THOSE DAMAGING TELEGRAMS.

On December 6th the Globe, in a fit of frantic terror, made the following confession:—

In the course of their former infamous operations, both in Algoma and Muskoka, the Conservatives villainously bribed the telegraph operators to steal for them copies of Government despatches...

Since that time the organ has repeated its guilty deed as follows:—

The Globe in its guilty treachery has let out the truth. Our friends are indeed in possession of copies of telegrams that passed between Mr. Mowat and Pattullo...

Even as the sound itself had made. In its last issue, a week after its first confession, and nearly a week after exposure of the true meaning of that confession, it gives out this:—

There were no such telegrams. The MAIL claims to have copies of them. The MAIL cannot have copies of them as it is not a party to the transaction...

Our morning contemporary in fighting very shy of a number of very delicate questions. It has abandoned, for instance, the discussion as to Mr. Mowat's notorious intrigue against Mr. Crooks in Oxford...

carried by our friends. The only remaining vote therefore upon which Mr. Mowat can rely is that of Algoma, of which Sir John Macdonald has been insisting almost to the pitch of murder the partisans whom he meant to betray.

MR. MEREDITH IMPROACHES MR. PARDEE. The Grit organ thinks that Mr. Meredith is a "weak man." Now it is not of much consequence, what the Grit organ thinks about Mr. Meredith, or indeed about anything else. But there may be some persons to whom a reply to such folly will be satisfactory.

MR. ROSS OFFERINGS. The organ thinks that Mr. Ross has done nothing of which an honorable man need be ashamed. Let us put a few plain questions.

MR. MOWAT SURRENDERS. By advice of undoubted authority we learn that Mr. Mowat has surrendered, without conditions, to the law which he has so long resisted, and admitted the irresponsibility of arguments which for two years at least he and his followers and organs have vehemently denied.

MR. PARDEE OIVES MR. MOWAT A WAY. In order that the facts may be given to our readers from the Grit point of view, we take the following extracts from the Grit organ's report of proceedings in West Middlesex on nomination day.

FOR LEISURE MOMENTS.

A Rural Reminiscence.

Old Farmer Withrow raised his head and said to his wife: "I have been thinking of you a good deal lately, and I am glad to hear that you are all well."

What I Declare?

"What is it that I mean by it?" "This is the best of the year," "They are going to do it," "I have been thinking of you a good deal lately, and I am glad to hear that you are all well."

Heavenly Blessings.

"My dear," said the saint of a young widow to her niece one day, "I have been thinking of you a good deal lately, and I am glad to hear that you are all well."

Why They Refused Him.

Captain Naglin had company and sent his little boy to the butcher's for a roast. The boy came back without the meat, and appearing in the drawing-room with the com-plaint on his face, said: "The butcher would not let me have the meat."

What He Would Say.

A husband and wife were talking grammar. "Would you," said she, "say scissors are scissors?" "I'd say scissors are, of course," he replied.

Why He Would Say.

"Why, love, I'd say the family was not well; that you had the grunts, that Tommy had a sore throat, that the baby had the colic, that Katie had the headache and that I was trying to make an average by being well enough for you."

He Wanted a Pass for Two.

A few days ago a man with a meek and humble expression and wearing a summer suit of clothes applied to one of the railroad passenger agents for a dead-head pass to Toledo.

Why do you want to go to Toledo?

"To get married," "And you have any money?" "Yes, about twenty-five cents."

He wanted a Pass for Two.

"Why do you want to go to Toledo?" "To get married," "And you have any money?" "Yes, about twenty-five cents."

TORONTO WHOLESALE MARKETS—WEEKLY REVIEW.

THURSDAY, Dec. 13.

PRODUCE.

The local market has not improved since our last report. Receipts have been small but apparently sufficient, as there has been very little inquiry heard for anything. Prices, however, have been fairly well maintained, the only decline being on some grades of barley, and the fall on wheat is insignificant.

Wheat, No. 1, per bushel, $1.00 to $1.05; No. 2, $0.95 to $1.00; No. 3, $0.90 to $0.95; No. 4, $0.85 to $0.90; No. 5, $0.80 to $0.85.

Barley, No. 1, per 48 lbs., $0.75 to $0.80; No. 2, $0.70 to $0.75; No. 3, $0.65 to $0.70; No. 4, $0.60 to $0.65; No. 5, $0.55 to $0.60.

Oats, No. 1, per bushel, $0.45 to $0.50; No. 2, $0.40 to $0.45; No. 3, $0.35 to $0.40; No. 4, $0.30 to $0.35; No. 5, $0.25 to $0.30.

Rye, No. 1, per bushel, $0.60 to $0.65; No. 2, $0.55 to $0.60; No. 3, $0.50 to $0.55; No. 4, $0.45 to $0.50; No. 5, $0.40 to $0.45.

Flour, No. 1, per barrel, $4.00 to $4.50; No. 2, $3.50 to $4.00; No. 3, $3.00 to $3.50; No. 4, $2.50 to $3.00; No. 5, $2.00 to $2.50.

MR. BEECHER ON THEATRES.

The Propriety and Advantage of Visiting Them.

CHANGE OF VIEW REGARDING ACTORS AND THEATRES

After Rev. Mr. Beecher had fully answered a young man's inquiry as to how the Trinity should be addressed in public worship, at the Plymouth church, prayer-meeting, a white-haired old gentleman in the front seat said that he desired to ASK A QUESTION. If it seemed personal or inoffensive he craved forgiveness. Amid profound stillness he read the following, but in so low a tone and so rapidly that one-half the large audience could only hear an occasional word —

"I have heard you state on one or more occasions, publicly, that you had never been to the theatre, at the same time advising others not to visit it. Some time since, I think you told me you went to see 'Pinafore,' which play, judging from the attention I received from church members, must have been a most edifying, attractive, and intellectual one. You have not, told me, but the papers have, that you have recently been to various plays. If this information is correct, I would, and I think others would, thank you to tell us what has caused the change in your habits in this respect."

"Are the moral objections you had to the theatre removed?"

"Not referring to any particular establishment, but taking the average theatre of the age into its, in your opinion, is it a good place for a man to go with his children?"

"In Brooklyn I think there are six or eight theatres which have performances every evening except Sunday, with frequent matinees. A great many of the people who frequent these places have the appearance of poverty. The receipts at all of them combined amount to several hundred thousand dollars annually."

If we, by our example, influence the attendance of others who cannot afford to go, is the advantage to ourselves in the amusement and instruction we receive, ample justification of our attendance?"

Mr. Beecher settled himself comfortably in his chair before answering, and fixed his eyes on the clock. Some of the ladies exchanged significant glances. Mr. Beecher said that when a newspaper correspondent or an inquisitive "moral" man came to his home and endeavored to pry into his private affairs, he considered him so impertinent that he felt like kicking him from the door; but a question like the one propounded, affecting public morals, was right and proper. "I don't do anything in a corner," continued the pastor, dropping into a conversational tone, "and when I went to the theatre, I went in broad daylight. If I go again, I shall go in the same way. I happen to be in a situation which induces some newspapers to keep the public fully informed where I go and what I do. Actually, if I wear a new coat, some of them will mention it. So I do as I have a mind to, in accordance with my ideas of right, and don't care what people say."

Mr. Beecher said, continuing that he was brought up to believe that the theatre was a thing of evil, and that going to one was almost as bad as going to the devil. He went West early in life, where theatrical companies were made up of strolling, inferior players, and entered to a depraved class of the population. When he came to New York and Brooklyn, his time was too much engrossed by his duties to pay any attention to the theatre, but he read with great interest a printed discussion that was then going on, in which the late Dr. Bellows and others participated. Mr. Beecher concluded that the opera and theatre were separate and should be so considered. He did not care much for opera—that is, he was not particularly fond of music arranged in that form. But the librettos in some of the leading operas were simply inequities, and it was a mercy that they were printed partially in Italian or French, which most Americans did not understand and could not read. He recollected a speech made by a revered friend of his, the Rev. Dr. Charles Hall, upon a theatrical occasion, in which he said that attendance at the theatre was a thing which every intelligent man should settle with his own conscience. It was a good deal like going to a hotel. There were good hotels and there were bad hotels. All that a man must do was to keep away from the bad hotels. After reading a great deal about the drama,

DECIDED TO GO AND SEE SALVING in "Othello." If there was nothing worse in the theatre than he saw there, he did not know what non-theatre-goers made such a "rumpus" about. He was glad that he went.

When Mr. Irving came, a cherished member of the best society in the British kingdom, even a friend of royalty, Mr. Beecher decided to go to the theatre, and he went to the matinee last Saturday afternoon. He enjoyed the acting thoroughly, and would like to go again. If any one cared to know, he would advise them one way or the other. To the young man of slender means, he would say, "Don't go!" And any amusement which so absorbs the attention that proper care is not given to business or daily work is harmful. Mr. Beecher considered that his habits were so well formed that he could go to a play without having them destroyed. In answer to a question whether he was a theatrician, he said that he didn't know; he hadn't concluded his investigations. When he did go he went as a Christian gentleman who had a right to do as he pleased, in accord with his own conscience. "As to my example to young men," he concluded, "I advise every young man to follow in my footsteps, and when you are seventy years old, go and see the best actors you can find."

Several people remained to have a further talk with Mr. Beecher on the subject after the benediction was pronounced.

The Source of Longfellow's Last Inspiration. San Blas is hardly more than an extensive thatched village. On the bluff behind it exist the ruins of an ancient, substantial San Blas shaken to pieces by an earthquake. Some old houses built from its church, have been brought down and set up on some rude wooden trestles on the ground in front of the poor chapel, without a bell, which now fills the ecclesiastical needs of the place. This arrangement is sometimes referred to as la torre de San Blas—the steeple of San Blas.

My eight sheets of these bell-tolls on a fly-leaf of my note book in the first instance came to have an importance far beyond its own merits. I have the gratification of knowing that it proved to be the source of nothing less than the last inspiration of Longfellow. The great and good poet died on the 24th of March, 1862. In his portfolio was found his final work, "The Bells of San Blas," dated March 15, which afterward appeared in the Atlantic Monthly. My memorandum book contained a French, as a suggestion of a poem, to the number and page of Harper's Magazine of the same month, in which the sketch was published.

An English clergyman, Thomas Morris Hughes by name, pleaded guilty at Warwick a few weeks ago to a charge of bigamy on which he had been previously convicted. He was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. His age is 45.

OUR JACK'S COME HOME TO-DAY.

Allegretto con anima.

By W. J. DEEVERS.

Our Jack's come home from sea to-day, And brown and bronzed is he, For many a year he's been a-way, From his home, his love, and me—

Yet his heart is true, as it was of old, His spirit is light and gay, You lit-tle know the joy we felt, When he came home to-day, Our Jack's come home to-day, Our Jack's come home to-day, The good ship Jane's in port a-gain, Our Jack's come home to-day.

Our Jack's come home from sea to-day, And a jovial tar is he, Full many a tale of storm and gale, He comes with careless glee, And of aught he's seen in lands he's been, So strange, so far away, he says, All danger's past, he's safe at last, Our Jack's come home to-day.

Our Jack's come home from sea to-day, To make his Nell his wife, With loving faith she ne'er despair'd, Tho' all hope within us died, Yet her eyes grew dim, her cheek grew pale, She slowly pined away, But the lovely bloom's on her face again, Her Jack's come home to-day, But the lovely bloom's on her face again, Her Jack's come home to-day.

CHORUS. Jack's come home to-day, Our Jack's come home to-day, The good ship Jane's in port a-gain, Our Jack's come home to-day.

CHORUS. Jack's come home to-day, Our Jack's come home to-day, The good ship Jane's in port a-gain, Our Jack's come home to-day.

CHORUS. Jack's come home to-day, Our Jack's come home to-day, The good ship Jane's in port a-gain, Our Jack's come home to-day.

CHORUS. Jack's come home to-day, Our Jack's come home to-day, The good ship Jane's in port a-gain, Our Jack's come home to-day.

A Retort. An Irish member of Parliament is responsible for the following story, which, if not true, ought to be — He says he was in a railway carriage when a little old gentleman, of very respectable appearance, entered with a little basket of fish, which he carefully deposited in the rack above his head. When the train started the Irish member began to smoke, to which the old gentleman strongly objected, as he hated the disgusting smell, and as it was not a smoking carriage. The Irishman paying no heed to his remonstrance, he fairly lost the little temper he ever possessed, and, snatching the cigar from the smoker, threw it out of the carriage window with a triumphant shout of "There!" The Irish member waited a few minutes, and then saying, "What a disgusting smell there is of fish!" he threw the old gentleman's basket of fish out of the window with the same triumphant shout of "There!" Collapse of the old gentleman, and triumph of the Irish member.

A few days ago a London clerk slipped on a piece of orange peel, broke his leg, was taken to the hospital, became delirious and died within 24 hours.
