The salary grabbers in Parliamer have succeeded in getting a majority of members to demand an increase of pay for their self-sacrificing services in be-

There can be no argument about this, as its truth has been clearly established. It is claimed that large salaries are necessary so that comparatively poor members may live as elegantly as their richer brethren, but this plea is a fallacy Every increase in salary will be followed by an increase in the cost-not of beefsteak and potatoes and bread and coffee-but of living up to the height of fashion.
