The Old Marquis;

The Girl of the Cloisters

CHAPTER VII
A CHAINED HEART.

"Nearly four o'clock," he says.

"And nearly two hours' walk!" she exclaims, aghast. "If I do not return by six he will be in a terrible state. I have never been away from him so long before."

"Two hours! We shall just do it!" he says, cheerily. "If you are tired I can carry you, you know."

She blushes and looks at him reproachfully.

"You are not to remember that," she says, chidingly.

"Am I not? Very well. I'll never speak of it; but forget it! no, that's impossible." He draws the lace wrap around her, as she speaks, with tender care, and steals one more kiss of the gold-brown tresses, and then they start for home. They do not talk much, at least by word of mouth, but every now and then his hand touches hers, and sometimes her fingers close over his with a gentle pressure. She is too innocent to hide her love; there is no false shame in her; she has given him her first kiss, as she has given him her whole heart, without reserve, wholly, totally. Her pure, unstained soul is free to his gaze if he could see it, and there is only one word written there—love!

There is not much worldliness about Lord Edgar; it never occurs to him that there is anything unusual or inconvenient in this love of his. He quite forgets that he is the heir to the marquise, and that she is the granddaughter of his father's servant, until a word from her reminds him of the fact, and calls up some horrid doubts and difficulties. The word is this:

"I wonder what grandpapa will say!" she murmurs, more to herself than to him.

"Mr. Temple!" he says, "ah, yes!"

"Why do you say that?" she asks, quickly, already learned in every tone of his voice.

He smiles in his frank, careless fashion, then suddenly his face grows grave.

"Lela," he says, slowly and looking preternaturally wise, "I wonder—what do you think he will say?"

She shakes her head.

HOW WEAK WOMEN ARE MADE STRONG

Mrs. Westmoreland Tells in the Following Letter.

Harrison, N. Y.—"When my first child was born I did not know about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and had a very hard time. I read in the newspaper about the Vegetable Compound and when my second child came I took it and was well during the whole time, and childbirth was a hundred times easier. Ever since then I have used it for any weakness and would not be without it for the world. I do all my work and am strong and healthy. I am nursing my baby, and I still take the Vegetable Compound as it keeps a woman in good health. You may publish my testimonial for the good of other women, if you choose to do so."—Mrs. C. WESTMORELAND, Harrison, N. Y.

Women who suffer from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, aileration, backache, headaches and nervousness should lose no time in giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham, Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

"Lela, I want you to be my wife?"

"No," she replies, simply.

"Why, no, of course not!" he says, emphatically, his hot blood stirred up at the mere idea of opposition. "But we are looking at the worst side of the case, aren't we? Why shouldn't Mr. Temple agree?"

"Oh, yes, yes," she says, putting the dread from her. "When you tell him, he will be surprised, and, perhaps, a little angry, but he will get used to it, and in a few years he won't mind it at all; though," and her eyes fill with tears, "he will never bear me to leave him."

"A few years!" he echoes, aghast, then, afraid of frightening her, he nods. "Yes, he'll get used to it! And as to leaving him, why, we'll take him with us!"

She looks up at him with gratitude in her unlighted eyes, and so, with the complaisance of two happy mortals, they arrange their destinies.

The clock strikes six as they cross the lawn; they are not arm in arm now, and Lela looks up at the tower with a little start.

"I must go now, at once," she says. "Good-by, my darling, my love!"

he murmurs. "But not for long. I will come to the window to-night. You will be there?"

"Yes," she whispers, her heart beating wildly, then suddenly she lifts her head from his breast, and reaching up puts her lips to his and kisses him, then slipping like a sunbeam from his arms, and covered with shame, she flies up the steps and is gone.

Lord Edgar stands for a moment in silent communion with his happiness, then he walks around the terrace to the front entrance.

As he does so, Mr. Palmer, the butler, emerges from the hall with the air of a bishop or an executioner in a dress coat, and approaches him with a salver in his hand.

"A telegram, my lord," he says, extending the salver with the familiar buff envelope on it.

Lord Edgar takes it and crushes it into his pocket.

"At what hour will your lordship have dinner?"

"Dinner—oh, when you like—I mean now," he replies, absently.

Then he rushes up the stairs, to the horror of Mr. Palmer, and begins to dress. He is half through the operation when the sight of his shooting-jacket recalls the telegram, and he takes it from his pocket and opens it. It is from Clifford Revel to Lord Edgar Fane, and it runs thus:

"Something is wrong with Flyaway. Come up at once. Most important."

Lord Edgar stares at the pink paper with a frown of annoyance and disgust. Flyaway is the name of a certain horse upon which he and a considerable number of his friends have staked not only their hopes, but a large sum of money for a coming race.

Three days—two days—ago Flyaway was the most important personage in the world to him; for months he had thought of little else; since yesterday he has not given it a single fleeting remembrance. Until this odious telegram arrived he had quite forgotten it. But now, what was he to do? Clifford Revel is not the man to indulge in false alarms. There must be something wrong, and he ought to be on the spot. But leave Lela! Impossible! Not for all the Flyaways and all the races they could possibly win would he barter the one-quarter of an hour on the terrace beside her which he is looking forward to.

And yet—and yet—it is not only his own money. What about the trusting friends who, relying upon his faith in the horse have staked their hundreds, say, and thousands? Can he in honor leave them in the mire, sacrifice them to his own selfish pleasure?

It is a question that permits of only one answer. With an exclamation consigning Flyaway—the dearly beloved and believed in—to Jericho, he sits down and scribbles an answer to the effect that he will be in town to-night. He sends this off, then looks up "Bradshaw." There is only one train, and that starts in an hour and a half! No time to see his Lela and explain, no time to see his father! Yes, he must see him; at any cost he must get his consent before he leaves the Abbey.

Hurriedly resuming his morning dress, he rings the bell and requests an interview with Mr. Palmer.

"My compliments to the marquise, Mr. Palmer, and I should be glad if he would give me a few minutes. You can tell him I have to go to town in an hour."

Mr. Palmer looks gravely and respectfully doubtful, and coughs behind his fat white hand.

"My lord the marquise has had a sharp attack of the gout, my lord, since the morning," he says.

Lord Edgar bites his mustache.

"I'm awfully sorry. But—look here, Palmer, I want to see him very badly. It is important, you know."

Mr. Palmer smiles behind his hand at the idea of anything being important enough to interest the marquise in his present condition, but respectfully departs on his errand.

In a few minutes he comes back.

"The marquise will see you, my lord," he says, with a solemnity that is rather damping. But Lord Edgar rises eagerly, and follows the silent butler to the marquise's door.

"It's a bad attack, my lord," whispers Mr. Palmer, almost pityingly, as he opens the door, and Lord Edgar understands the pitying tone when he enters and sees his father's face.

It is not creased and wrinkled with the pain, as most gout martyrs are; the marquise does not greet him with a volley of oaths, as some gout martyrs in their worst paroxysms are wont to do; but simply stares at him with the fierce eyes that glitter like polished steel, and transfixes him like a bird upon a spit.

"I'm very sorry to hear, father—" he begins, but the marquise cuts him short.

"Thanks; I do not doubt your sympathy, I also do not require it. Say what you have to say and kindly leave me. Do not come any nearer. I have no wish to wound your filial feelings, but the mere sight of a human form, though it takes the shape of my son, is hateful to me at the present moment. What is it?"

Courageous indeed would be the man who could say under such circumstances, with that awful face before him, that awful voice in his ears, "Father, I am in love with one of your servants' granddaughters: consent to our union, and I will forever bless you."

Lord Edgar, though prone to foolishness, does not possess that courage.

He stands, hesitates, and is lost.

Warships Going Cheap.

The millionaire who seeks a new vessel for his gold will soon have an opportunity without precedent, when a large number of ships which have done useful work in the war come to the auctioneer's hammer.

One of the last Admiralty sales was the sale of the Albatross, one of the war, no fewer than fifteen ships were sold, and for £50,000, it was possible to become owner of a South American State might be envied.

Amongst them was the Belleisle, a battleship of 4,717 tons, with armour plating from four to twelve inches thick, and equipped with engines, guns, etc.—Originally built for the Turkish Navy, she had seen thirty years of service before she was made an experimental target for the Marquis's guns. But she was still a fighting vessel, able to give a good account of herself in battle, and dirt cheap at the £2,600 she fetched in the Chatham Dockyard sale.

Another doughty ship of war was the Duke of Wellington, which, in the year of her pride, had carried 131 guns, and headed the line at a great head review held by Queen Victoria. For this magnificent ship the Admiralty sum of £8,350 was paid.

The Albatross, over which the admiralty flag had floated at Chatham for many years, was knocked down for £250. The Edgar, a battleship of 3,600 tons, fetched £5,100; and the Albatross changed hands for £4,500—the modest sum of £35,900 thus securing five battleships which must have cost at least a million dollars.

Another Admiralty sale of the time included that fine first-class battleship, the Collingwood, a vessel of 9,500 tons, armed with four twelve-inch guns and six six-inch guns, and built at a cost of £24,000, and the Crusier, one of 3,600 tons, built at Jarrover for £90 for £184,000.

But these are only crumbs compared with the feast that will soon be spread for the buyers of warships that have served their day in the world's greatest war.

The Congregational Pulpit.

On Sunday morning the Rev. Dudley Ashford gave an exposition of the twenty-third Psalm, which, he said, was the most familiar and the most beautiful of them all. It is so beautiful in its simplicity and perfect poetry that it is apt to miss its real range of depth. It is generally known as the Shepherd Psalm, but it really depicts God under two figures of speech. Verses 1-4 depict Him as a shepherd, but verses 5-6 picture Him as a Host. God as our shepherd leads us through the grassy pastures and the still and refreshing waters. In the picture which is a hot country and subject to droughts, the fertility is very parched; hence the significance of the phrase, "He leadeth me in paths that are straight." "Yes, though I walk through a vale of deep gloom," represents the Psalmist's faith in the presence of the Divine Companion who is with us in every dark valley through which we have to pass. The shepherd and the staff symbolize the power and the affection of God. The Rod was a big oak club used by the shepherd to beat off wild beasts. The staff was the Crook, and was used to help the sheep in difficult places. In the second part of the psalm, verses 7-8 you pass to a different scene. It is that of a shepherd's tent away in the desert to which some poor fugitive from blood flees for safety. Once inside that tent and by Eastern law and custom he was sure of protection and hospitality. And such hospitality, "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over." And once he had enjoyed the shelter of that gracious tent, the fugitive would be loath to leave it, and so also the psalmist says, "I will dwell in the tent of Jehovah forever."

At night Mr. Ashford spoke on the subject of "Resolve and its Achievement." He based his remarks on the verses told in Matt. 21:30 and Luke 13:20. You cannot over-estimate the value and the power of a great resolve, said the preacher. It gives quality to life and saves our very manhood. What is often needed for a man's salvation is something that arrests attention, quickens desire and stirs the will. There is a vast gulf between resolve and its achievement, as most of us well know. Dr. Johnson confessed that he had spent forty years in making futile resolutions, and this was the man who every night when he went to bed used to promise himself that he would get up at six o'clock, but was generally found in bed at mid-day. This world is filled with the tragedy of weak wills. And yet there is nothing more striking than the greatness of will-power. We each

World Without Wood.

A Timber Famine is in Sight. People talk of a coming coal famine. But at the lowest computation there is plenty of coal in the world to carry us on for a thousand years to come. The famine that is coming soon—that is almost on us now—is in timber.

Barring Russia and Scandinavia, no European country has had timber enough for her own needs for a long time past. As for the United Kingdom, we have been spending over twenty-five millions a year for years past on imported timber, most of it from Norway and the United States. But the States are rapidly coming to the end of their own resources. During the past thirty years they have cut over seven hundred thousand million feet. Figures like these mean little to anyone, so let us mention that the weight of this timber was 1,400 million tons or enough to load 250,000 large steamers.

Canada is as badly off. There is said to be now no merchantable pine within 200 miles of Ottawa. Pine has doubled in cost between 1900 and 1914. Its present price is four times what it was ten years ago. Burma teak has seen a rise in price almost equal to that of pine.

Oak is getting scarcer every day, and railway companies are having the greatest difficulty in getting the American oak which has been considered indispensable for wagon scantlings.

Honduras, once considered a veritable treasure house of tropical timbers, is cut almost clear, while Cuba and San Domingo are in a similar plight. America is now importing largely from Africa.

The one great forest remaining in that of the Amazon, and much of that wonderful timber is quite inaccessible. It looks as though we must either replant or go without—Pearson's Weekly.

"World Peace, or a French Peace?"

London, April 7.—"A French peace or a world peace," is the heading of a two-column article in the Daily News by the newspaper's editor, A. G. Gardiner.

"We come," he writes, "to a sharp issue, and we have to make up our minds whether we are going to follow the French path, or whether we are going to keep our own path. We all want safeguards and security—safeguards for France, but safeguards also for the world. Safeguards against the Germans, but safeguards against every people that has an itch for the sword. The question is whether we are going to get them by a military peace, or a clean peace, by what M. Pichon calls the fruits of victory, or by what President Wilson aims at—a new world order conceived in the spirit of justice."

"It has been plain from the beginning that French statesmanship is thinking in the old continental terms and not in world terms. The war has taught it nothing."

Missionary Services Wesley Church.

Despite the unfavorable weather, the annual Missionary Services of Wesley Church yesterday were well attended. The Rev. W. B. Bugden, B.A., delivered an excellent sermon at the morning service from the words of the great commission, Go ye therefore and teach all nations—St. Matthew, 28-19, and said in part: There are two words of the Saviour Christ which mean so much; Come! that is a call to the individual soul, but God and teach, is with many, a neglected command. The cry of the world's need still comes from the four winds, there is not a door shut. We are hearing much these days of the nation's opportunity, and it also is tremendously true the churches' opportunity, and that means also serious responsibility. Expansion is also the law of life. "He that would lose his life shall save it, and he that would save his life shall lose it." The preacher then rapidly sketched the history of the Christian church, referred to the noble lives of many who renounced paganism, such as St. Perpetua who gave up even her own dear little boy, and her father's home, and became a martyr rather than deny Christ and forsake her companions in the early church, and the burning words of St. Francis Xavier, "They will destroy me, you say! It is an honor to which such a sinner as I am may not aspire. But this I dare to say that whatever form of death or of torture awaits me, I am ready to suffer it ten thousand times for the salvation of a single soul. What devotion to duty. But why the "therefore." Because "all power is given unto Me." They were to spread the joyful news, and while they depended upon Him He was with them. They had permission to draw on Him for all needed strength and grace, and no wonder they swept through the world then known, and during the first four hundred years the expansion was marvellous. But later the selfishness and contraction set in and Christ withdrew Himself, the "Dark ages" followed, until the Reformation dawned, and again the Divine Leader resumed controlling way, and must never again lose the presence of Jesus Christ. The church must not lose either the possibilities of the present. If we do not give the gospel to the millions of the east, and the blessings of full civilization, they may possibly swamp and subjugate the west. When the Battle of Waterloo was at a crisis an officer sent to Wellington for more men as he could not hold the position. "I have none to spare," was the answer; to a second appeal, "every man is in his place," said Wellington; and when almost in despair, the officer rode back for to beg help to hold his ground. Wellington said, "Do your duty, your best." "Then," said the encouraged officer, "Give me a grip of your conquering hand, and I will do it or die!" This is the spirit of enthusiasm and self-sacrifice we want in foreign missions.

At the evening service, after the devotional exercises, the Pastor read the Annual Report, showing that the Newfoundland Conference had raised the sum of $24,000 last year, an increase of $4,700 on the preceding year. In view of undertaking very considerable new missionary enterprise, now the war was over, the church appeals to Newfoundland Methodism to raise $30,000 this year, and to meet this 25 per cent. increase, Wesley Church, instead of giving $1,100 as it did last year, must give $1,400. He believed it would, for when the membership say we can do it, and unite on it, they will. June 30th will tell. The Chairman, C. H. Hutchings, Esq., K.C., corroborated what Rev. Mr. Bugden had said, congratulated the congregation on its past success and introduced the Rev. Gordon Dickie, M.A., of the Presbyterian Church, who gave an eloquent address, remarking that those who do well can always do better, and urged for effort to reach the objective. St. Paul acknowledged that he was a debtor to the Gospel. The farmer is a debtor to the soil. While he sleeps, his crops grow, and the yield comes in time; the fisherman is a debtor to the ocean, which gives its treasure to the toiler, and we do not properly recognize our obligations, for nothing we possess is our own. In the most clear, telling way Mr. Dickie pointed out how much we are indebted to the church and preachers in the past, without whose labors we should be pagans still. The speaker then set up the ideals towards which all should aim, and closed a splendid address with the account of an happening in "The Alps" when four climbers ascending by one rope, the last slipped and was going down pulling two others with him. The on-lookers from a distance were amazed that the first had not gone down also. After recovering the bodies, an examination was made of the rope. It was found to have been cut, and that surviving man was ever afterwards despised. Nobody had any use for him, and he shunned others. So we must be true, loyal, aggressive, and not cut ourselves away and let the other brother-man drop to destruction. Wesley people are greatly indebted to Rev. Mr. Dickie for his kindness in coming from his own pulpit. J. S. Currie, Esq., M.H.A., was the last speaker. He considered the great missionary movement to be a business in which all had a share, and he was glad to be at a shareholders' meeting. He was glad of the big increase in receipts last year, that the Home Missions had all been supported, its ministers paid, and $4,700 dollars released to go to work in Asia. Newfoundland Missions no longer needed assistance from wealthy churches in Canada. He then gave in detail the enormous amount of work which is being done by the Methodist Church of Canada with its $300,000; of the success in Japan and China, etc. It was a most informing and well delivered address, his reference to the capture of Vimy Ridge, thrilling. "The choir singing was splendid all day. The words of "Abide with me" to a new and beautiful setting, was particularly good. Mr. Pratt, the organist, deserves much congratulation, and the visitors present greatly enjoyed the services.—A.W.M.

Forward Educational Movement.
On Friday, April 4th, Harbour Grace was the scene of what may rightly be termed a Forward Educational Movement, for on that day A. Barnes, Esq., D. Paed, held a Conference for the teachers of Bay de Verde, Carbonear, and Harbour Grace Districts. There were present beside the lecturer:—

Revs. W. R. Higgitt, W. H. Browning, S. S. Coffin, and the following teachers: Misses Noel, Willis, Ward, Oke, Parsons, East, Cron, Young, Day, Thomas, Garland, Smith, Cayke; Messrs. Russell, Eady, Yetman, Jeffers, Goodland. The Conference met at 9.30 a.m. in one of the class-rooms of the C. of E. School by the courtesy of the Board, and was formally opened by Rev. W. R. J. Higgitt, who extended a hearty welcome to Dr. Barnes, the visiting clergymen and teachers. Rev. W. H. Browning said how pleased he was to be present, how thankful he was to be given the opportunity of associating himself with the movement.

Mr. A. J. Goodland, Principal of the C. of E. High School, Harbour Grace, on behalf of the teachers of the school, invited a warm welcome to Dr. Barnes, the visiting clergymen and teachers, and expressed the hope that the Conference would be productive of much good. Dr. Barnes then began his first lecture on the important subject—Reading—and for three hours, held the close attention of all present while he explained in graphic and simple style the best methods of teaching this subject on which so much depends. Questions were asked and answered, and the teachers felt that if the learned Educationalist's plans and methods could be carried into effect, and the most modern reading books introduced in our schools, that the teaching of Reading would be made much easier and the child's school-life happy and bright.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock, when Dr. Barnes, for nearly two hours explained and illustrated the most approved methods of dealing with Arithmetic. The lectures made a deep impression on those present, and your correspondent is more convinced than ever that the best and only effective way to permanently uplift the cause of Education in Newfoundland is to establish without delay an Inter-denominational Training College for Teachers where the teacher can be properly trained in the best and most up-to-date methods of teaching all the important subjects of the curriculum; for the day has passed when a teacher should be allowed to go out and experiment on the most perfect part of the Great Creator's work—The Child.

At the close of the lecture Dr. Barnes and the visitors were the guests of the teachers of the High School at a reception, and a very pleasant social hour was spent. Votes of thanks to the C. of E. Board of Education for the use of the school-room, the teachers of the High School for the reception, were proposed by Mr. S. Russell, Principal of the C. of E. High School, Carbonear; seconded by Mr. S. Eady, Harbour Grace South, and Mr. Jeffers, Principal of the Methodist Superior School, Harbour Grace, respectively, and duly tendered. Short speeches in reply were made by Rev. W. R. J. Higgitt on behalf of the C. of E. Board of Education, and Mr. A. J. Goodland for the teachers of the High School. The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close this the first of a series of three Conferences planned to be held, in conjunction with the inspection of the schools, in some central place in the districts concerned. SEMPER EADEM. Harbour Grace, April 11, 1919.

S. S. Neptune Arrives.

The S. S. Neptune reached port yesterday morning hailing for 13,000 seals. The Neptune, like the other ships, found the seals scattered about in small patches and it was increasingly difficult, as the spring advanced, to secure the seals. No sickness occurred aboard during the spring. A few days ago the ship had her bows considerably damaged while butting in the ice and had to come to port. She started discharging to-day at Job's South Side premises.

Tough Dose:

YOUR OWN PRESCRIPTION.

(From "Through the Periscope," in the Brooklyn Standard Union.) Sit up, Germany, and take your medicine. Tough dose, isn't it? However, that was the intention. Whine and howl as much as you please. It's music to our ears. Sweet music. After years of brag, blow, bossism, bluster, brutality and butchery, you are getting yours. Whine away.

No one has any sympathy or pity for you. The more you whine and squirm the better and people like it. Howl about the way it is being rubbed in. You say you face starvation, destruction and extermination. Well, that's what you planned for France, Belgium and England, didn't you? That is what you tried to accomplish, isn't it? Now you are licked and squealing like a stuck pig. Squeal away. It sounds like a symphony orchestra to civilized people.

LONDON, March 10, 1919.
PRINCE GEORGE AND THE NAVY
Prince Albert, who was intended the sailor of the Royal Family, in the Royal Air Force, and find life so attractive that he has agreed to return to the Fleet. Prince is anxious to join the Guards, but the course, so it will probably be the lot of Prince George, the King's youngest son, to follow his father's footsteps at sea. Prince George is to be very anxious to do this, but not proposed at present that he will undergo the ordinary training of a naval cadet.

ISTS FOR RETURNED GENERALS
The question of providing further employment for our returning Generals as they return from the theatres of war is now being the earnest consideration of the authorities. It would seem probable that several of these will have gone on to the retired list for some time, as there are not nearly enough appointments to go round, though it is hoped in time to find posts for those who have especially distinguished themselves. All the principal military commands at home and the Dependencies are held at present time "for the duration of the war," and this means that they will become vacant automatically after peace is officially proclaimed. Among these will be important and much-coveted posts, Commander-in-Chief in India, and understood that this will shortly be held by Sir Douglas Haig, and it should be felt that his presence is necessary for a time at the Viceroy's post—which is by no means an insignificant one. Among those who have already been selected for further employment whenever a suitable appointment can be found is Sir Edmund Blythe, the conqueror of Jerusalem. Sir Herbert Plumer is expected to return to London in order to sit on the Army Council, of which he is one of the original members.

developed practice on the part of German agents and syndicates to acquire sites and buildings in the Dutch East Indies which may be regarded as possessing military as well as commercial value. It would also seem that the relations maintained between these agents and some of the native chiefs are not what might be desired by the Dutch Government.

A CRIME NO LONGER.

Those menacing notice boards which threatened a fine of $500 or six months in prison for all children and others feeding the ducks on the Serpentine in Hyde Park (London's principal open space), have been taken away. The birds look plumper already, and the toddling children come to the river prepared with crusts to throw to their friends. The next step to remove the camouflage school established by Colonel Solomon J. Solomon, the Royal Academician, between the Powder Magazine and the head of the Serpentine. That is a wonderful place, filled with concealed trenches, armed gun posts, artificial trees, and all sorts of surprises, and one rather wishes that the Imperial War Museum would keep it up, but I learn that it is to be evacuated in May. Kensington Gardens and Hyde Park begin to feel the spring. The white crocus is now opening to keep the yellow ones company, and one thorn at Marlborough Gate is in leaf.

WOMEN 'BUS CONDUCTORS GOING

The unexpected dismissal of some three hundred women omnibus conductors has caused dismay among those of the thousands who are left who like their job and hoped that it would be a long time before they were demobilised. Of course it has always been understood that they would give up their places to the men when they returned, and on those grounds they are quite willing to go. Many of them are married women—one has heard them talking to women passengers about "the kids at home,"—but those who will have to look for other jobs feel that it will not be easy to go back to the old routine. One of the drivers told me that some of the smartest of them have been ladies' maids; others, very efficient, have been domestic servants, and they must often have enjoyed telling former mistresses to "pass further up there." They have on the whole been very kindly and courteous. But they have been very firm, and it will be small consolation when they are back in subordinate, ill-paid positions to recall the days when they held up the "bus in Whitechapel Road (London's Jewish quarter) until they secured the obedience of some protesting parent—they put on the sturdiest girls to deal with Whitechapel parents—or ordered a staff officer to come off the crowded top.

THE HUN AT HOME.

A soldier on the Rhine writes: "The attitude of the Hun—he does not, by the way, mind being called a Hun, though he fits at 'Boche'—continues to puzzle the English soldier in the occupied region. I was at the opera in Cologne the other day, and into the rather trivial piece were introduced all sorts of by-play. Many of the jokes were on the designation 'Hun', but others dealt with the occupation—last of all subjects for joking, one would imagine, from the Boche point of view. A reference to half-a-century later, 'when we shall still be occupied,' brought shouts of laughter from the natives. It is an incredible attitude, and I do not know whether to attribute it to callousness, or to relief that Cologne is not Berlin."

THE RAIDER WOLF.

In view of the damage inflicted on British commerce by the disguised raiders Moose and Wolf, many people were surprised that the Germans did not try to send out more of these ships. I now learn that from beginning to end about 14 different raiding cruisers, disguised as merchantmen, attempted to break through the North Sea blockade and reach the ocean. The fact that only two succeeded in doing so speaks volumes for the vigilance of our patrols. The Moose made two successful trips in and out, but on the third attempt she was intercepted, and just escaped back to Germany. In July, 1916, the raider Metzor was caught and sunk, as was the Grief in the previous February. In the spring of 1917 the raider Wolf, which had already made one cruise in the Pacific, left Kiel on a second voyage, but was caught when three days out and sunk. The Admiralty kept the secret, which has only just been revealed.

FILMS FROM DOMINIONS.

I notice that one of the biggest picture houses in London is about to show a South African historical film taken by a Johannesburg company, and depicting heroic fights in the Zulu War. This, I think, is the second big African film to be shown here. It may be that on the Velet, where the air is even clearer than in California, a film industry may develop to rival the American one. Most people recognize that big open air spectacles and dramas cannot be cinematographed in our English damp misty atmosphere with the unvarying success of the Californian producers. But it would be a very good thing for the Empire if the British Dominions put their climate and adventurous life to profit by developing the film industry. Why should not the South African pioneer or a Westralian prospector with his camels be as familiar to our school children as the Wild West cowboy who now only exists for purposes of film drama?

Passover.

The Jewish feast of Passover falls on the 15th day of Nisan, corresponding this year with Tuesday, April 15th. The celebration begins on the evening of April 14th with sundown. The manner of its observance was determined largely by the biblical ordinances concerning this feast. It is to be observed for a period of seven days. Those who cherish customs that originated after Biblical times will keep the feast eight days.

The ceremonials are such as are calculated to bring home the historical event which the feast commemorates, namely the new born freedom vouchsafed to Israel after the long period of oppression endured under Egyptian tyranny. The eating of unleavened bread is enjoined a number of times in the biblical regulations touching the observance of the Passover feast. Unleavened bread is characterized as the "bread of affliction," and is also referred to in the Bible as the bread that was unleavened because of the enforced hasty departure from Egypt. In post-biblical times the earnest desire to keep the injunctions most scrupulously led the teachers of Israel to enact laws, such as the use of special dishes that had been guarded from contact with leaven and reserved only for the Passover season.

A charming and effective feature in the celebration of the feast is the special Seder service around the festive family board on the first evening of the feast, to which the Orthodox add a second evening. At this family service a special ritual known as the "Haggadah" is read. This ritual contains the story of the redemption from servitude, certain reflections inspired by the memories of old and certain psalms. This is followed by the festive meal after which Grace is recited. The service concludes with the reading of additional psalms, the recitation of prayers and the singing of time honored hymns. To this home service stranger and homeless are cordially invited. On a table in front of him who presides over the meal are placed objects reminiscent of the ancient service and servitude, such as bitter herbs, reminder of the bitter lot of those who toiled in Egypt; a roast bone, calling to mind the ancient paschal lamb; a roasted egg, memorial of the free will offering that was brought in addition to the paschal lamb; parsley and the bowl of salt water, symbolizing the hyssop and its use in the first Passover observed in Egypt, and a confection of nuts and apples to represent the clay which Israel worked into bricks.

The Passover falling at the beginning of Spring, had originally a pastoral and agricultural character, which in time was overshadowed by the historical event associated later with the feast. Freedom and its obligation is the keynote of the celebration. The Reform synagogues hold special services only on the first and seventh days, while the Orthodox observe also the second day and an additional eighth day.

Comedy Play.

On Thursday, April 17th, in the Methodist College Hall, the three-act comedy entitled "Miss Comes to Stay," will be staged. The personnel will be Lieut. and Mrs. L. Cooper, Mrs. H. A. Outerbridge, Mrs. C. Hutson, Miss M. Mitchell, Messrs. Knight, Love and Capt. Tait. The proceeds will be in aid of the Society for Protection of Animals, and the affair promises to be the acme of comedian acting.

Dead or Not Dead.

An interesting case is before Judge Wood in the courts at Los Angeles, California. The point is, "Can a dead man be divorced?" The husband died a few weeks after he had entered an interlocutory decree from his wife.

By his death she became his widow and entitled to her widow's share of the estate, which is placed at one million dollars. The attorney for the estate asks that a final decree be entered in the suit, which is opposed by counsel for the wife, who asks the court "is the court going to drag him from his grave and say that he is not dead and enter a final decree of divorce which God entered six months ago?" Judge Wood took the matter under submission.

The question of providing further military employment for our principal Generals as they return from the various theatres of war is now receiving the earnest consideration of the authorities. ### COMING GIANT TRIPLANE.

In secret, and with speed, is being completed in England an enormous aeroplane, which seems likely to be the start of a new period in aircraft manufacture. If the war had continued, this aeroplane would have been used as a weapon against Berlin, and would have been able to drop over five tons of bombs on that unapproachable Mecca of all night-bombers, instead of the half ton of bombs carried by the four-engine Handley-Page, which were actually under orders to leave for Berlin on the night of November 11th. Our new giant is the Tarrant triplane, originated by W. G. Tarrant, of Byfleet, and Captain P. T. Rawlings. On its flight over London, which, if all goes well, will be made seven or eight weeks from now, it will carry 81 passengers. It weighs about 20 tons, and has a wing expanse of 175 feet, yet it will be flown by one man, whose strength will suffice to control and direct it. Its construction is secret, but its builders say they have an entirely new system, which simplifies and cheapens manufacture, and is essentially one of standardisation. Therefore, the whole future of the aircraft industry will be greatly benefited if this great experiment succeeds. The Handley-Page Company, meanwhile, say that they are building giants, about twice the size of the commercial machines, with a span of 100 feet.

This instruction, which appears to be of a very firm and comprehensive character, are understood to be the result of the recently

"LES FRUITS"
 Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.
 So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

BOLSHEVIKS MAKE CONDITIONS.
 PARIS, April 13. Bolshevik Russia is ready, according to reports reaching the Associated Press, to agree to a suspension of punishments, in case of opponents, in return for goods and recognition, and is also willing to suspend the campaign to extend Bolshevism in countries of associated governments, but is unwilling to reconvene a constituent assembly on the basis of democratic elections.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.
 LONDON, April 13. The Air Ministry reports little change in weather conditions over Atlantic route, and variations in barometric pressure are very pronounced, this morning, with large areas of low clouds and heavy squalls or rain. No change in present unfavourable condition is likely to occur this end of route, during the next twenty-four hours. Conditions over Newfoundland are more stable showing no signs of becoming worse.

If Germany Refuses to Sign.
 (From the Washington Star).
 A London newspaper states that it is reliably informed that in case the German delegates refuse to sign the peace treaty Marshal Poch has authority to order a general advance of the Allied armies along the Rhine. This is entirely credible. It is the logical development. If Germany refuses to sign the peace terms the war is automatically renewed. The armistice is ended. Not only will there be a general advance of the armies along the Rhine but an attack upon Germany from the sea. The German navy has ceased to exist. The sea approaches are cleared of mines and a naval attack could not be resisted. It would be possible in such a case to land a large force of troops on the northern coast of Germany, and to envelop the country with an attack on two fronts, the northern and the western. In such circumstances Germany could not resist for the six weeks which the high command at Berlin granted for the conquest of France in 1914.

Premier Borden Unveils Monument
 To Those Who Died at Canadian Hospital at Taplow—Striking Speech by Mrs. Waldorf Astor.
 London, April 5.—Premier Borden yesterday unveiled at Taplow a memorial to those who died at the Canadian Red Cross Hospital there. The memorial takes the form of a female figure typifying victory, and stands in the beautiful cemetery on the estate adjoining the hospital cemetery, being in the form of an Italian garden.
 The Premier made a characteristically graceful reference both to the merits of the departed and the hospitality extended to Canadians by Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who own the estate, but the most striking of all was the little speech made by Mrs. Astor.
 "What a privilege," she said, "it has been for us to have the Canadians at Cliveden; I do not call this a cemetery. You will see we have tried to get away from the idea of death about this place. I feel it is only we who are dead, if ever we fall them in forgetting how they laid down their lives for right. You see the figure of the memorial faces west. We want to feel those who have been laid here are merely a little way ahead of us."
Stones of Healing.
 If the present Sultan of Turkey is kicked out of Constantinople into Asia Minor, as seems probable, one wonders whether he will be allowed to take with him the wonderful "stones of healing," which have been in the possession of his ancestors for centuries.
 There are about a dozen of these stones all told, and so highly are they esteemed that they are kept in a locked casket, enclosed within a massive steel safe, access to which is forbidden to all save the reigning Sultan and his Grand Vizier.
 Lady Blunt, who was accorded the privilege by the late Sultan of using two of them for the relief of her husband, who was lying dangerously ill at Constantinople many years ago, found them exceedingly effective.
 The patient was at the point of death, and three doctors who were in attendance advised an immediate operation. Lady Blunt used the stones as directed, placing them on the bare skin above the affected organs.
 They stuck tight there of their own accord, and the patient experienced immediate relief. In a few hours he had completely recovered.
 "These wonderful stones," says Lady Blunt in her recently published volume of reminiscences, "are found at rare intervals in the veins of a donkey's neck; perhaps only one stone in a million donkeys."

Hanged Through A Button.
 Small Clues to Great Crimes.
 A constable at Southampton the other day noticed breath-marks on the interior of the window of a jeweller's shop. He stopped—listened. Inside were two burglars. A small clue! But even more trivial ones have led to similar arrests in the past.
 A cigarette of a peculiar brand, left behind by a burglar named Fitzpatrick in a city warehouse, earned for him a long term of imprisonment. Another burglar, at Middlesborough, was run to earth after a long chase with only a broken cigar band as a clue.
 Pierre Jaune, the famous French detective, who died in 1915, once traced a murderer within forty-eight hours with no clue save a trousers button. Suspicion was first aroused in the Crippen case by the spelling of the victim's name, "Elmore," with two "l's" on a forged letter.
 The mysterious murder of a little girl in Devonshire was solved owing to the accidental finding of some of her hair in a bird's nest, a remarkable case utilized by Mr. Eden Phillips in his "Sam of Sorrow Corner."
 A single word, "Cudham," overheard by chance at the Penge postoffice, was the starting point of the inquiry which brought to light the shocking murder by starvation and ill-treatment of Mrs. Louis Staunton in a house rented by her unnatural husband near that remote village.
 The chance of a shutter falling upon a passer-by was the chief means of convicting a Liverpool youth, George Summer, of the murder of Miss Bradford there some few days back. Orrock, who murdered a constable at Laleston in 1884, was brought to the scaffold by a single initial hastily scratched upon the blade of a chair.
 Early last year a girl named Nellie Trow was brutally done to death on Eltham Common. In trying to defend herself she had torn a button from her assailant's overcoat. A tiny clue! But it sufficed.
 In the case of a similar murder at Bodmin some time back, perpetrated by a man named Ollison, the girl victim tore a handful of hair from her assailant's beard. The day following a constable was waiting his turn in a barber's shop when a man came in to get his beard trimmed. It was Ollison. He was hanged.—Penson's Weekly.

A Hasty Decision.—A federal court rules that the war is legally at an end.
It is a pity it cannot also decide that peace prevails.—New York World.

The Good Old Days.—Well, the end of the war hasn't brought back the

and Empire.

A Good Old Scout.—Premier Cleme-

Clemenceau in his reluctance.—Quebec Telegraph.

New York Sneakers.—If he takes one meal a day in a restaurant or cafe in a season a New Yorker will spend $20 buying a $5 hat back from a check boy who gets about $8 a week, and who works for a concern which pays handsomely for the checking concession and furnishes the help to run
it. A New Yorker is the biggest sucker in the world.—Emporia (Kan.)
Gazette.

The Russian Peril.—The strong point of the statement by Ambassador Francis is that unless something is done to save Russia it will ultimately become the prey of Germany, with its demoniacal genius for organization and its absolutely unscrupulous methods, and then the enemy will indeed have won the victory for which he deliberately began the war.—New York Herald.

What's a' the Jagon o' Your Schools?

I have been recently informed by a young man possessing a superior education, that up to the present point in his life, he has found, absolutely, no practical use for the higher mathematics which constituted a large portion of his studies. Trigonometry has proven especially useless.
This is not intended to discourage the study of this particular branch of "brain expander," but merely to point out that it is a superfluous in ordinary education.

The same young man, who by the way is a well known teacher in a middle west high school, has frankly confessed that while in France as a member of the C. E. F. he found that his scholarly French was entirely useless as a medium of expression with the inhabitants. He tells of several cases where he attempted to carry on a conversation in French and found to his amazement that he could not make as good progress, as one of the other men equipped with an English-French dictionary and an expressive pair of shoulders. This frank admission for a medal winner in school French, and a pedagogue awaiting military discharge to resume his duties in that capacity, is, to say the least, astonishing. He is a staunch believer in the exceptional opportunities offered by vocational training and predicts that it will (with certain modifications) become the educational method of the near future.—"Argus," in Morning Chronicle.

Scots' Guards' Cows.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)
Of course, the two big wolf-hounds that marched with the Irish Guards received their usual generous measure of admiration, and looked as though they felt it to be nothing more than their due; but the presence of two cows, well fed, placid, and entirely unconcerned at the noise of the cheering crowds, was as much appreciated, although it was clear that it left the majority of people wondering. A stalwart soldier led them, by two spotted halters, between two companies of Scots Guards, near the tail of the procession. I saw them there in the Mall, where I was held up for a time on my way to a window near the end of the route, and when I saw the march again from the window in question they were missing—"fallen out for a milking fatigue," someone suggested;
and argument at once began as to whether a march of five or six miles over paved roads was too much for cows to make in comfort or not. It is explained, I see, that they were cows "won" by the Scots Guards after Neuve Chapelle, and brought home by them in triumph, but there must be some thousands of Londoners to-day who want to know more of their history and to be told what became of them on Saturday afternoon.

A Turkey Story.

Tax Collector Charles H. Innes, of Saco, Me., found alive in the hay mow of his barn a turkey that had disappeared two months before, having flown to the top of the barn and got caught between the mow and a beam.
The bird was as poor as a crow, but responded to a breakfast of hot mash and in the afternoon was as lively as a chicken.

Not To-Day.

SNEEZING USED TO BE CONSID-ERED LUCKY.

There was a time not so long ago
when the act of sneezing was esteemed lucky, and many superstitions and sayings were current concerning it. For instance, there is one which goes, "once a wish, twice a kiss, three times a letter," referring, of course, to the number of sneezes.

All this went by the board when the "flu" epidemic came. Just now the faintest "Acho!" is regarded with alarm; and, so far from being the forerunner of a letter, three sneezes in succession would more likely be the signal for a call for the doctor.

So great, indeed, is the mistrust of sneezing, that it would seem we are returning to the attitude of a hundred years ago. Possibly then, as now, it was due to a visit of the "flu," but the fact remains that sneezing was looked upon with considerable apprehension.

In fact, a phrase was in use as a charm against its ill-effects. Whenever a person sneezed his hearers would utter the benediction "God bless you!" This would be thought in some measure to have averted the evil. The custom was so strong that to omit saying the words after someone had sneezed was regarded as a breach of etiquette, just as it is had manners to-day to neglect answering the salutation "Good-morning."

Curiously enough, this superstition was common to the whole world, and it is still alive in some countries today. Thus, when one sneezes, the Hindu utters the word "Lrei!" the Italian, "Felicita!" the German,
"Geshundheit!" (health). The Pole plausibly ejaculates "Naszrowie!" the Hebrew, "Chayim tobim!" (a good health). In effect all mean the same thing: "I pray the evil be averted."
No one seems to know from whence this universal belief came. The introduction of snuff helped a great deal to dissipate it, and to-day—in England, at any rate—a new set of superstitions
of a happier kind about sneezing are instinct.

The question is, will these die because of the "flu"?

The Siamese have a curious belief about sneezing. They maintain that the devil keeps a large book containing the names of all the people on earth.
Whenever he reads through it, and utters a name aloud, the person who answers to it is obliged to sneeze.
