Baby Dreamful Sufferer, Could Not Keep Him from Scratching, Every Joint Affected, Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and He Is Well.

"Enclosed find my son's photo and I feel by writing these few lines to you I am only doing my duty, as my son was a dreadful sufferer from eczema. As the age of two weeks he began to get covered with red spots on his legs and groin, which, mother thought was red gum or thrush, but day by day it grew worse until every joint and crevice were affected and baby started screaming for hours day and night, such a thing as sleep was out of the question. I took him to two of Sydney's leading doctors; one said it was one of the worst cases he had seen, but other did not think it so serious; one ordering treatment for thrush, the other a dressing of powder. I followed their prescriptions over four months and still baby kept scratching, crying, and screaming, and he would not keep him from scratching to great wear and tear."

"When he was five months old I tried the Cuticura Remedies and am very thankful to say my baby is to-day free from all his afflictions. His groin was bleeding, then I started with Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in four days his body was free from the disease. Cuticura Ointment I began to use a few days ago, and the itching is now over. He is now ten months old, has not had any further trouble, and is a healthy, happy child. I am very grateful to you for the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and for the information you have given me on the treatment of the skin and hair, which has been the cause of so much trouble to me. I have a 32-page book on the care and treatment of the skin and hair, which will be sent free on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., of Columbus Ave., Boston, U.S.A."

New Governor-General Bears Title Which Gladstone Wanted—Financial Troubles of Baronet

Lord Liverpool, who has just been appointed Governor-General of New Zealand, in the place of Lord Lansdowne, bears a title which the late William E. Gladstone was extremely anxious to obtain for himself. It was his inability to secure it that led him to determine upon remaining a commoner, and to go towards it as plain William E. Gladstone, instead of Earl of Liverpool.

The obstacles which he found in the way of taking his title from the city with a title which was so closely identified by family and political associations, which had been Victoria pressed an eardrum upon him, took the form of objections raised by Cecil George Foljame, Lord Hawkebury's daughter and heiress of the last 'Jenkinson' Earl of Liverpool. It is a matter of unbroken fact that no one is allowed to peer shall select as his title one which has belonged to a family that still exists and has expectations of having the dignity in question revived in its favor by the crown.

The present Lord Liverpool is his son, and has been in turn A. D. G., chamberlain, and state steward to the Viceroy of Ireland, and comptroller of King Edward's and King George's households. He also served as an officer of the Rifle Brigade through the South African War.

Marrying the only daughter of Lord Monck, Lord Liverpool may be said to have family associations with the great colonial edifice of which he has just been appointed governor general, for his father, the late earl, a sailor by profession, served in the Royal Navy and took part in the storming of Rangoon.

So keenly interested was the late earl in the colony whose peace and prosperity he had thus promoted, that he invested in and there which has become extremely valuable, and constitutes an important source of income to his son the new governor.

Lord Liverpool's English country seat is at Wiltshire Hall, an exceedingly picturesquely sited, garden, standing the ruins of a 3,000 acre estate in the fairest portion of Lincolnshire, and within sight of the towers of Lincoln Cathedral.

The pages of 'Burke' give as the founder of his family the first of 'Jenkinson' 'Earl of Liverpool, and his name is gathered the house of Foljame, of which he is the chief, and which is a grand old house in the reign of Henry III., and Edward. This first 'Jenkinson' earl was the principal lieutenant of George I., and a popular minister and mentor, Lord Bute, who was so largely responsible for the policy which brought about the revocation of the American colonies against the English crown. Indeed, 'Jenkinson' is recorded in history as having succeeded Bute in the sinister capacity of secret adviser to the king.

He was the eldest son of Sir Charles Jenkinson, who was in command of the Royal Horse Guards at the battles of Dettingen and Fontenoy. In his early youth he lodged with Beau Brummell's grandfather, a retired butler, in Bury Street, St. James, and succeeded by his father as seventh baronet, was advanced, first to the Barony of Hawkebury, and then to the Earlship of Liverpool, which he managed to remain in office as minister of state almost without interruption from 1793 to 1804, and died leaving an immense fortune to his two sons, the elder of whom, as premier in 1812, was the statesman who determined upon the revocation of the banishment of Napoleon to St. Helena.

He held the premiership for fifteen years, and was portrayed by Lord Beaconsfield in his novel 'Corydon' as the 'Arch-medocrity.' Having no children, he was succeeded by his younger brother, James Jenkinson, in favor of whom Cecil George, first one and then the other of his family peerages was revived.

Sir Francis Vane, for whose arrest as a fugitive, that is to say, absconding bankrupt, a warrant has been issued by the London Court of Bankruptcy, according to a report in 'The Times' of London, has fled to Italy, at Lucca, where his wife owns the Villa Bombara, and where he will be expected to remain, unless he is forced to return to England to face his creditors. He is the instigator of an anti-militarist boys' movement, an absconding bankrupt, was organized by General Sir Robert Baden-Powell. The latter is the only one who has received official and royal recognition.

The last occasion on which Sir Francis Vane came prominently before the public was this spring, when he returned to the island of his 'knighthood' on Hugu Amou, founder of the 'Order of Sir Galahad' in the United States, and who, formerly private secretary to the late Lord Pauncefote at Washington, is now in jail serving a term for bigamy.

Sir Francis had himself photographed in his self-devised uniform and mantle of 'grand seigneur' in the act of 'knighting' his friend Hugo Ames. This picture was published in many of the illustrated papers of Europe and America at the time and caused much laughter.

Sir Francis, whose bankruptcy by the way is of a very serious character, served on the staff of General Sir John French in the South African war, held a commission for five years in the Scots Guards, was until his bankruptcy the other day a member of Boodle's Club in London, is fifth baronet of his line, and succeeded in lineal male descent from Sir Henry Vane, who was knighted at the battle of Poitiers.

Another member of this family was Sir Henry Vane, a famous Puritan statesman, celebrated by Milton in verse, adversary of Cromwell, and Governor of Massachusetts, who in 1622 was beheaded at Tower Hill.

Sir Francis would be much better off financially had it not been for the bankruptcy of his father, Major Frederick Henry Vane, of the Twelfth Lancers, who, after his nephew, Sir Harry had been the enjoyment of the baronetcy and estates for nearly thirty years, suddenly saw fit to bring against him for the possession thereof on the ground that Sir Henry's father, that is to say, his own eldest brother, had been illegitimately born. With a most glaring disregard for the fair name of his mother, he declared in court that she had lived a full year with his father before marriage took place between them, and that their eldest son, Francis, who succeeded as third baronet,

Before and After Taking

BY RUTH CAMERON.

TWO young people who were unusually reserved and unromantic during the six months of their engagements have developed into a surprisingly affectionate and demonstrative married couple. They have been married over two years, and seem to grow steadily more affectionate in their manner towards each other.

A group of the wife's feminine friends were discussing this phenomenon. "Why, when they were engaged I thought John was the most unromantic lover I ever saw!" one of the girls contributed, "and I said, 'Goodness, if he's like this before marriage, what will he be afterwards?' But I never saw such a change in my life. He can hardly keep his hands off of Barbara even in public, and every time she looks at her you feel as if he were kissing her and you ought to go out of the room. That after they've been married two years."

"And Barbara's just as bad, too," put in the wife's most intimate friend. "You know before she was married she was the strictest thing. She wouldn't even let John kiss her until they were actually engaged with a ring, though they had an understanding long before that. And now she's just as affectionate as he is. Isn't it queer?"

"In the group of girls was one young married woman—a bride of six months. The intimate friend turned to her. "Well, Jane, what do you say?" she asked lightly. "Is it that way in your family, too?"

The unromantic girl which Jane gave as she answered was a keener commentator on her answer than she would probably have deliberately given. "Oh no," she said, "rather bitterly, 'nothing like that in our family. We did all our love-making before we were married.'"

There was a little silence while some of the girls recalled what an excessively demonstrative lover even in public Jane's had been, and how very different he was as a husband, and then someone opened another subject with nervous haste. How many couples there are who could explain not only post-nuptial unromanticness, but far graver troubles by that sentence, "We did all our love-making before we were married."

The question of how far love-making should go before marriage is something besides a moral question. It is also a question of expediency, as many girls who have married after ultra-refined courtships can testify. Every undue liberty a girl permits before marriage she will bitterly rue sooner or later.

I know some girls who are even now committing such indiscretions as thinking, "But my case is different. I know my lover will never tire of me." We did all our love-making before we were married." No, little girl, it's ten million to one that your case isn't different. And I will with all my heart that you might hear the bitterness and the sigh that went with that bride's revelation. If you could, I'm sure you would never give yourself reason to say, "We did all our love-making before we were married."

SCHOONER TWO-MASTED TROUBLE

The crew of the two-masted schooner R. L. Tay, were rescued on Sunday by the life-savers of the Green Hill station, when the vessel got into trouble in a southeast gale. The Tay was towed into Newport Harbor by a revenue cutter and beached on the flats. The captain and crew of four men boarded the schooner in the forenoon, and after reaching Newport the skipper wired to the vessel's owners for orders.

The vessel was bound from Bangor, Me., her home port, to New York, with lumber, and she sprang a leak in the heavy sea and distress signals were hoisted. The life-saving corps from the station rowed out and took off Capt. T. S. Norwood and the crew of four men. The schooner was left at anchor. The Tay is one of the veterans of the coasting vessel trade on the Atlantic, having been built at Milford, Del., in 1821. She is well known at the port of St. John.

While nobody knows what name the schooner carried, the general belief among the people here is that the name will prove to be of Bramwell Booth, for thirty years its chief of staff.

Where General Booth will be buried has not yet been decided. While every English member of the Salvation Army is convinced that no man is more worthy of it than the general himself, it is not expected that honor will be accorded to General Booth by the Abbey authorities. It is the general belief that the commander in chief's last resting place will be along side of his wife, who twenty-one years ago was buried in Abney Park, Stoke Newington.

SALVATION ARMY LEADER PASSES AWAY

General Booth's Wonderful Career Ended Last Night—Some Features of His Life

London, Aug. 20.—The Reverend William Booth, general and commander in chief of the Salvation Army, passed away at 10.12 o'clock tonight. He was born at Nottingham in 1829.

The veteran Salvation Army leader was unconscious for forty-eight hours previous to his death. The medical bulletins had not revealed the seriousness of the general's condition, which for a week past, it is now admitted, was hopeless.

Twelve weeks ago General Booth underwent an operation for the removal of a cataract in his left eye. For two days after the operation indications justified the hope of the general's recovery. Then, however, septae poisoning set in and from that time, with the exception of rallies, the patient's health steadily declined.

The general recognized that the end was near and often spoke of his work as being finished. Throughout the commander in chief's illness his wife, Bramwell Booth, chief of the staff of the army, and Mrs. Bramwell Booth, gave their unremitting attention to him, both night and day.

The aged evangelist died at his residence, the Rookstone, Healdwood, some eight miles from London, where he had been confined to his bed since the operation. Present at the bedside when the end came were Mr. and Mrs. Bramwell Booth and their daughter and son, Adjutant Catherine Booth and Sergeant Bernard Booth; the general's youngest daughter, Commissioner Mrs. Booth Heber, and Commissioner Howard, Colonel Kitching and Dr. Wardlaw Mills.

Bramwell Booth the Likely Successor. Public interest now centres in the question of a successor to the late commander. Under the constitution of the Salvation Army, the general nominates his successor. That General Booth died several years ago, placing the name in a sealed envelope which was deposited with the Salvation Army's lawyer with the instructions that it should be opened after his death.

While nobody knows what name the evangelist enclosed, the general belief among the people here is that the name will prove to be of Bramwell Booth, for thirty years its chief of staff.

Where General Booth will be buried has not yet been decided. While every English member of the Salvation Army is convinced that no man is more worthy of it than the general himself, it is not expected that honor will be accorded to General Booth by the Abbey authorities. It is the general belief that the commander in chief's last resting place will be along side of his wife, who twenty-one years ago was buried in Abney Park, Stoke Newington.

The scheme for the enlightenment and industrial support of the lower classes is contained in his 'Darkest London,' has met with almost universal support, and many have testified to their approval of the idea.

The War Cry, the weekly paper of the Salvation Army, was established in 1880 by General Booth.

At Calcutta, on a few days ago P. G. Mahoney, M. P., fell, a narrow escape from serious if not fatal injury. He was standing near the foot of the deal about which is steeply down which the death run with great force, when a deal struck him on the back of the shoulder, knocking him down. Mr. Mahoney says that the deal struck him in the head instead of the shoulder he probably would have been killed instantly.

It must satisfy you.

If it doesn't, your dealer, backed by us, gladly returns your money.

Isn't that a sincere way to invite you to try it?

UNSEEN YET KNOWN

I cannot see Thee. Yet I know, when trusting I have cried to Thee, That Thou from Thy great throne above Hast answered me.

I cannot see Thee, Yet I know, when hands I've clung to slumped from mine, Into mourning, That in their place I've felt a touch that held, I know 'twas Thine.

THE DEATH in the DIRIGIBLE

An Adventure of Peter Crewe—"The Man with the Camera Eye."

By Harold Carter

Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain. When I look into the remarkable detective records of my friend, Peter Crewe, I am struck chiefly by the simplicity of the crimes which he discovered or frustrated. I mentioned this to him once, and he responded:

"Simplicity, Langton, if I may use a metaphor, is the keystone of the arch of successful crime. We have the upward curve—the plot; the downward curve—the accomplishment. Unless the whole be bound with that simplicity of design which ensures success, the plot must fail."

"Most illustrative of this, I think, was Crewe's detection of the diabolical plan of the French doctor which resulted in the death of two German government balloons."

The German government, there was no doubt, had at last perfected a dirigible balloon whose value as a war weapon was incalculable. Whether the French government was privy or not to the murderous acts of Dr. Fenelon cannot be known for certain. It may have been a self-inspired patriot. There is no doubt, however, that his intention was to intimidate the German government into abandoning this type of balloon which had been constructed at the cost of so much labor and enterprise.

You all remember the fate of the Kaiserin IV—the devil take it, the Kaiserin III. How each ended in a similar manner. Each, after remaining in the air for forty-eight hours or so, and after hovering immediately over the French defensive works upon the boundary, collapsed while at an altitude of perhaps eight hundred feet, dashing its two occupants to the ground, and instantaneously killing them. The balloon, in either case, remained only as a tangle of shreds and patches of silk, and a tangle of wicker-work.

Crewe and I, who were both interested in aeronautics, had been present at the start of each balloon from Hamburg. There we made certain arrangements for the flight. Despite his French name and accent, he had ingratiated himself into the confidence of the German staff as an inhabitant of Alsace-Lorraine—as one of those French-born citizens who had elected to throw in their fortunes with the German nation after that province was wrested from Napoleon. He had been a child when the war ended; he was now a man of between forty and fifty years, a doctor in the new aeronautical division of the German army, and an avowed hater of France. His task it was to attend the starting of the balloons, to test their hearts and lungs before they ventured into the upper air, and had free access to the balloon, which was held captive within the military reservation. Crewe and I had permits to enter, for these were accorded freely to all with satisfactory references. The secret lay in the manufacture and none could ascertain it from an external inspection of the great globe.

It was while the third balloon was preparing to start, after the destruction of the two others, that Crewe resolved to ascertain, if possible, the cause of the disasters.

"You are outrageous," he said to Lieutenant Von Ketter, "to risk your life after your predecessors have perished."

"It's part of my job," Von Ketter answered, with a fatalistic shrug of his shoulders. "I die well."

"The balloon might be tampered with before you start."

"Hardly," I said, "but our officers can approach the test in which it is mooted. Then, before ascending, I shall test the pulley-rod and all the apparatus."

"And yet," said Crewe, "your computers were found dead in the shreds of their balloons, and they, too, had the upward curve—the plot; the downward curve—the accomplishment. Unless the whole be bound with that simplicity of design which ensures success, the plot must fail."

"Rain—or dew," said the lieutenant. "There had been no rain, and dew could never have soaked their bodies to the skin and drenched their hair."

"It is immaterial," Von Ketter answered. "I shall not die, for I have tested the balloon thoroughly and have complete confidence in it."

"This conversation took place upon the morning of that on which the ascent was to be made. Almost immediately afterward the tent was stripped from the balloon and the huge inflated sphere could be seen swaying above the ropes which fastened it to earth. Sphere-shaped, instead of cigar-shaped, the steering apparatus was hidden within; it looked like a balloon of an old-fashioned type, such as has been in use during the past hundred years. It rose by the aid of hydrogen gas; yet, in some mysterious way, the builder had made it completely responsive to its driver's hand."

Dr. Fenelon now came forward to make the physical examination. The process proved lengthy. Crewe, who by some process known to himself alone, had obtained leave for us both to be present, watched the doctor intently.

"I doubt—I fear," stammered the doctor, "your condition does not wholly warrant your ascending. There is some organic derangement, but the heart contractions are a little feeble. At a high altitude—He broke off, hesitating.

"Have you ever inhaled oxygen, Herr Lieutenant?" he asked.

"Once, when I had pneumonia, to ease the lungs."

"I would counsel you to let me place a small tank in the basket," the doctor said. "Then, when at a height, you find the rarity of the air oppressive, you can take a few breaths from the inhaler."

"Very well," said the lieutenant, "I will do as you say."

"Why?" asked the astonished general.

"Because you have a traitor upon the staff of your division, and his name is Fenelon. It is he who deranged the two dirigibles that preceded this and was the cause of the death of four officers."

"Your proofs?" asked the general in a stern voice.

"They will be found when the balloon comes to earth—an event which has probably occurred already, owing to atmospheric conditions. It will be found before nightfall. Let me ask you a question. What were the contents of the last balloon that was sent up?"

"Identical with those of the first," the general answered. "A barometer, two thermometers, a hygrometer, field glasses and certain military and motor equipment of a private nature."

"And a tank of oxygen in case the balloonists suffered from the effects of the rarified air?"

"I believe so. What has that to do with it?"

"First, general, let me entreat you to place Dr. Fenelon under arrest immediately. The general struck a bell upon the table. Two orderlies came in.

"Take these men and confine them in the guard house."

"Take these men," he said, "and confine them in the guard house. To-morrow they will be arraigned before a military court as spies."

"You are mad, General," cried Crewe angrily. "I tried to save you—"

"You tried to intimidate me, sir," shouted the general, "and to excite yourselves by maligning the honor of a brave officer. Taken away immediately!"

"We were halted off ignominiously across the officers' quarters in the direction of the guard house, while General von Stimms followed us to the door and stood upon the threshold, watching us sadly. As our captors led us across the quadrangle of green I noticed a commotion in a further corner of the square; then an officer came hurrying along, bearing a newspaper in his hand. He passed us, and I read the startling headline: "DESTRUCTION OF THE GREAT DIRIGIBLE."

Crewe had seen it as well. He smiled grimly.

"If only they had arrested Fenelon," he muttered. "Why, there he goes, Langton."

Surely enough the Alsatian doctor came strutting along the path, dressed in full regimentals. He saw us from afar and, turning, came toward us, having closed his hand.

"Ha, the spies!" he said viciously. "You will find it goes hard with you, for we do not love spies in Germany."

"You are lying," said Crewe, and, breaking from his captors, he struck the doctor upon the face with his open hand. Instantly the latter drew his sword and rushed at the aggressor. Crewe seized the point of the blade the moment that it left the scabbard and, with a powerful wrench, snapped it in two and threw the pieces on the ground. I saw blood follow from his wounded hands.

"As for the orderly, he stood as if petrified. From every quarter the orderlies came running up. The doctor, overwhelmed by this disaster, which meant, according to the German code, dismissal from the service, remained with hanging head upon the gravel path.

"Doctor, you must consider yourself unceremoniously dismissed, coming up to him and taking him by the arm. "As for these fellows—"

Every Slave to Drink Thinks He Can Quit. CAN'T QUIT DRINKING. If the drinker could quit drink of his own accord, there would be no necessity for a liquor cure of any kind. But he can not, for he is weak and has no will power. His appetite for drink he cannot resist when the craving comes on. Then he must have liquor, and to keep liquor from him would be cruel and inhuman. At the St. John Neal Institute, 46 Crown Street, the patient is given liquor all through the treatment whenever he wants it, as often as he wants it, until he is cured perfectly, which is in three days. Call on, write, wire or Phone No. 1685, and ask for Mr. Stevens, the manager, and arrange for the room before going, as the institute is running at full capacity.

Trouble Over Cup. Chicago, Aug. 21—J. Stuart Blackton, owner of the power boat Baby Reliance II and member of the Atlantic Yacht Club of New York yesterday was declared winner of the Wrigley $22,500 trophy by the judges at the water carnival.

It is probable that Blackton will have to make fight in the courts to obtain the trophy. James A. Pugh, owner of Disturber III, who asserts his boat is entitled to the trophy, has retained an attorney to seek to enjoin the judges from presenting the cup to Blackton.

Baby Reliance II went over the course alone, making the twenty-five miles in 46:35.25, and was declared the winner of three heats. This was the only event in the closing day programme.

Baby Reliance II and Disturber III previously had won two heats each. The mother of Baby Reliance II took the first and second heat. Disturber III took the first and second heat.

Disturber III had developed between Pugh and the promoters of the carnival as a result of the dispute. He avers he has been unfairly deprived of the trophy and the officials answer his charge by saying he feared Baby Reliance II, knowing it to be a better boat than the trophy he must turn over to the club of which he is a member. He will receive a $300 replica of the cup.

BUYS HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS POUNDS OF FISH IN ST. JOHN

Montreal Man Gives Two Big Orders—Mr. Paulus Says Industry Should Be Encouraged and City Would Benefit

J. N. Paulus, member of the well known firm of D. Hutton Company, of Montreal, was in St. John today on his annual business trip through the provinces. It is understood that he has placed an order with F. B. Lent, manager of the F. B. Lent Fish Company of Westport, N. S., who came to meet him here today, for one quarter million pounds of prepared fish. Another good sized order ranging also in the hundred thousands pounds, has been placed with another concern on the east coast of Nova Scotia. From here Mr. Paulus is going to Prince Edward Island in the interests of the oyster business. John Jackson and others of St. John are interested in the Lent Company. Mr. Paulus said that it was evident that the fish trade was very promising for the coming season, and this meant prosperity for this section of the country. Fish was gradually becoming more popular as an article of daily consumption and this should not surprise anybody when, almost every commodity in the market, particularly meats, was at such low prices. He felt that no effort should be spared to advertise more widely the possibilities of the fish trade and the profits that could be realized by this city in catering to the fast growing industry, one of the most valuable assets of this province.

MAY BE ANOTHER SHAKE-UP AMONG ST. JOHN BALL TEAM

Another Version of Fredericton Incident — Woodstock Falls to Land Halifax Pitcher

The Marathons returned home last night from Fredericton where they lost two games to the league leaders. It is understood that there will be another shakeup in the team before they again appear on the diamond. O'Keefe, the new shortstop, made a poor showing in yesterday's game, having two errors in each game, but he made one hit. Steve White has also been getting rapped lately and there is some talk of Fraser being released. It is believed that the management have been negotiating with one of the players who was recently released by Woodstock, and it is possible that he may report here at an early date. He is an outfielder, a good hitter and is also a utility catcher.

According to the reports of the games yesterday, George Winter and O'Brien the third baseman had a scrap on the field, the captain calling the third sacker down for missing one of his signals.

Manager George Winter of the Marathons baseball team told a Times reporter this morning that the statement which appeared in despatches which were sent to local papers from Fredericton that he and O'Brien had a scrap on the field was entirely incorrect. According to the despatches he was supposed to have been calling O'Brien a calling down on the field for missing a signal, but according to the players this did not happen.

Members of the Marathons say that the true version of the matter is this: A Fredericton player was running the bases on a hit. The ball was thrown to O'Brien who turned around and touched the runner for an out. Duffy called him safe and O'Brien ran into the plate and started talking to the umpire. Then the runner was called out. Duffy called O'Brien out from the press box "Why didn't you touch him, you yellow dog?"

Marathon players say that they heard this remark, and when they came in from the field they went to the box and gave Duffy a talking to that there was no scrap between the two Marathon players at all.

The players say they are willing to back up their statements, and feel that the league officials certainly ought to get after the official scorer at Fredericton for being drawing a salary to score the games and not to use such language to the players.

The boys also say that Umpire Duffy certainly handed them some raw decisions.

The management of the Marathons announced this morning that Duffy would not be allowed to umpire another game in St. John, and that an effort would be made to have him dismissed from the league. McCann, the new umpire, is expected to arrive here tonight. The management are endeavoring to secure the services of two good pitchers and a shortstop, and hope to land some new men within a few days.

The Greys will play off here today and to Woodstock tomorrow.

The Woodstock club are after Warwick, the Halifax Sox's spit ball pitcher. He has received offers from them to name his price, but said today that he would stay in Halifax.

INQUIRING INTO COLLISION OF DREDGE AND THE T. W. COOPER

Captain Lindsay Hears Evidence of Dredge and Tug Captains

An official investigation was begun this morning in the customs house into the collision between the American schooner T. W. Cooper, of Boston, and the dredge Fielding which occurred on May 20 last in St. John harbor. The inquiry was presided over by Captain H. G. Lindsay, of Ottawa, setting wreck commissioner under authority of the marine department. James E. Cowan appeared for the dredge captain, and H. H. McLean, K. C., acted for the schooner and tugboat. Captain Mincabey and Captain E. C. Elkin were sworn in as article assessors. Two witnesses were called to give evidence. Captain E. Nickerson of the dredge and Captain G. M. Morrell of the tugboat Wasson, which had the schooner in tow.

Captain Nickerson, who said he had been in command of the Fielding for about seven years, told the court that on the morning of the collision he had left about seven o'clock for his moorings near Partridge Island. It was very nearly low water, the weather was clear and there was very little wind. It was during fresh time and the tide was running a little more than three knots. After the dredge had made its way to the bell buoy below the moorings, the captain saw the tug Wasson coming with the schooner Cooper in tow with a large lumber. They were approaching on the starboard bow.

The tug sounded one blast and the dredge gave answer. An alteration was made in the course and the dredge gave two blasts. The tug came on and sheered but the schooner had not been swung in time, and met the stern of the dredge, receiving the crash about the fore-rigging. Only one of the propellers on the Fielding was in working order as one of the boilers was not in trim, but even with the two, the captain said he did not think the accident could have been averted.

Captain Morrell, of the Wasson, gave evidence somewhat similar to that of the other witness. He said that he had not altered his course to port until two blasts were given by the dredge. The tugboat Helena was on the port side of the Fielding but, he said, made no effort to assist the schooner after the collision occurred. The schooner began to sink and he blew for aid. Captain Morrell said that he asked the master of the dredge what his reasons were for changing his course. He himself, before the accident had been keeping to starboard.

The court adjourned at twelve thirty to meet again at one thirty this afternoon when several other witnesses called were to be heard.

HON. JOHN MORRIS.
Commercial — Hon. John Morrissey, chief commissioner of public works, in the Flemington administration, celebrated his fifty-sixth birthday last Tuesday. He left Newcastle on Friday evening for a trip to the Pacific coast. He will go through to Portland, Oregon, and Spokane, Wash., where he will visit his brother and other relatives and will return via the C. P. R. through Canada, visiting Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Regina, Winnipeg and other cities. He will probably be away two months and will be accompanied on his trip by Mrs. Morrissey.
