WOMEN'S COLUMN. Alcohol as a Medicine. More and more is the weight of scientific testimony growing against the use of alcohol as a medicine.

Educate the Eye and Hand. One half of the civilized world having become short sighted by overbook study, it is now beginning to be thought that there has been too much of a good thing in the schools.

"Climax Furnace" for Wood.

Is Admitted by All to be the Best Furnace in Every Way that can be Purchased in the Market.

The above Furnace with Radiator is made wholly of heavy cast iron and CANNOT POSSIBLY CRACK BY EXPOSURE TO HEAT.

The Fire Box or Dome, is made in one piece and heavily corrugated; thus giving it great strength and heat radiating surface, and so constructed that the joints cannot leak smoke, which is the great objection to every other Wood Furnace in use. The feed Door is large and will admit of burning all kinds of rough wood, which, with the Check Damper, controlling the fire, makes the Climax Furnace also the most economical. There being no plates or sheet iron used in its construction it will easily

Last for 20 Years Without Repairs.

I am prepared to contract for the heating of buildings at lowest possible rates for good work, and have secured the services of experienced workmen so that I can Fully Warrant every Furnace to give Complete Satisfaction.

HARVEST FESTIVAL.—The Harvest Festival in St. Paul's schoolroom on Thanksgiving Day was attended by a large number of the church and congregation. A pleasant evening was spent in discussing the good things provided and in listening to the concert.

A FINE NUMBER.—The current number of the Argosy, which has just come to hand, contains, besides a fund of information for collegians, a fine portrait and pen sketch of A. A. Stockton, M. P. of St. John, who graduated from Mt. Allison in 1864, and an engraving of the new conservatory of music.

UPSET.—On Sunday evening last, as a team containing three Amherst young men was leaving the Brunswick House, a too short turn was made at the main road with the result that the carriage was turned upside down, and the occupants thrown out in the mud. They escaped injury, but the wagon was badly strained.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Arthur J. B. Melish, one of Mr. Allison's graduates of last year, has won a $250 scholarship in Harvard University, where he is now studying.

—Mr. E. C. Gooden stumbled against the stone wall in front of the Brunswick House on Sunday and hurt his knee slightly.

STRANGE CAPTURE.—The capture of a partridge in a novel and unusual manner is reported from Centre Village.

On Sunday evening last, as Mr. Valentine Smith, was watering his horses at the partridge in the adjoining woods flew in his direction and apparently straight at his head. Mr. Smith struck the bird with his open hand, killing it.

On Thursday evening, the students of Mt. Allison entertained their friends in the White House with an oyster supper in the college dining hall, and on Saturday evening the ladies reciprocated by regaling the gentlemen with ice cream at the monthly reception, in Lingley Hall.

POLICE COURT.—Yesterday David Polley of Cookville was charged before Stipendiary Cahill, with attempting to burn a house belonging to Allan Estabrooks in Cookville. It was proved that the fire was not set with intent to destroy the property, and the case was dismissed.—James Hargrave, was charged with destroying property to the same house. Charge was withdrawn.

On the complaint of Fletcher George, another party was charged with stealing from the barn on the same premises. Complainant refused to prosecute.

SUDDEN DEATH.—We regret to chronicle the very sudden death of Le Roy, youngest son of Dr. B. S. Thorne, of this place. The little fellow had been ailing for some time past, with acute rheumatism, but had been regaining health steadily. On Thursday evening, he ate a hearty supper and went to bed feeling well, but about midnight he rapidly grew worse, and despite all that could be done for him, died; the malady having affected his heart. The funeral took place on Sunday and was largely attended. The pupils of the central school and also of the Baptist sabbath school, followed the remains of their late schoolmate to the grave, and each placed a bouquet on the coffin. Several handsome floral tributes were sent by friends.

The Knights of Labor in Amherst have been held, and the storekeepers convinced that the connection with an association having its headquarters in a foreign country was not what was needed here, thereby agreeing with Mr. Prid's view of the matter.

On the evening day, Frank Dupuis and Thomas McLean went aboard a train for Canada. The former set about on the railway track and a train going at the rate of 30 miles an hour struck him killing him instantly. It appears that both men had been drinking, and it is thought Dupuis fell asleep on the rail.

SAYS THE Amherst Press: And still the get of the great Nutwood continues to enter the 2.30 list, nor do they stop here but right along at 2.30 best 2.20. His son Aegon, at c. 3 years old, has reduced his record of 2.25 to 2.18. Nutwood has more trotters with records better than 2.20 than any other horse living or dead, himself having a record below 2.20.

Of Nutwood's get to enter the 2.30 list in the past week are: Bamboe, br. c. (2 yrs. old) 2.29. Woodbine, br. c. (2 yrs. old) 2.28. His sons are also contributing. California Nutwood having two sons to enter the list last week and his daughter Emma in the same week had a son. Lettery Ticket, 3 years old, made a record of 2.29. Nutwood's service for the coming year has been placed at $1000. Mr. A. B. Etter, of Amherst, has a Nutwood stallion.

DESPITE the McKinley tariff of 25 cents a bushel maritime province potatoes are being shipped to the United States as usual—the American consumers paying the duty. R. W. Beatty, of Amherst is sending 1,000 bushels to Boston. The St. John Globe says: Reports from the up-river counties are that shipments of potatoes to the American market this season will be fully as heavy, if not heavier, than in past years. The farmers are reaping a fine harvest, for the potatoes are selling at higher figures than usual B. Toombs & Co., of Moncton, are leading the schooner H. R. Emmons with bark for the American market. This will be the third cargo they have sent forward this season, and they still have another cargo to ship. They are also shipping potatoes to the Boston market, and will forward about 200 carloads during the season.—Herald.

A bill for taxing titles heavily has been introduced in the French chamber of deputies.

Dorchester.

—Judge Landry, is absent in Kent County.

—Thanksgiving was observed with becoming decorum in Dorchester. Services were held, and the storekeepers went through the form of locking up their shops as usual. Most of the male inhabitants borrowed guns and spent the day in the woods looking for partridge with the customary ill success. A number of young men from Moncton and other places spent the day here, though we are at a loss to understand what the attraction is on Thanksgiving day at Dorchester, unless it is the holy week-day quiet that prevails.

—Mr. GEORGE MCKAY, once well known as a resident of Parraboro, and now a resident of Moncton, has been spending a day or two with old friends on his way home from a month's shooting trip to the New Shore. He is accompanied by Colonel Wolcott. A complimentary supper was given them last night by a number of Mr. McKay's old friends.

—A number of invitations have reached here for the large Ball to be given at the Brunswick House, Sackville to-morrow evening. Owing to the bad state of the roads and weather, as well as to other reasons, it looks as if the attendance from Dorchester would not be large as people like to parade.

The Methodist church of Dorchester has recently been painted at a cost of $170, which gives it a very attractive appearance. Under the superintendence of its present pastor, Rev. S. T. Teed aided by an energetic board of trustees, the debt of $2000 has been reduced to a trifle over $700 with a laudable determination to entirely cancel it in the not distant future.

Port Elgin.

—The last few days have been fine for a change. The weather here, as in a good many other places, has been very unfavorable for farmers and so, as a result, the crops are looking as if some persons have thought it advisable to sell off some of their stock, as they had not sufficient hay to keep them through the winter. This means Mr. J. A. Simpson has gained a reputation which is worthy of mention. For some time, Mr. Simpson has been licensed to sleep on the rail.

—The tommydaws seem to be very thick this fall; the bridge is lined with boys "hauling them out" at a great rate.

Oxford.

—Messrs. MacPherson & Co., have added this year shears and punch, and also lately put in an electric lighting apparatus constructed by Mr. Fred A. Harris of Sackville. They have turned out a profitable season.

They employ 30 machinists.

—The Eureka Manufacturing Co. is in liquidation. D. Y. Nicholson, the liquidator, who is running it at present to work up the lumber on hand. The nominal assets are $18,000. The property will be put up for sale. The shops are well equipped. The capital stock, about ten thousand was paid up and will be lost. His management was considered weak. The people of the town felt the loss.

—The Scott Act is in full force in virtue and effect. Those who have attempted to smuggle have met with such an unpleasant reception at the hands of the people, that they have abandoned it. If it is to be had after at all anywhere, it is very much on the sly. The growth and progress of the times is greatly the result of the absence of rum. The earnings of the operators have gone into houses and lots and not into the little rum jug.

—Oxford boasts of a capital hotel. The building is new, large and convenient and would do credit to a city. It is conducted on the principle of gaining popularity by giving the public good value, and is a success.

Shediac Notes.

—Mr. Clayton Dickie, who has been suffering from a severe attack of typhoid fever, is reported slightly improving.

—Mr. James Hamilton, of Tidnish, who has for some low years been the guest of C. C. Hamilton, has returned home. He reports things lively in the region of the Ship railroad.

Mr. Thibodeau's new carriage and repair shop, is almost completed. In looks it is quite an improvement to that branch of industry in this village.

—Point du Chene is joyful over the prospects of late boats. There are two per day at present.

—The tongue of a patient suffering from cancer of the larynx, was removed at the Roosevelt hospital, in New York.

—Thomas G. Woolfolk has been executed at Perry, Ga., for the murder of his entire family of nine persons.

—Albert Gayton, M. P. P., has resigned his seat in the legislature to accept the registry of deeds for Yarmouth county.

—Patti is to receive 12,000 guineas for twelve performances in St. Petersburg—more than $5,000 for each performance.

Department of Public Works, Ottawa, 21st October, 1890.

The Loss of the Schr. True.

Since our last issue, fuller details have been obtained of the loss of this vessel. She ran on the sand bar that makes off at Cape Marquid between Chignecto and Serepingu Bays, on the evening of the 27th, in a gale. The master of the vessel does not appear to have been acquainted with the existence of the bar, and ran his vessel on it. The vessel capsized and the men clung to the rail and rigging. Their condition was extremely perilous as every sea washed over them. The tide rose sufficiently to release the vessel, and she went up with the tide. The cries of the crew attracted the notice of the Etawanda, anchored at Peck's Cove, a boat from which rescued the men in a very exhausted condition, after being in the water some three hours. The next day, the 28th, the wreck was seen close at hand, bottom up. The crew took a boat and returning to the hull, attempted to cut away the loose rigging, without much effect. After some work, becoming discouraged, they abandoned her and landed on the shore. They walked up the shore to Fort Lawrence and from there returned to their homes at Parraboro. The next day (29th), the wreck drifted up shore to near the Ship Railway dock, and drifted back on the flood. She went ashore on the first below water reef about dark, and Mr. D. Simpson, C. Snowdon, and others, ran a line out to her from the shore, to hold her there. Near high water, the line parted and she drifted off in the darkness. During the evening, the tug boat—got hold of her, and towed her ashore to the Wood Point wharves, at midnight.

Next morning, all Wood Point turned out to examine her. She was a sorry-looking piece. The masts had been broken out of her, and the hatches had been wrenched off. The cargo had dropped out of the big holes made in her deck, and but little remained except a few barrels of beef, broken furniture, etc. The vessel had had about half a cargo, laden at St. John for B. F. Young, D. Baird and others at River Herbert. The vessel was owned by Mr. Young, and was uninsured. A good deal of the cargo has been cast up by the tides and strewn along the shore. Only about $100 worth has so far been found and restored to the owners.

The Collector of Customs has found it necessary to hold an examination to elicit facts relating to the finding of wrecked material, the people living along the shore being very generally ignorant that the law requires them, under a severe penalty, to place all wreckage found by them, in the hands of the customs department.

A good deal of sympathy is felt for Mr. Baird, who loses some $300 by this loss. The names of the crew are: A. Brown, master, Parraboro; Joseph Taylor, Mate, Herbert; Ed. Ginger, Newfoundland; Wm. Brown, Parraboro; Stephen Vaughan, of St. John, passenger.

My Own Canadian Home.

Though other skies may be as bright, And other lands as fair;

My wandering footsteps there, Yet there is one, the peer of all, Beneath bright heaven's dome

Of these I sing, O happy land, My own Canadian home.

They lake and rivers, at the voice Of many waters, raise To Him who planned their vast extent

A symphony of praise. Thy mountain peaks o'erlook the clouds, They pierce the azure skies;

They bid thy sons be strong and true— To great achievements raise.

A noble heritage is thine, So grand and fair and free; A fertile land where who toils Shall well rewarded be,

And he who joys in nature's charms, Exulting here may view Scenes of enchantment—strangely fair.

Sublime in form and hue. Shall not the race that tread thy plains Spurn all that would enslave it?

Or they who battle with thy tides— Shall not that race be brave? Shall not Niagara's mighty voice Inspire to actions high?

'Twere easy such a land to love, Or for her glory die.

And doubt not, should a foeman's hand Be armed to strike at thee, Thy trumpet call throughout the land Need scarce repeated be!

As bravely as on Queenston Heights, Or as in Lunenburg Lane.

Thy sons will battle for thy rights, And freedom's cause maintain.

Did kindly heaven afford to me, The choice where I should dwell, Fair Canada! that choice should be, The land I love so well.

I love thy hills and valleys wide, Thy waters' flash and foam, My God in love o'er thee preside, My own Canadian home.

David Derrick's Watch-Night.

A gray winter twilight, the snow falling from leaden clouds, a group of shivering shuddered together on the bleak hillside, the muffled figure of a man determinedly, while near him in his shepherd dog, looking with intelligent eyes at his master and seeming to ask if there'll not be more comfortable quarters for them soon.

"Yes, Yea, we'll soon get out of this, I hope. Don't let your limbs stiffen, my hearty, and soon we'll catch a gleam of my Beth's light in the window, and then the best bone in David Derrick's cottage for his good Hero, and for me a kiss from the sweetest wife in christendom. Won't she be glad to see us though. She said when I started:

"Be sure to come back early, David dear, for it's the last night of the year, and the first anniversary of our wedding, and we must keep watch-night together as we promised."

"Ah! how well do I remember that night a year ago. How fair she looked in her wedding dress, and didn't she, Hero, old fellow."

"And how proud she was of you, a shaggy little puppy, just because you belonged to her David. The little one is proud of me two rough fellows, eh, Hero?"

"But I must stand here in a reverie while she is waiting for me. Let's be looking for that light in the window with a right good will."

Hero answered the cheering words in the best dog fashion,—by a succession of lively barks,—and scampered across the snow to recall a straying sheep in a way to show that his feet were nimble and in no danger of stiffening.

"Ha! said Donald, under his breath, 'two miles more through these deepening snow drifts, and the night is fast coming on and a storm with it. We can find the ford in this blinding snow, or we'll miss the way and be—"

"But, no, no! I shall not think of that, but stop these forebodings and on, on, to the little wife. Won't our great warm and cosy after this hard day?"

"With a tenderness creeping into his honest blue eyes and a smile to the firm lips in spite of the physical discomfort, as he thought of the loving greeting awaiting him, he drew his great cloak more securely about him and strode on."

On through the gathering gloom and fast-falling snow. The storm was indeed coming on apace and the dark night closing in. The flock moved sluggishly, un mindful of the shouts of encouragement from the master and the reprimanding larks from the dog.

Sometimes they almost seemed a part of the great heap of snow as they drifted, spinning to and fro in nearly insurmountable barriers before them. Bravo Hero was sometimes completely lost to view and the atavistic figure of David seemed but a moving snow-drift.

On they struggled through the soft, white, cruel masses, that almost suffocated them.

"Surely we can't be far from the old stone wall that leads to the ford," thought David after some time had passed. "But I cannot strike it on either side and see no land mark to guide me. But I'll keep on; perhaps the way seems longer than it really is in this numbing cold. I shall come, Beth, dear, if there's breath in my body to take me."

He set his teeth with strong determination, and pressed eagerly into the darkness, trying to learn something of his whereabouts. But, alas for brave David! and for his brown-eyed Beth. Nothing before him but darkness and snow. Nothing all around and above him but darkness and snow.

Suddenly the storm seemed to increase in fury. The fierce wind dashed the snow about in heaving masses; the myriads of flakes fell with doubled rapidity.

For some moments David was completely lost, and when the snow drift that enveloped him parted a little, he was more bewildered and blinded than ever. He stopped and listened; no sound of the sheep's bell, nothing save the moaning of the wind across the icy wastes of snow.

He pressed on and on in the terrible storm, he knew not whether; he shouted, but the sound was snatched from his lips by the mad wind and lost ere it had gone five paces.

Still he pressed desperately on—with his thoughts almost maddening him as he pictured the face of his wife growing white and wan like the cruel, cruel snow, when she knows he can never come to her again.

"Just wait, little one, and I'll soon be there!" he cries, hoarse with despair.

"The last night of the old year, and I'll see the new one dawn yet; yea, and we'll watch the old one die too. Die, the old year, or I! Which has the most life? ha! ha! I am the oldest by some thirty years, but I—you think that I shall be the one to give up? Not I! Courage, faint heart!"

With a face grown stern and set with despair, he pushed on and with all the strength he could muster.

On, on, pausing only now and then to call in a voice that was fast growing weaker, the name of his faithful dog, Hero, and keep watch-night with you, but the cold snow smothered me! I cannot—Beth—little one—"

The whispier grew to an indistinct murmur, and David Derrick was fast being covered by the falling snow-flakes. Noislessly and gently they fell, burying him in the cold and long.

When the dark deep at the bottom of the stone wall had nearly grown white, a dog jumped from the high wall, and great, shaggy Hero crept close to his unconscious master with a low whine of joyful recognition.

No answer he did, he received, but he nestled closer to the prostrate form with no thought of deserting—faithful even in death.

So together in the silence and darkness and bitter chill, the dog and his master were keeping watch-night, while the little wife in the cottage just on the hill, waited and longed for the footsteps that came not.

"What! all alone, Beth, my girl; this is the anniversary of your marriage, and New Year's eve, and he away! I thought to find you two here as gay as two nestling birds in the spring time. It is a rough night, too, you say."

And Father Derrick shook the flakes of snow from his great coat and talked of their bright future and the rich blessings of the present.

"Beth's little thought I would certainly come, because had promised, did she?" said David, with a tender look into the soft, brown eyes that returned his gaze so trustingly.

"That's right; always have faith in your David. It has been a little experience, or flashed gloriously only to be wilder or destroy. She is the electric element in human affairs, the universal element in human affairs. From no interest, great or small, public or private, can we eliminate her influence, and in none can we predict with certainty the character of her manifestation. For good or evil she is everywhere. Pouring out floods of blessed light or blackening with a glance and staying with a touch, she at once beguiles and baffles analysis, and sets the world, that cannot get on without her, wild with its problem of what to do with her unmeasured power. Held within the lines of nature, turned with all their sweetness and strength in the channels of wit and motherhood, the womanly forces rarely failed of beneficent action, like the mysterious agent to which we have likened them, she works no mischief in its upper world, where it holds storms in check, opens the floods that refresh and gladden the life below, and keeps the atmosphere pure of poison taint; attract her forces by the highest motives, draw them to serve mankind through the tender ministry to suffering and along lines of human helpfulness, and the best currents of her being become to the inner world what the telegraph is to the outer, the swift, sure messenger of the brightest intelligence and the highest affections, the subtle revealer of man's man, the link between the distant and the near, the interpreter of the divine mysteries of God.

But the lightning scorching and shrivels the rough or careless hand that grasps it, and sends its swift shock of destruction through whatever tempers with its power. And just that is what has happened to the aged to whatever hand has held woman back from the best that she could be. There can be no shaking off or separation. The attraction that holds the burning hand is stronger than the hurt.—Harper's Bazar.

"Here, father, wait a moment! Let me put a bottle of wine in your pocket for David may be faint with cold when you find him."

So, though almost wild with fear, her womanly thoughtfulness and solicitude for her loved one did not desert her.

Who can say that a special Providence does not watch over the least of His children?

When Father Derrick opened the cottage door, he found, to his surprise, that the storm was over. The wind was stilled and the snow had ceased. The north lay calm and white in the pale beams of the moon that was struggling to shine through the grey, drifting clouds, and its light on the snow covered earth made the night almost as light as day. The crystallized world lay like fairy-land all around the little village home; the moonlight glinted on the church spire in the distance, where the bells were waiting to ring out this, the grandest night of the Old Year.

The pure moon beams that lighted Father Derrick's way seemed but to symbolize that which cannot be seen. Our Heavenly Father ever keeps over us, for the storm had continued, the old man would have been lost and so shared the fate of David.

With a few hopeful words to the little wife, and his own spirits buoyed up, he strode away in the direction of the village ford.

He stopped every few steps to call the name of his son, or his faithful dog, but received no response until he reached the frozen stream. Here he was answered by the pitiful whine of poor, half-frozen Hero; and following those, he soon found the two—dog and master—huddled together in their cold bed.

Father Derrick placed his hand over his son's heart and found, with a great thankfulness welling up in his heart, that it still beat.

Here, my dear, had by the warmth of his great body, kept alive the spark of life, a dog's faithfulness had saved David Derrick's life.

After chafing the cold hands and limbs and forcing some wine through the stiff lips, Father Derrick was rewarded by seeing consciousness return to his son's face and light into his eyes.

By his father's assistance, David succeeded with some difficulty in regaining his home and poor little Beth, who was waiting so anxiously and lovingly.

No answer he did, he received, but he nestled closer to the prostrate form with no thought of deserting—faithful even in death.

So together in the silence and darkness and bitter chill, the dog and his master were keeping watch-night, while the little wife in the cottage just on the hill, waited and longed for the footsteps that came not.

Woman, like electricity, has heretofore been known by effects. Like this subtle magnetic force, she has defied analysis, evaded control, declined to be driven, readily glowed to enlighten and warm, or flashed gloriously only to be wilder or destroy. Fooled the Preacher.

A precocious little rascal was noticed on Jefferson avenue the other day making best endeavor to ring a door bell just beyond his reach. A well known minister happened along and, with the impulses of a good Samaritan, wanted to help the boy.

"Like to ring that bell, sonny?" "Yes sir but I can't reach it."

The divine stopped to the veranda and gave the bell a vigorous pull, as he patted the interesting juvenile on the head.

"Now run like the devil!" shouted the kid as he ran down the street at top speed. All the man could do was to laugh at this deplorable bit of worldliness and make explanation when the call was answered.—Detroit News.

Only to See His Folks. (From the Atlanta Constitution) A curious case [was] brought to the attention of the penitentiary authorities yesterday.

A negro named Gus Hall escaped from the convict camp in Montgomery county last Friday. His sentence was fifteen years dated from April 1889. His escape was discovered almost immediately after he had left the camp, and every effort was made to catch him without success. The rule in such cases is that if the escaped is not captured within twenty-four hours or thirty-six hours his arrest after that time is the merest accident in the world. Everything that could be done to find the negro was done in this instance, but so completely without success that hope of ever catching him was given up and the hunt was altogether abandoned.

Monday the negro walked into camp, dusty and travel worn. The act was entirely voluntary. He returned alone. Of course, he was secured at once which he seemed to expect.

"I was got homesick," was his explanation. "And I wanted to see the folks."

"We had given you up for lost, said one of the guards."

"Yes," he rejoined coolly, "I s'pose you had."

"Did you remember that you still had nearly fourteen years to serve?" he was asked.

"Oh, yes; but I didn't mean to leave for good. All I wanted was to see the folks once more."

The negro lived in Washington county. He had walked nearly the entire distance there and back. He is working to-day in stripes and shackles, with nearly fourteen years ahead of him yet.

The oldest newspaper in the collection brought together in the exhibition at Cologne of the early triumphs of the printing press dates from 1529. It describes the entry of the Roman Emperor into Bologna, and tells how his Papal Holiness met his Imperial Majesty on that august occasion. The next oldest gives an account of the overflow of the Tiber in 1530. Other newspapers coming down to 1614, tell of wars with the Turks, the sinking of cities and other remarkable events. There are fourteen of these sixteen century newspapers, and all except two consists of four small quarto leaves. The largest was evidently a campaign extra got up to add glory to the King of Spain. It has a formidable title which runs thus: "True Newspaper, describing how the Mighty King of Spain has lately acquired in the East Indies an Incalculable Treasure worth many Hundreds of Millions, the like of which has never been heard of before."
