FOE IN FULL RETREAT!

ARMY OF GERMANY RETIRING RAPIDLY, BURNING VILLAGES

Harrassed By Constant Pressure of Allied Forces Enemy Is In Full Retreat Towards Vast Plateau Southeast of Soissons — French, British and Americans Advance Ten Miles or More Through Villages Mercilessly Set on Fire.

Long Before Daylight Entire Sky Lighted Up By Reflection of the Flames, While Allies Continued in Active Pursuit of Fleeing Foe — Allies Capture Numerous Important Points.

Special cable to New York Tribune and St. John Standard. (By Wilbur S. Forrest).

General Field Headquarters With the French Armies, Aug. 2.—Harassed by the constant pressure of the Allied forces, the enemy today is again retreating towards the vast plateau southeast of Soissons, which with the communication centre, Braisne, on the heights, and Fismes in the valley at the foot of the plateau will give him a more advantageous position.

With the American troops on both wings and the Franco-British troops in the centre, the Allied soldiers advanced today through the villages which the enemy is mercilessly leaving in flames in his wake.

Long before daylight the entire sky was lighted by the reflection of the flames, while the Allies continued in active pursuit of the fleeing foe.

Important Conquest. The conquest by the Allies of the wooded ridge north of the village of Grand Reuzy, having an average altitude of from 100 to 200 yards, was the turning point of the battle.

On Wednesday the enemy fought desperately to retain these heights which were defended by massed artillery in the rear and thousands of machine guns. These he lost and today's retreat is the result.

Just under these heights on Tuesday I experienced the enemy's raking artillery which was active over the entire lower country, indicating his ardent desire to retain the heights.

This afternoon, the Allies occupied Braisne, Fismes and the woods to the southward, the village of Coueremoin and after a short clash, North Happony and Miday.

South of Ourcq the Allied lines pressed apart the thickets north of Goussancourt, on the Coulanges road, and the Vexilly Woods. Here the enemy's resistance was feeble. On the eastern side of the battlefield the Germans finally took refuge in the wooded heights southwest of Rheims.

This afternoon the French captured Soissons and Ville-en-Tardenois, and the infantry within 500 yards of Villers Apton. The woods, 3,500 yards east of Romigny, are occupied by the Allies as is the village of Forchies. The Allies' advance was general until nightfall.

Whimpering William Issues Proclamation

Blasphemously Refers To "The Divine Hand" and "Task Before Which Providence Has Placed Us"—Germany Sorely in Need of Peace Will Continue To Fight.

Amsterdam, Aug. 2.—In a proclamation issued to the German people, Emperor William says:

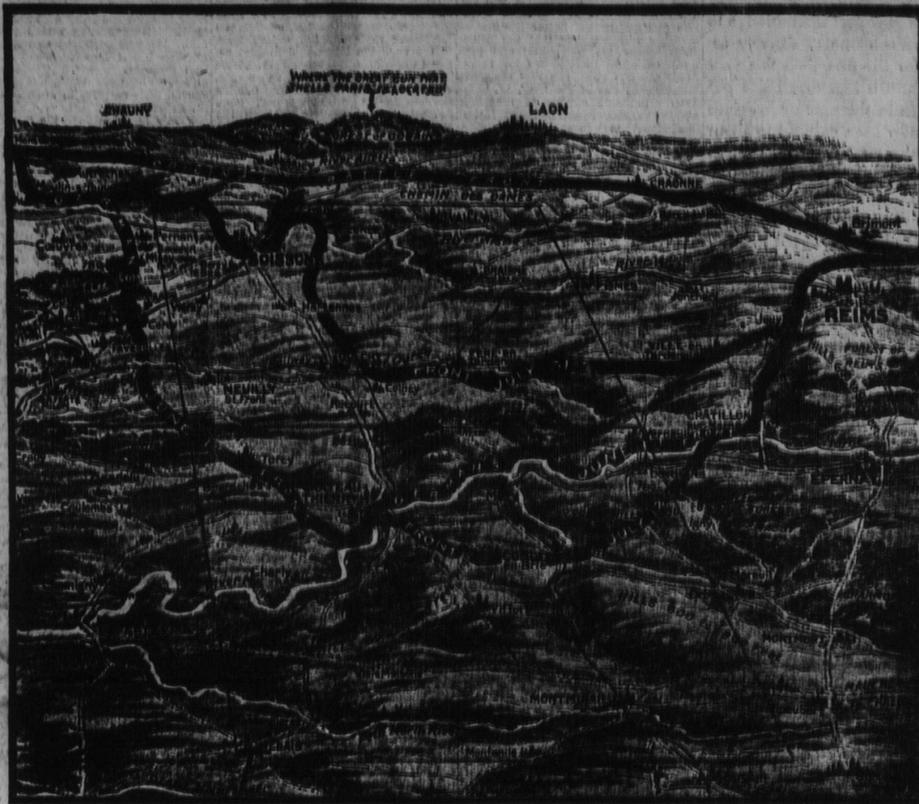

"Four years of hard struggle have passed, full of eternally memorable deeds. An example has been given for all time of what a people can do that stands in the field for a most just cause and for the maintenance of its existence."

"Graciously revering the Divine Hand which has been graciously extended over Germany, we may proudly say we were not found unworthy in the tremendous task before which Providence placed us."

"If in the struggle our nation was given leaders capable of the highest achievements, it has daily proved by its deeds that it has deserved to have such leaders. How could the army front have performed its tremendous deeds if the entire labor at home had not been carried to the highest measure of personal performance?"

Spared No Home. "Wide gaps have been torn in our families, and the suffering of this terrible war has spared no German home. Those who, as boys in their first enthusiasm, saw the first troops depart, stand, themselves, today beside their fathers and brothers as warriors at the front."

"Sacred duty commands that everything be done that this precious blood does not flow in vain. Nothing has been neglected by us to restore peace to the devastated world. The voice of

THE BATTLEFRONT BEFORE THE LATEST GERMAN RETREAT.

GERMANS ABANDON ALL OF VALUABLE CHADUN HEIGHTS

With the French Army in France, Aug. 2.—(By The Associated Press)—The Germans are in retreat on all sides of the salient between the Aisne and the Marne. On the west the French and British troops, continuing their push of Thursday, have reached the valley of the Crise, a little river which joins the Aisne at Soissons.

The Germans therefore have abandoned the whole of the Chadun Plateau, between the Couverg and Crise Valley.

WANTS NEXT VICTORY LOAN BONDS TAXED President Dickinson of Financial Times, Montreal, Opposes Tax-Free Issue.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—In an editorial under the caption "Patriotism via tax exemption," T. Kelly Dickinson, president of the Financial Times, will tomorrow voice a strong protest against the issuing of tax-exempt bonds by the Dominion of Canada, in connection with the forthcoming Victory loan.

DOWLING MUST DIE London, Aug. 2.—Lance Corporal Joseph Dowling of the Connaught Rangers, who was landed on the coast of Ireland from a German submarine three months ago, was pronounced guilty today and sentenced to death.

Over the battle front the Allies by quick and forcible methods of onslaught have deeply indented the German defence line for splendid gains, which seemingly fore-shadow the necessity of the eventual retirement of the forces of the German Crown Prince to more tenable grounds in the north.

The battle on the north front of the Marne resumed itself during the night and this morning into almost a general retirement of the enemy north of the Ourcq, with the Allies pursuing the Germans with the greatest zeal and success.

Hortennes Captured The town of Hortennes-St-Faust was occupied by the Allies, who also seized the wood lying to the south of this most important place. The French and British in this section took Contremains and then crossed the Chateau-Thierry-Soissons road.

Many Towns Captured Numerous towns and hamlets have been captured by the Allied troops during the latest fighting, and at some points they have advanced from two to three miles. South of Soissons the entire Crise river has been forded by the Allied troops.

Near Gates of Rheims Farther eastward almost to the gates of Rheims, combined forces of British and French everywhere are sorely harassing the enemy. In this latter region's tradition to Thillois, the village of Ville-en-Tardenois is in Allied hands and the French now are on the heels of the Germans two and a half miles north of the Dormans-Rheims high road over a front of nearly four miles.

Staggering Successes in Rigging the Crise. Throughout the later phases of the battle the Germans have not shown their stamina of previous days, and at some points the Allied troops, particularly the Americans, were able to make their way into German positions with virtually no opposition being imposed.

Huns Lack Stamina. Throughout the later phases of the battle the Germans have not shown their stamina of previous days, and at some points the Allied troops, particularly the Americans, were able to make their way into German positions with virtually no opposition being imposed.

The allies pressed through a series of thickets to the north of the road leading from Goussancourt to Coulanges and reached the southern part of Vexilly Wood.

Further east on the line the allies are within 500 yards of Villers-Agron and along the line towards Rheims they captured a wood situated 1,500 yards east of Romigny.

Allied patrols have attained a position three-fifths of a mile north of Ville-en-Tardenois, and have occupied a height 1,500 yards north of Romigny.

Along the centre of the front as well as on the westerly side the German resistance seemed greatly diminished.

FRENCH ARMY ENTERS CITY OF SOISSONS

Germans Compelled To Retreat Along the Entire Soissons-Rheims Line.

IMPORTANT POSITIONS ARE RELINQUISHED

The French Cross the Crise River Along the Whole of Its Front.

VILLE-EN-TARDENOIS IN HANDS OF ALLIES

French Army in Centre Is Progressing Widely North of Ourcq.

Paris, Aug. 2.—French troops have entered Soissons, according to the French official communication issued this evening.

Over the entire line between Soissons and the vicinity of Rheims the Germans have been compelled to give up important positions and retreat precipitately, the communication adds. The Crise river has been crossed along the whole of its front, further progress has been made in the center of the fighting line and on the east the Allied line has been pushed more than three miles north of the Dormans-Rheims Road.

The text of the communication follows: Attacks conducted during the past two days by our troops and Allied units on the front north of the Marne have obtained full success, the Germans having been pushed back over all the line and forced to abandon the positions of resistance they had chosen between Perce-en-Tardenois and Ville-en-Tardenois and to retreat precipitately.

Troops Enter City. "On our left our troops have entered Soissons. More to the south they have crossed the Crise along the whole of the river front."

"On our centre we are progressing widely north of the Ourcq. We have passed Arey-Sainte-Beuve and penetrated the Bois de Dole."

"More to the east, Coulanges, four kilometres north of the Bois Menieres is in our possession."

Villages Taken. "On our right Goussancourt, Villers-Agron and Ville-en-Tardenois are in our hands."

"On this part of the front we carried our line about five kilometres north of the Dormans-Rheims Road on the general line of Vexilly and Lhery."

"Between the Ardre and the Vesle we have occupied Guery and Thilliers."

"Aviation—On the 21st seven German airplanes were downed during the day. Twenty-two tons of explosives were dropped on aviation grounds between the Aisne and the Vesle and on barracks and encampments of the enemy in the valleys of the Ardre and Vesle."

N. S. MAN KILLED Relatives at River Hoberi have received word of the death in Bridge-water, Mass., of Clifford M. Greenfield, formerly of the Nova Scotia village, Greenfield was instantly killed while testing a new gasoline engine in a factory. A long doctor he was wearing became entangled in the fly wheel and he was badly mangled. He leaves a wife, daughter and a mother, Mrs. John Greenfield, of River Hoberi.

NORWEGIAN BRIG SUNK London, Aug. 2.—The Norwegian brig Althor of Arendale was sunk off the coast of Norway on Wednesday by a German submarine. The crew was saved.

London, Aug. 2.—Upward of 200 returned soldiers paid an announced visit to the labor temple this afternoon, broke down some inside doors, secured entrance to the offices and threw books and records in the street. V. R. Midgeley, a prominent laborman, was taken into the street and secured his freedom after he had kissed the Union Jack. The soldiers protesting against the 24 hour strike called on account of the killing of Goodwin, alleged draft evader.

THE GERMAN FORCES CONTINUE THE ALLIES

ESTIMATED THAT GERMAN HAS 2,700,000 MEN ON WEST FRONT

Believed Enemy Divisions Number 201 and That Strength of Each About 13,500 Men — Enemy Liable To Strike Another Blow Somewhere Shortly — Foch Rearranges His Forces To Meet Any New Move.

Special cable to New York Tribune and St. John Standard. (By Arthur S. Draper).

London, Aug. 2.—Despite the arrivals of Americans, the German forces on the western front still considerably outnumber those of the Allies, according to the best military opinion. On this basis it is unwise to expect the initiative to pass definitely to the Allies unless Foch now actively assumes the offensive. The Allies for the first time this year actually possess more fresh divisions, a fact that holds out the possibility of an Allied campaign in the autumn. Prince Rupprecht's fresh divisions have now been reduced to about twenty. The German forces on the west front amount to 201 divisions (about 2,700,000 men), out of the former estimate of 204. Two of the 204 are known to have disbanded, while the remaining one has been discovered on the east front. The Germans are believed to be keeping the fighting strength of their divisions up to about 13,500 men, of which about 7,000 are bayonet.

Another Hun Offensive?

Every day diminishes the chance the Germans have of striking a successful blow on another part of the front. Military opinion here fully admits the probability of such a blow. Foch is known to have made certain dispositions of his forces in order to counter the most probable enemy moves. Apart from another Paris thrust, Italy may be the scene of the next enemy effort or there is a possibility of a move in the Balkans. If the enemy elects the Balkans as the scene of the winter fighting, Von Mackensen may command. He has displayed remarkable capacity, getting on well with the Bulgarians and Turks. After the murder of Von Eichen Mackensen is almost the only German general of pre-war glory who lives with undiminished reputation. Nevertheless, Mackensen is reported to be considered in Germany as a mere general and unworthy to stand beside Ludendorff, whose plans Mackensen merely carried out in his successful eastern drives.

Two Locomotives At Salisbury Badly Damaged—No Person Seriously Hurt—E. Stevens Promoted—Consumers League.

Special to The Standard.

Moncton, Aug. 2.—Running into an open switch at Salisbury this morning the St. John bound Maritime Express crashed into a freight train standing on the siding, smashing both locomotives considerably, but fortunately doing little or no other damage. The engines escaped injury by jumping from their engines before the locomotives struck. The express was running behind time and was running at the rate of about thirty miles an hour, it is said, when the collision occurred.

The passenger cars were not derailed and although the passengers received a bad jolt none was seriously injured.

The express engine was so badly damaged that another locomotive had to be despatched from Moncton to take the train to its destination.

E. Stevens has been promoted to safety engineer on the C. G. R. vice J. E. Long, who recently resigned from the service to accept a position

The Bilious Habit

Some people have bilious spells about every so often until they get to be a habit. The liver is at fault. Get the liver right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the bile will not collect in the blood until it poisons you.

There is no one organ in the human body which has so great a control of health as the liver. Hence the far-reaching effect of this treatment.

BOLSHEVIKI THE: N. W.

Adopt the Platform of These Disloyalists — The Sanity of Labor in America That Has Kept It From the Banner of These Assistant Huns

How the Bolsheviki Destroyed in Russia--Control For the Germans--Downing Employers--Then Starvation.

(Washington Cor. Boston Transcript.) If the American people will grasp the fact that the Bolsheviki in Russia are (by name) as the I. W. W. in the United States, that they have adopted the platform of these hulking disloyalists and that their aim is to wreck Russian industry, on the theory that what has been smashed will be in much better condition after it has been put together again, they will get a clearer idea of the Russian situation and understand better the statement which insists that the Allies shall never be able to win the war so long as Russia exists. Since the war opened in 1914 the traveling ruffians of the I. W. W. have been organizing strikes in munition plants, burning properties, instigating workmen in an attempt to shut off war production. It is immaterial whether these gentry have been in the pay of Germany or whether they have been able to accomplish as well helped Germany to that extent; and had labor as a whole been stupid enough to follow the policies of these professional workmen who never work for wages, which could be brought about promptly and easily by the simple method of holding up the business for more than it could pay, when the workers would walk out and the workers "taken over" later by the workmen, back into the ground and then handed over as a confession of incapacity. A scheme even quicker and easier was devised by the Bolsheviki, and they proceeded to carry it out. They demanded that the labor leaders first be put to death for more money. These demands were put forth, as a rule, not by the workmen but by outside German agents, who appeared from nowhere, served an ultimatum on the labor leaders and told him his property would be confiscated by the Government or turned over to the workmen in some instances, or where the employer could get a chance to talk things over with his men, these attempts failed, but in many others they succeeded, and in many others they succeeded as a going concern was ruined. It was then very difficult for the German agent, particularly in view of the fact that the Bolsheviki had no money, to offer to buy out the establishment, which he got for a song. Most of the intermediaries in these transactions, it was noted, were Jews, who may have come or have been local representatives of the Bolsheviki, who had too much authority to work in the shops and too little fighting quality to stand against the graft and terrorism which prevailed.

Stagnation and Starvation.

The foregoing are only a few sidelights upon conditions under the Bolsheviki government, which have rapidly resulted in the disintegration of all business and industry. In the outlying country the estates of the nobles were divided up, and the peasants, who were once the owners of the land, were reduced to a state of starvation. The Bolsheviki government, which was once the owners of the land, were reduced to a state of starvation. The Bolsheviki government, which was once the owners of the land, were reduced to a state of starvation.

Support the Czechoslovaks.

Into this disorganized situation was interjected by the fortune of war the one hundred thousand or more Czechoslovaks, former Austrian prisoners, who, armed and equipped by the Bolsheviki government, for service in France, were making their way as best they could to Vladivostok, where they hoped to embark to join the Allies on the western front. The Bolsheviki government, which was once the owners of the land, were reduced to a state of starvation.

New German Intrigue Planned.

So much for generalities. It is possible to get some detail how German intrigue proceeded with its plan of gaining control of the Russian empire. The Bolsheviki are largely Jewish. One of their first acts upon gaining control of the Government was to throw out the Russian Government clerks and substitute Jewish clerks. Your correspondent does not intend to indict the Jews for their connection with the Russian troubles, but he does declare unqualifiedly that some of the most dangerous German agents in Russia have been and today are Jews. How they have operated to destroy all semblance of reputable authority in Russia, and thus permit the Bolsheviki to carry out their destructive doctrines is one of the stories of the revolution which cannot be omitted when the history of that event is written. It will be interesting now to examine how the German schemes were worked.

Loosening Control to the Germans.

Among the early orders of the Bolsheviki government was one prohibiting the withdrawal of more than 100 rubles from a bank by any one individual in one week—a fairly stringent restriction when it is remembered that a square meal could not be bought at the time for less than 25 rubles. The object of this order was, it may be needless to say, to cripple the well-to-do element of the population, as it succeeded effectually in doing. Jewelry and other articles of value came into the market and were bought up eagerly by speculators; and after possession of this character had become pretty well exhausted, the bourgeoisie began to part with their holdings in industrial corporations. German agents, plentifully armed with money, were found in all directions, and in course of time many of the people who hitherto have been the financial and industrial pillars of the community had been compelled to part with so much of their property that business and manufacturing establishments of all kinds, large and small, ceased to function. Thus the enemy laid his foundations.

Devilish to Down the Employer.

Meantime the workmen had been busy in the factories. A favorite trick, of course, was to strike for high wages, which could be brought about promptly and easily by the simple method of holding up the business for more than it could pay, when the workers would walk out and the workers "taken over" later by the workmen, back into the ground and then handed over as a confession of incapacity.

MYSTERY OF MISSING TSAR, PETER THE THIRD OF RUSSIA

That Emperor Dropped Out of Sight Suddenly After Reigning Few Years — No One Knew What Became of Him — Man Claiming To Be Peter Appeared in Montenegro.

The business of being Tsar of Russia had always been attended with more than the ordinary amount of personal risk. He was supposed to have been murdered, or he was supposed to have been killed, or he was supposed to have been taken over by the workmen, or he was supposed to have been taken over by the workmen, or he was supposed to have been taken over by the workmen.

But, he was too successful!

Montenegro was advancing so rapidly to suit the purposes of the other nations. They only waited for a chance to weaken the power of Stefan Moll. It came sooner than was expected. The various countries became involved in war, Russia desired Montenegro to join with it in fighting the Turks. Stefan, being a prudent King, was not disposed to help the Russians to pull these chestnuts out of the fire. His enemies said this was not prudence, but cowardice.

Anyhow, he awoke one morning to find that the Empress Catherine had denounced him as an impostor. Did he fight to retain his throne. Not at all. He said that he had done the best he could for the Montenegro, but that if they didn't want him he was perfectly willing to step down and out. He admitted that he was not Peter III, but merely Stefan Moll. They could like it or not, they didn't like it and cast him into prison, which is a fate that has been shared by many of the world's greatest men.

Sava now had the responsibilities of office thrust upon him. Sava was not a strong man and with the nation in all sorts of difficulties, it was necessary to find a new ruler at once. None seemed to be in sight except Stefan Moll, who was in prison. He had been tried and found true. So what did the people do but take him from his cell and place him in charge of the government again.

This time they called him Regent—but a King under any other title is just as powerful. He justified all of their expectations and the people found themselves comparatively happy and prosperous.

But this is a hard world. Stefan Moll incurred enemies. One of them was the Pacha of Scutari, Kara Mohound. This man sent for a Greek player named Cassanagra and whispered something in his ear. That night Stefan Moll, false Tsar pretender and really able ruler, was murdered in his bed.

Help the cause of the Allies in establishing freedom for the Jews.

The supper was served by the ladies of Red Moon Dovid under the leadership of Mrs. J. Goldman, vice president. During the evening the recruits sang the Jewish national song, "Ar Tekva" and ended up with "God Save the King." Afterwards a smoke and a talk was enjoyed.

Each Jewish family took two or three recruits to stop with them overnight. They will report at the Armory early this morning and then leave for Camp Fort Edward in Windsor, N. S.

ESKIMO AGE RECORDS.

The Eskimo people have no books. They can neither read nor write. But they can tell immediately, by looking into a bag, the age of each little fat Eskimo playing about the hut in the snow and cold.

This is the way they know, says the Myrtle. When a baby comes to an Eskimo house, or igloo, a fur bag is given to the little one. She is to keep this bag as long as she lives.

Every year, when the sun comes once more after the long, cold Greenland night, a bone is put into the little bag. So when you look into the little bag and see seven bones, you know the little owner is 7 years old.

Many left on the Montreal express accompanied by their wives. It is stated that these men are taking out commissions at Ottawa as officers in the colored battalions.

OUR INCONSISTENT ORDERS GIVEN GERMAN ARMY

WHY GERMAN HIGH COMMAND CHANGED ORDERS SO OFTEN

Hilaire Belloc Discusses At Length Some Peculiar Phases of and Remarkable Shifts in Enemy Plan of Campaign During Past Week or So—Political Considerations Probably Had Much To Do With Policy of High Command.

Special cable to New York Tribune and St. John Standard. (By Hilaire Belloc).

London, Aug. 2.—The problem which has been puzzling all observers of the war ever since General Foch launched his counter offensive on July 18 has now been largely solved. The problem was to interpret the mind of the German high command, as shown in its action between Rheims and Soissons, after Foch had broken his offensive and turned the strategic situation inside out, fully recovering the initiative for the Allies by his great counter blow.

The enemy acted after this movement for fully ten days in a fashion which it was impossible to interpret upon any one plan. First, he simply stood in his positions in the south as though awaiting orders, or uncertain of his intention. Second, a full thirty-six hours after the great French success toward Soissons, which threatened his communications, his eight foremost divisions which had been thrown across the Marne were withdrawn across the river, and it looked as though the enemy had decided upon the wisest course open to him—to fall back and flatten out the salient; to make himself militarily secure at the expense of a little ground and the mere moral loss of prestige.

The German Retreat.

The opinion that he was boldly going to cut his losses and fall back was confirmed by his leaving Chateau Thierry voluntarily, and it looked, during three days, that is, up to about July 22, as though we were in the presence of the simple and obvious manoeuvre on the part of a force surprised and threatened in its communication—to wit, a retirement and flattening out of the salient.

Beaten Out of Every Position. But at that moment another policy appeared. Congested as the enemy already was with some four hundred thousand men in a district only thirty miles broad and about twenty miles deep, with his railroad communications cut, his road communications poor, his two great road junctions under close and continuous fire and his ground cut up by woods and hills, the enemy, instead of deliberately going back further in order to relieve the situation, reversed himself, called in fresh divisions and attempted to maintain his uncertain line.

Reckless Attacks. He kept on counter attacking with the utmost violence and at reckless expense, he borrowed from the reserves in the north at least as many as ten divisions—perhaps more—about the he disputed every foot of ground against the pressure the Allies were exercising all around the ring of the salient. There were even cases of his regaining ground for a moment, as at Ville Montoire, and whenever he went back at all it was only because he was beaten out of his positions. He daily lost prisoners and guns, and he refused for a whole week any signs of voluntary retirement.

Then, on Saturday, July 27, he suddenly fell back by miles from the south. We can see pretty clearly what this confusion and contradiction came from. Three policies, or three orders, were successively adopted, and at last a fourth policy, which was a reversion to the second one of frank retreatment. Of this there can be no doubt, though the motives for these changes are less certain.

Could Not Credit Their Failure. The first order, under which the ground below the Marne was held, was clearly one based on the conception by the German high command that their offensive would continue. In other words, the enemy's high command did not appreciate at first the significance of General Mangin's advance to the neighborhood of Soissons.

The Second Order. The second order must have been dated some time on Friday, July 19, a full thirty-six hours after the Allied counter stroke had been delivered. It was plainly an order for a general retreatment, for the enemy not only went back across the Marne but left Chateau Thierry and its neighborhood. The weakening of his artillery fire showed that he was pushing back his guns, and the actions he was fighting were those of rear guards rather than true counter attacks.

After about another equal interval, probably early on Sunday, comes the third order. The German troops in the unfortunate salient were hidden to cause their retirement, to hold on at all costs and to keep as much of the ground they were occupying as possible. On July 28 there suddenly reappeared the policy of a general retirement. Now, why have these four successive policies, each a contradiction of the last, followed the other in such a fashion? What successive motives have been at work?

Conflict Between Politics and Military Here we are reduced to conjecture. The commonest answer is the political one. We are told that here, as has so often been the case in the last few months, there has been a conflict between the purely military point of view in Germany and the civilian, or foreign office, point of view. With the French Army, Aug. 1—(By

ONTARIO AND MASSACHUSETTS MEN SHOOT GIRLS AND THEMSELVES

Young Woman Clerk At Timmins, Ont., Post Office Slain in Hotel.

GUESTS STARTLED BY SHOTS IN THE PARLOR

Man Who Killed Girl and Himself An Employee of Railroad.

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 2.—Guests at the Timmins Hotel last night about eight o'clock investigating the cause of two revolver shots, one right after the other, found the bodies of a man and a young woman on the settee in the hotel parlor. Both were shot through the head. Though doctors worked for two hours both died.

The situation is considered as extraordinarily good, being described in the advices as the turning point of the summer campaign and possibly of the whole war.

First, the refusal to withdraw, due to a misunderstanding of the gravity of the Allies' counter thrust on July 18th; then, a realization of the danger and the order to retire, followed in turn by political advice that civilian opinion in Germany would be grievously shaken by a retirement at this stage, which would be a confession of a military breakdown, inasmuch as it would proclaim to everybody that the great offensive had been broken and which would mean the restoration of Von Kuhlmann, who had fallen on account of his pronouncement that no military decision could be hoped for; and last, when the pressure became too great, the recognition that sheer military necessity compelled the abandonment of the southern end of the salient, which had been so tenaciously clung to on the Marne around Dormans.

The Associated Press)—General Mangin, with the French and British troops of his command, is fighting a battle north of the Ourcq River, and is making considerable progress.

After taking the village of Grand Rosoy, northwest of Fere-Banardens, the Allied troops advanced to the Plessiere Wood, where the combatants are in the closest of grips and the combat is extraordinarily fierce. The heights north of Grand Rosoy have fallen into the hands of the Allies and at several points the Allied troops have approached within five miles of the railroad leading to Bazoches, which is the only railroad that can be used by the Germans for maintaining communication.

WEDDINGS

Dykeman-Currie. A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Currie, Upper Jemseg, on Wednesday evening, July 31st, when their eldest daughter, Ella Maude, was united in marriage to Grover C. Dykeman. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. W. Brown, beneath a floral arch of green and white.

The bride who was given away by her father entered the drawing room to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by her sister, Miss Greta Currie. The bride was gowned in white duchess satin, with chiffon and carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair fern. The groom was attended by his brother Ford Dykeman, of St. John. After the ceremony a dainty supper was served.

The large number of presents which included several cheques, furniture, silver, cut glass and linen, testified to the popularity of the young couple. They were also remembered by a large party of their young friends who gathered at the bride's home a few evenings previous and presented her with a substantial sum of money. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful pearl necklace and to the bride a dainty pendant. Mrs. Dykeman will reside at Upper Jemseg.

The death of Mrs. Annie, widow of William Johnston, took place on Thursday at Lynn, Mass. Mrs. Johnston, before her marriage, Miss McMurry, was a native of St. John. She is survived by two sons and two sisters. Mrs. R. McAllister of New York, and Mrs. M. J. Gunter of this city. The funeral will be held today on the arrival of the Boston train.

Funeral of Miss Adelaide Louise Burnham took place yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from St. John's (Stone) church, where service was conducted by Rev. G. A. Kuhring, interment at Fernhill.

The funeral of Mrs. James H. Sears took place yesterday afternoon from her late residence, 33 Bellevue. Interment was made in Cedar Hill.

FUNERALS

The funeral of Capt. C. Bartlett McLean took place yesterday morning from his late residence, 155 Bridge street, to the Union Depot, whence the body was taken by the 7 o'clock train to Cumberland Bay, Queens county, for interment. Delegations from the Street Railwaymen's Union and the Trades and Labor Council attended the funeral.

The remains of Miss Augusta B. Wade, 105 St. James' street, West, were taken to St. Andrews yesterday morning for interment.

The funeral of Mrs. James H. Sears took place yesterday afternoon from her late residence, 33 Bellevue. Interment was made in Cedar Hill.

The Lure of Tomorrow

Here's a Good One. An old Scotch farmer had been approached again and again by the local representative of a fire insurance company to protect his farm against fire.

A SIMILAR kind of mistake to that of the Scotchman in this story is made by those who delay making application for life insurance protection. The insurance companies each year are compelled to reject thousands of people who have deferred their applications until too late.

Long and severe toil can build up a competence for your dependents—if life continues and if economy is practised. But by means of life insurance, the estate is made available immediately on the death of the assured, and does not depend upon the life and health of the policyholder being continued through many years.

Remember! 1.—The door of life insurance is opened only to those in normal health. Make your application before health declines. 2.—The cost of life insurance increases every year your application is deferred. 3.—To-day is ours, but we have no guarantee of to-morrow.

WAR COMMENT.

Yesterday, and on Thursday night, the Allied troops operating on the western front scored successes more pronounced and more valuable than any that have come to them since the opening days of General Foch's counter stroke against the German drive for Paris.

At nightfall on Thursday the Allies were at a point east of Pore-ent-Tardenois but during the night the Germans started to evacuate positions in which they had been subjected to a terrible pounding from Allied guns. Early yesterday morning, the Allies, the Franco-British troops in the centre of the line and the Americans on the wings, started to clear the enemy out of the country between Fere-en-Tardenois and Soissons. Before leaving they were completely successful, had taken many prisoners and much war material, recaptured Soissons and were steadily driving the Germans in the direction of the vast plateau southeast of that city. It may be that the enemy will make a stand on the high ground to which he has been driven but the indications are that the resistance he will be able to offer, even in that position, will be of comparatively brief duration.

The fighting in the earlier hours of yesterday is reported to have been very heavy as the enemy put up a stubborn resistance until the Allies captured the heavily wooded ridge north of the village of Grand Rozoy and on the road to Soissons. This ridge, which has an altitude of from 180 to 205 yards, proved a difficult spot but with the dash that has been characteristic of their campaign throughout, the Allies drove the enemy out and for the remainder of the day the Germans did not stand their ground on any portion of the sector.

Yesterday's success has demonstrated beyond question the superiority of the Allied soldiers over the men against whom they have been contending. It also adds to the lustre of General Foch's laurels as one of the greatest strategists the world has ever known. With the possible exception of the first battle of the Marne, the defeat inflicted on Germany during the past three weeks of fighting has been the sharpest and most decisive since the war began and altogether apart from the enemy's losses in men, materials and terrain, its effect upon the German people must be incalculable. It cannot be proved a most important factor in determining the further duration of the war.

In the complete defeat of the German armies the civilian population of the Kaiser's country must see complete justification for the statement of Von Kuhlmann that the Teutonic powers cannot now hope to win by force of arms alone, and with the vindication of Von Kuhlmann's judgment is also exposed the falsity of the promises held out by the German militarist party to whose anger that minister fell a victim.

The last vestige of illusion with which the Prussian militarists have misled the German people for four years has been swept away by the most recent successes of the Allies. Henceforth, no matter how their leaders may try to camouflage and conceal the fact, the people must know that their cause is doomed and must realize the bitter hopelessness of continuing to struggle with the whole world in arms against them. Together the events of the past three weeks have probably shortened the war at least three times as many months.

THIEVES FALL OUT.

One of the interesting reports from Europe is that the Turk and the Teuton have about come to the parting of the ways. As yet, a rumor that Berlin and Constantinople have fallen out reads official confirmation but there is no scarcity of indication that it is true. For a considerable time Turkey has been dissatisfied with the treatment accorded her by Germany and it has even been reported that a Turkish mission had gone to Switzerland in an effort to cultivate friendship with the Allies—securing a new spouse before divorcing the old.

The accession of the present Sultan to the throne of Turkey, several weeks ago, marked the commencement of a sharp change in the relations between what remains of the Ottoman Empire and Berlin. While the late Sultan ruled, dissatisfaction over German treatment and broken promises never got beyond the point of protest and Berlin managed to cajole or intimidate the Turks into accepting new promises as fulfillment of the old. But the new Sultan appears to be a "different sort of passenger." While there is no evidence to show he is more generously endowed with decency than his "unimpeachable" predecessor yet he must CLOTHING AN ARMY.

Some slight idea of the quantity of material required to clothe an army may be gathered from a report recently made by the Quartermaster General's Department of the United States army. It is reported that the Americans now have 1,200,000 men overseas with another million or so in training on this side of the ocean. The Quartermaster General's Department reports to Washington that from the time the United States entered the war until the middle of June the following articles and materials had been supplied:

- 27,248,000 pairs of shoes.
 - 104,333,000 pairs of wool stockings.
 - 2,340,000 pairs of rubber hip-boots.
 - 4,010,000 pairs of arctic over-shoes.
 - 43,922,000 undershirts, and 105,028,000 yards of denim cloth.
- This is at the rate of about ten pairs of shoes, a pair of rubber boots, two pairs of overshoes, twenty undershirts and fifty pairs of stockings for each man.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill: "Russia was not dead. Russia would never die. All the 'jackboots' of Potsdam would never tramp the soul out of Russia."
Hon. Arthur Meighan, M. P.: "With our vast resources the people of Canada view with confidence the tremendous competition that will succeed the war. The timber resources are immense, and the depletion of our forests by the cutting down of timber is more than made up by reforestation."
Premier Lloyd George: "This is a country which has faced great crises in the past. We hear about Ludendorff's hammer blows. Hammer blows are not new. We have seen them elsewhere, but to find new friends will be a difficult proposition, for the Allies do not want him at any price."

IN CARLETON COUNTY.

Making brief reference to remarks by The Standard about political projects in Carleton county, the Times remarks:

"The Standard is much worried over what may happen in Carleton county. That county is the stamping ground of Mr. J. K. Fleming, from whom the province wants $100,000, and of Mr. B. Frank Smith, of patriotic potato and road-truck fame. Something certainly ought to happen there. To the attention of our neighbor we commend the following from the last issue of the Woodstock Press:

"The scandal cry has been overworked in Carleton county. In the election of 1904 the Liberals were strongly entrenched in this county, having a majority of 274 votes. Carleton and Charlotte counties were the two Liberal strongholds in New Brunswick. By exercising good common sense this county could have been kept in the Liberal column. Then the Liberals commenced their campaign of slander against their political opponents which they have continued down to the present time. To be a whole as a fellow with the party as a whole all that was necessary was to invent some crime against the wicked Tories of Carleton. The log stealing charges, the patriotic potato charges, the Indian Reserve charges, etc., followed in rapid succession. The thicker the charges came, the larger grew the majorities of Hon. Mr. Fleming and Hon. Mr. Smith. After having been defeated in 1904 by 274 votes, the Conservative took complete charge of the county which they hold at present. On Sept. 21, 1916, Mr. Smith had a majority over Mr. McCain of 532 votes, and on Feb. 24, 1917, Mr. Smith had a majority of 745 over Mr. Upham. From a political standpoint, scandal, abuse and ridicule do not 'deliver the goods' in this county. It has been said that experience teaches even those bereft of mental perception. If this be true we trust the Times may learn from the Press' chronicle of past events in Carleton county what is likely to happen when next the electors of that constituency have an opportunity to exercise their franchise."

R. E. ARMSTRONG'S REPORT.

The suggestions made by the Secretary of the Board of Trade to the Council of that body, yesterday, as to the manner in which this city may meet some of the problems by which it is confronted, are of value only if acted upon. This newspaper is glad to see that the Board displayed the enterprise to send its chief administrative official to Halifax to observe conditions and bring back a report based upon what he had learned. Mr. Armstrong has fulfilled his part of the task; he has brought home a good report and the suggestions embodied therein merit a better fate than usual. By falls to similar efforts. He has provided sufficient material to keep the Board and its committees reasonably busy for the remainder of the summer and if action follows the discussion of the points he raises we may expect to see results that will be of some effect in the attainment of a bigger, better and busier St. John.

In the past there has been more or less doubt as to whether our Board of Trade fills the place it should fill in the affairs of the community; also there has been more than a suspicion that, at times, it, or some of its officers and members, did not keep altogether free from political partisanship. In considering the points in Mr. Armstrong's report the only question to be thought of is the good of the community, and the Board's action will be awaited with interest. Not for a long time has that body been afforded a better opportunity to prove its worth.

Little Benny's Note Book

BY LEE PAPE.

We was starting to eat breakfast, and I sed to pop, pop, can I have a exter sent for recess, if I had a exter sent I cood buy something exter, if I had a exter sent.
That strikes me as a tremendous quantity of words to kpriss a single idder, sed pop, however, the purity of your english aside, im atrad your request must go down in history as a request denied.
Meaning I coodent have the exter sent, and I sed, Aw, G, pop, wy not?
Thats a sensible question, and the anser to it is, on account of the war, sed pop.
I shoold say so, sed ma; if things keep on getting any higher I dont see how its possible. And jest then my sister Gladdis sed, Mother, look at how starting to pu a 3rd lump of sugar in his cawfee.
Benny, wat did I tell you about stopping at 2 lumps? sed ma.
Aw, G, ma, Ive got my fingers on it now, I sed.
Well take them off, sed ma. Wich I did, saying, Aw G, ma, wy not? On account of the war, sed ma.
Aw, G, is everything a account of the war? I sed.
Everything but one, sed pop, and my sister Gladdis sed, A persia cant even get the kind of face powder they want on account of the war.
Well, you dont need to drag in the atrocious, sed pop. And we keop on eating breakfast, and I got throo and started to go to skool, only I started so slow I got there late, Miss Kitty saying, Benny Potta, you have spotted the perfect record of the class, I trust you have a good ix-cuse.
Yes, mam, on account of the war, I sed.
How absurd, explain yourself, sed Miss Kitty, and I sed, I stopped to listen to 3 men talking about it.
I hope you'll drop in some day, sed Miss Kitty. Wich I did, proving these is some things you cant even blame on the war.

You have heard it far, you have heard it near.
As you wandered over the moor,
That eerie whistle, enchanting, clear,
The mountain's charm, the peat-hag's lure,
Which leads you beyond the ken
Of all things earthly. For it bids you see,
With its wild unearthly trill,
The other world of spirits set free,
And the land where you wander at will.
The land of which no man can tell,
But the fisherman saw them; wore they as free.
As his soul from its earthly bounds?
Were they not the souls who in jeopardy
Were driven by Gabriel's hounds
Over mountain and crag and fell?
The damned souls who come back to earth,
To haunt the souls of the troubled
Who, whether by fault, or whether by birth,
Are burdened through life by the heavy yoke.
And are haunted by the sounds
Of the eldritch whisper, and fendish
glee;
On whose life has fallen the fateful
lot,
And from this glamour can never be free,
For they, too, are caught in the fatal
net,
And are hunted by Gabriel's
hounds.

Journal.

CHARGED WITH STEALING FROM RETURNED MAN

Edward Burke Being Tried on Suspicion of Robbing William Paddock of Three Hundred Dollars.

Edward Burke, Sheriff street, was given a hearing in the police court yesterday morning, being charged with the theft of $300 from William Paddock a returned soldier.

Paddock swore that on May 4th he was discharged from the Convalescent Hospital here; the same day being paid off, receiving $204. In addition to this he had $400—his savings when overseas. Leaving the Armoury early Sunday morning, May 5th, he went to Sheriff street, where he purchased a quart of liquor from the defendant. At noon Paddock said he met his brother on the street and gave him $300 to keep for him.

Next day he purchased more liquor from Burke and produced a roll of money in Burke's presence. They went to Hilary's shipyard; Paddock took a couple of drinks and knew nothing until he awoke in the police station and found he had been robbed.

After hearing a couple of other witnesses the case was postponed until Tuesday morning.

MAKE YOURSELF STRONG

People with strong constitutions escape most of the minor ills that make life miserable for others. Don't you envy the friend who does not know what a headache is, whose digestion is perfect, and who sleeps soundly at night? How far do you come from this description? Have you ever made an earnest effort to strengthen your constitution, to build up your system to ward off discomfort and disease? Unless you have an organic disease it is generally possible to improve your physical condition, that perfect health will be yours. The first thing to be done is to build up your blood as poor blood is the source of physical weakness. To build up the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is just the medicine you need. Every dose helps to make new blood which reaches every nerve and every part of the body, bringing color to the cheeks, brightness to the eyes, a steadiness to the hands, a good appetite and splendid energy. Thousands throughout the country whose condition once made them despair, owe their present good health to this medicine. If you are one of the weak and ailing give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and note the daily gain in new health and abounding vitality.

SPHAGNUM MOSS.

That sphagnum moss bags were coming into the Natural History rooms in greater numbers was the information given The Standard yesterday. About 800 bags of the 3,000 needed have been sent in so far, the Corona Co. donating 300 and the St. John Hide Co. a large number also, besides many small donations. Over 2,000 bags are yet needed and a statement was made at the Natural History rooms that it might be necessary to have the Boy Scouts make a house to house canvass. The society has decided to send the girl pickers to camp next week and keep them there until the supply of bags is exhausted.

WATER UP AT ANDOVER.

A telephone message from Andover, Thursday evening, said there had been a raise of 22 inches in the St. John river at that town in 24 hours. It had come up at that time one inch in one hour. This is taken to mean that there are some heavy rains in the upper section of the St. John. The pumping station records at Fredericton say the water has receded four inches in 24 hours.

PAPER SAVING HAS TO BE GIVEN UP

Too Far From Mills To Make Conservation of Waste Paper Pay—Nearly $1,000 For French Red Cross.

An executive meeting of the Local Red Cross was held yesterday morning in the depot on Chatham Hill. The report presented by Miss Frances Stetson for the Conservation Committee explained the closing up of that work and the results of the saving of paper in St. John. The work has to be given up on account of the distance that waste paper must be sent to a market, the cost of freight making it too expensive to ship this material so far to the mills. After all expenses were paid the sum of $1.75 was handed to the Red Cross as a result of the conservation of paper.

The returns from the French Red Cross entertainment showed that nearly $1,000 will be handed in for that object. The expenses in connection with the entertainment amounting to nearly $350.00, were voted as a donation from the local Red Cross.

A letter was received from the ushering committee of the Y. W. P. A. stating that they wished to add the amount earned by them as ushers on that evening to the fund.

More Conventions To Be Held There, Including Newspaper Men Aug. 14 and W. C. T. U. Sept. 24.

Sackville has become a strong convention town this year. In addition to the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Methodist Conference, held earlier in the season, the W. C. T. An exceptionally strong programme has been arranged for the meeting and items of interest to the press will be discussed from all points of view. War conditions have revolutionized the newspaper industry, and there is no doubt much good will accrue from the coming meeting. The attendance promises good.

CLAIRMONT HOUSE BURNED TO GROUND

Reported To Have Been Disgraceful Resort During Last Couple of Weeks — Police Working on Matter.

The Clairmont House, at Torriburn, one of the landmarks of the suburbs in the city, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The house, a two-story building, was started about three o'clock, but so far no cause has been assigned for the blaze.

The house was occupied by James Lawson, and a dance was in progress when the fire broke out. When the alarm was given neighbors quickly responded, but it was impossible to save either the building or its contents. About 5.30 Chief Blake went out with the chemical, but by this time the building was a complete wreck.

A resident of Renforth said last night that at his home, two and a half miles away, the noise made at the dance carried on at Torriburn could be heard.

Magistrate Adams said it has been reported that during the last week or ten days this house has been characterized as one of the worst resorts ever known in the vicinity of the city. He added that the police were now working on the case and in all probability information would be laid against some of those responsible.

The building, which was owned by C. H. Peters' Sons, Ltd., was insured for $4,000.

EVENTFUL LIFE OF EASTPORT MAN

Went To Sea For Fifty Seven Years—Veteran of the U. S. Civil War.

Eastport, July 30.—While born in Newport, N. S., 80 years ago, Stuart Colwell has made his home in this city since a boy, and was married 50 years ago last April to Miss Mary Spencer, now aged 75 years, and they had celebrated their golden wedding by again being married in the same room of the same house on Ryan street, but 57 years ago when Mr. Colwell commenced to follow the seas he had signed up as steward on the brig Murray which later turned out to be captured at sea by the British.

He was at Eastport early in 1861 when the full rigged brig Murray reached the shore town of Machias, 45 miles from here, and one of the well known residents signed up a crew to make a voyage with the lumber loaded brig, the voyage stated being to St. Thomas, West Indies.

Stuart Colwell (in his capacity as a ship's steward) went to Machias and commenced his duties and it was when the brig was far out to sea that he discovered that she was fitted up to carry slaves, but it was then too late to return, and he with the other members of the crew—10 in all, and four extra officers—made their voyage to the southwest coast of Africa. The first port reached was the Danish settlement of St. Thompson and after the men were discharged the brig proceeded up the Congo river where 160 negro men, women and children were marched from a stockade under a strong guard of Spaniards and were soon placed in the hold of the brig when the return trip commenced.

When 10 days' voyage past the Equator an English warship—the Bark—hove in sight but the captain of the brig tried to escape.

Several shots from the British frigate carried away the foremast and did other damage and then the warship came alongside, the officers being arrested, and the brig towed to Ascension Island, the crew set ashore at Sierra Leone on West Coast of Africa and then the slaves were liberated.

Later the brig was stripped of rigging and valuables and put to the torch and the bark steamed away.

Mr. Colwell shipped on a full rigged bark for Marseilles, France, and from there to Cork, Ireland, and having learned some time previous that the Civil War had broken out he was eager to enlist, and on reaching New York enlisted in the 64th New York Veteran Volunteers.

He served up to the close of the War of the Rebellion and then returned to Eastport and was later married, but made many long voyages to all parts of the world as a steward, and had many thrilling experiences, but will always remember his first and only trip in an African slaver ship.

Mr. Colwell's wife was Miss Mary Spencer, now aged 75 years, born in this city, and has knelt for the soldiers and sailors in four wars: Civil, Spanish-American, Mexican trouble on the border and now doing her part for Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors in the present great war. They reside in the same house where they were married a half century ago, have one daughter,

Few Drops on a Corn or Callus

Instantly stops pain and they lift right off with fingers. Thin tiny bottle holds the wonders of wonders. It contains an almost magical drug called freezons. It is a compound made from ether.

Apply a few drops of this freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a hardened callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you just lift it off with the fingers. It doesn't hurt the skin.

You feel no pain or soreness when applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the skin. Just ask in any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. This will cost but a few cents but will positively rid your poor suffering feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, or the tough calluses on bottom of feet.

Women! Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn ache twice.

To Have Perfect Skin Throughout the Summer

This is the season when she who would have a lively, white complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectively overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, whitened or coarsened skin, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unlogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity.

An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, applied nightly like cold cream and washed off in morning, will gradually improve even the worst complexion. There is nothing better for the removal of tan, freckles or blotches.

LEAGUE PLAYERS NOW SERVING THE COUNTRY

Thirty-Six Have Joined Army or Navy Since Opening of Present Season—More Than 100 in Service—Cubs and Giants Have Lost Star Performers.

The extent to which major league ball players are being called to the colors or are voluntarily enlisting, may be judged from the fact that since the opening day of the season, April 15, thirty-six players have joined either the army or the navy, writes Frederick C. Leah in the New York Sun.

Nothing indicates better than this why the faces in the big leagues have changed with such frequency since America entered the war, or the aeries of events which have brought out forgotten faces back to the big league ball. Figuring on a general average, it would take about 400 men to equip sixteen big league clubs during the spring and fall periods.

Of strictly service players the Chicago and Philadelphia Nationals have lost most men since April 15. The Cubs soon will lose another star in Killefer, the fifth regular to join the colors.

At present it is almost a toss-up as to which of these clubs was hit the hardest. The Cubs have lost Grover Cleveland Alexander, baseball's greatest pitcher, who is now serving with the National Army in France.

The Giants were hit hard in both their offense and their defense. They lost their best batter in Benny Kauff, who is now shouldering a gun at Camp Sherman, at Chillicothe, Ohio, and Rube Benton, who is serving in the National Army.

BILLY ROCHE, FIGHT REFEREE, GOING TO FRANCE FOR K. OF C.

His Greatest Battle. When the Horton law was wiped off the books, Billy went to California and worked as a referee.

These are the sentiments of Billy Roche, famed third man in the ring at 2,000 or more battles, who leaves shortly for France as a Knight of Columbus secretary.

Billy Roche never gained any fame as a miz artist but he inherited his penchant for things pugilistic from his father, who was none other than Johnny Roche of New York.

Young Roche was born in Manhattan and refereed his first bout when he was only 12 years old.

GIRL IN RECORD SWIM

Oakland, Cal., Aug. 2.—Olga Dorfner of Philadelphia, holder of the American women's swimming records, for the 50-yard and 100-yard dashes, established a new American record today by swimming 100 yards in 1.06 2/5 in an outdoor tank at Neptune Beach, near here.

The new record clips three-fifths of a second from Miss Dorfner's former record and is within two-fifths of a second of the woman's world record, held by Miss Jennie Durrack of Australia.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PRESIDENT

"BAN" JOHNSON.

Ban Johnson Says He Won't Be Party To Baseball Game Played After September 1, Date of Work or Fight Order—Meeting in Cleveland Today.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—President Ban Johnson, of the American League, on his departure for Cleveland to attend a special meeting of the league tomorrow, said he would not be a party to a baseball game played after September 1, the date stipulated by Secretary Baker for the application of the work or fight order as it affects professional baseball.

President Johnson's statement strongly indicated that he would not consent to staging the world's series after September 1 as contemplated by the club owners of the National League. The American League executive left for Cleveland with the vote of six of the eight club owners in favor of his plan to close the championship season on or about August 20, and then play a world's series within the 11 days remaining before the first of the month.

Other pitchers, lesser lights, who have joined Uncle Sam's army or navy since April 15 are Mitchell, Brooklyn; Yingling and Craft, Washington; McGraw, Yankees; Horstman, Cardinals; Tincup, Phillies.

WHOLE AMERICAN LINE ON MARNE MOVES FORWARD

IMPORTANT GAINS ARE MADE WITHOUT MUCH RESISTANCE

General Mangin With French and British Troops Fight Battle North of the Ourcq River and Make Considerable Progress — Heights of Grand Rozoy and Village of That Name Captured — British Penetrate Three Miles.

With the American Army on the Aisne-Marne Front, Aug. 2.—(By The Associated Press)—The whole American line moved forward today while the armies along the flank from Soissons to Rheims pressed hard against the sides of the German salient. Their gains were almost without resistance.

Hammered as they have been for days the Germans withdrew during the night so that when the Americans, who were supported on their right and left by the French, started early this morning they did not encounter the usual machine gun fire.

In open order the men plowed their way through the heavy rain-soaked fields, for almost a mile.

The indications are that the Germans will not make a stand until they reach the water-shed north of Nesles Forest.

BICYCLE

Dunlop Means "Original"

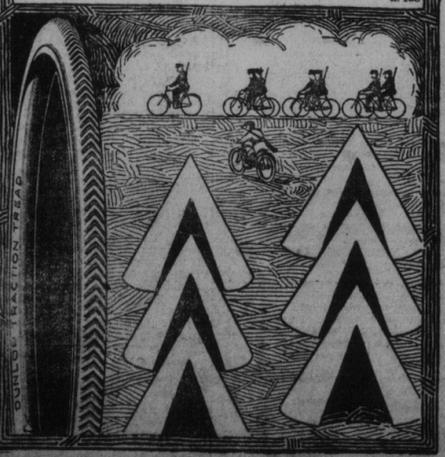

When you hear a bicycle owner say his tires are the original, not the imitation, he means that all other wired-on bicycle tires took Dunlop Tires for their model, because Dunlop was first in the field.

The Pneumatic Tire Industry rests on the name "Dunlop." And next in importance to your realizing that fact is the necessity for realizing this one: Dunlop Tires from the first—1894—were made by a patented process.

We found the way to make them right—a way that would impart to them such road mastery, such superiority of toughness and resiliency that they would sell eight times faster than any other make of bicycle tires. Eighty per cent of all bicycle tires sold in Canada are Dunlop.

FINDS IN HALIFAX MANY SUGGESTIONS TO HELP ST. JOHN

Secretary of Board of Trade Reports on His Visit To Sister City.

Secretary of Board of Trade Reports on His Visit To Sister City.

Valuable suggestions as to the handling of problems affecting the city of St. John were contained in a report submitted to the Council of the Board of Trade yesterday by R. Armstrong, secretary of that body who had recently visited Halifax as the representative of the board and had observed conditions in the sister city. Mr. Armstrong reported that both cities had been enjoying a period of great prosperity; that reconstruction under the administration of the relief commission was proceeding as rapidly as the conditions of labor would permit; that the commission with twenty millions at its disposal needed five millions more to complete its programme of restoration, relief and restitution; that 3,500 houses were undergoing restorative treatment under a thorough system; and that the plans of the commission contemplated the laying out of the northern area of the city where the destruction had been most complete, along modern town planning lines, providing for detached dwellings, with front garden spaces, and a roadway 24 feet wide, and the rear service lanes; and that a bigger and more beautiful Halifax would be the result.

Coastal Steamers.
The Halifax merchants are backing coastal steamer enterprises to give their customers along the coast a satisfactory freight service. In the vicinity of fifteen boats were being effective service.

General Development.
Work of clearing the ground for the new steel ship plant, north of and including the drydock had begun, about 250 laborers being employed. The people of Halifax looked forward to a prosperous industry.
Terminal development has been practically suspended during the war period, but track ballasting is proceeding and a temporary wooden station to be completed September 1, is being erected. A freight warehouse is under construction in front of No. 2 pier. The railway department does not propose to rebuild the north end station, although it is being used in a partially dismantled state.
Provision had been made along comprehensive lines for the embarkation and disembarkation of troops, also for the treatment of convalescent soldiers. The civilian population were taking active steps along safety lines.

Our Own Progress.
Based on his observation in Halifax Mr. Armstrong also submitted a number of "conclusions" as to the manner in which, in his opinion, St. John should handle certain problems. He pointed out that the success of Halifax should be received with satisfaction in St. John, and should serve to spur this city on to greater efforts in the direction of attaining increased prosperity. St. John had also prospered since the commencement of the war, and had made progress as a manufacturing centre and a distributing point. Totals of export and import trade had grown from $35,000,000 in 1913 to $217,500,000 in 1918, thus putting St. John in second place as a point of shipment.

Suggestions.
After diagnosing the difficulties of St. John as "largely of our own making," Mr. Armstrong advised that local merchants should own and control a sufficient number of coastal steamers to encourage inter-provincial traffic; that concessions be given to any proposition for a steel ship plant, the promoters of which could assure the board of the feasibility of the plan; that the city council should give attention to improved housing conditions and that in this connection the recommendations of the Town Planning Commission, when presented, should be adopted; that St. John should receive equal treatment with other ports from the Canadian government railways; that all causes of friction between the city and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company should be removed as speedily as possible; that the Board of Trade continue to urge that the harbor shall be placed in commission; that the board co-operate with the city council looking to the securing of permanent streets; that enquiries be made as to the plans for embarkation, disembarkation and demobilization of troops at St. John, if necessary such enquiries to be carried to parliament; that the council give attention to public safety conditions in connection with a possible attack by the enemy; that representatives of the Board of Trade or city council should frequently visit other cities and towns as such a plan would tend to improve the relations existing between St. John and its neighbors.

The report of the secretary was unanimously adopted and committees were named to consider his suggestions.

Other Business.

A letter was read from the Minister of Finance stating that the matter of the double income tax had been brought to the attention of the taxation authorities at Washington, and that information respecting the proper diplomatic channels. It has been further taken up by American citizens in Canada and negotiations are in progress.

A. W. Rankin, of Fairfield, St. John county, reported that the Board of Trade seed wheat was doing well. The question of increased freight rates for certain bulk services was referred to the traffic committee for a report.

BONAR LAW UPHOLDS SIR ROBERT'S SPEECH

Hon. Walter Runciman Draws Attention To Premier Borden's Remarks on Imperial Preference.

London, Aug. 1.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—In the House of Commons today Hon. Walter Runciman drew attention to the statements of Premier Borden, of Canada, regarding imperial preference.

Chancellor Bonar Law replied there was nothing in Sir Robert Borden's speech in any way inconsistent with his (Bonar Law's) previous statement to the house. The question of a special fiscal policy to be adopted by the United Kingdom or the dominions must be settled by each independent, he said. The imperial government had put itself in the dominions by deciding to give a preference on existing duties or any subsequent duty imposed.

Harvest Hands Wanted In New Brunswick

The Department of Agriculture for war purposes, last spring urged Greater Production. 103,772 bushels of seed grain were imported. The farmers have responded splendidly. The acreage under crop is in excess of any previous year. Climatic conditions have been favorable, crops promise well.

Every acre of crop in this Province must be properly harvested this year.

Many men have been called to the Colors.

Under the conditions the Department fears that many crops will remain in the fields unless men from our towns or industrial plants become harvesters, and are setting up labor bureaus in different sections of the Province to ascertain the farmers' labor needs and to register voluntary labor.

Every farmer should register his wants immediately at one of the following bureaus. A guarantee of help cannot be given by the Provincial Department of Agriculture, but when the requirements are known after a certain date, if necessary, the Dominion authorities will be appealed to.

Give name, address, railway station, number of days help required and when. Approximate wages per day. Where wages cannot be satisfactorily arranged, an appeal to the Department of Agriculture may be made for adjustment.

Every man willing to help should also be registered at one of the following places:

- St. John—William Kerr, N. B. Government Office, Prince William Street.
- Fredericton—A. B. Wilmot, Dom. Immigration Office, Post Office Building.
- Sussex—J. D. McKenna.
- Moncton—J. H. King, Agricultural Representative.

The Gillette Razor's Four Years of War Service

THE Gillette Safety Razor has passed through four years of war service with a clean bill of health.

It went into the front line with the first troops, and it is still on active service, never having missed a day.

It is the proud record of the Gillette Razor that it has more users than have all other razors put together in every regiment under the Allied flags.

Under the severest conditions it is possible to impose, the Gillette Razor has supplied all the comfort and luxury a soldier derives from a clean shave. It has been his companion in many a shell-hole, dug-out and water-soaked trench.

It has gone with him to billet and reserve camp; it has shaved him in hospital and has accompanied him to "Blighty". Whether its owner has been on leave, invalidated home, or finally pensioned off, the Gillette has never failed to offer the daily luxury of a perfect shave.

For more than four years it has been in action—day after day; month after month,—and it has never appeared on a casualty list, or been "invalided home".

An occasional oversight on the part of friends at home, or the uncertainty of the mails, has sometimes deprived a soldier of the new Gillette blades he prizes so highly. But the Gillette itself, so often mentioned in "despatches" home, has come through with flying colors,—a powerful factor in the maintenance of morale.

DISAGREE WITH LOYD GEORGE

Sharp Dissent To His Threat To Use Economic Weapon
Against Germany After War—Balfour's Ideas.

London, Aug. 2.—(By The Associated Press.)—Sharp dissent to the threat of Premier David Lloyd George to use the economic weapon against Germany after the war, as outlined in a address made by the premier before a delegation from the national union of manufacturers yesterday, is expressed through the Liberal press and the premier's view, it is said, will not be endorsed in America.

Fear that the adoption of economic weapons after the war might endanger the proposed league of nations was expressed by James H. Thomas, Labor member for Derby, in the House of Commons during a discussion on the policy of economic league raised by Liberal members.

Foreign Secretary Balfour, in reply, complained that he had heard no object to the practical suggestion from members for the attainment of the objects they had in view nor any indication where an international police force to enforce contracts between nations could be found.

Unquestionably, he continued, a league of nations could not afford to deprive its armory of economic weapons. It is perfectly true that the economic weapon is capable of misuse as witness Germany's policy in Russia, in a manner destructive of liberty, but the foreign secretary saw no sign of any country consenting to abandon the employment of tariffs if it considered them necessary. He believed that Mr. Thomas would find that labor would not abandon this method of dealing with economic problems.

Disarmament.
Mr. Balfour also contended that universal disarmament only was possible if it could be proved that the new international arrangement was effective and if it had machinery for keeping the world's peace successfully.

"The last four years," continued Mr. Balfour, "have convinced the nations that war is a very costly, bloody and brutal thing, but that it is a thing to be thrust aside."

"Frankly looking around on the world, I see the greatest of nations quite as ready to quarrel with each other as the most ambitious of their predecessors."

Lord Robert Cecil, under secretary of state for foreign affairs, urged that the conditions of peace ought to be made more favorable to those nations prepared to enter a league.

TAX RECEIPTS FOR DISCOUNT PERIOD, 1918, WERE $819,853

While Total Amount is Smaller Than Last Year, Percentage of Assessment Paid in Nearly Two Per Cent. Greater—More Taxpayers Took Advantage of Discount This Year.

While the total amount paid at city hall during the discount period for 1918 was smaller by nearly $34,000 than that for 1917 the percentage of the assessment paid in was nearly two per cent. greater, and the number of taxpayers taking advantage of the discount was greater by seventy-six. Included in last year's payments however was $114,000 of patriotic fund which citizens were not called upon to pay this year, and deducting this amount from the total of 1917, the amount paid in on general assessment was greater this year by a little over $80,000 than for the same period of 1917.

The chamberlain said last night that practically all the large business firms had taken advantage of the discount and a large percentage of the smaller taxpayers. He expressed the thanks of himself and staff for the patience and courtesy shown by the citizens during the rush hours of the past week.

PLAYGROUND ASSN. MONTHLY SESSION

Reports Received From Six Supervised Grounds Were Satisfactory — Will Be No General Exhibition This Year.

That the Playground Association will not hold a general exhibition on the Barrack Square this year of the closing exhibition on each playground in the city, but will hold separate exhibitions on the individual playgrounds was the decision arrived at at the monthly meeting of the Playground Association last night in the Y. M. C. A. building. President A. M. Beiding was in the chair.

Reports were received from the six supervised playgrounds, showing that the work was going on more smoothly and satisfactorily than for years past. The reports showed that the children not only had their play properly supervised but they received instruction in knitting, sewing and raffia work. The work being done now gives promise of an excellent display at the closing exhibitions.

Mrs. W. C. Good reported for the Bentley street ground; Mrs. A. J. Mulcahy, for Castleton; Mrs. T. N. Vincent, for Alexandra; M. E. Asar and Miss Grace Leavitt, for Centennial; Miss Goodwin and H. McLehlan, for Aberdeen; and Mrs. J. H. Doody for the Allison ground.

It was decided not to have a general closing this year, but to have a closing exhibition on each playground of the arrangement for which will be made by the teachers and visiting committees for these grounds.

A request from the teachers that the playgrounds be closed on Saturday afternoons because the attendance was so small, was presented, but the board felt that as the season was so short and as no other school work is permitted to take Saturday half holiday, working alternately, the wishes of the teachers could not be granted.

The meeting decided to hold a special meeting in two weeks when reports would be submitted on the closing day programme for each ground. The meeting then adjourned.

CITIZENS REALIZE COAL SCARCITY

South End Residents State Coal Companies Blame Poor Shipping Facilities For Empty Bins.

The residents in the southern end of the city are now experiencing great difficulty in purchasing coal. One lady, who had ordered nine tons, to be delivered about August 1st received notice from the company that they regretted very much their inability to fill the order, as they had no coal on hand, as a large shipment scheduled to arrive around July 30th had been cancelled on account of poor shipping facilities. Another lady had ordered a winter's supply, but received a like notice from a different company, they giving the same reasons as the former concern for non-delivery.

An elderly gentleman yesterday stated he could not believe such to be fact, so early in the summer; and concluded with "What will happen later on, and winter fast approaching."

Some of the residents of this section of the city are endeavouring to get a supply of wood for fuel, but unhappily seem very unsuccessful, as wood is scarce in the city; and what is in the city is selling for an enormously exorbitant price.

SURGEON PINCOMBE KILLED IN ITALY

Struck By Shell Splinter While Attending the Wounded At An Advanced Dressing Station.

The sad news that Surgeon Frank Pincombe, R.A.M.C., was killed in Italy by a shell splinter while attending the wounded at an advanced dressing station, has just been received.

He was the youngest of three brothers of Major Pincombe, who are now serving in the English army, and leaving a widow, and many friends to mourn his loss after three and a half years at the front. By the same mail Major Pincombe was informed that his second brother, Howard, was severely wounded at the same place and on the same day that his brother Frank was killed.

SHIRT WITHOUT TAIL WILL SOON BE WORN

Preservation of Cloth Said To Be Cause—Top Coats Also Shorter — The Kaiser To Blame.

An odd thing on water is a ship without a tail; odd in nature, a shirt without a tail, but this latter oddity is soon to materialize, as the common every day shirt will undergo the change of no tail for preservation of cloth. A merchant in the city told The Standard yesterday that these new shirts would soon be on the market, and orders were being placed for them at the shirts with the tails were at present hard to procure for future shipments. Again tailors in the city were on a regulation scale now, when they make the top coat with short dimensions, this being necessary also to preserve cloth.

NINETY-EIGHT RECRUITS ARRIVE

Ninety-eight men for the British and Canadian army reached the city yesterday en route to Windsor. Sixty-eight of the number were colored, coming from the British West Indies. These men are enlisted voluntarily. Six of the party were for the Jewish Legion forces, and the remaining number were from American centres; all having been British or Canadian subjects living in the United States.

FIFTY THOUSAND MILES TRAVELLED LAST FIVE YEARS

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Ross of College of Missions in the City—Talks Interestingly on Missionary Work.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Ross, of the College of Missions, Indianapolis, Indiana, is in the city, arriving here yesterday from P. E. I. where she lectured in the interests of the Christian Women's Board of Missions. Mother Ross had reached the three score and five mark, but is yet hearty, taking a deep interest in her work of recruiting missionaries for missionary work in South Africa.

For twenty years Mother Ross was in charge of a College Dormitory and a remarkable result was the issue, as nearly all her former students are today in mission work in various climes. Her only son and child, Emory Ross, a graduate of Eureka College, Illinois, has been in missionary work in Africa for the last six years.

Speaking in The Standard last evening, Mother Ross stated that she had travelled 50,000 miles in the past five years, travelling nearly every state in the union, and was now travelling through Canada. The refined old lady carries many curios of her different travels, and exhibited a few which are excellent indeed, among them being a solid ivory knife valued at $15.00; another being some African money, namely a sort of wire. Laughingly Mother Ross added "When the natives buy any merchandise the change received is heavier than the merchandise they had bought."

The natives had presented her son a set of elephant's tusks as a souvenir, which he was later offered $100.00 each for but refused the offer, retaining them as a remembrance.

A few days ago Mrs. Ross was in the city and was given an auto drive to view the Resting Falls. This she added is simply remarkable. Later she is writing a story on New Brunswick for some American papers, and is including a story of St. John and the famous falls.

Mother Ross visited several military camps in the Southern States and was given a right royal reception. At one camp she saw 40,000 men in the line of march, and a large number of aeroplanes in action. At this celebration she saw a flight lieutenant fall, striking a steel flag pole; luckily he was unhurt, but the $10,000 machine was a total wreck. A strange coincidence happened when she reached the city, as she was told by young lieutenant was a St. John boy.

Mr. Ross leaves today for a short vacation and is returning to the city on Tuesday, giving a lecture in some of the churches during the week under the auspices of the various churches in behalf of missionaries for Africa and other foreign lands.

INSPECTION OF PUBLIC SCHOOL GARDEN LOTS

George W. Chapman is on Third Tour of Province—Reports School Lots Most Satisfactory — Hay Crops Looking Fine.

George W. Chapman, on the staff of the Kingston Consolidated School last year, was a visitor in the city yesterday.

Mr. Chapman during his holidays is connected with R. P. Steeves, Sussex, director of agricultural education for New Brunswick, his work being an inspection of garden lots connected with the different schools of the province. By his work, Mr. Chapman has a splendid opportunity of seeing crop conditions throughout the province, and reports these in an excellent condition, the hay crop being rather under the average, especially on the higher lands. However, the crops in general were looking fine.

Regarding the school gardens in his inspectorial districts he claims these to be highly satisfactory, and has forwarded a good report of most of them without "the qualms of conscience."

Mr. Chapman's contract calls for three reports a year, and he is about to begin his third tour. He finds the work very interesting, especially that which interested in agricultural work, and the delight coupled with the necessity of observations, make his work a pleasing pastime. At the re-opening of the schools he is returning to the staff of the Hampton Consolidated. At the beginning of the war Mr. Chapman went to Halifax and gained a commission in the army, but on account of being ill was termed medically unfit, and did not receive an appointment, after leaving Valcartier, where he became ill.

CHICAGO MAN WANTS BIRTH CERTIFICATE

Law Requiring Registration of Births Not in Effect When He Was Born.

J. B. Jones, registrar of vital statistics, received a letter from Albert Henry Carter, of 4420 Emerald avenue, Chicago, asking for a copy of his birth certificate, if such could be had. Mr. Carter stated that as far as he knew he was born on February 4th, 1868, his father being Thomas Elliott and his mother Katherine (Gorman) Elliott, and he was later adopted by Edward Carter.

Mr. Jones is unable to give the document asked for as the law requiring the registration of births did not come into effect until the year 1888. If any person is able to supply the exact date of Mr. Carter's birth and adoption, Mr. Jones would appreciate their communicating with either himself or Mr. Carter.

How The Sinking Of Hospital Ships Has Become A Regular Murder Trade With Germany's Blood-Stained Kaiser!

Official Accounts of the Appalling Record Which Forms a Long, Red Trail To the Palace At Potsdam, and Forever Places the Imperial German Government Outside the Pale of Civiliza- tion.

The sinking of the Llandovery Castle, the Canadian hospital ship, by a German submarine, the latest infamy of the unpeppable German, was followed, as a matter of course, by a lying statement by a government which long ago lost—if it ever possessed—any sense of honor or decency. And yet it is only one more horror which the German Government has deliberately played since the very beginning of the war.

The record of the German war on hospital ships is long and black. An official pamphlet gives a partial list of them, with the accounts furnished by eye-witnesses.

Russian Hospital Ship Torpedoed.
On March 17, 1916, the Russian hospital ship Portugal was lying off Rishon, on the Turkish coast of the Black Sea. She was on her way from Batoum to Od with a string of flat-bottomed boats in tow, destined for the conveyance of wounded from the shore to the ship. One of these boats had become water-logged and was being pumped clear while the Portugal lay to. The Portugal carried no wounded at the moment, but the Red Cross staff was on board and the full crew. The weather was clear.

Suddenly the look-out man saw a periscope approaching the vessel, but the ship's officers explained to all hands that they were immune from attack. When the Portugal had first been commissioned for Red Cross work she belonged to the Messageries Maritimes and still kept her French officers and crew—Big Russian Government had acquired the Turkish and Bulgarian Governments of the fact and had obtained from them a recognition of her status. In the clear weather her distinguishing marks could not be unobserved. The only thing now necessary, the captain and the mate explained, was to keep calm and to take no precautionary measures which might arouse the submarine commander's suspicion.

The submarine approached the Portugal and discharged a second at the other side of the vessel, from some thirty or forty feet away. This second torpedo struck the Portugal amidships, in the engine room. There was a violent explosion; the hull broke in two and most of those on board were precipitated into the whirlpool between the two halves; with a still more violent explosion the boilers blew up and the bow and stern fragments of the Portugal went down simultaneously.

Forty-five of the Red Cross staff were lost, twenty-one of whom were nurses; twenty-one men were lost out of the Russian crew and nineteen out of the French. Thus eighty-five of those on board perished altogether.

The sinking of the Portugal was apparently a casual atrocity, but when the German Government embarked on the policy of unrestricted submarine warfare in January, 1917, they determined to sink hospital ships systematically in their "blockaded zone." It was quite a logical decision, for the object of the submarine campaign is to reduce, by every means, the total tonnage of the world. If the world will not accept Germany's conditions Germany will make the civilized order of the world impossible. That is Germany's challenge, and every hospital ship sunk brings her a step further toward making it good, for the hospital ship that has been destroyed must be replaced by another ship, which might otherwise have carried timber or grain.

Only, it is not Germany's way to confess her motives, transparent though they generally are, and her purpose to sink hospital ships was therefore announced to the world in the following terms:

"The German Government can no longer suffer that the British Government should forward troops and munitions to the main theatre of war under cover of the Red Cross, and it therefore declares that from now on no enemy hospital ship will be allowed in the sea zone comprised between a line from Flamborough Head to Terchelling on the one hand and Ushant and Land's End on the other. If in this sea zone after the expiry of the stated time any enemy hospital ship is encountered it will be considered as a vessel of war, and it will be attacked without further ceremony."

Already in 1916 the German press had seized occasions for spreading this slander. When, for example, the British hospital ship Britannic was sunk in the Aegean with 1,100 wounded on board, and about fifty lives were lost, it was at first considered doubtful whether the cause was a torpedo or a mine. But an inspired statement at once appeared in the German Kielser Zeitung to the effect that the Britannic had been torpedoed.

"The Britannic," the statement declared, "was transporting fresh troops for our enemies. If she had not been doing so our submarines would never, of course, have torpedoed her."

This statement was answered by an announcement from the British Admiralty on December 3, 1916:
"German wireless messages to the Embassy, Washington, are again promulgating mendacious reports, purporting to come from Rotterdam, that the hospital ship Britannic, recently sunk, had troops on board."
"A complete statement of all persons on board that ship was published on November 24."

"As has been officially stated on several previous occasions, British hospital ships are employed solely in the conditions set forth in the Geneva and Hague Conventions, and they carry neither personnel nor material other than that authorized by those conventions."

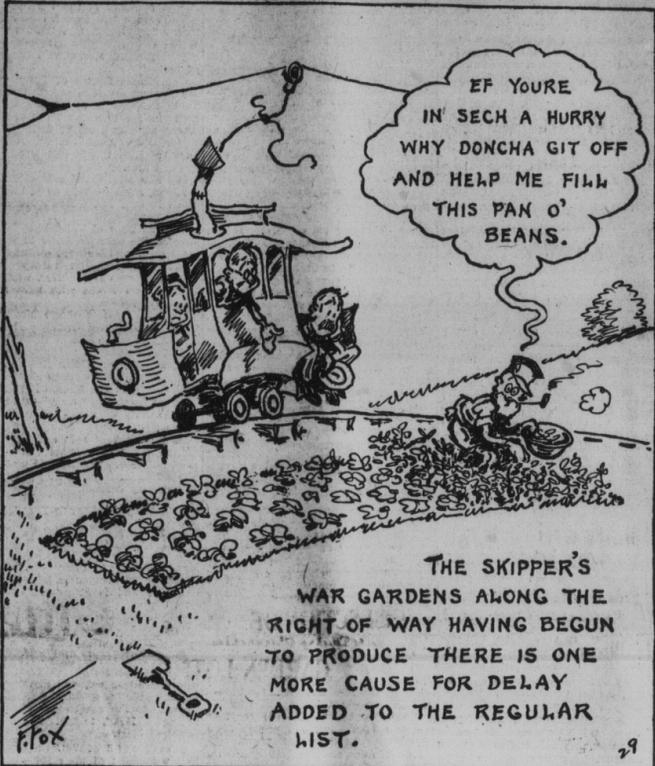

The threat against hospital ships contained in the subsequent declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare was answered by the British Foreign Office on January 31, 1917:
"The German Government announce that they have conclusive proof that in several instances enemy hospital ships have been misused for the transport of munitions and troops. They also state that they have placed these proofs through diplomatic channels before the British and French Governments, and have at the same time declared that the traffic of hospital ships on the military routes for the forces fighting in France and Belgium within a line drawn between Flamborough Head and Terchelling on the one hand and Ushant to Land's End on the other, will no longer be tolerated."

"His Majesty's Government has received no such communication, through diplomatic channels or otherwise, from the German Government, as is alleged, and it most emphatically denies that British hospital ships have been used for the transport of munitions and troops, or in any way contrary to the Hague Convention for the adaptation of the principles of the Geneva Convention to maritime war."

"Under the convention belligerents have the right to search hospital ships, and the German Government has, therefore, an obvious remedy in case of suspicion; a remedy which it has never utilized."

"From the German Government's statement that hospital ships will no longer be tolerated within the limits mentioned, only one conclusion can be drawn, namely, that it is the intention man, was cited in support of this outrageous statement. The German Government, in conclusion, declared that no hospital ship would be "tolerated" in the tract of sea lying between lines connecting Flamborough Head and Terchelling on the one side and Ushant and Land's End on the other.

"The substance of this memorial was embodied in an official German wireless message, and on the evening of January 31 the British Foreign Office issued a statement to the effect that, although no communication had been received through the customary channels alleging the misuse of British hospital ships, they most emphatically denied that such ships had been used in any way contrary to the Hague Convention. It was pointed out that under this Convention Germany had an obvious remedy in cases of suspicion—the right to visit and to search any hospital ships encountered on the high seas. From the refusal of the German Government to tolerate the hospital ships within certain limits, only one conclusion could be drawn, namely, that it is the intention of the German Government to add yet other and more unpeppable crimes to the long list that disgraces their record. The Government of the United States was requested to inform the German Government that if the threat were carried out immediate reprisals would follow.

Red Cross Sign.
"The course dictated by humanity and common sense was plain, and needed no reminder such as was given by the British Government. Yet in spite of their emphatic denials of the ship and a stewardess, a fact which was warmly conveyed, the British hospital ship Asturias was torpedoed without warning on the night of March 20. The ship was steaming with all navigating lights burning and the proper Red Cross sign brilliantly illuminated. The cumulative evidence that she had been accepted after it had been confirmed beyond all doubt and after exhaustive investigation. The loss of life on this occasion included a nursing sister and a stewardess, a fact which might have brought home to any enemy but Germany some sense of the enormity of the outrage.

"But the nation responsible for the murder of Nurse Cavell appears to have accepted the intelligence with composure, if not with satisfaction. The German official wireless message of the 26th finally established the guilt of the German Government, who, having boasted of the deed, published the German falsehood and the subsequent said: 'It would, moreover, be remarkable that the English in the case of the Asturias should have abstained from their customary procedure of using hospital ships for the transport of troops and munitions.'

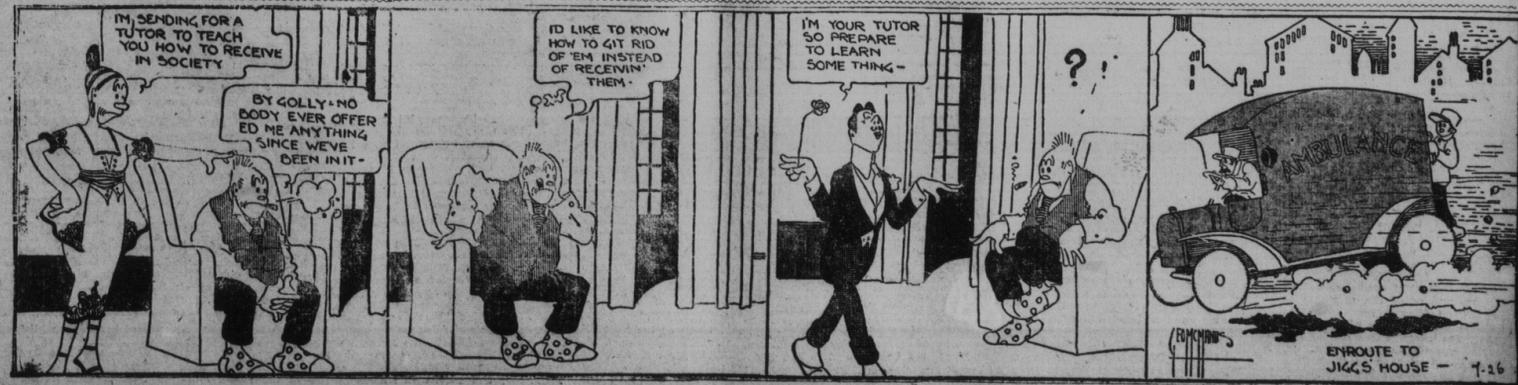

"On the night of March 30-31 the hospital ship Gloucester Castle met with a similar fate. On this occasion the Berlin official wireless message again cynically published a notification that she was torpedoed by a U-boat, thus removing any possible doubt in the matter.

"The British Government thereupon authorized prompt measures of reprisal in accordance with the announcement already referred to, and on April 14 a large squadron of British and French aeroplanes bombarded the German town of Freiburg with satisfactory results.

"In spite of the warnings conveyed to Germany that her barbarous attacks on hospital ships would result in such action on the part of Great Britain, the German Government published through the wireless message of April 16 an abusive protest, which

for Montreal last evening.

Tomorrow—August 4th—marks the beginning of the fifth year of the World War, and during the day special services will be held to mark the anniversary. To some the years hold nothing but memories of sadness, but to others the awakening of ways of usefulness, for never in the history of the world have men and women realized the opportunities of the moment, as they rise so magnificently to the needs of others. Conditions have changed, and in many ways for the better, for surely it we have learned to unflinchingly serve others, the suffering in the past has not been in vain.

Albert C. Jones. A reception followed for the families, and a gown of white satin and chiffon. Her veil which she wore over her face was of tulle and duchess lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and lavender orchids. Her only attendant was her friend, Miss Louise Gledhill of New York, who wore a pink tulle gown embroidered in silver, and carried a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas. Mr. Lloyd Farquhar of Montreal, Canada, was the best man. After an extended trip in Nova Scotia, Mr. and Mrs. Blakie will be at home to their friends after October 1st, at 160 Mount Pleasant Avenue, St. John, N. B."

Mrs. Blake is the son of Mrs. Emma Elizabeth Blake of this city. He was graduated from Yale in the class of 1914.

CLOTHES, FRIVOLOUS AND OTHER WISE FOR THE WOMEN OF TODAY

The Times Change and Milady's Wardrobe Must Change With Them—War Workers and Butterflies Alike Chose Simple Styles—Oval Neck a Feature of the New Gowns—Picture Hat Again in Favor.

The summer wardrobe of the average woman this year is apt to be astonishingly unlike the one she has been accustomed to prepare heretofore.

It has remained for the tag end of the designing for the warm months to develop velvet as an aid to fashion.

There are frocks built upon simple lines of silk or wool jersey and light weight silks for wear at the beach or during cool weather.

But where there are many who did this, there are others who are giving only a part of their time to war work and these practice moderate economy with regard to summer clothes.

Much valuable information was gathered by those who attended the demonstrations given yesterday afternoon at the Food Centre on Carleton street.

The proceeding opened with an exhibition of the home-made fireless cooker which was explained by Mrs. Richard Hooper. The materials for making this cooker are a packing box, some linoleum, a small sheet of asbestos, and some excelsior.

GIRL IN THE MOON FLOATED OVER THE LARGE AUDIENCE

Original Novelty Only One of Pleasing Acts Seen At New Opera House Programme Yesterday.

Most of us have always believed that there was a man in the moon, but until last night we did not know that there was a charming girl in the moon.

There was another good novelty on the program that took with the audience immensely and that was the contortion act by Chester Kingston. It is human or something made of rubber? He looked like a man, but acted like a rubber doll.

Donny and Lynn, the man in a Tommy Atkins make up and the girl of a charming personality, sang and recited, told a few funny stories, and scored a good sized hit.

The serial drama, The Lion's Claws gets better every week and for the best of the housekeepers of Britain. Every woman is buying her own supplies—by card! In France it is worse.

Henry W. Savage, the theatrical producer who has a habit of doing big things in a big way, announces the production of the elaborate musical spectacle, "Everywoman," at the Imperial, August 16th, 17th, with matinee on Saturday.

The production is described as a madcap, a satire, a phony orchestra is carried by the phony orchestra to interpret the score which was composed by George Whitefield Chadwick, dean of the New England Conservatory of Music, and the cast includes thirty-seven speaking characters.

Mr. Savage has given to the public such productions as "Parsifal," "Madam Butterfly" and "The Girl of the Golden West." And "EVERYWOMAN" is of the same supreme excellence.

I know of my own knowledge that "EVERYWOMAN" has been a wonderful success elsewhere. I am sure it will arouse enormous interest here.

YOUR ATTENTION is called to the opening of the seat sale, Thursday morning at the Imperial Theatre Box Office.

WOMEN MARKETING AS WAR-TIME MEASURE

Brings Business To City Dealer, Encourages the Farmer and Helps the Housekeeper.

1—Some "Market Basket Women" getting ready for the fray. Plenty of basket room is needed. 2—All "loaded up" and feeling pleased about it. Typical scene on market morning.

Marketing cannot exactly be called a wartime occupation for women, but it is most assuredly a part of every housekeeper's wartime occupation.

Not so long ago it was infra dig to carry home your parcels. But no matter whether you are Lady High and Mighty or plain Mrs. John Brown, by the time you have stood in a queue for four hours to be rewarded for your pains with two ounces of margarine or so—well, your ideas about such things as market baskets have suffered an upheaval.

In Canada we have still a lot to learn in this respect, for we have not yet got over the "order by telephone" habit or our affection for the delivery system. There are no horses or mules running around today at the best of the housekeepers of Britain.

Marketing used to be fashionable enough in all conscience. It was contemporaneous with crinolines, poke bonnets and tating. Grandmother did it—basket and all. The twentieth century is apt to point to her as a model of housewifely discretion.

The market is there all right, but we are not particularly alive to its existence. That is just the trouble. A very small percentage of women know the first thing about their municipal markets.

As for the market that is such a model that women delight to frequent it and that it is one of the show places of the city—well, it is a case of the country visitor, who, when he went to the zoo and saw a giraffe for the first time, declared:

"There are no such animals." The market is there all right, but we are not particularly alive to its existence. That is just the trouble.

Interest could be stimulated by the press, moving picture theatres and women's organizations. Where markets are already established they may be aroused from the dead-and-alive condition into which many of them have drifted.

Uncle Dick's Chat With the Children

My Dear Kiddies—

If it were not for the holidays which we got now and then, there would be a great deal more sickness in the world than there is. At least, so we are told by doctors. Everybody needs a rest. That is why we have Sundays. No one can continue to work steady week after week, and year after year, without having a vacation. Of course, some do, but in most cases, they have a breakdown of health sooner or later.

All people require a change and a change is a rest. No matter what you are doing, if you do it hard or too long, it will tire you. And so keep in good condition, you ought to rest at intervals. Do nothing for while, or take a something different.

This applies to your mind as well as to your body. In connection with your body, you know how hard it is to get tired of swinging ourselves over the bar in the gym, how you try some other "stunt," and then give yourselves a rest. The same applies to your mind. When the brain gets tired, as it sometimes does, through thinking along one line of thought for quite a while, (you know what headaches you get at exam times.) You can rest it by thinking of something entirely different. You can thus see the value of a vacation, not only for your body, to have a change and rest, but for your mind. Then when you get back to school again, you will find the brain clear and rested ready for all kinds of work.

Here is another very good idea. Particularly for you kiddies who live in the city, all the rest of the year. Now that you are in the country, and perhaps are able to see along with a clear view for miles, I would suggest that you often gaze away into the distance. Look at the tops of mountains, if you are near any, or watch the fleecy clouds, on a bright sunny day, as they pass across the sky. It will thus be found to ease your eyesight, as after your eyes have been accustomed to looking at books for the last few months, and everything has been within a very close vision, the changing to a wide range of vision is just as restful for the eyes as your vacation is for your body or brain.

All this kind of thing is very important now that you are young, as it is these little attentions to detail, which your present age, which has such an important bearing on your lives afterwards. This week I am giving the result of the Leaves Contest, and also the name of the winner in connection with the drawing contest. At the last minute I was surprised to receive a number of entries in connection with the former contest, as remembering that the weather has been wet, and made it difficult to go to school, I was very pleased with the result.

One of you kiddies has written me regarding the Belgian Kidde. Well, now I have decided to look after the matter, as I have been waiting for your further opinions as to the matter, but very few of you have replied. I should like to remind you that if you once decide to look after a little orphan, you must be prepared to keep it up, as he will be giving you a great deal of trouble, and you will have to give him a great deal of love and care. THE LITTLE PRINCESS

Further Adventures of the Little Wilful Girl—These Are Delightful Fairy Stories

The king and queen were much worried over their little wilful princess. Ever since she was a baby she had been sadly wilful. At that early age she had cried for the moon, as we are told in many a story of little babies. Of course, when her royal papa and mamma could not get the moon for her, she was very dissatisfied and cried every night thereafter for a whole year.

At last the king, who had tried to console her with innumerable presents, bought from one of his faithful subjects a pet monkey, who was known to be very wise little animal and very intelligent. In fact, he was so well educated that he could talk, and the peasant who had brought him up from his youth assured the king that the monkey was much wiser than many of the subjects.

When the monkey was brought in to the little wilful princess, the king and queen and all the courtiers kept their breath held, fearing that the little princess would say, as she had done a hundred times before, "No, I don't want this—I want the moon." But greater was her delight, and great was the relief throughout the whole kingdom, when it was announced that the little wilful princess from the moment she had seen the monkey forgot all about the moon in the joy over her new possession. She hugged him to her with exclamations of delight and the monkey seemed also quite satisfied with his new mistress. He sat up, after quickly disengaging himself from the tight embrace of the delighted princess, and with a tear in her eye and a pink color in her cheeks, which made her look really quite pretty, the little princess thought, replied, "Dear little princess, I'm happy and so glad." Then the little princess gave her hand a squeeze and ran off to find her pet monkey.

"Mamma," said little Dicky one night as his mother tucked him in his little bed, "What makes the bell in the church steeple ring?" "Maybe it's the Belfry Elfins," laughed his mamma, tucking the covers under his chin.

Then, turning down the light, she left the room. Dicky lay a long time listening to the bell as it clanged back and forth. "I wonder what Belfry Elfins/look like," mused Dicky. Something moved at the foot of his bed. There sat Happy Giggles with a merry twinkle in his eyes. "Hello, Dicky-boy," he called merrily. Dicky lay a long time listening to the bell as it clanged back and forth. "I wonder what Belfry Elfins/look like," mused Dicky. Something moved at the foot of his bed. Like the eagle, the tiger must also have his claws out sometimes, otherwise they will turn back and grow in to the pads of his feet; but he objects to the process just as much as the eagle does. He is therefore lashed and pulled up to the bars of his cage. Then a strap is passed round his paw, and it is pulled out between the bars, the claws being cut with a white knife. Then the animal is lashed and pulled up to the bars of his cage. Then a strap is passed round his paw, and it is pulled out between the bars, the claws being cut with a white knife.

When the little princess blushed a little and replied that perhaps she would the next time, if she only thought of it. The monkey didn't answer, but instead looked intently at her for some time. "The first thing," he said finally, when she could not help disagreeable to some one, is to be sorry for what one has done and to show it by telling the person that you won't do it again.

"Can't catch me," cried the little princess, making an excuse to run away as she felt very much ashamed of herself. The monkey raced after her and together they went toward his shady tree near the brook that would like a silver thread through the meadow. Almost out of breath, the little princess dodged behind the tree, when to her astonishment and confusion she almost fell into the lap of her governess, who sat there reading a book. The monkey came up at that moment, and before she could get away, she was held in a strong grip.

You see in the case of managers the poor beasts do not get much room for exercise, and are therefore more likely to get into poor condition. At the Zoo, on the other hand, plenty of space is provided, and the conditions to which the animal is naturally accustomed are followed out as far as possible.

ment, and before she could say a word in explanation of her sudden appearance, the monkey said in a low voice, "Now, in your chance to say you're sorry and scampers at once across the meadow, leaving the little princess alone with her astonished governess."

"Oh, dear," cried the little princess, "I'm all out of breath running away from that tease of a monkey, and—ang—I'm sorry, indeed I am, that I didn't know my lesson this morning; and I'm going to try to do differently, I really am!" and before she could go any further the governess put her arms around the little princess, and with a tear in her eye and a pink color in her cheeks, which made her look really quite pretty, the little princess thought, replied, "Dear little princess, I'm happy and so glad."

TOILETS AT THE ZOO

The wild creatures in the Zoological Gardens need a good deal of attention from their keepers, who have to act the part of valets to their charges. The birds and animals, however, do not appreciate such attention in the least, as a rule, and so the work is often rather difficult to perform.

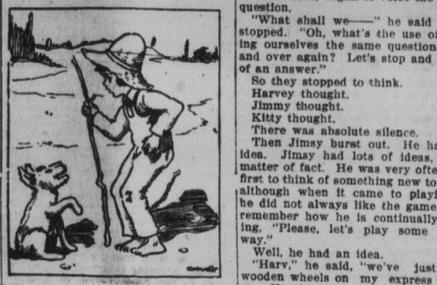

The eagle, for instance, has a strong objection to having his talons cut, but this is necessary every now and then; and so, when it comes to the time for performing the operation, a white net is thrown over the bird, who, of course struggles for all he is worth, until he is so hopelessly tied up that he can do no damage to anyone. Then, first one claw and then the other, is seized and operated upon by the attendant.

Like the eagle, the tiger must also have his claws out sometimes, otherwise they will turn back and grow in to the pads of his feet; but he objects to the process just as much as the eagle does. He is therefore lashed and pulled up to the bars of his cage. Then a strap is passed round his paw, and it is pulled out between the bars, the claws being cut with a white knife. Good Night Stories

THE BELFRY ELFINS. "Mamma," said little Dicky one night as his mother tucked him in his little bed, "What makes the bell in the church steeple ring?" "Maybe it's the Belfry Elfins," laughed his mamma, tucking the covers under his chin.

Then, turning down the light, she left the room. Dicky lay a long time listening to the bell as it clanged back and forth. "I wonder what Belfry Elfins/look like," mused Dicky. There sat Happy Giggles with a merry twinkle in his eyes. "Hello, Dicky-boy," he called merrily.

There was absolute silence. Then Jimmy burst out. He had an idea. Jimmy had lots of ideas, as a matter of fact. He was very often the first to think of something new to play, although when it came to playing he did not always like the game. You remember how he is continually calling, "Please, let's play some other way." Well, he had an idea.

"Harv," he said, "we've just put wood on the other wheel, and you broke the other wheel, and it was awful kind of you to help me put these new ones on. They are nice wheels, but if they would only turn around they would be an awful lot nicer. As it is, they turn so hard it is almost impossible to pull the wagon. It's awful!" "Yes, I know," said Harvey, "but what's your idea for a game?" "Well, we'll play we're in France and are an ambulance—I mean that we are ambulancers."

"Surely!" replied Happy Giggles. "They've lived here ever since the church was built." "And a long time before that have we lived in this big bell," laughed the little old Belfry Elfins. "We began when it lay in the iron moulder's junk heap."

"Yes, I must have been dreaming," murmured Dicky, and he cuddled down to sleep.

A Regular Saturday Page for the Kiddies

They had both forgotten about Jimmy! And after he had been the one to suggest the game, too! "What about me?" he said again. "What can he do?" asked Kitty, turning to Harvey. "I don't know, Kitty," said Harvey. "We have the ambulance, and I am to be the driver and you are to be the nurse, there doesn't seem to be anything left for him to be. What else does an ambulance do?" "It needs power to drive it," suggested Kitty. "Ah! Hurray! That's it! That's it! Jimmy can be the horsepower! He can push it! Won't that be fine, Jimmy?" Jimmy looked disappointed. "Please, let's play, let's play some other way," said he sadly.

LITTLE FRENCH KIDDIES VISITING THE GRAVE OF THEIR DADDY

WHO IS YOUR FAVORITE MOVIE STAR?

Here's a New Kind of Contest Which Will Please Every Member of the Children's Corner. At the present time when Mr. Weather Man is trying to treat us a little better, it is rather a difficult matter to choose a contest which will not be too much like school lessons, or work, and also one which will give you all equal chance, whether you are in the city or country.

This week, I have decided upon one which I am sure you will all enjoy, and take great interest in. It is as follows: Write down in ten words, whom you consider as your FAVORITE MOVIE STAR (actor or actress) giving your reasons. Here is a sample of what I mean. Suppose you chose Vivian Martin. Then you might answer: "Vivian Martin, pretty, clever, natural, vivacious, lovable." There you will notice, only seven words have been used. The final, and absolute, is that you are allowed ten, although if you give a good answer in less than ten, it may perhaps be the means of you winning the prize.

ARABS AND THEIR BOYS AND GIRLS

Telling How Little Is Thought of the Poor Little Arab Girl—Even Her Brother Is Not Kind To Her.

All children like to ride, and in the East the dark-eyed boys and girls enjoy nothing better than the donkeys. That world seems full of donkeys here—donkeys of all shapes, sizes and dispositions. The writer saw some that were large, handsome and which went with the speed of horses. But these cost too much, so that British or Canadian boys who went to Tripoli before the days of the war, always used to choose the small ones. They were cheaper, and when you have only a certain amount of pocket money to last while you are on your holidays, even if you are luck enough to have a trip in a fruit boat from a port on the East Coast of Scotland, you watch carefully for the cheap things, and depend upon your friends, or parents to help you out, in regard to the bargaining.

The Arab boys are great people for bargaining, and often will come down to half the price first asked. The little girls of the Mediterranean African ports, are not so welcome as the boys, when they arrive as little babies. Their lives are often anything but happy. When the little baby girl arrives, the whole household is for forty days. Isn't that awful! The boys are not as kind to their sisters as they ought to be; not as gentle or helpful, and when they are very heavy loads, whilst they walk by the side, entirely unconcerned as to their struggling little sister, weighed down, perhaps, with a very heavy load. When games are played, the girls have practically no fun, and thus taking things altogether, it is a very sad thing to be a girl among the Arabs.

DESCENDING TO THE ASSISTANCE OF THE INFANTRY.

Dicky opened his eyes in surprise, and then he laughed. The great bell in the church tower had ceased ringing. A silver ladder still hung from the moon into Dicky's window, but the fairies had fled. "Yes, I must have been dreaming," murmured Dicky, and he cuddled down to sleep.

MATRIMONIAL ANTIQUES OF LOVE-SICK YOUNG MR. WILMERDING

Only Twenty-Eight and Yet This Youthful Millionaire of New York, Palm Beach, Paris and London Has Two His Credit Two Weddings, One Divorce, One Repudiated Engagement, One Broken Romance and One Suit For Stealing a Wife's Love.

When young Lochlavar came galloping out of the West, as Sir Walter Scott sings, he established a famous record for quick wooing. Don Juan qualified as a superace in the high levels of the love chase, while Henry the Eighth's tally for wives still remains a monument to that monarch's impetuosity and perseverance.

Is young Cuthbert Mortimer Wilmerding, son of Louis Earl Wilmerding, wealthy actor of an old New York family and as well known in Paris as in New York, in Palm Beach as in Newport, out to send these champions into their scrap heap?

Consider young Mr. Wilmerding. He is only twenty-eight and yet he has to his credit already two marriages, one divorce, a repudiated engagement, a lost love and a suit for pilfering the affections of a dolt's wife.

Clearly, Cuthbert Mortimer is a firm believer of the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try again," and he adds, no doubt, "at once." Also he is an experimenter.

At the childish age of twenty-two, in 1912, after possibly profound thought as to methods, he signalled his entrance into the matrimonial arena by getting up unexpectedly at a dinner in Paris and naively announcing his engagement to the daughter of his host.

This was a great surprise, not only to the host and the host's wife, but also to the daughter, and Mr. Wilmerding's hopes were promptly blighted on the spot.

Clearly on the wrong track, Mr. Wilmerding took a year and a half more to study. His patience was rewarded by the formal announcement in New York of his engagement to Miss Anna Lavelle, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lavelle, also of Paris. This was all regular, but later something went awry and the engagement vanished into thin air.

Not long afterward George W. Horton, Jr., a clothier of New York, sued his wife for divorce.

Young Mr. Wilmerding's name figured in the proceedings. Perhaps his acquaintance with Mrs. Horton was only in pursuit of further knowledge of how to get a wife of his own. At any rate a divorce was granted Mr. Horton.

Confidence, however, must have come to him because, in 1915, then a refugee from the war zone in France, he met another refugee, Miss Josephine Lewis Peet, of Washington, and after a whirlwind courtship, they were married. Over the skies of their happiness soon spread a little cloud in the shape of a suit by the aforesaid Mr. Horton for $20,000 against Mr. Wilmerding for alienating the affections of his wife.

And something else still was wrong. "Marry in haste, repent at leisure," says the proverb. Not so for Mr. Wilmerding. "Marry in haste and stop repenting as soon as may be," was his reading. Last August Mrs. Wilmerding secured a divorce from him, and now, in 1918, this persistent wooer has just embarked optimistically as ever on another romance, taking to himself as a wife Miss Aileen Zonia McGovern, of Fourth avenue, New York.

Will the old records now repose in safety, or are there other chapters still to be added to the interesting activities of young Mr. Cuthbert Mortimer Wilmerding?

Let us examine young Mr. Wilmerding's tactics from the beginning, starting with his initial, somewhat abrupt, effort in Paris. At that time, and even more at home in the French capital because she had lived there longer, was a very charming maiden whose name was Grace Meurer. Her father had been a banker in Brooklyn, but, having made his millions, spent a great part of his time in France, and his daughter's name was Grace Meurer. The lovely Miss Grace was the cap that exploded in young Mr. Wilmerding's heart, accumulating bomb of love. For a time he followed the Meurers about quietly and wistfully, keeping as close as possible whenever they dined and regarding with eyes of longing the object of his first great passion. He showed, however, a reticence and hesitation soon to be lost forever.

"What on earth is the matter with that young man? He seems to be always running under our feet," said Mrs. Meurer one day to Pa.

"Well, I guess he's lonely," said Pa Meurer. "I've noticed him, too. Never seems to know anybody, but always seems to be right on our trail."

"Well, for pity sake," said unsuspecting Mrs. Meurer, "call him over and see who he is. It is too bad for a nice looking young American chap to be wandering around this way and so lonely."

All the world about Cuthbert Mortimer turned rosy as he approached his heart's desire. The Meurers were glad to know him, too, when they found out who he was. Besides being presentable and likeable his family, of course, is most excellent.

Miss Meurer liked Cuthbert Mortimer, too, but as at twenty-two he didn't look more than eighteen, there seems to have been little romance about her viewpoint concerning him.

But to Mr. Wilmerding all the world was nothing but romance, and Miss Meurer was the heart of it. How could he inform her and her parents of his sentiments?

Times without number, no doubt, he tried the obvious way of making a clean breast of it, but always something inside of him or outside of him interfered. At last on Thanksgiving Day the Meurers gave a dinner at Ciro's in Paris. There were quite a number of nice people there and among them Mr. Wilmerding.

It came to Cuthbert suddenly that here was opportunity, the time, the place and the girl, but how could he resolve them into possession? He sat, pale and abstracted, as course after course went by.

"I am sure Cuthbert is not well, said Mrs. Meurer to her husband. "Or else he is getting lonely again. He looks just like he did when we met him."

And at this moment Mr. Wilmerding rose to his feet and threw a bomb shell.

"Let me announce my engagement to Grace," he said, and then stood gasp-

ing. But he did not gasp any more than did the thunderstruck parents of Miss Grace or the amused guests. They looked at young Mr. Wilmerding and he glared back at them defiantly. They looked at their daughter and saw her head hanging in blushing and amazed confusion. And then Papa Meurer rose immediately and vigorously to the emergency.

"I am not one to interrupt the course of true love," spoke he, "but young man, you are too quick! You cannot consider this a formal engagement."

He sat down. Silence spread over the erstwhile gay throng, and soon Mr. Wilmerding excused himself and hurried away.

Quickly the Meurers crossed the Channel to London, and there they promptly sailed for home, leaving Mr. Wilmerding in solitary grief in Paris to chew the bitter bread of experience and derive what nourishment he could therefrom. The first lesson he learned was that in pursuit of a wife it is well to ask the girl first if she is willing.

A year and a half later it was that quietly and with none of the embarrassments of his first encounter with Cupid the engagement of Mr. Wilmerding to Miss Lavelle was announced.

Miss Lavelle's people were Americans, who made their home in the city on the Seine, but who were visiting New York. From vagrant reports it is gathered that the wooing was a swift one. Mr. Wilmerding spoke of it with jubilation.

"We were going to have a quick wedding in the Little Church Around the Corner," he said. "Then we were going to skip over to Italy, where I have taken a chateau for the winter."

It will be seen that the idea of speed was strong, even at this time, in his mind. The Little Church Around the Corner has tied many a "on the spot" of the moment marriage. But neither the "quick wedding" nor the "skip to Italy" materialized. Something happened. What it was is hidden in the fogs of mystery.

Certainly the romance was blighted, for not long after George W. Horton, Jr., a clothier of New York, began suit against his very charming wife.

Young Mr. Wilmerding's name was mentioned during the course of the case and friends, when the divorce was granted freely predicted that the two would wed. Alas, not so. A great change came over both Mr. Wilmerding and Mrs. Horton, so far as their attitude to each other was concerned. She went on the stage under her maiden name of Florence Bell and Mr. Wilmerding went back to his beloved France.

Living along and pursuing, no doubt, his ideal, his dreams were suddenly shattered by the marching of France's legions out of Paris and the rush of the German hordes through Belgium. Mr. Wilmerding decided it was time to return to America. He managed to get a stateroom on the Rochambeau and the morning that she sailed stood on the deck watching the flood of American refugees pour down to the dock.

Rapidly the boat filled. Cots were spread over all the decks to accommodate those who could not get staterooms. Young Mr. Wilmerding, reflecting upon how lucky he was to be fixed with a berth inside for the trip across.

Suddenly his eyes fastened upon a vision of beauty. It was beauty in distress. Leaning over the rail young Mr. Wilmerding gathered that the charming vision had been unable to get a stateroom and was bewailing that she would have to sleep on deck during the voyage. She looked up and caught Cuthbert's eyes. There was a note of appeal in hers that he could not resist.

Something whispered to him "alast-die's a girl!" and memory of all others fled.

Mr. Wilmerding made post haste out to where the maiden in distress was standing.

"I have a stateroom," he said—and then with all the air of Sir Raleigh spreading the cloak for the feet of Queen Elizabeth—"Take it! I will sleep on deck!"

Exclamations, gratitude, interest. And in the close proximity of an ocean these things ripened into love.

The lady was Miss Josephine Lewis Peet, daughter of George H. L. Peet and niece of Mrs. Charles Hudson Pope, socially prominent in New York. Miss Peet mightily feared parental objections to the match, and so for some weeks held back her promise to her gallant suitor. But was our hero, Cuthbert Mortimer, to be denied? He was not! One day the two motored in from Great Neck to the Manhattan marriage license bureau. After the license was obtained Miss Peet appealed to the City Clerk.

But he did not gasp any more than did the thunderstruck parents of Miss Grace or the amused guests. They looked at young Mr. Wilmerding and he glared back at them defiantly. They looked at their daughter and saw her head hanging in blushing and amazed confusion. And then Papa Meurer rose immediately and vigorously to the emergency.

A great change came over both Mr. Wilmerding and Mrs. Horton, so far as their attitude to each other was concerned. She went on the stage under her maiden name of Florence Bell and Mr. Wilmerding went back to his beloved France.

"Won't you help us out!" she said. "I am a Catholic and Mortimer is a Protestant. What shall we do to get married?"

Denying the ceremony at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Church in Duane street, where Mr. Scully took them, they went to the chancellor of the diocese. Young Mr. Wilmerding, petitioning as ever, succeeded in getting a special dispensation, and they were married at St. Stephen's Church on East Twenty-ninth street by Father Sinnott.

"Is it an elopement?" Mr. Wilmerding repeated to a question. "Sure, it is an elopement. We are getting married before anybody can object."

Down to Palm Beach went the young couple. After many trials Mr. Wilmerding was at last, at least, married! But, alas, the romance bore so swiftly waned away and at last died in even quicker time. If their life could have been a succession of dramatic episodes in which young Mr. Wilmerding always could have been the hero perhaps it would have been different. But the highlights of life are scarce and sparsely scattered. Nature likes the easiest way and abhors climbing mountains all the time. In the peaceful meadows of matrimony young Mr. Wilmerding perhaps found a lack of the love that grew from self-sacrifice on the decks of the Rochambeau found no food of his particular liking.

And so, less than a year after their impetuous mating, the courts granted Mrs. Wilmerding a divorce.

Young Mr. Wilmerding has wasted little time since then. Quietly and as usual, unexpectedly, he married the latter part of last month. Miss Aileen Zonia McGovern, City Clerk Scully, who was the good angel of Mr. Wilmerding and Miss Peet on his first marriage, wedded the two at the Municipal Building in New York. While Cuthbert Mortimer might have been disappointed in his first wife, it appears that he had no prejudice against "Cupid" Scully.

Unlike, however, all preceding romances and near romances, this one was blessed with no blare of trumpets or sound of drums. Mr. Wilmerding in his quest had apparently changed tactics.

The bride, a very charming, pretty girl, simply gave her age as twenty-two and her address as Fourth avenue, New York. After the ceremony the couple went to Lake Mahopac for their honeymoon.

Will young Mr. Wilmerding now prefer content? Are his matrimonial efforts over, or are there to be, as heretofore, a sequel?

Over Fifty Different Woods Are Sold As Mahogany

The name "mahogany" is applied commercially to more than fifty different woods. Perhaps half the lumber now sold under that name is not mahogany, for the demand greatly exceeds the supply.

The tree is only native to the limited area of southern Florida and northern South America. Nowhere else does it really flourish. But the public will have mahogany. Women now buy it for furniture, business men prefer it for office fixtures, and teak and mahogany are rivals in the construction of shipbuilders. Therefore substitutes flourish.

It is not surprising that the real wood is so expensive when it is learned that it takes from one hundred to one hundred and fifty years for a mahogany tree to reach merchantable size.

Most of the substitutes bear little more than a general resemblance to the genuine wood, but skillful finishing makes them very much alike. Experts can usually distinguish between them by the aid of an ordinary pocket lens. The efforts of the superficial, however, to judge the wood by its appearance, weight, grain, and color often lead them astray.

Old Age Is Not a Matter of Years, But of Recuperative Power

It would seem that the phenomenon of growing old has really nothing to do with the number of years that an individual has lived, but depends principally on the extent to which he has conserved his recuperative powers. The human body wears out in two ways, i. e., either by long-continued use or by long-continued disease. In the former case it is like bending a wire back and forth in one place until it breaks, and in the second it is the atrophy of organs or functions through disuse. The only way to state off old age is to eliminate all forms of abuse and live as Nature intended us to live.

No Very Great Danger in Making Explosives

In a paper read before a medical association in the East, Dr. W. G. Hudson, medical director of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., manufacturers of explosives, recently made some interesting statements concerning the risks connected with the manufacture of powerful explosives. He asserted that the dangers of that industry were greatly exaggerated. As a matter of fact, railroadings shows much higher injury and death rates than the manufacture of explosives. Of the accidents which occur in explosive factories only a small percentage are actual-ly caused by explosives. Four-fifths of the accidents are due to carelessness or negligence of employees who disregard the precautions necessary wherever men are working with tools and machinery. By increasing the share of work done by machinery and reducing the number of workers in proportion to the increased use of mechanical appliances, the manufacturers of explosives are striving to diminish the hazards connected with their business.

Saws Without Teeth To Cut Through Metal.

Not so very long ago the discovery was made in Germany that metals could be sawed easier and quicker with rapidly revolving smooth disks of steel than with toothed circular saws. It was found that the cutting was done by the heat generated by the friction of the edges of the disk against the metal. The metal is melted at the point of contact, while the steel of the disk, being cooled by the air, does not reach the melting point. The disks need no sharpening and do not wear out so quickly as the toothed saws therefore were used for cutting metal.

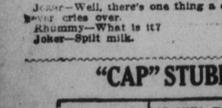

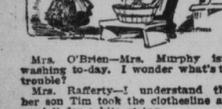

What Makes the Rumble of Thunder?

Why does thunder rumble? The path of a lightning flash through the air may be several miles in length. All along this path the sudden expansion of the heated air—a true explosion—sets up an atmospheric wave, which spreads in all directions, and eventually registers upon our ears as thunder. Since the lightning discharge is almost instantaneous, the sound wave is produced at very near-ly the same time along the whole path. But the sound wave travels slowly through the air. Its speed is approximately 1,000 feet per second. Thus the sound from the part of the lightning's path that is nearest to us reaches us first, and that from other parts of the path afterward, according to their distance. Intermittent crashes and booming effects are due chiefly to irregularities in the shape of the path.

A Soap Bubble Can Be Made To Last For Months

The air of an ordinary room is filled with tiny particles of matter which fall on the airy soap bubble, alter the surface tension, and—poof!—it is gone. The effect of these minute particles on the stability of bubbles was first brought to light by Sir James Dewar. He experimented in clarified air until he was able to produce bubbles which lasted for months. He has even produced a soap film, which was a year old recently and which seems to remain just as it was made. So tell the children that the secret of successful soap bubbling is to have a perfectly pure soap-solution and to blow the bubbles in and with air that is also perfectly pure.

SNOBS AND CLIMBERS STILL.

Does it seem possible that, into any thing so big, so vital as Red Cross work, there would possibly come anything so petty, so ugly, so trivial as small personal feelings, narrow prejudices, social snobbery?

And yes, not long ago a woman told me that several of the women in her neighborhood who had formerly been regular attendants in the Red Cross workrooms, had given up going there because they did not like the woman who had been put in charge.

But this is not the motive of most women.

And from a friend who has moved to a city which, though small, has the reputation of being one of the most snobbish and cliquey in the country, I received this description of the attitude of several women she has met there:

"One of the snobbiest things I ever heard was a criticism of the numbers of ordinary women who have tried to break into the Red Cross work."

Think of that!

How Petty Both Classes Are!

How unbelievably petty, from both points of view—that of the society woman who wants to keep the great

"You got me wrong, ain't you?" said the tall strapping man. "My monicker happens to be 'Vergilubus Tweevee.'"

"That's the author of 'Pansy, Pansy,' and 'Thoughts While Sniffing a Violet,'" faltered Geraldine.

"That's me," said Tweevee, as he took a vile-smelling pipe from his pocket and filled it. "There's Buck ram Tubb over there, with all the skirts around him."

He indicated a fragile, dreamy-eyed youth with long, flowing hair and long, flowing lip, who, surrounded by adoring women, was sipping tea with a slight frown.

And after that Geraldine Mish refused to read anything but the works of Shakespeare, because she had seen his picture, and he looked the way he wrote.

FOR THE LOVE OF PETE

(By Imes MacDonald.)

Mable Wells was as winsome as twenty, as buxom as thirty, and as wise as forty, and yet she was none of these.

A woman would have said she was thirty-five—a man, twenty-five, but as a matter of fact she was none of these, either.

She was, in fact, a woman of the richest man in Wellington, the Honorable Peter Hobb, one of the great statesmen of the legislature of the great State of Ohio, and for all time the richest man in Wellington.

The Honorable Peter Hobb, although forty-one, was also the most dignified man north of the equator and south of the north pole.

When a friendly, sprightly, here-and-there-in-not sort of a girl, as was Mable Wells, rises up in the office of her employer, shoves back the chair from her desk, slams a book down on its paper-littered top with a bang and yells out in disgusted tones right in the face of a dignified man like the Honorable Peter Hobb—"for the love of Pete! you make me sick," and then marches out of his office in the middle of the afternoon and doesn't come back the next morning, you may know that something would be liable to happen.

"Just couldn't help it," she told her mother that night. He just lets that aspect of his work him to a standstill. It will ruin the boy, and he's too nice a youngster to be ruined that way.

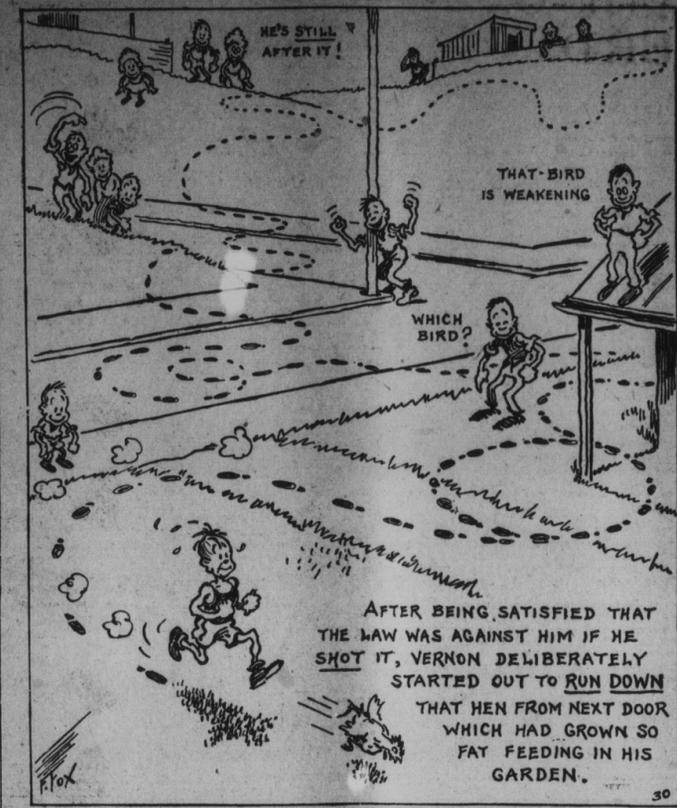

"The idea! With all those bills coming in every month and getting bigger all the time, and he never says a word!"

"But, Mable, just think what you said, his name is Peter, dear, and you said, 'for the love of Pete!' He'll think—oh, my, what will he think? Of course, you're fired."

"I don't care if I am," said Mable, sulkily. "The nerve of him asking me if I'd take Billy Hobb in hand and marry him just to make him behave—even supposing I could!"

But Mable's voice was as calm as a kitten's slumber as she answered the telephone at ten-thirty the next morning, and I regret to say that she slipped her hand over the transmitter and giggled, when she heard the voice of her employer on the wire.

"Are you ill, this morning, Miss Wells?"

"Oh, no," she replied. "Well—er—you were late—and—er thought you might be ill."

"Fired? Oh, no, and you see, I can't seem to find anything this morning. If you could arrange to get over as soon as possible, Miss Wells, I would appreciate it."

Thirty minutes later Mabel entered the office and pitched into her work. There was a pile of bills to be checked off, and checks to write for each bill, besides a dozen letters. The bills were statements from Billy Hobb's creditors, and one of the letters was to Billy himself.

The letter was of Mabel's own composition, and it was to the point.

"My Dear Boy—Needless to say, I'm covering your accounts as usual. Also I'm sending you check for a hundred, which will be enough and more to get you home.

"I'm expecting you to begin work at the plant on the first of the month."

"As you know, if you had displayed any particular talent in any line at all I would be glad to extend our present arrangement to that end, but such has not been the case. As far as I can see, your only talent lies in spending money and feeding chickens."

"I want to have a good time myself one of these days, and if I'm ever to have it, you've got to be able to take things in hand here. In order to do that, you'll have to get in now."

"Your affectionate uncle."

The Honorable Peter looked over the checks hurriedly and signed them, but he signed the letters without looking at them at all, while his secretary smiled demurely as she placed them in the mail.

Peter Hobb had ignored the surprising flare-up of his secretary, and the days passed the same as before until the stiff formality and rigid courtesy of her long-time superior again got on Mable's nerves. She had stood it for four years, and one afternoon she got frantic enough to fly.

"If he'd only swear, sometimes," she thought to herself, "or kick over the waste basket if he'd only let go of himself once, the pompous thing!"

And a smile trickled the corner of her mouth, and when a woman smiles to herself she's planning something, and when a woman is planning something, look out!

When she left that afternoon, the Honorable Peter Hobb, following his usual custom, arose from his desk and bowed to her stiffly.

"Good-night, Miss Wells," he said gravely, just as he had done every work-day night for four long years.

"Good-night, Peter Prim, you stiff thing!" laughed Mable Wells, as she vanished through the door.

And he stood there in perplexed wonderment gazing at the door that slammed behind her, until a grin slowly spread over his sober face.

"Funny thing—a woman!" is what he said. But what he thought was entirely different. It had to do with what his private secretary might be expected to do under a given circumstance. Take kissing, for example.

But during the next afternoon, the Honorable Peter was out and his wayward nephew strolled into his uncle's private office.

"Hello, fair one!" he greeted Mable familiarly.

"I'm glad you're here, Billy," said Mable. "Do you know that your uncle's been trying to get me to marry you?" she laughed. "What do you think of that?"

"Honestly?" grinned Billy. "I at ways was a lucky guy." And forthwith he reached out and caught Mable by the forearms.

"Behave yourself, Billy," she was

YOUR HEALTH

By ANDREW F. CURRIER, M. D.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA, NO. 1.

C. D.—"Please let me know the cause, symptoms, and means of preventing locomotor ataxia."

Progressive locomotor ataxia, as this disease is often called, has been recognized and investigated only within recent years, particularly by the French neurologist, Duchenne, from whom it is sometimes called Duchenne's paralysis.

It is not a rare disease and the reason we do not see it often on the streets, is doubtless because its victims have so much trouble in getting about and are so awkward in their movements that they are unpleasantly conspicuous objects.

The contractions of the muscles of the body by which motion is produced, and controlled by nerves proceeding from the spinal cord, sprouting in pairs from the opposite sides, and distributed to portions of the body which are near them, and their branches ever growing smaller and smaller as they are distributed over the body.

Each nerve has two roots in the spinal cord; the posterior one controlling the nerve branches along which impressions travel which are received upon the skin, while the anterior one controls the impressions which come from the brain down the nerve strands of the spinal cord, then passing out upon the spinal nerve to the muscles or muscles which are to be supplied.

This causes the muscle to contract, and the contraction is translated into motion.

Thus, a C&G bites your hand, the impression travels along a sensory nerve up your arm to the spinal column, from this point it conveys to the upper end of the cord where it crosses to the opposite side and enters the proper track in the brain then along this track to the proper center where you become conscious of being bitten and of pain.

Immediately an impulse is sent out which goes down the brain tract, crosses to the opposite side of the spinal cord, descends the spinal cord to the anterior root of the nerve which goes to the muscles of the leg, proceeds along the branches of this nerve, causing the muscle to contract, and finally results in a kick aimed at the dog that bit you.

All this happens in much less time than it takes to describe it.

In locomotor ataxia there is progressive hardening of the posterior roots of more, or fewer, of the spinal nerves, of the posterior strands of nerve fibers in the spinal cord, and of the ends of the affected nerves as they are distributed in the skin.

These nerves are no longer good conductors of impressions, but are like a telegraph wire in which has been inserted some non-conducting material which obstructs the passage of the current.

The result is ataxia—that is, want of harmony between your will to make certain movements and the way in which the movements are made; for instance, you intend to make a motion upward, and a motion downward comes, instead.

RICE! RICE! RICE! (Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Rice is a standby in many parts of the world. Many of us think it is a standby here, too, but we do not know to what extent it may be used without palliating the appetite.

Of course, it must be well cooked, and to suit our western taste must be served with various other flavors to be quite palatable to us. But really it could be used as often as white potatoes—often, in fact, for it can be made into so many delicious dishes—without becoming monotonous.

To begin the day, well boiled rice with milk or cream and a little sugar, if desired, may be used for the breakfast cereal. It may either be cooked in a fireless cooker, or else cooked in plenty of water on top of the stove before breakfast. If there is a long time, it may be cooked in milk in a double boiler.

For luncheon, rice croquettes, served either with gravy or tomato sauce as the main dish, or with syrup, honey or jelly as dessert, may be eaten.

For dinner, rice may be used in the soup. It may be served boiled in place of tomatoes or cheese. It may be served with hashed meat in some made-up dish. It may be served as pudding or soufflé or in some other form as dessert.

Of course, it should not be served more than once a day, for you will defeat your own ends as soon as you written to his nephew, the one he had signed without reading.

"He's a good boy," she smiled, "and you were spoiling him, Peter."

But Peter Hobb waved the subject of his nephew impatiently, and stooped over his mail secretary stiffly.

"A—while ago, you know," he was saying awkwardly, "I was—I guess I was jealous of the cub, Mable dear, I—"

"I knew, Peter, I—I knew you were," said Mable Wells, shyly.

While from the door, where Billy Hobb had returned to enter his blond head for the last word, came a stern voice:

"Look here, aunt! If you must kiss my private uncle, kindly arrange to do it after office hours."

And some such arrangements were subsequently made.

HOW THE SINKING OF HOSPITAL SHIPS—

ing violations of them, draws the very serious attention of the German Government to the responsibility which it would assume towards the civilized world by persisting in a restriction which is in contradiction to the humanitarian conventions which it has pledged itself solemnly to respect.

"In torpeding hospital ships it is not attacking combatants but defenseless beings, wounded or mutilated in war, and women who are devoting themselves to the work of relief and charity. Every hospital ship is provided with the external signs prescribed by international conventions, the use of which has been regularly notified to belligerents, and should be respected by belligerents. This latter may, according to the Hague Convention, exercise the right of search, but have in no case any right to sink a ship and expose to death the hospital staff and the wounded.

The Asturias appears to be have been torpedoed without any care having been taken to ascertain her character or her destination.

"Even if the correctness of the facts were admitted upon which Germany bases justification of her order, the International Committee considers that nothing can excuse the torpeding of a hospital ship, and expresses the hope that as an order, contrary to international convention, will cease to be carried out."

Then There Was Silence.

A showily dressed woman was sitting in a car when a quiet looking soldier in getting in accidentally trod on her dress.

She talked at him for about ten minutes and wound up by saying: "A gentleman would have apologized."

Saluting the young man bowed and said: "A lady would have given me a chance."
