But the Writer of This Letter Resolved to Try Dr. Chase's Ointment First and Was Cured.

MR. BEAUVAIS.
This is not an isolated case, for we frequently hear from people who have been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

After seven years' suffering, I was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I was a sufferer from piles or hemorrhoids for seven years. I was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. ## A Pathetic War Story.

There is a little Belgian girl in England today with great brown eyes and the sweetest, softest smile you ever saw. To her I dedicate this story of a great heart. Part of it she already knows; the other part I will tell her now for the first time. She will weep as I am sure. Campbell, perhaps will see her tears. Who knows?

To tell you the truth, it is difficult to begin at all, because there is so much to tell. There is the battle itself, and the ruins of Termonde, and the trampled sugar fields that lay to the south of the town. And there is Marcelle—and Campbell. Perhaps I had better tell you about him first.

Campbell and I were boys together in Scotland years ago. They said of him in our village that he was a black sheep of such blackness that he soiled everything with which he came in contact except his widowed mother's hair which he whitened. He was a wonderfully good looking chap, and his black deeds were not so bad as they were made out to be. Our village was particularly narrow-minded.

His first offence was stealing apples from the maize garden. Every boy in the village had done the same thing, but Campbell was unlucky enough to get caught. The local magistrate let him off with a caution, but the brand of the police court remained. There were other scrapes I need tell you of two only. A riotous student night in Edinburgh resulted in his expulsion from Varsity. Then, four years later, three years after he had received a commission in his father's old regiment, the London Gazette published a bald paragraph to the effect that His Majesty 'had no further use for his services.' Campbell went out east on a cargo boat. His mother went south to a little village where she still remains.

That was seven years ago, and for more than eight years I had neither seen nor heard of Campbell, when I suddenly came across him early one Sunday morning towards the end of last September in the trenches outside Termonde. The wonder is that I recognized him at all. Seven years of tropical sun had burned his face and neck the color of coffee. There was also a week's growth on his chin, and there were lines round his eyes and mouth that had not been there before. He was wearing the uniform of a private soldier.

He told me what had happened. News of the war had come to him one morning towards the end of the first week of August when he was having his third whisky and soda on the veranda of the island hotel.

'I never finished that drink. I made arrangements to come west at once. And I was lucky, too. I got a boat that afternoon for Colombo, caught a quick P. and O. there, and here I am. Private Campbell of the Belgian Army, formerly lieutenant in his Britannic Majesty's Service.'

'Did they accept you at once,' I asked. 'Well, not quite so quick as that,' said he. 'I went to the military headquarters in Antwerp ten days ago, and told them I wanted to enlist and enter the firing line at once. The chaps I saw seemed decent enough, so I told them the truth. And here I am.'

All of a sudden a terrific whistling went all round the sky, and a big German shell landed in the field in front of us, throwing up a cloud of earth and black smoke. Campbell and I had thrown ourselves flat on the ground, but after the explosion we sat up again.

'I tell you what, old man,' he said, after we had talked of the general progress of the war, 'it's due to be in Europe again, and it's fiercer still to be fighting for little Belgium.'

By the way he said it, I swear the dear fellow thought that his presence would make all the difference. I am sure that he looked upon himself as being able to take the entire care of King Albert's men on his broad shoulders, and to place his big, protecting body between them and the German army. You could tell by the way he said 'little Belgium.' Another shell interrupted our conversation.

'They treat me, too,' he continued after a while. 'I'm one of the outfit sentries tonight. They know my record, you see. I didn't learn soldiering for nothing. Bless you, I could be in charge of a regiment if a week if I liked! But that reminds me. I don't like to talk about it, but this war makes things different. You never know what's going to happen. The next shell may put us both out. You see me again as a soldier. You know why I am here and not with my old regiment in France today?'

'That's all right, old chap,' said I. 'All that's a thing of the past. Let us forget it.'

'But I don't want you to forget it to the present minute!' he exclaimed. 'You know how I was—well, bluntly speaking, "drummed out"? But do you know what I did to deserve my punishment?'

'I shook my head.

'It didn't matter,' I began. 'You'll believe me when I tell you?'

'I decided,' he drew a deep breath. 'Nothing!'

'Nothing!' he said, leaning forward and looking into my face. 'Nothing at all. Absolutely nothing!'

There was only truth in his fine grey eyes. Truth alone in his sun-scorched face.

'You mean you shielded—'

'Yes. He was a married man, with the dearest wee baby girl you ever saw. The only sweetheart I've ever had, but let's forget about it all now. I just wanted you to know in case—by Jove, these beggars are sending their shells a little nearer every time. Seven years of hell on that little island, old man. But it's good to be a soldier again.'

By and by the German fire slackened. Campbell's company advanced towards Saint Gilles soon after, and I had to leave Campbell for the time being.

South of Termonde, past the village of Audeghem, the road to Gysseghem, runs in a straight line, bordered by tall poplar trees. On both sides, as far as one can see, are cabbage and sugar beet fields. The country is as flat as a table top.

About half way between the two villages there was a white windmill, and a couple of hundred yards beyond that at right angles to the road, and hear again the orchestra of death. Fat faceless flutes; little groups of artillery behind bushes and earth mounds; rows of entranced men; volcano like eruptions of earth and smoke where the German shells thudded into the fields; and in the sky the little feeble, balloon shaped clouds caused by the bursting of the deadly shrapnel shells. I can hear again the terrible whistling in the sky—the herald of the shells themselves; the big drums of the Belgian artillery and the kettle drums of the quick-firing guns that sent forth their stream of leaden bullets into the advancing men.

Night came on with the Germans all below Gysseghem, and the exhausted troops of both sides prepared to snatch a little sleep before the guns should rouse them in the morning to the horrors of another day. The Belgians retired to the north of Audeghem and Campbell, and three hours after they were stationed as sentries at the windmill. I met them there and spoke to him a few minutes. He was not particularly cheerful. Nor, indeed, was I. The scene that day would have knocked the sunshine out of anybody's hair.

'The "very devil!"' said Campbell. 'Two to one we could manage—per-

CANADA

There is a land that we must love,
A north land wide and fair,
A land of pine and maple trees
And beauty everywhere;
And there free hearts have found a home
And space to still be free—
Fronting the morrow confident
In her high destiny.

When the leaves are crimson,
When the fields are white,
When the woods are green in spring
Or bathed in summer light,
Be sure we love her dearly,
Her woods, her streams, her flow'rs—
This sunny pine and maple land,
This Canada of ours.

And, Oh, her skies are bright and blue,
Her waters bright and pure,
There's balm within her forest shades
All world-worn men to cure;
The wholesome sea is at her gates,
Her gates both east and west—
Then is it strange that we should love
This land, our land, the best.

When the hills stand dreaming,
When the winter's here,
When the slumbering earth awakes
Or summer crowns the year,
Be sure we love her dearly,
Her woods, her streams, her flow'rs—
This sunny pine and maple land,
This Canada of ours!

JOHN RITCHIE.

The writer of the above gem of Canadian verse, which so charmingly depicts our four seasons, Mr. John A. Ritchie, R. C. of Ottawa, is a member of the talented Ritchie family of New Brunswick. Mr. Ritchie, while a very busy man, holding the position of Crown Attorney, of Ottawa, as well as other important offices, yet finds time to do some literary work and is a playwright of considerable note, several of his productions having had a gratifying vogue.

Marcelle lived in the chateau with an elderly housekeeper and two or three domestic servants. Jules Corneille, her father, had left the chateau and gone to the war with his only son. The war had now come very near the chateau. The servants had gone and Marcelle remained behind alone. Perhaps the English would come. Everyone had the same thought. It was always: 'Monsieur, do you think the English are coming again?' One had only to be British to be wonderful.

The battle raged all day long around Gysseghem. The German artillery were to the south of Alost, but the great coastal fortresses were steadily advancing north. Some of them had even got the length of the windmill. I saw their dead bodies and the bullet-spattered walls that afternoon, and I saw the dead Belgians who had paid the price of the little village.

I can see the whole scene now and perhaps, be as well to find out about it he thought. No one could possibly say he suffered from nerves. He said nothing, but crawled away unseen across the fields. His soldiering had taught him to give orders as well as to receive them. In the grounds of the chateau he met her—a tall, slight girl of seventeen, with a pale oval face, and great dark eyes that he could see even in the darkness. He had been prepared to meet an enemy man, so for the moment he was somewhat taken aback. And so was Marcelle, but she recognized in him a friendly soldier.

'Oh, soldier!' she whispered, clutching his arm. And then a torrent of French tumbled from her pretty red lips.

'But I am English!' he interrupted in his own tongue.

'English?' she whispered. And he could see a glad light gleam in her eyes. 'The English are come?' She spoke with a delightful accent.

'No, no!' answered Campbell quickly. 'I am not an English soldier now. I have no time to explain.'

She gripped his arm suddenly. For a moment she had forgotten.

'But, English soldier, we must be quick! You will save me? The Germans—'

She jerked her head to one side, and half clinging to him, they hurried quietly across the lawn over which he had crept some minutes before. Once outside the grounds he spoke to her once again in an anxious whisper.

'Tell me, The Germans—are they near?'

It appeared they were—just beyond the house. She had heard them. Probably they were afraid of running into an ambush. That accounted for their keeping back. But even as he spoke the Germans were entering the house. Campbell heard the faint shouts of the advancing men. They had still a few minutes to escape, but he had to act quickly.

'Listen!' he said, holding her by the shoulders and speaking very softly and close to her ear. 'You know the mill over there? Well, go there at once. When the men stop you, say "Dinant." That is the password. Do you understand? Good! Tell them that the Germans are here. They will see that you reach safety. Give them this.' He took the metal identification disc from around his neck and gave it to her. 'And, listen. When you reach England—which you must do—go to this lady. She is my mother. Tell her all. He wrote his lonely little mother's name and address on a slip of paper, then he urged her to go at once to the mill.

'And you, monsieur? You do this for me? Seventeen year old Marcelle was wise for her age. There were tears in her eyes when she heard she had looked into Campbell's set face.

'Quick! It is for Belgium—and you go now. I am quite safe.'

'Oh, but you English are brave!' said Marcelle. 'I will tell the lady—you mother!'

Then she did a beautiful thing. She lifted Campbell's strong, brown hand to her lips and kissed it. From her breast she drew a tiny silk handkerchief and thrust it into his hand.

'Your name?' he whispered.

And she told him, 'Marcelle.'

'That will be my password,' he said softly. 'Goodbye!'

'Goodbye!' said she. 'I will pray to St. Antoine!'

For a minute Campbell looked in the direction of the mill, a queer wistful smile about his lips.

'Marcelle!' he said to himself. Then he repeated the name—Marcelle. It would be his password when death would challenge him. She was the sweetest thing that had ever entered his life in seven long years. Tall and slim and sweet and soft. Even though he had not been able to see her pale, frightened face distinctly, he knew that she was beautiful.

A sudden temptation came to him to follow her, and then he thought of the advancing Germans and the sleeping man in Audeghem. He kissed the crushed silk handkerchief which he held tightly in his hand, and turned again toward the chateau—and death, and even advancing men. The strain and anxiety of the duty were responsible. It was simply a case of nerves. It was well he said, that they were about to be relieved.

The other men came on duty a few minutes later. But Campbell did not know but that he was a thousand men.

So it came about that Campbell really placed himself between the Belgian soldiers and the German troops. For a time he really made the enemy wonder whether, indeed, there were not a thousand men to meet. But when they killed him and found his riddled body and the handkerchief in his dead hand, they found no others with him. There were not a thousand men, after all, but only—and this is the phrase we have in England, Macdonald—one man in a thousand.

I saw him in the morning, and the peace and calm in his face were wonderful. I know now what must have happened.

'Marcelle!' Campbell must have said, giving his counter sign when the challenge of Death came at the end, and he must have heard the words, 'Pass, friend! All is well!'

Why Young Girls Grow Pale and Weak.

When girls grow weak, pale and miserable, then is the time for parents to take prompt steps. Delay means danger—perhaps consumption. The girl in her teens cannot develop into a happy, robust woman without a bountiful supply of rich, red blood in her veins. It is the lack of this good blood that is the great trouble with nine girls out of every ten. They grow weak and drip sweat; lose their appetite, are nervous, suffer from headaches and backaches. When girls are in this condition there is no medicine can compare with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the use of these Pills there is a rapid vigorous health, with glowing cheeks and sparkling eyes, for every unhappy fragile girl who is struggling on to womanhood in a wretched state of health. This is why thousands of girls and women, now robust and attractive, are constantly recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to their suffering six Miss Edith Brusses, of Svanora, B. C., says: 'At the age of fourteen I became very anaemic, was as pale as a ghost, suffered from headaches, severe palpitation of the heart at the slightest exertion. I had little or no appetite and seemed to be drifting into a decline. I was attending high school in Vancouver at the time and the doctor advised me to stop. I did so and took his treatment for some time, but it did not help me in the least. Upon the advice of a friend I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and in a very short time they gave me back complete health and enabled me to resume my studies. I have enjoyed the best of health since, and owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.'

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

A Canadian girl who when sending a contribution labored to an unknown soldier in France, with the Kipling lines on the attached card.

'A woman is only a woman,
But a good girl is a snook,' received a courteous note of thanks with the lines.

'Thank God that a woman's woman,
That Kipling stuff is a joke.'

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

never receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong and active.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 2, 1915.

Willow Bank Cemetery.

If some arrangement could be made whereby the citizens of Wolfville generally could be induced to make a visit to Willow Bank Cemetery we are confident that a campaign would be entered upon for its improvement at an early date. For there are who have not laid the remains of some dear one in our city of the dead, and the memory should quicken us to a more lively interest in the condition of the property, which is now certainly not creditable. Even the usual annual meeting of the lot holders has not been held this year and the neglected appearance of the cemetery tells the story plainly of lack of interest in its condition on the part of those who are supposed to have charge of the property. The location of our cemetery is a most beautiful one and there is no question but what it might be made something of which we could be justly proud. The conditions are such, however, as call for quite a liberal expenditure of money, and in the past the necessary funds have not been available. What we would like to see would be an energetic campaign having for its aim the putting of the grounds in thorough condition, and the making of our cemetery a thing of beauty. Will not some of our public spirited citizens take this matter in hand speedily? In other towns that we might mention endeavors of this kind have been made with admirable success and certainly what any other town can do can be done in Wolfville. In the meantime the grass should be cut and the lots and paths properly cleared up. There is plenty of work for a good man—and aside from any ideas of sentiment it would be well worth while.

Ordination Service.

In response to an invitation from the Canning Baptist church delegates, representing various churches of Kings county, met with the above named church on June 25th to sit in Council regarding the call to ordination of their pastor, Mr. C. A. S. Howe. Rev. F. H. Healey was elected moderator, and Rev. A. Gibson secretary of the Council. After the preliminary matters, relating to the calling of the Council, had been dispensed with, Dr. G. O. Gates was appointed to lead in the examination of the candidate. Mr. Howe then gave a clear account of his Christian experience and call to the work of the Gospel ministry. This was followed by a rigid examination of his views of Christian doctrine, in all of which the answers showed careful preparation. On his retirement it was moved and carried that the Council advise the church at Canning to proceed with the ordination.

At 7:30 in the evening this service was opened. Many helpful addresses were given and the choir rendered excellent service. The following constitutes the full program: Scripture Reading—Rev. G. D. Hudson; Prayer—Rev. S. M. Meadows; Ordination Sermon—Dr. G. B. Cutler; Prayer with Laying on of the Hands—Rev. E. H. Howe; Hand of Fellowship—Rev. J. D. Spidell; Charge to the Candidate—Dr. G. O. Gates; Charge to the Church—Rev. W. A. Robbins; Benediction—Rev. C. A. S. Howe.

The Fruit Companies' Side.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ACADIAN: DEAR SIR:—I have read with interest the letter in your last issue over the signature of B. L. Bishop, in which he compares the prices paid by The United Fruit Companies of N. S., Ltd., with those he states he received.

In the general way, I would hesitate to compare prices with individuals for the reason that while the accounts of the United Fruit Companies of N. S., Ltd., are audited by chartered accountants and are, therefore, correct and the prices published have to be backed up with actual payments, the individual has no such restrictions and were he called upon to produce his account sales he would only produce such as would suit his purpose.

I do not state that this is the case with Mr. Bishop who, I believe, is above suspicion of any such action.

There are many who might infer from his letter that the prices quoted by him as representing his returns are typical of prices received generally by growers outside of the Co-operative Movement.

The purpose of this letter is to contradict any such impression. As far as the growers who did their own marketing are concerned this letter is unnecessary for with a few exceptions they know it to their sorrow, but there are many Co-operators who might be misled by Mr. Bishop's comparison into believing they could have done better outside of the Movement and if Mr. Bishop could succeed in convincing even a few that such is the case he will have, in part, accomplished his purpose.

In the office of The United Fruit Companies of N. S., Ltd., are account sales covering the shipments of scores of farmers and in addition are records of farmers who sold their fruit and the prices received.

Now for every farmer whom Mr. Bishop can produce from outside of the Movement, who received a return as good as that paid by the United Fruit Companies of N. S., Ltd., I will produce two who did not approach those figures.

Mr. Bishop states that the only rule he follows is to ship equal quantities on every regular boat. Will Mr. Bishop produce his account sales covering the following boats: S. S. 'Rappabannock,' which sailed Oct. 11th, 1914; S. S. 'Durango,' which sailed Oct. 3rd, 1914; S. S. 'Michigan,' which sailed Oct. 11th, 1914; S. S. 'Manchester Mariner,' which sailed Oct. 13th, 1914; S. S. 'Start Point,' which sailed on Jan. 22nd, 1915; S. S. 'Sagamore,' which sailed April 4th, 1915.

I don't want copies but the actual account sales just as he received them. Mr. Bishop makes an error, I am sure inadvertently, when he states that the expenses of two organizations have been deducted from the United Fruit Companies' figures.

The figures quoted are those actually paid after all Central expenses have been deducted, $7,500 placed to reserve fund and a working balance of $5,807.72 carried forward.

As far as 'slippery uncertainties' are concerned, it is now generally recognized and admitted by all unprejudiced and disinterested people, that The United Fruit Companies of N. S., Ltd., have been instrumental in removing 'slippery uncertainties' as far as 60 per cent. of the fruit is concerned and the orchardist who has allied himself to the Co-operative Movement receives every cent that his produce brings, and no longer has to wrestle with the 'slippery uncertainties' of shipping his fruit on trust, thousands of miles away, to people of whom he knows very little, does not have to be content with the 'slippery uncertainties' as represented in the mysterious charges appearing on account sales or the equally 'slippery uncertainties' of selling to speculators who pay when markets go right and forget or try to avoid paying when markets go wrong.

In the United Fruit Companies of N. S., Ltd., the farmer has a guarantee of a square deal, there is an absolute certainty represented in plain statements in black and white, accounts audited and vouched for by the best firm of chartered accountants possible to procure, an organization which is a safeguard and protection to the whole fruit industry, doing away with the 'slippery uncertainties' of the old slipshod methods, substituting therefore scientific methods, sound and sure, reducing the cost of production and increasing the volume of returns brought into the Valley. Church Wedding.

BLAKEBERRY-CORBETT.

Another of Acadia's numerous romances came to its usual happy termination on Tuesday, June 22nd, at the Billtown Baptist church, when Lila Vivian, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Corbett, of Lakeville, was united in marriage with Rev. Edward M. A. Blakeberry, of Wolfville.

Promptly at six o'clock, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, beautifully rendered by Miss Lila Strong, of Summers, the bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Karl Corbett, and was met by the groom at the altar. The bride was dressed in white embroidered Brussels net and wore the conventional veil with Juliet cap, caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and maiden hair fern. Her only decoration was a costly diamond pendant, the gift of groom.

Friends of the bride had very tastefully decorated the church with green leaves, palms and blossoms. The ushers were Misses Annie Bligh, Elizabeth Carol, Elizabeth Eaton, and May Chute. The Rev. A. H. Whitman, assisted by Rev. Guy Blakeberry, brother of the groom, performed the ceremony; at the conclusion of which the guests retired to the church parlor. Here a very informal reception was held, Mr. and Mrs. Blakeberry received congratulations and refreshments were served. At half past seven an automobile drove up to the door and a number of good wishes the happy couple left. The bride's going-away suit was of midnight blue with hat to match.

The bride received numerous and beautiful gifts, including a number of cheques for substantial amounts, testifying to the popularity in which she is held. Quite a number of guests drove over from Wolfville by auto to attend the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Blakeberry were classmates at Acadia, where they graduated in 1913. He then proceeded to Newton Theological Seminary where he is now a student.

Mr. Blakeberry's popularity and success at Newton even surpassed that at Acadia. He completed the course in two years and received the degree of B. D. this spring. Mr. Blakeberry is well qualified for the work he is about to enter and for him we bespeak success which undoubtedly must come to a man of such sincerity and determination.

Personal Mention.

Contributions to this department will be gladly received. Mrs. Steele and little daughter have gone to Amherst for the summer. Mrs. Morrison left on Wednesday to attend the Presbyterial at Ellsdale. Mr. Clyde West, of Stewiacke, is visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. West. Miss Nellie Skinner, of Berwick, has been spending a few days in town, the guest of Mrs. T. E. Hutchinson. Hon. and Mrs. M. H. Goudge are spending the summer in Wolfville, guests of Mrs. Geo. L. Bishop, Summer street.

Recent Deaths.

The death of Rev. William Boardman Wallace, D. D., one of the best known graduates of Acadia, occurred at Rochester, N. Y., on Saturday last, following an operation on Wednesday morning previous, for bladder trouble. His death was due to blood poisoning. The deceased was a son of the late Rev. Isaiah Wallace, D. D., and Frances E. DeMille Wallace and was born at Granville, Ont. 21st, 1867. He was a graduate of Acadia University in the class of '90, and held successful pastorates at Osewego, Utica, Cleveland, Brooklyn and last year went to Rochester. He was one of the brilliant men the Baptist church of Nova Scotia has given to the world, and that is saying much. At the time of his death he was in the prime of life. He was an unique preacher in many respects. In his personality he demanded attention, and in his methods, straightforward, vigorous and vital; he was eminently a man's man.

He was widely known in Nova Scotia, although he did not remain long in his native province after graduating from Acadia, and the news of his early demise was heard with profound regret.

The sad news was received in Wolfville on Saturday last of the sudden death of Mr. Joseph R. MacDonald, formerly station agent of the D. A. R. here, at Port Arthur, Ont., where he has resided for some years past, and filled an important position as city ticket agent of the C. N. R. No particulars are to hand other than that his death was caused by heart failure. The remains are now on the way home and will be interred at the old Presbyterian cemetery at Grand Pre. The deceased is survived by a widow, formerly Miss Mable Smith, of Windsor, and five children, and an aged mother, Mrs. R. MacDonald, of Hortonville. He also leaves two brothers, John, of Windsor, and Ferris, of Boston, Mass, and one sister, Mrs. George Dorman, of Martock, Hants county. Mr. MacDonald was 47 years of age. He had many friends in Wolfville and vicinity who received the tidings of his death with deep sorrow.

The Bar is Abolished by Law in Saskatchewan.

Saskatchewan will be the first province in Canada to completely abolish the bar. On July 1st not only will the retail sale of all intoxicating liquors be brought to an end, but the wholesale trade will be taken over by the government and operated as a government monopoly under a system of dispensaries. Later, even these dispensaries may be abolished, if by a referendum vote the people of the province so decide.

The Passing of King Alcohol.

The breast of old King Alcohol is torn with harrowing fears, His face is seamed with furrowed lines of care, Into the coming future lie in consternation peers, For he sees his ignominious finish there, For ages he has filled the land with agonizing pain, Euchained young manhood as besotted slaves, And through the many clouded years of his despotic reign Has strewn the country with dishevelled graves.

The wrecks of homes and broken hearts are strewn along his trail Wherever he has blown his blighting breath; The pleading of the stricken sore have been of no avail To shield beloved ones from mortal death. He mocks at wily prayers, treats with scorn the mother's tears, As he binds their loved ones in his deadly chains; The voice of press and public treat he with contemptuous sneers As to his coffers flows the golden

It takes very little to disable a submarine. The hull is of comparatively thin steel which is easily penetrated and the propeller when caught is absolutely useless. Even an ordinary fisherman's net will disable a submarine, and should one get foul of such a net the chances of getting clear are very slim.

A submarine when submerged is handled mechanically. Those in charge cannot see where the vessel is going. The officer in charge steers according to the ranges he has taken when on the surface, and it is absolutely impossible to see obstructions that may be ahead, it is impossible to see another submarine unless the two are floating near the surface and in bright daylight. For this reason it is impossible for one submarine to fight another when submerged.

Fell in a Faint.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayrer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Daily spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sleep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has built up my system that I can wash and do my household work. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

When Submarines Go Under.

Many people have the idea that as soon as a submarine sees an enemy officer in command gives a sharp order, and almost before it has left his lips, the submarine is diving beneath the waves.

As a matter of fact, the very latest submarine, of the P-class, takes a clear five minutes before they can become submerged. Many of the older submarines took ten minutes to a quarter of an hour to sink.

The reason that a submarine cannot dive quickly, like a fish, is because the water, which must be let into her tanks to make her heavy enough to sink, must be let in comparatively slow. If it were let in with a rush the chances are the vessel would not go down on an even keel, but would heel over and be in great danger of disaster. If water, too, were let in too quickly, there is a great danger of letting in too much and in that case the submarine would sink like a stone to the bottom of the sea.

It is not a bit surprising that the man who is diving comes new front in advertising always seems to get the trade; he who spends no money telling other people what he's selling, never will have the chance of selling of the fortune he has made. If your business is not gaining, but seems always to be wanting, though your every nerve is straining trying hard to make it go you can quickly start it rising by a little advertising—that's been proven long ago. Lots of business men are waiting that their trade is surely falling and they're thinking now of selling up the short time on the door, but the man who keeps going, advertising, what he's selling soon will find his business growing, more than ever it grew before.

Keep a good table and don't lose the ladies. —Napoleon L.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so weak that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me." —Mrs. SIMON DOUCETTE, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, back-aches, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, spots before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and impatience, and dizziness, are promptly headed by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when women's greatest change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female system and builds up the weak and nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want relief, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (consultation free), 255 Central Bldg., Lowell, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The total casualties in the South African war, among the Canadians, were 507, made up of 94 killed, 79 deaths from disease, 278 wounded and 55 missing or taken prisoners. Among the officers, 7 were killed, 3 died, 25 were wounded and one was killed, 76 died of disease, 255 were wounded and 54 were reported as missing or taken prisoners.

The Albany Theatre in London offers two horses nightly for the price of no valiant wounded soldiers from the front.

Submarine Nets.

An officer on a ship recently in port from Harve says that the greatest shipping zone in the world today is that narrow stretch of water, the Strait of Dover, which separates England from the coast of France. The waterway is fairly packed with vessels passing to and fro, mostly transports, hospital ships and steamers carrying munitions of war. Every day witnesses the arrival at Harve from England of from six to twelve transports laden with troops, and this fleet is more than equalled by ships carrying war munitions and material for the soldiers at the front. The steamers ply through a narrow net guarded space where the strait is not more than a third of a mile wide.

Only naval officers know of the open spaces between the nets, and it is absolutely necessary that a vessel should be piloted by a naval man to go through safely. This has been done to set traps for submarines, and it is the first time that any open water, like the English Channel, has been so guarded.

Many of the most important harbors are guarded by nets and traps, particularly naval bases. A few weeks ago a submarine was found in one of these nets on the Firth of Forth. All on board were dead and among the bodies were those of two Scotch fishermen, who presumably were taken by the Germans to pilot the submarine through the nets, but who had sacrificed themselves in order to destroy a vessel of the enemy.

A few weeks ago, too, a French submarine was caught in a net on the Adriatic. This was the Saphire. After trying until they were nearly exhausted to liberate the vessel the sea was compelled to abandon the submarine and come to the surface, where they were captured by the Austrians.

The object of these nets in the English Channel is particularly to protect the main transports that are crossing the Channel every day, taking soldiers and supplies to the British base at Harve.

The nets are made of links of steel. They are similar to those formerly used to guard battleships and large cruisers, but which have now been discarded because a torpedo will puncture the net and the second torpedo, which is fired only a second or two after the first, will reach the hull of the vessel.

These chain nets are moored very securely and have buoys at the upper edges to hold them in a position. Often they are set just as a fisherman sets his nets. When the submarine, like a fish, gets in the pound it cannot get out and those in the vessel must either die there or take chances on reaching the surface and swimming to shore.

The advice is applicable to the people of Canada as it is to those of Great Britain. Indeed, it is more applicable here because Canada is not enjoying 'great prosperity' even now, and when the war is over, and the spending on war contracts is at an end the condition will be worse.

Millions Spent on Fortress.

Many millions of dollars have been spent by Germany on Heligoland, that little island made over as a sort of 'Great gift' by Great Britain.

When the island was ceded in 1890, it was crumbling away fast, and was being speedily eaten into by the waves of the North Sea.

The Germans strengthened its red sandstone cliffs with great granite buttresses 16 feet thick and 240 feet high. All cracks and fissures in the crumbling cliffs were filled in with ferro cement, so that now the sea battles in vain against the walls of the little island, which is only a mile in length by some one-third of a mile in width.

To the south of the lower part of the island was made a shelter for torpedo boats, submarines and small cruisers, at a cost of more than $10,000,000. It was to this shelter that the German ships fled when attacked and defeated in the battle of Heligoland.

A high cliff separates this low lying part of the island, the 'Unterland,' as it is called, from the high land, or 'Oberland.' The whole length of the top of this cliff is heavily protected by barbed wire, and apart from a small elevator, the only way by which any one can go from the 'Unterland' to the 'Oberland' is by means of a zigzag road leading up to the top of the cliff.

This road up the cliffs leads almost directly to a little town. This little town, complete with its church and school, contained at the commencement of the war, only a few hundred inhabitants, chiefly workmen employed in the fortifications, and the garrison, with their families.

Further north are the newly built zeppelin sheds and aeroplane hangars. It was from these sheds that the two zeppelins came to attack the torpedo boats and submarines who convoyed the seven British airmen in their daring dash to Cuxhaven.

To the left of the town, standing near the edge of the cliffs, is a large monument, which was erected in memory of the famous German poet, Fallersleben, who wrote Germany's most popular war song or hymn, 'Deutschland, Deutschland Ueber Alles.'

Since the war started a large number of buildings have been razed to the ground, and every person not actively required for the defence of the North Sea fortress has been sent away from the island. The island itself is connected by a number of cables with Cuxhaven, and should there be cut there is a powerful wireless apparatus installed.

All over Heligoland there are powerful searchlights by which any vessel can be detected at night, no matter from what direction it approaches.

Many parts of the island, and all of the buildings, have been heavily armoured, and some of Krupp's biggest 12-inch and, it is also stated, 16 inch guns, mounted on disappearing platforms, and cunningly hidden, guard all approaches from the sea.

The ocean for some miles around is crisscrossed with iron squares, each square having its square of squares upon which can be instantly trained a fire, should an unshifty boat ship be in that little square of sea.

There are 82,000 barrels of herring on one dock in Hamburg. All are from Norway, and practically the entire 1915 catch is there. The herring all intended for consumption by the Russian prisoners of whom there are now almost 500,000 in Germany.

Customer—Walker, this is the best steak I've ever had in my life.

Waiter—My goodness! You must have got the wrong one.

After the War—Distress.

A timely word of warning as to the future was uttered by Lloyd George during a recent debate in the British House of Commons. There is, he said, an appearance of great prosperity in the United Kingdom just now; but this apparent prosperity is due to the spending of vast sums of borrowed money which must be paid back later on. Even after the war is over there may be an appearance of continued prosperity owing to the spending of more borrowed money to repair the devastation due to the great conflict.

After this is over there must come a collapse and the distress, the misery and the wretchedness which has always followed a great war. "Let the nation be wise in time," said Lloyd George. "Let it look ahead, take advantage of the opportunity, and lay by for the day that is coming."

The advice is applicable to the people of Canada as it is to those of Great Britain. Indeed, it is more applicable here because Canada is not enjoying 'great prosperity' even now, and when the war is over, and the spending on war contracts is at an end the condition will be worse.

Bulls and Blunders.

Many years ago I heard the following notice read out in a church in England: "There will be a procession next Sunday afternoon in the grounds of the monastery, but if it rains in the afternoon the procession will take place in the morning."

Among mixed metaphors the most delightful I think I have ever heard was the statement of a town councillor in a Hampshire town some years ago during a discussion on projected expenditure on town improvements.

"Gentlemen," he said, "we will have nothing to do with it; it is but this end of a white elephant."

A distinguished leader of the 'Isher party,' writing to me some time back, said: "Before the Home Rule Bill is enforced, Aquilas will have to walk over many dead bodies—his own included."

CASTORIA For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought Bears the Signature of J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Madge—I don't think there'd be any fun in voting, anyhow.

Marjorie—Sure there would. If a woman you didn't like were running, you could get all the fudge and soda you wanted out of her and then vote against her.

"Are you going to have a garden this year?"

"No," replied Mr. Groncher. "I can't my turn to make a garden. I'm going to keep chickens this year and let my neighbors make the garden."

Mistress—This isn't a clean knife, Jane.

New Servant—I'm sure it ought to be, mum. The last thing I cut with it was a bar of soap.

"Oh, dear me, I told my little girl there wasn't any Santa Claus," "Well?"

"And now she won't believe in Satan."

I am sorry I invited that woman to my lounge lately.

Why so, my dear?

"I thought she had worn white ever since before, but it is now she wears black."

Peep again in your oven. See those loaves, those pleasing loaves you've made. How fat—rounded—substantial. No, they won't fall when colder. Because the Manitoba strength that is in FIVE ROSES will hold them up till eaten. This sturdy elastic gluten has kept them from dropping flat in the oven. No unsightly holes 'twixt crust and crumb—never. All risen evenly—to stay risen. Never heavy—sodden—eggy—unpalatable. Yours are the FIVE ROSES loaves—Crisp and appetizing of crust. Golden brown and tender. Snowy of crumb—light as a feather. FIVE ROSES helps a loaf. Try it soon.

The Local Paper.

The local paper should be found in every home. No children should grow up ignorant who can be taught to appreciate the home paper. It is said to be the stepping stone of intelligence in all those matters not to be found in books. Give your children a foreign book which contains not a word about any person, place or thing which they say, or perhaps ever heard of, and how could you expect them to be interested? But let them have the home paper and read of people whom they are familiar, and soon an interest is awakened which increases with every arrival of the local paper. Thus a habit of reading is formed and these children will read the paper all their lives and become intelligent men and women, a credit to their ancestors and strong in the knowledge of the world as it is today.

Uses For Salt.

Salt puts out a fire in the chimney. Salt in solution inhalated cures cold in the head. Salt in whitewash makes it stick. Salt and soda are excellent for stings. Salt as a gargle will cure soreness in the throat. Salt used in sweeping carpets keeps out moths. Salt thrown on a coal fire which is low will revive it. Salt and vinegar will remove stains from discolored teacups. Salt thrown on soot which has fallen on the carpet will prevent staining. Salt put on ink when freshly spilled on a carpet will prevent stain.

Pointed Paragraphs.

A gross headed man may be weak minded. A stopp is the ammunition used in the guns of knocker. A man who buys a blind horse should also consult an oculist. Nothing worries some women like troubles that fall to develop. It were not for politics lots of lazy people would starve to death. Man proposes, woman accepts—and the neighbors all say: "I told you so!" After a woman has been married five times, you can't tell her anything about men. If a young man is really in love he never hesitates to propose because the girl has money. It's difficult to convince a woman that gambling is wrong if her husband keeps ahead of the game. In all matters except a little matter of the tongue, a woman can hold her own.

WENTZELL'S Spring and Summer Catalogue is ready

That's the best news careful housekeepers have had for many a long day. Recognizing the efforts of the "Big Store" to serve the interests of the people, particularly at the present time, such an overwhelming demand was received for our last catalogue—Fall and Winter—that we ran short of them considerably earlier in the season than usual. The result was that for a short time past we have been unable to supply copies to the hundreds of new names requesting it. However, the new catalogue is ready. If it is possible, it is more complete than ever. A bigger range is listed and the greatest care has been taken in the printing.

If your name is not on our mailing list and if you desire a copy just cut out, fill in and mail the coupon below.
