Stella Mordant.

The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

CHAPTER XXIX.

"A man? It is the first time I have ever heard of a man being a woman's best friend," she said, with a suppressed bitterness. "As a rule, he is her worst enemy. I speak from experience. Yes, I'm married; I saw you looking at my wedding ring."

"I beg your pardon!" she faltered. "Oh, there's nothing to apologize for," said Nita. "I'm married, and I'm not a widow—that I know of."

"That you know of!" exclaimed Stella. "No," said Nita, quite calmly. "My husband left me—deserted me."

Stella uttered a little startled cry of sympathy, and Nita laughed, and bit off the end of her cotton in a matter-of-fact way.

"Oh, that's not uncommon—at least not with women of my sort," she said. "Mine's quite an ordinary case; you read scores of similar ones in the newspapers. I'm sure I don't know why I've told you, I don't generally allude to it, but—"

"No, I'm not married," she assented. "Then don't be," said Nita, coolly. "I often wonder why young girls are so anxious to have a husband, when they can see for themselves that not one married woman in a hundred is happy; but it's the way of humanity, I suppose. Women were sent into the world to be the slaves of men."

"Most of them, anyway," rejoined Nita. "Do you like this dress?" she held up the garment, a rather striking combination of crimson satin and black lace. "It's one I'm going to wear to-morrow night when I sing 'The Society Girl,'—sing and dance. It tells of the life of a London lady who is supposed to work harder, going to balls and concerts and that sort of thing, than the women who make shirts and go out charring; and the girls who listen to it believe it, though some of them work in some way sixteen hours a day. It gratifies them to hear that it is not all beer and skittles for the lady slangs. I beg your pardon for the slang—you mustn't mind it. I hear it all day, and it comes natural."

"Why should you apologize?" said Stella. "I understood what you meant. And are you going to wear any other dress?" she asked, deeply interested, notwithstanding her pain, in the strangely novel life of her benefactress.

"You go out," she added, with a touch of cynical pride which seemed sadder to Stella than anything else about her. "I'm a big success in my line, you see."

"I am very glad," said Stella. "Are you? Thank you. It's more than I am. It came too late—it usually does, so they say. If it had come a few months earlier— But I don't know. I don't suppose things would have been very different, or I should have been any happier. I should always have known and felt that he was staying with me because it was worth his while."

"Your husband, do you mean?" said Stella in a low voice. "Nita bent lower over her work. 'Yes,' she said, in a monotonous voice, as if she were answering an ordinary question. 'Shocks you, doesn't it? It is evident you don't know anything of the profession. Almost all of us have got a husband living on her salary, and most of the women think I am lucky in being a grass widow. There! I didn't mean to whine to you, or to bore you. No doubt you've got enough of your own trouble to think of.'

"You don't bore me," said Stella. "I'm so sorry for you! How unhappy you must be!"

Nita laughed shortly. "Oh, no, I'm not," she said; then her lips twitched, and the lids dropped over the dark eyes, as if she had been suddenly smitten by a painful memory. "But I was at first," she went on, reluctantly. "You see, I was foolish enough to be fond of him, and while we were together I didn't mind how much I worked, or how rough a time we had. And it was a rough time. I hadn't made my name then, as I said, and I had to work hard to earn just enough for us—to keep body and soul together; but I was content if he threw me a kind word now and again, and that wasn't often; for men of his sort haven't many kind words to throw to their wives when the beer and tobacco run short and the cupboard's empty."

"But—why didn't he work too?" asked Stella in her innocence. Nita shrugged her shoulders. "Work was scarce, and when it wasn't, he didn't care about it. He left me to do the work for both of us; and one day when I was looking for it, he went off."

"Oh!" breathed Stella. "Yes; he left a note—just a few lines—saying that he was off to the Klondike to make his fortune. And I was fool enough to fret after him. If he had only said 'good-bye,' if he had only given me one kiss—but a short note! Bah! why am I raking it all up again?" she broke off, with a harsh laugh; but Stella saw a tear in the fierce eyes which belied the cynical bitterness of the voice.

Stella was silent for a moment or two, then she said, timidly: "And—haven't you heard—?"

"Not likely!" said Nita. "Oh, yes I expected to hear. I stayed in the same diggings for months, and I've left my address there—thinking, yes hoping—that perhaps he'd got stoned broke and work his way back. I was foolish then, you see; but I've got wiser since. I expect he made that fortune."

Stella leant forward in her eagerness. "Oh, but—perhaps you are wronging him by such a thought! Perhaps he failed, and is poor still, and too proud."

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggist's."

Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake. Zylex, London. mar16, eod, tf and the eyes flashed. "You think me a hard-hearted woman, I can see!" she said, with suppressed passion; "and perhaps you're right; but if you'd been deserted as I've been, and by the man you loved and worked for, you'd be hard-hearted. I was as soft and gentle as you, once."

The colour died out of her face and the flame from her dark eyes. "I beg your pardon," she said, biting her lips, "but it all came back to me as we were talking, and I—I lost myself. If he's dead, as you suggest, then I've suffered too much to mourn for him—and there's many a woman who could say the same. Let me see if your foot's easier."

She made the examination with a gentleness in strange contrast to her recent outburst of passion; but Stella felt the thin hand tremble as it touched her foot, and, moved by a pitying impulse, she leant forward and touched Nita's forehead with her lips.

"I am so sorry for you!" she said. Nita bowed her head for a moment, then looked up steadily. "Thank you," she said in a low voice; "but you needn't be. There's some trouble that sears the heart, and mine was of that sort. I don't suffer now; and I'm too busy to—to have time to brood and think. I'm playing nearly every night—sometimes twice a night when I'm in London—and that occupies my mind. It's only sometimes that I miss having someone to work for and to bully me."

The sadness with which this was said brought the tears to Stella's eyes. Nita rose and lit a candle. "I think you'd better go to bed," she said. "I'll help you. Lean heavily. Why, I could carry you in my arms. I'm strong; it's the dancing."

She not only assisted Stella to the bedroom which she had engaged for her, but quietly insisted upon helping her to undress. Then she stood and looked at Stella with a wistfulness faintly visible in the dark eyes. "You kissed me just now," she said in a low voice. "You—had no cause to be ashamed of it."

After a moment or two, Stella understood; and, with a cry of pity and comprehension, put her arms around Nita and kissed her again. It was some time before she fell asleep, for her strange surroundings and Nita's pitiful story kept her awake. It seemed to her impossible that any man could be so heartless and cruel as this woman's husband. She thought of Rath; so noble, so unselfish, and the bitterness of her love and her separation from him swept over her like a wave, and drove even her regret and self-reproach for Lord Lisle's grief from her mind. She dreamt of Rath through all her sleeping hours.

When she limped into the sitting-room the next morning, Nita, who was making the tea, greeted her quietly and with an air of repression, as if she wished to ignore the conversation of the preceding night. "You ought not to have got up," she said. "I was going to bring you some breakfast. How is the foot?" "Better—much better," replied Stella.

Ever Ready Hot Water, Night and Day.

FOR THE NURSERY. "The bath ready for baby, when baby is ready for the bath" should be an adage of every housewife—who should also keep in mind that a "cable saved to the nurse makes for a well-ordered, contented household. Gas Water-Heaters, whether of the Instantaneous or Circular type, offer the convenience of available hot water "upstairs, downstairs, and in my lady's chamber,"—without any labour at all—Independently of the state of the kitchen fire.

FOR THE BATHROOM. An uncertain supply of hot water in the bathroom is a frequent cause of annoyance. Hot water can only be secured, usually, by getting the cook to act as stoker, but at what a cost!

FOR THE HOUSE-HOLD. When "Spring cleaning days" engross the busy housewife then the convenience of an unlimited supply of hot water on the upper floors is brought home to her with special force. But at all times—apart from convenience—a gas water-heater makes an irresistible appeal to the housewife from the point of view of dealing with the domestic problem.

Later-day domestic life is difficult to keep unless due consideration is shown by saving them unnecessary drudgery—and in the category of unnecessary drudgery may be included the toil of carrying hot water or coal upstairs, the cleaning of grates and the removal of dirt and ashes. The gas water-heater renders such labour superfluous.—may12, tf know that kind of sprain." "I'm afraid I'm intruding," said Stella. Nita smiled. "You wouldn't say so if you knew how glad I am to have you, she retorted; "indeed, if I wasn't so honest I'd let you potter about so that I could have you with me longer."

Stella looked at her gratefully; then she coloured. "Of course, you will let me pay—I mean, I have money."

"Oh, you shall pay—if you can really afford it," she said. Stella, still blushing, took out her purse and showed her the gold. "I am quite rich, you see," she said, gaily. Nita laughed. "So you are," she said. "I can remember when I should have considered as much as you've got there a small fortune. Now I earn as much in a week, I suppose," she added, checking a sigh. "So that if you run short, you must go shares with me. Why, what a child you are! I wish I could blush like that! But rouge isn't a bad substitute, if you know how to put it on."

"Is there anything I can do to help you?" Stella asked, as Nita got out her costumes after breakfast and began to overhaul them. "Perhaps I could help you mend some of those things?" Nita shook her head. "No, thanks," she said. "There's not much to do; but I like to look them over in case anything has gone wrong. We dress so quickly that sometimes something gives unawares. But you can hear me say the words of a couple of new songs I'm going to try, if you like."

SMASHED FURNITURE.—A resident of the higher levels started to make matchwood of the furniture in his own house Saturday night, and at the instance of his wife was arrested.

SALMON PLENTIFUL.—Salmon were plentiful on Saturday and again this morning at Portugal Cove, and fishermen there met with good re- sults and disposed of their catches in town this morning at fancy prices. Some of the salmon were of enormous size. We saw three of them retailed on Duckworth Street that went over 80 lbs. combined.

DELIRIUM TREMENS THE CAUSE.—Saturday night a middle aged man ran into a surgery and asked for something he couldn't get. The physician handed him over to the police. Yesterday he became ob- streperous in the lockup cell and at- tempted to do injury to himself and had to be guarded. Dr. Campbell was called and found the patient to have a bad attack of delirium tremens.

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:—

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $951,000.00, and a reserve fund of $229,300.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is im- peded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities and administers their funds.
5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

Borden Puts Head Tax on Nfldrs.

Not Allowed in Canada Without $25 Each—Puts Them on Plane with Lowest Scum in Europe—Indignation in Newfoundland—Serious Reprisal May Result—Piece of Folly and Injustice.

There is a law or order-in-council requiring immigrants to Canada to have $50 each in the winter and $25 in the summer. This regulation can be enforced or not, at the option of the government. It has not been generally enforced in the past, except to keep out undesirable immigrants, since Canada's immense area of un- occupied land and progress in com- merce and industry gives room for an ever increasing number of people, and often the best sort of immigrant has only enough money to bring him to the shore of the Dominion or to the place in Canada where he intends to make his home. This regulation has never heretofore been enforced against Newfoundlanders, but only, as has been said, as a rule against the most undesirable class of foreigners.

Newfoundlanders "Foreigners."

Last week, however, the Borden government at Ottawa ordered its im- migration officers to enforce this re- gulation against Newfoundlanders, and yesterday a party of 36 who ar- rived at North Sydney, coming to work at the coal mines on Cape Breton, were held up, and only allowed to land on a bond being given in con- nection with them.

This is the most extraordinary ac- tion for a Canadian government to take, and has properly caused the greatest indignation in Newfoundland. It will undoubtedly be also resented strongly by Newfoundlanders in Cape Breton, a large number of whom came here with practically nothing, but by their industry and frugality have got along comfortably and are among the best citizens in their new home. They will quite properly resent having men from their old home placed by the Borden govern- ment on the same basis as the scum and lowest dregs of the popu- lation of Europe.

Hardship and Reprisal.

This order if persisted in will cause much hardship in Newfoundland, and will also undoubtedly have the gravest consequences upon the steel in- dustry of Cape Breton. It will cause hardship because the past winter and spring have been very bad in New- foundland owing to the unsettling of business by the war and the practical- ly complete failure of the seal fishery. Hundreds of families have been look- ing forward to their men getting work, as usual, in Cape Breton during the summer months, to partly make up for the very hard time they have had. There are not many industries in Newfoundland, and the prospect of a considerable number of the men being able to get work here during the summer has tended to lighten the very grave problem of unemployment facing the government there. If this opening is shut off, however, the New- foundland government will have to seek some way of giving these men work, and the result undoubtedly will be the starting of public works, the revenue to pay for which will in reality come out of the steel works, steel workers and coal miners of Cape Breton.

An Export Tax.

For if the Nfld. government is driven to it, this revenue will undoubtedly be raised by putting an export duty on iron ore. The Cape Breton steel industries depend upon ore supplies from Newfoundland, and will have to pay this export tax to get the ore. In turn they are likely to pass on part of it to the workmen in the shape of a reduction in pay.

Another phase of this matter is the adverse effect it will have on the sentiment in favor of confederation with Canada, which recently has been again growing in Newfoundland. This dagger thrust from Canada, just when Nfld. is "up against it," and all to pre- vent a few hundred Newfoundlanders from earning their living for the summer months, will create the greatest enmity towards Canada in Newfoundland.

The extent of the folly of this ac- tion of the Borden government will now be apparent. The fine Italian hand of Mr. John C. Douglas can be observed in the matter. Undoubtedly the order was made on his representa- tions. Perhaps he thought he was doing Cape Breton workmen a favor, and did not care if it was at the ex- pense of the compatriots,—relatives and friends,—of Newfoundlanders here whose votes he will be looking for in a short time.—Glouce Bay Ga- zette, June 1st, 1915.

Amusements.

LIFE'S CRUCIBLE.

A superb production from the famous Selig Studio will form one of the five splendid reels to be shown at the British Theatre commencing to-night. The balance of the bill comprises: "Broncho Billy Vaga- bond," a western drama; "Hogan's Alley," a side-splitting comedy, and "The Livid Flame" a two reel Biograph masterpiece. In addition to the above excellent and highly enter- taining photo plays Arthur Priestman Cameron will sing one of his comedy songs, whilst the many friends of Miss Keeping will also be pleased to hear that she will preside at the piano. For all round excellence the above comprises the strongest com- bined show so far given to British Theatre patrons.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END.

There will be an entire change of programme to-night, some of the finest pictures ever seen. There will be a new singer, the little pupil of Mrs. Rossley's, Miss Dot Marshall, who made such a hit with her patri- otic song: "Come on Tommy, Come on Jack," will appear for one week. Mrs. Rossley intends to give all her little pupils a trial at "Ours." As they are all such favorites with the St. John's public, and she is hard at work teaching their new songs.

AMBUSHED.

This magnificent Essanay produc- tion will be shown at the House of Masterpieces to-night and should draw a large number of spectators for it is brimful of stirring incidents, tremendous excitement, and thrilling adventures. Mr. Francis X. Bush- man, the famous actor, is seen por- traying a difficult part to perfection. "Ambushed" is a story that is vividly told and surrounds Frank Mitchell, a lawyer, and Mabel Darnley, an hei- ress. A cousin of Mabel's learns that she is to inherit all the wealth of an aunt and he gets nothing unless Mabel dies. He with his villainous as- sistants plot to secure Mabel and kill her. The plot is known to Mitchell who accidentally learns it, and the stirring incidents that follows Mit- chell's attempts at rescue are full of excitement and romance. The part played by detectives is particularly fascinating and thrilling. It is a pic- ture that should be seen and as with previous pictures will be seen by thousands.

BIG VAUDEVILLE BILL AT ROSS- LEYS.

To-night there is one of the best shows ever seen at Rossley's. Mr. Ballard and Miss Madge Locke in an Irish comedy act, with some of the finest songs heard in a long time. The act is one brimful of wit and good Irish humor. The pictures are everyone features, none better, and lots not as good. The pantomime preparation is in full swing and will be a beauty. "Little Bo Peep" and "Lit- tle Boy Blue," new and beautiful costumes. The costumes worn by the eight sunshine girls were greatly admired at the garden party when this talented little troupe entertain- ed the guests at Government House, but for this wonderful production will be seen better. The songs and dan- ces will be something worth seeing and hearing. Miss Madge Locke is working hard to make this a great here whose votes he will be looking for in a short time.—Glouce Bay Ga- zette, June 1st, 1915.

THE IDENTIFICATION.

The great Kalem masterpiece in two reels that the Crescent Picture Palace is showing to-day, "The Identification" in which Helen Holmes features, is one of the best if not the best Kalem feature released. Miss Holmes was especially engaged to star in this drama and she has cer- tainly put her best work into it. G. M. Anderson is also on the bill to-day in "Broncho Bill Outlaw." The comedies the Crescent bills to-day are irresistibly funny. Mr. Delmonico sings a pretty waltz ballad: "There's a Little Spark of Love Still Burning." The Crescent always has a good week opening bill and to-day's is one of their best.

The How vs. the What.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

I once heard a vaudeville artist sing a song in which she mentioned various things which other people did in a vulgar way but which she dignified by her manner of doing them 'like a lady.' One verse, for instance, explained how other people sometimes chewed gum in an offensive manner, 'but I chews fine like a lady.'

Of course it was amusing, but it had a germ of truth in it, too.

The subjective in life is just as important as the objective.

The way in which you do things and the way you feel about them matters as well as the things you do. Dancing Can Be An Exercise or An Insult.

Take the new dances, for instance. Few things are more changed by what you put into them than dancing. People who object so violently to all kinds of dancing forget that, like music, dancing has infinite possibilities of interpretation. The much discussed new dances take their color from the dancers. I have seen the fox-trot, the onestep or the canter danced in a frank and simple way as a form of graceful exercise. And I have also seen them danced in a manner which made one wonder what the girls' mothers were about, to permit such things to go on.

Again a book or a play is not the same thing to any two people who read or see it.

I read recently two criticisms of a certain farce. One critic says it is very broad and rather coarse; the other that it is a thoroughly wholesome farce with nothing objectionable in it. Now both critics saw the play, but each must have put something into it out of his own mind and experience.

The Girl Whom Strange Men Spoke To.

To go a step further, it seems to me that the tendency of your mind not only colors what you do and what you think, but it influences your relation to events and people. I know a girl who is always being spoken to on the street by strange men. She has a modest enough bearing and is not a striking looking girl, but she is one who thinks a good deal about such things. I believe that this tendency of mind in some way attracts such experiences to her.

Of course outer conditions do react to change and form the inner mind, and so what one does certainly matters, but one should not forget that how one does it and how one feels about it also matter.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question.—Do you think a man has a moral right to make his wife promise not to marry again, or vice versa?
 —L. C. B.

Answer.—No, I do not. Nor do I see how anyone could take satisfaction in having such a promise made to him. One would find happiness in having a wife who loved one so much that she would not want to marry again, but surely not in holding her an unwilling and resentful prisoner to the letter of compact whose spirit she no longer feels. Furthermore, I don't believe a woman from whom such a promise has been extracted (especially if the extraction was done on a deathbed) is under moral obligation to keep it if love comes knocking at the door of her heart.

The Question of Prohibition.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Some time ago you intimated your desire to hear the different opinions of your intelligent readers on their thoughts about the ultimate fate of the so-called "Liquor Question." Since then I have watched and waited most eagerly for some advance of logical admissions or other theoretical material, either for or against absolute prohibition, material that would make the earnest thinker still more thoughtful and induce him to inquire into this most vital problem that some future day will constitute the most absorbing topic and furnish the most important question ever before issued in this country to be settled by the suffrage of the people. I shall not attempt to advance deductions from political economy. Time and conditions have changed since Adam Smith promulgated his "Wealth of Nations." Of such arguments we have had quite a lot during the last "Local Option Campaign." The comparison of immorality with intemperance is wholly absurd, and to control morality by enforced temperance is likewise unreasonable. Some of the most noted criminals in history have been radical abstainers, while some of our most gifted men of genius, word and deed have indulged in the flowing bowl. In this comparison there are perhaps no two individuals alike, and to condemn a whole nation and stigmatize them with inability to manage their own affairs is ridiculous. The effect of enforced prohibition can easily be proven by the backward intelligence of the "Turk." What figure does he cut after twelve centuries of strict adherence to the laws of Mohammed? The question at issue must only be viewed from the sociological standpoint. The old adage "a man's mind is his kingdom" holds only good when applied to the individual. A man's mind is character, his will, his judgment to discriminate between good and evil, it is his soul. If he chooses to abstain or not he is at all times sovereign lord of his present and future state of well-being. The minds of the majority on this liquor question can never induce the minority to form a perfect union, since coercion and harmony are incompatible. Should the individual be lacking of strength of will, power and firmness of character and self-reliance, but nevertheless cast his vote for prohibition, he is largely degrading his manhood and lowering himself to the level of the criminal, who through fear or other motives surrenders himself to justice. Nay, he is worse, for by his vote he helps to deprive his fellow-men of their liberty to exercise their own free will and hinders them to act in accordance to the dictates of their desires. Absolute prohibition can only be attained by the combined votes of fanatical sentimentalist and "kitten-heated men. All honor to the man, who through conviction, or desire to show example to his offspring or others under his care, or through the knowledge that he cannot control his baser passions. Yes, all honor to such a man if he abstains from all strong drink. But little honor to him who through his vote puts a halter around his own neck with no other result than part remorse after he has voted and part stentorian joy that he has helped dealing to his own level men of loftier ideals than he ever possessed.

I am, etc.,

Naval Reservist Died of Meales.
 Mrs. Mary Ann Reader, of Bonavista, has received word from the Admiralty intimating that her son, John, who was one of the reservists to cross on the "Ordnua," had died at Penance on May 17th. Meales and complication was the cause of his death. He was 18 years of age and was one of the three boys who left school to fight for the Empire. The Admiralty had provided £2 for a headstone, said Reservist Norman Harris, in a letter recently, and that the Bonavista Reservists were adding to that amount. Deceased is survived by a sorrowing mother, two sisters and one brother to whom much sympathy is expressed.

NOTH OF THANKS.—Mrs. and Mr. E. H. Willis and family wish to thank the teachers and pupils of Bishop Spencer College, brethren of the Masonic Temple and numerous kind friends who sent notes of sympathy and flowers at the death of their little daughter Sidney.

THIRTY-FIVE AERIAL BATTLES
OCCURRED DURING LAST MONTH.
London, June 2.—The log of the British flying corps for the past month, shows that there have been no less than thirty-five battles in the air, in all of which victory is claimed for the British airmen.
Two encounters with Zeppelins are included in the list.

Respirators are Not a Success.

Fall to Save the Men in Trenches From Gas Poisoning.

Toronto, June 1.—That the respirators, or "muzzles," as the British "Tommyes" call them, fail to save the men in the trenches from gas poisoning is the assertion of a non-commissioned officer in the British army, who writes to his uncle, Rev. A. Logan Geggie, of Toronto. He says: "The wind being favorable, and the gallant Wurtembergers being in a domestic frame of mind, they turned the gas on." All donned the "efficacious antidote" (a chemically treated pad of cotton wool four inches square). Eyes began to water and smart uncomfortably, and the fog rolled on. In case my writing is not sufficiently descriptive, just ask your wife to throw a handful of chloride of lime in your face. That should give you a fair idea of the preliminary stages of the gas trouble. And the fog rolled on. Breathing became difficult. Bloodshot eyes shot rapid, pathetic questions, and toil with splendid zest, to trim the whiskers from the lawn, and keep the weeds suppressed. They pull up thistles by the roots, and swat all noxious weeds, and softly say, "We'll bet our boots these things won't scatter seeds." They to their homes devote their lives; they strive to keep things neat; they know the lawn, where blue grass thrives, for beauty can't be beat. The tenth man doesn't care a whoop how shabby things appear; the weeds are growing round his coop in regiments, each year. The grass is smothered by the weeds, which swipe each inch of soil, and every zephyr blows the seeds, to queer the good men's toil. There is no law to make him eat his weeds, or mow them down, although his place will queer the street, and handicap the town. Why doesn't congress up and knock this Jonah on the pate? For nearly every village block has got this sort of skate.

Teachers' Salaries.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Pardon me for taking up your valuable columns to back up Dives Letter which appeared in the Daily News of the 27th inst. I have been a teacher of A. A. standing and taught school for several years but was obliged to quit on account of not getting enough to live. To become proficient in the art of teaching the School Boards will send a boy to a Training School in St. John's. On those pupil teachers the country is spending thousands of dollars annually to train them. What returns do they give the country for the money spent on them? After a couple of years teaching they resign to go at something else. We cannot blame those energetic young men for with all their education they are expected to work for less than the common laborer receives. What is offered them when they leave College with an A. A. or First Grade? The Chairman of the School Board will offer him one hundred and fifty dollars from the School Board plus his Augmentation. After reaching the A. A. Augmentation Standard his salary for the money spent on them is generally ended. The Board may increase his salary to Two hundred and fifty dollars but in the majority of cases that is the limit. Even two hundred and fifty dollars in many of the charming eyes is very large. If they have nothing else to do with the money they will build schools in holerling distances of another so as not to increase the Teachers' Salaries. I have seen the advertisements in the Daily News of which Dives speaks. In those times when the cost of living is so high I must say any Chairman who would offer any male teacher such a small sum must have great courage. The teacher accepting will certainly never die of indigestion. If there were anything in the teaching profession there would not be any necessity of putting an "ad" in any paper. If there be a job vacant in any other branch of the Government you will not see an "ad" in the paper. No, but instead there are generally about fifty applicants. The members of the district in which the vacancy occurs are interviewed by the biggest influence in the district and after seven or eight Executive meetings this appointment is made—the heeler with the biggest pull gets the job. Not so in the teaching profession on account of starvation salaries. The only man that ever did anything for education in this country as far as teachers are concerned was ex-Premier Bond. He increased the Education Grant so that the Augmentation Grant was increased 50 per cent. He also increased the grants to the Boards so that out of $60,000 increase to the Education Grant every teacher got at least from fifty to one hundred dollars increase. What has Premier Morris done for Education? I say nothing but cod the teachers. Whenever he speaks of education in the House he boasts he has increased the Education Grant $100,000. Where has the money gone? In whose pockets has it gone? Not, I am sorry to say, in the pockets of the teachers but increasing the College Grants of St. John's and increasing the Inspectors salaries. Out of the $100,000 increase the A. A. and 1st Grade Teachers got the paltry increase of thirty dollars; the 2nd Grade, twenty, and 3rd Grade ten. Is not this a creditable showing for the colder Morris. Let us compare Bond's increases with Morris' Bond could give nearly a hundred increase out of $60,000 to every teacher. Morris could only give thirty dollars to the highest grade teacher out of $100,000. In the allocating of the increase to the four great educational authorities—the Inspectors—gave thirty dollars to both A. A. and 1st Grade. What authority had those leasured gentlemen to put an A. A. on the same list as 1st Grade. It requires much more study and time to get an A. A. than to get an A. A. Grade is recognized as the highest grade in the Education Act. Why then give an A. A. only the same increase as a 1st Grade. Just only another example of the levelling and down grade system the Morris Government has established.

Let the Government get a move on it it intends to keep experienced teachers in the profession. Give the teacher a living wage. Let the Government pay according to years of experience so that a teacher going on yesterday will not receive as much as a teacher of twenty years experience. Increase the Augmentation Grant so that young teachers will have something to look ahead to. Give an A. A. of over twenty years standing three hundred dollars; 1st Grade two hundred dollars; and 3rd Grade one hundred and fifty dollars. 'Twould only take an increase of about thirty thousand dollars. Morris gives twice as much as this to the front rank of heeler to keep them in tune for the next elections. Make the teachers contented with their work and then we shall see education flourish.

I am, yours, truly,
EX-TEACHER.

The Loss of the Vosges.

AN ORCADIAN ON BOARD.

The Submarine Attack — A Two Hours' Chase — Interesting Interview.

An interesting account of the sinking of the Moss Line steamship Vosges by a German submarine off Trevo Head on 20th ult., was given by Mr. James Stewart to a "Glasgow Evening News" representative. Mr. Stewart who is a marine engineer, came across the Atlantic on the Barington Tweedmouth from Baltimore to Bordeaux. He left the steamer at the later port, and was travelling as a passenger on board the Vosges which sailed for Liverpool, on 18th March.

All went well, said Mr. Stewart, until shortly after ten o'clock on Saturday morning when a submarine was sighted on the port side. The craft would then be about 300 yards from them. She was flying the German ensign, and had up the A B signal for them to abandon the ship. Captain Green, however, paid no attention to the signal. He gave orders that all steam was to be put on, and kept the head of the ship out to sea as there was a good swell at the time. This manoeuvre put the submarine to some disadvantage as the seas were breaking over her, and by this move Captain Green succeeded in depriving the enemy of the use of his torpedoes.

A Stern Chase.

It was a stern chase, but within half-an-hour the submarine had got into position and first of all fired a blank shot. As no heed was paid to it the shells soon came along. The captain, however, continued to handle his ship in such a fashion that it was only at intervals that the enemy could bring his guns to bear, but when he did his fire was deadly. The first shot hit the steamer on the port quarter and made a big hole in her side. Twenty minutes later the chief engineer came up and told him (Mr. Stewart) that he had all the steam he could give the vessel, but he was afraid they would not get away. Shortly afterwards another shell came through the side of the ship and killed the chief engineer who at the time was standing at the stokehold door.

A Score of Shells Fired.

For fully two hours, continued Mr. Stewart, the Vosges kept in front of the submarine. In all about a score of shells were fired, and nearly half of them hit the ship. The effect was terrible. One shot carried away the aft rigging, another wrecked the rooms of the four engineers, while the one which really sunk the steamer struck her below the water-line, almost under the bridge. The bridge itself came in for a good deal of attention, and suffered accordingly. All four officers who were on it being more or less injured; while the last shell fired carried away the funnel.

The Congestion From a Bad Cold Loosened Up in One Hour.

If Rubbed on at Night You're Well Next Morning.

NERVILLE NEVER FAILS.

When that cold comes, how is it to be cured? This method is simplicity itself. Rub the chest and throat vigorously with "Nerville." Rub it in good and deep. Lots of rubbing can't do any harm. Rub it in some Nerville in the water and use it as a gargle; this will ease the cough, cut out the phlegm, assist in breaking up the cold quickly.

Dodging The Shells.

The submarine kept up the chase until shortly afternoon. So near was the enemy at times that they could plainly distinguish the seamen emerging from the conning tower, carrying the shells to the gun about to be fired they always lay down on the deck. The mess-room boy, who was hit in the leg by a bit of shell, watched the movements of those on board the submarine from the aft deck, and at intervals he would shout—"Look out there; they're going to fire again."

The second mate was badly hurt. He was hit on the arm by a splinter of a shell, which first of all passed through the overcoat of the chief mate. The splinter made a hole in his arm about the size of a "crown" piece. The only lady passenger on board was a Belgian, and she was struck on the ankle, receiving a wound about an inch long.

Just as the captain decided to abandon the ship, a patrol vessel, fortunately, when in sight and he signalled to her. When the small boats were lowered it was found that several were leaking badly, having been riddled by shot. They soon, however, got aboard the patrol boat, and the Vosges sank shortly after two o'clock.

Mr. Stewart although invalided home, from his own steamer, volunteered to assist the engineers after their chief was killed, and worked for over an hour with them. He said that everyone on board remained remarkably cool during the trying experience.—Kirkwall Orcadian, April 10th, 1915.

[The Mr. Stewart referred to above is a brother of Mr. Peter Stewart that keeps the restaurant in the East End.—Ed. Evg. Telegram.]

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Nothing is more important to a child's physical well being than proper assimilation of food, and in order that this may take place, good teeth are essential. Digestion begins in the mouth and in order to masticate the food, good teeth are necessary. As the teeth grow they should be watched closely and brushed each night and morning. Should the first teeth show signs of decay the child should be taken to a dentist for advice.

Brown bread should be given children. They require it for the formation of bones and teeth, as it contains phosphates of wheat. In early childhood the teeth should be cleaned with a good dental preparation or castile soap, using a cloth or soft sponge to apply same. The bristles of an ordinary brush are too stiff and apt to injure the delicate gums.

A large 50c. bottle of Nerville cures ill's of the whole family, and makes doctor's bill small. Get it today. The large size is more economical than the 25c. trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere.
