HAMPTON, Kings Co., Jan. 9.—The January term of the Supreme Court for Kings county opened this morning at 11 o'clock, Mr. Justice Landry on the bench.

The only criminal case is that of Frances Orr, who was sent up yesterday by stipendiary magistrate Morison of Sussex charged with the manslaughter of her infant child. She was brought to the goal here last evening, at which time the evidence taken in the preliminary examination was placed in the hands of the judge.

The grand jurors summoned are: James Campbell, Henry Corbett, Isaac D. Pierson, John F. Smith, Herbert N. Sherwood, Thomas Ray, W. S. D. Moore, Dr. J. J. Daley, Oswald Mac, Fred Davidson and J. Wm. Smith.

Dr. J. J. Daley was chosen foreman of the grand jury. His honor in charging the grand jury reviewed the case of Frances Orr, on the four counts of the indictment.

The docket in addition to the criminal cases, includes the following: James Buchanan vs. Jane and James Armstrong, White and King for plaintiff. Abram B. Crawford vs. Eara Crawford, White and King for plaintiff.

HAMPTON, N. B., Jan. 9.—Patently the court waited from two till after four o'clock this afternoon for the return of the grand jury. When they came back they reported a true bill against Frances Orr on the charge of the indictment for concealing the birth of her child and neglecting to attend to its requirements.

IF the medieval days were full of demons with which one reckoned, today has many of them concentrated in a single aspect—the demon of unrest. It possessed Charlie Harding in his shop in the village, the mill, the depot, the meeting house, being hard by, and all the gossip of the burg about his countess. And the world outside grew tempting.

But it was thought that a rich find of silver had been made in the neighborhood, and at once the price of every old pasture that even the sheep themselves would have disdained to crop had gone soaring out of sight, and the staid old parish that had followed the way of its forebears for 200 years and ever had gone wild over its potentiality of riches.

Of course Captain Harding—a train-band captain of militia was he—had not been in the center of all the talk without finding opportunity for bonding and buying and selling land, and he had, as he phrased it, melted down a good pocket piece through the various transactions. In the swinging of the silver's pendulum, however, it was presently found that the silver was not of a paying sort, and the boom in land exploded like a bubble. But it left Charlie Harding full of eagerness and the wild spirit of adventure in money making.

"Why ain't you contented where you be?" asked his wife's grandfather. "There's silver here silver here sense afore you was born. Why should it make such a difference to ye all on a sudden now? Trouble is ye have to put it in to get it out. Costs more'n it comes to. There's folks I know has silver spoons made of it more'n 200 years ago. But, bless ye, them spoons cost more'n gold. There's gold too, didn't ye know it? That Californy feller panned some gold out, I heard say, an' got what he called a color. But long's spring pans out in the grass an' yerbs I do know's I keep for the other color. As long as the bloodroot comes, an' the marshaller, an' the long leaf of the dock that makes a most health'ly salve, an' burdock for blisters, an' cranberries to draw out cankers, other folks may have their silver. Ef you an' Grace wants their silver, jest keep to work. An' the sooner ye git this silver maggot out'n yer brain the better it'll be for you. You got a growin' business, yer poplar, an' it ain't more'n a mile's walk more'n in'ter to your store when you can't see yer wheel. Mr. King! Here's spring for sure! Here's a mour'nin' bride! And, all excitement, the old naturalist forgot his stick, hurrying and halting and slipping and stumbling, but making sure of the beautiful butterfly.

"Yes," said Grace. "But you believe in me, don't you?" asked he anxiously. "You'd like to see me one of the millionaires? I've a good right to brag money as the best of 'em, and I'm goin' in for it. I'm goin' into Wall street in earnest!" And Captain Harding had a sense of assured success which made him the happiest, best natured and busiest man alive. "Tain't luck," he said to his wife. "It's a long head. I'd look pretty blain' such a knack of business in the corner store, wouldn't I? And as for you, I'm proud of you every day!"

But Mrs. Harding was not proud of herself. She would not let her husband know it, but she felt herself wholly unequal to meet the whims of society with whom her husband's affairs brought her into some association, invited now and then to their houses, to their opera boxes—women who had acquaintance with each other, with foreign life, who knew what to do and how to do it and who without the least ill feeling often overlooked and ignored her and made her feel herself out of it. She sent home boxes of gloves and other things to Louisa and her mother (of which in their private talks they said they would have preferred her own things—to make over for themselves, without dreaming how unsuitable they would be), and she sent grandma a gray silk wrapper in whose ruffles and lace she would look like a little old flower. Grace pleased herself by thinking, and she sent her grandfather a fur coat and a wonderful meerschaum pipe. She had a feeling that such things were, as her husband phrased it, so much to the good. Now and then she sent her father a little money, but she did not have much money. Captain Harding needed all his ready money, but she had generous credit—and bills. "Pile it on!" said her husband. "One must look successful in order to be successful, you know!"

"They still lived at the hotel, where they had what seemed to her royal rooms, although she never grieved used to them, and, although entertaining there those who accepted their invitations, she always had a sensation that one day those people would find her out for a fraud.

"She laughed sometimes when she saw herself in the glass, with her bare shoulders and jewels, her satin and lace and marabou, with a kind of mockery. But she never let her husband know that this was not what her soul longed for, that she was afraid of the other women or that she felt all their own new way of life to be of very uncertain tenure.

"She did not have so much chance as once to let him know her state of mind. He was occupied from morning till night, he was writing and telegraphing and seeing people and down in the lobby talking with men (in midnight, the hotel lobby being a minor Wall street.

"It's jest tomfoolery," said her mother.

er, with a weary sigh, as she twisted her sparse and hay colored hair out of the way. "Why ain't they satisfied with the place an' all? I don't believe Charlie Harding'll ever grow up—Cap'n Harding! What's he cap'n of, excep'in' his Grace?"

"Grace is cap'n, then," said her grandfather.

"I can't tell where Grace got her ambitious ways," said her mother.

"Oh, I do," said her husband. "It was mos' 'kassy to go to sea, fust 'y'ez. But one good wreck cured me, an' an' p'raps 'twill them."

"Yes," said the old grandfather, laughing half to himself. "I guess he'll be glad to git back to the land ag'in."

"I wouldn't wonder if it all turned out for the best," said Louisa, who had come down from the hill with her sewing.

But Captain Harding had no doubts on the subject. "First thing, some clothes," said he. "We've heard say there's nothin' succeeds like success, an' so you've gotta look successful. An' I'll say one thing—if there's anybody that'll be a credit to fine clothes it's my wife!"

And yet, as his wife walked through the corridors of the Fifth Avenue hotel, returning from the far west, a little awed by the velvet carpets, the satin curtains, the gilding, the mirrors, the splendor of the other women, she was conscious of something about herself not as it should be. Her husband was all well enough, a bluff and ready man of business in a business suit. But either she had on too much or she didn't know how to put it on. She felt she was unlike these grandees who talked and laughed and moved at ease. Her hands trembled and she made her uncomfortable; her hair lacked the touch, but still she knew it was only a matter of time; she would catch on. Charlie, anyway, looked at her with admiring eyes when he had any time to look at her at all. She was more loveliness than at first, for her husband had become entirely absorbed in his schemes.

Meantime she was seeing the world. It went by her in the beginning like a panorama; it almost made her dizzy. Yet, although at last she was a part of it and as eager in the rush as any, she was never quite at home in it.

Captain Harding had indeed had some measure of the luck he had hoped for, and he was floating the shares of the Nimble Dollar mine in a way that made his wife hold her breath when he reported his successes to her. He had been on the stocks, and he had seen the mine, he knew what he was talking about, he was not anxious for a price, and he came out of the transaction with a small fortune.

"Now," he said, "if I did what my folks and yer folks would approve of, I should like to see you go home and build a house with bow windows and a French roof and be the rich man of the region."

"Yes," said Grace.

"But you believe in me, don't you?" asked he anxiously.

"You'd like to see me one of the millionaires? I've a good right to brag money as the best of 'em, and I'm goin' in for it. I'm goin' into Wall street in earnest!"

"But you believe in me, don't you?" asked he anxiously.

"You'd like to see me one of the millionaires? I've a good right to brag money as the best of 'em, and I'm goin' in for it. I'm goin' into Wall street in earnest!"

"But you believe in me, don't you?" asked he anxiously.

"You'd like to see me one of the millionaires? I've a good right to brag money as the best of 'em, and I'm goin' in for it. I'm goin' into Wall street in earnest!"

Things seemed to her to be in such a whirl that sometimes she wondered if she were not dreaming. She wrote home, but she said very little of herself and her life. She described impersonal things, like pictures and shops.

"Louisa," said her mother once, "it's borne in on me some ways that Grace ain't happy. She's got the desire of her heart, she's out in the world seein' things, but she ain't happy."

"That's because she hasn't a ny baby," said Louisa, dancing her boy on her knee and then letting him pull her curls all about her face. "I'm sure I don't know what we done before this little person came."

"I'd like to see your baby," Grace had written her sister. "Some time—just for a look—I may drop in upon you when you least expect it."

"I wish't I could drop in on her," said her mother.

"I guess I should know my own child," said her mother, "if she was ever so fine. I'm glad she ain't ever sent for Tommy the way she said she was goin' to. I wouldn't want to stand in his life, but somehow I feel'though grandfather was better for him than Captain Harding. I wish't she'd tell what she doin' and where she goes."

"No, you haven't," she said, laughing, her great blue eyes blinding, it seemed to him joyously. And she drew the telegram from under a book.

"By George!" he cried, gazing at her with fresh admiring pride. "You beat the record! That's what I call send! And you know it all the time! Well, there it is. I ain't no match for these fellers. By sendin' me what she wants in jewels and furs we'll get out what she has enough to buy a little stock of tress goods for the store. And—what do you say?"

"That we can't start an hour too soon!" she cried.

"Then we'll go back and just open up the store and dust it out as if nothin' had happened, as if we'd been out to see the world and had seen it and was satisfied and was back again to the old stand with some new notions," he said gayly. "Sowed our wild oats, so to say."

"And I'll give you raised biscuits and doughnuts for your breakfast, and I'll feed my chickens and have my plants. I'll have a jack rose. Why, Charlie, we'll be real happy yet!"

"You better believe! And with this load off my shoulders! It'll be nuts to your grandfather, though."

"I'd like to hear you talk. He'll be at the store early an' late. And some days," said Grace, one glad smile breaking after another across her face, "I'll bring my sewing down to the store and visit with you myself. And every day I'll see father and the rest of them at the old place. And I'll have so much to tell mother and Louisa that they'll think I'm making it up. And Louisa's baby—oh, Charlie, it will be just too sweet for anything! I shall ease as if I'd been born over again!"

"And if we find a silver mine in the back yard we'll board it up," said he.

"I'd look pretty."

Unlashed Secretaries.

"I don't see why Mr. Stubbs wasn't willing to lend Willie Porter the $200 he needed to get that business opportunity in Nashway," said Mrs. Compton to her husband on her return from the sewing circle. "Everybody was talking about it this afternoon, and Mrs. Porter feels real hard to Mr. Stubbs."

"Folks have lent money to Willie Porter before this and never seen the color of their money again," said Mr. Compton, "and Mr. Stubbs made his money by hard work and saving. He'd hate to lose a mile of it."

"He wouldn't lose a mile of it," said Mrs. Compton indignantly. "Willie's been unfortunate, but so have some others now and again. Do you recollect your fancy squash investment? Well, anyway, this time Willie had extorted security to offer, and he was willing to pay back 2 per cent at the end too."

"What security?" asked Mr. Compton, not deigning to refer to the rate of interest offered.

"He offered Mr. Stubbs two dozen silver teaspoons and a ladle," said Mrs. Compton. "Impressively," besides a feather box and a seal plink coat and a sewing machine that runs the easiest of any in this town. I don't know what he could have wanted more than that, I'm sure."

grocers. On the importation of molasses they had a request. In Barbados they have been manufacturing during the past year what is called there a syrup, but what is here known as fancy molasses. Barbados has been unable to compete with Porto Rico in the past. But now the Barbados people seem to have struck what they want. It has been called a by-product of sugar. It is made by stopping the boiling of the syrup at a certain point and preventing crystallization by a chemical preparation. It is molasses, but will come here under the name of syrup. A shipment is on the way here now, and the question will come before the customs very soon. The grocers ask for a ruling. Immediately in order that trouble may not arise.

Mr. Paterson—You can always get out of it by paying the duty.

The grocers continued, that if it was molasses it would, of course, be free, and if syrup, they wanted it made free anyway. It is a very fine article, the best ever brought here from Barbados, and better than the ordinary Porto Rico, though perhaps not better than the highest grade Porto Rico. It will be sold here at molasses.

When the first shipment arrives, the matter will be considered by the board of customs, a sample of the shipment being offered.

The grocers also asked that such worthless things as the packages or imports be made free.

Mr. Paterson—Will you pay more on the goods, and have the packages free? Mr. Malcolm—We don't want that particularly, but it seems foolish to collect a tax on worthless packages.

A specific duty was asked on onions and seeds—all seeds—instead of an ad valorem rate, as at present. The reason for this is that the prices go so high that these articles become very expensive at times. The rate need not be higher than that of the other commodities, but it should be a number of packages of every consignment must go to the appraisers' office for examination. This means extra charges for truckage. The department pays truckage to the customs house, but the importer has to send there for the goods.

Mr. Fielding—But haven't you been doing this for years.

Mr. Malcolm—Oh, no. Only for a year or so.

Mr. Paterson—It has been the law for thirty years.

Mr. Malcolm—Then it has only been covered lately.

Mr. Fielding—You have got off too easily for twenty-nine years.

Mr. Paterson thought common sense might be exercised by the officers in all such cases.

Mr. Paterson suggested putting a duty on tea put up in lead packages. This would increase labor in Canada, in blending, packing, printing and labelling. Much of this labor is done elsewhere. Lead packets are required here but are not made in Canada. They might be put on the free list. This packing can be done, and is done, in Canada under existing conditions, but more of it would be done if the packets were admitted free.

Mr. White said there seemed to be a difference in the treatment of ad valorem and specific duties as applied to fruits, etc. The idea of the government seems to be to encourage direct importations. They asked that the tariff be changed so that currants, raisins, etc., now subject to a specific duty, should not be open to competition from United States exporters who, under the laws of that country, are enabled to hold stocks in bond and send them in here at any time that suits the market.

TARIFF COMMISSION.

The word plait was not clearly understood by collectors throughout the country, and that braids are admitted on the free list. He would suggest that a duty of say 20 per cent be put on plaits, to be the thing uniform. St. John people pay a duty on braids which through errors of judgment elsewhere are admitted free.

Mr. Fielding—Then we would have the wholesale military men after us.

Mr. Brodeur—Hat manufacturers are asking more protection, and also that these things you speak of be free only to manufacturers.

Mr. MacFarland—Well, many of us consider ourselves manufacturers. In our hat making room we employ at times as many people as in a small factory. However, I ask only uniformity.

Article 361, damasks, cotton or linen. This is the title, but in the section itself only damasks of linen are mentioned. This is evidently an error. Cotton damasks, if treated as damasks, will be subject to the same duty as others, but if treated as cotton the duty should be reduced. The customs officers have given higher duties in the cases of both white and colored cotton damask. A correction in the constitution would make it clear, but that all should be treated alike.

Mr. MacFarland also wanted uniformity in the duty on table covers, bed and metal ornaments, sheets and pillow cases, Mr. R. & C. would prefer to have the preferential clause retained on cloths and dress goods, applicable to qualities not made in Canada. Those qualities are the ones mentioned by dry goods men in Montreal.

Mr. Paterson—But it is clear that not qualities of goods made in Canada which take the place of those you would put under the preference clause?

Mr. MacFarland—This is a hard question. The preference clause possibly act against the manufacturers, but on the other hand these qualities of goods find a market here and are not made in Canada. Again, I would favor putting silk crepe de chine and perhaps even catagones on the free list. They tend to promote a great deal of business.

Mr. Fielding—That is a good reason why they should pay something.

Mr. MacFarland—No, it isn't. It is a tax and the revenue the government should come from the business done.

Mr. MacFarland was referring particularly to linoleum catalogues. Silks and ribbons for neckties are subjected to a 40 per cent duty. This is high. If the manufacturer furnished evidence of the amount of stock used, they should be granted a rebate.

Mr. Paterson—The duty on these ribbons and silks was 20 per cent, and the German surtax 10 per cent more. English manufacturers imported German stock free, made their neckties and got them in here at 23 per cent. John Keefe of the Jas. Robertson Co. and E. A. Everett, secretary of the Importers' Association, appeared. This asked that the affidavits made by importers be simplified; that a duty be not imposed on plaits; that a duty be not placed on cheap copper; the same regarding cotton waste; a specific duty was suggested for linseed oil; that 3 per cent, trade discount be allowed off window glass; that all steel for special manufacturing be made free; that the department end with a strong appeal that the preferential rebate apply only to goods from British ports, in British bottoms, and brought in through Canadian ports.

It was shown that the price of linseed oil varies so that the importer half of the time don't know the price of the stuff they are paying ad valorem duty on. The department claims that the 3 per cent discount on window glass is a cash discount, not trade. No longer terms are given on window glass than 60 days, and this calls for the credit price. Messrs. Everett and Keefe argued that on 60 days this 3 per cent would not be a special dispensation, but the request about free admission of steel brought on a lengthy discussion, and it was feared that if this were granted greater abuses would spring up than under the present arrangements.

J. J. Donovan and W. J. Bambrick of the Cigar Makers' Union appeared. A resolution of the local union was read, which in its first paragraph set forth the views of the cigar manufacturers that the duty on cigars should be 20 per cent. It went on to say that Canadian tobacco is so poor and the cigars made are so cheap that a living wage is not afforded the men who make them.

The existing excise stamps are a protection to the buyers, and should not be changed. Canadian tobacco is not yet properly grown or cured. It may be made to equal United States tobacco in time when Canadian farmers are educated to the business of growing and curing. The cigar makers think the duty on imported cigars, now about 700 p. c., is not high enough. They would make the rate $4 and 25 p. c. added. Canadian men can make, with Havana tobacco, as good cigars as are made in Havana.

Mr. Brodeur wanted to know if the blue stamp, marking the foreign cigar, were retained, would people not still favor that stamp and would not the steady demand for Havana cigars be detrimental to the union? The men admitted that this might be so, but they would still advocate keeping the present four stamps till Canadian tobacco is good.

Mr. Brodeur—But you men using foreign leaf must be able to make as good a cigar as in Havana. Why then do you want to keep these excise stamps, which tell people not to have faith in our labor? Smokers ask for imported cigars. They can always avoid buying the domestic article by looking at the stamp.

The men argued that if the duty on imported cigars were put high enough, Canadian workmen would have a largely increased business.

Messrs. Donovan and Bambrick work in Isaacs' foreign factory. They are using imported tobacco, on piece work, paid by the thousand. In the combination factory girls are employed, paid by the week. There is a big difference in the wages.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—The reluctance of winter to make itself prominent in this section is still apparent. There is no snow on the ground and it still has an October appearance. The cold weather has been unusually moderate. In fact it looks as if all had over-lapped January and if such is the case it is probable there will be little spring until May. In the Dorchester district several marsh owners cut their hay and hauled it to their barns last week. The high tides freshened the grass and made it as good as if it had been cut in the fall.

SEND TELEGRAM TO MINISTER In Connection With Withdrawal of Sydney-Halifax I. C. R. Train. HALIFAX, Jan. 11.—In connection with the order which has been issued cancelling the afternoon express of the Intercolonial Railway between Halifax and Sydney, the council of the Halifax Board of Trade today ordered that the following telegram be sent to Hon. H. R. Emmerson at Ottawa: "The proposed withdrawal of the fast Sydney train is strongly objected to by the commercial public of Halifax. The interruption to business is to make any possible financial advantage to the department of minor importance. We trust you will reconsider the order and maintain the present service."

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS... FOREIGN OFFICIALS ATTEND TSNANFU, Jan. 10.—The ceremonies of opening Tsnanfu, capital of the province of Shantung, to foreign trade today were attended by many Chinese and foreign officials. The invited American guests present included consular officials and representatives of prominent mercantile companies. The boycott does not exist in Shantung province.

GOVERNMENT IN SESSION... CHINESE IN THE TRANSVAAL. One cannot very well see how the Earl of Elgin's memorandum on Chinese immigration into South Africa justifies the fury of those who attack it. The introduction of Chinese labor in the Rand mines was admitted to be an experiment. Some 48,000 Chinese had been imported when the order was issued, and arrangements which were allowed to go into effect had been made for bringing at least 15,000 more. Meanwhile the number of Kafirs at work has increased from 75,000 to 96,000 and it is recalled that the Chinese were brought in because the Kafirs could not be had. The colonial office does not interfere with anything that has been done. It only orders that further importation shall cease pending consideration of the question. Steps are to be taken to learn what public opinion is in the Transvaal Colony. It is proposed to extend the privilege of the government and at the end to transfer to the people of the colony the responsibility of settling the Chinese question. We can hardly see how such a decision should produce a revolt in the Transvaal. The people will hardly resent it in that way the concession of the right to govern themselves.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS. Mr. Jas. Phillips, president of the York County Loan Company, and also of several other corporations, has been arrested on a charge of conspiracy. The information against him sets forth that the accused conspired with others to defraud the public by deceit, falsehood and other fraudulent means. The report of Mr. Cross, the auditor, who examined the York Loan Company's accounts, seems to substantiate the charge of misrepresentation. It is clear that the statement of assets given out to the public in the annual report was not true. The investments in real estate were concealed or disguised as investments in the subsidiary companies. Advances of money were made in which Mr. Phillips was interested and not made known, and the report may be described generally as deceptive and misleading. Whether these misleading statements were designedly fraudulent and whether Mr. Phillips has committed the statutory offence with which he is charged are matters for the courts.

RECIPROCITY IN THE WEST. The subject of reciprocity with Canada is beginning to interest the people of the western states. It is noticed that Canada is receiving large migrations of farmers from Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, and other border regions south of the line. A country which can attract good settlers from so great a country as the United States must be reckoned with as a commercial factor. One western writer, having considered the whole question, contends that it is a better business to get into good trade relations with Canada than to go on negotiating commercial alliances with the Latin republics of the south. St. John is the home of only one bank, but it is one which pays good dividends. The earnings of last year give the shareholders of the Bank of New Brunswick twelve per cent. dividends, and adds to the rest amount a sum sufficient to have paid five per cent. more.

FATAL APPENDICITIS Hampton Girl Died in Hospital Yesterday as a Result of Accident. Last Wednesday. (From Friday's Daily Sun.) The death took place at the Public Hospital yesterday of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Perkins, eldest daughter of George Perkins, of Hampton station, as a result of injuries brought on during a coasting accident. The injuries were received on Wednesday of last week at Hampton, while the young lady, who was seventeen and a half years of age, was coasting with a number of friends. Dr. Wetmore, who was called into attendance ordered her removal to the hospital in this city. When brought here and after hearing the story of the accident, the doctors decided that the young lady was suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis for which an operation took place on Saturday. The operation was thought by the doctors to have been successful and all thought that she was doing well, when a sudden change took place for the worse about five o'clock Wednesday night, after which she slowly sank. Besides leaving her father, who is broken down at his loss, one brother and two sisters survive. The remains were taken up on the five o'clock train last evening and the funeral will be held on Saturday at Hampton.

CANADIAN FORESTRY. Next to the farm lands of Canada the most valuable of the natural resources of the Dominion are the forests. The timber now standing in the country is an asset of incalculable value. At last year's meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association Mr. J. C. Langelier read an elaborate statistical report which was an attempt to show the extent and value of the standing timber in his own province of Quebec. The figures which he presented are so large as to induce a paralysis of the imagination. In the northern region there is much black and white spruce, fir and poplar, balsam pine and cedar suitable for pulp wood and railway ties, and 55,000,000 superficial feet of saw logs. In the central region he estimates 93,000,000 feet of soft wood saw logs, with much hard wood and small timber. The southern region contains 12,000,000 feet of soft wood saw logs. Altogether Quebec is represented as offering to the axe 155,000,000 feet of soft wood logs, 21,000,000 feet of hard wood, 745,000,000 cords of pulp wood, 730,000,000 railroad ties, with cedar poles for electric wires and quantities of shingle wood. The value of this wood to the government, according to the scale of stumpage dues in Quebec, is placed at $451,000,000. This is an estimate for one province. It may be too high or too low, but it seems to be carefully worked out. Doubtless a large portion would not be considered available, on account of its situation and distribution. But there is no doubt that the Canadian standing timber which is now or will before many years be within reach, would be sufficient for all Canadian purposes and for all reasonable export demands if half the care were exercised in preventing destruction and waste, that is given in Germany to the timber of that nation. The time need never come when native lumber should be scarce or dear in this country. There is no other part of the world to which nature has made such an ample endowment of forest wealth. It may also be said that no country in the world is getting rid of its heritage with such reckless disregard of the future. Forest fires, nearly all of which are preventable, lay waste areas large enough for a European kingdom. Not only all the timber now available in these areas is destroyed by these fires, but all that would have been available in the next half century is swept away, and in many places the soil on the hill sides is left after a season's rain and wind peeled to the bare rocks, a scene of desolation for ever and ever. In some places the lumberman or the farmer is only a little less destructive than the fire. He regards the wood or the timber lot as one crop to be harvested, but never to be followed by another reaping. A Nova Scotia lumberman looking out over one of the richest and most prosperous farming regions in the province told the writer that the land in sight would be worth more in the market if it had remained in the original forest. Yet there are hundreds of thousands of acres which might have been good forests and are now bare of timber and almost useless as farm land. The generation which regarded a tree as the enemy of man has hardly as yet passed away. The movement represented by the Canadian forestry association now in session at Ottawa represents a great reformation. It is stated in the constitution of this society that its objects are "the preservation of the forests for their influence on climate, fertility and water supply; the exploration of Score Crushed and Burned To Death in a Landslide.

Seven Tenements Hurlled Into Pit 100 Feet Deep—Ruins Caught Fire and Dead and Living Were Cremated.

HAVERSTRAW, N. Y., Jan. 8.—At least four men are believed to have perished in the landslide which carried several tenement houses down in a clay pit here last night.

Undermined by the shifting clay that had been softened by yesterday's snow fall, those who were sleeping in the score sleeping occupants toppled over the brink of the pit and crumbled to pieces.

The landslide occurred on Rutland street in the east end of the town where two blocks of houses are supposed to have been undermined by workmen digging clay for brick making.

When the final slide came it came so suddenly that those who had lingered in their houses had absolutely no opportunity to escape.

When the neighbors rushed, half clad, from their houses the buildings close to them had disappeared.

SHIPMAN'S NEW SCHOOL OPENED.

Exercises Were Held on Monday Evening—A Fine Building, Suitable for Consolidation Plan.

Shipman's fine new school building was formally opened on Monday evening. The building is one of which the people responsible for its erection have every reason to be proud.

Senator King presided on the occasion of the opening, and gave an interesting address. He was followed by Hon. L. P. Farris, T. B. Kidner, provincial director of manual training; Inspector Steves, Rev. Mr. Clarke and Rev. Mr. Brown, pastor of the Presby- terian and Baptist churches, respectively.

The school is not a consolidated school as yet, but it has been made large enough to accommodate the pupils from several of the surrounding districts, and consolidation is hoped for in the future.

MURDERER HANGED; DECLARED INNOCENT.

HEARTFORD, Jan. 9.—Frank Sherris was hanged at the state prison at Wethersfield shortly after midnight for the murder of Mrs. Kulas. The drop fell at 12:45 and at 12:52 Sherris was officially pronounced dead.

Speaking of the execution, Warden Garvin said it was the most successful one which has ever taken place at the institution. There was no hitch or delay in the proceedings. Without a word Sherris walked to his place on the scaffold. He made no farewell speech, and his last words were those uttered before midnight, when he declared his innocence of the crime of which he had been convicted.

The body will be buried this morning in the prison graveyard.

One of the last things which Sherris did was to make a will leaving to his two sisters in Russia his estate, which consisted of $110 in cash, a watch and several trinkets.

Frank Sherris was convicted of the murder of Mrs. Kulas by the Toland county superior court at Rockville, May 4, and the murder was committed four months previous to that date. He was arrested on Jan. 9 of last year.

Sherris killed the woman by striking her on the head with a hammer as she was washing dishes. He then robbed the house. It was a coincidence that a Mrs. Shipplier, who kept a Polish boarding house here, was murdered last fall in the same manner. Sherris had boarded with Mrs. Shipplier and afterward went to Mrs. Kulas' place to board, but at the time of the Kulas murder he lived in Hartford. The motive for both murders was robbery. No one saw the crime in the Kulas house, but several persons in the village identified Sherris as the man they had seen leaving town on that afternoon, and the evidence against him was made conclusive by the finding of a number of Mrs. Kulas' trinkets in his effects. Sherris' defense was a general denial, and his counsel carried the case to the supreme court of errors, but a new trial was refused.

Sherris was to have been put to death on October 31, but a respite was granted by Governor Roberts on the request of Nicholas Lodygensky, the Russian consul general at New York, who was interested in the case by Russian officials in this country.

An attempt was made to introduce new evidence, but this was not successful and no petition for a new trial was filed for the prisoner.

Sherris was 30 years old and came from Russia, where his two brothers fought against the Japanese during the late war.

STEAMER WRECKED ON SHELburne COAST.

The Richard Filled With Water and Sank—Crew Saved.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 9.—The str. Richard, commanded by Capt. Hickey, bound from Port Hastings for Yarmouth with coal, is a total loss on the rocks on the Shelburne coast. The crew were saved. The Richard left Port Hastings on Saturday. Yesterday afternoon she encountered thick snow squalls. These proved her undoing for she was swept far out of her course and struck the eastern breaker off Cape Blanche at two o'clock in the afternoon. The steamer rapidly filled with water and the crew took to the boats. A heavy sea was running and it was with the greatest difficulty that they reached the shore, where they were taken care of by the hospitable fishermen of Cape Blanche. Today the steamer lies prostrate on the rocky bottom with only her bow out of water, and she will soon break up. The Richard was built at Sorel, Quebec, in 1890, and was owned by the Richard S. S. Co., of which Jas. T. Burchell is president and C. W. Hackett managing owner. She was insured in the China Mutual for eight thousand, and Lloyd's for seven thousand dollars. The cargo was insured by Young and Lowry of Sydney, agents for Lloyd's, for seven- teen hundred.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT TO YOUNG SURVEYOR.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 8.—Fred McGillivray, second son of Judge McGillivray of Antigonish, employed on the surveying staff of the Halifax and Southwestern railway, met with a terrible accident a week ago at Port Mouton, which will probably cost him his sight. He was engaged sawing out holes in the rock that had filled with ice. In one of these holes, unknown to the men, was a charge of dynamite. This exploded and young McGillivray was frightfully injured, particularly in his eyes. He was brought to Halifax and a consultation was held this evening. The doctors decided to remove one eye tomorrow and they have only slight hopes of being able to save the sight of the other.

The court house that is being erected to take the place of the Old Bailey, London, will have all the modern improvements, including, on each floor, a series of dining and refreshment rooms, not only for members of the bar, but also for the general public having business in the courts. A number of smoking rooms will also be provided.

TERRIBLE PAINS ACROSS BACK SUFFERED EIGHT MONTHS WITH KIDNEY TROUBLE, WOULD HAVE TO STAY IN BED FOR THREE DAYS AT A TIME

Doan's Kidney Pills CURED HIM. Mr. Thomas Fitzgerald, Hazelden, Ont., writes us as follows: "I was a great sufferer from kidney trouble for eight months. I had terrible pains across the small of my back. I would have to stay in bed for three days at a time and could not do any work. I tried several remedies but to no avail. One day a neighbor of mine advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I was so much discouraged I told him I was tired of trying remedies, but he urged me to try one box so I purchased one and before he was through using it, I found a change for the better. I got five boxes more, and I have had no trouble with my kidneys since. I would not be without Doan's Pills in my house."

There has been made by these insurance companies a very prodigious use of money, but the people that have been administering them are not babes in finance, and appropriations have been made with as much deliberation as regard to results. In fact, $50,000 has been contributed to the campaign treasury of a political organization the contributors did it with a view to "spoiling" the election.

Now, I can have no objection to a man being a legislator, provided he is a man of integrity, and that is the only word that in my opinion is applicable to the transaction in "graft" money laid down with a view to special privilege of immunity in return—and when in a quiet way, clandestinely, the assets of the corporation are practically all poured into the hands of a corporation with a view to a corporate contribution, he is in spirit doing what a police captain does when he puts his hand behind his back and stands with one palm in the pocket of the donor and the other in the pocket of the corporation.

THE DEATH OF PRESIDENT HARPER

President of Chicago University Passes Away. CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—William Rainey Harper, LL. D., president of the University of Chicago since its inception in 1857, regarded by many as the foremost Hebrew scholar in America, and equally renowned as educator and business man, died today of cancer of the stomach. Although his death was known to be inevitable, within a comparatively short time, the end, owing to physical exhaustion, came suddenly. He was 69 years old.

PRESIDENT HARPER.

Three years ago Dr. Harper underwent an operation for appendicitis. Cancerous symptoms followed recovery from this operation and on February 22, 1906, an operation was decided on to determine the cause of severe abdominal pain. Dr. McBurney of New York, came to Chicago for the operation, in which he was assisted by Drs. Billings and Bevan of Chicago.

The X-ray treatment was used in the effort to afford him relief and everything was done for him that the ingenuity and skill of his physicians could do. He died at 12 o'clock on Monday, January 9, 1906. His death was sudden and unexpected. He was 69 years old.

WITTE REBUKES REVOLUTIONISTS

Says He Was Forced to Adopt Harsh Measures

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 10, 1.40 p. m.—Premier Witte today made a statement to a delegation headed by the mayor of this city which requested a relaxation of the orders of the prefect of police against meetings in the interest of the electoral campaign. The premier could not promise to do anything until after January 12. The premier spoke bitterly of the failure of the moderates to give the government support, saying: "The emperor in the manifesto of October 30 at one stroke granted the people more rights than any monarch had ever before given, but you know the attitude which Russian society assumed. The government's appeals for confidence were rejected and every liberty granted was abused by the revolutionists. The permission to hold meetings was translated into license for street disturbances and assemblages to plot against the life of the government."
