The Old Marquis

The Girl of the Cloisters

CHAPTER XXIV.
THE SELFISH PASSION.

"Well, I am thinking of getting up some private theatricals for the amusement of some friends and myself, and I want you to assist me."

Nagle looked at him steadily.

"Go on," he said; "I am listening and waiting."

"It will be quite a small affair, and not a difficult piece. Your part will be singularly easy, and I think you would play it well."

He paused, and slipped the brandy-and-water delicately, and pushed the bottle toward his companion.

"It is a little piece of my own composing. I'll give you a sketch of the scene; there is only one. It is a representation of a private marriage."

Nagle's lips tightened, and he drew the mug toward him and filled it with brandy-and-water.

"A marriage between a young couple who are devotedly attached to each other, but whose friends on both sides are opposed to the match. The young man is supposed to have procured a special license, and to bring the bride to my rooms. I play the part of disinterested friend, and act as best man and give-away; the young people play their own parts as bride and bridegroom, and you—play the part of clergyman."

Nagle started, arose, and stood with his thin hands pressed on the table, his gaunt eyes fixed on Clifford Revel with a piercing scrutiny.

"I—see," he said, in a low voice. "I am to play the part of clergyman in this dramatic performance?"

"Exactly; you simply appear clad in the proper robes, read the service, congratulate the happy man, and—exit. It is not a difficult part, my dear fellow; I think you will admit that. Not at all difficult, and a very easy way of earning a couple of hundred pounds."

"And penal servitude for assisting at a mock marriage," added Nagle, with a caustic smile.

Clifford Revel shrugged his shoulders.

"Stop!" said Nagle, interrupting him, as he was about to speak. "Don't waste your breath. I saw through your blind of private theatricals before you had got through half your speech. This what you have planned is a mock marriage—nothing more nor less—and intended to deceive one or other of the parties— which?"

Clifford Revel extended his hand with a gesture of remonstrance.

"What a pity it is, my dear Nagle, that you do not possess a little tact. Now, I went out of my way to put the proposal in a delicate form, and you, instead of falling in with my humor, break out like a bear."

"Curse your tact!" retorted Nagle, curtly. "I am right, am I not? In one word, I will have nothing to do with any proposal unless I know all about it. If you intend to deceive me, or keep me in ignorance, take up your umbrella and go, for you will do nothing with me. I ask you to speak plainly—or not at all! This is a mock marriage at which you wish me to preside, is it not?"

"You have spoken," said Clifford Revel, lightly. "It is."

Nagle looked at him with gleaming eyes and tightened lips; then he drew a long breath.

"Clifford Revel, you are a scoundrel," he said.

That gentleman smiled and knocked the ash from his cigar.

"I sha'n't take the trouble to contradict you, my dear Nagle; but permit me to remark that, though you are at perfect liberty to decline to assist me in this little business of mine, you are scarcely free to call me opprobrious names. If you decline, I have no doubt I shall be able to find some one else."

"I have no doubt," assented Nagle, slowly. He got up and walked across the room once or twice; then he confronted Clifford Revel again. "Before I say yes or no, I must know more of this matter."

Clifford Revel nodded.

"Very good. It doesn't concern you, but I will gratify your, perhaps, pardonable curiosity. You will remark that I do not hesitate to trust you. I am aware that you might ruin this harmless little plot of mine."

"Harmless!" breathed Nagle.

"But I trust you. Briefly, then, the circumstances are these: I have a cousin; he is heir to the marquise of Farintosh; you have heard me speak of it, no doubt?"

Nagle nodded slightly.

"This cousin of mine is a good fellow, but a fool. He has, after the manner of fools, taken it into his head to fall in love with a girl very much beneath him—that is, beneath him in all save cleverness and cunning, for she will be satisfied with nothing short of marriage. Now, a marriage—other than that which I propose, which is none at all—is simply too absurd and ridiculous! He could and ought to marry in his own class, and would do so if he could only get over this infatuation. Are you listening?"

Nagle had sunk onto the table, and was sitting with his eyes fixed on the fire-place, a curious expression on his face. He made a gesture with his hand, and Clifford Revel continued:

"This infatuation is simply temporary. If he married her, as he wants to do, he would soon grow tired of her, and they would be intensely wretched! Think of it! Why, it is an act of cousinly kindness to rescue him from such a calamity!" and he smiled sardonically.

Nagle turned his head and looked at him, but relapsed a moment afterward into the same attitude.

"Therefore, I propose the simple little expedient which I have described. For reasons I have hinted at, the marriage must be quite a secret one. Special license and ceremony in my rooms."

"And he?" said Nagle, hoarsely. "He does not know of this? He is unaware of this—simple expedient?"

No pen can describe the scorn and loathing expressed in his idea of Clifford Revel's phrase.

"Certainly! He would think it a genuine ceremony, of course."

"Then—then it is the girl who would be deceived?" said Nagle, in a low, almost inaudible voice.

Clifford Revel sipped his brandy-and-water.

"Exactly," he answered, coolly.

Nagle looked at him with a sudden fire in his eye, but the next moment turned his head and put up his hands to shield his face from Clifford Revel's glance.

"The girl," Nagle said; "and she—she is a good girl—innocent; worthy of him in every way, excepting position?"

Clifford Revel shrugged his shoulders.

"I suppose so. I don't know; I never saw her. Good—oh, yes, and innocent. As to being worthy of him—well, that's a question too fine for consideration. She is clever, no doubt, or she wouldn't have held him so tightly."

"And you—you propose to ruin, to blast the life of this young girl whom you have never seen?" asked Nagle, in a strained voice.

Clifford Revel flushed.

"You certainly have an unpleasant way of putting things, my dear fellow. Ask me if I will move heaven and earth to prevent my cousin throwing himself away by an unequal marriage, and I answer, 'Yes.'"

Nagle was silent a moment. His whole manner had changed; he had grown thoughtful and grave, almost to solemnity.

"If this cousin marries you stand further from the title than at present?" he said.

"Now, that is a question which shows your heart is in the business," said Clifford Revel. "Precisely."

"I see!" muttered Nagle. Then, after a pause, said: "One question more. Do you think that they—is it desecration to mention the word between us—do they love each other?"

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Sore corns lift right off with fingers.

Costs few cents! Drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right off with the fingers.

Why wait! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of Freezone for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without soreness or irritation. Freezone is that much talked of discovery of the Cincinnati genius.

"You are polite, my dear fellow. But, yes, I think they do, or imagine they do. But, as you, with your fine intellect, will perceive, their mutual infatuation is no reason why I should permit them to make fools of themselves and place a further barrier between me and the Farintosh title and estate."

"No; I do not suppose that would weigh with you," said Nagle, slowly.

"And then will this—when is this mock marriage, by which your cousin is to be deceived, and this young, innocent girl ruined, to take place?"

Clifford Revel's eyes lighted with inward satisfaction.

"Ah, I see you agree to accept the role, my dear Nagle. When? I am not quite sure. Soon, very soon, I think. But I will give you due notice. Come, you will be doing a good action! It is not given to every one to have the opportunity of saving the heir to a marquise from a mesalliance. There is one point I wished to speak to you about: You said just now that you did not think my friend who relieved you the other night would recognize you?"

"What?" he cried. "Is it he?"

Clifford Revel stared and smiled.

"Yes, that was Lord Fane, the Marquis of Farintosh's only son and heir. What's the matter?"

"Nothing! nothing!" said Nagle, but his face was white and his hand trembled as he leaned it on the table.

"And it is he! the man who saved me from starvation and death! He!"

"Yes," said Clifford Revel. "Quite dramatic, isn't it? You ought to be grateful to fate for providing you with an opportunity of repaying him for his benevolence. He saved you from death, you save him from social ruin! Do you see?"

"Stop! Silence! Let me think!" exclaimed Nagle, hoarsely, and he paced the room, with his hand pressed to his brow.

He filled himself a glass of brandy-and-water and drained it off, flung the cup upon the table, and, with a strange look in his eyes, confronted the tempter.

"Well!" said Clifford Revel. "What do you say? Will you play the part?" Nagle laughed wildly.

"The sum—the blood money, how much is it to be?" he demanded.

"Two hundred pounds paid down the day of the—the marriage," and he smiled. "And if you say 'Yes' I'll add this as a retainer," and he took out his purse and laid a ten-pound note on the table. "Come, say yes, and thank Heaven for a good day's work."

Nagle stood as if rapt in a dream.

"What are you afraid of? If you dread the consequences, why not leave England? You can have a fine flog abroad for two hundred pounds. See here, I'll make it another fifty. With that sum a man of your talents can make his way to the other side of the herring pond. Really, it is too much for half an hour's performance of a simple character like a clergyman, but for old acquaintance' sake I must be generous. Come, what do you say—yes or no?"

Will German the Peace

Growing Dissatisfaction Americans --- Will Improve --- New Ministry --- Extension.

GRANTED EXTENSION. PARIS, May 21. The German peace delegation has been granted an extension of seven days, or until May 29, in which to reply in full to the peace terms, according to an official announcement.

AMERICANS DISSATISFIED. LONDON, May 21. Dissatisfaction on the part of some members of the American peace delegation with the German peace treaty is reported by the Paris correspondent of the Westminster Gazette today. "With every day that passes the dislike which some members of the American commission feel for the peace treaty grows into active opposition," the correspondent telegraphs, and he quotes one of the members of the delegation as saying "the treaty does not mean peace, it means war." The correspondent adds that he is greatly concerned with evidence of a changed feeling in American quarters regarding President Wilson.

IMPROVED CONDITIONS EXPECTED. OTTAWA, May 21. A feeling of optimism prevails in Government circles this afternoon as to the Winnipeg strike situation. What advices have been received from Winnipeg indicate that matters are moving steadily in the direction of negotiations and conferences, which it is believed will result in big improvement in present conditions. Will Germans Sign the Peace Treaty?

Growing Dissatisfaction Among Americans --- Winnipeg Conditions Improving --- Turks Form New Ministry---Germans Grant- ed Extension.

GRANTED EXTENSION.

PARIS, May 21. The German peace delegation has been granted an extension of seven days, or until May 29, in which to reply in full to the peace terms, according to an official announcement.

AMERICANS DISSATISFIED.

LONDON, May 21. Dissatisfaction on the part of some members of the American peace delegation with the German peace treaty is reported by the Paris correspondent of the Westminster Gazette today. "With every day that passes the dislike which some members of the American commission feel for the peace treaty grows into active opposition," the correspondent telegraphs, and he quotes one of the members of the delegation as saying "the treaty does not mean peace, it means war." The correspondent adds that he is greatly concerned with evidence of a changed feeling in American quarters regarding President Wilson.

IMPROVED CONDITIONS EXPECTED.

OTTAWA, May 21. A feeling of optimism prevails in Government circles this afternoon as to the Winnipeg strike situation. What advice has been received from Winnipeg indicate that matters are moving steadily in the direction of negotiations and conferences, which it is believed will result in big improvement in present conditions. The belief is expressed in official circles that the despatches which came from the west last night indicating a possibility of serious developments, were delayed despatches describing the situation at Winnipeg when it was at its worst.

QUIET IN WINNIPEG.

OTTAWA, May 21. Senator Loughed, Government Leader in the Senate, stated that the latest news from Winnipeg was satisfactory and that law and order was being maintained. He referred to the number of troops in the military district as six or seven units and that they were sufficient to cope with any situation that may arise.

LIABLE TO TRIAL.

LONDON, May 20. Frederick William Hohensollern, the former German Crown Prince, will be liable to trial under the terms of the German peace treaty, it was declared by Andrew Bonar Law, the Government leader in the House of Commons today. Mr. Bonar Law said that the commandants of prison camps would also be liable under the treaty's terms.

ARRANGING ALTERNATIVES.

WASHINGTON, May 21. Repeated statements by German officials of various ranks that Germany cannot consent to accept the peace treaty in the form presented have led officials in Washington to give serious consideration to the course to be pursued in the event of the failure of the Paris conference to bring about the restoration of peace in the near future. While the announcement has come from Paris that the supreme council has framed plans for dealing in a military way with the situation in the event of a refusal of the Germans to sign the treaty, it is assumed here that before resort was had to the use of troops an effort would be made to bring the Germans to terms through economic pressure.

NC-4 DELAYED.

WASHINGTON, May 21. The resumption of the trans-Atlantic flight by the naval seaplane NC-4 has been again delayed. A message to the Navy Department early today said that one of the plane's engines had developed trouble, and that the start for Lisbon would not be made today.

GERMANY WON'T SIGN.

BERLIN, May 21. "Germany declines to sign the peace terms laid before her because they spell the economic destruction, political disorder and moral degradation of the entire German nation," was the statement authorized by the Cabinet this morning through the Associated Press.

GERMAN DENIAL USELESS.

PARIS, May 21. It is too late for Germany to seek to deny both the aggression in the war and her responsibility for it. This declaration is made by Premier Clemenceau, as President of the Peace Conference, in replying to the German note on reparations, the text of which reply was made public last night.

GERMANS WANT EXTENSION.

PARIS, May 21. Brockendorff Rantau, the head of the German peace delegation, has asked an extension of time for Germany to present her reply regarding the peace terms. The Count said further notes were being prepared and it would be impossible to complete them by one p.m. Thursday, when the time limit is up.

NEW TURKISH MINISTRY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 20. As a result of the resignation of the Turkish Cabinet, provoked by the Allied occupation of Smyrna, Ferid Pasha has been entrusted with the task of forming a new Ministry. Ferid Pasha will be Grand Vizier and Foreign Minister.

POLES CROSS THE DNEISTER.

WARSAW, May 20. An official statement issued here today says the Poles are continuing their successes in Galicia, and adds the Poles have crossed the Dneister River near Sozowadow.

JELICOE AT AUSTRALIA.

ALBANY, West Australia, May 20. Admiral Sir John Jellicoe of the British Navy, landed here on his mission of reorganizing the Australian Navy. The cruiser Melbourne and six destroyers have arrived. The Admiral will proceed east and stop off at many of the important Australian cities.

Aeronautical Notes.

Aerial Fighting Squadrons to be Maintained.
Brig-General J. E. B. Seeley, in asking the British House of Commons for a considerable appropriation, stated on March 13th, that it was intended to keep 102 aerial squadrons for defence, but that the country would not rely on the number of machines as in remaining in the forefront of aerial developments. Air Forces, he added, would be maintained in Egypt, Mesopotamia, Archangel and the near and middle East.

Vancouver Woman Files.

The first Vancouver woman to fly is Mrs. J. S. Patterson. Accompanied by Aviator Edward Hubbard in a Boeing seaplane, Mrs. Patterson spent 25 minutes in the air, during which time the "loop the loop" and "spinning fall dive" were undertaken. Mrs. Patterson enjoyed the experience very much.

Possibility of Smuggling Aircraft.
Judging from the reports coming from various countries, the possibility of smuggling aeroplanes from one country to another will eventually be controlled by an aerial patrol, and all aeroplanes will be required to land before crossing the border.

To Fly Around World.

A French aviator is planning a trip around the world by aeroplane, and is writing to various cities to enquire if a suitable aerodrome with hangar for aeroplanes is ready for use.—Canadian Motor Boat.

The Books of Sports.

Although there are many church football and cricket teams, and many clergymen interest themselves in sports for their choir-boys and the youngsters in the parish, it would create a certain amount of consternation if a list of sporting fixtures were announced every Sunday from the pulpit.

After the Reformation there arose such controversy between the Puritans and the Roman Catholics on the subject of what recreation the people might take on the Sabbath, that James I., 1618, issued a declaration, commonly known as the Book of Sports. This was to be read in the churches by the clergymen, and it declared that archery, dancing, leaping, May-games, morrice-dances, vaulting, and other lawful games, might be indulged in on Sundays, after divine service.

By this law, bear-baiting, bullbaiting, bowling, and interludes were not permitted on Sundays. No person who had not attended church was allowed to take part in any game.

The order to read this declaration was not enforced in the reign of James I., but Charles I., at the instigation of Archbishop Laud, republished it, and the reading of it was enforced with strict severity.

This caused great aggravation and annoyance amongst the Puritans, and probably contributed in no mean degree to the ultimate overthrow of the monarchy and the church.

In 1644 the Long Parliament ordered all copies of the Book of Sports to be collected and publicly burnt.

Where is Teschen?

This is the latest breakfast-table problem. Although the town has figured prominently in European history at various times for over a century, Mr. Lloyd George had to confess, when it was mentioned at the Peace Conference, that he did not know exactly where it was situated.

Nor is he alone in his lack of knowledge. It is doubtful if one person in fifty would be able to give you any information about the town.

And yet it was once the scene of a great peace conference—that of 1779, when Vergennes, the Foreign Minister of France, arranged the peace of Teschen, thereby avoiding a great European war, and also, in all probability, securing the independence of the United States.

They Know All About Us.

It is only a small town of some 30,000 inhabitants, just over sixty miles from Cracow; but it is the chief town of a large district in Austrian Silesia. Still, if we know little of Teschen, the Teschenians know all about us. That they are quite up to date is apparent from the fact that a recent number of "The Teschen Daily" contained a long article, on the front page, written in excellent English, describing our rule in Teschen.

The Teschenians could probably give us a few wrinkles in regard to printing, for the State printing and lithographic works are in the town.

Bringing the Kaiser to Trial.

Much indignation has been expended, not to say wasted, over the question of bringing to trial the Kaiser and those associated with him in responsibility for the war.

Those who have felt all along that this sort of talk was mostly driven, will find their view confirmed by the report that a special tribunal is to be set up at Geneva. It is to consist of five judges, of different nationalities, and it is to make its own rules.

Apparently it is taken for granted that this alleged court will find the Kaiser guilty of something or other. Then he is to be sentenced to exile. In practice this would mean that he would be invited to leave the disagreeable climate of Holland and take up his abode on some pleasant Mediterranean island,—probably in a villa maintained at the expense of Great Britain.

Better leave the Kaiser where he is. The fact that the Dutch don't want him, is good reason why they should be compelled to keep him. Why should they be allowed to unload him on anybody else? They might provide for his support by a special tax on Hollanders who grew rich through contraband trade during the war.—Vancouver Sun.

Mediaeval and Modern Armies.

The armies of the present day far outnumber anything recorded in the world's history. Take the wars of the Middle Ages, for example. At Towton there were nearly 120,000 men on both sides in the White and Red Rose struggle, and the figure was hardly ever reached again. We used to invade France with a force infinitely smaller than the Mons Invincibles. At Agincourt there were only 60,000 French. In the Stuart Civil War, the average army at high-water mark numbered about 20,000.

In the American War of Independence it was always less—about 10,000 was a really strong force. Napoleon originated the huge modern army, and since then everyone has followed his example. Yet in the Peninsular War Wellington seldom had more than 40,000 to 50,000 British troops, though local auxiliaries helped him. At Waterloo each army numbered about 70,000 to 80,000 men only. The Americans in the Civil War undoubtedly put big forces in the field, though at Gettysburg there were only about 75,000 with Lee, and some 65,000 with Meade. In the Franco-German war of 1870 the troops engaged were not, as we reckon them, very numerous, while the losses were, as we hold them, trivial. Her casualties in the present battle to date are probably twice the entire losses suffered by Germany in killed, and wounded in the whole war of 1870-1. This will give some idea of what modern warfare means.

Blames Entente for Communism.

Vienna—"Communism is the only logical result of the policy of the Entente toward Hungary and also, perhaps, it is the only economic salvation left to us under present conditions, yet the Allies are astonished that we have gone Bolshevik." This statement was made to the correspondent by Count Michael Karolyi, who established a republic in Hungary last October and played a prominent part in her politics until recently, if he is not mixed up in them now. The count resigned the correspondent in the only home left to him out of a dozen which he previously owned.

Writing a Book.

The man who a few months ago was rated a millionaire, admitted that he is writing a book in English on Hungary's communist experiment in the hope of earning sufficient money to stave off hunger.

"There are plenty of people like me," the count continued, "who welcome the communist government because it guarantees to keep us from starving to death, which was not the case when we were employes."

LISLE STOCKINGS AND CLOTH COATS.

As I sat in the trolley car one morning, this spring, at the time of day when all the world goes to its work, I glanced up and down the aisle at the feet displayed there at the number of silk stockings. A pair after pair of feet, male and female alike, were clad in the shiny raiment, though sometimes of very coarse and sleazy texture. In fact, when my eyes finally came to a pair of feet clad in lisle stockings it was such a shock that I raised them and took a look at the person attached thereto. And what I saw there made the effort worthwhile. She was apparently a young business woman of the best class. She had a nice face and a good figure. She was dressed in good style and excellent taste. Her suit, though simply tailored, probably costs as much as any suit in the car. And yet she dared to wear lisle stockings. What was the explanation?

The Was Sick of Cheap Silk Stockings. Naturally I couldn't ask her but I'll take the liberty to supply it for her. She had seen so many cheap silk stockings that she had sickened of the sight of them. Moreover, though she could afford the first cost of silk stockings, she resented the high replacement cost inevitable to their wearing out. Therefore, on these counts she preferred a good looking lisle stocking that cost as much as the cheaper silk but would outwear them.

We've Got to Make A Stand Somewhere. There seldom has been an era in the world's history when true thrift was so imperatively needed as to-day. And there has seldom been any time when the temptations to spend money were so great. If one doesn't want to be swept along with the unthinking crowd one has simply got to look the ground over and make up one's mind to take a stand somewhere. And where could one more wisely take Household Notes.

Before wearing your rubbers rub them well with vaseline. Let them remain a few days before wearing them.

Wash cooled silks in cold water and a moderate amount of soap. Do not rub the soap directly on the fabric.

A good dessert is made with bananas put through the potato ricer and sliced orange and pineapple added. When making tomato or asparagus soup a few grains of baking soda should be added to the cooked vegetables.

If by accident soot should be dropped on the carpet, cover it thickly with salt; then both may easily be swept up.

Tooth powder is excellent for cleaning jewelry. Rub it on with a nail brush and then rinse off with scalding water.

When preparing vegetables, cook enough so that there will be enough on hand for a cream soup for the next day's luncheon.

Milk and cream stains should not have hot water put on them. Wash them out in cold water, followed by soap and water.

When cooking on the gas stove, use cooking vessels that cover the utensil is lost.

When garments of any kind are washed in gasoline, add a few drops of oil of cedar. The disagreeable odor will not be noticed.

To stretch kid gloves when new, place them between the folds of a damp towel for almost one hour before they are to be worn.

When a slice or two of bread is left from a meal, do not put into the bread box to be forgotten, but cover over in a dish and use for toast at the next meal.

Add a pinch of cream of tartar to the whites of eggs when they are half beaten. This keeps them from falling before being used.

A HOLIDAY.

We'll come to greatness by and by
Or falling never shed a tear;
Just now the sun is in the sky
Just now the brooks are running clear,
And there are pleasant lanes to tread;
With beauty that the world is gay,
Let him who will go straight ahead,
We'll give our soul a holiday.

We'll come to fortune later on
Or falling never give a sigh;
The clover's fair to look upon
And not a cloud is in the sky,
The trees are greened once more in green,
The birds, it seems, have much to say,
Out here where all is pure and clean
We'll give our soul a holiday.

We'll turn away from fame and gold,
We'll wonder far from eager men
Who clutch at things they cannot hold,
And be a care-free boy again.
We'll drop the cruel spurs of haste
And let the cost be what it may,
What though life's precious time we waste,
We'll give our soul a holiday.

And if we never reach our goal,
And if we never reach success,
We still can say that once our soul
Has had a day of happiness,
That once beneath the open sky
We turned our back on sordid schemes
And gave our soul a chance to try
Its wings out in the world of dreams.

A Lazy Man's Paradise

Worth while seems life on the Isle of Ustilla. Its place on the map would be hard to find, but it's worth discovering. Away off in a southern sea, never heard from before and but little known, it comes to the knowledge of the Pan-American Union that here have Americans found a home that others enjoy when they are dead.

"We call it a lazy man's paradise," says the message from this land of delight, "not that the inhabitants are necessarily indolent, but simply because a large amount of labor is superfluous. Nature provides for nearly all our wants here as in most tropical countries. Farming is our principal occupation, yet there is not a plough on the island. Frost is unknown and extreme heat is never experienced. Ninety degrees in the shade would be unusually high temperature. Our grade schools are of high standard, attendance being compulsory ten months in the year. Ustilla is one of the Bay Islands, a string of six verdant isles in the Bay of Honduras, an arm of the Caribbean Sea, which were discovered by Columbus in 1502. They were then thickly populated by native Indians who became slaves. The islands now

Atmosphere Cleared

The surcharged political atmosphere of the past two days has cleared somewhat and it is said that for one of the parties in the Government, at least, a calmness has descended upon their adversities and peace reigns within their ranks. That this peace has been brought about by divers circumstances, controlled by the personal activities of one or more of the followers of Sir M. P. Cashin, is neither here nor there. Their efforts have met with temporary success and we understand from reports, which we have no reason to believe are exaggerated, that a brand new Government has been formed by the late Minister of Finance and Customs who deems that he is in sufficient strength to meet the House of Assembly tomorrow. At the moment we are unable to make known the personnel of the very newest Administration, which very possibly will be sworn in by His Excellency the Governor this afternoon. It has been said, however, that the coming Prime Minister has a following large enough to carry on the Government, despite any combination which may be opposed to him in the Assembly. This being the case, the country may look for the passing of all the delayed legislation, which the late Government failed to present to the House. Any comment on the personnel of the new Executive must necessarily stand over until such time as the official announcement is made.

The New Government.

As we go to press we have been apprised of the personnel of the new Government which Sir M. P. Cashin has succeeded in forming. The names have been submitted to, and received the approval of His Excellency Governor Harris:
Premier and Minister of Finance, Hon. Sir M. P. Cashin.
Minister of Justice and Attorney General, Hon. A. B. Morine.
Colonial Secretary, Hon. J. R. Bennett.
Minister of Public Works, Hon. W. Woodford.
Minister of Shipping, Hon. J. C. Crosbie.
Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. J. G. Stone.

His feet is badly frostbitten, but the other three have fully recovered.

The exercises of the afternoon service will be of a varied character, and an address will be given by Rev. Dudley B. Ashford. In the evening Rev. Gordon Dickie, M.A., will preach. Entertainment at Canon Wood Hall.

The entertainment given at Canon Wood Hall last night by the pupils of Bishop Spencer College, was well attended. Among those present were Rev. Canon Field, Rev. Mr. Moulton, and several other clergymen. The entertainment opened with a piano solo by Shirley Green, which was well executed, followed by a sweetly rendered song by Sybil Chalker, after which came a dance by Gertrude Bolt and Dorothy Snow, which was gone through with marked grace and precision. Then came a very pretty dance by Mary Brinton and a song by Jean Cowan, which was splendidly given. The second part of the programme consisted of the play "Beauty and the Beast," in which the characters were as follows: Moneybags, Beth White; his daughters, Beauty, Diana and Prudence, Constance Crane, Irene Rendell and Dorothy Lilly; Prince Loretto, Sybil Chalker; Bo Peep, Jessie Carnell; Benevolencia, Gertrude Oks; Pertinase, Grace Watson; Imps, Lulu Gardner, Vera Miller, Phyllis Snow, Marjorie McGregor, Evelyn McGregor and Dorothy Morgan. The piece was splendidly presented, the performers one and all sustaining their parts in a manner which won the highest praise. The stage settings were very pretty, and also were the costumes, while the acting and singing were of a high order. During the evening a sale of home-made candy added considerable to the receipts which are to be devoted to the college funds. The National Anthem brought the successful entertainment to a close.

Jensen Camp Entertainment.

The entertainment given by the Young Ladies' Guild, of St. Andrew's Church, at the Presbyterian Hall, in aid of Jensen Camp was well attended and proved highly successful. The programme opened with the sketch entitled: "That Blonde Person." The performers were: Mrs. F. Lumsden, Misses A. Ledingham, E. Tait, E. Clouston, D. Martin and J. Wilson, all of whom acquitted themselves in a manner that won much applause. A duet by Messrs. Riggs and Trappell; solos by Misses Tait and Mitchell; and a cabaret sketch by Messrs. F. and R. Bennett followed, and were splendidly given, particularly the plantation melodies by Messrs. Riggs and Trappell. The second part of the programme was performed by "Uncle Joe's Belles," who were as follows: Miss Johnson, Interlocutor (Mrs. Dickie); Dinah Dewdrops (Mrs. F. Lumsden); Miss Smith (Mr. Hanlin); Rosie (Miss E. Tait); Topsy (Miss G. Gibb); Tillie (Miss Glendening); Mandy (Miss Jean Robertson); Sukey (Mrs. Riggs); and Julia (Miss Ledingham). The darkie melodies were splendidly rendered, while the address on "Why Women Should have the Vote," by Mr. Hanlin created great amusement. The entertainment was in every way enjoyable and all assisting are deserving of congratulation.

Succeeding at University

According to word received in the city yesterday, Mr. Arthur Johnson, son of Mr. Percie Johnson, who has been studying at McGill University Montreal, has passed his chartered accountants examination with flying colors, coming third in his year and second and three thirds, with no failures and no supplementaries. Mr. Johnson was until recently a successful student of Bishop Field College, a fact that speaks well of that admirable institution.

The New "Temperance"

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—We have at present in existence a new and thoroughly up-to-date kind of charitable benefactor, whose charity is co-extensive with the number of zealous callers. Generous individuals who make up hop beer for the advancement of their own personal spirit of respectful temperance, undertake also to supply this soothing balm—this remedy for all human ills—to all-comers free of all cost. Surely this is twentieth century charity, a kind unheard of up to this. A visit of "congratulation" from a good devotee at an early date would be a source of great encouragement, and would do immense service in promoting this great cause, this "new spirit of temperance," and "twentieth century charity." Therefore I write this. I might add, there is also in evidence another species of benevolent activity—not gratuitous—the distribution of Norville on Sunday evenings to enthusiasts in the cause of personal sobriety. The next resource will be, "Two-in-One—Doseno uno Pasta superior." Who will take it? Worth any two goes sold anywhere! In "ways and means" with which the public are necessarily in contact there has also been noticed evidence of the advance of the Propaganda of "New Temperance," which is not conducive to the sanctity, or the uplifting of youthful or other witnesses. Who will see to it? "FOX ISLAND GUT." May 18th, 1919. The results of Humane work in Newfoundland have not been encouraging. Philanthropists are too full of sympathy for human woes to have much left for the sufferings of dumb beasts. But we can do something to rectify this omission by giving generously on Friday, Tag Day. may 21, 2i

Major Kennedy's Lecture.

Those members of the Board of Trade who attended the luncheon yesterday at Wood's Restaurant, were especially privileged in hearing Major Kennedy's address on Commercial Aviation. Mr. J. J. McKay, President of the Board of Trade, introduced Major Kennedy, who for close on half an hour, held the attention of his listeners, while he pointed out the advantages of aerial transportation over land or water routes. The advantages of the air route were: speed, safety and the fact that every place was an aerial port regardless of its distance from the waterfront. Speaking of speed, he pointed out that a message of, say, 5,000 words, could be delivered at a point 500 miles from the point of sending it in a shorter time than if it were sent by telegraph, while it had the added advantage that it would be delivered as a signed document, and free from any error that might occur through faulty transmission by wire. He cited cases of the managers of the large London departmental stores, such as Harrod's, sending their buyers to Paris from London by aeroplane, figuring that the cost of $75 to $100 for the trip was more than saved by the saving of time on the journey. It would have the advantage of reducing distance, as by the air route no part of the world was more than four days' journey from the starting point. As to trans-Atlantic flights, he pointed out that a message station was used for one landing, the ocean, having a series of floating stations where the airship could descend for petrol, etc., these being placed at distances of about 600 miles, which had been proven the most desirable from an economic standpoint. While the cost of erecting aerodromes and landing places was considerable, it was pointed out that if one of these stations was used for one landing, the cost of a machine was saved thereby. He told how, when he was stationed on the East Coast of England, after his day's work was done, he had taken a machine and gone across to France, visiting some of his friends there and returned before midnight. It is a matter of common knowledge that Lloyd George, Bonar Law and others have been crossing to France by air for some time past, and Major Kennedy, who had piloted Bonar Law across, described the aeroplane in which he travelled as being a comfortable carriage, covered in and heated, having two seats with a typewriter on a table between them so that correspondence could be carried on the same as if at home. As regards cost, he said that he had flown a machine which had been in use over four years and was still good, while it had been estimated that provided the proper class and quantity of mail was available it could be carried to points in England for 1/2 cent per oz. Insurance could be obtained at a cheaper rate per mile for risks by aeroplane in England than for railway transportation in Canada. Regular mail service had been maintained from England to France, Belgium and the army on the Rhine, and since the first of March only one accident had occurred. A regular service was carried on between France and Corsica, Italy, and Northern Africa, London and Paris, and in connection with this latter route it was pointed out that the time for the trip had only varied eleven mins. since its inauguration. A machine to hold 6 people, regularly employed over a route of about 500 miles, could carry passengers on a paying basis at 7c. per mile. Ninety per cent of the expense is on the ground, but it was pointed out that there were no obstacles, such as hills, bogs, etc., for the air route, nor was there any upkeep or depreciation charge for road bed. In Newfoundland it could be used for cruising forests, prevention of forest fires, searching for fish and seals, and the Major humorously remarked that if necessary the seals could be gassed by gas bombs and removed by steamers at leisure. In conclusion, Major Kennedy urged that some steps be taken in Newfoundland for the erection of aerodromes and landings as while the Mother Country had done much for aviation, it was necessary for the Colonies to do their share in making the All Red Air Route a success. The Chairman expressed the thanks of those present to Major Kennedy for his interesting address, and Mr. W. A. Mackay stated how pleased he was to be present, and urged the Board of Trade to make every effort to secure an improved telephone service, saying that now would be the opportune time as copper was down. —Daily News.

Lonely Lives.

Who is the loneliest Briton? When this question was put to a class of school children recently, one bright youth replied, "The man who sits on top of the North Pole." Some isolated Britons are almost as lonely as this mythical personage.

Living on an island, belonging to the Paumotu Archipelago, a French possession in mid-Pacific, many thousands of miles from the Australian Continent, is a Mr. E. Davies, who claims the distinction of being the loneliest Briton. There are only three other white men on the island, which is forty miles long and twenty miles broad, but these are three Frenchmen.

Hundreds of miles to the southward of New Zealand are the Macquarie Islands, one of which two men manipulate a wireless service to Australia. Their small habitation is the only one on the island, which has no trees or shrubs, natives, harbors, and very little sunshine, being bitterly cold and most desolate. Their only companions are penguins. It is the most southern abode in the world for a Briton.

Fuddled Fish.

Dope Fiends in the Animal World. A teetotal advocate once said that alcohol is purely an acquired taste—that no living creature except man would willingly touch it.

The gentleman had certainly never been to the Zoo and seen how greedily a sick elephant swallows a bottle of brandy or rum. A lady elephant called Dinah, belonging to the Barnum Show, having realized that she only got alcohol when she was ill, was ill, was clever enough to sham illness just in order to get the medicine she adored.

Tipsy Sparrows.

Monkeys, the apes especially, take kindly to alcoholic liquor. The writer has seen the trained ape, "Consul," sit up and drink a glass of port with the greatest relish.

Strew grain soaked in whisky in a farmyard; the chickens fight for it, and have not the sense to know when they have had enough. Sparrows, too, will become quite tipsy on the same sort of food.

An American scientist, Mr. V. E. Shelford, has been trying experiments with goldfish and "dope." He put the fish in a shallow tank into which a weak morphine solution flowed at one end, while pure water ran in at the other.

They Like It.

Did the fish avoid the tainted water and make for the fresh? Not a bit of it. They swam to the inlet of the morphine solution and stayed there. Some stayed so close that they died from the effects.

Then Mr. Shelford tried another lot with alcohol. The goldfish evidently loved it, for they soaked themselves in a 10 per cent. solution until they were quite helpless.

Reptiles can stand enormous doses of dope without any apparent harm. A frog, for instance, will swallow a dose of morphine a hundred times greater than would — weight for weight — be fatal to a human being, and that without being much the worse for it.

Current Comment.

(Vancouver Sun.)

Three American soldiers were killed and thirty injured in England in a fight with South African negroes. Among the things the Americans are learning is that, in England, the negro has rights which the white man is bound to respect.

"Italy does not fear to stand alone against the entire world," declares a celebrated Italian poet. It's the sort of thing a poet might be expected to say, but the country that starts out to "lick all creation" is liable to get hurt.

A London magistrate declares there is no such thing as a man having a right to take his own life. This dictum is no doubt morally sound, but all the same isn't there something queer about the law which punishes a man who tries to commit suicide and fails?

Arctic by Aero

Captain Robert A. Bartlett, the noted explorer, starting from some point in Canada, will be sent to the Polar Regions next June to survey the North Pole by aeroplane, and the task of backing this great undertaking has been assumed by the Aero Club of America. The purpose is to employ aircraft to explore, survey and map the unknown Polar Regions, and also to gather data, the depths of the Polar basin and the upper air of the Arctic. The Executive Committee of the Aero Club of America decided to make Captain Bartlett's Arctic Expedition "Roosevelt's Memorial Expedition."

It was Roosevelt, while he was President of the United States, who gave Admiral Peary leave of absence to organize and take charge of the expedition which led to the discovery of the North Pole. It will be recalled that Peary's ship was named "The Roosevelt" in appreciation of President Roosevelt's interest in the expedition. Captain Bartlett was Captain of the "Roosevelt" in two Peary expeditions.

Colonel Roosevelt was a veteran supporter of aeronautics. As early as 1897, when he was Assistant Secretary of the U. S. Navy, he used his influence to secure the appropriations needed by Professor Langley to continue his work. The Roosevelt Memorial Expedition will have four important missions, as follows:

(1) To explore as much of the 1,000,000 miles of unexplored polar arctic regions. (2) To fly across the top of the world from Cape Columbia on the American side to Cape Chelyuskin on the Siberian side. (3) To conduct extensive soundings in the Polar Basin and collect flora and fauna from the ocean bottom.

(4) To send up sounding balloons and explore the upper air of the Polar regions gathering meteorological data. It is also fitting that the first land, if any land is discovered in the first use of aeroplanes for arctic exploration, shall be called "Roosevelt Land."

The Expedition is to start from the United States next June. There are six weeks of fair weather in July and August when, even in the Polar regions, it is seldom lower than sixty degrees above zero. The plans are to have a ship go to Etah, about 600 miles from the North Pole, in June, when the ice is sufficiently broken to permit the ship to cross Melville Bay.

The ship would carry a large sea-plane or land aeroplane for the final flight across the pole. For long unexplored smaller for shore. Immediate waiting for their next flight as far as possible. Arctic by Aeroplane.

(Canadian Motor Boat.)

Captain Robert A. The purpose is to employ aircraft to explore, survey and map the unknown Polar Regions, and also to gather data, the depths of the Polar basin and the upper air of the Arctic. It will be recalled that Peary's ship was named "The Roosevelt" in appreciation of President Roosevelt's interest in the expedition. Captain Bartlett was Captain of the "Roosevelt" in two Peary expeditions.

Colonel Roosevelt was a veteran supporter of aeronautics. As early as 1897, when he was Assistant Secretary of the U. S. Navy, he used his influence to secure the appropriations needed by Professor Langley to continue his work.

The Roosevelt Memorial Expedition will have four important missions, as follows:

- (1) To explore as much of the 1,000,000 miles of unexplored polar arctic regions.
- (2) To fly across the top of the world from Cape Columbia on the American side to Cape Chelyuskin on the Siberian side.

- (4) To send up sounding balloons and explore the upper air of the Polar regions gathering meteorological data. It is also fitting that the first land, if any land is discovered in the first use of aeroplanes for arctic exploration, shall be called "Roosevelt Land."

The Expedition is to start from the United States next June. There are six weeks of fair weather in July and August when, even in the Polar regions, it is seldom lower than sixty degrees above zero. The plans are to have a ship go to Etah, about 600 miles from the North Pole, in June, when the ice is sufficiently broken to permit the ship to cross Melville Bay.

The ship would carry a large sea-plane or land aeroplane for the final flight across the top of the earth, and for long distance exploration of the unexplored Polar regions, as well as smaller planes for the scouting flights for short distance survey.

Immediately upon arrival at Etah a base will be established and while waiting for the ice to break up further north to permit the ship to go as far as Cape Columbia, the small sea-planes will fly to Cape Columbia, and establish a base there for the large plane which is to be used for the flight across the top of the world, from Cape Columbia on the American side, over the Pole, to Cape Chelyuskin on the Siberian side and for exploration over longer distances.

For the six weeks after the middle of July, when the weather conditions are best for flying in the Polar regions, the large plane as well as the small planes will be put into service and the important work of the expedition will be done, including sending up sounding balloons in the upper air, to gather meteorologic data.

Results of inestimable value to the United States and to science will follow from this expedition. There is believed to be no doubt that this expedition can explore, survey and photograph the unexplored parts of the arctic regions and establish the existence or non-existence of land or lands in that region.

The Committee of the Aero Club of America assisting Captain Bartlett consists of Rear-Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole; Alan R. Hawley, Henry A. Wise Wood, Henry Woodhouse, Rear-Admiral Bradley, A. Fiske, John Hays Hammond, Jr., Rear-Admiral William N. Little, U.S.N.; Professor Charles L. Poor, Colonel E. Lester-Jones, U.S.A.; Charles Jerome Edwards; Major Cushman A. Rice, U.S.A.; Augustus Post, Major J. C. McCoy.

Captain Bartlett has been an arctic explorer since he first spent a winter with Rear-Admiral Peary at Kane Basin in 1897-98. He commanded the "Roosevelt" on both of Peary's expeditions of 1905-09, in which he reached the 88th parallel, and was Captain of the "Karluk" in 1913-14, when the ship was crushed by the ice and he led the 17 members of the Expedition to Wrangell's Island and then crossed over to Siberia with one Eskimo and returned with a relief party. Captain Bartlett was also commander of the MacMillan Relief Expedition, and last winter was commended by U. S. Secretary Daniels for his extraordinary achievement in taking the ship "Favorite" out of the ice from Quebec.

The Oldest Song.

The Age-Long History of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow!"

Asked to name the oldest tune in the world, few could give the correct answer. It is that to which we now sing the words, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and the air, which can be traced in distant Asia and Africa, as well as in most European countries, has an interesting history.

Its origin is lost in antiquity, but it is supposed to have been learnt from the ancient Babylonians by the Egyptians, who popularized it in Africa and Asia Minor. It is still sung by the Arabs.

The Crusaders caught the tune from their Saracen enemies, and sang it under the walls of Jerusalem, which to-day, perhaps, vibrate to the same notes, chanted by our victorious troops. The tune was ultimately carried into Europe, where it survived, in various forms, among the folk-songs of the different nations.

In 1709, after their defeat at Malplaquet, the French, following a false rumour of the Duke of Marlborough's death in battle, composed a satirical lament, "Mabrook is Off to the War," detailing the supposed death and burial of the English general, and the ascension of his soul to heaven.

Napoleon Sang It!

The words were sung to the old, popular air, whose lilting rhythm lent itself to the swing of the twenty-two verses.

Like most topical songs, this one was of short-lived popularity; but in 1781, it suddenly echoed from one end of France to the other. The young Marie Antoinette gave birth to an heir, and the baby prince, in accordance with French custom, was placed under the care of a robust peasant foster-mother. The nurse used to put her royal charge to sleep with the old song of her village home, and the girl-mother began, almost unconsciously, to repeat the simple refrain.

As if by magic the song became the craze of the day. It resounded through the stately galleries of Versailles, passing to the kitchens and stables, whence it was taken up by the crowds of Paris, and speedily passed on from town to town and from country to country.

Napoleon himself, though a hater of music, never mounted his charger to go into action without singing softly a few bars of the ancient melody.

The air is still popular in France, as it is in England and America, but few of our Tommies and their Polish chums, humming in chorus, can have suspected the varied history of the simple tune.

DETROIT.

I'd like to visit in Detroit, where countless cars are made, and watch the artisans as they pursue their helpful trade. I earn much money, while I took my timbrels and my lyres; Detroit and Akron get the loot, for cars and rubber tires. Detroit's fine buildings, many a one, show how that city leads; I paid for them with hard earned moon, but others have the deeds. Detroit has dwellings gay and bright, and palaces of stone; I paid for everything in sight, although they're not my own. My wife, she needs a changing dish, the kids need teddy bears; but all my money's gone to Mich. Detroitward, for repairs. Detroit has social functions great, where youths and maidens dance; and when it's time to pay the freight, I dig down in my pance. Detroit has grown and grown again, until she's over-size; and I provide the iron men that pay her bustling guys. Nine dollars for an extra rim, and twenty for a wheel; it makes my aged eyes grow dim to tell how poor I feel. I used to calmly spend my days with neighbors, pitching quitois, and still might follow frugal ways if there were no Detroit. But now I labor night and day, and salt no money down; I have to send it all away to Eddie Guest, his town.

with civilians and brass bands, and bannered with the device "The Mayor's Committee of Welcome, City of New York," paddled to midstream and came as near the ship as they could. Every single person in a frock-coat to the thinnest child in a pinafore, waved a flag. Interchange of cheering did not cease for a full quarter of an hour. Apples, compliments, and jests were hurled aboard from the ferry-boats all the while they were escorting us to the docks. The band of the ferry-boat to port played "The Star-Spangled Banner." Our band played, and the soldiers sang, "Hail Columbia!" The next song to be yelled in chorus—and how it was yelled—was "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." On the bridge deck officers and purses jazzed to a ragtime blare. Thousand upon thousand of New R.M.S. Mauretania, N. Y. Harbor. Dignity, poise, reticence, all are admirable. But does it really need an occasion that is supreme and altogether rare such as Armistice Day to open wide the flood-gates of British emotion?

I ask this because I have just witnessed a most magnificent "welcome home" to the troops of New York's own particular 27th Division, with whom I have crossed the ocean from Brest, and the contrast between it and what one remembers of an after-the-armistice troopship's arrival at an English port is rather saddening.

As we steamed into the harbor entrance the decks became impassable with troops. Then the real fun began. Four ferry-boats, impossibly packed

Secretary-General of the League.

"Sir Eric Drummond, who is to be the first Secretary-General of the League of Nations, is half-brother and heir-presumptive of the Earl of Perth. He was born in 1876, and entered the Foreign Office in 1900. His advance in the service was rapid.

"Sir Eric Drummond's appointment," writes the Daily News Lobby Correspondent, "will be received with warm welcome in political and diplomatic circles, not only because of the honor conveyed to the League, but because it is a well-deserved tribute to Sir Eric's qualities.

Correspondents are requested to accompany their contributions with their real names, not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith. In future no correspondence will be considered unless this rule is adhered to.

"As Mr. Asquith's private secretary at Downing Street, he was brought into close contact with all the leading figures in the political world, and won golden opinions for his judgment, fairness, and courtesy from Liberals and Conservatives alike. In time of crisis he has been a source of strength to several of the country's leaders—late-ly, it is no secret, he has been Mr. Balfour's right hand in Paris.

"In the Foreign Office, where his work is best known, he has long been distinguished not less for his capacity for work and the range of his mind and interests in international affairs than for those social qualities on which the Foreign Office Service in the past has set store too exclusively. Confidence is felt that he will be able to create a sympathetic secretariat to the League of Nations."

Newfoundland Memories and Happenings.

Though Newfoundland is our next door neighbor and a sister Dominion, we perhaps know little more about her than any other of Great Britain's overseas possessions. And yet it is so near us that on the Cabot Straits Canada and Newfoundland seem to be stretching out, beckoning friendly hands to each other, separated by only about 60 miles from Cape Breton on our eastern coast. Newfoundland stretches across to the entrance of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and is a six or seven hour journey from us via the Straits passage.

We Canadians, with our magnificent heritage of almost limitless distances, having perhaps been disposed to over-rate ourselves and under-rate the "Little Island-Dominion" of Newfoundland—but it is perhaps much larger than we, with our scant knowledge of it, have visualized. It is said to be a fifth larger than Ireland and the length is over a hundred miles less than that of England, it enjoys the distinction of greater breadth by fifty miles. We will always be thankful we were privileged to visit Newfoundland and enjoy its rugged, scenic beauty and learn, at first hand, of the splendid qualities of the people. We were fortunate in our choice of season, for even though it was the late autumn the Frost King had not despoiled, but only intensified the beauty of the Island. What riot of coloring on "the long trail" from Port aux Basques to the capital city St. John's, a distance of five hundred and forty-eight miles! The undergrowth had surely been touched by the fairies' paint brush, for it ran the whole gamut of exquisite coloring from palest yellow to glamorous, vivid, crimson, and the russet browns and ochres and burnt siennas clamored in their fine shading for equal recognition—and got it. There is nothing monotonous in the journey. The road bed makes many a sharp, short curve and one gets accustomed, as on board ship—only more so—to pressed their intention of being present. Each of the crews is made up of war veterans. The Newfoundlanders are showing a surprising amount of speed. The coach, however, said that his men were handicapped because they were unaccustomed to sliding seats. The Australian and New Zealand crews are training on the Thames at present, but are expected in Paris on Sunday. The Portuguese crews have been on the water since February, and the French oarsmen are veterans, who have rowed together for years.

Before this number reaches you the issue will be decided. In the meantime we are building on the Newfoundlanders heading the nations represented at this aquatic contest.

But Newfoundland is not depending on the results of this water-race for distinction. She has already won it elsewhere, and of a vastly different character. She has proved in deed and in truth her loyalty to the Empire—how the Newfoundlanders can live for it, and at Beaumont Hamel, Arras, Monchy and Cambrai her sons taught us how she can die for it.

Let us Canadians, proud and justly so of the splendid part our boys played in Empire defence and world betterment, and of the undimmed lustre and undying name they have won for Canada on the Western front—let us, with this memory ever green, never forget what our Sister Dominion, Newfoundland has done, for she has nobly borne her part among the overseas dominions. Her quota more than sustained when we, in all fairness, take into consideration the fact that so much of her hazardous work on water could not be delegated to women, such as whaling, seal and other fishery undertakings. Population considered, this sea girl Isle has amply played her part and paid the price in sacrifice. Because of this, Newfoundland shares in the triumph of sustaining the great world issues of democracy, liberty and righteousness.

No finer proof of the depths of sacrifice entered into by Newfoundland can be given than the mere statement that it is estimated she has in the neighborhood of fourteen hundred mothers eligible for decoration into the International Order of Allied Mothers in Sacrifice. A few of these, whose sons served in our Canadian forces, have already been thus honored.—The Kinman, Canada, Ont.

Nfld. Methodist Educational Campaign

A number of meetings have been held during the past fortnight to consider the advisability of merging the Methodist College Extension Campaign, the East End School, and the George St. School, all active in campaigns, in one drive instead of three.

While making a survey of conditions, Mr. Mark G. Holzman, a representative of the Hockenbury System, advised the uniting of all the forces and making a short term drive for the three early in June. The plan has been approved by the three interests involved.

In speaking of the combined effort of the recent meetings, Mr. Arthur Myers said, in part, "The three projects are each necessary and have been promoted to such a degree that each is committed to go ahead immediately. If each were to go alone, it would not work for the greatest economy of time, and would at the same time endanger the success of each. This should bring about not only the raising of the money, but should so bind together the Methodist Church in St. John's that future enterprises would be much easier of accomplishment."

According to the plans as announced by Hon. R. K. Bishop, General Chairman of the Campaign Committee, the St. John's Campaign will be conducted during the middle of June. It is hoped to be ready for the interim drive by June 8th, and completing it by the 16th. There will be no Campaign in the outskirts for funds for the College Extension and publicity work there. The Campaign will therefore be only for the city of St. John's.

Mr. R. F. Harwood stated that a getting together was in line with the spirit of the age. "We are coming together as nations, and the great church bodies are deciding upon common programmes and merging their common ability and strength to work out and realize these projects. There is economy, strength, and effectiveness in getting together. The Methodist Church is sectional in polity and therefore it will more and more do its work in this way. Find out through surveys what needs to be done, and then decide on a time and plan to do it. The result is a combined achievement that would otherwise not be realized."

Smillie at Ritz Hotel.

Addressing a mass meeting of postal servants yesterday at Clerkenwell, Mr. Robert Smillie, president of the Miners' Federation, declared that the miner was entitled to spend as much on creature comforts as any other person in the country. The miner was entitled to better comforts than the non-workers.

He had been to the Savoy and Ritz Hotels, and was in a position to appreciate the difference in the mode of living of the miners and those who frequented these places. An ordinary dinner or luncheon at either of these places cost more than would keep a miner and his family for a week.

"The miners hope some day to be in the service of the State, but not of the State as we understand it now." He was confident that the workers would not consent to be continually chloroformed by Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Bonar Law. "I look forward to the time when all the workers of the country will be working for a democratic State, when it will be a democratic State, a free State of people working each for all and all for each."

Much valuable information had been obtained by the Coal Commission, which had gone to prove that the miners and their people of the country had been fleeced so that the owners might gain excess profits. There was no reason why there should not be as powerful a Labour Press as there was a Capitalist Press. "We are on the verge of an upheaval. We are on the verge of a revolution of thought among the workers of this country which will be as important and will lead us as far as any armoured revolution will do."

Mr. Jack Jones, M.P., said he supposed a postman could be called an ordinary working man. "Although I know he often believes in high collars and low wages." (Laughter.)—London Daily Mail.

"Westminster" Bridge.

One of Our Greatest Organists Who is Retiring.

With the retirement of Sir Frederick Bridge from his post of organist of Westminster Abbey, one of the most gifted and engaging of London's personalities will disappear largely from public view.

For more than forty years Sir Frederick has been a notable figure in London's musical and social life, respected for his great and versatile gifts, and beloved for his amiable and genial qualities. For he is not only a great organist and composer, he is also a brilliant Lecturer and Professor and writer, a man of wide culture, a clever raconteur, and a "fellow of infinite jest."

He is, too, the "Peter Pan" of the world of music. Time seems powerless to touch the essential youth in him; and to-day he is as full of high spirits, almost impishness, as when he was the ring-leader of mischief with his fellow choir-boys nearly seventy years ago.

Born at Oldbury, near Birmingham, in 1844, Sir Frederick was singing in Rochester Cathedral at the age of six; and at twenty-one was its assistant organist. A degree at Oxford was followed by more organ-playing at Westminster and Manchester Cathedral; and he had barely entered the thirties when he found himself at Westminster, where he has been ever since, to the delight of London's music-lovers.

Since that day honors have showered on Sir Frederick—the pick of the Professional Chairs, University degrees, Knighthood and other Orders. For more than forty years he has poured out one brilliant composition after another; he has varied his music by antiquarian studies, and the writing of clever books; and as conductor and organist he has given delight to millions.

And amid all these strenuous activities he has found time for much social enjoyment. Few men, indeed, are more in request by Society hostesses; for his geniality, wit and charm make him one of the most desirable guests in London. With his inexhaustible fund of anecdotes, his brilliant conversation and his infectious gaiety, he is indeed a "hoax" in himself.

No man knows more than Sir Frederick of London's history and of her great men during the last forty years. In fact, ever since he came to London there has scarcely been a man of note in England whom he has not known personally; and he has played a prominent part at the obsequies of many of them, including Darwin, Brown, Gladstone and Tennyson. And now this wonderful man is to have a well-earned rest. May he enjoy it well and long! But London will not be the same without her "Westminster" Bridge.—Pearson's Weekly.

Some Quaint Customs in Officialdom.

Many of the new Ministers will have the right to curious perquisites.

Lord Birkenhead, for example, the Lord Chancellor, is also Keeper of the Great Seal that is attached to all important State documents. The seal, a silver one from which the actual wax ones on the documents are made, is carried by an official called the Purse Bearer before the Lord Chancellor as he enters and leaves the House of Lords or Court of Chancery.

The seal is enclosed in a magnificent sachet made of cloth of gold, embroidered with art needlework, and Lord Birkenhead will be entitled to this sachet, a new one being made for every change of Government.

When Lord Thurlow was Chancellor, he remained in office during so many Ministries that his wife made a number of gorgeous counterpanes and bed hangings from her husband's perquisites.

The Lord Chancellor, too, in office is entitled to the actual Great Seal of silver when the reigning King or Queen dies, or a new seal is made. These silver seals cost over £400 to make, as a rule.

When Mr. Lowther retires from the Speakership, which he is shortly going to do, his successor will be entitled to 2,000 ounces of silver plate for his sideboard, as well as a number of other curious perquisites.

A somewhat valuable "perq." at the present time is two hogheads of claret, and another is the present of a number of yards of the best broad-cloth, sent to the Speaker every Christmas by the Clothworkers' Company.

The Clothworkers' Company also give the Attorney-General and the solicitor-General a similar present of the finest cloth, so that neither need worry about the cost of clothing at present.

One of the most extraordinary, however, of all perquisites, is that claimed by the Groom of the Stole. Though the bearer is attached to the Royal Household, is really a political appointment.

Whoever happens to be the holder of the office on the death of the King or Queen, is entitled to the furniture of the room in which the Sovereign died. The altar cloth of the pulpit at St. Osyth, in Essex, is made from the velvet hangings of the room in which George II. died. They were presented to the church by the then holder of the office, the Earl of Rochford.

What a Kohler & Campbell Player-Piano Means to You.

OWING to the fact that it is so easily played; that it is so very simple in its operation that a child can play it, a Kohler and Campbell player-piano will open up the entire world of music to your home. The advantage of any player-piano lies in the fact that it is an instrument that does not have to await the skill of a pianist, of someone who can play by hand. But with a Kohler and Campbell player-piano, the ease and simplicity with which it can be played, by anyone, you have a means of playing the music you like, playing it yourself and playing it as you wish it played. You are the master of a Kohler and Campbell player-piano: It is not the master of you.

The price is $700, upon any reasonable terms, satisfactory to you.
