Mr. Fisher submitted the results of a number of investigations made in this connection. The investigation showed that at Goderich, Ginton, Port Dover and other towns the census figures of 1891 had been padded from one to more than three per cent. As to arivals in Canada, 11,000 more settlers came into Canada during the five years of the present government than during the 15 years previously. Lt. Bruce Carruthers, who, along with a section of the second Canadian Mounted Rifles distinguished himself on March 31st, is well-known in Ottawa and Kingston, where his family resides. Carruthers enlisted as a private in "D" company of the first Canadian contingent to South Africa, and, was closely associated with the Ottawa boys with whom he was a general favorite. He was always a cool, unconcerned fellow and cared nothing for danger. His magnificent stand is not at all a surprise to those who know him in-timately. He was one of those men who would sooner die any day than give in and be conquered. Doubtless he had a section of men with him, who were of the same spirit and under his command it would certainly be a case of do or die Shortly before enlisting with Col. Evans, he was married. But many who are under salaries have to travel from one end of the province to the other, instructing the farmers in dairying, so that the opposition were unfair in attempting to lead the country to believe that there was no return for the salaries paid. The attorney general had been charged with taking too much from the province in the matter of the Eastern Extension claim, but it was a small sum compared with the services rendered. He felt that there were some measures he should criticize. Too much game protection was not, to his mind, advisable, as the game was overrunning the country and it was not necessary to restrict hunting, thereby decreasing the forests if the leases were made perpetual. He did not approve of the government's policy in regard to steel bridges. In his opinion contracts should not be awarded outside the province.

Hon. Mr. Hill said Mr. Flemming had complained of the small amount $35,000 expended in the interests of agriculture. In dealing with agriculture members lose sight of the fact that the greater portion of the grant for great roads and bridges is really expended for the benefit of the farmers. When speaking of traveling expenses it must be borne in mind that included are the traveling expenses of the different officials in the crown land department and in the department of public works. The individual expenses of the heads of departments are thus not as heavy as the opposition would lead the public to believe. The opposition while charging extravagance are continually making demands, he said. Taking it all

If there has been an increase in the salaries of the departmental staff four times as much work is being done. But ince. The mineral and agricultural developments were unparalleled and could not very well be criticized. Regarding the temperance question, he might say he was a far greater around for work is being done. But have the salaries in departmental offices increased? Take the crown land office. In 1877 the salaries paid totalled $10,218 and in 1901 $7,708, showing that although the revenue has grown thereby entailing a far greater arount of work the expension. the revenue has grown thereby entailing a far greater amount of work the expenses in the crown land department were about $3,000 less. The following is a summary of the salaries paid in the crown land office from 1877 to 1901 inclusive: 1877, $10,218; 1878, $10,149; 1879, $10,591; 1880, $9,800; 1881, $10,230; 1882, $9,429; 1883, $10,360; 1884, $8,381; 1885, $8,393; 1886, $8,406; 1887, $7,509; 1888, $7,512; 1889. 1886, $8,406; 1887, $7,509; 1888, $7,512; 1889 Mr. Burns.

The same thing was true with regard t possible for the leader of the opposition to point out where the administration in this department could be improved. This this department could be improved. Hon. Mr. Tweedie, in closing the debate, said the charges put forward by the opposition had already been ably met. The bigh total in which the debate had been unable to point to point the mand say it was not correct.

The opposition are willing to attack any industry if they think this will assist them to come into power, it is for this reason that they are attacking the lumber industry. Among Dr. Stockton's 18 charges were charges with the lumber industry. years, and compared this government with its predecessors. Such a practice can result in no good. A government can only be judged by its own acts and it is no argument to compare the present with the past. Conditions have changed, the country is progressing, day by day we have new discoveries and new inventions and the government must keep pace with the developments in all departments and increase the expenses whether they wish it or not. It is unreasonable to say that arguments of the opposition if it had not have been for the smallpox, the washouts and the royal visit, the surplus would point out a few things. An attempt has been made to deprive them of credit for the sale of bonds on which so much money was saved to the government. It was pre-tended that because our bonds are not saleable now we deserve no credit for would have had to be deducted if the bonds had been sold in Eng-land. Shortly after our bonds' did not receive more than 94. The result of the sale of our bonds at 3 per cent was to save $8,000 over the first offer, so that the whole sum saved by the government for the province by this sale was equal to $6,000 when the bonds matured. The opposition press accused the government of not getting enough out of their lumber lands. In 1896 the lumbermen refused to allow the sale of lands which had not been applied for. The government advertised the lands for sale, the lumber men threatened the government particu-larly himself, as the representative of the North Shore constituency. But we remained firm, we held that these lands should not remain idle so we put them up for sale and realized over $25,000 beto protect the interests of the province. Last summer they vacated a sale where the lumbermen had made a combine and was pursued with reference to the sale of

When men by the thousand are credited with earning the suspense were to carry off the product? Ask the business men of the place and they will tell you it sounds fishy.

At the risk of making government reports ridiculous, we call the attention to the fact that eight fishermen in Smith's Cove captured fish to the value of $27.951.25 or about $3,500 per man. But Gulliver's Cove is still better with $3,787 per man. What lucky fellows!

AROUND THE TOWN.

That boys are the fathers of men is as true as most of the wisdom of Solomon. And they soon get the paternal air too. I met a little chap of 14 yesterday who had been to Montreal and I led him to talk to me of his impressions of the commercial metropolis of Canada. Nothing averse he gave me his opinions with the freedom of 41 rather than 14. "A fine city, rather," he remarked with the judicial impartiality of maturer years and greater experience. "But dirty, very dirty." In fact much the dirtiest city in Canada," he continued with the air of one familiar with all the towns between the Atlantic and Pacific seaboard. I ventured to suggest that the Windsor was a fine hotel. "Well do you know, the Windsor is not at all sthat it used to be." This latest verdict of the youth sounded so much like the mature judgment of years of experience, that I regarded him with the respect due one of great age. That boy is the father of himself as he will be at 60.

Feminine curiosity has been written about until we are all of us inclined to believe that the fair sex are possessed with, more than their share of that mquiring disposition which is the mother of knowledge, and the grandmother of wis dom. But I noticed a little incident his week in the Union station that led me to discount the stories of feminine curiosity and to wonder at this latest sample of feminine ignorance and faith. She was a trim little woman—the kind in fact that makes a man desire to be a helponate if her only, were fortunate enough to have anything about it, but, if my friend with a face that smiled through a sparkle of gritty grime.

Laboriously the hobo wormed from out the box, and as he strode away—a flutter of rags flapping dust he jerked a thumb toward the box, and as he strode away—a flutter of rags flapping dust he jerked a thumb toward the box and said: "Say—it was cold there."

I heard a pretty good story that was newer to political questions than he is today. The story jet of canada if the Grits should by any misfortune, come into power. He was ma

She was a trim little woman—the kind in fact that makes a man desire to be a helpmate it he only, were fortunate enough to have had an introduction—not devoid of sense but with a feminine helplessness under conditions strange to her. She had a large parcel wrapped in brown paper, evidently a framed picture. The express for Montreal had just arrived from Halifax and as she walked through the station 1 presumed she was a passenger for that train. She walked down by the train looking for someone. When she arrived at the rear car she spied the friendly face of the colored sleeping porter—walking up to him she handed him the big parcel and said something which I could not hear. He remonstrated, but it was no use she was bound to have her way. I drew nearer to satisfy my masouline curity and heard the following dialogue: "It's no use, missus, I can't take your picture and leave it off at Welsford."

"Why, not, Mr. Conductor, you go past that station don't you?"

"Yes missus, but I'm not an express man Why didn't you have the express company call at your house, get the picture and deliver it at Welsford."

"Well now, I never thought about that Knew it had to go by train and thought some one would be good enought to leave it off for me when the train got to Welsford."

matter of advance, partly because of light receipts caused by bad weather and the continued heavy exports. Shipments are 600,000 bales alead of last year. The crop in sight is now 9,300,000 bales, so that minimum estimates have been definitely retired. Hog products, though helped by light receipts of hogs on some days, are rather easier, lard being lower on the week. Business failures for the week number 176, as compared with 183 last week, 188 in this week last year. Bank clearings for the week ending with April 3 aggregate $1,963,763,483, a decrease of 5 per cent. from last week's total, and a decline of 22 per cent. from a year ago.

No signs of weakness are to be found in iron and steel. Bradstreets compilation of hog and beef prices points to the highest prices reached at this season of the year for more than 10 years past.

New York, April 4-R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade tomorrow will say of Canadian trade:

Easter holidays interfered with business at St. John by taking travellers off the road. Phere is evidence of an early spring, and prospects are bright. Holidays and colder weather checked trade at Toronto, but prices were firm and manufacturers busy. Trade is sirly active, but collections only fair at familton. Navigation has opened at Quece and a busy season is expected. Collections improve and a healthy tone prevails. unmer freight rates have accelerated the dovement of merchandise at Montreal, but ollections are not as prompt as in the two receiling months. A slight revival is reorted in trade at Vancouver, and building perations are stimulated by improve eacher, but money is soarce. Conditions returninged. Failures this week, 22, against last year.

CANADA'S SHOWING, FINANCIALLY, GOOD.

Returns for Nine Months to End of March-The Latter Month Particularly Good.

Ottawa, April 4-(Special)-The finan cial statement of the dominion for the nine months ending March 31, shows the revenue to be $41,351,818, an increase of $3,433,801 over the same time last year. The ordinary expenditure was $30,914-135, an increase of $2,286,523. The excess of revenue over ordinary expenditure was $10,437,000. Especially good reports come from the central west and the southwest.

High water in the Mississippi Valley has checked trade and the movement of cotton, in this respect acting as a stimulus to the price to that staple, which has also been favorably affected by the improved outlook in the New England mills, where increases in wages have been conceded at many points. The number of mill hands profiting thereby is placed at 60,000. About the usual spring unrest in the leading industries is noted, but the only important strike is that of the soft coal miners in Pennsylvania. Special promise of activity is held out this year in the building trades.

Chief Officer Turnbull.

The next witness was James Turnbul the next witness was James Turnoun chief mate of the Superior, who also had been examined before the pilot commis sioners. He thought if he was captain he would have taken the ship into her berth. As far as he knew a vessel coul dock in St. John at any time of tide.

The Third Officer.

G. P. Blake, third officer, stated heard the pilot give the order to port the thelm, and he saw the order carried out. The vessel shifted to starboard. He heard the captain afterwards say: "Steady, and hard to starboard." This brought the was not clear on other matters. When she took the ground, to the best of his knowledge, the vessel was going ahead.

The court then adjourned until 3 o'clock.

Afternoon Session.

When court re-opened every seat in the room was occupied and a large number of people had to stand.

Capt. Clarke of the Neptune.

Capt. Clarke of the Neptune.

Captain Thomas Clark, of the tugboat Neptune, was called. He said he held a master's certificate and was attending the quarantine officer on the day the Lake Superior went ashore. He went alongside the steamer after she struck. The tug Lord Roberts took a hawser from the steamer and witness took one from the Roberts to endeavor to tow the steamer off the mud. He has seen heavier freshets in the harbor than that running when the steamer grounded. The latter was nothing out of the ordinary spring freshet. The freshet does not go right straight down the harbor north and south, but branches round Reed's Point, about southeast. If a ship keeps in the centre of the harbor she should be all right, but if she keeps over towards the Ballast wharf she will sag off to the eastward. In the position off to the eastward. In the position the Superior was when he saw her—nearly side on to the current—he did not think any anchor would hold her. He thought the tide was runn including the ebb tide.

Capt. Stevens of the Lord Roberts.

Captain Frank Stevens, of the tug Lord Roberts, said he held an inland cer-tificate. He was about 100 feet from the Superior when she was coming up the harbor. He did not think she would dock then as it was too late on the tide.

Harbormaster Taylor.

Captain Charles Taylor, harbor master, Captain Charles Taylor, harbor master, saw the ship coming in the harbor and saw them let go the anchor about the southern part of the Government pier. The freshet was not out of the ordinary He should judge it was a six knot current at the time of tide. He did not think that all the steamers in the harbor could have docked her at that time of tide. It was proper to anchor the ship bor could have docked her at that time of tide. It was proper to anchor the ship then, but not at the place where the Superior's anchor was dropped, she was too far to the eastward and too far down the harbor. In the position that the ship was in at the time the anchor was let go he did not think that both would have have the way them.

The Second Officer.

James Moore, second officer of the Superior, held a master's certificate for 17 years; was on duty when they took the pilot; was aft when the ship went ashore, did not see the anchor dropped, and was not aware of the ship being ashore until shortly after she struck.

A. Nelson, carpenter, of the Superior, said he was under the forcastle head at the time of the accident; let go the anchor from orders given by the chief officers. He let go the port anchor when 90 fathoms of chain had gone out on the starboard anchor—30 fathoms went out on the port anchor—more would have gone out but the ship struck.

John McGowan, boastwain of the Su-perior, said he did not know how the ship was heading when she came up the harbor. He had visited the port more than a dozen times. In his opinion the than a dozen times. In his opinion the ship was anchored too far down. He did not know the ship was ashore; could not see, having been under the forecastle head. He saw the tugs trying to tow the ship off when he came up on the fore-castle head. The Superior steamed about

Julus LeBarre, quartermaster, was at the wheel coming up the harbor. Got an order from the pilot to port helm and later on got orders to hard astarboard the helm from the captain, before the anchor was dropped. Thought the pilot gave order to drop starboard anchor; he kept the helm hard astarboard when she went ashore. An Experienced Breeder Tells Just

Concerning the use of farm separators in connection with creameries Dairy Commissioner McConnell of Minnesota says: hand separator is a problem that we must wrestle with. The advantages of the hand separator are many, yet we seriously doubt, when all things are considered, whether they are going to drive away all the ills that the flesh is heir to. We must concede that the product of a creamery that depends upon hand separators is not as good; consequently it brings a less price in the market. This works an injustice to the dairyman who hauls his milk regularly to the creamery. This, however, can be reduced to a minimum by delivering the cream as often as the milk is required to be delivered. We can see no reason why cream should not be taken to the creamery as often and in as good condition as milk."

The point that Mr. McConnell makes relative to the delivery of the cream to the creamery every day is a very important one, says Hoard's Dairyman. Farmers who buy farm sep-arators will make no profit in the transaction if they hold their cream so ong that its flavor is injured and a loss ensues in the price of the butter.

Kansas Dairy Cows. Secretary Coburn of the Kansas state board of agriculture reports that the average yearly product of the Kansas dairy cow is $9.65. They have been mostly bred for beef or are the "dual purpose" cows which Professor Shaw so much admires and what we should call "scrubs" of no particular breed, giving a calf every year, a little milk and some cow beef when killed. Several creameries reported that the average amount paid patrons for the milk in the year was about $20 per cow. At the Agricultural college they had an average receipt of $37.75 per These were scrub cows. One scrub cow which they bought for $30 returned $60.88 for butter fat in 1898, which was $40.37 above the cost of her food. They were well fed and well cared for, of course. One trouble with scrub cows is that they usually get the scrubbiest kind of food and care, which makes a mighty poor combination. Canadian Cheese Producers. The cheese markets show no improvement, though exports so far this season show a falling off of over 260,-000 boxes, writes J. W. Wheaton of Ontario. From 81/2 to 87% cents were the ruling figures at the local markets last week. On the other hand, our butter exports show a large increase, over 155,000 packages this season to date

(Dec. 20), as compared with the same period in previous years. Choice creamery is selling at from 20 to 21 cents per pound to the export trade. If this dition of affairs continues, cheese will no longer be king in this country, but butter. No Canadian trade is more hopeful today than that of export but-

The successful dairyman knows pret ty accurately just the ratio of milk production of his herd for each month of the year, and he will furthermore ascertain the relative amount of milk and cream given by each individual cow. It is absolutely necessary that the record should be kept, and then intelligent methods can be adopted for diminishing the falling off of milk in fall and winter. Unquestionably the food problem is at the bottom of this falling off, but we have found out that by artificial methods of feeding we can to a large extent correct this. The cow that has a good winter's supply of ensilage, roots, hay and grain is not apt to fall off much in the quality or quantity of its milk. But the question of feeding the winter cows with good | it a thorough trial. milk producing food is also one of expense. No dairyman could fail to prepare a winter diet that would keep the supply almost up to the standard of the summer if he chose liberally of all the foods in the market. But the most costly foods are generally those which give the best results. Consequently we are hampered in finding the best re-

Large and Small Cows There are those who are very zealous for the large cow. It has been stated that they necessarily require more to keep them; also that a cow's food either produces milk, fat in the milk or on her back, says E. Van Alstyne, superintendent of the pan-American dairy test. The following will be interesting in this connection: The Holstein cows Meg and Inka Mercedes weighed 1,362 and 951 pounds respectively. The former ate $34 worth of feed and made 282.84 pounds (estimated) butter, worth $70.71, or 900.61 pounds solids, worth $81.05; the latter ate $32.37 worth of feed and made 288.34 pounds (estimated) butter, worth $72.08, or 943.43 pounds solids, worth $84.90. Meg gained in weight 101 pounds, Inka 72 pounds. In this case the large cow ate but $1.63 more feed, yet for it gave $3 less value in her butter and $5.48 less in her solids and had only 29 pounds of meat to her credit, worth, at 3 cents per pound, 87 cents. What did she do with her feed? Get Rid of Poor Cows. If you have an unprofitable cow, the sooner you get rid of her the better. It is a losing business to feed a cow that will not pay for her keep. their feed.

SLOPPING HOGS.

How He Does It. A writer wishes that some one would invent a cheap way to mix slop, and John M. Jamison discusses the question as follows in National Stockman: He speaks of having 175 hogs on his farm to care for this winter when feed is high. Now, if he puts slop for these through a barrel or tank, mixing it in that way before he gives it to them, I do not wonder that he wishes for a cheap mixer. He also finds a V trough a wasteful one. The use of this trough I have in the main discarded on account of the waste from it. I find after many years' experience in handling slop that the pig is the best and cheap est mixer. But the mixing by the pig cannot be done in a V shaped trough without too much waste. The right kind of a trough for this is one with a flat bottom. Ten inches wide is about right, with the sides four inches above the bottom of the trough, making them any desired length. I have them from 3 to 12 feet long; 6 to 8 is long enough, as they are easier to handle. For ease and convenience in doing the work the pigs or hogs should be fastened out of the lot while the feed is being prepared in the troughs. The troughs should be as nearly level as possible before the feed is put in. Put in the amount of dry feed required and then pour over it about an equal amount of water or kitchen and dairy wastes. Then open the gates and let the pigs to the troughs. If hearty and properly fed, they will make no quarrel with their owner because he has not mixed more labor with the slop. They do the mixing in an earnest and rapid manner and waste little, if any, feed. With the feed in a V trough very much of it will be worked over the sides of the trough and lost. I do not know any way that the labor of preparing slop can be reduced below this, nor do I know any way to prepare it that will make it more acceptable to them. If the troughs are clean straw or cornstalks under themwith straw and stalks, there is no need or reason why the slop troughs should become filthy. During winter or doubtful weather the troughs should be turned upside down after feeding; then they will not have to be emptied of water or snow. mate to make that no protection against the changing weather adds 25 per cent to the cost of feed. Protection cuts down the cost of feed. How to keep up growth and shorten the feed expense should be the leading point this winter. At the same time it is well to remember that just sustaining the animal without gain is a throwing away of the feed given.

perience says: There is nothing that pays quicker returns than the low cost for the improvement to be made in hogs. Considering the offspring you get from a pure bred boar at the price for which he can be bought, you cannot afford to use a poor grade boar at any price. The trouble with the greatest number of farmers through this section of country is that they will, for instance, start to breed Poland-Chinas, breed them a few years, get these hogs up to pretty good stock and perhaps see a bunch of Duroc-Jersey red pigs that have done a little better than theirs (had some better care, perhaps). so they buy red boars to use on the Then next year they see a sows. bunch of Berkshire pigs that take their fancy, so they buy Berkshire boars the next time, and after they follow such breeding up for a few years they have got nothing but some very common, undsirable and ununiform swine. Any of the leading breeds of hogs is good if it is kept straight bred and the stock is not changed to this, that and the other every few years. If a man sees fit to change it, it is better to change both sire and dam; but, at any rate, stick to any breed long enough to give

A record of the coupling should always be made so as to be sure when to ook for the pigs. The average period of gestation is 112 days, and sows will rarely vary more than three to four days from this. The sow should be separated at least a week before the igs are expected and put in comfortable quarters. If it is cold weather, the pen or house should have no cracks through which the cold wind could blow on the pigs. The bedding should be short, and, while sufficient to make a warm nest and to keep the pigs from the hard floor, it should not be overabundant, as if so there will be some danger of the little pigs being overlaid. writes Waldo F. Brown of Oxford, O. May and June Pigs.

On farms where cattle are fattened for the market pigs farrowed in May and June will be large enough to follow the cattle the next winter, and the exnense of wintering them will be greatly reduced, and by keeping them in the feeding yard with the cattle on the waste straw and corn fodder it will be made into fine manure, ready to apply to the fields the following spring and

Pigs in winter take a great deal of care, and one of the greatest cares is to keep them in a dry, warm place. They must be fed different feed from what they get in summer time. They do not require the same amount of feed in summer as in winter. Pastures in summer furnish very much of

CHEMICAL WEED KILLING.

Arsenate of Soda and Carbolic Acid the Leading Destroyers. 'A subject of growing interest is that of the possibility of successfully fighting weeds with chemicals. It is told that as long ago as 1895 it was found at the Vermont station that the orange hawkweed, a serious pest in pastures and meadows, could be destroyed with out injury to the grass by sowing salt over the land at the rate of 3,000 pounds per acre. At the same station other chemicals afterward tested for the eradication of weeds in walks, drives and courts have been salt, copper sulphate, kerosene, liver of sulphur, carbolic acid, arsenic and sal soda, arsenate of soda and two commercial wood killers, the active principle of which apparently was arsenic. The weeds which it was sought to destroy were plantain, dandelion, chicory, ragweed, knotweed and various All the chemicals were applied in solution except the salt. As in the case of the hawkweed experiments, salt was found efficient in destroying all the weeds when applied dry and in large quantities.

When salt is used for this purpose adjacent lawns should be protected against washing, or they may be in-Crude carbolic acid, one pint in four pints of water, applied at the rate of eight gallons per square rod was very efficient. The various arsenical preparations proved valuable as weed destroyers, and choice between them was largely a matter of expense.

All things considered, the arsenate of soda and the carbolic acid solutions proved the most valuable chemicals for weed destruction under the conditions of these experiments.

Supplying Queens In Spring. Very often, especially after a severe winter, some colonies will be queen-less in the spring. If no brood is found in the hive when other colonies have an abundance, it is not much use to hunt for a queen in that hive. 'Give them a frame of eggs or young brood from some other hive, and queen cells will be found in a few days. It is best, then, to unite them with some other colony having a good queen, or if the colony is a very strong one and of enough value a queen may be purchased from the south and introduced.

Queens can be safely sent by mail in our northern breeders have commencthe way a colony with such a lively young queen will build up will surprise any one who has not tried it. The other day, Dorothy came in with an ne a chance to show my curiosity by ask ing who it was from, she burst out breathlessly: "Hurry up, Polly, and get on your things! We're going out to West Newton, and we've barely time to catch the 10 15

"Why, what - -" I began. "I've got a note 'rom Sara, and she wants as to come out to lunch and to spend the lay with her. Hurry up!"

Now, Sara was one of us girls until she eft us to be married, and she had returned from her wedding trip and settled in the cosey home but two months before. Dorothy and I had been out to pay our first call time talking about it, but slipped into my and we were off for Trinity Place station.

Well, when we got to the station, Sara as down to the station to meet us in her trap, which was a luxury her father had insieted upon her keeping. "Hop in, girls," she said briskly; "I've got you out here to show you how I economize. I hope you had a good square meal before you came away, for I haven't much besides crackers and water. If Dorothy is going to be mar-ried so soon she will need all the lessons in conomy she can get."

The little house was as cosey as could be, and Sara explained that the reason they could afford to live in such aristocratic

I won't begin by describing Sara's pretty and artistic little home, for I shall tell you about that some other time. As Dorothy aspected the rooms from attic to cellar, she said: "Why, Sara, dear, your house is in perfect taste; I always thought people who economized used hand painted churn for scrap baskets and barrels for easy chairs, with the remains of an old ball dress frilled around the seat, and dressing tables made ut of packing boxes, draped in pink cheese cloth.

"Oh, no, not always," laughed Sara. "But I'll tell you some of the things 1 do conomize in if you like. "My dressing table is draped with the remains of my old point d'esprit gown, and the sash curtains in the bath room were once gallivanting around at the beach on me, in the shape of that white dimity gown you used to so admire."

Dorothy gave a gasp of astonishment. 'Then you really do use the kind of makeshifts one reads about in the Sunday papers?" she said.

"Well, yes, 1 suppose I do; and, Dorothy, you'll find after you get to keeping house that those same Sunday papers are a mine of information worth digging into. For instance, if you have something that is of no use to you and you don't know what to do with it, write to the home page of the Sunday Post and they'll tell you how to utilize it; or if you want to know how to make somethi g you haven't got they'll tell you how to get it. while as for recipes, there isn't a cook book in the uni erse that can give you all you want, so I've found I can economize time and brain work by writing to the Sunday Post, to the cooking department, and asking for the particular repartment, and asking for the particular recipe I want; I always get it, and it's really a tremendous help. But to return to our mutton; did you notice all those lovely rugs in the ball and up-tairs? Well, we didn't want to buy a lot of cheap rugs, and still we had to have some to use. We have the Smyrna and Persian rugs for the parlor and den, and shall get the others as we have the spare money. In the meantime those soft rugs in the browns and red and green shades answer admirably and are quite artistic." They don't look at all cheap, I'm sure,"

said I.

"Well, but they are," said Sara, "and when I tell you that they were made from three or four discarded carpets which mamma had stored away in the garret for years, you will be surprised, won't you? There is a firm in Ohio who advertise to take old carpets and make them up into rugs in any ize and fashion you desire. They ravel them all out, cleanse the warp and reweave them as you see these here. One carpets ix when I am married, I mean to do just as you are doing and help my boy save every It's great for taking off every vestige of lint and gives a brilliancy second to nothing."

We found that Sara had begged all the old sheets and pillow cases and linen of ev ry description from her mother and her aun's "to practice on," as she said.

There were many other things to interest us and to talk over, and before we knew it it was nearly lunch time.

Sara left us in the pretty parlor, while she fied on a white apron and went out into the little kitchen to prepare the luncheor. She did her own work; having a woman and had not seen her since, so I wasted no come two or three times a week to aid her in the hardest, for, as she said she had third best waist and jumped into my coat started in to be economical, she thought that the best way of beginning.

When she called us to luncheon she explained that she had been arranging an object lesson in domestic economy for our benefit. The delicious cream of chick-n soup had been made from chicken bones, the accumulation of a week, and which she had let simmer all the morning. A half cup of cream was added, and a little celery salt, and it was thickened a trifle and strained. With it were served dainty bread sticks, which had been baked that morning with the bread.

The next dish looked as delicious as i proved to taste, and when we complimented quarters was that Tom's father had said | Sara upon it she said: "Why that's only that he thought if Sara relieved him of the responsibility of looking after his boy the ner. We had it boiled, and I first made a least he could do was to furnish them a border of the mashed potato around this place to live in. "Which accounts," said di-h, then made a white sauce of half a Sara, "for the surprising rapidity with pint of boiling milk, three ounces of butter I put a layer of this in the bottom of the lish, then sprinkled in some flakes of the fish, then so on until my dish was full, sprinkling over the tops some grated cheese, which happened to be the rind of the last piece we bought."

> "Well if this is economy," said Dorothy between mouthfuls, "then I shall pray to e economical."

Next came another left over in the shape of fried chicken, Italian style. Sara ex pained: "This is the other half of the chicken we had for dinner last night. The water it was boiled in had been seasoned with an onion and a small dash of sherry, which gives it the bouquet Then I fried it for us, in half a gill of olive oil with a bit of salt and pepper and a little minced onion. After it turned to this golden brown, I added a cup of the stock from which the soup was made, to the oil in which the soup was made, to the oil in which it was fri d and thickened it with how to do that dish."

The salad was composed of the calery

the repast.

Then Sara showed us her pantry, and the way in which she utilized everything. There were glass jars of bread crumbs, some browned and rolled fine, to roll oysters and croquettes in for frying, and another jar held cubes of stale bread browned and cut into croutons, with still another jar of zwie back, all ready for serving with soups when ever wanted.

The pleces of stale cake were carefully put away in a tin box r ady for a cabinet pudding, and on one side was the stock pot, into which all the bits of meat and bones were thrown. Everything was taved, even to the tiny bits of soap which was collected in the soap shaker that hung on its nail over the sink.

captain agreed that the vessel was to be moored instead of docked. He stated that vessels had been more or less dam aged by being docked at that time of tide. If he took the ship to the dock at that time he ran a risk of breaking in the bow of the steamer St. Hugo or the Manchester liner's bow, lying at the face of the wharf, the space of the slip being orly 200 feet wide.

Captain Wished Pilot Cline.

In conversation at the Island the captain said he would give $10 out of his own pocket if Pilot Cline was on board, as he would go into the dock, and I said that Cline or no other Cline would go into the dock. That was all settled out side and we came in with the understanding to anchor. It was high water that after an one at 3.40 o'clock and consequently low water in the vicinity of about 10 o'clock. The ship could dock at low water slack or high water slack.

At 4 o'clock the dector came aboard and 4.10 o'clock we weighed again and after turning, proceed the dup the harbor. I did not hear any conversation regarding the docking of the ship at that time. At 4.45 o'clock the bell buoy was abeam of us. The pilot then gave orders to have the anchors ready. At 5 o'clock I was told to let go the starboard anchor. I got the time from the starboard anchor I was fold to pay out chain and 90 fathoms was paid out altogether. I was not looking for the position of the ship at that time. I was looking toward the bridge and hadn't time to turn round when the starboard anchor was gone. She was not going ahead when the anchor was let go, and when sufficient chain was out it was then across the stem and remained there.
