept with incredible swiftness owing to the excessive heat of the past three weeks, without a drop of rain.
About 300 people were driven to take refuge in Porcupine lake by the seething flames and 200 of them were drowned. At least 27 are known to be dead in the west Dome shaft. Thirty foreigners is known to be dead in Dome shaft and the number of deaths are increasing every hour as news comes in. This is the most deadly fire in the history of Canada. The great gold camp is practically stripped. Hollinger alone escaped and that area was burned over a short time ago. The woods were alive with prospectors who had no possible chance of escape. Relief trains have been rushed to the scene as the people left have no food or shelter of any kind.

Apparently the Stoney South has afforded more than its share of material for the writers of fiction the past few years, as the majority of the most popular novels and plays contain that southern atmosphere which appeals to the general public. 'At the Old Cross Roads,' with its scenes laid in the vicinity of Matchez, Miss., is one of those pleasing stories of the south in which the strong dramatic situations are blended with bright comedy lines, and the characters are taken from real life in that interesting district. The engagement of the well known play takes place at the Opera House on Aug. 1st, and promises to call out one of the largest audiences that has ever assembled in this town. Manager Arthur C. Alston has engaged a stronger cast than ever and while this is the tenth annual tour of the piece he has not allowed the production to deteriorate even in the slightest manner. Special scenery has been built this season. Seats will be on sale Wednesday, July 26th, at J. F. Herbin's, Wolfville, and Geo. C. McDougall's, Kentville.

Portland, Maine, was selected as the place for the next annual meeting of the National Division, Sons of Temperance on Wed., at the second session of the convention, which is being held at South Manchester, Conn. Orilla, Ont., was among the contesting cities. The ritual committee reported favorably on the adoption of a new ritual.

First Class School for Girls and Young Women.

The Catalogue of Acadia Seminary, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in our columns, has come to our table. An examination of the booklet, which is well printed and illustrated, shows that the work of this well known school is organized in three departments. The Academic Department includes the Collegiate Course, the Sophomore and Freshman Matriculation courses. The Fine Arts Department includes courses in Music—Piano, Voice, Violin and the usual theoretical branches—Art, in Oils, Water Color and China Painting, and the new work in Arts and Crafts, and Oratory. The Department of Practical Arts provides courses in Household Science, Business, Stenography and Typewriting. All of these courses are characterized by modernness, breadth and thoroughness, and aim not merely to prepare the pupil for the professions open to women but for complete living.

To do this work a staff of twenty teachers of fine personality, qualified by training, temperament and experience is employed. Admirable provision is made for the development of the physical life of the girls by the presence on the staff of a resident Trained Nurse and a competent Physical Director. Simplicity in living and dress, high ideals in conduct and thoroughness of work are insisted upon. That the school is a popular one is evidenced by the fact that during the last seven years the registered attendance has been doubled.

Full particulars concerning the work of Acadia Seminary may be had by writing PRINCIPAL H. T. DE WOLFE, Wolfville, Nova Scotia.

Good for Them, But for Us?

President Taft has furnished abundant reasons why reciprocity would be a good thing for the United States, but his arguments do not appeal to the majority of the Canadians with the same force.
Speaking on Independence day, he made use of the following language in an endeavor to show the people of his country what a fine thing reciprocity would be to them:
"The diversion from Britain and European markets to United States markets of twenty to forty million bushels of Canadian wheat annually would not only strengthen the wheat market abroad, but would furnish the American mills with a needed complement of wheat which the world would require just as it has in the past, but it would then be in the shape of American-made flour. The effect of increased wheat supplies would be to reduce the cost of manufacturing flour in just the ratio that the mills were able to thereby increase their output. Reduced cost of production would enable the mills to regain in the foreign market the 18 or 20 million barrels of flour sold to foreign trade annually ten years ago, but which in recent years has fallen to less than ten million barrels."

"If Canada should decide as soon as the reciprocity agreement were adopted to not send out her dollar's worth of farm products to England, but to send all her surplus to the United States, the effect would simply be that the United States would send an extra $140,000,000 of our products to supply England's demand and we would absorb Canada's $140,000,000 surplus, without in any degree affecting prices here. We would gain the customer Canada abandoned."

Rev. H. B. Sloan, a New Brunswick and a graduate of Acadia and Newton, now in his third year as pastor at New London, N. H., is having a good degree of success in his work. During his pastorate $1,500.00 have been spent in modernizing the church property, forty-three members have been added by baptism and five by letter; the pastor's salary has been increased and his expenses to the Philadelphia meeting were paid. It will interest many to know that in New London, which is an academy town, Dr. A. W. Sawyer, long president of Acadia, is remembered as a boy and also as an instructor in Colby Academy, and that his father was at one time pastor of the church. There are 1,500 students in the Academy, all of whom attend the Baptist church.

A terribly sad affair occurred at Grand Pre this week when Mr. Fred Rye, an industrious and respected citizen, while in a state of mental depression, ended his life by taking a dose of Paris green. The unfortunate man lingered until an early hour yesterday morning when death came. No motive can be found for the rash act, and it can only be accounted for by the fact that his health had been falling for some time. Deceased was about 60 years of age, and leaves a widow and large family who have the fullest sympathy of the community.

Obituary.

John Burbridge Best was born in Prospect, Kings county, N. S., Jan. 11, 1832. His early education was received in the common schools of the county. He married Miss Isabella Adelia Woodworth, of Canning, whose death he never ceased to mourn since she was called to her long home seven years ago. Early in their married life they moved to Brooklyn Street on the farm now owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Grant Poole. Here they raised a family of seven children, ten of whom survive them, and accumulated a goodly portion of this world's goods. Since the death of his wife in 1904 he often expressed a wish to join her, knowing that his life's work was accomplished. Early in life he sought and found salvation, and was always ready and willing to testify to the goodness and saving grace of the Infinite. In his last letter to his children he counselled them to put their faith in Jesus and always be guided by His teachings. He died July 17th of Angina Pectoris, at Brooklyn Street, where he had lived continuously for fifty-seven years. Of his ten surviving children only three were able to be present at the burial service. We bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, believing: 'There is no death, What seems so is transition, This life of mortal breath Is but the suburbs of that life Elysium Whose portals we call death.'

Salt Rheum On the Hand

Yielded only to the soothing, healing influence of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT. In addition to the suffering and annoyance caused by eczema and salt rheum there is always danger of the trouble spreading and becoming chronic. For this reason the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment should be regular and persistent until the cure is complete. Mrs. John S. Dwyer, Linwood, Antigonish county, N. S., writes: 'I want to say that Dr. Chase's Ointment has proven a great blessing to me. I had salt rheum on one hand, and could not get it healed up. The itching was most distressing at times. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment has cured me completely, and I gladly recommend it to every sufferer.' In every home there is a demand for Dr. Chase's Ointment. It is particularly useful where there are children. Chafing and skin irritation are relieved at once and eczema is cured by this soothing, healing ointment. 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
