Local Affairs.

Dr. Armstrong and family spent Sunday last with relatives in Lucknow.

Miss Nettie Anderson, of Detroit, is a guest at Mr. Wm. Dane's, in Gorrie, at present.

Mrs. J. A. Croll, of Clinton, is at present the guest of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Green, in this village.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland returned this week from Carleton Place, where they were guests at the wedding of Mr. S.'s sister.

Rev. and Mrs. Carter have gone to Mount Forest, from whence they will start in a day or two for their new home at Qu'Appelle, N. W. T.

Mr. Dale, one of Harriston's jewelers, spent Sunday last with friends here.

Rev. Mr. Green, the new pastor of the Gorrie Methodist Church, arrived in town on Tuesday.

Dr. Malcolm Armstrong, who has been the guest of his brother here for a few weeks past, returned to his home in Stanley last Saturday.

Hay Bros.' roller mill, in Listowel, was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday night, together with a grain elevator and an immense quantity of wheat and oats. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

Everything is ready for the laying of the corner stones of the new Methodist church to-morrow, and present appearances indicate that there will be an imposing scene. Dinner will be served at four o'clock, and the evening meeting will be a very enjoyable occasion.

By yesterday's dailies we learn that the Wingham and Goderich branch of the C. P. R., 81 miles in length, by way of Port Albert, has been subsidized by the government. The speedy completion of the road may now be looked for.

We understand that the union picnic between the schools of sections No. 1 and 18, on July 1st, is to be held in Mr. Ingall's bush instead of at Mr. Thos. Taylor's. The error occurred in the copy furnished us.

To-morrow will be a gala day in Lakelet, and the Patron's picnic will no doubt draw out a large attendance of farmers and their families. The Grand President, the County President and Organizer Pritchard are among the speakers, while the foot-ball and base ball promises to be quite exciting.

Mrs. Straith Jamieson, late of Formosa, China, will give an address in the Presbyterian church in this village on Monday, July 4th, at 7.30 p. m. on Mission Work in China. Having lived eight years there she will be able to give an account of the great troubles and trials of missionaries there and the great progress they are making. A collection will be taken up in aid of the Foreign Missions. All who are interested in missionary work will be interested in her address.

Last Monday evening while Rev. and Mrs. Torrance were visiting at Mr. Jno. Day's, just north of Gorrie, they were waited upon by a party of young men from Orange Hill, and presented with a chair—or rather with an ample purse to buy a comfortable chair as one could wish. Mr. Sam'l Howard made the presentation and Mr. Abram Strong read the following neat poetic address:

Dear Pastor Torrance accept this chair
From the boys up at Orange Hill,
Not for its meagre worth or use,
'Tis a token of our good will.
With regret we learn you're about to leave
For a field of labor new,
But we trust the good seed you have here sown
Will be watered by heavenly dew.
You have faithfully preached the message of love
And told us the sinner's doom
How our spirits forever must suffer in woe
Or forever in heaven will bloom.
You have shown us our nature's sinful state
And what we must be by grace
Before we can ever enter heaven
Or be ever for that holy place.
You have stood with us down at the open grave
Where our loved ones were lost to sight
And told us to live for God and heaven
And never give up the fight.
We pray that your life may long be spared
To tell the wondrous plan
Which God, in his love and mercy, wrought
To save his creature, man.
And now, dear Brother, we say good-bye
And bid you a kind adieu,
And ask you to pray that God may keep
Us faithful, and pure, and true.

One might think, in reading the Vidette's putrid attack on the GAZETTE editor last week, that we had been loafing around his office trying to coax him to sell out, when everybody knows that he came all the way to Warton to see us and negotiate the sale, which he confirmed by writing as soon as he reached home—and which letter he would like now to disown. We have it on the best authority that he told several people here last summer that it was his intention to leave Gorrie anyway, and it is a well-known fact that he was canvassing in Hepworth village for support with a view to starting a paper there. And yet he would have his readers think his whole idea of selling were founded on "lies" told by us. It is easy for a certain base element of society to call out "Liar, Liar!" by way of argument, but if lies were told, the party who went about telling that we had "turned Grit" told them. The money with which he was to have been bought out (and which he says we ran short of) was furnished by good business men in the village who wanted a respectable paper printed here, and it was found sufficient to buy and pay for the present GAZETTE plant which cost nearly twice what we were to have paid him. The scavenger probes deep into his beloved cesspools, but covers himself only with the filth.

Rev. Mr. Caswell will preach in the Presbyterian church here and at Fordwich next Sabbath.

Mr. L. F. Stephens, of Teeswater, on his return from the Toronto University, was visiting at Mr. James Perkins' last week.

Rev. Mr. Torrance started on Tuesday last, by buggy, for his new field of labor in Goderich, taking his son with him. Mrs. Torrance and daughters left by the train the same day. This excellent family leave many friends here who wish them prosperity in their new home. Mr. Torrance preached his farewell sermon on Sunday evening last, the hall being packed to the door.

Wroxeter.

Quite a bad accident occurred here last Thursday. It seems the freight train going east was backing down the mill siding at a good rate of speed when the driver seems to have lost control of his engine, which backed with great force into a car laden with flour, and sent it spinning over the embankment along with another car. The loaded car was stood straight on its end. The wrecking train came up in the evening and by daylight next morning had the track cleared.

Mr. David Henderson, formerly a wagon-maker here, but now of Northern Michigan in the lumber business, is here visiting his friends.

Mr. Paulin has a field which he declares he sowed with grass seed a year ago last Spring, and he has now growing on it a splendid crop of bearded wheat. How it got there is more than he can tell.

Mrs. James Perkins and daughter were visiting here on Monday at Mr. William Sanderson's.

The bridge over the river in the village is undergoing some repairs, but the public traffic will not be interfered with.

Mr. Cassals, veterinary student, who has been practicing with Dr. Fortune, returns home on Friday, preparatory to entering upon another term at College.

Miss Montgomery has been very ill, but is now somewhat better. A good deal of sympathy is felt for this unfortunate lady.

Messrs. Hamilton & Sanderson shipped 15 fat hogs on Tuesday. The noisy quadrupeds went to Montreal.

Mrs. Pleton, of London, and the Misses Frailock, of Michigan, also Mr. Fortune, of Vesta, all cousins of Mr. Fortune, V. S., paid him a visit this week.

Our statute-labor-tax man is now on his collecting tour. A friend of mine button-holed me last evening and gave me the following information about the matter: "I think the imposing of taxes is one of the silliest pieces of legislation that it is possible to conceive of; it belongs to the barbarous and feudal ages of long ago. Just look what a saving it would be if we could discharge all collectors, assessors, and in fact everybody connected with the municipal government and then there would be no money required. But this collecting money every year is monstrous!"

Lakelet.

Mr. Walls occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church here on Sunday. Mr. Potter, the new man appointed for this district, will preach his first sermon on Sunday afternoon next. From information gleaned we learn he is a good preacher, and one who will soon take a high standing in the estimation of the people.

Our sidewalk is in a rather shattered condition. Through the persevering endeavors of our worthy pathmaster, Mr. Mr. Hamilton, money was collected and a stock of lumber bought, but has lain untouched for over a week. To-morrow evening (Tuesday) some 15 of our burghers, and those of the immediate vicinity, have offered to assist in making the necessary repairs, and by the 1st visitors to our burgh will find a sidewalk as good as, if not better than, those of the larger places.

Every one, whether a patron or not, is in raptures over the coming event on the 1st. Nothing has been left undone by the members of the various lodges to make this a picnic which will be a model to all future ones. On Wednesday afternoon a couple of score of men will be employed in fitting the grounds—than which, better cannot be found. It matters not in what kind of sport people delight to revel, their desires will be gratified, as there is going to be everything here. By the time your sheet reaches Lakelet, the picnic will be something of the past, and if you, Mr. Editor, or your reporter, be not present, with your permission we shall give a synopsis of the day's proceedings for the next issue.

Our foot ball team went to Mildmay on Saturday and scored a goal—so did Mildmay. The Mildmay team is composed of players who on the field play good ball and do not make a big fuss over it. The tie will be played off here on the 1st, when a fast and exciting match may be expected. The match will not be played at 10.30, as billed, but will come off right after the speaking—about 4.00 or 5.

WHAT WE KNOW TO BE TRUE.—That, judging from the swiftness of the pony, Mr. Dulmage's trade was profitable. That Mr. Carlton, our blacksmith, has more work on hand than he and his apprentice can do justice to. That your painter got out something nobby in the way of a sign for our shoemaker. That Mr. R. Brown, cheesemaker of Glammis, paid Springbank a flying visit on Sunday. That most of the boats in the village are engaged for the 1st. That our new hotel man, Mr. Londeboro, of the boundary, is vastly superior to the former Mr. Haskett in bulk. That the Dr. is attending a little daughter of Mr. John Hamilton's who is ill. That Mr. James Horton is suffering much with sciatica. That Mr. Nay, whose wrists were broken some time ago, is getting on very well, but will be unable to do any work this season. That Mr. Jacques' family and relatives spent all day Thursday boating on our lake.

White water lilies are in bloom.

Rev. E. T. Carter, wife and child, paid our village a visit last week.

Mr. Samuel Lounsbury has rented the Lakelet hotel and will take possession this week.

The foot ball match, Lakelet vs. Clifford, resulted in a draw. A well-contested game was witnessed by a large number of admirers of this exciting game.

Halladay, the shoe-maker, has a brand new road cart that beats them all, built by Cook & Carlton, of this village.

Wm. Montgomery, Jr., and Bert Dulmage, came from High School, Harriston, on Friday last on their bicycles. They were pretty tired on arrival at the Lake, the roads being heavy.

Wm. S. Smith brought home 60 odd fine perch and bass from the big lake on Monday. He was only away about two hours. Good fishing, this.

Mr. A. S. Dulmage is expected home from Military School at London in a week or so.

BORN.

In Gorrie, on June 29th, the wife of Mr. J. W. Waterhouse, of twins—both boys.

YOUNG FOLKS.

The Tone of Voice.

It is not so much what you say, as the manner in which you say it. It is not so much the language you use, as the tone in which you convey it.

One of the First Principles.

It is exceedingly distressing to a humane person to see the indifference toward the comfort and life of dumb animals by little children.

Boys and girls should be taught from their earliest infancy to respect the rights of animals. They should be taught to watch the grace and beauty of the growing life around them.

Mothers who are very careful about the religious training of their children and inculcate precept upon precept for their guidance are often careless themselves about the example set.

It is a disposition in a little one it can be corrected in early childhood by interesting it in the habits of the animal, its beautiful fur, its soft tread and agile movement.

Useful Hints for Youthful Gardeners.

Nothing is so delightful for our young people, especially our girls, than home gardening. It is a healthful recreation and a perpetual aid to the understanding of nature's wonders.

Let me suggest the Drummond phlox gardeners will be interesting all summer. They repay any care with a wonderful readiness and wealth of loveliness.

You lay your bit of board straight across the bed about four inches from the end. You lean one arm on it to hold it firm, and with a little stick draw a furrow an inch deep in the earth along its edge, straight and equal as you can in depth all the way.

Now with your hand draw over the seeds the earth that was displaced in making the furrow; it will give them just the right depth of covering—about twice their diameter.

For rose campion gardens plant the fine seeds that are very like poppy seeds, in the same way as the phlox seeds.

No Career for Him. Nice Little Boy—"I wish you would teach me to black boots."

These are the weeds that you will have to watch and fight with all your might, for they are stronger and more determined than I can find any words to tell you.

In the second or third week in May you may transplant your sweet peas from the house boxes to the open-air garden. People do not generally know that sweet peas are most easily and successfully transplanted.

It is trying, and when I do plant out of doors I am obliged to have a cover of woven wire to fit over my flower beds to keep off the dear little pests.

There are no days like the good old days—The days, when we were youthful. When humankind were pure of mind.

There is no love like the good old love—The love that mother gave us. We are old, old men, yet we pine again.

The Gift of the Strand. The dead child lay in the shroud, And the widow watched beside.

But the mother laughed at all. "I have lost my man in the sea, And the child that was my life."

Then came a cry from the sea. But the sea-ribe blinded the glass, And "Heard ye nothing, mother?" she said.

And the nodding mother sighed. "This sorrow makes ye dull, Have ye not seen the wind-blown gull?"

And the nodding mother sighed. "This sorrow makes ye dull, Have ye not seen the wind-blown gull?"

Cyclopedias. A fellow came out here to-day 'n' showed me a book to me.

"Tells 'er ev'rythin'!" says L. "That's good—in fact, sir, that's the best kind of a book I ever seed, but think I'd like a test."

"I don't prognosticate," says he. "That ain't the p'nt!" says L. "What 'n' a-stin' you is will the blame thing prophesy?"

My great-grandfather's almanac's still good.—[John Kendrick Bangs, in Harper's Magazine.]

There are no girls like the good old girls—As buxom and smart and as clean of heart.

THE MATHEMATICS OF WAR.

TWELVE HUNDRED MILLION MEN HAVE BEEN KILLED.

The Human Sacrifice in Thirty Centuries—As Great as the Population of the Earth Now.

Can human, folly, regarded from some special point of view, be considered a subject for scientific observation? We do not hesitate to answer in the affirmative, although up to the present time it has never been classified, and although it forms a whole too vast and too complex to belong to any special genus or determined category.

Its magnitude and universality have doubtless kept it outside of positivestudies, properly so called. Even now we do not pretend to treat the immense subject in its full extent, but simply wish to examine one of its most interesting and serious phases, the military system of the fourteen hundred million human beings who people this planet.

How many men are destroyed by war in a century? Official reports and documents enable us to calculate the number of soldiers who have been killed or have died during modern wars. We know that during the unaccountable Franco-German war of 1870-71, 250,000 men were slain on the two sides; that during the useless Crimean war of 1854-55, 785,000 were slain; that during the short Italian war of 1859, 63,000 men fell on the field of battle or died in hospitals; that the game of chess between Prussia and Austria in 1866 deprived 46,000 individuals of life; that in the United States the strife between the North and South caused the death of 450,000 men in 1860-64; we know also that the wars of the first empire poured out the blood of five million Europeans, and that France has taken up arms twenty times since 1815. On adding the number of victims of war during the last century a total of 19,840,900 is reached in the civilized countries of Europe and in the United States.

Commencing with the Trojan war, the case has been the same in all ages of history. Certain remarkable battles, fought hand to hand with knife or club, have had the memorable honor of leaving as many as two hundred thousand men dead on the field; as examples we cite the defeat of the Cimbrians and Teutons by Marius, and the last exploits of Attila. Eighteen to twenty million men are killed every century in Europe by the enlightened institution of war. If these men, averaging thirty years of age, should join hands they would form a line 4,500 leagues long, crossing all Europe and Asia.

The nations of the extreme Orient (the Chinese and their neighbors) form a second human consolidation, and shed about the same quantity of blood. Gengis Khan and Tamerlane marked their routes with pyramids of severed heads. Barbarous nations also are engaged in combats, seldom killing fewer than four to five million beings in a century. The total number destroyed every century in political, religious or international wars is at least forty millions.

General statistics prove that, since the Trojan war 3,000 years ago, not a single year has elapsed in which some war has not killed its proportionate number. During the thirty centuries which have elapsed since the beginning of Asiatic and European history, a loss of 40,000,000 men makes the total number destroyed by war to be 1,200,000,000, a number very nearly representing the total population of the globe at the present day.

Twelve hundred millions!

It is day, and the sun sheds its light and heat upon the whole world. The country is green, the cities full of life, and the villages surrounded with laborers. Millions of men are living, acting, and producing. Life unfolds its mystic and divine radiance on the surface of the globe.

But behold the sun, gone to rest! Behold, black night and melancholy silence! Funereal Death descends from sombre heights, holding in his hand a scythe of steel. He passes like a bird of night whose flight extends his hand to the four cardinal points, traverses shadowy space and disappears in the depths; this gesture has arrested humanity in its course; this passage of the neophyte has sent all human beings to their last sleep; to-morrow morning none of us will waken; the sun will shine upon a land of the dead. Not a single human being remains to look upon the scene. Paris, London, New York, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Berlin, and Rome are suddenly extinguished. Streets are deserted, dwellings filled with the dead; cities and villages are cemeteries.

Silence, seated on the ruins of the globe, sleeps in the midst of the vast field of the dead, in the midst of this prostrated army of 1,200,000,000 corpses.

The immense cemetery of all mankind, seen from a vantage point in the real world, victims destroyed by war from the historical beginning of nations down to the year of grace in which we live.

The sword is ceaselessly drawing blood from human veins. Eighteen million cubic meters have been shed.

In summer at Paris the Seine delivers to two parts of the bridge Pont-Neuf about a hundred cubic meters of water every second, moving with force of 3,500 horse power. Every hour 360,000 cubic meters of water pass under the arches of the bridge, or 8,640,000 cubic meters in a day. Imagine the river to be human blood instead of water, for if the blood shed in all wars was put into the basin between the quays it would form such a river, and we would have to remain standing on the parapet fifty hours to see it flow away.

That quantity of blood weighs 18,900,000,000 kilograms. It is an unending stream which every hour since history began has unceasingly poured 680 litres of blood to dye the royal purple worn by the occupants of imperial thrones.

If the 1,200,000,000 skeletons should rise and climb one upon another the ladder thus formed would reach to the moon, coil about that body and, continuing onward, would mount infinite space four times as far again; that is, 500,700 leagues in height. The corpses, if thrown into the channel at Calais, would form a bridge between France and England and separate the ocean from the North Sea by a weir. Only the heads of the men slaughtered in war were taken and placed side by side, a band would be formed reaching six times around the world.

War is not only an unnecessary scourge, but is more injurious than all others, for it never comes alone; sickness, ruin, and famine always follow in its path.

A great amount of money is necessary in order to kill in proper manner, for each man slain amounts to $7,000. The increasing and multiplying taxes of all nations are never sufficient to pay for the butchery of human troops. Every year Europe spends more than a billion, two hundred million dollars in shedding

HER CHILDREN'S BLOOD.

France spends four hundred thousand dollars every day. The war in America did not cost less than sixteen billion dollars.

France spends four hundred thousand dollars every day. The war in America did not cost less than sixteen billion dollars. From the Crimean war down to that of 1870-71, the civilized nations of Europe and America spent in destroying one another $10,000,000,000 of the ordinary budget and more than $11,000,000,000 raised expressly for the purpose, making a total of $21,000,000,000. The wars of the last hundred years have cost $140,000,000,000, without counting the sorrow, the loss of men, and other results.

For a part only of this fabulous sum all the children might have been brought up and educated gratuitously; all lines of railways might have been built; provision might have been made for the attempts to realize aerial navigation; customs, towns, dunes, and all obstacles to freedom of trade might have been removed except that caused by idleness and infirmity.

Can the armies of the world be abolished? It is impossible. A mechanic has calculated the cost of making wooden soldiers of natural size and good condition. As, after all, the victims of to-day are only an affair of number, money, and stratagem, he has decided that all the armies could be reproduced for 6,000,000 francs, or $1,200,000,000 a year (soldiers in fir, under officers in oak, officers in rosewood, captains in mahogany, colonels in cedar, and generals in ivory), and they could be drilled by steam power, the artillery being included in the calculation. The leaders of the two nations at war and their staff officers would conduct the strategy at their risk and peril. The victory would belong, as heretofore, to him who by his skill should succeed in checking his adversary and in destroying the greatest number of combatants. That improvement of the armies would have the advantage of leaving the husbandman to his field, the workman in his factory, and the student to studies, and would promote public prosperity and happiness.

That may answer as advice to future ministers of war when men, having finally reached the age of reason, shall refuse to fight. But for centuries Ministers and Generals can rest upon their laurels.

Thoughts of Brides. "For instance, what were you all thinking of when you were being married?"

"Why, being married, of course!" "Nonsense," said the newspaper woman, "that idea was in your mind, no doubt, but it was the undercurrent of thought. You were thinking really of something else. Confess, now."

"Well," said one of the listeners, thoughtfully, "perhaps that is true. Now that I stop to consider it, I was thinking of something else. You see, I was married at home and in the evening. Just as the minister commenced the service a lamp-shade on a small table near me cracked."

"I turned involuntarily to my sister, who was standing near me, and was about to whisper her to turn the lamp down, when it suddenly occurred to me that that was the cynosure of all eyes—that it was really my own wedding. Of course I refrained from speech, but it was with difficulty that I refrained from laughter at the blunder I came so near making."

"Well, I remember distinctly what I was thinking about," said the intellectual woman on the sofa. "I had a new pair of eyeglasses on, and the springing of my nose. I was wishing the minister would hurry up so I could go up stairs and change them."

"And I," put in the third, "was congratulating myself all through the ceremony on my wonderful composure. I knew that he was frightened to death, and I was thinking what larks it would be to tease him about it all the rest of his life, when suddenly, as I held out my hand for the ring, it happened to glance at it and found that it was trembling like a leaf."

"That night 'phased' me so that all else is a blank, save my own desire to hide my hands. I had a mad impulse to conceal them in the folds of my veil, but I don't think I did."

"At least, no one ever told me so. I myself would hate to take my oath that I did not."

"It was a sermon of Sam Small's that was diverting my mind at my wedding," said the woman in the corner. "I don't know that anything could have been more incongruous at such a time than one of Sam Small's sermons, but I had heard him preach a month or so before, and just as I was coming down stairs something, I shall never know what, put me in mind of one of his grotesque illustrations."

"He compared the gospel to a spring board. Just where he found the resemblance I can't remember. That was what troubled me then. I couldn't remember, and I was trying to figure it out all through the service. I nearly missed one of the responses, I was so intent upon the idea."

"Everybody accounted for," said the newspaper woman, "save myself, who am not married, and Mrs. Blank. What were you thinking of, Mrs. B.?"

"The little woman blushed furiously, hesitated, and finally said: 'If you promise never to tell, I'll tell you. You see, I was married in the days when people were enormous talls. Well, in the confusion and hurly-burly of dressing, my bustle got lost, and couldn't be found. It was growing late, and what was to be done? No one knew. I could not wear my dress without it, for it looked dreadfully.'"

"Finally one of my bridesmaids, a girl of expedients, grabbed up a handful of bath towels, tied a ribbon around them and fastened that around my waist. I didn't think very much about it until I was standing at the altar, and then the horrible thought flashed across me, what if I should lose some of those Manchester bath towels, best quality, in the aisle."

"I nearly fainted away, and I assure you every step of that solemn procession down from the altar was solemn indeed, to me. 'Proceeded' very gingerly. Please don't tell, though, for people will tease me."

And they all promised, but the newspaper woman told.

DOGS' FLESH A BUMMA.

An Ingenious Butcher Serves a Dish to His Customers.

A trial of more than usual interest was terminated at Lille, France, on Saturday. Prior to October last there lived at Roubaix a certain Gustave Resson and his wife, who had succeeded in building up a highly-prosperous butchery business. The Rasons went in for specialities. Their venison was regarded with affection, and their sausage, which possessed a peculiarly savoury flavour, were talked of for miles. It may be imagined therefore, that when, on the 26th of last October, a warrant was issued for their arrest upon a charge of systematically dealing in dogs' flesh, and selling it for human food, the indignation of their numerous customers was intense. Gustave Resson succeeded in escaping across the frontier into Belgium, but his wife and one of the shopmen were arrested, and on Saturday came up for their trial. Mr. Leclercq, the health inspector of the town of Roubaix, testified that on the 25th of October last he had seized four pounds of chops which he found in a basket in the possession of Madame Resson. He arrested her, and found at the back of the butcher's shop a regular slaughter-house containing all the necessary instruments, thirteen dogs' carcasses, about sixty dogs' skins pegged out and drying, and some living dogs awaiting their turn to be converted into provender. M. Roger, a veterinary surgeon, testified to having been called in to examine the chops seized by the health officer. He at once declared them to be dogs' flesh. Questioned by the president, the witness stated that dog's flesh was not dangerous to health providing the animal had no disease. Several of the regular customers of the establishment testified that they had patronised the Rasons because of the distinct and agreeable flavor of their sausage meat. It is now known that the Rasons had been in the habit of slaughtering about a dozen dogs each week. The Court sentenced Gustave Resson in default to six months' imprisonment, his wife to six months, and the shopman to three months, with an additional fine in each case.

Terrible Disaster on the Caspian Sea. Particulars have only just reached St. Petersburg of a terrible disaster, involving great loss of life, which occurred on the Caspian Sea at the end of March. As early as the 4th ult. a report was current at Baku, and was telegraphed abroad, that a steamer had been wrecked on a voyage to that port, but in the absence of further advice the rumour remained unconfirmed. No doubt is now entertained, however, that the vessel referred to was the steamer Alexander Wolkow, which left one of the Persian ports on the southern side of the Caspian, with goods and passengers for Baku at the end of March, and has never since been heard of. It is now practically certain that she foundered with all on board during a terrible storm which raged on March 29. The precise number of lives lost has not been ascertained, but it is known that some two hundred Persians had taken passage for Baku, and all these were drowned, besides the crew. The Alexander Wolkow was formerly used as a river steamer, and is stated to have been quite unsuitable for traffic in stormy weather, being totally unprovided with lifeboats. The vessel, moreover, carried a heavy deck cargo, which it is supposed must have shifted, thus causing the vessel to capsize. How the disaster really occurred, however, can never be known, as every soul on board perished.

A Robbers' Cave. According to a German paper, a robbers' cave has just been discovered by a police officer in one of the most picturesque parts of Grunewald. The officer has frequently observed two suspicious-looking persons loitering about the hillside. From a secluded point he watched their movements, and the men suddenly disappear through the tangled brushwood. He searched the spot, and found, cunningly concealed by a network of brambles, a wide opening. Listening attentively at the entrance, he heard the sound of voices within. Armed with his revolver, the gendarme ventured into the cave and confronted the two cave-dwellers, who were regaling themselves. The men, thus surprised, at once surrendered. The cave was superbly furnished—in fact, truly sybaritic in style—though there were unmistakable signs of stolen property lying about awaiting removal. When the officer was conducting his prisoners to the lock-up one of them made his escape. This man's name is Wollenstein, of Spandau. In the summer of last year he escaped from jail, and has since led a robber's life. The man in custody has long been sought for as a notorious criminal. The cave is now an object of much interest.

The French Executioner. The executioner is still regarded in France with much of the abhorrence which has always been felt for him, but although he is an outcast from the ordinary world, admission to the marshes, commanderies, and public places generally is not to-day, as it once was, denied to him. Whenever his place becomes vacant there is a rush of candidates for it more multitudinous, and more eager, than for any other State office whatsoever. To be "Monsieur de Paris," as the executioner is styled, seems a pinnacle of ambition with only too large a percentage of the public. The executioner has generally been more loathed in France than even in England. And justly so; for in the former country his work, for many centuries, has been peculiarly infamous, not to say diabolical. In the present day, it is true, "Monsieur de Paris" simply touches a button, and his victim, without a struggle or a pang, is no more. But he was not always so humane. Once it was his own hand that dealt slow death, and inflicted fiendish torture. It was he who quartered the condemned wretch—who attached horses, that is to say, to his arms and legs, and then drove them in four different directions. It was he who burned, or broke on the wheel—the latter an indescribably ghastly operation, in which he used an iron bar to break every bone in the victim's body. It is not surprising, therefore, that even to-day "Monsieur de Paris" should be the object of a detestation which Ketch himself failed to excite.

We should miss a great deal that is valuable in human nature if we confined our attention exclusively to important personages.—Hamerton.

SPAYING OF PIGS.

BY WM. MOLE, M. B. C. V. S., HAMILTON, ONT.

There is no doubt that in the near future farmers and hog raisers must pay more attention to this important subject. The spaying of young sows is a necessary and why the subject has been so much neglected in Canada is not quite apparent, but the fact remains that the operation of spaying sows is comparatively unknown amongst the general body of pig keepers. It may also be observed that the practice is not so generally followed in the remote parts of the agricultural districts of England as it was in former times. We account for it in a measure that the class of men known as spayers and gelders, who perform this operation, have in a measure died out, giving place to the veterinary surgeon who now practices castration in horses, and does not care to undertake so unthankful, unclean, and poorly paid operation, as spaying pigs; indeed we do not blame them as it is a very simple operation, and can be taught to any intelligent farmer about ten minutes. The necessity arises, and it ought to be done more extensively than it is at the present time. The next question arises, will it pay, and why? The question is thrust upon us by attending the markets and observing the actions of the pork packers. They invariably look for the mark or scar left by the operation, and are willing to pay in every case to give a cent a pound more for spayed than for open sows. It is the general rule in the western counties of England, and almost universally practised in Ireland; in other districts it is not so frequently done. But recently the larger bacon curers of Limerick have refused to take open sows unless at a reduced price. They maintain that the use of unspayed sows will not cure or take the salt, and as those spayed, and the evidence of those who have experience in raising spaying sows, say that they cost less to feed, make a much better animal, superior in quality, less disposed to fret, and are never chased or worried by the male. They also record their experience by observing that it requires greater time to bring open, unspayed sows to maturity, that they require a larger amount of feed to fatten, and that during their period, oestrus or season, the flesh seems to melt off their sides, and during the ensuing twenty-eight days it requires double the amount of food to make up for the lost time. Mr. Fearman, the well-known pork packer of Hamilton, Ont., says that "When I come across a defective side of bacon that has been cured in curing, I find that it is the product of an unspayed Canadian sow." He recommends the Tamworths as being the best for packers. It is a good, long, deep-sided pig with plenty of hair of a reddish hue, and large in bone. And he further says: "If a pig shows a good proportion of lean meat." This coming from such an authority ought to be deeply impressed on the minds of the Canadian farmers. The average consumer, more especially in cities, requires and will have as much lean meat as fat, and it does seem to point to the condition of breeding a class of hogs that lays on as much lean as possible. The present class of animal that is offered seems to me to be a grade of Yorkshire Whites, and are most favored by bacon curers. As a rule they prefer them about nine months old, weighing (alive) 160 to 240 pounds for Canadian trade; for export should not exceed when dressed 140 pounds; should be ready for market during the best months in June, July, August and September, for preference. The quality wanted is lean pork of the English market, to meet the requirements of the English and export. They should be sold alive to the packers, where the system of killing, dressing, cooling and curing can be done in a quick, uniform manner. It will be found that it will pay the farmer better to sell his swine on foot than to market them dressed, and it is not profitable to feed swine after they exceed 200 pounds alive. The public taste has turned against fat meats of all kinds, and the farmer must produce what the consumer requires, so that with a little extra care in housing, the winter raising of young pigs to be sold off in June, July and August should become a very valuable adjunct to winter dairying. Mr. Fearman writes that he finds great difficulty in getting animals that are always suitable in size at the right time of year, and can never get the quantity that he requires from the surrounding districts. When in full running order he will consume 750 per day, and can only get this number by sending long distances. The old fashioned practice of killing large stores must rapidly give way to the improved method of summer killing young pigs. The operation of spaying pigs consists of removing the ovaries, the essential organ of generation in the female, and analogous to the testes of the male. They are two ovoid, irregular-shaped bodies smaller than the latter situated in the abdominal cavity, and may be likened to a small cluster of unripe mulberries, they are a number of small vesicles or membranous sacs of various sizes, reddish in color. These are the Graafian vesicles in various stages of development. The pig of which the diagram was taken was just approaching her period of season, and is the finest illustration that I have seen.

In the spaying of pigs, there are certain conditions that must be observed, and point directly to the success or failure of the operation. The first essential condition, is that you must have the bowels comparatively empty by starving or withholding food for about 14 to 18 hours before the operation. They should be from one month to six weeks old; they will be then ready for the market at about nine to twelve months of age.

Have the animal held on a bench by two men, one holding the fore legs, the other the hind ones extended. Make an incision in the flank a little below the angle of the hip bone; for general guidance two fingers space may be observed. The hair when present should be clipped or shaved off about a hand space and with a sharp, broad-bladed or spaying or castrating knife make an incision from behind forward, if standing at the back of the pig, with the animal stretched on its right side; if on the left side, from before backwards, about one inch in length, and only through the skin on to the fat. With the nail tear away the tissue until you feel the bowel and search in a backward and upward direction at the entrance of the pelvic bones for the womb, which will be found floating free between the bladder and straight gut. On bringing it up to the opening be quite sure that it is the ovary, and it may be recognized by its color, being slightly red, and the womb being pearly white, the bowels being of a dull lead color. The ovaries are as described above—something like a very small bunch of unripe mulberries, firm, though elastic to the touch. When drawn through the opening, the round little balls of vesicles are easily cut off with a scraping motion of the knife. Some men twist them off, but I prefer cutting, as being more expeditious. The lower ovary is brought out and treated the same way. Part of the womb may be brought out in searching for the second ovary, but it must be returned again, the aperture being stitched with a needle and thread, or twisted suture. There is little blood to escape and should be carefully prevented from falling into the interior of the bowels. Wash the outside with a sponge after returning the parts and accurately stitch the wound with one or two stitches. Remember, the smaller the wound or opening, the less chance there is of unfavorable results. It is rarely that any evil results follow. The little pig seems to take very little notice. Feed with a bulky ration—not too much at a time. In two or three days the thread of the stitches should be removed and the effects of the operation are soon manifest by the improvement the animal makes in condition. What seems to be the result of the operation, and why it is so beneficial is that the animal has no period of season or oestrus, and the next six months of its life is engaged in putting on fat, and the animal is ready for market in August—two months earlier than she would be if left open.

The little pigs begin to feed themselves when about a month old. They should then be fed apart from the mother sow with skim milk, a small quantity of ground oats, wheat or shorts, and spayed at five weeks. Then the quantity of food should be gradually increased until they are ready for the market, and bacon curers require a pig as light in head as possible, light in shoulders, long and deep in ribs, wide in loins, thick in flanks, with hams square and deep, and not strong in bone, but possessing a good coat of hair. The demand is now for almost exclusively light, fleshy meats.

Next to good food, etc., exercise must be counted upon in the attainment and preservation of health; it leads to develop muscle or lean meat instead of fat, thus causing them to be the ideal pig of the buyer. A noticeable fact in the rearing of young spayed pigs is the bones are very immature, and do not grow in the same proportion to the other parts of the body. An opinion that we hold on the subject is that it is due to the deficiency of the lime salts that make up the earthy constituents of bone; therefore, in cases where spayed pigs are grown for the market, hardwood ashes, or better, bone meal, should be fed with daily ration. The effect will soon be evident; not only will it build up the bony structures of the body, but will aid digestion, which must be kept at the highest pitch of efficiency. Hog feeders who have tried this practice pronounce the effects clear, gratifying, and the benefits unmistakable. The wood ashes may have a little very little, salt mixed with them to advantage. Any man who holds that the pig is not deserving of care and attention will never make a dollar raising them. Whilst as the scavenger of the farm they are invaluable, and will more than earn their keep for that purpose alone. But what is the general practice of keeping these animals? Any place seems good enough for a sty—dark, damp, and hence unclean. No man would think of keeping any other animal under such conditions. Give your animal plenty of light; let the sun shine into the pig sty, by making large windows that can be opened, admitting fresh air and sunlight by that means. See that the pens are kept clean, give plenty of straw, and you will soon find that pigs are quite as clean as any other animal. It is often said pigs delight to wallow in the mud. That is no doubt true; at the same time it must not be forgotten that they are carrying out a natural instinct, for they are of the pachydermatous class of animal—the same as the hippopotamus that delights in taking a mud bath occasionally. We hold the opinion that the best animal to grow fat and thrive in the least possible time is a half-bred pig—a direct first cross from pure stock to the ordinary stock of the district, and may be described as a grade pig, and are always so bred. If pigs are not intended for breeding purposes, they should be all castrated and spayed at the time mentioned above, and it will be found that the average loss by the operation will not exceed one per cent., if ordinary care is taken.

BREAKING COLTS.

A Firm, Gentle Touch Requisite. Don't Break Him in the Shafts.

In breaking a colt, what to do depends on his age, previous handling and disposition. A colt that has been carefully and properly handled from the time he was weaned does not require the same treatment as one which has been allowed to run wild. The first impression that we want to make on the colt's brain is that we can master him. That can be very easily done and must be made to make him a safe and obedient servant of man. Away with all your sugar breaking; whoever talks about subduing colts with sugar and apples never was cut out to train horses, and whenever he rides out he needs some one to drive for him. A colt to be worth anything must be subdued, he must be made to think that man is his master and that he must mind him. By means of the foot strap we will make him stand on three legs. This he may resist a little at first, but the struggle will be brief and all over. The colt is now in your hands and at your mercy and now is the time to exercise your judgment and kindness; now you can be firm and yet kind. He knows that he is under your control and will begin to look to you for friendship and help; keep him in this position for only a very short time, not to exceed five or eight minutes, give him a little rest and repeat the operation; handle him gently but firmly; throw straps over him, rub him with these, encircle him with one; keep whatever you have in your hand moving over him; lift up his tail and put a rope or strap around as you would a crupper. He will soon learn that he is not to be hurt and will allow you to throw the saddle part of the harness over him. This do several times and finally draw it off over his hips and let it fall behind him. The wildest colt can in a very brief time be made to submit to this treatment, and after this there will be no trouble in putting on the harness, a great point gained.

At this stage in his breaking I hit him and teach him the word "whoa." My biting arrangement is a most simple one, consisting of a straight bit with a small cord attached to the rings; bring this over his head as though it were a bridle; gently pull it back on his neck, of course he will refuse to give it at first; work by degrees; keep him checked only a few minutes at a time, but keep repeating the operation until he will give to the bit, which he will do in 20 or 30 minutes. Now fasten you a cord to the ring of the bit, stand in front of him and say "come here," pull him gently and if he refuses to obey, touch him lightly with the whip around his fore leg. He will soon follow you and just as soon as he will do this, press on the bridle and say "whoa." Continue this kind of training for some little time for it will pay you well for doing it. Make every lesson thorough and do not try to have the colt take a second step until he has taken the first.

THE SIPHON CLOCK.

How The Hour of the Day May Be Indicated by a Novel Contrivance.

A very interesting contrivance, that can easily be constructed by an amateur, is attracting attention in France. Over the top of two side supports or side arms a cross-beam is placed in the shape of a knitting-needle, which must be perfectly straight, of course, and connected at one end with a small hour hand that moves around a dial. A tiny pulley swings around the center of the needle, and in the groove of this pulley runs a thread, to one end of which is attached a float, and to the other end a balance weight. An ordinary candle-wick passes from the larger glass into the smaller one by its side. As soon as the large glass is filled with water the operation begins, the wick gradually absorbing the water, making the float fall lower and lower, which action determines the movement of the hand on the dial. The float is easily regulated; if it goes too fast the thickness of the wick must be diminished; if too slow, it must be increased. The form and size of the large glass on which the regularity of the clock depends has been determined by N. Pellat of the Faculty of Sciences in Paris, but with a little careful study even an ordinary glass can be made to render good service.

Making Home Attractive.

Don't you want the boys to have a warm place in their hearts for home, and to carry its good influence out into the world? Don't be fussy. Too many tidies. Too many ribbons tied on chair legs. Too much muslin shutting out of the sun. Too much nagging, such as: "Boys, don't touch that tin on your dirty fingers!" "Boys, go out of this parlor with your muddy shoes!" Now, suppose you have something in your parlor that they can sympathize with and help you in making beautiful. For the same money you spend in knickknacks you can buy Chinese Lily balls, and get the boys to find the pretty pebbles top top up in your best glass dish. Or they will gladly go off into the woods to get rich soil for the plants. But the best thing to interest the boys is a fernace. With a little ingenuity the boys can make one, and stock it too. There are lots of lovely things growing in the woods and bring home for their care. The girls, too. Instead of bending over a crazy quilt, that may contain a thousand small pieces, and all embrodered, encourage them in becoming intelligent, in making home attractive, in cultivating in themselves and in others a cheerful spirit, and so shedding light and joy on the daily life.

Christianity.

Christianity has not only so spread that a third of the population of the globe is Christian, but it has wrought the greatest moral and spiritual changes. In place of the heathen systems with their absurdities, falsehoods and immoralities, the pure faith of Christ, which, even if it were a fable, would be the most beautiful and inspiring fable the world has ever known. It has given a new civilization to a third of the world. Under its influence society has assumed a new form. The rights of personality have been recognized. Constitutional government has been reformed. Class distinctions have been broken down. Slavery has been abolished. The brotherhood of nations is beginning to be recognized. Charitable institutions have been established. The position of woman has been elevated. The rights of children have been recognized. The Christian home has been evolved. Commerce and trade have been placed on a new basis. Literature, science, philosophy and art have sprung into a grander life. In a word, our many-sided modern civilization, with its immense superiority over that of the heathen and of ancient times, is the effect of Christianity. To-day Christianity is the power that is moulding the destinies of the world.

THE ROYAL ARCANUM.

A Pleasant Gathering at Wroxeter.

On the evening of the 23rd inst. the members of the Royal Arcanum held the anniversary meeting of the Order in the Odd Fellows hall, Wroxeter. The Order was just 15 years old on that date having been inaugurated on June 23rd 1877. This meeting was largely of a social character but differed from those usually held in some respects, notably, in having a number of non-members present by special invitation.

When the assembly got together it was found that close on to one hundred were present. A very interesting program was rendered of which I will give your many readers a brief sketch. Mr. Jos. Cowan acted as chairman on the occasion to the satisfaction of everyone. A number of songs were sung at proper intervals by Messrs Thos. Ray, J. Gibson, T. Gibson, Jas Fox, and A. Boag, all did so well it would perhaps be considered invidious to select anyone for special mention. Some of the singers were accompanied on the organ by Miss Maggie Miller, who did her part in a pleasing and acceptable manner. The speakers were Mr. Malcolmson from Goderich, Master in Chancery and Mr. Lee Grand Secy of the Grand Council of Ontario. Mr. Malcolmson was just called upon and spoke for a few minutes in his felicitous way, when recalled later in the evening told a very amusing Scotch story in capital style which fairly "brought down the house." Mr. Lee then addressed the audience. This is a speaker of more than ordinary ability. He first dealt with the history of the Order and then very forcibly and eloquently set forth its aims and objects. He has the faculty of expressing his opinions in a very clean and comprehensive manner. After hearing his admirable address we were impressed with the idea that we should very much like to hear him again. After speaking refreshments were served. This was done in a way to call forth the highest praise of those present towards the lady members. The ladies very liberally supplied the wants of all those present. Their part was most efficiently done. The R. A. Council furnished a very pleasant evening's entertainment for themselves and their invited guests. Many who were present by invitation will join me in expressing their appreciation of all this and trust the future prosperity of the Order in Wroxeter may be commensurate with their kindness and liberality.—Com.

Talmage On Horse Racing.

At the same time I do not believe in slow driving, writes T. De Witt Talmage in the July Ladies' Home Journal. There is no more virtue in driving slow than in driving fast, any more than a freight train going ten miles an hour is better than an express train going fifty. There is a delusion abroad in the world that a thing must be necessarily good and Christian if it is slow and dull and plodding. There are very good people who seem to imagine it is humbly pious to drive a spavined, galled, glandered, spring-halted, blind, staggered jade. There is not so much virtue in a Resinante as there is in Bucephalus. At the pace some people drive, Elijah, with his horses of fire, would have taken three weeks to get into heaven. We want swifter horses, swifter men, and swifter enterprises, and the church of God needs to get off its jog trot. Quick tempests, quick lightnings, quick streams, why not quick horses? In time of war the calvary service does the most execution; and as the battles of the world are probably not all past, our Christian patriotism demands that we be interested in equal velocity. We might as well have poorer guns in our arsenals, and clumsier ships in our navy-yards, than other nations, as to have under our cavalry saddles, and before our artillery, slower horses.
