Love a Conqueror —OR— WEDDED AT LAST.

CHAPTER XLII.

"Papa is coming for me on his way from Adinbrook," she said, trying to assume her usual cheerful manner. "I had such a lot to say to you that I did not want to be hurried away before it was dusk. Why, Jip, old man, where have you been—upstairs? Are you glad to see me," she asked, smiling—"gladder than that naughty mistress of yours is?"

"He could not be that," Shirley put in, in a low voice of pain; and Madge, with a quick repentance, put her arms round her.

"Forgive me," she said coaxingly. "That was a naughty speech; but I am so glad to see you, dear Mrs. Grant, that it hurt me to think you are not equally pleased to see me."

"You know that I am glad," Shirley answered, gently disengaging herself. "Sit down by the fire, Miss Oliphant, while I see about tea."

"Miss Oliphant" again," Madge said pettishly; "and I have so often begged you to call me 'Madge!'"

"I am afraid I cannot please you, to-day," Shirley said, with a smile, as she glanced over at the pretty dissatisfied face on which the fire-light fell.

"You always please me," Madge answered quickly. "But why are you so very dignified to-day?" she added, with a little laugh. "I am almost afraid of you—you keep me at such a distance."

"You fancy I do; but, dear, between the village schoolmistress and Sir Frederic Oliphant's daughter there is a wide difference."

Shirley passed into the little kitchen beyond, coming back presently with the tea-kettle, which she placed on the fire; then she began to prepare the table for tea, going about it with a quiet grace which made the homely occupation a very pretty sight in Madge's eyes.

"Where is Janie?" she asked presently; and Shirley's face was turned away, or Madge would have seen how the color rose into it at the question.

"I have sent her home. I prefer being without her," she answered. "Without her!" echoed Madge. "But you surely do not intend to remain here alone all night?"

"Do you think that Jane would be a great protection?" Shirley asked, smiling slightly.

"No; but it would not be so lonely for you, and she was very useful. Did she displease you?"

"Oh, no?"

"Then why did you send her away?"

"Because I preferred to be alone."

Her tone was very gentle, but very firm, and there was a short silence, during which Shirley busied herself making the tea and Miss Oliphant sat looking into the fire, with a puzzled, wistful expression in her blue eyes.

When the tea was made and covered with the pretty coxy, Shirley begged to be excused for a moment; and Madge heard her run lightly up the stairs, although she closed the door carefully after her when she went out. She was not absent many minutes; but, when she returned, it seemed to Madge that there was an added shade of sadness on her face.

"Where is Jip?" Madge asked lightly.

"He stayed up-stairs," was the quiet answer. "No, don't call him, dear, he—he is so restless, he makes me nervous."

"Are you really better, Mrs. rant, I shall insist on your seeing Doctor Lloyd," Madge said as she went back to her seat.

"Dr. Lloyd cannot do anything for that sudden faintness, dear; it is an old enemy. Well, Madge, so are you not going to tell me all your doings?"

"I am afraid of tiring you."

"Tiring me! I am longing to hear."

And the pale face wore an expression of eagerness and anxiety which made Madge smile.

"You are a regular daughter of Eve!" she cried delightedly.

"I am charmed to have discovered a falling at last in this little perfect woman about whom all Erindale is raving. Our dear model schoolmistress is curious."

"Very curious," Shirley acknowledged, with a forced smile. "Gratify my curiosity, Madge."

Clark's Pork & Beans

Quality, flavor, and perfect cooking combined. The maximum of nourishment and palatability. Just heat—then serve minimum trouble and cost.

She went to the table as she spoke and began to pour out the tea; and as she handed Madge a cup, she forced a smile to her lips.

"And now tell me of all this delightful visit," she said cheerfully. "I am on tender hooks of curiosity, Madge, to know what made it so very pleasant."

"Have you caught cold?" Madge asked, looking at her keenly.

"Caught cold? No. Why?"

"Because your voice sounded rather husky, and when you went upstairs you had a terrific fit of coughing."

All the color died out of Shirley's face; and she rose hastily, going to the fire to put some more water into the little tea-pot.

"Did you hear me?" she said unsteadily. "I had no idea I could cough so loud."

"You coughed dreadfully. I wish you would see Dr. Lloyd. You look anything but well. Will you let me send him up on my way home?"

There was a slight hesitation; and then Shirley said lightly:

"I will think about it. Come, Madge, tell me about your gayeties. Is Cotsford a nice place?"

"Yes, the house is very quaint and old and charming—not quite so large as Stuartleigh, but quite as ancient."

"Stuartleigh?" Shirley repeated, mechanically.

"Yes," Madge said quietly sipping her tea—"Major Stuart's place. We drove over there it is only a few miles from Cotsford—three or four."

"But I thought—I thought—Major Stuart was abroad?"

"You thought wrong," Madge said, with a bright laugh and a hot blush.

"He came back a fortnight ago, and he and a friend are at Stuartleigh. Poor Guy!" she added sorrowfully, a sudden shadow falling upon the brightness of her face.

"Why—is he ill?"

"Ill? Oh, no! He is much stronger than he was last winter; but—Ah, well, some day I will tell you all his story, and you will see whether there is not some excuse for the depression under which he labors sometimes!"

All his story! Did any one in all the wide world—did Madge herself—know that story as Shirley knew it? she wondered.

"And we coaxed Guy and his friend Mr. Ross over to Cotsford," Madge continued, looking at the fire, her cheeks flushing a little as she spoke.

"And I am sure it did them—What is the matter? Are you faint?"

She put down her cup hastily and went to Shirley's side, for she was drooping over the table in a helpless manner which alarmed her guest.

"It is nothing," she said. "I am sorry I startled you, Madge; but it is nothing indeed. You were saying you induced Major Stuart and—"

"Are you really better, Mrs. rant, I shall insist on your seeing Doctor Lloyd," Madge said as she went back to her seat.

"Dr. Lloyd cannot do anything for that sudden faintness, dear; it is an old enemy. Well, Madge, so are you not going to tell me all your doings?"

"I am afraid of tiring you."

"Tiring me! I am longing to hear."

And the pale face wore an expression of eagerness and anxiety which made Madge smile.

"You are a regular daughter of Eve!" she cried delightedly.

"I am charmed to have discovered a falling at last in this little perfect woman about whom all Erindale is raving. Our dear model schoolmistress is curious."

"Very curious," Shirley acknowledged, with a forced smile. "Gratify my curiosity, Madge."

"Madge! How pleasant it is to hear you call me that!" the girl said, smiling, as she drew up a stool to Shirley and sat down at her feet. "Well, renews a nos moutons—nos moutons being Major Stuart and Mr. Ross."

"Mr. Ross?" Shirley repeated, her heart beating wildly.

"Yes, a friend of Guy's from India," Madge said, a little shyly. "How hot the fire is!" she added. "It is scorching my face."

Shirley put both her hands gently on the flushed cheeks; Madge pulled them down to her lips and kissed them softly.

"Did you like Mr. Ross, Madge?"

"He was very nice."

"Is he handsome?"

"Yes, very handsome."

"And did you like him, Madge?" Shirley persisted gently.

"I—I do not know."

The words were very shyly and sweetly spoken; and Shirley wondered a little at the tremor in the girlish voice.

"Is Mr. Ross going to remain in England?" she said presently.

"For the present—yes; he and Guy are coming to Erindale next week for a few days."

Coming to Erindale! It seemed as if Shirley's heart stood still with terror at the very thought. Coming to Erindale! It was well that Madge Oliphant was too much occupied with her own thoughts to look up at the white and stricken face leaning back against the chair.

"Papa took such a fancy to Mr. Ross," went on Madge's sweet, unconscious voice—"he liked him so much that he is quite pleased at the thought of a visit from him; and you will see him too," she continued softly, "for we have talked about our model 'schoolmarm' until they are both anxious to see her."

To see her. What new terrible complication was this? Shirley felt faint and dazed and giddy.

"They are coming in a few days," Miss Oliphant went on. "And I shall bring them to see Mrs. Grant, of course. But I should like her to be looking somewhat—" She broke off suddenly and lifted her head with a little gesture which commanded attention. "Why," she exclaimed excitedly, "surely there is some one upstairs! I am certain I heard some one cough."

"It must be Jip, then," Mrs. Grant said, sitting up in her chair, quite composed now. "You forget that he is upstairs."

"Jip could not cough," Madge said hubbously—"and it was a cough I heard, I am sure."

"Jip often makes a growling noise which might easily be taken for a cough. Who else could be up there, Madge?"

"No one, of course, without your knowing it—unless some one might have concealed themselves there to startle you, or even do you injury."

"You absurd child! It would have to be a very small individual who could conceal himself or herself in either of those little attics. Why, I am up and down constantly, and I could not fail to see any one who was there? Besides," she added earnestly, anxious to remove the idea from the young girl's mind, "Jip is such a good watch-dog, you know, that, if anyone were there who did not belong to the house, he would never cease barking until he had the matter seen into."

"You are really better, Mrs. rant, I shall insist on your seeing Doctor Lloyd," Madge said as she went back to her seat.

"Dr. Lloyd cannot do anything for that sudden faintness, dear; it is an old enemy. Well, Madge, so are you not going to tell me all your doings?"

"I am afraid of tiring you."

"Tiring me! I am longing to hear."

Falling Hair Means Dandruff Is Active

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

"I don't think it is right for you to be here alone at night," said Madge decidedly. "You might be ill. No one knows what might happen."

"I am afraid Jane would not have been of much assistance if I had been taken ill, for it required all my strength to wake her up in the morning," said Mrs. Grant, with an attempt at laughter.

"Then you must have some one more efficient. I will speak to mamma about it."

There was a moment's silence; then Shirley said gently:

"I am sure you do not want to pain me, Madge. I prefer being here alone. I do not want any assistance. Should I need it, dear, I will promise you to obtain it if you, in your turn, will promise me to say no more about it. And also I entreat of you not to mention it to Lady Oliphant at all."

"Why not?"

"Because—because—well, call it a whim if you like, and gratify it."

"I suppose I must when you ask it with that look in your eyes. Ah, there is papa!" she added, as Sir Frederic's knock sounded at the door.

They went together to the door, where Sir Frederic was waiting for his daughter. He lifted his hat courteously to Shirley, but did not offer her his hand.

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Grant. Fine seasonable weather, is it not? Well, Madcap, are you ready?"

Radway's Ready Relief

Mrs. L. Dittmar, 710 E. 14th St., New York City, writes: "I caught a cold. I used one bottle of your Radway's Ready Relief with wonderful results. I have also found it acts like a charm for sore throat. I used it with great benefit for several ailments my children have had, and recommend it to my friends."

NEURALGIA

This Relief is the best counter irritant known, and therefore the best combination that can be used in Neuralgia. Rub it on the part affected, and keep it on for several days, which will usually be the cause of the ailment.

W. RADWAY & CO., Montreal, Can.

Varicose Veins and Itching Piles

Usually Arise From Same Cause—Relief and Cure Effect by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Nearly everybody knows of Dr. Chase's Ointment as the most effective treatment for piles or hemorrhoids that medical science has been able to compound. So much suffering and misery arises from this ailment that one is not long in telling his friends when he has found an actual cure. This accounts for the enormous sales of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This letter tells of relief from the suffering of varicose veins by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Many suffer from this trouble not knowing the comfort to be obtained by the use of this great soothing ointment.

Mrs. R. J. Evans, 187 Munro street, Toronto, writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for years. I have been troubled with varicose veins, and find it the only thing that gives relief. For every purpose when a soothing, healing ointment is needed there is nothing so good as Dr. Chase's Ointment." 60 cents a box all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Running Past Danger Signals.

By RUTH CAMERON.

There are some misfortunes that come into our lives utterly without warning. We are given no opportunity to prepare for them or avert them and cannot be blamed for not doing so. But there are a great many misfortunes, little and big, that only come to us after repeated warnings. If we would heed these warnings we might escape the misfortunes. And for not doing so we certainly are culpable.

A friend of mine dropped her eyeglasses the other evening. "There," she said, as she stooped to recover them, "that's the fourth time I've dropped those to-day. I hope they aren't broken. I ought to tighten that screw. I'll do it this minute."

But "this minute" was too late. As she spoke the words, she picked up the glasses and found both lenses badly cracked. According to her own admission, she had had three warnings and heeded none of them.

Another friend has just lost a handsome seal ring. It was very loose and again and again it slipped off while she was about her household. Once it was missing for several days and when it finally turned up, she said, "I must have that ring made smaller." This time she has lost it in the street and probably will never recover it. She is much grieved over the mishap and calls it her bad luck. Those who know the circumstances call it something else. Just yesterday I caught myself committing this ridiculous folly. Three times during the forenoon I caught my foot in my skirt braid. Each time I thought, "I'm going to take this dress off in a little while. I'll fix it then." The second time I almost fell against the kitchen stove, and the third time only a tremendous effort kept me from falling the length of a flight of stairs. If I had fallen I certainly would have had only myself to blame.

Serious illness seldom comes without ample warning. Probably four illnesses out of five could be avoided if we would heed the body's danger signals.

Perhaps you think all this very trite and obvious, and yet, my friend, I wouldn't be at all surprised if in some way or other you, too, were running past some danger signal.

Your indifference is doubtless in some matter quite different from any of the instances I have mentioned, and that is why you do not at once recognize yourself in my mirror. But think a bit before you exonerate yourself. Are there no danger signals of any kind which you are running past at top speed?

Optimism of the right kind and degree is a beautiful quality. But an overgrown optimism which takes all kinds of foolish risks and refuses to heed any kind of danger signals, is as unhealthy and unsightly as any abnormal growth.

Ruth Cameron

Sir Hugh Graham On The Stand.

Quebec, Feb. 6.—This morning the committee of the legislative council probing the Montreal Mail graft allegations, was called upon to devote several hours to listening to a number of questions framed with a view to deciding the ownership of the Montreal Herald, the newspaper of which its late editor, Edward Beck, says he unsuccessfully offered the disclosures of the Burns' detectives before taking them to the Mail.

Mr. Beck, yesterday, declined to answer a question as to who the proprietor was, and Sir Hugh Graham, proprietor of the Montreal Star, was asked to attend and give evidence. A number of questions on the ownership point were put to Sir Hugh Graham by B. A. MacNab, for twenty-five years editor of the Montreal Star and now editor of the Mail, but the committee decided that Sir Hugh need not answer them because the matter was not pertinent to the problem being investigated.

To Summon Mr. Lemieux.
At the second session of the lower house committee, Armand Lavergne asked for a subpoena for Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux, who introduced Mr. Carpenter to Mr. Mousseau. The committee acceded to Mr. Lavergne's request. Excitement was caused when it was learned to-day that Messrs. Biddinger and Misonoy, the Burns men, had left the city before the committee had finished with them.

It appears that somebody telephoned Mr. Biddinger at the Chateau Frontenac, and according to Mr. Appleby, another Burns detective, apparently informed them that they were not required any more, and that they need not return to New York.

Mr. Belley asked for a vote on the chairman's ruling, and the committee sustained Mr. Chapais. Sir Hugh Graham on the Stand. Mr. Belley then asked Sir Hugh why he had refused to publish the revelations. Sir Hugh intimated that he thought the point irrelevant, and the chairman agreed with him.

Steady Progress of the Maritime Tel. & Tel. Co.

The record of the Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company is one of steady growth. The number of subscribers has increased as below for the past six years:

1908	by	1040
1909	by	888
1910	by	1221
1911	by	1198
1912	by	2153
1913	by	2379

It will thus be seen that the increase for 1913 was nearly twice that for the year 1911, just two years previous. The total number now stands at 17,440, or, including Prince Edward Island Telephone Company, 19,710.

Stanfield's Underwear.

Sleeping in the cold and silent clay to-day are many men who should be alive and active — an asset to their country, but they allowed cold after cold to go un-cared for—result—Death. Many of these colds were contracted through wearing cotton underwear. There is nothing more dangerous in cold climates. After perspiring freely it is like a cold wet rag round the body, and the fleece rolls off in little icy knobs. Throw it away. Wear wool, it absorbs all moisture and lessens the chances of catching cold. Stanfield's, from $1.00 per garment.

Unionists Offer Amendments

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, Feb. 17. Tariff Reform and Welsh Disestablishment were the subjects of two amendments to the Speech from the Throne offered in the Commons last night. On the former the Unionists again gave adherence to the Chamberlainian panacea. On the latter the Government's majority was only 62, this being gained by the help of the Nationalists. The significance of this is that if the votes of English members alone were taken into consideration the Government would have been defeated. Captain Tryon, M.P., for Brighton, and Page Croft, M.P., for Christchurch, presented an amendment, regretting that the Government had refused to modify the Fiscal system by imposing a moderate tariff on imported goods, manufactured in a foreign country, with preference to British Dominions. Capt. Tryon twitted Attorney General Simon for stamping the country, and holding divers funerals over the remains. Tariff Reform had been killed by Sir John Simon and his consorts, but it was far from dead. Page Croft attacked the Free Trade arguments in a lengthy speech, and attempted to show that Germany had tripled its output of manufactured articles during the last thirty years. England on the other hand, had only double her output of such articles during the same period. Tariff reformers were deliberately out for higher wages. Lloyd, M.P., for West Staffordshire, pointed out the danger of the Dominions framing their own protective treaties. Canada had built a chain of inter-Dominion trade arrangements. Australia had followed in a steady policy of Imperial preference. Imperial interests might become conflicting. The Solicitor General characterized the policy reflected by the amendment as rudimentary and a devitalized fragment of the larger fragment of the Tariff Reform. Bonar Law reiterated his intention of carrying out fiscal reform, if returned to power. The amendment was defeated by a Government majority of 74. The debate on the Welsh Disestablishment Bill was introduced by Mr. Ormshead Gore, in an amendment regretting that the Government intended to put the Bill through though there was no popular support emanating from it. Mr. Balfour, in an impressive speech, charged the Government with having attempted to divert public attention by offering a measure to obscure the present one. The general opinion was growing hostile, he said, to the application of religious funds for secular purposes.

LONDON, Feb. 17. The Parliamentary correspondent of the Daily Chronicle understands that the Naval Estimates for the next financial year will exceed two hundred and fifty million, over and above the fifteen million in last year's supplementary estimates. Lord Crewe, who hitherto had been somewhat of a dark horse on the question of increase of armaments, speaking before the members of the Eighty Club, was unqualified support to Winston Churchill's position.

WELLSFLEET, Mass., Feb. 17. Captain Garva and four seamen of the Italian barque Castagna, perished, when the vessel was thrown on the outer bar of Cape Cod, near the wireless station, just before dawn today. The first mate and seven sailors were rescued by life-savers. One of them, Capt. Tobin, of Cahoon's Station, was badly injured by the overturning of the surf boat. Captain Garva was washed overboard, three men were frozen to death in the rigging, and one died in the surf boat on his way to shore.

QUEENSTOWN, Feb. 17. Such storms have prevailed on the north Atlantic during the past week, that many passenger steamers and cargo boats were unable to battle against the strong winds on their way to America, and have been compelled to turn round and run for shelter to ports on this side of the Atlantic. Three large steamers are returning in a battered condition, including the Niagara. The big Dutch H tank Rotterdam, when eight days out from Amsterdam to New York, lost her rudder and was forced to make for Queenstown in tow of a steam trawler. Another steam trawler is towing the British steamer Croedel from Barry to Malta, which lost her propeller off the Spanish coast, on Thursday.

Orange Marmalade.

To make good orange marmalade choose juicy oranges with thick skin. Wash and weigh them. For every pound of oranges allow two pounds of sugar, one quart of water and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Put the oranges in a half. Squeeze out all the juice with a squeezer or put, according to whether you do not prefer a "full flavored" or milder marmalade. Put the cut-up peels into a preserving kettle with the proper measure of water (above) and the orange and lemon juice and cook until the peel looks quite soft and swollen and is easily pierced with a blunt skewer. The liquid will reduce somewhat. Now add the sugar and cook until the syrup "jells," when tried on a cold plate the bits of peel tend to stick to the surface. Then skim and put up in glasses like jelly.

The jelly part should be rather firm and quite clear, and the peels should not float on the surface of the glass. If less peel is liked and more jelly remove some of the peel (toward the end of the process) by "fishing" for it with a small sieve and finish off this extra peel separately by "candyling."

Marconi Scandal Revived.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, Feb. 17.

The recent Parliamentary scandal in connection with the purchase of Marconi shares by members of the British Cabinet was revived to-day in the House of Lords, together with the whole question of secrecy of party funds and the purchase of titles of nobility. Lord Murray of Ellbank who a short time ago returned from South America where he had acted as agent for the projects of Lord Cowdray, made his first appearance in the Upper House, where he gave a statement of his dealings in American Marconi shares before he was enrolled while chief Liberal whip in the Commons he said he purchased American Marconi shares of an American company which had nothing to do with British Government contracts and was distinct from the English Marconi Company. Looking back now he said he thought it might have occurred to him that his action would have been open to criticism. He concluded, "I deeply regret I did not give the matter more consideration and view it from all possible aspects. It was an error of judgment, not intention."

Lord Murray also expressed deep regret that he had invested the Liberal Party's funds in Marconi shares, more particularly that his action had embarrassed the Party. He said he had personally assumed heavy losses resulting from the investment. He trusted those who had commented harshly would recognize it was difficult to avoid mistakes. He concluded that he had done nothing which reflected upon the honour and integrity of British public life. Baron Ampt-hill had given notice of motion for a committee to investigate charges brought by newspapers, but after Lord Murray's expressions of deep regret which were far stronger than those uttered by Sir Rufus Isaacs and David Lloyd George in the Commons the Marquis of Lansdown, Leader of the Unionists in the Upper House, declared it to be a grave question whether the examination had been satisfactory or not.

If not, what further action would be adequate to the case. This could not with fairness to Lord Murray or to the House of Lords, he said, be judged immediately. He therefore moved the postponement of further discussion until Thursday. Viscount Milner and other Peers announced that it is their purpose to discuss on that occasion the question of party funds and titles.

A Blow to Fancy Prices.

As revolutionary as wireless telegraphy is the compass, rivetless, boltless, jointless Steel Vertical Filing Cabinet now on the market. Here is the actual construction of what every designer of steel furniture has dreamed of producing—a solid one-piece cabinet without a break or joint in it. This perfection has been brought about in the "Globe-Wernicke" factories by electric spot-welding of all joining and overlapping surfaces and corners. The result is the channels that hold the noiseless rolling devices for the drawers are electrically welded solidly to the sides. The more you work these drawers the more perfect is the running. And finally the price—this flawless Steel Cabinet, enduring as Time, is offered by the "Globe-Wernicke Co." at the same price as the highest grade cabinets that are made of wood! Talk with PERCIE JOHNSON about this—the price is going to interest you.

St. Thomas' M.B.C.

The members of St. Thomas' Bible Class held their annual tea and concert in Canon Wood Hall last night. The affair was presided over by the Rector, Rev. G. R. Godden, and was largely attended. The concert programme included choice vocal and instrumental selections, which were thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

No Irish Rises for Him.

Pat had worked hard and well for some years in the service of his master, and now it struck the latter that it was time to raise the man's pay. "Pat," he said, "your wages are now fivepence an hour, are they not?" "Tis, sorr," said Pat. "Very well," said his employer, grandiloquently; "they will henceforth be sixpence."

"Shop a minute, sorr," said Pat. "Whin I lose a quarther"—i.e. two hours' work before breakfast—"will I be after losing a shilling?" "Certainly, Pat!" was the answer. "Bodad, thin," cried Pat, with sudden decision, "I don't want your rise at all, at all! 'Faith, an' I only lose tuppence as it is now!"

The new taffetas are either striped or plaid, in imitation of the old-fashioned taffetas. They are rich and soft, with just a suspicion of lustre.

Firemen's Pay.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I notice in recent issues of your esteemed journal re firemen's wage controversy. It is extremely regrettable to note in your valuable paper the small sum which the firemen receive per month for the valuable services rendered in the protection of lives and property in this city existing at the present day. It has been previously stated the small amount of wages given these men per month. Firemen should have the sympathy and wholehearted consideration of the general public. Firemen are men who brave the greatest hardships in time of need. As the old saying goes, they go through fire and water and run the risk of losing their lives in performing their duty.

I notice the police are poorly paid for the arduous duty which they perform. The police suffer severe hardships continually as well as the firemen, and to raise the firemen's wage we must raise the policemen's wage also. It would be a wise suggestion or the police to be separated from the firemen altogether. Let the police be controlled in their own quarters by their chief and the firemen in halls by their captain.

Thanking you for space in the "People's Paper," I remain,
Yours truly,
G. C. KENNEDY.

Shipbuilding.

Lloyd's Register shipbuilding returns for the past quarter show 490 mercantile steamers of 1,952,814 gross tons under construction on December 31—a reduction of one ship and 92,609 tons compared with September 30, and of 16 ships, but only 7,516 tons, compared with the figures of a year earlier. The Clyde, with 154 steamers, aggregating 760,705 tons, in progress, easily heads all other centres. As to warships, 92 of 694,801 tons were building in the United Kingdom at the end of the year—82 of 481,631 tons being for our Navy and 11 of 123,170 tons for foreign flags.—Financial News.

A Good Name.

Some speak of riches and their worth.
And some of lofty fame;
But still of all earth's precious stores,
Give me a bright good name.

Give me a name, though adverse winds
How loudly round my head,
That will not die when I am gone
But still an influence shed.

Give me a name that cannot die.
When I am laid to rest—
Upon our common Mother Earth's
Cold, damp, and cheerless breast.

A name that all will loudly praise,
A name that all can love;
One that will brightly shine on earth,
And brighter grow above.

When I shall sleep within the tomb,
O, may my name remain;
And oft be spoken by my friends,
As one without a stain.

Formal Opening

Of British Clothing Factory.

The British Clothing Company's new factory, situated in that new stone building on Duckworth Street, was formally opened last night and the function was marked by a grand lance and supper and the affair, in its entirety, was a distinct success and voted by the 200 persons, including employees and guests, who attended to be one of the most enjoyable social events held for some time. The interior of the building was really and artistically decorated for the occasion. At 9 o'clock dancing was commenced, the music being excellently supplied by Mr. T. Fleming. When half of the programme was gone through a sumptuous supper that would please the most fastidious was served. After doing ample justice to the viands and having satisfied the inner man songs were rendered by Misses Richardson and Simmonds and some excellent impromptu speeches were made after which dancing was resumed until four o'clock this morning when the event was brought to a happy termination. Manager Feillich, the promoter of the affair, truly deserved all congratulations given him, as he proved himself generous and courteous and he is an ideal host.

He Took the Cue

He was a man who gave little and got much. To-day, for instance, he had got a clothes brush, a basin of water, a towel, and a shine, and had given nothing at all. T-r-r-ring went his bed-room bell. The hotel attendant smiled sourly. This was the fourth time he had been summoned, and he did not hurry.

"I thought you were never coming," exclaimed the visitor, when the attendant appeared at last. "Is your name 'Slowcoach'?"

"No, sir," answered the attendant. "They call me 'Billiard Cue.'"

"Billiard Cue!" repeated the astonished visitor. Then an inspiration dawned on him:

"Ah, because you are such a stick, I suppose?" he asked.

"Wrong again, sir," retorted the attendant. "It's because I work better with a good tip."

Mr Thompson's Lecture

On Train Ferry Service.
Mr. H. C. Thompson lectured on the Newfoundland Train-Ferry Service at the Grenfell Hall last night. The lecture was under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor and was largely attended, amongst those present being Mrs. Davidson, Major Davenport, Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. Morris, Hon. W. C. Job, J. Harvey, Messrs. C. P. Ayre, J. Fenelon, U. S. Consul Benedict, Dr. Macpherson and many other prominent citizens.

Mr. J. S. Munn, President of the Board of Trade, introduced the lecturer, whose discourse lasted for over two hours. In his opening remarks Mr. Thomson described the train-ferry in use on Lake Balkal and the Great Lakes of America and also the proposed system between Bay of Islands and Canso.

The lecturer went on to show that such a service had been successfully operated on Lake Michigan where navigation is extremely difficult.

The train ferries are thoroughly seaworthy which has been proven by their surviving the recent storms in which so many vessels were lost on the Great Lakes. The leading steamship companies are of the opinion that the modern ferry could cross the Atlantic with perfect safety. The proposed boats would be built for contending with ice, and would be of much greater draught than those in general use, and would cost about $800,000.

Two routes for the service are in contemplation, one from Green Bay to Bay of Islands and Gaspe, the other from Rantim, T.B. to Southern Harbour, P.B. and thence to Louisbourg. Of the two routes, the former is considered the better because of the geographical position and its benefit to the Empire, though the latter is more feasible and would only cost one-fourth of the other system, or $1,000,000. The benefits accruing from the proposed route are obvious, because of the many facilities offered for transportation.

At the close His Excellency the Governor proposed a vote of thanks and in doing so dealt at length with the advantages derived from the use of train ferries elsewhere.

Mr. Alex. McDougall seconded the motion and spoke on various phases of the fishing industry and advocated the necessity of grasping the opportunities afforded.

Mr. Munn in tendering the vote of thanks to His Excellency endorsed the Governor's ideas and announced his intention of laying the lecturer's proposal before the Board of Trade for discussion.

At the House

Mr. Clift presented a petition from the inhabitants of Millertown, asking that they be given representation in the Assembly; last year they were not included in any electoral district, and did not enjoy the franchise of voting in October last. Petitions were also presented by Mr. Jennings, asking that Boyd's Cove be made a port of call; that legislation be passed prohibiting the cutting of timber on Chapel's Island, except for the purpose of the fishery; also asking for money to repair roads and bridges; by Mr. Stone, asking for $500 for the construction of a bridge at Hodge's Cove, and for $40 for the construction of a road at Old Perlican; by Mr. Bennett from Blackhead asking that the people there be given the privilege of sinking codnets; by Mr. Emerson, asking for a pension for Patrick Lane, doorkeeper; also by Mr. Hickman, asking for the allocation of sums of money in relation to various public matters in the District of Bay de Verde.

The House then resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on Supply. Mr. Clift thought it unfair for the Finance Minister to proceed right away in the absence of the leader of the Opposition, the latter gentleman, he had reason to believe was prepared to make some comments. Besides it was only yesterday that the Supplemental Supply was submitted and hon. members had not sufficient time to digest them. He asked that the matter be deferred which was agreed to, and the Committee rose.

The Bills relating to the Workmen's Compensation Act; an Act to regulate the employment, food and lodgings of men in logging camps; an Act entitled "Representation in the House of Assembly and the Powers and Privileges thereof"; and an Act to provide for the Investigation of Combines and Monopolies, were deferred.

The House then went into Committee on the Sealing Bill.

Mr. Emerson took objection to subsection (f) of Section 2, which says that "cooks shall be prohibited from doing any other work than cooking," on the grounds that in the event of the sealers being a good distance away from the ship, or in any case of emergency, the Captain was unable to call upon the cooks or stewards to do any other work, under a penalty of $500, hence he asked that this clause be stricken out.

Mr. Higgins endorsed what the previous speaker said, and contended that all men go to the ice for what is in the voyage, and no one signs on as regular cooks.

Mr. Coaker, the introducer of the Bill, replied that the section regarding the duties of cooks had been thoroughly discussed and agreed upon by the F.P.M. in Convention at Greenspond, and that all outfitters and owners, except the N.B. Produce Co., agreed with that Section. The men generally who go to the seal-fishery, ask that cooks be prevented from handling seals, as they had enough to do if they did it properly. Besides Mr. Coaker pointed out, that this practice has been in vogue for the past two years, and the frivolous objections raised by some members was because they had had a chat with some of the captains who could not see eye to eye with those responsible for introducing the clause. In his opinion the main object of cap-

How New Zealand Abandoned the Policy of the Market-Place.

An Optimist's Account of the Results of the Social Policy of New Zealand—Its Remarkable Land Policy.

A striking article on "The Social Policy of New Zealand" appears in the Colonial Journal, based on H. H. Lusk's new book on "Social Welfare in New Zealand" (W. Heinemann, Es.). "New Zealand has led the way in democracy, and its numerous economical innovations have been carefully watched and largely imitated. To-day the community is represented by its admirers as the first one that has ventured to deny the conclusions and disregard the teachings of commercialism. Its main object is to secure that every member of the society shall obtain a fair and full share of the profits arising from his exertions.

The well-being of a nation, Mr. Lusk writes demands wages sufficient to support a man with a family in reasonable comfort, and to leave a margin beyond this sufficient to enable him by self-denial and economy to improve his position, and provide for the future. If in any trade these essentials cannot be provided, the supreme law of well-being demands that it shall cease to be carried on in the country.

A Challenge to the Social System.

"It is obvious that this standard of individual welfare raises a challenge to the usual social system. It conflicts with the commercial spirit, the methods of individualism, and laissez faire policy generally. In the present work it is claimed that it has been no visionary ideal; not only is the programme one reflecting a high moral standard, but it has resulted in an increase of individual well-being for the people and of wealth for the nation that is wholly unprecedented in the annals of history."

How It Came About.

"It was not, however, the study of the higher morality or for the matter of that any abstract ideas that led to the well-known economic measures of the programme one reflecting a high moral standard, but it has resulted in an increase of individual well-being for the people and of wealth for the nation that is wholly unprecedented in the annals of history."

Our present quotation is $98.00 a share with 6 p.c. interest from January 1st. At this the yield is 6-1-10 p.c. Cash or $10 payments "as you like it."

Nurse's Years of Experience

Proves Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, Best Treatment for Kidney and Stomach Troubles.

The trained nurse has even greater opportunities than the doctor himself to watch the action of medicine in specific cases.

For years the writer of this letter has been recommending the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills among her patients, and is firmly convinced that no treatment is so prompt and effective.

This is the most valuable evidence obtainable, and we believe that all who know Mrs. Duffey will appreciate it to the full, knowing that she would not recommend anything in which she had not the fullest confidence.

Mrs. Duffey, nurse, 25 Lewis street, Toronto, writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for years, and recommend them to my patients for all disorders of the kidneys, liver and stomach. In all my professional experience I have found nothing better." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cts a box, all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Some Important Results.

"The result has been to place on the land as farmers a large number of men who would not have ventured into remote and unbroken country, but who were willing and had the means to develop lands near their old homes. The difficulty of obtaining adequate labour, which no doubt increases with the multiplication of the small holdings, has induced many owners to come forward with offers to sell. By the end of March, 1912, the Government had acquired under these powers 1,296,942 acres, and after payment of all expenses, including inter-

Infants' Delight Soap is a really delightful Soap for babies, for whom of course it is specially made. It contains no free alkali, but is perfectly bland and emollient. It is also exquisitely perfumed. There is a growing demand for this fine Soap. Price 15 cents a cake; box of three cakes 40 cents.

The Eugenic Feeding Bottle is one of the most complete and practical we have seen. It is so easily cleaned and of such convenient shape that it instantly appeals to mothers and nurses. The nipples and valves are formed of the finest and toughest transparent rubber. A brush goes with each bottle. Price 40 cents each.

At an inquest held in London into the death of an English aviator named Slack, who was killed in an automobile accident on Dec. 21st, the question was raised whether or not it is safe for an aviator to drive an automobile. Slack lost his life through speeding. It is contended that the tremendous speed at which the aviator is accustomed to travel in the air makes it difficult if not impossible for him to judge the pace at which he is going on the road.

An Obstinate Case.

"I used to suffer with sore nose, a trouble I found very difficult to deal with for a long time. Ordinary ointments seemed to avail little. The inside of the nose would get somewhat better, and then, at the first cold, it would become as bad as ever."

"Yes, indeed after I had used Zylex a few times, things came easier; and a little perseverance effected a perfect cure. If any symptoms of the trouble appears again, a single application fixes it. Zylex costs 50 cents a box, at your druggists' and you should always have a box at hand. It's useful in all kinds of skin troubles."—Feb 11, 1914.

THE WAY TO SUCCESS.

A youthful aspirant applied to a successful author for advice as to how to succeed in literature. "You need indomitable perseverance, a typewriter, and a mangle," was the reply.

"Do you mean I had better take in washing?" asked the aspirant.

"Nonsense! You need the mangle to take the creases out of your manuscript. Mangle them well, and then, unless the editors have burned them with cigarette ash, no one can tell they have been out before."

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 18, 1914.
Infants' Delight Soap is a really delightful Soap for babies, for whom of course it is specially made. It contains no free alkali, but is perfectly bland and emollient. It is also exquisitely perfumed. There is a growing demand for this fine Soap. Price 15 cents a cake; box of three cakes 40 cents.

The Eugenic Feeding Bottle is one of the most complete and practical we have seen. It is so easily cleaned and of such convenient shape that it instantly appeals to mothers and nurses. The nipples and valves are formed of the finest and toughest transparent rubber. A brush goes with each bottle. Price 40 cents each.

By the Way.

It is reported in Glasgow that the British makers of galvanized sheets have joined a combination which will control production. Each member of the combination will be allotted a specified amount of the total manufacture, but there will not be any official selling prices.

A Russian newspaper man named Brushkovsky, who is an amateur detective, and who worked up the case against Mendel Bellis, was sentenced in St. Petersburg on Dec. 26th to imprisonment for one year in a fortress for keeping his seat when the national anthem was being played recently. The charge against him was les majeste.

At an inquest held in London into the death of an English aviator named Slack, who was killed in an automobile accident on Dec. 21st, the question was raised whether or not it is safe for an aviator to drive an automobile. Slack lost his life through speeding. It is contended that the tremendous speed at which the aviator is accustomed to travel in the air makes it difficult if not impossible for him to judge the pace at which he is going on the road.

An Obstinate Case.

"I used to suffer with sore nose, a trouble I found very difficult to deal with for a long time. Ordinary ointments seemed to avail little. The inside of the nose would get somewhat better, and then, at the first cold, it would become as bad as ever."

"Yes, indeed after I had used Zylex a few times, things came easier; and a little perseverance effected a perfect cure. If any symptoms of the trouble appears again, a single application fixes it. Zylex costs 50 cents a box, at your druggists' and you should always have a box at hand. It's useful in all kinds of skin troubles."—Feb 11, 1914.

THE WAY TO SUCCESS.

A youthful aspirant applied to a successful author for advice as to how to succeed in literature. "You need indomitable perseverance, a typewriter, and a mangle," was the reply.

"Do you mean I had better take in washing?" asked the aspirant.

"Nonsense! You need the mangle to take the creases out of your manuscript. Mangle them well, and then, unless the editors have burned them with cigarette ash, no one can tell they have been out before."

The Queerness of Cupid.

"It seems mighty strange," observed the red-headed man in the corner, "that in spite of the warnings of their married friends, in spite of the revelations of the divorce courts, in spite of the growing extravagance of women and the eternal terrors of the mother-in-law, men will continue to marry. I don't know whether it's a fact or not, but I'd be willing to bet money that there's just as many men getting married to-day, in proportion to the populace, as there were ten or twenty years ago."
"An' you'd win," said the white goods drummer. "I had occasion to look up that very point in the census reports not long ago, and I was surprised to find that the percentage was almost exactly the same in 1900 as in 1880. I've no doubt that 1913 will figure up an identical total."

and a woman's hand was the stake. "He still loved the girl from Maryland, but he had given up all hope of ever seeing her again. Besides, he reasoned, she was, no doubt, married long before this. And over in Tennessee there was a rich and handsome widow who would make a mighty pleasant companion. Should he ask her or should he not? The game of solitaire was to decide.
There was a sudden grinding of wheels, a quick stop, and Benton was thrown forward, smashing the table and scattering the cards over the floor of the car. He picked himself out of the wreckage and joined the other passengers, who were running to the doors.
"The train was standing on a high embankment. The engine was within 25 feet of a bridge over a deep river, and the bridge was on fire. But for the sudden stop the train and all its load would have gone through the blazing timbers. That was in the days of wooden bridges, you understand.
"The engineer told the story. The bridge was approached by a curve which cut off the view, so that he could not have seen the fire until too late. He was thirty minutes behind when he was trying to make up time when a woman waving a blazing torch suddenly appeared in the middle of the track on the other side of the curve. He had instantly reversed his engine and applied the brakes.
"Where was the woman? The engineer didn't know. She had stepped from the track just in time to escape the wheels and then, her duty done, had apparently gone her way.
"Boys," said Benton, taking off his hat and putting a bill into it, "what ever she is, we've got to find her and show our appreciation. Drop down into your pockets now and come up right."
They dug. In less than a minute she was overflowing with money and he was appointed chairman of a committee of all the passengers of the train to look for her.
"Down the track went the party," Benton and the engineer in the lead. "It was just about here that she flagged us," said the pilot, as he stopped and looked round. Down in the valley, half a mile distant, gleamed a light.
" That must be a house," says Benton, "let's go down there and inquire."
"Down the steep hill they climbed and trudged towards the light. Soon the outlines of a house could be discerned through the darkness. Across the front of the house was a broad verandah and a wide door gave entrance.
"Benton knocked. There was no answer. He knocked again, louder. Then the door flew open, and the ramed by the lamp light, stood Rosa Lee.
" Yes, sir," said the Baltimore passenger, as he paused. "Cupid is a sneaky little chap. He likes his jokes but he nearly always squares them in the end. There was seventy-five or eighty people on that verandah but she didn't see anybody but Benton.
" Somehow or other neither was surprised, and when he recognized the meaning of the glory that came into her face he dropped that hat full of money and without a word gathered her into his arms as a mother gathers her tired child. What's more he's still holding her."

Healthy and Unhealthy Lighting.

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitate, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:—
Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this, amongst other reasons, that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jameson B. Hurry.
He would merely add that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Duddell, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.
I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days, was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with leisure through a three hours' dinner, but which, with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity, the latter being employed with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within a walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—Vivian B. Lewis, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—nov.14

Famous Streets.

BROADWAY.
By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Slivash"
Broadway, the heart of New York and the lungs of the theatre business, is the best advertised street in the world. It is called Broadway, because it has no relation whatever to the straight and narrow path.
Broadway was originally a crooked and uncertain trail made by the Indians while returning from New Amsterdam with their week's supply of water. It is still crooked in spots at there is nothing uncertain about it. As New York has grown, it has been extended to take care of the Rusty business, until it is now twenty miles long and two stories deep most of the way. It begins at the Battery here the immigrants land, and wherever language except English is spoken fluently. A mile north, it becomes the lair of the multi-millionaire, and another mile north, its store all everything from tango costumes to pet alligators. Farther north, it tapers to a height of 800 feet, and then tapers to a desert of one-storey shops; with a 27-storey hotel among them, that suffers from a convulsion of theatres, recoverers only to be captured by the automobile business, and still farther north runs majestically to the hills between tall, beetling cliffs of partment houses. Fifteen miles from its source, it becomes the principal thoroughfare of Yonkers, being the only street to do duty for two large ties. It then rambles over the hills of the Hudson, between the estate of the impossibly rich, and when last seen is headed for Albany under a thick cloud of dust and automobile smoke.
Broadway contains the largest hotel in the world, for this year only; and its tallest building. The largest apartment house, the thinnest skyscraper, the most terrific restaurant and the most interesting church are all upon Broadway. It assays more millionaires, actors, automobile salesmen and gunmen than any other thoroughfare. It goes to bed at 8 p.m. at its lower end and awakens for the evening at the same hour at 42nd Street. It has more hotels, theatres, electric signs and deflected little parks than any other street. There is standing room only on its sidewalks and twice as many people travel underneath it.
Broadway is American in one reel. The immigrant lands at its lower end pack on his back, sells sandwiches for the first mile, goes into business on the second mile, sees the city government in the next mile, and proceeds directly from the business section through the restaurant area to the automobile dispensaries, to the apartment house wilderness, an thence to a country estate on the Hudson at the far upper end.
Broadway is a twenty mile fee from poverty to riches, with plenty of falling off places by the way. It will be longer some day, but never much more terrific.

Application to Remove Mayor.

Chief Magistrate at Ottawa Said to be in Arrears for Taxes.
Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Application will be made to-morrow before a high court to remove Mayor Taylor McVeit, who is elected chief magistrate of the capital at the municipal elections.
The principal grounds for the action is that Mayor McVeit, who was formerly city solicitor, had claims for damages against the city outstanding at the time of the elections, and that he is in debt to the city for taxes, and that he is insolvent.
The action is being taken by John P. Band, a plumber, who alleges that McVeit is in debt to the city for the sum of $170 for taxes during the years 1906, 1907, 1909 and 1913; that he was acting for Thomas Clarey in an action to have bye-laws of the city washed, and that he is insolvent within the meaning of the Ontario statutes; writs of execution having been issued against his goods and chattels, and that he has refused to pay them.
Mr. Band, who declares he is acting in the public interest, asks to have the mayor disqualified and the election declared null and void.
Mr. J. A. W. McNelly Solicitor, will be away from town for about three weeks. During his absence his proceedings will be attended to by Mr. Jas. P. Mackwood, Solicitor, Temple Building, Duckworth St.—Feb.14,2w,sw.

Proposals With Flowers.

In remote Alpine hamlets and villages, especially in the Bernese Oberland, there still exist ancient and pretty customs of proposing marriage by the language of flowers.
If a maid accepts a bouquet of edelweiss from a man, she at the same time accepts him as her fiance, the 'eds' being that the man has risked his life to obtain the flowers for the woman he loves.
Another method which exists in the canton of Glarus is for the young man to place a flower pot containing a single rose and a note on the window sill of the girl's room when she is absent from home and wait—perhaps days—for a reply.
If the maid takes the rose, the young man boldly enters the house to arrange matters with her parents, but if the rose is allowed to fade, the proposal is rejected without a single word having been exchanged between the couple.
Sometimes a fickle girl will keep a young man waiting a day or two for an answer, but whatever it may be it is considered final.—New York Telegram.

Household Notes

Spices should be kept in air-tight tins.
Vegetables are best bought fresh, as they are wanted.
Use the lightest weight utensils you can get in the kitchen.
Paper should not be used in a larder—it is too absorbent.
A wooden plate scraper is very useful when washing dishes.
Crinoline, rubbed on velvet, will take out every particle of dust.
It pays to have cheap white china to use in the refrigerator.
Never iron stockings; they are much better put through a mangle.
Japanese, toweling makes pretty cushions for window seats and chairs.
Every household should possess a linen closet with shelves and drawers.
Have good light always in the kitchen and keep the room well aired.
Have a roller on your pantry door, with a fresh towel always on it.
Boil a cracked dish for forty-five minutes in enough sweet milk to cover it.
Wash lamp chimneys in ammonia water if you would have them very clear.
Use a funnel for filling hot-water bottles, and the bottle will last longer.
A lot of floor scrubbing may be saved by having the kitchen floor painted.
Crossed runners of Japanese toweling make good luncheon sets for the table.
If citron hardens, let it stand a little while in hot water, then it will cut easily.
Every kitchen should have a kitchen window garden box in its south window.
Two people, one to wash and one to wipe, greatly expedite the dish-washing business.
Cookie cutters are now made which cut the cookies as fast as you roll it over the dough.
All stationary tubs should have cloth covers. They are easy to clean and very durable.
On ironing day, keep an old folded sheet handy, to lay under garments with buttons, etc.
Some housewives find that changing washday from Monday to Tuesday simplifies things immensely.

STOP COUGHING

It's quite as foolish as it is annoying to keep on coughing since PHORATONE COUGH MIXTURE is sold all over Newfoundland and guaranteed to soothe and heal the irritated parts at once, and to rapidly destroy the very cause of this aggravating nuisance. Hundreds of persons are complaining every day about the cough or cold they have had for long time, and are not able to get rid of it. Don't let a cough or cold hang on you day after day and run the risk of catching and developing the "cough" that is not easy to throw off. You will avoid all this worry (about the cough or cold you have) by obtaining PHORATONE COUGH MIXTURE at once. Price 25 cents a bottle, postage 5 cents extra. Prepared only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld. (Manufacturers also of Stafford's Liniment and Prescription "A.") Let the window curtains reach from top to bottom only of the window, and a lot of work is saved. My Funny Experiences.

BY HARRY LAUDER.

When I am asked to say or to write about my stage experiences I always refrain—at least, I have refrained hitherto—from saying much of "first-night" sensations or the feelings that possess a novice on making bow to what I might call "his special" audiences. Why I am inclined to be backward on this point I can scarcely tell; probably the true reason lies in the fact, that, like every other artist who is keen to "get there" every time, I have always been too intent on my work to pay a great deal of attention to my own particular feelings at what brainy people call "psychological moments."

When I Visit Australia.

To tell you the truth, I worry myself much more off the stage than I do while on it. I have just signed a contract to go to Australia for a tour of six months in the year—well I won't tell you the date, but I am busy packing my hat-box. So far so good. I know quite well—and I must not be accused of silly vanity in making the statement—that I shall "make good" in Australia, but ever since I signed that blessed contract I have been worrying and wondering what measure of success I'll have on my opening night at Melbourne. When the opening night does come I'll forget all about myself, my hopes and fears, and my anxieties; I'll simply lose self-consciousness, as I always do, in the character I shall portray. And ten to one when I have finished that night I won't remember any special sensation at all apart from my de-bang up to the top of my ability.

In passing on to recall one or two my special audience experiences, let me say here that I am looking forward to a glorious time in the Commonwealth quite outside my professional duties. I have long wished to see the islands down under, and I have many personal friends there.

A Momentous Occasion.

The most momentous moments of my professional life was when I appeared before the late King Edward at Lord Saville's magnificent seat, Ruford Abbey. A Royal command is, of course, the great aim, and heartfelt desire, of every public performer, and you can bet I felt very proud indeed when I was asked to appear before our late beloved monarch. Was I excited? Yes; but my excitement was not so much owing to the fact that I was due to sing before the King as to the circumstance that I might be prevented from doing so at the last moment. I will explain. The driver of the big motor-car which conveyed my son John and me to the Abbey lost his way in the darkness, and we had to make a long detour and then crack on full speed in order to arrive at the Abbey in time for the hour of the performance. We just got there with some minutes to spare and I had to dress post-haste and literally tumble on the stage.

Before the King.

The King, sitting close in to the temporary stage, started to laugh as he saw me, and when I noticed the broad smile on his honest, handsome face, I felt just as right as rain and went through my performance just as if it had been the stage of the London Fivoli. It certainly seems strange singing before a mere handful of people, but when one of your audience is the King of Great Britain, you don't worry much about the smallness of the "house." As I was about to dress Lord Saville's servant came to the door and said the King wished to talk to me. "Tell him I'm just awa' to put on my trousers!" I joyfully exclaimed thinking, of course, that His Majesty would expect to meet me in ordinary attire.

"His Majesty desires to you to come as you are, Mr. Lauder," was the servant's reply. "A' richt, then," said I; and I was marched—kilt, plaid, glengarry, wig powder, and paint—direct to His Majesty's presence. Exactly what King Edward said to me at Ruford for a pension, but I remember I expressed the hope that he was feeling fit and well, and then he shook me warmly by the hand and kept laughing all the time he was speaking. The gift I received from Edward VII I rank as my most cherished possession.

IN NEW YORK.

The first time I went to America I was nervous indeed as to what sort of a reception I would get. It was all very well to keep telling myself that there were enough of Scots in New York to give me a good send-off, but alongside of that I said to myself that there were enough Englishmen in New York to give visiting English artists the same—and everybody knows that more than a few of these have "caught the next boat home!"

Of course, I also know that I had already achieved a big popularity all over America. The output of my gramophone records told me that. But still, as I say, I was dreadfully nervous before I went on to the stage. Just at that exact moment I "lost myself," and if you ask me to tell the truth, I must say I remember nothing more of my opening show in New York until my wife read out to me in the papers next morning that "Harry Lauder was the real guy and no error. He had New York at his feet inside of two minutes last night."

AT THE PANTOMIME.

The very worst "first night" that any variety artist can put in, from the point of view of nerves that is to say, is the opening night of a pantomime. And the horrors of the evening are added to tremendously if the performer is the "star attraction." He or she knows full well that practically the whole of the success of the production rests upon him or her making good right away. I do not think I am exaggerating matters when I say that all leading pantomime artistesses put in many hours of excruciating mental anguish before the panto is exposed to the public. Speaking personally I can say that I will never forget the feelings that surged in my breast for some days and nights before I make my appearance as "Roderick M Swanky," the first pantomime character I created.

This was at Glasgow six or seven years ago. The ordeal—for such it was—had to be gone through before my own townspeople, and this fact didn't improve matters, although, to be candid, no artist could ask for a better audience than a Glasgow crowd. They're the best in the world.

A Good Catch-Phrase.

As you will know, a very necessary feature in modern pantomime is a good catch-phrase. Well, for days aye, and weeks—beforehand I had rummaged my brain to get hold of such a phrase but to try as I might, I couldn't hit upon anything that pleased me. Right up till the afternoon of the production night I was still undecided. As the time wore on I became more and more so, and was in a most unenviable state of mind, and I can assure you.

Then just as I was entering my motor-car to drive to the Theatre Royal a friend came up and remarked, "My word, you're looking well!" That did it. Here was the very phrase I had been looking, struggling, gasping, for—I said nothing. An hour later I was carried by two Japanese chair-bearers on the stage of the old Royal. Nobody in the audience knew who was behind the curtain of the chair, but when I popped out my head grined broadly and remarked, "My word! ye're lookin' awfu' well!" the house rocked with laughter. I had "got em" right away with that simply little phrase. Instantly the audience and I were friends, and my success from that moment was assured. There is a "first-night" experience for you! Simple, isn't it? Nothing in it, eh? Perhaps you may think so, but let me tell you that it is simple things that often make a success and a reputation.

Great Crime-Tracked.

Detective Eustace Was London's Sherlock Holmes—Inspector on Metropolitan Police Force Captured the Celebrated Anarchists Polti and Farnana by a Clever Ruse—How He Got the Robber Who was Looting in a Nunnery.

After twenty-seven years' service, Detective-Inspector "Eustace" of the "W" or Brixton Division, London has retired on pension from the Metropolitan Police Force. During the course of his exciting and varied career he has always shown a very satirical and extraordinary adaptability to peculiar situations ending always in the all important result—success. To slip over the early career of Inspector Eustace in the force, memory recalls 1894, when he was concerned with Mr. Quinn, the present superintendent of the special branch of Scotland Yard, in the eminently dangerous tracking down of the two desperate foreign Anarchists, Polti and Farnana, who were ultimately condemned to 10 and 20 years' penal servitude respectively for possessing explosives. Polti was arrested carrying a bomb at Backfriars Bridge, with the intention of blowing up the Stock Exchange, and Farnana, who was known to possess a revolver, was apprehended in a lodging-house at West Ham. After a ladder had been placed against a wall, Eustace mounted it, and, peering through the window of the room where Farnana was suspected to be, saw that it was occupied by some half dozen foreigners. Descending, there was a consultation among the officers, and, as a result, the downstairs door was forced open with a jemmy. Mounting the stairs stealthily by the light of a bull's-eye lantern, the officers reached the bedroom door. This, to their surprise, was unlocked, and Eustace, opening it laid full length on the floor, holding his lantern above him until he had fanned the rays upon each of the sleeping men in turn. One lay with his face concealed by his arm but a cap hanging at the head of the bed indicated that he was the "wanted" man. To make sure, however, Eustace stepped softly to the bedside, plucked a long hair from his own head and with it tickled the man's nostrils. As he did so the hand descended to remove the cause of the irritation, and in a flash he was recognized and pounced upon, the bed-clothes wrapped round him and, before he or the other occupants of the room realized what had happened, Farnana was standing in the street. While his clothes were being brought to him he became frantic with rage, shrieking in French, "It's your chalk—not mine. Until two days ago I was prepared for this. To-night I was not. It would have been a sweet death, you parasites, if I could have blown you up with my self."

The importance of the securing of these two misguided fiends was never minimized by the Home Office. They granted the officers concerned special reward of £250. The officer was often concerned in capturing culprits. On one occasion he had to descend from a roof to a back room by means of a rope, and was enabled thereby to see the "plant" in operation. A dog barked and one of the men, looking out of the window, remarked, "Oh, it's all right, it's only a cat!" Mr. Eustace gave the signal to the men who were supporting him, and the raid was successfully carried out.

Many other similar stories could be told of his daring and enthusiasm in his work, but probably his not in singular and dramatic adventure was in connection with a nunnery in East London. The complaint from the nunnery was a great mystery as to the systematic disappearance of money from a locked drawer in a room while the window was kept fastened and the doors were locked. The thefts occurred so frequently, and in so mysterious a manner, that the fervent Mother Superior was driven to the belief that the Evil One himself was at work. It was under these circumstances that Inspector Eustace was called in. He was accommodated in special apartments with two nuns to keep guard outside the door. For the purposes of detection, Inspector Eustace employed his best secret endeavors whilst the nuns were in chapel. His patience was quickly rewarded, and in a most extraordinary manner.

Whilst crouched in his observation corner he discerned a shadow moving cautiously along towards the Mother Superior's room. In his progress, the owner of the shadow was bound to pass Inspector Eustace and be aware of his presence. Realizing instantly that he was in a dangerous quandry, the officer acted as though on a flash of inspiration. Near by was a pedestal minus a statue. The inspector mounted it and posed as a statue. The thief, as he proved to be, crept along until he caught sight of the new figure on the pedestal. He gasped in fear of what he thought was an apparition, and fainted, falling heavily. And that was Inspector Eustace's opportunity. Leaping down, he gripped his man, and finding him in possession of master keys of the whole establishment, convinced all concerned that the artful criminal had been robbing the nunnery for years during the times the nuns were at their devotions. Originally he had been employed to effect some repairs on the premises, and in this way had obtained the impressions of the keys.

On two occasions Inspector Eustace was himself arrested on suspicion of being on enclosed premises at night with felonious intent, when the real facts were that he was on criminal-catching bent.

A Child's Laxative Is "Syrup Of Figs"

They love to take it and it doesn't harm the tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

"Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless 'fruit laxative.' Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-up plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

Murderous Act of Bandit Leader

Juarez, Mexico, Feb. 7.—The nine Americans and forty or fifty Mexicans, whose fate has been a mystery since the destruction of the Cumbre tunnel last Wednesday, were suffocated. This information was received here this evening at the headquarters of the Mexican Northwestern Railroad. The tragedy is laid at the door of Maximo Castillo, the bandit leader.

Railroad men here and in El Paso are furious at Castillo's act. On Tuesday twenty-two of his men were captured and executed by the rebels, and the next day, apparently in revenge, he captured the train, ran it into the south end of the tunnel, about 200 feet and there set fire to it. The passenger train entered the death trap from the north, probably travelling at its usual rate of about 15 miles an hour. When the engineer discovered the trap it was too late. Castillo's failure to send back warnings of his deed is regarded as the most cruel and murderous act of his career of outlawry, and there is a disposition here to criticize General "Fuentes" Villa for not having credited him long ago.

The missing Americans, all employees of the railroad are: M. J. Martin, of Buffalo, N.Y., superintendent of the Chihuahua division; Bernard Schofield, superintendent of terminals at Juarez; Lee Williams, assistant manager of commissary; H. F. Marders, express agent; B. J. McCutcheon, engineer; U. E. Webster, conductor; Edward Morris, road master; Thomas Kelly, conductor; James Burgess.

Cleveland Doctor Outlines New Treatment Based on the use of Sweets.

In the issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association for January 17, D. B. L. Spitzig of Cleveland, O., makes a preliminary report of a new treatment for alcoholism. He says:

"The study of the habits and characteristics of the alcoholic in eating and drinking has always been a source of great personal interest to me, and the following observations seemed particularly pregnant: Many tipplers begin at an age when boyish habits have yielded to those of man. At maturity the demand for carbohydrates is gradually lessened. Usually this gradually lessens his craving for sweets and begins to indulge in alcoholic beverages. As the supply of alcohol is increased the desire for sugars is correspondingly diminished, until a time when alcohol is taken in preference to carbohydrates.

"In alcoholism, then, there is often a positive aversion for sugar. This history of certain characteristics in the chronic alcoholic is quite general. He uses no sugar in coffee or tea, and eats little for pastries and starchy products. Stimulating food, rich in condiments, is his mainstay and his appetite for stimulating drink is thereby increased. The body, in consequence, receives a minimum of sugar and becomes accustomed to more alcohol, which has now replaced the former.

Sugar Users are Moderate Drinkers. "This is evident from a study of relationship existing between the type of beverages used and the resultant degree of alcoholism. The moderate drinker often utilizes a sweetened product and is satisfied to indulge in moderation. He assimilates both sugar and alcohol and his thirst is stilled with less drink. The confirmed alcoholic craves for no sugar and absorbs greater quantities of unsweetened alcohol to satisfy his bodily economy.

"The success or failure of the treatment, according to its originator, depends largely on the mental and moral qualities of the patient. Those who will not co-operate with the physician fail to gain much benefit, while the intelligent class, who have sufficient interest at stake to make their recovery a matter of importance, are very generally improved or cured.

Substitute for Alcohol Necessary. The report goes on to say that many former systems of treating the drink habit have failed because the alcohol was suddenly withdrawn and nothing was substituted to satisfy the craving. "Narcotics merely numb the alcoholic desire, but seldom accomplish a permanent cure," said Dr. Spitzig.

"The demand for alcohol in the perverted metabolic state of the alcoholic is not mental alone, but physical, or rather physico-chemical. When the body cells are supplied with a physiologic balance of carbohydrates there is no further demand for alcohol.

"At the inception of treatment the diet is modified to contain an abundance of sugar. Cereals, with cane sugar, sweet fruits, pastries, chocolate and ice-cream are advised. In some cases, owing to a distaste for sugars, this change must be gradual to prevent rebellion. Here lactose is used. A dram every two hours, given in the form of a medicinal powder to encourage the psychic effect. Later, as the demand for alcohol is palliated ordinary sugars are taken with avidity.

"During the entire treatment elimination is increased by every known means.

Toddies, juleps and sweet wines are of especial value as substitutes for strongly alcoholic drinks. After from three to five days alcohol is omitted entirely from the daily regimen, and very gradually the sugar is also reduced until the patient is again normal.

Peter Nigosh, an Indian trapper in the part of the Lake of the Woods district in Ontario, was eaten by wolves after a desperate fight in which he killed nine of them, their half eaten bodies being found near what little was left of the hunter's body.

An English diamond digger has arrived in London with a diamond of the first water, amber in color and perfectly clear, weighing 178 1/2 carats, but he cannot find a purchaser. It was found at Droogeveld, South Africa, and resembles the Kohinoor.

There were many thousands of executions in China last year, and official figures for some of the provinces published in Peking on Jan. 2nd show that in Sze-chuen alone 24,000 were put to death, most of them being robbers. A number were political offenders. It is intimated in official circles in Peking that the estimate of 24,000 is conservative.

As the result of a drunken man poking his head through the door of the Italian Hall in Red Jacket, the business district of Calumet, Mich., and calling out 'fire' six or seven hundred persons, principally women and children, who were attending a Christmas tree entertainment got up for the children of the striking copper miners, became panic-stricken and rushed for the closed doors at the foot of a narrow stairway, in their endeavors to get through which 72 lives were lost, 64 being children.

Shot Blackhand and is Acquitted

New York, Feb. 6. —Carmine Lyonzlata, on trial for murder, told a story of blackhand persecution to a jury in general sessions court yesterday that resulted in his acquittal. Lyonzlata shot and killed Luigi Giordano in Hester Street, on November 24 last. He testified that for a year he had been followed by Giordano's gang, that the gang had put four bullets in his body at different times, and that once they had placed a bomb in his brother's store. On the day of the shooting he said Giordano accosted him on the street and demanded "the money" mentioned in a black hand letter sent to the defendant. The other witnesses testified that Giordano's friends removed a revolver from his pocket after he had fallen.

What's an Oyster

"Now," asked the teacher, "who can tell me what an oyster is?" Silence for a moment, while small brows were knit in strained effort at remembrance. Then little Tommy's facial muscles relaxed and eagerly he raised his hand. "I know," he triumphantly announced. "An oyster is a fish built like a hut." —Cleveland Ledger.

Radium Lost and Found.

New York, Feb. 7.—A cable from Liverpool to the world, says: It was found yesterday that a tube of radium worth $5,000 has been found in the royal infirmary here. It appears that the tube was fixed with bandages to the face of a patient where it was supposed to stay all night. In the morning it was gone. It was thought that it must have fallen out of the dressing to the floor and been swept out. The sweepings filled a big cart, which was stopped in time. Prof. Wilberforce by placing an electrocope on the edge of the cart was able to determine that the radium was there. The rubbish was dug out in buckets. As the twelfth bucket was taken out, Prof. Wilberforce detected the presence of the radium tube, which was soon found.

One Dose Relieves A Cold--No Quinine

"Pape's Cold Compound" makes you feel fine at once—Don't stay stuffed-up! Take it now.

Relief come instantly. A dose taken every two hours until three doses are taken will end gripe misery and break up a severe cold either in the head, chest, body or limbs.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffing! Ease your throbbing head! Nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, causes no inconvenience. Be sure you get the genuine.

Fortunes at the Finish

Miners' Luck at the Eleventh Hour. "Boss, come here," said one of the "boys" in the employ of Mr. Bowker, an Englishman who was working a diamond claim at Droogeveld, on the Vaal River.

"The boss came and the kaffir showed him a huge diamond of 178 1/2 carats, or early the size of the Kohinoor.

This was in October last, and on the very day when Mr. Bowker and his partner had decided to abandon the claim which had produced only a few small stones. Needless to say, they did not leave, and a few days later they hit upon another diamond even larger than the first. It was of 196 3/4 carats, and sold in the rough for £1,770.

It is strange how often the miner makes a fortune out of an abandoned or almost abandoned claim.

There was such a case at Waarn Yarra, in Australia, in May, 1903. Two Kingston miners bought an old claim for a song, and found it in such bad condition that it needed timbering all through. One wanted to give it up, but the other suggested that they might try their luck for a day or two. So they took some props down and set to work.

The first man stuck his pick into the clay roof to make a hole for a prop, and down fell a large stone almost on his head. But it was not a stone. It was a nugget of pure gold, weighing 115 oz.

Made Two Millions in a Year.

The richest copper mine in the world is the United Verde in Arizona. It was originally found by a couple of ranchers who sold it for 10,000 dollars (£2,000) to two men named Murray and Trimble.

They worked it and found little copper, and were absolutely at the end of their resources when they struck a pocket not of copper but silver ore, which netted them a sum of £18,000.

They came to an end of the silver, and abandoned the mine as worthless. Another man came down from Montana and bought the old claim for a few hundreds. He struck the real vein of copper, and within ten years it made him one of the richest men in the world. In a single twelve-month he took out copper valued at £2,400,000.

This calls to mind the even more famous Mount Morgan gold mine. The first owner of the land was Donald Gordon, who grazed his flocks above untold and unknown riches and sold the land for a pittance to two brothers named Morgan.

They set to work, and the quartz panned out up to 800 oz. of gold to the ton. In 1889, £1,000,000 was distributed to the shareholders. One shareholder left a fortune of £2,311,000.

Gradually the gold quartz petered out and the Mount Morgan mine was supposed to be dead.

Then some clever mineralogist, poking about the half-deserted works, realized that there was more copper producer, and a new process was discovered for extracting gold from the copper. To-day Mount Morgan is still going strong.

Lazell's MASSATTA

Not only softer, smoother, more satisfying than any other, but distinguished by the "True Oriental Odor," a fragrance unobtainable in its subtlety and charm.

In addition to Massatta we carry a complete line of Lazell's Famous Specialties, including the most exquisite Perfumes, soaps, hair oils, Waters, suppers, Creams, and Powders of unquestionable excellence.

At all Druggists, St. John's, N.E.
