CHAPTER XXII

"And it is so, isn't it?"

He is silent. If he could but tell her all—if he could explain to her the nature of the net which enfolds him, and which he is going to cut and cast aside. But he cannot. She is too pure, too innocent, with all her girlish wit and clear intellect, to understand. He knows, full truly, that at the first word her unsophisticated nature, unstained by any knowledge of the world, would shrink and recoil from him. And he loves her too dearly to risk it. Ah, how often a strong man's love makes him weak!

"It is so," she goes on, her eyes fixed on the stream, not on his face, her voice harmonising subtly with the murmur of the water as it flows and breaks over the stones. "And I would not hold you back if I could. I would not be like the foolish maiden in the poem, who covered her lover's ears with her lily-white hands while the battle-cry sounded, and held him till he had lost fame, and honour, and all that made his love dear to her." She stops suddenly and laughs.

But Sir Herrick sees nothing absurd in it. Though she does not know it, the words are fearfully true, and cannot return until he comes forth from the struggle victorious.

And as he lies at her feet—at the feet of the first woman he has really loved—he curses his fate that it should be necessary to leave her.

"So," says Paula, "I bid you go with a light heart, as the poet says; and I promise you I will not weep while you are absent. You shall not come back and find me red-eyed and wan, like Lady Christabel. It always seemed to me such a risky thing for the lady Christabel to do."

"Risky, as how?" he says.

She laughs.

"Don't you see? When the knight came back and found her as red-eyed and pale-faced as the poet said, would there have been anything astonishing in his jumping on his maid and riding off again?"

And the Worst is Yet to Come

He laughs softly. He knows that she was talking against time; that the gentle, loving, maiden heart was shrinking from the moment of parting.

"It is a very good proverb which says, 'Don't cry until you are married,'" says Paula, laughing, but with a strange liquid look in her dark eyes.

"You shall not cry then, I swear!" he says, with all a man's overweening confidence. "No, my darling, life shall be all sunshine and no shade. Why, see how brightly it promises. Even mine uncle, the dreaded major, goes down before you vanquished! Even the major!"

Paula looks from the stream to the handsome, exultant face with an expression of thoughtful amusement.

"Yes," she says, "and yet—"

"Well?" he says.

"And yet there were moments when I thought that the major 'went down,' as you call it, rather too suddenly."

"Oh, that's his way," responds Sir Herrick, carelessly. "You mean that he was a little too demonstrative, rather too ready with his blessing. That's all right. He likes to do things in a theatrical way, with a little flourish, you know. My darling, you have quite conquered him!"

"Have I?" says Paula. "I am very glad. I should not like him to be against me," and a faint shudder runs through her.

Sir Herrick laughs. Then suddenly, as the sound of the stable clock comes on the evening breeze chiming the hour, the laugh dies away. The time for parting has come, and although the parting is brief—only three days—he shrinks from it.

"That is the hour," he says, gently.

"And here is the man," says Paula, dropping her hand on his arm. "Must you go now?"

"I must, darling," he says, and he puts his arm round her. "Let us go back to the cottage."

"No," she says, "let us say good-bye here. It will be better—for me, I shall sit here until the sun has quite sunk, and then I shall go home; and Alice will talk and Bob will yawn, and I shall hear neither of them. Oh, if I could but sleep away the next three days!"

What can he do? A love whose passionate intensity fills his whole being holds him in thrall; a remorse and regret intersecting it. He could but take her in his arms and kiss her. Kiss her with a prayer in every kiss; a vow of penitence in every murmured word; and then he tears himself away, and leaves her sitting staring, not after him, but at the stream beside which she learnt to love him.

She sits there until the sun, the earth's sun, has disappeared as her sun has done, and then she picks up the rod and goes home.

She is very pale, pale even to the lips, as she stands upon the verandah and looks to the east where Sir Herrick has gone. It is love's first parting, and it has strained her young heart's chords to their extreme tension.

"Good-bye, sweetheart, good-bye," she murmurs, holding out her hands, and with a smile more pitiful than tears; "good-bye!"

Then she turns and enters the house, and goes towards her room with a suppressed sigh, but the door of the den is open, and Bob hears her.

"Is that you, Paula?" he says from within, and she pauses and looks in at the open door.

Bob is hard at work at his accounts; his table is littered with books, his hair is all over his head, and the ink is all over his fingers as usual.

"Yes," says Paula, "I've just come in."

"Oh," says Bob, absently, "where is Sir Herrick?"

"He has gone to town," says Paula.

"To town! Has he? What for?" demands Bob in that indifferent tone which a brother uses when speaking of his sister's betrothed. "What's he gone to town for? The fish are well on, and London is full of dust."

"I don't know: business," says Paula.

"Business? Nonsense!" retorts Bob, emphatically. "He never had any business. He is a swell, and swells never have any business of any kind; they've no business to," with a grin at the epigram.

"Well, he's gone," says Paula, smiling ruefully.

"He's an idiot," says Bob, decisively, "to leave the country on such a day for smoky London. But as to business, that's all nonsense, isn't it, Alice?" For Alice has come to the door and stands looking at the pair with her cold contemplative smile.

"What is it?" she asks.

Bob wipes his pen on his coat-sleeve, and nods at Paula.

"Sir Herrick's gone to town on business," he says, "at least, so she says; and I tell her that swells like Sir Rick never have any business."

"Has Sir Herrick gone?" says Alice, with well-feigned surprise. "Really?"

"Really," replies Paula, with a faint smile, and half-inclined to be impatient.

"Dear me," says Alice, staring at the flushed face with that cold, fascinating stare which is so trying to bear, "what on earth has he gone for; not to see his uncle—the major is at Lord Hurstley's, you know?"

"Yes, I know," retorts Paula, unreasonably, and impatient at her uneasiness. "I know he is, but I suppose Rick can have business in London apart from his uncle."

"Yes," assents Alice, reluctantly, and with marked hesitation. "But what business?"

A faint flush rises to the pale face.

"I didn't ask him. I suppose he knows, and if he knows, that is sufficient."

"Oh, quite sufficient," says Alice, with a cold smile. "But isn't it rather strange that he didn't tell you what the business is?"

"He didn't tell me," says poor Paula, driven to bay.

"And he is generally so frank," murmurs Alice. "I should have asked him if I had been you, Paula, dear."

"Asked him!" echoed Paula, indignantly, a crimson flush spreading over her face.

Alice nods and smiles.

"A man doesn't leave the girl he is in love with on the second or third day for such a journey without telling her what he leaves her for. But—a thousand pardons, as the major would say—perhaps he has told you!"

"No, he has not," says Paula, meeting the sarcastic, blue eyes with a steadfast gaze. "No, he has not, and I didn't ask him; I would scorn to do so. Do you think that I cannot trust him out of my sight?"

Alice shrugs her shoulders.

"Don't be furious, my dear," she says, "I only asked; and if you want to know my sentiments, I do think it strange that a man should go off like that—so soon, too!—and not tell the girl he is engaged to where and why he is going."

And with a smile and a shake of the head Alice glides upstairs, leaving Paula and Bob staring at each other speechless.

CHAPTER XXIII

One of those disagreeable persons who spend their time in inventing proverbs and wise laws which tend to demonstrate the weakness and folly of mankind once hit upon this one:

"The road to hell is paved with good resolutions."

It is one of the most hateful and odious of proverbs that ever saw the light, and it does more harm in the way of making faint hearts grow fainter than any known.

But oh! ye gods and little fishes! how perfectly true it is. Don't we all of us remember the good resolutions we have made by the thousand and broken; and how, after breaking the resolution to get rid of such and such a habit, we return to it and hug it more fondly than ever.

"I never resolve," said Stonewall Jackson; "I do." But unfortunately we are not all Stonewall Jackson; and we have to be content with resolving first, at any rate, and doing afterwards.

All the way up in the train that bore him swiftly to town, Sir Herrick resolved. There was something to be accomplished at the end of the journey, and before he could return, that he was determined to accomplish. There were certain chains that held him fast bound and fettered; he was firmly resolved to knock those chains off, and come back to kneel at the feet of his divinity, a free man. Now, no man can knock off chains, real or metaphorical, without some trouble and some clanking.

Sir Herrick felt that there would be a great deal of both; you see, everyone who was anybody in the great world knew of these chains and of the bondage into which he had sold himself, and there would, consequently, be some talk and chatter.

But Sir Herrick was resolved; and his face grew quite stern and severe in the firmness of his determination.

The old, past life should be done away with; he would sever it from the future and let it fly down the wind. He had discovered at last what love really was, and how precious it was; his eyes had been opened, a veil torn from before him and the reality of happiness.

There stood nothing between him and this happiness, now that the Honourable Francis had given his consent; but these aforesaid chains and their rivets must be knocked off, and he must be free.

It was rather a bitter journey; full of remorse, full of regret. He had gone into bondage with his eyes open; he had coiled these chains round him with his own hands, feeling them to be nothing but silken fetters, garlands of roses, full of sweet perfume and pleasant to the eye; but they had turned out harder than iron and more galling than thorns.

The gods make of our pleasant vices whips with which they scourge us. Exactly; and Sir Herrick was just beginning to realise the truth of it.

And yet—and yet—as he leaned back, with half-closed eyes and tightly set lips, the thought came to him: it must be done gently, with a tender hand, and with the greatest consideration. It was a great task, and as he drew nearer to London it seemed to grow greater and more formidable—so formidable that, as he jumped into a hansom, he told the man to drive to the chambers in the Inn instead of to Raglan Street, Chelsea.

Fashion Plates.

Pattern 3121 is here portrayed. It is cut in 4 Sizes: 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 will require 3 1/4 yards of 36 inch material for the dress, and 1 1/4 yard for the bloomers. The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to cure it, and you have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough, and quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 3 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth); then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for 3 1/2 ounces of Pinex with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

San Giovanni with stores for the Italian army of occupation in Albania. Instead of putting into that port the vessel headed straight for Fiume where D'Annunzio proceeded to seize not only the cargo but also two million lire which the Italian War Office had consigned to the Capt. for payment of the Albanian troops. D'Annunzio justified his action of sequestration on the ground of extreme necessity as his satellites were clamoring for their pay.

SOLDIERS CLASH ON STEAMER.

ROME, Jan. 30. Italian soldiers clashed with Slav and German soldiers on board the steamer Africa of the Trieste Lloyd line, at Siansqua, Italy, according to a report. It is said the incident was one of considerable gravity.

KOLCHAK HAS ESCAPED.

HONOLULU, Jan. 30. Admiral Kolchak is reported to have escaped from the Bolsheviki and to be hidden in Manchuria, according to a Tokio despatch to the Japanese newspaper Nippu Ji Ji here.

ARABS WILL RESIST ZIONIST MOVEMENT.

ROME, Jan. 30. Pope Benedict has received a memorandum from Arabian tribes in Palestine which protests against what is called the "pro-Zionist" policy of Great Britain, and A. J. Balfour's statement that "Palestine must be for the Jews." The memorandum denounces the report that Bolsheviki Jews have been given permission to settle in Palestine, and declares that the Arabs will never allow the Zionists to take possession of the country.

CARSON ON HOME RULE BILL.

LONDON, Jan. 30. Sir Edward Carson has written the Ulster Unionist Council that when the new Irish Home Rule Bill is presented Ulster will be confronted with the most difficult and critical situation that has yet arisen, and that it will be fraught with the gravest concern. Sir Edward says that as soon as the bill is published he will go to Ulster to confer with all classes on the question what is best to do, "having regard for the pride we feel in doing the best for the United Kingdom and the Empire."

YUDETITCH RELEASED.

LONDON, Jan. 30. General Nicholas Yudetitch, commander of the Russian northwest army offensive last fall against Petrograd, whose arrest was reported here yesterday in advices from Reval is said in semi-official quarters to have been released. Private advices from Reval say General Yudetitch was released as a result of pressure exerted by French and British authorities there.

THE INDIAN DISTURBANCES.

LONDON, Jan. 30. A white paper report on disturbances in the Punjab, India, issued today says that the special contributory causes in the agitation at Armistice were speculation and discontent over the prices of commodities, dissatisfaction with the income tax and an attempt to arouse Islamic feeling among the lower classes out of sympathy with Turkey. Regarding the developments at Lahore the reports says that economic conditions, cost of food and clothing and the rental rate contributed to the discontent of the working classes, but that the ready support given to the forces of disorders by the trading class could only be explained by general causes affecting the Punjab as a whole.

ODESSA AGAIN CHANGES HANDS.

VIENNA, Jan. 30. The capture of Odessa by Ukrainian forces, commanded by General Halvenko, is announced by the Ukrainian press service.

WHY THE BOLSHEVIKS WOULD NEGOTIATE.

WARSAW, Jan. 30. Polish troops continue to pursue the Bolsheviki, according to a staff communication received.

OFFICERS CAPTURED BY BOLSHEVIKI.

LONDON, Jan. 30. Eight American and two British officers are believed to have fallen into the hands of the Bolsheviki, according to the Daily Mail's correspondent at Harbin, whose statement does not give details and is not precise. It apparently indicates that the capture of the officers occurred to the west of Irkutsk, but no date is given.

LONDON PAPERS ON EXCHANGE SITUATION.

LONDON, Jan. 30. The renewal slump in exchange is conspicuously featured in Thursday morning's papers, some of which apply such terms as "chaos" and "grave crisis" to the position which they declare threatens to bring to a standstill international trade or drive the nations back to barter. Some of the papers advocate a settlement of the difficulty by the international conference which the bankers recently asked the Government to convene, and which, according to some sources, the Government has already invited. Others are disinclined to place faith in such a convention.

REAL FINANCING.

PARIS, Jan. 30. An important part of the proceeds of the new French loan will be applied to the retirement of paper circulation. This will be one of the special features of the Government's plan to improve the financial situation of France, the Associated Press is able to say. The financial policy of the French Government is to avoid as far as possible the restriction of trade with all nations particularly her allies and associates and any prohibition of importations will be measures by the absolute necessity of the situation.

WILL THEY EVER COME.

LONDON, Jan. 30. Lower prices will be slow in coming, said Reinhold McKenna, former chancellor of exchequer, and now chairman of London City and Midland Bank, addressing stock holders today. Any attempt suddenly to bring about a decrease in cost of living he said, would mean disaster. He added, "I would urge the reduction of the country's expenditures to a figure less than tax revenues by which means alone the issuance of currency can be restricted and London established in her old position as the financial centre and free gold market of the world. It is my opinion that this country's rate of taxation is higher than any other in the world. It is dangerously near the point where tariff business enterprise and needed development of capital may become seriously impaired."

A Protest.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—My attention has been attracted by an advertisement in the daily press, claiming "Klim" will produce "a gallon of milk" for 55 cents. I find on examination of a "Klim" pamphlet, it is stated that "Klim" is made from Separated milk, and nothing else, and further it is pasteurised, and contains in its powder form 3% of fat.

I live food, and where people are persuaded to use "Klim" largely instead of milk in the feeding of infants or invalids, the results would be very serious. In "Klim," the vitamins, that indefinable something which stimulates growth, are entirely destroyed.

As to the comparative food value, the average cow's milk contains over 3% fat which is at least one hundred times greater than the amount contained in the "Klim" recipe per gallon.

"Klim" then is not milk, and the public should not be led to believe that it is by the statement that a pound mixed according to directions gives them a gallon of milk. What it does give is a gallon of milk, separated, creamless or skim milk, the market value of which is about twenty cents per gallon. "Klim" is condensed skimmed milk, and no more. Yours truly,

Terra Novas Defeat Feildians.

Best Hockey Game For Years—Fast, Clean Play, Both Sides Working Hard—Score 9-5 in Terra Novas' Favor—1,800 People Braved Last Night's Storm to Witness the Game.

The much-talked-of clash between the Terra Novas and the Feildians took place last night, and it is remarkable that, despite the storm which raged, over 1,800 enthusiasts turned up to see it. They were not disappointed. The game was a hum-dinger from start to finish, and not a dull moment was felt. Weakness in combination and a failure to "pass to centre" may be said to have caused the Feildians to lose, for they played a great game. The Terra Novas had good control of combination and so scored. Hunt, goal for the former, was kept on the alert all night and to his credit he said, that he played his part well. The Feildians netted the first goal, and only one other was scored in the first period leaving it with 1 goal each. In the second period the Terras scored 5 goals, leaving the tally to 6 for them as compared to 1 for their opponents. This was a big lead, and although the Feildians worked heroically in the last period, scoring four goals, they could not win. The Terra Novas, in this period, rolled up another 3 goals, leaving the final score 9-5 in their favor. Little rough play was in evidence, and the game was a clean one. Mr. W. J. Higgins was referee. The time-keepers were Messrs. C. J. Ellis and W. J. Martin. The summary of goals was:

1st Period:
1—Tait (F.)	11.00 min.

The address was of a high standard of excellence and will be always remembered by those who heard it.

To The Public.

Dear Telephone-Subscribers: Do you like the kind of telephone you have now? Do you enjoy "cranking up the motor" when you want to call Central, or would you rather be able to make the call by simply taking the receiver off the hook? Do you like hearing other people's conversation over another line, and reflecting that other people are probably hearing your conversation also? Do you like the cheerful buzz of the trolley-car and the arc-light as an accompaniment to your business and private talks over the phone? If you like these things, we are sorry, because we are in business to take them away from you. We have bought out the present telephone system, and propose to replace it with a brand new, thoroughly modern system with present accommodation for 3,000 subscribers, so that those of your friends who have so long been waiting for even the present inadequate service can get a 'phone that is a 'phone.

In addition, we propose to install a long-distance service and a Conception Bay, with exchanges in all principal centres, so that for an extra charge of a few cents you can talk to a friend or a customer in Harbor Grace, say right from your desk or the hallway of your house.

You are paying now $30 a year for a residence 'phone, and $40 for a business 'phone. How much extra would you be willing to pay for this improved service? We are glad to tell you that it will cost you no more. Rates will be the same, and you will have an opportunity of becoming a part-owner of the system and sharing in its profits.

We are selling at par Preference Shares in this Company of $25 each, holders of which are entitled to a 7 per cent. dividend out of the Company's profits before the holders of the Ordinary Shares get anything. After the Ordinary Shares receive a similar dividend of 7 per cent. the Preference and Ordinary shareholders divide the surplus profits between them.

Every telephone subscriber should be a shareholder in the Company, a part-owner of the business as well as a customer. Send in your subscriptions at $25 per share. 'Phone 526, or write and a representative will call.

C. R. E. School

HAS 200 PUPILS AND IS A BUSY SPOT.

The Civil Re-establishment School for returned veterans at the Synod Building is now in full swing, and from an educational standpoint, is a veritable hive of industry.

This institution, which was established in March of last year, has accomplished a great deal in the way of intensive educational development. The school is divided into four groups, the students of which are classified according to their ability. Group A, under the tuition of Miss Boone, is a junior class, and here are found the men who have received little, if any, education previous to enlistment. An intensive course of preliminary training which is remarkable for these students, and is imparted to them efficiently by the instruction administered. Group B, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Hanham, continues the work of general education, and as the students become satisfactory in Group A, they are advanced to this section. Group C, of which Mr. J. E. Richards is the teacher, works along similar lines, but handles more advanced subjects, so that when the pupils have passed through this course they are qualified to select the branches of commercial or mechanical training which they propose adopting as their livelihood. Group D, is the finishing shop for the returned students. It is under the general direction of Mr. A. E. Down, A.A., graduate of the Business College, Chatham, Ontario, and in this Department, the students receive a very practical and useful course in Commercial Stenography, Typewriting, etc. Here, also, the work of advanced general education is continued, as well as the preliminary steps to navigation and telegraphy.

Yesterday morning the Vocational Officer made an inspection of the various departments of the school and examined many of the students in the subjects they had been handling to date; some most interesting tests were given and excellent results were accomplished up to that time. Perhaps the most interesting characteristic of which each student takes up his work, and the most casual visitor cannot but be impressed with the air of interest which predominates during the class hours.

At the close of our visit, 163 men were enrolled at the Civil Re-establishment School; these were divided as follows:—Group A, 85; Group B, 41; Group C, 29; Group D, commercial, 14, and industrial and general, 41, but many other students will be put on the roll within the next few weeks, and it is felt that more accommodation will have to be provided to meet the overflowed work. It is interesting to note that the figures stated above show the standard of literacy to be much lower than some estimate; for instance, it will be found that in the junior Group A, there were only 26 students, whereas it has been generally felt that owing to our limited facilities heretofore the average of literacy amongst our returned men would have been much higher.

The school was opened under the general supervision of Mr. A. H. Whitman, of Acadia University, and the Technical College, Halifax. The general tone and general excellence of the school is much indebted to Mr. Whitman's tact, skill and devotion. In September last the Civil Re-establishment Committee was compelled to ask Mr. Whitman to undertake additional duties at the Engineering School, and consequently he has not been since able to give much of his time to the Re-establishment School. The staff, however, was strengthened, there now being ten teachers employed—and under the general management of Mr. Down, Vice-Principal, the work so well begun has continued well.

With the operation of the Engineering School and the Wood Working School, as well as the Civil Re-establishment School, a very large number of men are now being trained for various vocations, and it will be of interest to the public to know from time to time the working out of the Re-establishment of our returned veterans.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE BOOKS WE OUGHT TO READ.

Have you read Matthew Arnold's "Culture and Anarchy?" some one asked me the other day about a discussion of the eternal topic of industrial unrest. "No," I said, "but have you read that essay of Stevenson's, 'Crabbed Age and Youth' that tells the way he changes his opinions about things as he grows older." She had not. Then someone else, who apparently hadn't read either of our books, asked us if we had read a third, which he considered invaluable. We had not. "You must," he said, "it is one of the best books," etc.

How can anyone read a hundredth of it? So we agreed that we would try and he agreed that he'd try to look at the books we mentioned. And as I noted down the two I hadn't read, I fell to thinking—isn't it perfectly appalling how much there is that almost sinful not to have read, and how perfectly impossible it is for any one person to read a hundredth of it?

It seems as if hardly a day passes that someone does not say to me, "You ought to read this or that," or "Surely you've read this or that," and usually, it is something I would like to read. But if one has anything to do in the world to do besides read, how is one going to?

Of course, one wants to keep in touch with the day's news and one's favorite magazines, and every day there are new books coming out that are important and interesting, and when there are many of the older ones that one hasn't read.

Some People Only Want to Talk About Them. When it's just a matter of wanting to talk about the books (as I cannot help feeling it is with many people) one can read digests of them and talk glibly about what one has read at all. But if one wants to really read them for one's sake, what can one do?

Nothing, I imagine, except try to keep track of the new books in the particular lines that interest you most; follow the day's news; read some weekly or monthly survey of the world's news; take an evening off now and then for relaxation in the magazines you enjoy most; and once in a while go back and read some one of the older books to keep your balance.

Don't You Care.

And then if anyone says, "Have you read such and such—oh, you really ought to!" don't feel abashed. Just comfort yourself with the thought that there are doubtless many books that you have read that he hasn't, and that he "really ought to."

Truly the prophet never said a truer word than: "Of making many books there is no end." And think of the output he based it on! Wouldn't you just love to see his face if Solomon could visit us again and be told the number of books that are published every day in this country?

I can almost fancy his saying, as a very positive woman of my acquaintance always says when faced with facts that stagger her, "I don't believe it." But not quite. Else he wouldn't be Solomon. Wisdom and positiveness do not belong together.

Important!

Every man starting out in business will have to go over a hard road and find out its turnings for himself. But he need not go over his road in the dark if he can take with him the light of other men's experience. DR. F. STAFFORD & SON have the experience of supplying all kinds of Drugs, Patent Medicines, etc., at the very lowest possible prices. ### Ending in Smoke.

Among pipe-smokers the palm must be awarded to a Dutch sailor, named Berken, whose boast it is that for the last sixty-five years his voracious bowl has consumed the English equivalent of a pound of tobacco weekly. It requires no skill in arithmetic to discover that the "Dutch chimney," as he is proud to be known, has dispersed in smoke more than thirty hundredweight of tobacco, which is almost exactly twenty-four times his own weight.

Equally remarkable are the feats of rapid smokers, which, however, have little to commend them in the way of enjoyment. It is to America that we must go to find the "world's champion cigarette smoker"—a hardy Pole, who, for a wager, once reduced thirty-two cigarettes to ashes before the minute hand had completed one circuit of the clock.

On another occasion he performed a feat even more remarkable, in smoking a round hundred cigarettes in ten minutes under four hours. "And now," the insatiable man exclaimed, as he flung away the last stump, "I think I will have a cigar."

For a wager of one thousand francs a French cabman, Chatignon, recently undertook to smoke a hundred strong cigars in two days. In the first twenty-four hours he had disposed of sixty-six; and, after a two hours' rest, continued his task, with such vigor that by noon the following day the stump of his last cigar was burning his lips.

Less stimulating, perhaps, are feats of slow smoking, of which London has witnessed not a few in recent years. But it is to the old city of Bruges that we must go to see this dilatory art at its best. Every evening the Brugsche Rokersclub (the Smoking-club of Bruges) has its contests, in which the members vie with each other in an effort to smoke the smallest quantity of tobacco in the longest possible time.

The steward weighs out for each competitor two and a half grammes of tobacco, which the vice-president packs carefully into the rival pipes. At a signal all pipes are lit and the contest begins, each man's object being to keep the fire in his bowl alight the longest.

As pipe after pipe goes out the contest becomes more and more interesting, and the excitement reaches its climax when only two competitors are left. So expert have the members of the Rokersclub become, that it is quite a usual thing to keep the two and a half grammes of tobacco going for an hour and a half.

The Keeper Wondered.

The dear old thing, with her usual stock of questions, was visiting the Zoo. "Keeper," she said, tapping him with her umbrella, "what do you consider to be the most remarkable animal in these wonderful gardens?" "Well, ma'am," replied the keeper thoughtfully, "after careful consideration, as you might say, I should say that there laughing hyena gets the prize." "Indeed, my good man! And what makes you think that?" "Well, he only has a sleep once a week, a meal once a month, and a drink once a year," said the keeper, moving on. "So what he has to laugh about beats me."

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Sirs,—I have used your MINARD'S LINIMENT for the past 25 years and whilst I have occasionally used other liniments I can safely say that I have never used any equal to yours.

It rubbed between the hands and inhaled frequently, it will never fail to cure cold in the head in 24 hours. It is also the Best for bruises, sprains, etc.

THE WEED.

Tobacco prices, too, have soared, in keeping with the price of board, of clothing, books and boots; and now we feel some mental jars when we dig up for punk cigars and cauliflower cheroots. There was an olden, golden time when I could take a hard-earned dime, and buy a royal smoke; a torch that drove away my care, restored the color of my hair, and made grief seem a joke. But now the torch that costs a dime would drive the purchaser to crime, to arson and the like; it's made of rhubarb leaves and sage, and of the smoker, in a rage, invokes the shade of Mike. The time has come, I must admit, when it is wisdom true to quit the habit, once for all; for most cigars are made of tripe, the stuff we purchase for the pipe is ground up overall. And only plutocrats can buy the honest weed, it comes so high, and "higher still" the news; what wonder that the poor man grieves? I'm tired of smoking cabbage leaves and desiccated shoes. I'm tired of throwing coin away for sacks that should be labelled hay, but bear tobacco's brand; and so I say to every toff, "This is the time for swearing off! Let's do it, hand in hand!"

Great Herring Catch.

The herring fishery at Yarmouth and Lowestoft has had a good revival after the war. In the season now ending herrings worth more than £1,000,000 were landed at Yarmouth, and about £800,000 worth at Lowestoft. From Yarmouth, 58,075 barrels of herrings were shipped to France, Belgium, Holland and Danzig, their total value being about £174,225. There were no exports last year. From Lowestoft, the shipments total 37,307 barrels, worth £108,921. The fleet consisted of 850 drifters, 210 being English and 640 Scottish. As many as 298 were motor-driven. The benefit of this season's fishery to the two ports is great. The nearly £2,000,000 obtained for the herrings means a very large outlay in wages paid on the spot to those dealing with the fish after it is landed.

English Politics.

From information to be gathered from early January English papers the position of the Coalition Government in the United Kingdom does not appear to be an enviable one. Lloyd George, the once mighty and invincible politician, seems to be receiving a great deal more than his share of obloquy and reproach from antagonistic editors, and numerous are the expressions of disapproval over his conduct of National affairs, all of which are sharply criticised and cuttingly condemned. The re-appearance of Mr. Asquith, who was Prime Minister at the beginning, (and for some time after) of the war, into the political arena as a candidate in the impending Paisley election has directed intense popular interest toward the new Asquithian policy, and there is great speculation regarding the ex-Premier's campaign. That he is opposed to the Lloyd George Government goes without saying. Already he has severely criticised its "zig-zag Russian policy of compromises, improvisations, insincerities and inconsistencies," and has made a heavy indictment of the work of the Peace Conference, because it has made no serious or sustained effort to secure the foundation of peace with Russia.

Whether or not this is merely politics, or whether Mr. Asquith really wishes a peace to be arranged with the Bolsheviks, or the Soviets, or whichever faction has the country of the Muscovites in its grip, he does not state, merely alluding in his speeches to Russia generally, without sufficient force however, to draw to him certain sections favorable to such a consummation. As an opponent of the Coalition, any party that he might form will probably have to reckon with Labor, the members of which organization having incurred the enmity of Asquith are more than likely to form up in opposition to him, as well as to the Coalition, and throw in their lot with the National Irish Party, which would result in a powerful combination, both sections being tired of that which characterizes as Lloyd George's shiftiness. Something that gives colour to this hypothesis is the report of the Parliamentary Labor Delegation investigating conditions in Ireland, which recently declared in favor of Labor allying and identifying itself with that body. Then there is the miners, who are having their own troubles with the Government, and who might be expected, in the light of past events, to instruct their leaders to support the party promising them the most acceptable legislation of their demands and needs. In any case it looks as though the little Welshman were practically doomed, a fact which he very obviously realises, the proof of this being his attempt to form a centrist party in order to hold a semblance of leadership, the coalition being crumbling away beneath him.

Journals hostile to Lloyd George openly poke fun at him and become sarcastic at his expense, but all that is, as we well know in Newfoundland, politics and nothing more. The depreciation of the pound sterling, the paper currency issues of the brothers Geddes—Auckland and Eric—the threats to British prestige in the East; and nearer home with the Irish trouble still very acute, all this has aroused a sentiment against the Lloyd George-Bonar Law combination "who are not governing at all, but only carrying on and kept busy surrendering to all who make demands upon them." For these and other reasons public resentment shows itself very plainly, yet as one journal puts it, "the only straw which seems to save the coalition is the dreadful apprehension that others would be worse," and the people of Great Britain and Ireland are not just now wanting anything worse than they have, but something infinitely better. They would rather endure the ills they have than fly to others that they know not of, but out of the present hurly-burly of the old country's politics, a new leader and party will certainly arise to infuse new life into the almost defunct body politic now holding precariously the reins of power, and unable to guide the nation toward its newly discovered destiny.

Special Musical Service.

To-morrow evening (Sunday) the fourth series of monthly Musical Services will be rendered by the choir of St. Andrew's Church. The assisting soloists are Mrs. G. W. B. Ayre, Mr. W. L. Woods and Capt. Campbell. The choir is under the direction of Mr. Moncrieff Mawer, and the following programme has been prepared:—
Anthem, "O Be Joyful"—D. Buck; soloist, Miss Marguerite Mitchell.
Solo, "Abide With Me"—Liddell; Mrs. G. W. B. Ayre.
Solo, "But the Lord is Mindful of His Own" (St. Paul)—Mendelssohn.
Anthem, "How Long Wilt Thou Forget Me?"—Pillanges; soloist, Mrs. G. W. B. Ayre.
Solo, "An Old Sacred Lullaby"—Corner; Capt. Campbell.
Solo, "Angels ever Bright and Fair"—Handel; Miss Ida Glendinning.
Chorus, "The Heavens are Telling" (Creation)—Hayden.

The Inter-Church and Methodist National Campaign.

In his message to the Methodist Church, of which he is the General Superintendent, the Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., says: "This is no time for a timid Church. All things are possible to a Church preaching a red-blooded Gospel with a big objective and a mighty faith."
"The Church of Christ is the world's only social hope, and the sole promise of peace," said Field Marshal Haig recently, and it is to realize this hope that Methodists are planning with their fellow-Christians of other communions to equip their Church's enterprises for a vastly greater service.

"The way in which the Inter-Church Forward Movement has operated in the Canadian Churches has been characteristic of the various participating communions. Among Anglicans it was inaugurated with a letter from the house of Bishops, while the other four Communions issued a joint manifesto. "This was last October, but the Presbyterians had been canny and wisely at work, with organization for many months. The Methodists were scheduled to commence a very intensive effort in October, but in hundreds of congregations there was a late start, but what bids fair to be a whirlwind finish. The Baptists and Congregationalists have been true to their liking for making the congregation the unit, while the Methodists particularly have developed an elaborate organization from National Headquarters down through Conference and District meetings to Circuit and congregation."

"Money is the acid test" is the slogan which missionary leaders have shouted in the ears of the people for years. Now the whole Methodist Church is applying this test in a big way to its people in every congregation. The reality of the professions of willingness to serve, and work, and give, as made in the earlier months of the Methodist National Campaign, is now being tested by a financial drive for an amount of money which means $10 per member throughout the whole denomination.

People outside the Church will not be slow to accept the truth of the statement, "Money is the acid test of spirituality in the Church." Is money spiritual? Would four millions of dollars look very spiritual to you? The answer depends on the way the money is to be used. The Methodist Church proposes to use its financial objective of FOUR million dollars as follows:—$1,500,000 to equip and extend the missions which have barely held their own during the war; $1,500,000 to be added to the present endowment fund of $1,000,000 now possessed by the Superannuation Fund; $1,500,000 for the current needs of all the departments which feel the pinch of the high cost of living, and $700,000 to place on a permanent sound basis the Church's nineteen Colleges.

The press has heard much of the great gifts of rich Methodists. These men, however, have been the first to insist that no financial consideration be allowed to stand in the way of devotional and evangelistic effort. Methodism has arranged a continuation campaign, and as soon as the financial objective has been reached, a great Evangelistic Campaign will begin from Victoria, in the Pacific Ocean to Hamilton Inlet in the North Atlantic.

The foregoing extracts are furnished by communications from headquarters in Toronto, and are published with the hope that they may be inspirational to the members of the Churches in Newfoundland.—M. F.

The Ancients Used Dried Milk.

While the "spray process" by which KLIM is produced is a recent invention, the preserving of milk for future use was practiced long before the dawn of the Christian era. Thousands of years ago, the Arabs preserved milk for their long desert trips by allowing it to sour. This sour milk was either dried or wrapped in thin skins in its curd state. It was a staple food, being eaten fried, or uncooked mixed with dates. The Laplanders have a method of preserving milk that is at least unique. Cranberries are mixed with fresh milk and the mixture placed in a reindeer skin, soured, and frozen solid. When Mrs. Laplander calls for milk, her hubby grabs his trusty axe and breaks off a chunk which his good wife proceeds to thaw out and use. It is recorded by ancient travellers and historians that the Tartars were the first to adopt the correct principle in preserving milk, i.e.—drying. Early in the eighth century these people were producing dry milk by evaporating the water content by pouring the milk on a stone exposed to the sun's rays. The Tartars were a very warlike people, constantly raiding neighbouring countries, and no doubt their need on these expeditions of an easily transportable food led to the discovery of the value of dried milk.

The twentieth century discovery of the "spray process" enables the house-keeper to purchase dried milk in one pound tins. The Newfoundland price is 65 cents per tin which makes a gallon of rich delicious pasteurized milk, with the particular advantage of making only just what amount of milk is actually required at the time. It is known as "KLIM" and satisfied users are the best advertisement. Why not try it today?

Foch!

Sing of his glory till the stars
Take up this song, across the night,
"The man of God in Battle is triumphant!"

Sing of his glory,
Won on the field,
Where Justice reined
And oft was called upon to yield,
Of wavered and as oft appealed
To manhood's soul that strength
revelled,
Undreamed in ages gone;
But still the foeman's legions stealed
In restlessness, pressed on,
For man was vain
And earth lay shuddering in pain;
Then came the shield
Of God that healed
The nations 'once again!

Who was it bore
That shield before
Our Allied armies evermore—
Who brought the foe to overthrow
And retribution swift to know?
Whose name in lustre long shall grow
On many an alien shore?

What strength availed in that dark hour
When stronger grew the foeman's power,
And Science with savants proud
The Name of God had disallowed,
Had failed? That faith of thine
"Gray man of Christ,"
So strong, who sought,
The tabernacle ere you fought
And begged for strength Divine!

Rear, Holy Ghost! more men like this
Of stalwart standing souls,
Till from the earth the dark'ning mist
Of doubt forever rolls;
Until again the sons of men
Shall magnify the Word,
"And the races come together
And the kings to serve the Lord!"
—DAN CARROLL.

THE STORE OF GOOD OVERCOATS.—Please note that we say "GOOD" overcoats. That means more than usual this season. For while there's a fair supply of substitutes—poorly made and of inferior fabrics—the shortage in really fine overcoats is the greatest we've ever known. Only by the most strenuous efforts can we keep an adequate supply on hand.

But assurance of high quality isn't the only advantage we offer our overcoat customers. Our greater value-giving is unusually conspicuous this season by reason of our having placed tremendous orders long before prices advanced so drastically. In fact, few, if any, of our Overcoats could be bought at wholesale to-day at the prices we are selling them for. KUP-FENHEIMER OVERCOATS.

Glencoe at Placentia.

S.S. Glencoe arrived at Placentia yesterday from Louisbourg with a cargo of coal for the Reid Nfld. Co. It is very probable that the ship will be taken off the Sydney service, as ice conditions in the Gulf of St. Lawrence are such as to prevent an unhealthful vessel of the Glencoe class from crossing with them.

Obituary.

MRS. JOSIAH BADCOCK.
The public of Cupids were surprised by the sad news that Mrs. Badcock had been suddenly struck down by the hand of death on Tuesday evening the 27th inst. She had been ill for some time, suffering from asthma and weakness of the heart, but no apprehension was felt that her end was so near. Sitting in her chair fully dressed, while her husband was engaged with some household duty, she exclaimed, calling him by name, "I am going," and then quietly breathed her last and fell asleep. The deceased lady possessed a quiet, amiable disposition, always endeavouring to add to the happiness of those around her and to perform acts of kindness. She was a member of the Methodist Church and an active worker so far as her strength permitted, in connection with the Ladies' Aid and kindred organizations. In addition to her sorrowful husband, she was engaged with a husband for whom great sympathy is felt in the community, she is survived by an aged mother, to whom she was ever an affectionate and dutiful daughter, and one sister, Mrs. Hunt, residing in the Annapolis Valley, Nova Scotia. Persons like Mrs. Badcock, who live the quiet, pure, blameless life, do much to soften earth's sorrows and to heighten its joys.
"Beyond this vale of tears,
There is a life above,
Unbroken by the flight of years,
And all that life is love."
—Com.

MRS. MARTIN IVANY.

With deep regret we chronicle the death of Mrs. Martin Ivany, 37 Charlton Street, at the age of 82 years. The deceased had a paralytic stroke just after the drowning of her son, Gordon, on the ill-fated S.S. Florisel, and Private John Alfred, who was killed in Cambrai, France. In August last, she had another attack, and on the 28th inst. she had the final stroke. She leaves behind a husband, one son, Rendell, of Horwood's Lumber Company, one daughter, Queenie, and two grandchildren; also two sisters, Mrs. George Noseworthy of this city, and Mrs. John Howell, sr., of Valleyfield, B.E.—Com.

To-day's Messages.

THE LATEST AMBASSADOR.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.
The Russian Soviet Government has succeeded in transmitting $150,000 to its Ambassador in the United States. The money was sent by couriers, ten of whom reached Washington and another ten were intercepted in Finland or Germany. Some of the latter were shot. This statement was made today by Ludvig Martena, Bolshevik Ambassador to the United States, before a Senate Committee investigating Bolshevik propaganda in the United States. Martena also submitted a list of 941 concerns, including some of the biggest manufacturers in the country, who were willing to trade with Soviet Russia.

SHIP BROKE IN TWO.
NEW YORK, Jan. 30.
The American tank steamer Mislerero, from Matanzas, Cuba, Jan. 23, for Philadelphia, broke in two and sank at sea, according to a wireless message received here today by the Naval Commissions Service. One boat in which was the chief officer and seventeen men was picked up by the steamer Ozette, and another boat with the captain and 23 men is still missing. The Mislerero was owned by the Cuba Distilling Co. and she carried a cargo of 1,600,000 gallons of molasses in bulk.

ART TREASURES DESTROYED.
NEW YORK, Jan. 30.
Art treasures valued at $750,000 were destroyed in a fire which swept through the annex of the American Fine Arts building, West Fifty-eighth Street, today. While the fire was raging, 1,100 students, including 200 young women, marched in safety from the neighbouring building. The total loss is expected to exceed a million.

THE QUEEN'S MISTAKE.
LONDON, Jan. 30.
Queen Mary made the mistake, recently, of wearing a huge grey fox muff when attending a meet of the West of Norfolk Foxhounds. Just before the pack was started, one of the hounds spied the muff, gave tongue and made for it. Soon most of the pack swarmed about the Queen to the great delight of the King and considerable discomfort of the Queen. The master of hounds finally extricated the Queen without damage.

BAF FOR BOSTON.
BOSTON, Jan. 30.
Diversion to other ports, of steamships bound here, was begun today because of a strike of 1,200 freight handlers. With dock space scanty, and wharves high, with accounts pending, the Shipping Board steamer "National Bridge" was ordered by wireless to bring her cargo from Chilean ports to New York instead of to this port. Fifteen other vessels are due within a few days and if a settlement is not in sight the most of them will be similarly diverted.

HOPES ASQUITH WILL WIN.
LONDON, Jan. 30.
"Spectator", in the Weekly Unionist Review, hopes on the whole that Mr. Asquith will win the Premier's office in the next election. He says that his definite opposition to the Labor Party is of the first importance, for he has read the signs of the times aright.

A GOOD ADVERTISEMENT.
NEW YORK, Jan. 30.
Clinton Brainard, President of Harper and Brothers, publishers, was fined $1,000 today for publishing a book which the Court regarded as immoral. The Company was fined the same amount. The book in question was a novel entitled "Madeline."

KILLED BY FANATIC.
SOFIA, Jan. 30.
M. Takeff, former Minister of Public Works, and Minister of Interior in the Malinoff Cabinet of 1918, was assassinated at Peschira, near Philippopolis, on January 24. The assassin is described as a young fanatic.

WANT INDEPENDENT REPUBLIC.
LONDON, Jan. 30.
Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, speaking on his return from Ireland, where he and his colleagues made a ten days tour of inspection and inquiry, says the people there frankly declare for an independent Republic. This spirit, he said, is not confined to Dublin resentments.

ONE AND ONE.
DUBLIN, Jan. 30.
At the election for Mayor in Derry today, O'Boherly, a Nationalist, was chosen. In Sligo a Sinn Feiner was elected to the Mayoralty.

SOLID MAJORITY.
PARIS, Jan. 30.
The Cabinet of Premier Millerand was given a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies today, at a session attended by virtually all the members. The vote was 513 in favor of Ministry to 70 against it and with no abstentions for voting.

A QUESTION OF RIGHT.
LONDON, Jan. 30.
The question of the right of Brazil to sell German merchant ships, which were interned in Brazilian ports during the war, is being discussed in Paris by the Allies commission, which is debating the problem of the ultimate disposition of such vessels. The understanding here is that both France and United States are negotiating for the purchase of the vessels Brazil holds.

REPUBLICAN FLAG HOISTED.
DUBLIN, Jan. 30.
When the new Municipal Council, composed mostly of Sinn Feiners, met for the first time today, there was the greatest enthusiasm by big crowds as a Republican flag was hoisted on the City Hall.

RE-ORGANIZING THE TERRIERS.
LONDON, Jan. 30.
Winston Churchill, outlining the reorganization of Territorial forces, said they would be organized as a Territorial Army comprising fourteen Divisions, approximating as closely as possible the Regular Army Divisional makeup. Churchill declared the Territorials would not be sent to foreign war theatres unless they volunteered for this service, and unless Parliament authorized it and the reserves had been called up.

CHURCH TOTALLY DESTROYED.
TORONTO, Jan. 30.
Westminster Presbyterian Church, Bloor Street, this city, was destroyed by fire this evening while the men of the church were holding a banquet in the building in connection with the Inter-Church Forward Movement and the ladies of the church were waiting on them when the smell of smoke disturbed the gathering. In a short time it was realized that the church building was doomed. The flames spread so rapidly that it was a case of every body grabbing coats, wraps and hats and making as hurried an exit as possible to escape death in the flames. Only the walls were left this morning. The loss is estimated at about $75,000.

McMurdo's Store News.
SATURDAY, Jan. 30.
Why it should have taken this consignment of Perfume so long to reach us, it would be idle to enquire just now; what is more to the point is that we have now ready for sale a quantity of the famous Mary Garden and Lilas de Rigand Perfumes which we had been expecting for some time. These perfumes need no introduction to most of the readers of this bulletin, for they are popular in a wide sense among our lady customers. We have two sizes of each of these perfumes, which sell respectively at $2.75 and $4.00 a bottle, and are as good value at that price as any perfumes we have. Just getting over a cold? Take a bottle of Gaults' Od Liver Oil Compound. It will set you up finely. Price $1 a bottle.

Off Wind at Channel.
According to a report from Channel, received here last night, the wind was off shore there, and the ice in the harbor was driving off. Should the present wind continue for any length of time the port of Sydney will be hopelessly blocked, as usually the ice driving off shore from Cape Ray West and North West, makes a straight course for Cape Breton Island.

Shipping Notes.
S.S. Meigle was at Port aux Basques yesterday, awaiting a change in ice conditions before proceeding to Sydney or Louisburg, to load freight for this port.
S. S. Sachem was reported 60 miles E. N. E. of Cape Race at 10 o'clock this morning. She is not making much headway.
S. S. Brighton is due from Halifax today.
S. S. Rosalind was to leave New York at noon today for Halifax.
S. S. Clyde was engaged in cutting up the harbor ice this morning. Being fully laden, she sailed through with ease.
Schr. Admiral Drake is loading fish at Barr's for Gibraltar for orders.
S. S. Cranley is sailing for Halifax today. The tug Ingraham and John Greene broke the ice near Shear's pier of allow her to get out.
Schr. Mary arrived from Gibraltar to Burin yesterday, salt laden to W. and T. Hollett.

Police Court.
A drunk was dismissed.
A resident of Hamilton Avenue was charged with having an iron instead of a brick chimney in his house. He was ordered to have a brick one put in or do without a stove.
A city painter had two men summoned for assaulting him. They were each fined $5.

The Market.

Trade Review.
COD FISH.—There are very few transactions in dry codfish these days owing to the ice blockade as well as a slackening off in the demand in the markets of Southern Europe. As Lent comes on the 13th February it is likely that the demand will improve from now on.
Oporto market is congested with some 70,000 qtls. this week, and only 4,000 consumption.
The minimum price set by the Fisheries Department here for Italy has been reduced considerably, and it is said that importers in Spain and Portugal are holding off for corresponding terms. The quotation for shore fish hard cured in the local market is $11.00 to $11.50 and Labrador $8.50 to $9.00.

COD OIL.—Very small stocks are held here now both of common and medicinal. The price of common is, owing to scarcity, getting firmer and good oil will now fetch $300 per tun, in the local market. The general price is $290.00.
The refined oil of the 1919 catch is nearly all exported. The price today is $2.50 to $2.60 per gallon, according to quality, and as there is very little left on hand the price is likely to advance fifty to seventy-five cents more, before the close of the season for old oil.

Belt Line Not to Run.
Work of clearing the street car tracks is being continued today. It is not likely that the belt line service will be resumed before a thaw sets in. It is the present intention of the Company to run the cars east to Cavendish Square or Ordnance Street. The section from there to St. Patrick's Hall cannot be cleared owing to high snow banks on either side. The cars will run up Theatre Hill as far as St. Patrick's Hall.

Coastal Boats.
GOVERNMENT.
S. S. Prospero is still frozen in at Green Bay.
S. S. Portia left Belleoram at 11 o'clock today, coming this way.
CROSBIE & CO.
S. S. Earl of Devon, which had been at Bay Bulls, arrived in port at 11 o'clock today.
REIDS'
Argyle at Placentia.
Clyde at St. John's.
Glencoe arrived at Placentia at 3 p.m. yesterday.
Home at St. John's.
Kyle not reported leaving North Sydney.
Meigle at Port aux Basques.
Petrel at St. John's.
Sagons at St. John's.

Here and There.
BELOW ZERO LAST NIGHT.—The thermometer registered 2 below zero last night in the city.
SHEBA MAKES PORT.—S. S. Sheba, with freight from Sydney, made port at two o'clock today.
People who buy Old-fashioned Preserves buy the best. Strictly home-made.—Jan 31, Feb 2, 4
C. L. B. DANCE.—The Warrant and N.C.O.'s of the C. L. B. are now making arrangements for a dance to be held in the Armoury on Feb. 16th.
OPORTO MARKET.—Stocks (Nfld): This week, 74,285 qtls.; last week, 70,257. Consumption: This week, 4,000 qtls.; last week, 3,428.
ICE CONDITIONS.—Ice conditions in Pogo and Seldom were unchanged today. Cape Spear reports ice moving off from the shore.
KYLE AT SYDNEY.—The steamer Kyle is still held at Sydney on account of the ice blockade, and she will have to remain there until a change of wind sets the jam off shore.
MAILS GO BY TEAM.—A team with mails for the Southern Shore left here this morning for Tor's Cove, where the mails will be transferred for sections as far as Renewa.
C. M. B. C.—The C.M.B.C. will meet in the Synod Building tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon at 3 p.m., when His Excellency the Governor will visit the Class and speak to the men.

Have you tried the Old-fashioned Preserves? Nothing but fresh fruit and granulated sugar enter their composition. Strictly home-made.—Jan 31, Feb 2, 4
KNIGHTS' DANCE.—The Knights of Columbus will entertain their lady friends on Monday night to a dance in the rooms. The C.C.C. Band will furnish the music, and the affair no doubt will be a great success.

California Sunkist Oranges, all sizes: California Apples, Lemons, Walnuts, Hazel Nuts, Brazilian Nuts, Almond Nuts, wholesale and retail at GLEESON'S, 103 Water St.—Jan 30, 21
BREAKING HARBOR ICE.—The S.S. Clyde, assisted by the John Green and Ingraham, were engaged breaking up the ice in the harbor yesterday. The Clyde opened a channel as far as Chainrock and made a passage way for the J. A. McKee.

Great Deal of Pride
That We Announce
The Opening of Our
24th Annual February Sale
Monday, February 2nd

Great preparations have been made for this great annual event and we are pleased to say that this year's offerings are much better in regard to Value, Variety and Quality than the offerings of a year ago.

To the many customers who have attended this sale in past seasons we cannot impress upon them too strongly the fact that they should not miss this year's Sale, as it will be one of the best, if not the best, we have ever held.

To The People Who Have Not Benefited By Our Annual February Sales:--

The February Sale has been a feature of this house for the past twenty-four years. We started in a small way, but, to-day it is one of the biggest and busiest events of the year. It is the Sale that appeals strongest to the people of St. John's and suburbs and is eagerly awaited as the time of supplying one's needs for many months ahead.

Veterans Re-Training.

Two Hundred Men Now Receiving Courses - Seventeen Considered Yesterday.

At the regular meeting of the Civil Re-Establishment Committee, held at the Militia Department yesterday afternoon, Hon. J. M. Kent presided, and the following were in attendance: Mr. H. F. Cowan, Vice-Chairman; Dr. W. W. Blackall, Vocational Officer; Capt. Gerald Byrne, M.C., Secretary; Lieut.-Col. Geo. T. Carty, Rev. Dr. L. Curtis, Capt. Leo Murphy, Dr. V. P. Burke, Major B. Butler, D.S.O., M.C., Major J. W. March, M.C., Major W. H. Parsons, M.C., and Capt. J. B. O'Reilly. Twenty-two applications were read for courses in re-training, and of that number 17 were granted. Several claims from Canadian soldiers now resident in Newfoundland were also considered and disposed of under the regulations of the nearby Dominion.

The report of the Employment Sub-Committee showed that 13 men had been placed in positions since Friday last, and that 83 men were still without work. Mr. H. F. Cowan, with Major March and Capt. Murphy, are endeavouring to secure berths at the ice for some of the veterans, and they reported that the reception they had received to date from the city mercantile firms showed every encouragement for a temporary relief of the situation.

A full report on the question of Land Settlement has been prepared by the Vocational Officer, and he and Hon. J. M. Kent will interview the Minister of Agriculture and Mines next week with regard to the matter. Circular letters are being distributed this week to all men who have made application for employment, and a follow-up system has been introduced, so that all veterans who have found work in the city will have an opportunity of making any reasonable complaints and employers will be similarly assisted, inasmuch as they will have an opening to explain the satisfaction or otherwise that they receive from their veteran employees. Much regret was expressed over the resignation of Mr. A. H. Whitman, under whose direction the C. R. E. School at the Synod Hall was organized, and who was likewise responsible for the formation of the Engineering School. Mr. Whitman retires to accept a more promising position in Canada, but the good effect of his work in the city is fully appreciated by all the vets, who have been trained under his direction.

With the adoption of the minutes of the previous session, and the acceptance of the payroll, etc., the meeting terminated at 6.40 p.m.

In the Prize Ring.

PENTIER MESMERIST MANAGER

New York, Jan. 17.—Apparently Dempsey will have to fight two men when he meets Georges Carpentier for the world heavyweight championship, if the deductions of a London writer are correct. According to authority Descamps, manager of Carpentier, possesses some sort of a psychic eye with which he cast a spell over Beckett in the recent battle in London with the result that the pugilist had an easy task in knocking out the befuddled Britisher. In the words of the discoverer, "The alleged dual combination which confronted poor Beckett during the 70 seconds he stood before Carpentier, the strange influence made its effects felt as follows: "There was two personalities fighting Joe Beckett, from the moment he entered the ring. Carpentier was one. The other was Descamps, his manager. Descamps is a very excitable man. He is a bundle of nerves, a typically French, over-dramatic, comes from very pore. He does not utter a word. He exudes. "Descamps says that when Carpen-

Long-Standing Evil

Effective Measures Taken

Since childhood Miss A. Call was under the shadow of a great evil, which always menaced his comfort and safety. Read what he says: "I was troubled with my kidneys since childhood and spent a large amount of money trying to get cured. Instead of getting better, I kept getting worse until a friend of mine advised me to try Gin Pills. I did so, and after taking one box, I was able to get out of bed and walk around. Two more boxes relieved me completely, and since then I have had no return of the trouble." Many people have kidney and bladder trouble without knowing it. They think nothing of the backache, the aches in the sides, the constant headaches, the rheumatic, sciatic and neuralgic pains, the floating specks before the eyes, the swollen joints, the highly-colored urine—all signs of trouble—all signs which should receive immediate attention and treatment with Gin Pills, which are by far the most effective of all preparations, and which may help you to avoid a fatal operation. They quickly relieve pain and heal the congested tissues, bringing the organs back to normal. At druggists and dealers, 50c a box. Money back if no relief. Send for free sample. The National Drug & Chemical Co., 11 Canada, Limited, Toronto, United States Address, No. 225-C, Inc., 225 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

tier meets Jack Dempsey Carpentier will win in six rounds. Watch Descamps. He is the man who is aiding Carpentier with all mental force. His mentality accompanies Carpentier in the ring every fight. He is unshakable, silent partner, and to him as much as to Carpentier is Beckett indebted for the blow on the jaw which finished the fight and took the championship of Europe out of his reach. "What was Descamps doing as Beckett came into the ring. Those who were near him tell me he was watching Beckett intently. The fact is he began to fight Beckett, as soon as Beckett stepped into the ring. Beckett was constantly glancing around at Carpentier as he was getting his gloves adjusted. There you have the personality of Descamps beginning to work; impinging its task of confusing the English boxer's thoughts. Possible Descamps is not quite conscious of his own power, but it is there all the same. This projecting of personality is not hypnotism, but it is to be seen operating everywhere. "Descamps, they say, feels every defeat of Carpentier as a defeat for himself. If you took Descamps' mind to analytical table you would find that he would make a first class medium. He is a physis subject. His personality stand up to Carpentier in every match, for he has trained Carpentier's mind as well as his body. Carpentier acts as Descamps wills. That is why Beckett made the mistake at Holborn stadium. Carpentier alone he might have beaten. Carpentier and Descamps were too much for him.

DEMPSEY WASN'T A DRAFT DODGER.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 17.—Denial of charges that Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world was "a draft dodger" and "slacker" and defense of his conduct during the war were made by Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, in a signed statement issued here to-day as follows: "Dempsey was not a 'draft dodger' during the war. Any one who makes such a charge cannot support it with facts. "When the draft came Dempsey was placed in Class 4-A, because he was married and, in addition, was supporting a mother, an invalid brother and a sister. Dempsey made no claims for exemption. "Some time later the Draft Board, readjusting classifications, placed Dempsey in Class 1-A, but almost immediately afterwards, put him in Class 2-B. He remained there during the rest of the war. If the conflict had lasted a few weeks longer it seems a certainty he would have been in the uniformed service. "Kearns recounted Dempsey's services as a riveter in Philadelphia and Seattle shipyards and added: "He also was appearing in fistic contests at benefits for the different war charities. By this means approximately $100,000 was raised for the various war funds. "Dempsey paid his own travelling expenses and boxed without remuneration and frequently was 'broke' as a consequence. "Those who are charging Dempsey with being a 'slacker' because he worked in the shipyard and helped to raise nearly $100,000 for the various war charities are smudging the reputation of every other exemption man who served the nation in the army at home."

TITLE BOUT TO BE HELD IN NEWARK.

New York, Jan. 17.—The Benny Leonard-Johnny Dundee match that was to have been held in New Haven will be staged in Newark on February 8. The match received a world of publicity, which the promoters are anxious to capitalize before interest in the affair dies out, but February 8 is the first available date. Dundee and Leonard have met many times, and always the contest was a good one. However, it was the twenty-round feature of the New Haven affair that made it appeal to the fans to such an extent that the gate receipts promised to go over $100,000. There also was a strong belief that this time Leonard meant to put over the C. O. D. wallop which has so long been delayed. That feature of the match will make it attractive even though it has been cut to eight rounds.

HOW YOU CAN TELL GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all. There is only one Aspirin, that marked with the "Bayer Cross"—all other tablets are only acid imitations. Look for the "Bayer Cross"! Then it is real Aspirin, for which there is no substitute. Aspirin is not German but is made in America, and is owned by an American Company, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government. Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" have been proved safe by millions for Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis. Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages, can be had at any drug store. Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761) of Bayer Manufacture of Monosaccharide-dester of Salicylicacid. The Bayer Co., Inc., U.S.A.

you hear to the contrary, and I believe I will be able to condition myself a year from now as easily as I did at Toledo. "Every fellow who has ever been champion always had to stand for a lot of rumors about his conduct after winning a title, and I have been no exception to the rule. I have heard the tales the busybodies have been telling of me; how I threw the bridle off after beating Willard, and I let myself run loose; but as long as I know I am all right myself, I do not have to get excited over such yarns. "Expected Carpentier to Win. Before Carpentier licked Beckett, tales came floating across the water about how the Frenchman was just a shell of his former self. They said he had dissipated a great deal during the war and had smoked cigarettes incessantly, and gone away off condition generally, but I guess his fight with Beckett disproved all those stories. "I thought Carpentier would win all right, but I was surprised at the suddenness of his victory. It reminded me somewhat of that day I met Fred Fulton at Harrison, N.J. Some folks

DEMPSEY'S VIEWS OF CARPENTIER.

I have just sent for Bill Tate. I have sent for Bill Tate because I am going to start getting ready for Georges Carpentier. That's what I think of Carpentier's defeat of Joe Beckett, the British champion, and of Carpentier's challenge to me. I think the Frenchman is almost certain to be my next opponent, or, rather, my first opponent, since I won the heavyweight championship of the world. So I have sent for Bill. Bill is my sparring partner. He is a long, lean, brown-skinned fellow, who worked with me at Toledo when I was getting myself ready for Willard. He was one of the few sparring partners I have ever been able to keep around my camp for more than a few days at a time. Folks say I am too rough with my sparring partners. I honestly am not intentionally rough, but I train almost as hard as I fight, so I guess I sometimes belt the boys around a little more than fellows who know more about gymnasium work. Bill crumpled up on me once or twice at Toledo, at that, but he never quit me for good. "Great Training Partner. He is a great fellow to train with, because he is fast, and clever, and takes a good punch. I mean he can stand a strong punch. He can punch back pretty well, too, as any one who saw our training bouts at Toledo will testify, so I rather like to work with him. "I am going to put in a few hours every day with Bill, loosening myself up gradually, and making ready for the real training siege. "Granting that I box Carpentier inside of a year, I will need about a month of hard training. I take pretty fair care of myself, no matter what are saying now that Beckett was a dub, but before he met Carpentier they claimed he was a world-beater. After I beat Fulton in a couple of punches everybody said he was a dub, yet since Fred has gone on and whipped some other fellows a lot of the people who said he was a dub are now claiming I ought to give him another chance, and suggesting that he might beat me, at that. I do not agree to that last view, but it shows that I must have beaten a pretty good man, after all. "You cannot take any credit away from Carpentier because he licked Beckett so quickly. It is a tough job to knock out any fighter in a punch, and I do not care if the fight is the dubbiest kind of a dub. I think the very fact that the Frenchman stopped Beckett so early proves Carpentier a good man. "Will be Ready After April 1. Naturally, I expect to beat him, but I am not going to underrate him. I know that many champions have frequently made the mistake of holding their opponent too cheap, and I am going to avoid that mistake. I am told that Carpentier can beat any man he can hit, so I expect to take pains to keep from getting hit. "I know he is a fast boxer and a smart fellow in the ring. I keep fairly well posted on my own business, you know. I am familiar with every big fellow in the ring, not only the old ones, but the youngsters who are coming on. I am not setting myself up the smartest fellow that ever held a championship by any means, but I do think I have common sense, and common sense tells me to keep in touch with events in my own line. "I will be ready to fight Carpentier almost any time after the first of April. I have a moving picture contract on my hands just now, but it will terminate along about the first of March. If Carpentier says he does not want to fight for a year, I suppose I will have to wait that year out, but he is not going to be any younger, or any stronger than I am at the end of the year. "I do not care much where the fight is held. Of course my preference is America, because I am an American. I won my title over here, and I would like to defend it here, but if necessary I will meet him in London or Paris. "Some people have suggested that I run the risk of being jobbed out of my title if I go abroad. I think that is borrowing a lot of trouble, and I have no fear whatever of such a thing. It is my intention to end the fight, if possible, in a way that will preclude the possibility of a job. Anyway, I do not believe that there are enough poor sportsmen in all France, or all England, to undertake a job. "Expects Hard Battle. I honestly look forward to meeting Carpentier with a lot of interest. So much has been written of him and said of him that I feel as if I half know him, and he must be a very remarkable young fellow in many ways. We are about the same age and spring from much the same sort of people. He comes of a coal mining crowd, while my people were agricultural, as much as anything else, but good middle class stock like Carpentier's. "He worked in a coal mine as a kid, and I worked in the gold and silver mines. I guess he had just as hard a time as I did when he was a youngster, at that. Can you imagine us getting offers up to $300,000 for a fight? It seems to me we have a right to be proud over coming up so far in the world. "I look for Carpentier to give me a tough fight. I will not be surprised if it is the toughest fight I ever had in all my life, and I have had some tough ones. I want to be ready to the minute. "So I have sent for Bill.—New York American.

Nature's Greatest Washers

The sea washes the world—Pears' Soap washes its inhabitants!

For over a century, Pears' has been making its way round the world. Ask for it in your local store; it is there! From the Cape to Cairo, in the bazaars of India, throughout Australia, Canada, the U.S., and South America Pears' has made its way with civilization,—on merits!

Pears' Soap is transparent because it is pure; it is the most economical soap because it wears but does not waste. It cleanses and purifies the skin and freshens up body and mind.

Pears'

is not heavily scented. Its delicate perfume comes from pure natural ingredients; the difference is natural,—it means again that Pears' soap is pure.

Wellington and Napoleon.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE EARLY AMBITIONS OF THE IRON DUKE AND THE LITTLE CORPORAL.

(Atlantic Leader.)

The boundary line between success and failure, like the same sort of line between the sublime and the ridiculous, is sometimes very narrow and indistinct. If it is true, as some metaphysicians claim, that "thoughts are things," the only real things, then we must put down in the failure list two of the most famous men in all the annals of the race. I refer to the brace of mortals known in history as the Duke of Wellington and Napoleon Bonaparte.

What a different thing the history of the world would have been had these men been permitted to have their way in early manhood and settled down into the places they most desired!

In the realm of history, as well as in that of eschatology, we are often moved to exclaim, "before what slender threads hang everlasting things!" It has come to light within the last quarter century that the mighty Captain who dealt Napoleon that solar plexus blow at Waterloo grew very tired of the army when young in the service and tried hard to quit it for another job.

And pray, what was that other job? Shades of destiny! It was the office of Irish Commissioner of EXCISE! Such was the job that the young soldier strove for with might and main; and it is written that when he failed to land the prize the disappointment nearly broke his heart.

If Arthur Wellesley had secured the plum he worked for so strenuously the probabilities are that he would not have become the "Iron Duke"; and with no Iron Duke the chances are that there would have been no Waterloo and no return of the Bourbons.

A little more "pull," and the man who sent the great emperor hurtling from his throne to die on a lonely rock in the ocean, would have passed his life gauging beer casks and whisky barrels!

But the other side of the strange story is yet to be told. The man upon whose downfall Wellington finally mounted to immortality was early noted for his great mathematical ability. The problems that make the head of the average student ache appear to have been a delightful pastime to the young Bonaparte. In fact the scrawny-faced young Corsican loved his Euclid as the bear loves honey, and long before he had ever dreamed of becoming an Alexander or a Caesar he was planning to shine as professor of mathematics. It was in the field of conic sections and surveying rather than in that of conquest and glory that he desired to excel. The vaulting ambition which finally overleaped itself and landed him at St. Helena after devouring millions of human lives, had not developed itself, and Napoleon's great desire was not to fill a throne but to occupy the chair of mathematics.

It is said that when defeated in his aim the young man's brow was darkened with the scowl which later on was to make him the terror of the world.

Disappointed in the matter that was closest to his heart, Napoleon, rather than to meet with failure all along the line, turned his attention to the military science. If he could not be a professor of mathematics he would try his hand at soldiering.

When you want to make flaky biscuit, delicious muffins and gems, real doughnuts and cake of fine texture—then you need

RUMFORD BAKING POWDER

THE WHOLESOME DEVELOPED

We may boldly affirm that the school children of to-day would be studying a different map of the world provided Napoleon had been permitted to become a professor of mathematics rather than a lieutenant of artillery at Toulan and Commander of the Army of Italy.

Strange are the orderings of destiny! And may we not conclude that they are as wise as they are strange? Wellington was from all accounts a man of sterling honesty and integrity, and it is pretty certain that had he been successful in the line of his exerts and ambition he would have given a square deal to both maker and consumer of ardent spirits; but in overthrowing the Napoleonic rule he did humanity a greater service than he would have done in giving the people of the British Isles pure liquor to drink.

And as for Napoleon, forceful and illuminating as he would unquestionably have been in the chair of mathematics, he did a much greater work in clearing the political atmosphere of Europe and ending the reign of Feudalism and the cruel mockery of the "Divine right of Kings."

Minding the Baby.

Many a father is far more competent to look after a baby than the mother. He sleepily looks at it and the baby smiles.

First aid is often necessary in the case of babies. They do a silly thing and then kick up a row because they've done it. Suppose baby has swallowed a thimble? Mother is distracted. She rushes about shrieking and saving she knows the baby will die. What does father do? He remains quite calm. With his strong right-hand he seizes the baby's feet and holds it upside down. "Now, dear," he says to his wife, "watch what comes up." He ought to have said "comes down" but let that pass. She does, and then suddenly she discovers the thimble—on her finger. It was the only place she hadn't searched!

Mothers are not to be trusted. They mean well, but they are far too imaginative. They watch the baby too closely. Nobody likes being watched. They wish their little gums so hard that the first tooth gets nervous and is afraid to come out.

If the tooth doesn't come through exactly when they expect it, they take baby to the doctor.

Then there is the question of language. The words some babies pick up from their mothers are truly terrible. Those stupid words mothers will coin when talking to baby—"diddums—diddums—toddly oodly—goodloogloogoo!" That sort of thing is too bad for baby. He does not grow up with a proper respect for words.

Fathers never offend in that way. They talk to the baby, as man to man instead of as idiot to idiot. Certainly your baby may turn out to be an idiot later on. But why advertise the fact to the world so early?

First Doctors Then a Skin Specialist—Then a bottle of D.D.D.

I will consider it a favor if you will allow me to add my testimonial to the many hundreds you no doubt have in praise of the great results effected by the D.D.D. Prescription. I was a sufferer for two years with eczema on the legs and ankles. I tried three or four different doctors and none of them did me any good. I got tired of trying their remedies, I then went to a skin specialist but he was no better than they. I was reading the Sunday paper and happened to see your ad. I am very glad that I did.

I secured a trial bottle of D.D.D. and it did me so much good that I sent for a dollar bottle, also a cake of soap. That is all I used, and I am perfectly well. I have advised several others to use it and the results have been the same. You are at liberty to use my name for I consider D.D.D. the best remedy in use.

I. W. CORNE,

Anyone suffering from skin trouble—mild or severe—should investigate at once the merits of D.D.D. Try it to-day. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you. Ask your druggist.

D.D.D. THE Lotion for Skin Disease Water on the Brain.

Do you get mentally fagged—and too quickly? Are you conscious that your work suffers from what has been called "mind fog"? Is it pain and tribulation to you to concentrate? Have you to "drive" your brain to make it do its work? Do you admit—to yourself—that your mind seems to have lost its grip, its freshness, its originality? Then it's as likely as not that what you want is water on your brain!

What is the matter with you is absence from drink! As a nation we don't drink enough. Discern not the hand of a prohibitionist here, but the ideal and natural drink is water. The brain and the whole body, needs a lot of it. Six pints per day is the minimum. And—with water still given premier place—it does not greatly matter how you get that amount. Tea, coffee, milk, cocoa, mineral waters, beer, are all mainly water, and each counts. The very small percentage of alcohol in to-day's beer is, within the strict limits of moderate consumption, but a mild tonic stimulant. Spirits are quite taboo for the brain. They may whip for a time, but the last state of a spirit-whipped brain is insanity.

Drink more—more water for preference. You'll see, and feel, the brain difference very rapidly.

Ever thought why it is that American friends are the greatest water drinkers on the face of the earth!

And that's all there is in it! It's the watered brain that does the work. So water it!

Firming Up Against "Reds" the Laws.

The United States is taking no chances, for it is fast making its laws water-tight in respect to banishing the "Reds" from that "land of the free and home of the brave." As this is being written a most drastic section bill is before Congress, containing former laws that were ever dreamed of in the Republic up to this time. Indeed, they are such that, if enacted here, would place a gag in the mouths of many of our favorite orators and put out of business some of our publications. The terms death and deportation stand out boldly in the bill. For instance, if an innocent person is killed as the result of a riot attending a movement to overthrow the Government, or prevent the carrying out of the laws or the decrees of the courts, the death penalty may be invoked against those taking part in the disturbances. The bill further makes it a misdemeanor to exhibit in a public place a red flag or other emblem which tends to incite or indicate a purpose to overthrow the Government.

All associations, societies or other bodies which teach, advise or favor the overthrow of Government, or those who lend their buildings or quarters to this end, are also guilty of a felony, according to this bill. One aim of the bill is to get after the "parlor Bolsheviks," who are thereby prevented from giving aid in any form whatever, being subject to heavy fines and imprisonment. Under the bill all convicted aliens are to be deported, while guilty citizens will be imprisoned, heavily fined and denied the right to hold any office under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government—in other words, they will lose their citizenship.

For the publication that supports any Red movement in contravention to the existing Government, there is also a rod in pickle, in the shape of fines and imprisonment, and deportation if carried on by foreigners. Judging from appearances, there is going to be no nonsense about this Bolshevik business, which, as the recent raids by Government officials indicate, had become very real indeed.—Saturday Night.

Hints for "Hubbies."

"Let the wife have her way in all small things, the husband in great ones!" It was a wise man who said that. Trifles do far more in making up the sum of a woman's happiness than men have any idea of, and if a woman is allowed her own way in petty, niggling details which a man doesn't trouble his head about, she will resign all the larger issues into his hands with perfect satisfaction.

Besides it is a sensible rule all round. When a man begins to meddle with small affairs—little domestic arrangements, insignificant things of that sort—good-bye to household peace. There is no such terrible destroyer of harmony as the man who wanders things according to his own ideas in the house and in its economies; it is not his province, and it never can be, and his interference in it is fatal.

As well might his wife attempt to conduct his business for him, or to settle learned matters in his profession. As for the great decisions of life a woman has seldom the strength or the broad view necessary for making them. A man's experience and more comprehensive view give him a power she does not often possess.

Then, again, all of us like our own way. It is part of human nature to do so. People who "tell" character from the hand say that the length of one joint of the thumb shows a desire for that sort of thing. I should just like to be told if that is so, how many people have a short thumb-joint. The person who doesn't like his or her own way must be as rare as the black swan. It is a pretty universal failing if falling it is. Well, then, to obtain

The Origin of Light Dues.

In the olden days, a man who erected a lighthouse—just as to-day he builds a theatre—hoped to make a fortune from it. As a matter of fact, men who gained permission to place permanent beacons on dangerous parts of our coast made thousands of pounds profit.

This practice of allowing private persons to build lighthouses became very much abused, and was eventually stopped. One man paid $445,000 as the purchase price of a barren rock on which he built a lighthouse.

Of course, the value then of owning a lighthouse lay in the money that was demanded from passing ships. Sir Edward Howard, who built a lighthouse on Dungeness in 1615, collected one penny per ton from vessels passing the lighthouse.

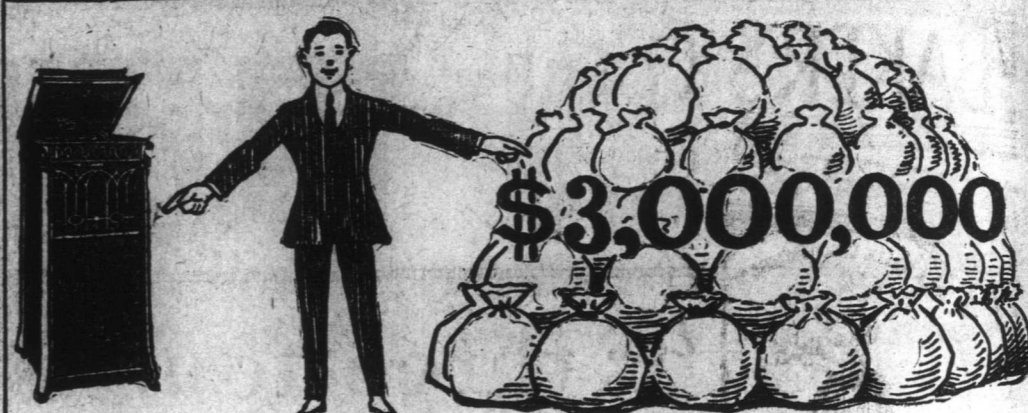

From the cliffs of Dover can be seen the flash of Cape Gris Nez answering the Foreland light. Though to-day both nations loom greatly in the councils of the world, the lights are reminders that at one time they were both conquered by the might of Rome.

In Dover Castle the lower part of the Roman pharos still stands. For the first crude lights which shone from Boulogne and Dover were those erected by the Roman legions. The French call a lighthouse "un phare," the word being derived from the most famous of the early lights, that erected in 270 B.C. on the small island of Pharos in the Bay of Alexandria.

The tower was one of the Seven Wonders of the World, its rays being visible at about forty miles, and the cost estimated at £200,000. It was overthrown by an earthquake in about 1220.

The first British lighthouse seems to have been built at Caister in 1600. The Lowestoft light was then erected, and a man named Probiasher built a light at Ravenspur, having to pay the King £6 13s. 4d. annually.

Navigation would be almost impossible without their aid, and consequently their value to the nation is well-nigh incalculable; so it is astonishing to find that most of these lights were originated by private enterprise.

Nell Gwynn's Chair.

A number of fine examples of old English furniture and woodwork have recently been acquired by the Victoria and Albert Museum, by gift as well as by purchase. Among the chief gifts is a chair of the time of Charles II., selected by Sir George Donaldson from his museum at Hove, and presented to the nation in commemoration of Peace. (Room 58.) The chair, which is of the finest quality, is reputed to have been the property of Nell Gwynne. It is richly carved, with ornaments of the period and possesses an unusual feature in having a crouching lion on each arm. An important gift by Mr. Thomas Sutton, consists of a collection of English tea caddies (Room 56) brought together during the last 30 years by the late Mrs. Sutton. Mostly of small size, and of very delicate workmanship in ivory, tortoiseshell, mother-of-pearl, and elaborately inlaid or painted woods, they form a very interesting group, and show the infinite care and pains with which the English craftsman of the eighteenth century finished their products. The furniture acquired by purchase (Rooms 52 to 60) includes a mahogany chest of drawers, in the manner of Chippendale, of finely figured wood, enriched with carving, and with chased brass handles; a Charles II. walnut cabinet, stand, decorated with oyster pattern inlay and marquetry of flowers and birds; and a miniature bureau, writing cabinet, of the time of Queen Anne, finely lacquered with floral designs in various colours on a yellow ground. Among the furniture of the tall back of which is carved with the initials I. E. S., and the date 1714, the chair was acquired in Berkshire and is said to have belonged to John Winchcombe, alias Smallwood, grandson of John Winchcombe, popularly known as "Jack of Newbury."

An Historic Tour.

The Prince of Wales in Canada.

(J. SAXON MILLS, in "United Empire.")
(Concluded.)

Having joined in a sublime cattle-ride in the "cow country" outside St. John's, the Heir to the British throne was endowed with a title which doubt the Stoney Indians regard as scarcely less dignified than that of the Prince of Wales. Young Thunder, Stoney Chief, proclaimed His Highness head of his tribe under the title of "Chief Morning Star." The Indians were gratified by the visit of their royal visitor in the "dress of eagles' feathers" with elaborate fur decorations. Soon afterwards, the Prince crossed the boundary into that far west-province which, British in deed but in name, has upheld the tradition long on the far Pacific sea-board. Here, by a happy timing arrangement, American warships, with Admiral Rodman on board, were at anchor, and took part in the great welcome. Amid the mighty cedars of the Stanley Park, the Prince made a memorable speech. Looking across the Burrard Inlet this morning, he said, "I got his view of the great Pacific, and myself closer than he had ever seen to the two other great Dominions of the British Commonwealth—Australia and New Zealand—where, in Canada, he had many friends whom he had met on active service during the Great War." He hoped to visit those Dominions very soon. "Just as you are upholding the British institutions in the North American Continent, so they are holding up a pure British civilisation in the Southern Cross." We have space to describe the reception in the beautiful capital of Victoria on Vancouver Island or at New Westminster near Vancouver City. Here elsewhere, a gratifying feature of the festivities was the hearty participation by Labour. The "Bolshevik" is not unknown in the land, but he has no "look in" amid the vast majority of sane-minded and loyal workers.

But we have now touched the farthest West, and must return quickly on our steps. It is now the long trail eastwards, by many a lonely prairie station where stand the unfailing welcome from the vast spaces around. Medicine Hat, Moose Jaw, Swift Current; then Regina, the Saskatchewan capital with its fine Parliament Buildings; then for three days' duck-shooting to Fort Qu'Appelle; and on to Winnipeg where the great trans-continental lines are bound together like the sections of a long fishing-rod. Here the Prince made the interesting announcement that he had become a "rancher" on his own account, having clinched his many tributes to the value and prospects of the West by purchasing a property near Calgary, not very far from the railway and the foothills of the Rockies. "The Western spirit," he said, "is a very catching one; I have caught it badly. I am returning to the old country, realising that the Western provinces are going to influence the future of the British Empire enormously." If they would treat their problems and responsibilities in the British spirit, all would be well.

We must not linger over the Prince's remaining days in Canada—his visit to the silver-mines at Cobalt in Ontario, where he descended a shaft 800 feet deep; the great spectacle of the illuminated Falls at Niagara; the wide-sweeping tour through Ontario, whose place-names are so faithfully copied from the homeland, where the newer Stratford, Woodstock, Chatham, London-Thames are to be found—the last with its Piccadilly, Pall Mall, and Blackfriars. Here at the London of the West, the Prince spoke of his many Canadian impressions. He promised he would be "a very simple sort of farmer, not going into politics at all." But he ventured into politics so far as to say that a young nation like Canada cannot afford to be one-sided. She must have a great industrial as well as agricultural development. The Prince hoped to be often in Canada again. He would return "not merely as a farmer who means to do his best to make good, but as a Canadian for whom everything in Canada has a deep and genuine interest."

So ends this historic tour through Canada. On November 10, at night, the Prince of Wales crossed at Rouse's Point that international frontier which runs for 3,000 miles without a fort or a garrison, and is defended, as His Royal Highness was careful to note, by the material goodwill of the peoples on either side. From Dominion to Republic the Prince passed from an atmosphere of affection to one of friendship, but friendship cordial and enduring. Those who realise the vast importance of holding together in close, if informal, alliance the two great bodies of English-speaking people, will best appreciate the receptions accorded to the heir to the British monarchy by the Republic of the West. British people have read with especial pleasure the accounts of the Prince's visit to President Wilson, one of the greatest in that honoured succession, who was unhappily still confined to his sick-room. We can believe that the British Prince won all hearts by his frank and democratic manner. "Your institutions," he said with a sly humour, "your ways of life, your aims are as democratic as ours," and his hearers were "tickled to death" at the unexpected inversion of the phrase.

The emotions of 1776 have so entirely evaporated that the spectacle of a future King of England laying a wreath on Washington's grave brings no appreciable shock of surprise or any less pleasurable feeling. We have all long ago accepted the facts and learnt the lessons. Having lost the material and formal bond of union, our object must now be to maintain and strengthen the spiritual. British and Americans, we have fought shoulder to shoulder the great fight for world-freedom, and we may interpret the brilliant scenes attending the Prince's visit to the Republic as an historic expression of our material desire to make the bonds of friendship and common purpose between the British Empire and the American Republic as close and enduring as possible.

Books Were Banished.

Chinese Emperor Was Jealous of Collection of Wisdom.

More than two thousand years ago there was in China a splendid royal library—thousands of volumes of history, of geography, of poetry, of philosophy and of works on the arts and sciences.

There came to the throne the Emperor Shih Hungti, who conceived himself to be the greatest man who had ever lived. But when he looked about and saw the great collection of wisdom in this library and in 120 other libraries owned by feudal princes, he despaired of ever mastering it all.

So Shih Hungti ordered that all the books in the royal library be burned, except the "Yi Chang," or "Book of Changes," and works on agriculture, medicine and divination. It was then ordered by the Emperor that the literati be exterminated, and wherever one was reputed to possess the wisdom of the ancients, him the Emperor's vassals slew. And so in the provinces and principalities, as far as the authority of Shih Hungti was recognized, there was a burning of books and a slaying of wise men. And when he had come to the end of these and found there were still dukes and princes who held their lands and their libraries as independent of the emperor, upon those he made war until he had conquered their provinces and their libraries he also burned and had their literati put to the sword.

Thus it came to pass that in the Celestial Empire there was none acknowledged so wise as the great Emperor Shih Hungti. And they called the empire which he thus founded China, or the Empire of Ch'in, that being the name he took, signifying his greatness and his wisdom.

Now there was in that time in China a man named Liu Pan. He was a soldier and unlearned in books, but it was to him a great scandal that wisdom should be possessed by one man. To the Emperor Ch'in he refused to yield his sword, but made war upon him, and in forty-three years he had conquered all the provinces of the Celestial Empire, and him the prince and the dukes acclaimed as emperor in place of Shih Hungti. And he called himself Han, signifying one who conquers, and to him came the wise men, for not all had fallen under the sword of Shih Hungti. They asked the emperor to restore the royal library, for many books had been hidden away.

"I won my empire on horseback, and not by books," replied Liu Pan. "Yes, but you cannot rule it on horseback," responded the wise men. So Liu Pan, who knew he was not the greatest and did not desire to be the wisest man who ever lived, restored the libraries. And the dynasty of Han lasted 400 years and wisdom and poetry flourished in all that time.

THE FROLIC ON THE FLOOR.
I've had my share of gladness and I've had my fill of style, I've been at banquet tables where the hands played all the while, I've been where rich men flattered and I've thought their friendship fine.

And I've claimed some satisfaction from the money that is mine; But I've come to this conclusion, after all before— That I'm happiest when I'm romping with the kids upon the floor.

I've sampled all the pleasures which the old world has to give, I've had the joy of dining in the homes where rich men live, I've heard the ringing laughter of the friends I know are true, And the wit of brilliant mortals and their words of wisdom, too; But there's nothing quite so cheering when you run life's gamut o'er as the laughter of the children and a frolic on the floor.

I've played the game and struggled for a goal I've hoped to win, I've heard the cheers of strangers, but they never sank deep in, I've traveled far for pleasure and I've found it more or less, I've had my share of failure and my portion of success; But for downright satisfaction, let me say it just once more, I must stay at home and frolic with the youngsters on the floor.

Oh, let monarchs have their jewels and the millionaires their gold, Let the brilliant seek men's plaudits—those are joys which soon grow cold.

Now with all that life has taught me as I've traveled on its way, And with all the sweets I've tasted and the glitter and display, I have come to this conclusion—that what all men struggle for are the nights when they can frolic with their children on the floor.

Mainly About People.

Rose V. Nolan, the first woman to receive appointment in the New York county clerk's office, made so great a success at the New York curb market telephone that her tips averaged $3 to $4 a day and she had a candy birthday every week. She is spoken of as the queen of the telephone operators.

Mrs. Hannah Turner, of Pittsfield, is credited by Naval League officials as having knitted more sweaters for the Navy than any other woman in the United States. She knitted 166 sweaters. The average day's work was 15 hours, and she has been known to complete a sweater in eight and a half hours. She keeps house for two brothers doing her own housework. She is 51 years of age and didn't know how to knit until November, 1917. She has not received any official acknowledgment.

Ma Ynaw-Chang, or Ma Shanlew, a new Mohammedan prophet, has 4,000,000 followers in China. Orthodox Mohammedans regard the new cult as scandalously heterodox. He is lavish in his charities. He makes wealthy students pay for the education of the poor ones. His home at Heakow has become a clearing house for charities. No one visits or leaves him empty-handed. He wears a white cap pulled down to his eyebrows.

Harold Parsons, of Boston, has restored to the Roman Forum a valuable antique, a remarkably beautiful horse's head, that was stolen, and for the recovery of which the police of Italy and the world have been searching for the past seven years. Mr. Parsons is a collector and accidentally discovered the head in a little out-of-the-way store in Rome. The Italian Government has officially thanked him.

Dr. Edward E. Slosson, the writer, points out that in the sentence, "At zero hour the barrage was raised and the pollu- and doughboy sprang over the top, sticking their bayonets into the bosches," there are five new words. Zero hour, time set; barrage, line of artillery fire; pollu, French for hairy—roughneck and doughboy, derived from round buttons worn during the Civil War, or adobe huts, inhabited in the Mexican war; boche, from caboché, blockhead.

Charles F. Murphy, who is shortly to retire as chieftain, first assumed the reins of Tammany Hall as part of the famous triumvirate, which included Daniel F. McMahon and Louis F. Haffen. The late Chief Devery, when he broke with the organization, referred to them as Sport, Two Spot and Joke. The last was Devery's characterization of Haffen. McMahon was Two Spot and Murphy was Sport. But Murphy broke Devery, as he did all others who questioned his power. The triumvirate, which was named by Croker, to succeed himself, was finally absorbed by the present leader of Tammany Hall and one of his first acts was to break the rule of Boss McLaughlin in Brooklyn, and establish the late Senator Patrick F. McCarron, who acknowledged the superiority of Murphy.

Amusing Incident in Parliament.

While the House of Commons was being cleared for the division on Dec. 2, Lady Astor rose from her seat by the gateway on the Opposition side and coming down to the floor turned to go into the lobby by the main door under the clock. Before she reached the Bar she met Sir J. D. Rees, and having shaken hands, the two stood for a minute or so in conversation. Though it is a breach of order for members thus to stand talking on the floor it is not an uncommon thing when a division is being taken. However, Mr. Whittier, the Deputy-Speaker, who was in the Chair, called out, "Order, order." Enraged in their conversation, Lady Astor and Sir J. D. Rees did not heed the admonition from the Chair. "Order, order," repeatedly, the Deputy-Speaker, in louder tones, which were not without a hint of genial humour. Then Lady Astor was seen to look eagerly around, as if she were a little startled, and, at once understanding the situation, in two graceful skips she reached the Bar, a place of greater freedom and less responsibility. From there she waved her hand to the Deputy-Speaker by way of apology, and stood laughing till she was joined by Sir J. D. Rees, who followed in a somewhat abashed fashion, and with a somewhat abashed air. The few members who saw the incident were greatly amused by it.
