Our Farm INTELLIGENT HORSE BREEDING

As a business proposition, it pays best to breed mares to pure-bred stallions, although the service fees of such horses are higher than those of the grade or mongrel and scrub. The fees of the latter are $5 to $10 less at the time of service, but when the colt reaches market age the saving is lost. There is at that time a difference of at least $100 in value in favor of the colt from the pure bred sire, so that the higher service fee has proved a profitable investment. Then, too, there is a ready, appreciative outside market for the good grade colt, while the scrub goes to the local buyer at low figures, and there is little, if any, demand for such horses.

While some farmers are beginning to appreciate the importance of using sound, pure-bred stallions, the equal importance of using sound mares is not yet generally understood. When a mare by reason of unsoundness no longer is fit for anything else she often is set aside for breeding purposes, and so long as this absurd and ruinous policy persists the penalty will be paid in the prevalence of unsound horses on our farms. For corroboration of what has been asserted here, one has only to examine the brood mares on a number of farms in different districts of the State. The unsound mares will be found numerous, and many of their adult offspring are similarly affected.

The success achieved in the breeding of Clydesdale horses in Canada serves as a good example of what can be accomplished by persistent and expert selection. The Scottish element of the Dominion's population has been partial to the Clydesdale breed and conversant with its good qualities and utility, hence imported Clydesdale stallions of the best character have been largely employed in the breeding operations of that country since the year 1842. Practically speaking, no alien crosses have been made and the average farmer has been capable of selecting suitable mares and of adequately developing their progeny. The result is that Canada has but one type of draft horse, and it is a good one, showing to a high degree of excellence all of the breed characteristics of the pure bred Clydesdale. The same thing is true to an even greater degree, in Scotland where the Clydesdale breed predominates and has been developed to a high state of purity, breed, character and utility. On the contrary, if we examine the average team horses of Milwaukee or Chicago, we shall see every possible type and character represented, and plain evidences of mixed breeding, careless selection and incomplete nutrition.

By gradual processes the farming communities of European countries have replaced their scrub stallions with pure-bred sires. They have learned by experience that the greatest profits are to be gained by the production of pure-bred and high stock, and in many breeding centres they will not keep or patronize a non-registered sire.—A. S. Alexander.

THOUGHTS FOR FARMS

Intelligence is worth money in horses, and intelligent horses render better service than those lacking that quality. It is the gentle mind that makes the gentle man.

Epsom salts given in the drinking water and small grain buried in loose litter will improve the condition of fowls that have become too fat, and ceased to lay.

The stables in which the cows are housed should be lime-washed twice a year, kept scrupulously clean, and thoroughly welllighted and ventilated. Unless an animal is adapted by breeding for making beef it is folly to try to make it put on an abundance of flesh through any system of feeding that may be devised.

A double handful of lime thrown into the watering-trough will tend to prevent calves from scouring after they are weaned. This lime should be renewed once a week.

The idea that certain varieties of cheese can only be made in certain districts is a most erroneous one. Selecting the right kind of sire to head the herd of dairy cows is a problem which requires mature consideration. It is important, in selecting a bull, to choose one from any of the noted dairy strains.

Why not prevent the maturing of weeds upon our lands and upon the roadsides adjoining and in the waste places?

For butter making a cow that gives a good quantity of milk that is rich in butterfat is what is wanted, but when selling milk is the object, a cow giving a large quantity of milk is of more importance.

No dairyman should leave the milking, separating and churning to his wife.

Over-ripe cream, too much churning and overworking are three general faults in buttermaking.

Seed selection must be made use of in all crops: careful planting is half the harvest.

Even on the most productive farms any money spent on fertilizers is well invested.

Do not select for breeding a boar with an ugly head if you want good results in the litters.

Part of the value of the drill is in the saving of the seed lost under the method of broad casting.

It is only when the farmer produces his own meat, milk, and butter in such abundance that he has a surplus for every day, and perhaps a surplus, that he is living up to the opportunities the farm affords.

Colts, unlike children, suffer little or no inconvenience from their temporary denition. But during the cutting of the permanent teeth is the critical epoch in the life of young horses.

Between the ages of two and three is where the trouble generally begins: In Russia much of the soil is still cultivated with an instrument called the sokha, which just scratches the soil a few inches deep.

It never pays to overstock a pasture: It is not possible to get maximum results where there is not sufficient food during the whole season.

The day is at hand when a farmer will be ashamed to say that his land is poor, for it will at once be known that he is a poor farmer.

The appearance, smell and color of artificial manures are no guide to their value, the only true test in buying is chemical analysis, although the best test is made by the crop itself: Good farming consists not in growing a slashing big crop once in a while, or even once a year, but in producing a good average of crops year after year, doing it, too, at a profit, without resort to niggardly or slave-driving methods.

To Our Correspondents

The "Greetings" is in need of several correspondents in unoccupied districts, and would ask its present ones, with the compliments of the new year, to kindly try and send in good full and regular reports of the doings of their districts. Any new ones wishing to act for unoccupied districts will notify us, and paper, envelopes and postage will gladly be supplied.

Now is the time to get busy for the next July distribution of prizes. Owing to the short time this January distribution will partake more of a slight remembrance than a prize distribution.

The prizes for July will be according to the number and quality of correspondence sent but there will be at least one prize worth contesting for. The awarding of prizes will be entirely at the Editor's disposal and judged by him. Among the places where Correspondents are especially needed are St. Andrews, St. Stephen, Bonny River, Bocabee, Bocabee Cove, Dryers, Lenapee, Little Lepreau, Maces Bay, Digloquash and several others.

The Emperor Launched

Collingwood, Dec. 18.—Canada's marine received another splendid addition on Saturday afternoon, when the new steamer Emperor, built to the order of the Inland Lines, Limited, was launched at the yards of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co.

The launching occurred at 3 o'clock, and was witnessed by several thousand people, including railway and marine officials from Toronto, Montreal and other cities. The steamer was named by Mr. James S. Playfair, father of Mr. James Playfair, jun., President and manager of the Inland Lines.

The Emperor is the largest steel freighter ever built in a British colony. The steamer was 325 feet in length, 56 feet in breadth, and 36 feet deep, of the usual lake type of large freighters. It is constructed on the arch and web frame system, and has side ballast tanks and double bottom.

The pilot-house and captain and mate's quarters are at the forward end, and the boiler and engineers' rooms at the stern. The long sweep of deck between is clear of spars and superstructures, and has thirty hatches nine feet clear, with centres of twelve feet. This arrangement admits of the utmost rapidity in taking and discharging cargo. With an ore chute at each of the thirty hatches this large ship will load in between two and three hours, while it can be unloaded in from five or eight or nine hours. The motive power is situated astern, aft of one of the steel bulk-heads, and is thus in a watertight compartment of itself. It is compact, and takes up as little space as possible. This is arranged, first, as a matter of convenience, and, secondly, in order to secure the maximum of cargo space.

In the Emperor there are two Scotch boilers, fifteen feet six inches by twelve feet which will carry a working pressure of 180 pounds of steam. These will supply steam to triple expansion engines the dimensions of which are: Cylinders, 23 in., 38 1/2 in., The propeller will be 15 feet in diameter, with a pitch of 16 feet, and the speed of the steamer will be 16 knots per hour.

The carrying capacity of this immense vessel is 10,000 tons, or 350,000 bushels of wheat. In other words, this equates the carrying capacity of 350 modern railway cars, and it would take sixteen trains of twenty-two cars each to move one full load of the boat. A comparison with the schooners that less than twenty years ago often filled the harbor will show the great advance that has been made in our national marine. The schooners which formerly carried 12,000 to 20,000 bushels were believed to have reached the maximum for lake vessels.

At the luncheon previous to the launching, with Mr. Thomas Long, Vice-President of the Shipbuilding Company, presiding speeches were made by several gentlemen prominently identified with the marine and shipbuilding industry. Mr. Long reviewed the history of the Canadian industries, and urged for increased Governmental assistance. Mr. C. R. Sing, Chief Engineer of the Department of Public Works for Western Ontario, referred to the improvement of the harbors and the aids to navigation which the Government had provided, while Capt. Alexander McDougall of Duluth President of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co., spoke optimistically on the outlook for Canada and her industrial and commercial future.

Short speeches were also made by Messrs. Playfair and Stedman of the Inland Lines.—Exchange.

The Canuck Racing Stable in Japan

The patrons of the Nippon Race Club are three Imperial Highnesses with unpronounceable but imposing names, and the President of the committee of this leading racing organization in Japan is Sir Claude Maxwell Macdonald, from which it may be fairly inferred that the sport of the turf in the Flowery Kingdom has the support of personages of no small importance. It has particular interests for Canadians from the fact that the most successful owner participating in the sport there is a Canadian, Mr. J. C. Fletcher, formerly of Toronto.

Mr. Fletcher raced for some time under the name of Mr. Canuck, and when the sport was largely carried on with China ponies trained and rode his own with much success. The pony Ontario was the champion for several seasons. Mr. Fletcher was patriotic in the assumption of his nom de course, and also in the naming of his horses. At the four days' meeting at Yokohama last month he won the Emperor's Cup, and Mayor of Yokohama's Cup and the Australian-bred championship with his mare, Woodbine. His other mare, Euc Bonnets, was second to Woodbine in the Emperor's Cup, and was also a winner on the last day. These horses bear the names of two of Canada's noted racers. They were bred in Australia, from which country came the best horses in Japan, and it says much for Mr. Fletcher's practical horsemanship that he bought Woodbine, then called Flip Flap, from Sir Claude Macdonald when her racing days were believed to be over, and made a champion of her.—Exchange.

Municipal Ice Rink

(From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat)
Though Dubuque is on the Mississippi river and has one of the finest harbors between New Orleans and St. Paul, there has been little or no ice skating in recent years. Several times attempts to conduct a private rink have failed, principally owing to high prices of admission. Ald. O'Rourke plans to utilize the whole of the harbor, which is 1400 feet long and 500 feet wide. The harbor now is frozen over and as soon as it is deemed advisable this surface will be doctored from the city's water system, thus giving it a surface as smooth as glass. Along the shores it is proposed to build shelters where skaters may be adjusted, where skaters may rest and get warm and where they may have their wraps checked. Policemen will be present at all times, and representatives of the women's clubs of the city will be assigned to regular duty as chaperons.

JUST PUBLISHED

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of trained workers, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, and reinforced by many eminent specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unvarying scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In size of vocabulary, in richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

Exiled

A London exile far from home,
A wanderer in a distant land,
In dreams I hear the far-off roar,
The ceaseless murmur of the Strand,
Beside the slowly-dying fire
I dream away the lonely nights,
And see from out the London dusk
The radiant glimmer of the lights.

The ancient Abbey's dark fancies,
The watchful lions in the Square,
In dreams I wander up and down,
Almost believing I am there.

The ashes fall—I wake again,
An exile with an aching soul,
For lo! across the parting gulf
Three thousand miles of ocean roll.

To Make Fertilizer

Major G. A. Jackson Burton, a retired English army officer with scientific training and experience, is at present in Boston forming a syndicate under the name of the Maritime Fertilizer Syndicate. In the prospectus Major Burton states that he has noticed the very large quantities of sawmill being burned and going to waste daily in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. The syndicate has in contemplation the erection of large fertilizing plants at St. John, N. B., St. John's Nfld., and also in Nova Scotia. Sawmill can be turned into charcoal and from this charcoal fertilizers can be manufactured. Major Burton is obtaining options on the output of sawdust from the large mills.—Globe.

Judgement Against Express Companies

(Special to St. John Globe.)

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—A judgement has been given by the Railway Commission on express rates which declares that the rates are too high and orders the companies to file lower tariffs within three months. It also states that the express companies are owned by the railway companies and there is no occasion for the existence of separate companies to handle the express business of Canada, but that it could be by the railway companies as it is in fact being done now before the destructive encroachment of civilization made restoration impossible. The Conservatives in opposition freely endorsed the policy of the Liberal government in establishing this forest, fish, and game preserve, and now the addition of what would be a splendid park area will be supported by the Province at large independent of party leanings. The park is set apart as a permanent home for the wild life of northern Ontario, a natural breeding ground for game fish, a continuous and the judgement declares that the express companies overpay the railways for accommodation in stations and intimates that this is a convenient way of disposing of profits which otherwise might be so conspicuously large as to be inconvenient. It declares that the forms of contract which express shippers are compelled to sign are unreasonably, and are designed to enable the companies to escape responsibility for shipments lost or damaged in spite of the fact that their high charges are supposed to provide for this. The form of contract is abolished.

For through express business a rate reduced at least ten per cent is ordered. Local rates are to be reduced accordingly. It is noted that the Canadian Express Company, which is owned by the Grand Trunk Railway, was bought in 1892 for $650,000, though it had only $60,000 assets, the $600,000 was found to be for the franchise. The assets are now placed at $412,719, while the capital stock in the hands of trustees for the G. T. R. amounts to $3,000,000 and on this a dividend is paid.

The Dominion Express Co., owned by the C. P. R., is capitalized and pays dividends on two million dollars, though the railway board could find only $24,000 cash, which had never been put into capital. In seven years the Dominion Express earned $23,473,696, and paid the C. P. R. $13,499,240 or 63 per cent, and in the same time the Canadian Express earned $13,362,266, and paid the G. T. R. $8,467,307, or 63 per cent.

The census returns by States now being all in, it is found that Maine has dropped five places in the list of States, reckoned according to population, passing from 30th to 35th in rank. Maine has been passed by Oklahoma, Washington, Florida and Colorado.

The Farmer's Role

Farming is not breaking clods; farming is not ploughing;—that is one of the little bits of inevitable, unavoidable experience and labor. Farming is gathering sunshine. Preparing the soil and the seed that the plant may come and, spreading its leaves, gather in sunshine: strength of Old Mother Earth, down through the leaves. Then when the man eats the bread and butter, the old sun, let go inside, runs the man. That is gathering wealth out of chaos. That is better than making money on the stock exchange whereby the other fellow becomes poor. That is gathering and humanizing for the service of the race the great unused powers of nature.

Farming is the great fundamental occupation—that and mining and lumbering and fishing and gathering the strength of the sun again through water-power. These are obligations of the intelligence of human labor to make Old Mother Earth nourish and bless and rejoice the hearts of her children—they nurture all the rest.—Prof. J. W. Robertson, in Rural Manhood.

PENNFIELD

The sewing circle in connection with the Baptist church held a very successful apronsale and concert on Tuesday evening.

The friends of W. S. R. Justason are pleased to see him able to be out again. Miss Florence Justason returned from normal school Friday night to spend the holidays at her home here.

Miss Florence Hawkins and Ernest Hawkins, same from Honeydale on Saturday to spend their holidays with their mother Mrs. N. W. Hawkins.

Miss Bertha Dakin of Beaver Harbor, spent Xmas here, the guest of Mrs. Charlotte Tryon.

The Xmas concert held by members of the Baptist Sunday school Monday evening was finely rendered and much enjoyed by all present, too much praise cannot be given those that had the work in charge.

Rupert Hawkins of Dumbarton arrived on Tuesday to spend the holidays here.

Messrs. Clifford and Clarence McCarty of St. Stephen, were guests of their uncle Mr. E. E. Justason, Xmas.

Jas. Anderson spent Xmas with friends here.

Miss Ida Beach of Honeydale, is the guest of Florence Hawkins.

The members of the Bible class presented their teacher Mr. A. C. Poole with a fine fountain pen.

A number of our young people attended the Xmas concert at Beaver Harbor.

At the close of his sermon on Sunday evening in the St. Mark's church the rector, Mr. Lyons in a few feeling remarks announced his intention of placing his resignation of the charge of the parish in the hands of the Bishop and corporation of the church to take place at an early date. The reverent gentleman, we understand, received the offer of the church at Strathcona, Alta. to which place he goes about the last of January. During his ten years as rector here he and his estimable partner in life have made many close friendships and all while regretting the severance of both social and parochial ties will wish them success in their new home in the growing west of this great Canada of ours, and should either of them again visit N. B. a visit St. George will always be pleased to see them among us.

At the close of his last service at Pennfield church the congregation presented the rector with a well filled purse and an address expressing their sorrow at his departure and their appreciation of his services as rector of the parish.

The gasoline arc lights for the rink have been installed and give an excellent light and no doubt will be much appreciated by the patrons of the rink, although it is now waned is fairly cold weather to put the rink in excellent condition for skating and the first carnival of the season is advertised for Monday.

Dr. Charles H. Keene, of Minneapolis, in a public statement says that the high French heels which high school girls wear are the cause of deformed feet that have to be cured by physical culture, and therefore such heels are to be barred from the school. Dr. Keene will have the physical instructor in the high school find out how many girls have curvature of the spine. He has found many boys in the Minneapolis schools so afflicted. He attributed the prevalence of curvature of the spine to bad posture, and to faulty customs and to improper footwear, such as French-heeled shoes.

A good position can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8 hour law became effective, and since the wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. K. and wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, Ohio, or Philadelphia.

The St. John Telegraph claims that the present provincial Government had nearly $400,000 more of an income than the late administration and that even with this the $6,563 claimed surplus is really a deficit when all the proper bills are paid.

The stove and all its contents of Simon Theriault at Back Bay was totally destroyed by fire on Monday night it being quite isolated the fire had got well under way before being discovered. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Theriault who is well advanced in years, he had very little insurance, and his loss will be heavy.

The Baptist congregation held their Xmas tree and entertainment in their vestry on Monday evening and the Episcopal held theirs in Coult's hall on Wednesday evening, both were well attended and very enjoyable to those present especially to those interested, the children of the schools.

The Pulp Co. have purchased the lumber lands of J. E. Moore and Irvin Todd the papers, we understand were signed at St. Stephen, the tracts contain about 75 square miles of land, and with the other large holdings of the Co. will practically give them control of the whole river. The Yankee dollars and progressive Companies are welcome and the Pulp Co. have so far proved themselves an A 1 concern trusting both their employees and the public in a straightforward and live and let live style and run their business in a manner conducive to the benefit of all, and our only fault with their methods are that too much of the raw material goes out of our country to be manufactured in Uncle Sam's domains where the profit is made, and it does seem too bad that some arrangements cannot be made whereby Canada would get at least the lion's share of our natural resources.

On Friday evening of last week a number of the young men of the town tendered a farewell supper at the Victoria to Artie Frauley, on the eve of his departure for Alberta, where he has accepted a position as Manager of one of the Massey Harris branches and for which place he left on Monday.

Shortly after 10 p. m. twenty-four of his friends had assembled at the Hotel when word was passed and the guest of the evening who was at a friend's house was notified that Chas. Fuller wished to see him at the hotel. When he arrived he was considerably surprised to see so many awaiting him assembled around the festive board. However, he took his punishment cheerfully and joined the assembly when the business of disposing of the good things Host Murray had provided was proceeded with after which the Mayor who acted as chairman gave the first toast, the King, which was drunk in silence. Canada was responded to by Dr. Alexander at some length, the Legislature by Dr. Taylor who was called away and left at the end of his short reply. In proposing the toast of the evening, Our Guest, he made a short address which was followed by a number of others in the usual happy and congratulatory strain. The Granite Industry was responded to by Leo McGuffan, Lumber by Chas. Fuller in the following essay:

St. George, N. B. Dec. 22, 1910
Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen
In considering the Lumber Industry of the province I think we should consider it under three heads. First, what it has done for the province. Second, what it is doing and Thirdly, what we may expect from the industry in the near future. The lumber industry has contributed very largely to the upbuilding of more than one industry, directly and indirectly, its influence is widespread. Without detailing the different parts in the province, the prosperity of which are largely influenced by the lumber industry we will take a case near at hand, the city of St. John. In the earlier days a great deal of lumber was manufactured in that city and a great deal was shipped through it. This gave employment to a large number of men in the mills there and of course men were employed the whole length of the St. John river cutting and driving the logs. Several woodworking factories are operated there, so that lumber in its finished state is sent out from St. John all over the country. Machine shops have been established where saw mill machinery is manufactured and repair work done for mills all over that section. There are also two sulphite pulp mills in or near St. John and their product goes to the States and old country. Also in the past quite a number of vessels were built in St. John. St. John having gotten quite a start naturally attracted quite a number of other industries to establish there. Great railroads and steamship lines have terminals there and more are coming.

St. George in times past was quite a flourishing lumber town. You all know more about it than I do. Just now not much lumber is being sawn on the Magaguadavic river, but we have a pulp mill here and at times have a saw mill, and are using on an average of four or five million feet of lumber in a year and it is quite among the possibilities that we may use a good deal more. It may be said that most of the larger logs are cut off and this may be true to some extent. Still it must be remembered that the lumber is growing. I think I may be considered a fairly good judge of the lumber on this river and it is my candid opinion that the lumber is growing much faster than we are cutting it so we are assured of a supply of raw material for years to come. Of course in this connection it must be remembered that there is one thing to be considered which is of the utmost importance to the subject under consideration, that is to keep the trees growing.

There is the constant danger of fire, a thing which must be guarded against all the time and especially during the dry season and when there are so many fishermen and hunters in the woods who often leave their camp fires unguarded. Often a piece of good land is ruined by having the lumber all cut off, every stick of it. These portable lath mills go into a piece of thick woods and cut every thing which will make a lath and after they have left nothing but bare ground and piles of brush and refuse most always a fire follows them and if there is a green tree starting up it is destroyed and even the very soil is burned and will never again produce merchantable lumber or anything else. This is a case where the land owner is "penny wise and pound foolish." He gets a winter's work for himself and his team and a few cents for stumpage and then has nothing left for next winter or the winters to come or for his children.

It would seem that if the lumber industry was worth anything to the country that it was worth looking after. The Dominion and the Provincial governments are commencing to realize this and they are now looking after the forests much better than they have in the past.

This was followed by music, H. McGowan, Ross Mann and other, E. J. O'Neill presiding at the organ. The Bachelor's toast was coupled with the name of Chas. Lynott who on rising claimed that this was a disappointment to him as he had expected to be called on to respond for the Ladies and had thought of a lot of nice things to say and his powder had now been stolen, also claimed he was not a bachelor so there is still perhaps a chance for the genial Charles. The Ladies was responded to by Edward McGrattan, Jas. Bogue was called on for the C. P. R. but rather declined. The host was responded to by Timothy O'Brien in a very happy manner. After several of the toasts had been responded to the Mayor in a very kindly address presented the departing guest with a handsome fitted leather Traveling Bag, given by several of his friends, to which he responded with much feeling, after which the gathering broke up by singing: Auld Lang Syne, For he's a Jolly Good Fellow and God Save the King.

Childrens Chest Troubles.

Nurse Carrington Says Her Long Experience Proves the Safest Remedy is to Rub on Nerviline!

Every mother knows how difficult it is to get a young child to take a cough mixture. Seldom will one help unless given in large doses, and the result is to completely upset the stomach and make the child sick.

Speaking of the promptest cure for chest trouble and childrens colds, Nurse Carrington says: "In all my experiences in nursing I haven't met any preparation so dependable as Nerviline. It is an ideal liniment. Every drop you rub on is absorbed quickly. Especially for chest colds, pain in the side, stiff neck, earache, toothache, I have found Nerviline invaluable. In treating the minor ills of children, Nerviline has no equal. I think Nerviline should be in every home.

A million bottles of Nerviline used every year—this is itself a burden of proof that it is the ideal liniment for the home. Refuse anything your dealer may offer instead of Nerviline. Sold everywhere and by The Catarrh-ozone Co., Kingston, Ont. In two sizes 50c. and 25c.

Overland Route Through Persia

Two months ago the Government of Persia was informed by the British foreign office that the southern trade routes across that country must be more effectively policed, otherwise the British government would have to intervene for the protection of traders against the depredation of bandits, who are little amenable to the authorities at Teheran. The implication was that the British intervention would be effected by the use of Indian officers, and perhaps Indian soldiers, whether the Persian government or refused its consent, and that the cost of the service would be met out the customs tax on the Persian Gulf.

In a very interesting article contributed to the National Review, Lovat Fraser points out the difficulties and dangers which Great Britain may become involved by translating this half explicit threat into action. He shows that the procedure contemplated would be an impairment of Persian Government's concurrence, which, he says, is not likely to give. On the other hand, any armed force from India would under any auspices have its work cut out for it, and it were operating against both the Persian bandits and the Persian Government it would have to assume before long the dimensions of an army of occupation. This is precisely what the foreign office has been disclaiming, so that if Lovat Fraser's statement are correct, it is clear that someone in the Foreign Office has blundered.

If one casts about for a motive deeper than the need of local protection of traders against brigands, then the Nation comes to his aid. Liberal paper as it is, it cannot stand for anything like spoliation of Persia on any false pretences. It is suspicious of Russia, which is almost openly preparing to annex her northern sphere of influence, presumably expecting Great Britain to do the same thing in and for its 'southern sphere.' But the British people, having a different genius from that of Russia, would not stand for such political cynicism, even at the instance of Sir Edward Grey.—Tor. Globe.

THE BARRIER

By Rex Beach

"I allowed you were to use your own judgment," said the older man.

"So I am, I suppose. There is one chance, Mr. Gale. If you'll back me up I'll send him on down to St. Michael's. That is the most I can do for you."

The lieutenant outlined his plan, and as he went on the trader nodded approval.

"The young man gazed back at him so squarely, his eyes were so pleasant and friendly, his whole person breathed such straight up honesty and freshness that shame came to the old man, and he had hard shift to keep his silence from waterizing. Without forethought he answered impulsively:

"He's desperate and very dangerous. I sold him a 45 just now." He was about to tell him where the man were it and to add a word concerning his despatch with the gun when the very fearless deliberation of the youth deterred him. On second thought Gale yielded to an impulse to wait and see how Meade Burrell would act under fire. If the soldier emerged scathless it would give him a line on his character. If he did not—well, that would be even better.

The crowd was coming back to the steamer, which had discharged her few bundles of freight, and there was no one inside the log post as they entered except Doret and the stranger, who had deposited his baggage at the rear and was talking with the Frenchman at the bar. At sight of the lieutenant he became silent and turned abruptly, although with a distrustful stare. Burrell wasted no time.

"Are you going to locate here?" he began.

"Yes."

"I notice you've got a skeleton rigging," the soldier continued, indicating the man's baggage. "Pretty small outfit for a hunter, isn't it?"

"It's plenty for me."

"Have you enough money to buy your son's grub?"

"I guess that's my business."

"My orders are to see that all newcomers either have an outfit or are able to buy one," said Burrell. "Those that are not equipped properly are to be sent down river to St. Michael's, where there is plenty of everything and where they will be taken care of by the government. Mr. Gale has only sufficient provisions to winter the men already in this district."

"I can take care of myself," said the man angrily, "whether I'm broke or not, and I don't want any of your interference." He shot a quick glance at Poleon Doret, but the Frenchman's face was like wood, and his hand still held the neck of the whisky bottle he had set out for the stranger.

"Come," said the officer peremptorily. "I have heard all about you, and you are not the kind of citizen we want here, but if you have enough money for an outfit I can't send you away. If you haven't—"

"I'm broke," said the man, but at the note in his voice Poleon Doret's muscles tightened and Burrell, who also read a sinister message in the one, said his heavy service revolver from its holster beneath his coat.

"Give me your gun," he said. "I'll maintain it and give it back to you at the gangplank."

"All right; you've got the upper hand," said the man through his teeth and gave a shove to the lieutenant's hand. "I'm going to get my own gun."

"The officer looked at the man's hand, but foremost, hammer underneath. The revolver slipped naturally in the palm of his hand, and the tip of his forefinger was thrust through the trigger guard.

Burrell lowered the barrel of his revolver and put out his left hand for the other's weapon. Suddenly the man's wrist jerked and the soldier saw a flash of sunlight on the steel as it whirled, saw the arm of Poleon Doret diving itself across the bar with the need of a striking serpent, heard a crash of breaking glass, felt the shock of a concussion and the spatter of one liquid in his face. Then he saw the man's revolver on the floor half-way across the room saw fragments of glass with it and saw the fellow step backward, spitting at the fingers of his right hand. A snarl of under smoke and rank whisky was in his air.

"There are times when a man's hand will set more swiftly than his tongue," Poleon Doret had seen the manner of the stranger's surrender of his gun and, realizing what it meant, had acted. At the very instant of the fellow's renchery Doret struck with his bottle in time to knock the weapon from his hand, but not in time to prevent its discharge. The bullet was lodged in the wall a foot from where Gale stood, aiming a sweeping downward blow with his Colt. Burrell clipped the Skagway man just above the ear, and he wailed. Then as he fell the officer struck wickedly again at his opponent's skull, but Doret seized him by the arm.

"Be gar, don't kill 'im twice!" Burrell wrenched his arm free and turned on Doret a face that remained long in the Frenchman's memory, a face suffused with fury and convulsed like that of a sprinter at the finish of a race. The two men stared at each other over the fallen figure for a brief moment until the soldier gained mastery of himself and sheathed his weap-

The arm of Poleon Doret hung stiffly on, when he fell.

"I spoil a quart of good whisky on you. That's worth five dollars."

The lieutenant wiped the liquor from his face.

"Quit work, Doret," he said. "I owe you one."

Gale's face was hidden as he bent over the prostrate man, fingering a long and ragged cut which had the fellow's scalp open from back of the ear to the temple, but he inhaled something unintelligible.

"Is he hurt badly?"

"No, you clipped him too low," said the trader. "I told you he was bad."

They revived the man, then bound up his injury hastily, and as the steamer cast off they led him to the bank and passed his gripsacks to a rostrant. He said no word as he walked unsteadily up the plank, but turned and stared malignantly at them from the deck. Then as the craft swung outward into the stream he stole through the trickle of blood that ginned down from beneath his wide hat and cried:

"I'd like to introduce myself, for I'm coming back to winter with you, Lieutenant. My name is Henson." And until the steamer was hidden behind the bend below they saw him standing there gazing back at them steadily.

As Burrell left the two men at the store he gave his hand frankly to the French Canadian and said, while his cheeks flushed:

"I want to thank you for saving me from my own awkwardness."

Doret became even more embarrassed than the lieutenant at this show of gratitude and granted cheerily. But when the young man had gone he turned to Gale, who had watched them silently, and said:

"He's a nice young fellow, ole man. Sapre! Wen he's mad his eye got so red lak my onderberht."

But the trader made no reply.

CHAPTER III

WITHOUT MESSAGES OF COURSE.

WHEN the steamer had gone Napoleon Doret went to look for Nech and found her playing with the younger Gales, who revealed in the gifts he had brought. Never had there been such gorgeous presents for little folk.

The elder girl laughed gladly as Poleon entered, though her eyes were wet with the pity of it.

"You seem to bring sunshine wherever you go," she said. "They have never had things to play with like other children, and it makes me cry to watch them."

"He, he," he chuckled. "Ole ain' no time for cryin', ba gosh! I guess you don't have so much present wen you was lit' gal yourself, w'at? Mebbe you t'ink I forget you. Want I didn't?"

He began to undo the fastenings of a parcel he carried in his arms.

"Don't you dare open it?" cried Nech. "Why, that's half the fun!" She was a child herself now, her face flushed and her hands tremble. Taking the packages to the table, she hurriedly untied the knots while he stood watching her, his teeth showing white against his dark face and his eyes half shut as if dazzled by the sight of her.

"Oh, why didn't you tie more buttons on it?" she breathed as she undid the last, and then, opening the wrappings slowly, she gasped in astonishment. She shook it out gently, reverently, a clinging black lace gown of Paris make. Next she opened a box and took from it a picture hat with long jet plumes, which she stroked and pressed fondly against her face. There were other garments also—a sliver reticent, silk stockings and a pair of high beeled shoes to match, with certain other delicate and dainty things which she modestly forbore to inspect before the Frenchman, who said no word, but only gazed at her, and for whom she had no eyes as yet. Finally she laid her presents aside and, turning to him, said in a husky, awe-stricken voice:

"It's all there, everything complete! Oh, Poleon—you dear, dear Poleon!" She took his two big hands by the thumbs, as had been her custom ever since she was a child, and looked up at him, her eyes wet with emotion. But she could not keep away from the dress for long and returned to feast her eyes upon it.

"You lak it, eh?" pressed Poleon, hungry for more demonstrative expression. "Ob-h!" she sighed. "Where on earth did you get it? Why, it must have cost a fortune!"

"Wan night I gamble in begg saloon. Yes, sir! I gamble good dat night too. For w'e I play roulette, den I dance, den I play some more, an' by an' by I see a new dress gal. She's Franchee (Continued on Page 8.)

A Step Toward Peace

The greatest menace to the peace of the world to-day is the keen rivalry between Germany and Great Britain in the building of warships. When the Emperor William grandiloquently declared that the future of Germany was on the high sea he sent his people forward upon a policy of adventure that was bound inevitably to arouse distrust and suspicion in Great Britain. The people of the United Kingdom were not greatly concerned over the predominant place achieved on the European continent by the German Empire, nor seriously alarmed over Germany's military supremacy, but when the Kaiser, with characteristic unwisdom, proclaimed his ambition to achieve naval supremacy also there was nothing left for Britain but a declaration that only bankruptcy would prevent her from maintaining the overwhelming naval strength that is essential to self-preservation.

And so for a dozen years or so the apprehension has been growing in the Chancelleries of Europe that armed conflict between the rulers of the sea and the overlord of the continent was inevitable. Germany it is asserted, has been driven into her policy of naval expansion by the knowledge that within a generation her annual increase in numbers will result in a population so great as to constitute a grave danger to the stability of the Empire if relief cannot be found in emigration. It always has been open to the German to emigrate, but the Government looked with an unfriendly eye upon the emigration of the youth of the fatherland to the United States, Canada, Brazil, or some other country where they would be lost to Germany and add to the strength of her rivals. Colonies were therefore regarded as an absolute necessity for Germany, but she had come so late into the ranks of the great powers that all the "white man's" colonies had been taken possession of by other powerful nations, and could be obtained only at the cost of war.
The smile is not a very happy one, but Germany felt herself to be much in the position of a burglar who wants to get at the contents of a safety vault and has neither a jimmy nor a charge of nitro-glycerine in his possession. The German navy was intended to pry open the vault.

It is possible that the arrangement between Germany and Great Britain outlined in a well-informed Vienna publication may take a much wider scope than the limitation of naval armaments.
Were Great Britain to say to Germany that she would not view as an unfriendly act the planting of German colonies in portions of Asia minor or Syria which Germany has long had longing eyes the greatest obstacle to the world's peace has been removed. The population of the Near East coveted by the Kaiser is sparse, and a compact German colony of fifteen or twenty millions in Asia Minor, Syria, or Mesopotamia in succession to Turkish misrule would injure no supreme British interest, and would interpose a powerful barrier between the yellow man and the nations of western Europe should the Orient break loose once more and enter upon a career of world conquest.

Germany, free to pursue her great object of keeping her surplus population under her own flag, would probably be content to see Britain rule on the ocean.
The Germans would still retain their supremacy on land, and for the philosophical, ease loving Teutons that should be sufficient. Germany is not fond of militarism for its own sake. Her people are not, like the Latins, liable to be led away by any appeal to advance the glory of the nation. The true glory of Germany is to be found in the realms of science and education and invention.
She has long led the world in many of the arts of peace. Freed from the pressure upon her resources occasioned by rivalry with Britain, she would be in a position to go forward even more rapidly along the line of material development and intellectual achievement. If Sir Edward Grey is able to come to an understanding with Germany he will have done more than any other man living toward the promotion of world peace.—

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Family as Shoplifters

Boston, Dec. 20.—Goods of all sorts ranging from needles to dressed poultry, amounting to more than $5,000 in value, and believed to have been stolen from department stores, were found today by the police at No. 34 Newark street, Roxbury.

Mrs. Elizabeth Knabler, sixty-three and her children, Miss Margaret, twenty-four; Miss Lillian, nineteen, and Frank, twenty-three were arrested.

Five patrol wagon loads of the plunder were hauled from the house to the police station. The police say the goods show that some of the plunder was stolen twenty years ago.

A Veteran

On Tuesday last a man who has played an important part in modern Canadian history, and who is still actively in the public arena, will complete his eighti-seventh year. The reference is to Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who was born in England, Dec. 27, 1832. In 1852 Sir Mackenzie came to Canada with his parents, settled at Belleville, Upper Canada, and has lived there ever since. He had no short or favored pathway to success. Yet he has filled almost every position of School Trustee of his own town, member of the Legislative Council of Canada, as a thoroughly representative man whose integrity, capacity and regard for the public welfare have stood the test of years. Sir Mackenzie wears his years as he does his honors, easily. He might readily pass for a man on the sunny side of seventy-five. His personal friends everywhere express hearty good wishes for him.—St. J. Globe.

Canadian Pacific Railway Ship Lines

(Montreal Star.)
Despite the fact that when Mr. Arthur Piers arrived here a few days ago it was expected that Sir Thomas Slingshess would make an announcement in regard to the Canadian Pacific Railway's plans for an improved Atlantic and Pacific service, it now appears that nothing will be made public until Mr. Piers has returned to the Old Country and conferred once more with those who have put in tenders for the building of the proposed steamships.

Mr. Piers had another conference Thursday with Sir Thomas over the matter of new ships. After it was over the president still maintained his attitude of Monday, saying that there was nothing ready for the public yet. Mr. Piers shook his head smilingly and hurried away. Although the head of the navigation department only arrived here on Saturday he is leaving again on the Empress of Britain from St. John on Friday. He said he might be back in Canada next month or next summer or a year from next summer. It was an uncertain world and one never knew.

The building of boats suitable to contend for the Government mail subsidy, which will be open to tenderers in 1912, would appear to be the chief aim of the Canadian Pacific. The Allans, who now hold the contract, leased in part to the C. P. R., are planning two large vessels, as is already known. The Canadian Pacific will, it is thought, try to go one better than the Allans. Twenty thousand tonners and twenty-two knotters is their ambition.

Mistress.—What does this mean, Jan? You know you should be back at 10 o'clock.

Jan.—Very sorry, mum. It's the fault of these new skirts. I had to take such short steps that it took longer than I expected to get home.—Boston Transcript.

The Baptist Sunday School held their annual Xmas concert on Monday evening in Paul's hall. A programme consisting of singing, recitations, exercises, dialogues, and tableaux was successfully carried out. After this a Christmas tree loaded with candies, toys etc., was stripped of its trimmings much to the delight of the children who eagerly awaited the present with their name upon it.

ROIX

The school and Sunday school at Roix together gave a concert and Xmas tree on 21st which called forth the joyous admiration of a large assemblage of people.

Many willing hands had for days been engaged in decorating the school-room for the occasion. Around the front of the room was draped wreaths of green interspersed with flags, bells and wreaths and the words Merry Xmas and Welcome here in silver color on black back ground made a pretty effect with the green arch the words had been neatly arranged by Mrs. Frank Fisher. A Happy Xmas by Mrs. Sarge Roix and Xmas Greetings by Mrs. Herb Fisher added much to the beauty of the room.

The programme was carried out as follows: Readings, songs, recitations and dialogues by the children of the school, a reading by Mrs. Herb Fisher. The illumination of the Xmas tree with candles, Jap lanterns, frost work and bright trimmings, strings of pop-corn and numerous presents for nearly all present adorned the tree which set at front of the room. The last part was the arrival of Santa Claus who was not in his usual good health having collided with an airship near Basin bay. Then with the assistance of Herb and Ernest Fisher and Sarge Roix, Santa Claus delivered the presents.

The children of the Sunday school each received bags of candy and oranges from their teachers Mrs. Herbert Fisher and Mrs. Frank Fisher.

Miss M. Matheson teacher of the school gave each numerous presents.

After the tree had been picked of its treasures the company listened to two songs, The blind girl and The music hall, after which, God Save the King was sung by eight girls, Vestia and Jennie Hill, Ethel and Rosie Wilcox Eva and Myrtle Fisher, Alma Donohoe and Gladys Fisher. The party broke up wishing Santa Claus a Happy Xmas.

While thanking those who tried to make it a success we must not omit to thank Mrs. David Holt and Clarence Miller for many costly and beautiful presents to their many friends.

England's Women Mayors

There are now three women mayors in England, two of whom were recently elected. Miss Gwenllian E. F. Morgan, the newly-elected Mayor of Brecon, has a splendid public record for Philanthropy and social service. She comes of a very old family, purely Welsh, with whom scholarship and interest in the general welfare have been a tradition; and of this family she and her younger sister, also unmarried, are the very last. Miss Morgan's interests are by no means confined to unions, the housing question, the advance of education, and the temperance cause. She has been all her days a great and discriminating reader, especially in English history and literature, and holds a high reputation as an antiquary in South Wales, a land of antiquities. She has also a keen literary sense, and writes as well as she speaks. She has numbered among her distinguished friends, now dead, Mr. Robert Browning, Mr. Gladstone, and Lady de Rothschild.

Mrs. Lees, the new Mayor of Oldham, has taken a prominent part in the opening of playgrounds, and has herself given eleven acres of land to one of these and another large estate to another. She is ambitious to see a playground in every congested area. Mrs. Lees has large interests in the local cotton industry, and she was the first woman town councillor in Lancashire.—Exchange.

Healthy Happy Children

As everyday food for growing children, good bread and butter is much more wholesome than meat. It is lighter in the stomach, more easy to digest and furnishes every element of health and strength necessary for the growing child, provided the flour is rich in that fine quality of high grade gluten which distinguishes Ogilvie's

Royal Household Flour.

It is this rich nourishing element which makes children grow fat and happy when given plenty of bread made from this finest of all flours. Children thrive on it. It puts flesh on their bones and brings the rosy flush of health to their cheeks.

This is not so with bread made from inferior flours. It falls very far short of being whole food and fails to build up strong, vigorous growth. For the children's sake buy the best flour—Ogilvie's Royal Household. It counts for health and happiness. Best and most nutritious for pastry as well as for bread.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook," with 125 pages of recipes that have been tried and tested, will be sent free if you will send us your address and mention the name of your dealer.

A Forest of Cedars

Some time ago it was stated that cedar wood had become so scarce that a German chemist had discovered a process of treating potatoes whereby a substitute was obtained for the cedar casings of lead pencils. The chemist's discovery is not likely to turn out as profitable as was anticipated, for the news is to hand of the discovery in Germany East Africa of a magnificent forest of cedar trees. Already several consignments of cedar logs have reached Hamburg, and it is said that the future of the cedar pencil industry is assured.

The Duke of Connaught

There would be many regrets, but not a great deal of surprise, if the information sent out from Ottawa on Friday in regard to the Governor Generalship should turn out to be correct. Indeed, there was always uncertainty in many minds as to whether or not the Duke of Connaught would be able to come to Canada for five years; but, leaving this out of the question entirely, the Duke's best place in the coming year—a year of important possibilities—is England, where the King will certainly need the sage advice of a disinterested man of his own family, and of a generation older than his own.

Died of His Injuries

J. J. McPeters, who was struck by a passenger train some weeks ago at the depot, died suddenly yesterday about eleven after great suffering. He was born Nov. 30, 1861 at St. George, N. B. and was married to Mary Smith June 22, 1882. Six children were born to them. John, Rose, Nellie, Mabel, Tyler, Zale. The funeral services will be from the home Thursday morning at ten o'clock, Rev. A. D. Stowe officiating. Interment in Oak Grove.

Mr. McPeters was a member of the Episcopal church. He was beloved by his family and a large circle of friends. The sympathy of all goes out to the home made desolate by his death. Mr. McPeters was a native of St. George leaving here about 32 years ago and for some years has been living at Parkham, Minn., where he died, he will be remembered by many of the middle aged and older residents of the town, his mother, two sisters and two brothers who survive him still live here.

During the year just ending New York has had 183 homicides, while London, with a much larger population, has had but 19, or about one-tenth as many.
