LEGATIONS STILL HOLD OUT.

Chinese Are Battering the Walls and Rescue Is Far Away—Impossible to Move From Tientsin.

London, July 8, via Skagway, July 10.—Couriers arriving from the seats of the Southern Chinese provinces give vivid but fragmentary reports of the scene which have been enacted in Peking since the outbreak of the Boxer anti-foreign demonstrations.

They report sickening stories of cruelty and barbarism on the part of the rebels. Processions have paraded through the streets bearing spears upon which were impaled the heads of legation guards, while a continuous chanting of "Death to foreign devils," accompanied the march.

Still Holding Out.

London, July 8, via Skagway, July 10.—Up to the 20th of June the foreigners in Peking were still holding out, although under a heavy fire. Among them are a dozen women and children. The former are reported as starving, having given their small rations to the children. There is but little food and the ammunition of the garrison is about exhausted. All the foreigners are now within the enclosure of the British legation; but it is believed they cannot hold out as the Chinese were battering the walls when the messengers left.

To Kill All.

London, July 4, Skagway, July 10.—Prince Tuan has issued a manifesto to the Chinese in which he says that since some foreigners have been killed, all should be killed.

Impossible to Move.

London, July 4, via Skagway, July 10.—The commander of the allies at Tientsin has informed the correspondents that it would be suicidal for him to attempt to reach Peking with his present force. There are altogether 12,000 troops at Tientsin and 8,000 at Taku and intermediate points, but it has been barely possible to maintain communication. The troops have been fighting incessantly against overwhelming odds. The enemy has an abundance of artillery which they are using effectively. Admiral Seymour has been badly wounded.

George Butler has departed from the city on a trip to the outside. He will come back with a winter's supply of exhilarating fluid for his Pioneer saloon.

After working hard on a lay for a number of months on 44 below on Bonanza, and completing the cleanup, C. M. Van Cleave is in the city for a few days' needed rest and recreation.

M. A. Piska, of Sargent & Piska, leaves today for Whitehorse to help rush through an immense stock of goods, which are now at that point awaiting the guiding hand of someone to start them on their way down the river.

J. F. Colton and Mr. Simmons, owners of the Fortmylie coal mine, are registered at the Flangery. They are here to arrange for the transportation of coal in sufficient quantity to supply Dawson during the coming winter.

Things are quiet among the knights of the green cloth these days, but Bonfield smiles and looks happy. He is enjoying a fine business at both ends of his house. The bar is doing particularly well, owing to the high class goods which are being dispensed.

Since the discharge of the coroner's jury that sat on the case pertaining to the body which was supposed, but not then proven, to be that of Ligeia Olsen, one of the victims of the Christ-mas-day murder, it is said that sufficient new evidence has come to light to justify beyond all doubt the assertion that the body was that of Olsen.

SARGA IN COURT

For Preliminary Hearing on a Charge of Murdering Louis Ballois

THE SECOND OF JULY LAST YEAR

On Last Chance and Where the Two Men Were Partners.

CHARRED BONES IN COURT.

History of the Case—Ex-Constable Allmark's Good Work—Sarga's Arrest and Confession.

The preliminary hearing of John Sarga, for the murder Lewis Ballois, on the 2nd of July, 1899, was commenced in the Police Court yesterday.

This case by reason of a rather odd combination of circumstances, presents a sharp contrast to the usual speedy justice meted out in criminal cases by territorial courts. In the early part of September, 1899, a miner coming in from Last Chance creek reported the discovery of the charred remains of a human body in the ashes of a cabin which had been burned, and that murder was evident by the condition of the skull, which had been crushed by some blunt instrument.

The police then took the inquiry in hand, and Jimmy Allmark, whose sudden departure from scenes that knew him well, but recently left grief in the hearts and a light feeling in the region of the pocketbook, worked diligently, like a good constable, to discover who the murdered man had been and who the murderer was, also his whereabouts. This diligence brought out the facts of identity in both instances, and the probable direction taken by the assassin. The surmise that John Sarga had gone Nomewards proved correct, and to this fact is due all the delays which have intervened between that time and the present.

Sarga was finally arrested at the mouth of the river, but as it was too late to communicate with Dawson that season, he was taken to Victoria, where he was turned over to the authorities, and in the end weakened and confessed his guilt. Thereupon the agents of the minister of Justice telegraphed Crown Prosecutor Wade and a warrant for his arrest on a charge of murder was forwarded. Then followed more delays. Owing to the U. S. law which forbids a foreign posse bringing a prisoner over U. S. territory, without first going through with certain formalities, it was late in the season of travel before Sarga reached the other end of the Yukon, from where his arrest had taken place, and it was deemed advisable to hold him in Bennett till the breaking up of the river.

About ten days ago he reached here, and yesterday his hearing in the police court was commenced.

Carl Henz was called and testified that he knew both the murdered man and the prisoner; that the former had worked for him, and just previous to his death had been paid off by witness some eight or nine hundred dollars in dust. When last seen by him Bellois was in the company of Sarga. They had taken a lay together on Bonanza creek, and were about to start for the claim. Bellois had spoken to witness about some wood which he wanted to sell, and said he would return in about three weeks. When he did not put in an appearance at the end of the time, witness had been suspicious that all was not well, as he had known Bellois long and had never known him to fail in keeping his word. He suspected Sarga because he knew of the dust Bel-lois carried, and because Sarga owed him for meals, and had had no money for some time previous, and also because Sarga was in town and evidently had money to gamble with.

The prisoner, who is a Greek with very limited understanding of the English language, was asked through an interpreter, if he wished to question the witness. Even with the aid of an interpreter he seemed unable to comprehend what had been said by the witness, or the fact that he was at liberty to ask any questions he wanted to but not to make statements.

Sarga is rather under the medium size, slight, very dark in complexion, and with a countenance which shows little or nothing of what he may be supposed to feel. Imagine a man looking on while the bones of his victim, lying before him, are being handled, parts of them examined and identified, and yet showing no more interest or emotion than a grindstone or a graven image. Yet that is what John Sarga did yesterday in the police court.

When it was found that the prisoner did not understand the proceedings sufficiently, the case was postponed till Wednesday afternoon, when it is expected the services of a more practical interpreter can be secured.

With an Eye to Business.

A Dawson man who can fully appreciate a joke, even when it is on himself; tells a good one on how he was worked for an easy mark by a Dawson merchant who keeps at least one eye open for business. The story is this:

The man entered a shoe store and asked for a pair "just like those when new," at the same time held out a foot on which was a well worn shoe.

"Let me see dot shoe," said the merchant. The shoe was removed from the pedal extremity of the wearer and handed to the merchant who held his nose while he examined it. "Yes," he exclaimed, "I haf dot very shoe; but, mine vrend, here ish a shoe vot you vants," reaching at the same time for a box on the shelf.

"I want a shoe just like the old ones were when new, or I don't want any," exclaimed the customer.

"Let me see dot shoe some more," said the merchant, and again the old shoe was pulled off and handed over for inspection.

"I haf dot idendigal shoe rount in der varehouse; shoost wait here unt I vil go after the very pair vot you vants," and the merchant darted out with the old shoe in his hand, leaving the customer on one foot like a chilled buff cochon-rooster.

In the course of three-quarters-of-an-hour, having visited all the shoe stores in town until he found the shoes wanted and which he purchased at the usual discount to merchants, which is right and proper, the accommodating shoe dealer returned with the very shoes wanted. The merchant said something about "dot varehouse ish so jammed full ov goots ash to dake me von hallut ov an hour to do nuddings."

The customer got what he wanted and had no kick coming—in fact, he had stood so long on one leg he couldn't kick; the merchant had supplied what was wanted, hence everybody was satisfied.

Will They Bloom.

A number of good housewives in the city a short time ago when the summer sun got down to business in good shape, planted sweet peas and have since been watering and nursing the tender shoots, with the greatest care. Now that the weather has turned cooler and the green tendrils are not growing so rapidly as before, these same housewives are now beginning to look upon their plants with doubt and discontent, as they fear that by the time their sweet peas are ready to bloom, mercury will have gone down into the basement for the winter.

Strathconas Under Fire.

London, July 5, via Skagway, July 10.—The situation in China entirely overreaches news of the Transvaal war in importance. The latest important news from South Africa is that the Boers in disjointed companies are still carrying on the struggle. The Strathcona horse has met its first baptism of fire. One trooper was killed and Capt. Cooper is missing.

Total casualties in the war to date, according to published official reports amount to 29,706.

Klondike Corporation Expanding.

McDonald Potts, manager of the Klondike Corporation, came down on Wednesday evening's train and received here yesterday a cable from the directors of his company in London, authorizing him to contract for from three to five new steamers of a capacity to make the run from Dawson to Whitehorse in three days. Mr. Potts yesterday wrote to a ship building firm in Victoria for specifications.

While here yesterday Mr. Potts ordered Agent Copeland to purchase in Skagway new spring mattresses for the three steamers the company is now operating.—Alaskan.

TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1900

ANOTHER AUTOCRAT.

In spite of the desires of the people of this community expressed time and again by resolutions of public mass meetings and through the public prints, and in direct opposition to the votes of a majority of his colleagues, Public Administrator Clement has seen fit to block the open sessions of the Yukon council and practically to bring the machinery of the local legislative body to a standstill.

In assuming his position of obstructionist, Mr. Clement merely says that he is not responsible to the people of the Yukon territory and therefore refuses to be bound by their wishes. It appears also that he is equally irresponsible as regards his colleagues in the council, their majority vote having no effect upon him.

There has been at various times a great deal of talk in Dawson respecting agitators, demagogues, anarchists, professional mischief makers and what not; but none of these characters is so dangerous to the welfare of a community as men of the Clement stamp. Owing to the absence of two members of the council Mr. Clement's presence is required in order to provide a working quorum. With this knowledge he affects to dictate to the balance of the council the terms upon which they shall meet and transact their business. In his own estimation he is greater than the people of the territory, and greater than the council of which he is a member. He has suddenly become a little Caesar, too consequential for the small orbit in which he has heretofore moved, a man marked by destiny for greater things, called for a mission, so to speak—that mission being to teach the presumptuous people of this territory that they have no right to make suggestions to their rulers.

To our way of thinking this new autocrat should be summarily removed from every position of responsibility he holds under the government in this territory. He is too great a man to deal with such small affairs as those which concern the Yukon. He should be transplanted to a broader sphere of action, and the earlier this is done the better it will be for all concerned.

The situation in China appears more serious by the dispatches today than at any previous time. Apparently the multitude of Chinese fanatics have been worked up to such an extent that there will be no suppressing them without a display of considerable force. There is no argument that can be brought to bear in such emergencies except the argument of cold steel and leaden bullets. Even a Chinaman can appreciate the force of such logic, but it must be brought to bear in sufficient quantities as to leave no doubt of its meaning. The lives of foreigners which have been taken in the Chinese capital and elsewhere through the rebellious districts should be revenged if the powers are compelled to land forces of half a million men in the Flowery Empire.

The new postoffice building is making rapid strides in the direction of completion. According to the terms of the contract under which the building is being constructed, the successful bidder must take up the work at whatever stage it may be when the contract is finally let. From present indications the successful contractor will be lucky if he has an opportunity to give the building its last coat of paint. The main point, however, is to get the post-office built, and it must be said that the building is being hurried toward completion with the most commendable energy.

If the river continues to drop as it has been doing during the past few days the question of transporting freight to Dawson will resolve itself largely into a proposition of scows. The rate at which freight is piling up at Whitehorse makes it necessary that the steamboats shall be able to carry their full capacity if they succeed in bringing down anywhere near the amount that will be piled up before the close of navigation. If the boats are unable to carry their capacity, scows will have to be resorted to again as was the case last year.

Every time a half ton shipment of gold dust is sent from Dawson to Seattle via St. Michael the Seattle papers have a brand new story to tell about the wonderful richness of the Nome beach and the tremendous quantities of dust that are being taken out. It would be interesting to know just what proportion of Klondike gold has been sent from Nome to the Seattle and San Francisco assay offices. It would be some what difficult to determine this accurately, but we are of the opinion that if it were done the result would be somewhat surprising.

Less than six months hence will see the dawning of the 20th century. Various prophets have foretold the end of the world in the first year of the new cycle, while others have pictured the different nations of the world engaged in a final struggle for supremacy. More than likely it will prove that the prophets are false ones in both particulars, but it does seem to the casual observer that conditions are about ripe for a general shaking up among the powers.

A Foolish Suggestion.

It is certainly owing to lack of information that the government has ordered the transmission of even second-class mail to Dawson via the outside route, St. Michael and the lower river, as at this season of the year all classes of mail coming to Dawson via Skagway will reach here from 20 to 30 days earlier than if sent around by St. Michael.

The Skagway Alaskan very foolishly advises persons on the outside directing mail to Dawson to write "via Skagway" on the envelope. When the government contracts to carry mail by a certain route the private instructions of the sender are wasted on the desert air. Mail is forwarded by the route dictated by the postal department of the government and not by the instructions of the sender. The words "In haste," which many rural letter writers put on the envelopes are never instrumental in expediting their transmission an hour or a minute. After the address is made plain on a letter, all side suggestions to the mail department are useless.

Taylor and Cardinal Again.

The preliminaries have been arranged for the 25 mile race between Taylor and Cardinal spoken of in yesterday's Nugget. The agreement was signed in the Aurora last evening, and the forfeit money placed in the hands of the stakeholder, Thos. McDonald. The conditions of the race are these: The race will be a go-as-you-please 25-mile match, for $2500, the gate receipts to go to the winner. The race is to take place Saturday, the 14, and $500 of the money is now up, the balance, according to the terms of the agreement as signed last evening, $2000, must be in the stakeholder's hands not later than 24 hours before the starting time set for the race. The referee will be selected one hour before the race starts.

Both men are in splendid condition, the recent six day go and its attendant daily four hours' hard work having acted on their condition beneficially. Both are also confident. Cardinal, while he has made some fast races, and bested some very speedy men, does not himself know his best time, as he very innocently remarks, "No one ever told me the time." He has beaten both Snake Child and Deerfoot, who are said to be the fastest Indian runners of Eastern Canada.

Taylor's best time was made 12 years ago in Washington, when he covered 37 1/2 miles in four hours. The record for 25 miles was lowered this summer in New York from two hours and forty-one minutes, to two hours and thirty-nine minutes and some odd seconds.

Taylor is now 12 years older than when he made his best record, and is now 42 years of age, so he does not expect to equal it. The race, however, promises to be a hot one.

Chas. Barbour of Grand Forks represents capital on the Taylor side, while Sam Hourie stands for the wealth behind Cardinal.

Among spotting events which may be mentioned as future possibilities, is a ten-round go between James Barbour and any two light-weights, (one after the other on the same evening), who may see fit to try conclusions with him. There is said to be from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars ready for such a go.

Reduced Fares.

It has been said that the price of tickets from Dawson to the outside cuts no figure, for that when people get ready to go out they go regardless of price. What happened here yesterday flatly contradicts the above theory; as when it became noised abroad that passengers would be carried first-class to Whitehorse for $25, many persons who had not calculated to go outside this season put their houses in order, packed their grips and were en route within 24 hours after hearing of the reduced fares. Both the steamers that left for up the river last night had every accommodation sold, when, as it is doubtful if the two together, judging from the amount of travel that way within the past ten days, would have carried a dozen passengers. Next to free excursions, reduced fares attract more patronage than anything else when it comes to travel.

It is Different Now.

For some time past the well-known and popular sour dough, Mr. Casey Moran, has not been the same man as of yore, having been troubled with rheumatic pains which persisted in playing hide and seek in his system. But within the past few days a wonderful change has pervaded the old timer, and the same old smile has returned. The change is due to the fact that a late steamer carried to the city a handsome young matron and a bright-eyed, laughing baby, Casey's wife and child. Hence the rejuvenation of the pater familias.

MORE ABOUT THE YUKON.

Hon. G. E. Foster Expresses His Views on the Matter.

Thinks That Immediate Representation Should Be Granted in Parliament.

In yesterday's issue of the Nugget was published extracts from the report of the proceedings of parliament of June 19, upon which occasion Premier Laurier stated that immediate representation on the Yukon council would be granted. At the same session the Hon. G. E. Foster delivered the following in support of Sir Chas. Tupper's motion to grant the Yukon immediate representation in parliament as well as on the Yukon council.

Mr. Foster said in part as follows: "If the Yukon territory had representation here at any time during the last three years, we should have had far more useful and reliable information in this house than we have had, and I think the course of legislation would have been quite different from what it has been. With regard to the number of representatives, that is a question to be arranged, but I do not think that the prime minister will know anything more as to the principal or expediency after two gentlemen have been elected to the Yukon council because they will be overshadowed by what you may call the official vote. They being only two out of seven. I want to call the attention of parliament to the peculiar methods of government which we have had in the Yukon for the last year. You have there a council made up of a possible six or seven members, everyone of whom is a paid official either of the department of the interior or of one other department of the government or the government as a whole.

"This council has imposed upon and gathered from the people of Dawson about $130,000 during the current year, and there is little doubt that the revenue will far surpass $250,000. The broad statement to be made with reference to that is that you have a number of paid officials of the department or of this government collecting over $250,000, and spending every dollar of it without one iota of responsibility. I think that is an anomalous condition of things, and I do not think any man sitting around these boards, if he were a citizen of Dawson and owner of property and a ratepayer there, would have lived in that city one month without making his protest, as strong and persistent as it possibly could be made, against that anomalous condition of things. There is no audit of that expenditure. Now, sir, the people of the Yukon have been holding mass meetings and making representations to the Yukon council to indorse petitions which they have passed at those meetings and the consequence is that the people have to sit by and see those expenditures, but not see them at close hand, for that council has been so autocratic that it has not only not allowed the public, but the public press, to have any access to its meetings or any report as to what has been done there. Now, I think that those people, reputable citizens of a free country, with their interest at stake have a grievance against the government of this country. What is the reason that the fact was not proclaimed immediately after its passage by this parliament? Not lack of protestation by the people themselves, for the people have been protesting, and protesting, and I have before me the papers which have been brought down and I find that after all their protests they have been unable to stir the department of the interior of the government, but at last they sent their petition to the governor general direct and the governor general sends the papers to the government with this remark:

"The above correspondence appears to his excellency of such importance as affecting the government of the Yukon territory, that he ventures to draw the consideration of the council towards it."

"I venture to say that if the people who had charge of these petitions in Dawson had not directed their petition directly to the governor general they would have been, without a reply and without action upon it up to the present time.

"The government they have up to the present time is simply a government by officials and autocracy. The duties of the council itself, mind you, are very broad; wider powers than those possessed by a municipal council are given over to half a dozen paid officials in the city of Dawson.

"In the collection of revenue this irresponsible council of half a dozen paid officials, without even an audit, have powers that are simply astounding. Because of the gross misuse of the powers that have from time to time been delegated to this council the people of Dawson City and district have been for the past year agitating in a perfectly orderly way and with great persistence in order that at least they might have some share in the local government at Dawson, and in the disposal of moneys which they themselves contribute.

"No one dare for a moment say that had the Yukon country and Dawson City an able representative in this house direct from the people any of those things could have been allowed to go on for a single year. Under the pressure of the people through the mouth of their representative the unsatisfactory condition of affairs up there would have been so shown up that it would have been impossible to allow it to continue.

"Under these circumstances I think we cannot delay one single moment in giving to the people of the Yukon an authoritative and representative status and place in this parliament by one of their own people, one from that country who knows that country; one elected by the people there; one who will be ready and able to point out to us, to every man on both sides, every one of whom I believe wants to do what is best for the Yukon, but for lack of knowledge and extreme conflict of opinion does not know what is best for that country. But one thing I am sure of, and that is, that an autocratic government of the kind I have described as existing in Dawson, is not the best kind for an intelligent people with such large money and property interests, a people who have made their homes in the Yukon, and who ought not to be kept out of their proper share of representation in this house. From 17,000 to 25,000 people in that district ought, apart from all other considerations, to have ample representation in this house if for no other reason than because of the great material interests that are involved."

Teaching Etiquette.

"Madam," he began as the door opened, "I am selling a new book on 'Etiquette and Deportment.'"

"Oh, you are," she responded. "Go down there and clean the mud off your feet!"

"Yes'm. As I was saying, 'ma'am, I am sel'—"

"Take off your hat. Never address a strange lady at her door without removing your hat."

"Yes'm. Now, then, as I was saying—"

"Take your hands out of your pockets. No gentleman ever carries his hands there."

"Yes'm. Now, ma'am, this work on et'—"

"Throw away your pipe. If a gentleman uses tobacco, he is careful not to disgust others by the habit."

"Yes'm. Now, ma'am, in calling your attention to thev'—"

"What. Put that dirty handkerchief out of sight and use less grease on your hair in the future. Now you look a bit decent. You have a book on 'Etiquette and Deportment.' Very well, I don't want it. I am only the servant girl. Go up the steps to the front door and talk with the lady of the house. She called me a downright, outright, no doubt about it idiot this morning, and I think the book you're selling is just what she requires."—Pearson's Weekly.

Objected to Flattery.

It is rare enough that the modern woman objects to a flattering photograph, but it happens once in awhile.

The other afternoon a strong faced woman of 35 or so, very plainly dressed, guiltless of stays apparently and wearing flat heeled shoes and other external evidences of female regeneration, strode into the reception room of an avenue photographic studio.

"I have come for my photographs," she said to the reception room young woman in a hard, matter of fact tone, handing over her ticket. The girl dug the photographs out of a big pile and pulled one of them out of the envelope to show to the customer. The strong faced woman looked at the picture with immediate dissatisfaction.

"Do I in any way resemble such a doll as this?" she inquired of the reception room girl haughtily. "This looks about as much like the proof!"

"Oh, but the finished pictures always look different—much better than the proofs, you know," said the reception room young woman, with rather a surprised expression.

"Do you suppose for a single instant, young woman, that I came here to get pictures that flatter?" asked the woman with the lined face. "Do I look like such a perfect fool as that? Where is there any character in it? Am I such a putty face? It makes me look ten years younger than I am. Where are the lines in it, and the—"

"But," interposed the girl behind the desk, "the retoucher has erased the lines. Most ladies prefer their pictures to make them look a wee bit younger and I am sure that none of them cares to have the crow's feet!"

"I am not ashamed of my wrinkles, young woman," was the frigid reply. "I acquired them in a good cause. I shall not take these photographs, and that's all there is about it. I shall have another sitting, and I shall have a distinct understanding with the operator that he is not to fatten and puff out and beautify my countenance in this idiotic fashion. The camera stamps me as I am, and I'm not going to have any lying portraits. I shall return for another sitting tomorrow afternoon." And the regenerated woman stalked out.

The reception room young woman took her gum from the place on the underside of the counter where she had stuck it, put it into her mouth and thought steadily for fully two minutes. "Well, she's just what my brothers call the limit!" was the conclusion she reached.—Washington Post.

Lost His Steamer.

The City of Seattle is a fast boat, but it is not fast enough to meet the desires of rapid travel that one John Hlditch has in his restless breast. John came out of Dawson with $8000 in dust. He had a partner with him, who also had some dust. They placed it in a stateroom of the Cutch and locked the door.

Then John came up town and by some chance bought a ticket on the Danube instead of the Cutch, and meeting another John whose second name begins with a B, he managed to get to the wharf a minute or two after the Danube left. On Wednesday he was one of the 340 passengers on the City of Seattle, in the hope of overtaking his gold.—Alaskan.

Heavy Machinery Coming.

Already heavy invoices of machinery are arriving in Dawson and it is said that thousands of tons will be brought in within the next three months. It is noticeable that the greater part of the machinery now coming is much heavier and larger than the average of last year's shipments. Demonstration has proven that one large thawing plant is much more effective and very much more economical than two small ones. One season's work has served to fully demonstrate the folly of attempting to operate a claim by light machinery.

Shortening Days.

There is now a decided shortening of the days at both ends, and zephyrs suggestive of early fall are now noticed in the evenings. In a few more days it will be necessary to keep your lamps filled and burning. Seasons in the Yukon advance in lengthy strides when the corner is once turned.

A NEW VAUDEVILLE CIRCUIT

To Open the Palace Grand Theater After Simons.

Two Comedies and a Farce at the Orpheum Theater—Eddie O'Brien and His Big Mitt.

The program at the Orpheum last evening contained two good things, which were featured as "A Rough Diamond," and "My Uncle's Will." Both are one act comedies, and exactly suited to the best talent of the Orpheum's company. The first named of these bits of fun represents Mr. Layne as Sir William Evergreen, a lover of good form, in the predicament of a man who has married a woman whom he loves, but of whose breeding and the situations arising therefrom he has a horror. Lord Plato, Evergreen's aristocratic, though somewhat verdant uncle, was well presented by Mr. Lawrence. The cream of the cast, however, fell to Miss Lovell, the rough diamond, and Mr. Breen, the uncouth country cousin, Joe. Lady Plato was played to the limits of the part by Miss D'Avara, and Mr. O'Brien appeared as Capt. Blenheim, another part which was crippled by the author for the benefit of the others.

The doting though fastidious husband is married out of love to Margerie, a rollicking country lass, whose innocent indiscretions drive him nearly insane, and lead to comparisons between his lot and that of his uncle, who has married a stately dame of his own class, and whose praises are being constantly sounded till one wishes she was a trifle less virtuous just for variety's sake. The unhappy nephew finally gets on to her one flirtation with the bold bad captain who is seen kissing the lady's hand with shocking abandon, and turns at once with renewed love to the rough diamond who is a little shy in manners but a pearl of honesty.

Miss Lovell and Mr. Breen are the centers of attraction and to them is due all the possibilities of the piece.

In the other piece Blossom carries off the part of Florence Marigold with her usual success.

The bill closes with one of Post's productions entitled "Hello," which goes with the usual accompaniment of general laugh which is always found lying around somewhere near one of his pieces.

At the Palace Grand the Dooleys made their bow in a trip to the old country, or rather just across the water from what might be supposed to be the land of their birth. Scenes and incidents peculiar to Scotland were portrayed by the company, which is supposed to be making a trip through Scotland.

Mr. Cassidy has a whole series of these living picture excursions, but they have been put up owing to the conditions of the country as viewed from a theatrical point of view, and have not been produced in entirety. The clan dances arrayed in kilts were well received by a full house.

Mabel Cassidy and Eddie O'Brien received their usual tribute of praise from the audience when they did some very artistic dancing, but the truest thing presented was probably done by O'Brien with altogether a different intent. When he made his appearance after the legitimate clan dancers had done a turn, he wore a suit of plaids which were wonderful in variety, and no Scot who ever lived could have told the clan which originated some parts of that make up. To add a finishing touch to the absurdity of the make up a large boxing glove was suspended from the waist instead of a regulation horse hair. When the audience saw him, some one remarked, "There's O'Brien out with the big mitt again," and people generally careless of their wealth began hiding their valuables.

It could not be learned last night just which evening would be the last of the Simons Company's engagement here, but sometime this week they will close here, as the contracts with the management call for Nome, and the company however unwilling the most of it may be to quit Dawson, will have to go.

The Palace Grand will be next reopened under the management of a new firm, O'Brien & Jackson, of Victoria, B. C. This company has houses in Victoria, Vancouver, Skagway, Whitehorse, and have added the Palace Grand to complete the circuit.

The new company will open here in about two weeks.

A New Deputy Consul.
By the departure of J. Q. Adams for Nome last night by the Rock Island,

Dick, his son, steps temporarily at least, into his father's position of Deputy U. S. Consul in Mr. McCook's office. Dick has practiced the happy smile and glad hand business of diplomacy till he has reached a promising state of proficiency. Mr. Adams, the elder, has gone on a tour of private investigation and will probably be gone about two months.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

In Capt. Scarth's court this morning the first case called was that of J. L. Hawks charged with peddling without a license; but as the court had learned that Hawks has a regular place of business, the case was dismissed.

A very intelligent elderly gentleman by the name of Ainesley was up on the charge of killing a moose out of season. He pleaded guilty, but stated that when he left to go up Stewart river nearly two months ago, the game law had not been published, therefore, he had innocently violated it. The case was dismissed and a permit issued permitting the old man to dispose of his meat in the Dawson market.

Wade Blaker allowed his temper to get the better of his judgment yesterday when he struck Matthew L. Foley a blow in the face, giving to his left eye a Chinese lantern-color appearance. Blaker pleaded guilty and paid $20 and costs.

When a man named Warner brought Flossie Winters to Skagway 2 1/2 years ago and put her in a dance hall she was a timid young girl who looked as though she was shocked at the life she had chosen. This morning she stood up in police court and listened to the charge of having robbed J. D. McIntyre of $350 in the Pavilion dance hall, where she is employed, without so much as a trace of a blush mounting her young but matured face. McIntyre, who is a merchant at Cariboo City, on Dominion, and according to his statement, came to Dawson on the morning of July 3, bringing with him $2418.60. He paid a lot of bills and on the morning of the 4th had $700 left. He "salted" down $690 and apportioned out $10 for spending money, carrying the $690 in a tobacco pouch. During the day of the 4th he drank some beer, Scotch whisky and soda, in all seven or eight drinks. In the evening between 10 and 12 o'clock he went to the Pavilion where he met Flossie Winters, who prevailed on him to dance with her; after reeling off a couple of "light fantastic" Flossie invited him into a box where they began to pop corks and drink champagne at $15 per bottle. After the first two drinks, according to McIntyre's story, he passed into a comatose state from which he was awakened by his friend, a man named Latham, who rebuked him for spending his money so freely. By this time Flossie had the "roll" that had been in the tobacco pouch, and McIntyre got it from her and gave it to Latham who joined two other friends of the festive McIntyre outside the box, and together the three men counted the money, finding it to amount to only $305. Attorney McKay who conducted Flossie's case, put McIntyre through a rather severe category of cross questioning, and the prosecutor finally admitted that he was too drunk at the time to have any lurid idea of what happened in the box. Latham testified that when he was in the box he saw Flossie conceal a $100 bill in her ostey-tostey stocking, and that during her stay she made two such movements, picking bills off the floor and concealing them in her hosiery. Flossie said she never touched a cent of McIntyre's money; that he had paid all bills, and that what she put in her stockings were the percentage checks given her by the waiter who carried the wine to the box; that she did not dance with McIntyre that night; that he was very much intoxicated, and that his friend Latham also acted like a man who was drunk. Owing to lack of conclusive proof, the court dismissed the case, but in going so took the occasion to remark that it was owing to lack of conclusive proof, for in the main there was strong ground for suspicion that the charge against Flossie was true. The court also warned all keepers of houses where women are allowed that they must protect their guests from robbery or suffer the consequences.

The labor cases against Ironmonger, Sola were again continued today, owing to the inability of the defendant, who is sick, to appear in court.

Should Be Patriotic.
M. S. Botelho is the happy father of a bouncing boy who has, so far as known the exclusive distinction of being the first child born in Dawson on the birthday of his country. He was born on the morning of the Fourth of July, which makes his parents, who are proud of their country, doubly proud of the young son.

Quickest Time This Season.
Mrs. McLennan and child, the family of J. P. McLennan, are recent arrivals in Dawson. Mrs. McLennan made the trip in in the remarkable time of six days and two hours from Vancouver. She came from that point on the steamer Cutch and made close connections all the way in from Skagway. The swift steamer Flora took the lady from Whitehorse.

TO ANNEX CANADA TO U. S.

National Continental Union League Now Formed

And Headed by ex-Member of Canadian Parliament F. W. Glen and Other Prominent Men.

New York, June 28.—One of the latest moves on the political chess board here is the formation of what is known as the National Continental League. Its founder is Mr. F. W. Glen, formerly a Liberal member of the Canadian parliament, who has called a meeting in the Astor house to elect officers. Mr. Glen announces that Andrew H. Green will be elected president and Paul Dana and Bourke Cochrane vice presidents.

The league is said to be based upon a "declaration of independence," which has been signed, so Mr. Glen announces, by Hon. John Hay, secretary of state; Hon. Charles Root, secretary of war; Hon. John D. Long, secretary of the navy; Hon. Charles Emery Smith, the postmaster general; Cornelius N. Bliss, Gen. Horace Porter, Chauncey M. Depew, Gov. Roosevelt and many other prominent men.

This declaration of independence asserts:

"We the undersigned desire that all peaceful and honorable means should be used to consummate the political union of the United States and Canada. In our opinion the time has come when it is desirable that Europe should cease to direct or control the political affairs of any portion of this continent; and we believe that such cessation will tend to unite all English-speaking communities throughout the world in one common effort to develop, promote, extend and defend constitutional government, and will be for the best interests of humanity.

"We earnestly desire to see the two great English-speaking families who now occupy this continent united under one flag, upon terms generous, just and honorable to both of the contracting parties.

"We firmly believe that the extension of the boundary of the United States from the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic sea, and from Newfoundland to Vancouver, will not only secure the rapid development of the practically unlimited natural resources of the whole continent, but likewise promote the happiness and best interest of the people, materially lessen the per capita cost of government and defense, and be preservative of the peace of both North and South America and of the world.

"We therefore unite in organizing the 'National Continental Union League,' having for its object the promotion of continental union by all lawful, peaceful and honorable means."

It is proposed to have a branch of the league in every state of the Union and in every province of the Dominion. It is no secret in political circles here that a most earnest effort is being made at Philadelphia to secure the insertion of an annexation of Canada plank in the Republican platform, and to make it one of the issues of the coming campaign.

River News.
The steamer Rock Island, of the S. Y. T. Co.'s fleet sailed early this morning for St. Michael. She was delayed from the time of her advertised sailing owing to a hand hold cover blowing out on her boiler, necessitating the cooling of her boiler to make repairs. Owing to the departure of the Sarah which sailed Saturday night down river passengers were scarce and but a comparatively small list was booked on the Rock Island; fully one-half of these are to land at Circle City.

The steamers Columbian and Lightning made a run up river starting last Thursday on a race to determine which boat of the two could show the fastest speed. It was quickly determined in favor of the Lightning, she making Selkirk 14 hours ahead of the Columbian and beating all records to Whitehorse; time, 3 days and 17 hours.

The steamer Yukoner was reported this morning to have passed Selwyn yesterday afternoon at 4:40. No advice has been received of her whereabouts since that time and it is feared she has got into some difficulty. The Lightning is now on her way down river, having left Whitehorse at 2 a. m.

The Flora left last night for up river at 8:15 with 71 passengers.

The Florence S., which was to leave last night left about 11 o'clock this morning. A considerable number of her passengers are booked for the Stewart river, where it is said a full fledged stampede has matured. There is some talk of a copper strike also at a point about half way up the river and two miles in the interior. The Flora carried up a party to look at the mineral which is said to be found in paying quantities at that point.

The steamer Sybil was in port this morning, being delayed by repairs on her engines.

The Gold Star may sail today for up river.

The dock being built by Tom Davies and W. B. Mead is assuming big proportions and when erected will be a splendid addition to the shipping facilities of the water front. It is constructed as though the owners meant to do business here for years and will safely carry all the freight which can be piled upon it. The dock will be covered with a building of galvanized iron.

Another boat from the lower river is expected to arrive at any time now as all the big companies have at least one on its way up the river.

The quarantining of the Ohio near St. Michael will probably prohibit the Empire line from making more than one trip up the river this season with its boats, as the Ohio cannot make connections with Seattle in time to load and re-ship up the river. At the time of her detention she was not carrying freight, having some 700 passengers aboard.

The Ora left Whitehorse this morning at 2 o'clock.

The steamer Eldorado is due to arrive tonight.

The weather at all points on the upper river is reported cool and cloudy. Average temperature 52 degrees.

JUST FROM DAWSON.

A Dawson City mining man lay dying on the ice. He didn't have a woman nurse—he didn't have one. But a comrade knelt beside him, as the sun sank in repose.

To listen to his dying words, and watch him while he froze.

The dying man propped up his head above four rods of snow.

And said, "I never saw it thaw at ninety eight below.

Send this little pin-head nugget that I swiped from Jason Hills.

To my home, you know, at Deadwood, at Deadwood in the Hills.

Tell my friends and tell my enemies, if you ever reach the east.

That this Dawson City region is no place for man or beast;

That the land's too elevated, and the wind too awful cold.

And the Hills of South Dakota yield as good a grade of gold.

Tell my sweetheart not to worry, with a sorrow too intense.

For I would not thus have panned out had I had a lick of sense.

Oh! the air is growing thicker and those breezes give me chills.

Gee, I wish I was in Deadwood, in Deadwood in the Hills.

"Tell the fellows in the home land to remain and have a cinch.

That the price of patent pork chops here is 80 cents an inch.

That I speak as one who's been here scratching 'round to find the gold.

And at 10 per cent of discount I could not buy up a cold.

Now, "So long," he faintly whispered, "I have told you what to do."

And he closed his weary eyelids, and froze solid, p. d. q.

His friend procured an organ box and e. o. d.'d the bills.

And sent the miner home that night to Deadwood in the Hills.
