CHAPTER LIV.

A MISSING CONGRATULATION.

The Count leaned forward and fixed his dark, gray eyes upon him.

"Do you say that you can not—that you will not give me the money?"

"Certainly—that is, not to-night."

"By when, then?" asked the count, retaining his unnatural calmness with a great effort.

"In six days," replied Reginald Dartmouth, quietly. "It would be impossible to get so large an amount in less time."

"In six days," mused the count, with a heavy sigh. "You swear that?"

"Certainly, if you require such assurance," said Reginald Dartmouth, with a sneer. "And now, my dear count, having disposed of business let us to pleasure. You will take a little wine? Oh, come, no refusal, I beg! We will have a quiet glass and a chat."

And as he spoke he rose softly and walked toward the other room.

Half-way across the room, however, he stopped and listened intently.

The next moment he sprang toward the door, opened it, and, to the Italian's amazement, dragged the figure of a man into the room.

It was Vignos, the valet, white and trembling.

Reginald Dartmouth held him at arm's-length for a moment, piercing him through and through with sharp eyes. Then, as the cat-eyed thief commenced a piteous wail, said, with a stern, merciless accent:

"You vile beast, you were listening! Not a word, or I'll wring your tongue out! Count, see how we punish eavesdroppers in this country."

And with a cold-blooded smile he raised his long, lithe hand and struck the white, snake-like face a fearful blow.

"Now, get out of my sight, out of the house, and out of the world, if you can, for if I meet you I'll repeat the dose."

The man got up from the floor, for the blow had felled him, and walked to the door.

Then he turned his blood-stained face toward the cruel one of his late master and gave him one long, viperish look.

Then, without a word, he glided out, closing the door carefully and noiselessly behind him.

CHAPTER LV.

A VILLAIN'S COURAGE.

Trust not those cunning waters of his For villainy is not without such rheum.—SHAKESPEARE.

Your villain of the Captain Dartmouth stamp seldom lacks courage; he may be—nay, he invariably is—mean-souled, cruel, and unscrupulous; but he is generally possessed of an amount of animal courage, coolness, and aplomb that often bears him up through a great part of his career, and sometimes carries him through to the end of it in triumph and safety.

Reginald Dartmouth had no sooner become convinced of the utter hopelessness of Count Vitzarelli's plans than he determined to avail himself of them to recover some of the many thousands he had advanced toward their accomplishment.

Unscrupulous to the uttermost, he cared no more for honor than a cut-throat cares for morality. A stranger to fear, he entirely disregarded and scorned the penalty which the secret society exacted of treason.

He trusted to his clear, keen long-sightedness to carry him triumphantly through the dilemma, and made his plans.

Accordingly, the morning after the count's visit saw him, exquisitely attired as usual, ascending the steps of the mansion in Grosvenor Square which the Vitzarellis occupied.

To his inquiry whether the countess was at home, the elaborately liveried servant returned an affirmative, and with great respect ushered him into the small drawing-room.

It was empty, but Reginald Dartmouth, with an air almost of proprietorship, dropped into the luxurious furniture and, stroking his silky mustache, coned over the part he intended playing.

After a few minutes waiting, he heard the door open and rose to receive the countess.

She looked very beautiful in her light morning-robe of muslin, and her eyes lighted up with a flash of seeming satisfaction and pleasure, while a thrill of delight ran through him at the remembrance that this beautiful woman was his. Such a feeling a frowner might experience as he saw his snare close round a stately kingfisher—not love, but the delight of mere possession.

He bent over her hand and pressed his lips to its white, smooth surface—he knew better than to offer a more familiar embrace—and in his musical voice said, by way of greeting:

"Am I too early, Lucille? I feared to find you unrisen still. But I could wait no longer."

She smiled, but the next moment her face looked calm and cold as usual.

"I am an early riser, Captain Dartmouth."

"Nay," he murmured, reproachfully; "not Captain Dartmouth now, surely, Lucille! I am Reginald to you or nothing."

"Reginald, then," she said in a voice that was utterly void of love or the resemblance of it—"Reginald, if you like it better. It is a pretty name, though rather deep and grave to Italian ears."

"Change it to what you please," he said, eagerly, leading her to the sofa and seating himself at her side, while he still retained her hand. "Change it to what you please, Lucille; I can not but hate it if you dislike it. Change it—change it; it is yours."

"No, not yet," she said, with a slight flush, quietly disengaging her hand as she spoke. "Not yet; there were—"

"Conditions, or, rather, a condition," he murmured, eagerly, filling up her pause. "I have not forgotten, Lucille. Would it be possible for me to forget? The condition was—"

He hesitated.

The countess's face paled and her hands knit as in anguish at the effort of restraining some great emotion.

"Shall I repeat it?"

She inclined her head.

"That I discovered the villain who deceived your sister—nay, my sister, Lucille, for all who own your name are dear to me."

"Yes," she said, tremulously, Lucille. Indeed, I came here this morning to ask you—ay, to implore you to release me from it."

She turned to him with a sudden gesture.

"Give up the hope of my life?" she said.

"No," he replied, eagerly. "But to refrain from getting it up as a barrier to our union. Lucille, since the night I heard your story," he continued, his voice wondrously soft and pleasing. "I have been unable to dismiss it from my mind. All other matters, important as some are, have given way before the intensity of it. I have scarcely slept at night. I have been in a dream all day, seeking some means of attaining your purpose. This morning I have come to implore you to cancel the condition that its fulfillment may be more thoroughly gained. You ask me, Lucille, to postpone our marriage until this nameless, unknown villain has been discovered and punished. Answer that I am as eager as yourself to find him, but that the chances of success are merely lessened by our separation. Let us join, not only in name but in fact, as man and wife, to hunt out the destroyer of your sister. Singly we can do little, together we may—nay, we must succeed. Once married, we will leave no stone unturned. We will trace the history of her life to its last days. We will search every capital and court of Europe. We will—oh, Lucille, we must succeed!"

At the impassioned fervor of his voice her resolution wavered.

After all, why should she remain firm? Why should she deny him?

He loved her; he was an honorable man. She had his promise, delivered in so sweet a voice, and she had no cause to doubt his sincerity.

For the rest, Lucille, Countess of Vitzarelli, cared but little.

What love she had to give was long since buried with the sister her mother had consigned to her. If she must marry, as well this handsome, powerful Englishman as another—nay, all things considered, much better.

With his keen eyes gleaming from beneath his drooping eyelids he read these thoughts as their outward signs flashed across her face and, seizing the moment, whispered:

"Lucille, say 'Yes.' Your heart says it. I know; let your lips give it voice. You know I love you. You can not doubt that I will be true to my promise. I swear not to rest until the mystery of her death has been cleared up and the cause of it punished."

"You swear?" she said, hurriedly, almost breathlessly. "Ah! how can you realize the passionate thirst that devours me for revenge upon the unknown villain—how can you understand? Nay, you can not. But you swear?"

"I swear," he said, solemnly.

"Then I yield," she said, in a low voice.

He caught her hand and raised it to his lips; then, venturing still farther, drew her toward him and pressed a kiss upon her white brow.

Then, ere she could regain her composure, he went on softly, dulcely: "And now, Lucille, you will grant me still one other boon. Do not keep me in suspense too long. You have given me the right to claim you as my wife. Let me exercise it quickly."

She started and looked at him with half-frightened eyes.

"You will not say 'No,'" he murmured. "If you knew, how I love you; if you knew, too, how eager I am to commence the pursuit you would not say no when I ask you to be mine at once."

"At once?" she breathed.

"Within the week," he repeated softly.

"Within the week?" she echoed, brokenly. "Why, why so soon?"

He looked troubled, half spoke, then hesitated, then, slowly and as if reluctantly, said:

"Lucille, I can have no secrets from you; my heart will speak out. You ask me why so soon. I will tell you. But first I must ask you to keep inviolate what I now tell you. I dare not give you my reason unless you do. Come, Lucille, your promise!"

"I promise," she said, yielding more to his soft, seductive voice than to his words.

"Last night, then, my darling, I heard, I dare not say from whose lips, that the count would return to Rome before a few days had passed."

"Return to Rome?" she echoed, transfixed with astonishment.

"Hush!" he breathed, warningly, with a flash of delight at the success of this commencement of his plot.

"Hush! it is a secret; these walls must not hear it, for fear they should whisper it to their master!"

"But—but," she mused, regaining her passionless calmness in a moment, "you must be wrong."

And the Worst is Yet to Come

A SALE

That will not disappoint.

The reason of this Sale is the turning of a lot of this season's goods of passing fashion and some of which we have an overstock into Hard Cash.

YOU WANT GOODS AT LOW PRICES WE WANT HARD CASH. THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

We are not going to give you a line of talk that as philanthropists we are out merely to reduce the height of the H. C. L. and going to cut prices in halves; we figure you are too intelligent to believe stuff like that, or would think we had certainly been jewing you on previous prices. First we start with

LADIES' & CHILDREN'S STRAW HATS.

Off these we are taking

25 Per Cent. Discount.

Our prices for Hats are notoriously low, and with this discount and the styles considered we know greatly increased buying will make a busy department busier.

We next consider

LADIES' BLOUSES.

We find a very classy lot of Ladies' Canadian made White Voile Blouses have not moved fast enough. They range in price from $5.50 to $7.50. Though the market was high and we did not like buying at these prices, we thought style and cut worth consideration. Now we think you will find them most tempting by our allowance of

We have also picked up a lot of

LADIES' GEORGETTE CREPE BLOUSES

in beautiful designs and shades, and have marked them down from $17.50 to $12.50 each. This represents less than cost price.

LADIES' SILK DRESSES.

We have some priced very reasonably at $30.00, $33.00 and $35.00 each, but we are making a reduction in these prices of 25 Per Cent.

We do this as we are informed that with some of them the skirts are a bit tight.

LADIES' WHITE COSTUME SKIRTS.

Canadian styles, English materials. Sale Prices only $3.00, $4.00, $4.50 and $5.00.

This summer is certainly a fine one, so you had better secure a couple of these beautiful Washable Skirts and get in accord with it.

LADIES' ENVELOPE CHEMISES (or TEDDIES).

We have quite a stock of these in White and Pink Lawns and Imitation Silks. They are big sellers in America but have not yet started to sell so largely here. We think taking 25 Per Cent. off may help.

In order to make things more interesting we are making

A Reduction of Ten Per Cent. on Some Staple Lines of Ladies' Ready-to-wear.

This includes all our large and cheaply priced stocks of Ladies' Cambric and Lawn Underskirts, Knickers, Camisoles and Nightdresses.

Ladies' Costumes and Costume Skirts.

Ladies' Raglans, Shower Coats and Navy Spring Coats

Ladies' Cotton, Poplin and Serge, etc., Dresses.

Ladies' Kimonos, Wrappers and Cotton House Dresses.

Ladies' Blouses of all kinds—not previously mentioned.

Ladies' Silk and Wool Sweater Coats.

LADIES' COTTON and LISLE SUMMER GLOVES.

We are in a position to offer these at prices no higher than those of 1918-1919. We quote Ladies' White and Grey Gloves, with dome fasteners, at price only 40c. pair.

LADIES' WHITE and BLACK COTTON HOSE, only 29c. pair.

You will also find we have some other extra good values in Ladies' White and Black Cotton and Lisle Hose, while they last.

We Know Our Prices on Goods Advertised Are the Lowest You Can Procure, as they are below the cost of doing business, but our desire to change goods into cash

IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

N.B.—Sale Discounts are for Cash Purchases only.

HENRY BLAIR

Lipton Defeated But Game.

Resolute Won Final Cup Race--Nova Scotia Holds to Murray Government--Imperial Press Delegates at Sydney--Turbulence in Ireland Increasing--Anglo-French Premiers Agree on Soviet Terms.

LIPTON LOSES AGAIN.

NEW YORK, July 27. For the thirteenth successive time since the inauguration of the International Yacht Races half a century ago, the British challenger has been defeated by a United States defender of the America's cup, the perpetual trophy named from the schooner yacht America which won the first race from Great Britain in 1851. Before Shamrock four, twelve challengers strove in vain for the hundred guinea pewter mug which since its founding as a world yachting prize has been in the custody of the New York Yacht Club. Sir Thomas Lipton has failed in his fourth attempt to realize his cherished ambition. After trying since 1899 different Shamrocks to return the precious gub to the Royal Ulster Yacht Club of England. When the United States won the historic cup in '51 the trophy was not an international one. Six years after this first race with Great Britain the cup was brought to the United States by New York Yacht Club and placed in trust as an international challenger prize. Here it has remained and today's victory by the Resolute insures its retention at least another year.

LIPTON IS GAME.

NEW YORK, July 27. Sir Thomas Lipton has made provision in his will for the continuation of his efforts to lift the America's Cup should he prove unsuccessful during his life-time, according to a story printed by the Tribune today. The paper says "Sir Thomas Lipton's game fight for the America's Cup over a period of twenty years will be continued until success is achieved. The aged sportsman announced this emphatically yesterday aboard his yacht Victoria while watching his Shamrock struggle vainly in the doldrums. So great is his desire to win the cherished trophy that he has made provision in his will setting aside a fund to construct challengers until the Cup is won back for England, should he fall personally to achieve the ambition of his life. The fact that this provision had been made came from one of Sir Thomas's English guests on board in his hearing and he did not deny it.

MURRAY GOVT. RE-ELECTED.

HALIFAX, N.S., July 27. Early returns indicate the re-election of the Murray Government by a large majority in to-day's provincial elections.

PREMIERS CONSIDER RUSSIAN PROPOSAL.

PARIS, July 27. Premier Millerand accompanied by Marshal Foch left to-day for Boulogne to discuss with Premier Lloyd George the Russian Soviet proposal for a conference between the Allies and Soviet representatives.

PREMIERS REACH DECISION.

BOULOGNE, July 27. Premiers Lloyd George and Millerand determined at their conference here this afternoon to stand by the original plan for the peace conference with the Russian Soviet. They also outlined the execution of the financial parts of the coal arrangements with Germany.

PRESS DELEGATES WELCOMED.

SYDNEY, N.S., July 27. The Overseas Delegation to the Imperial Press Conference landed here from the S. S. Victorian this morning for a seven weeks' tour of Canada and were greeted with more than one hundred telegrams welcoming them. The Dominion Government, Provincial Governments, Boards of Trade, Mayors and scores of prominent men throughout the Dominion joined in extending a welcome to the delegates and appreciation of the significance of Imperial unity of the second Imperial Press Conference. The delegates were taken on an automobile sight seeing tour. At the civic luncheon Lord Burnham, Chairman of the Conference, acknowledged the Mayor's speech of welcome.

FOUR POLICEMEN WOUNDED.

LISTOWEL, County Kerry, July 27. Four policemen were dangerously wounded yesterday in an encounter with raiders.

POLICE BARRACKS BURNED.

BELFAST, July 27. The police barracks at Tyrall's Pass, County Westmeath, was burned on Sunday night by masked armed men, who escaped.

BELFAST ABANDONED AT MEETING PLACE.

BELFAST, July 27. The Ancient Order of Foresters abandoned the plan to hold their annual meeting here in August, as the committee have been notified that the military cannot undertake additional responsibility in the protection of strangers.

GUARD FIRES ON SOLDIERS.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, July 27. One military man was killed and three wounded Saturday night at St. George's when a guard fired on a party of militia men alleged to have been attempting to release a military prisoner. One soldier of the Royal Sussex Regiment was badly wounded. The court of enquiry is investigating the incident.

STATEMENT CLEARED UP.

LONDON, July 27. The ambiguous statement of Lord George in the House of Commons, yesterday, that Archbishop Mannix, of Melbourne, Australia, would not be allowed to land in England because of his recent utterances, was cleared up this afternoon when it was declared in official quarters that Archbishop Mannix would not be allowed to land in the British Isles.

UNJUSTIFIABLE CONDUCT.

BELFAST, July 27. The Dundalk Guardians adopted a resolution yesterday protesting against the "unjustifiable conduct of the military firing on the Redemptorist Monastery at Clonard on the pretext that snipers were located in the building."

SINN FEINERS HOLD UP TRAIN.

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, July 27. Several hundred Sinn Feiners last night successfully blocked the running of a mixed passenger and goods train through Letter Kenny, because it was carrying a dozen armed soldiers and food for the military barracks at Dunagloe. No actual fighting took place, but the crowd was so hostile that it was decided to proceed with the train, and two hundred passengers were obliged to sit aboard at the station all night. The soldiers were taken to the police barracks to avoid the crowd. Conditions quieted after three hours. Meanwhile the troops at Dunagloe were in desperate straits for food, since Sinn Fein inhabitants refusing to supply it and the trains with consignments being raided. The troops have been without proper food for many days.

THE DAILY TOLL.

CORK, July 27. One soldier killed, two constables wounded, and a court house burned were the results of disturbances in various places in this section in the past twenty-four hours. The soldier who was a Lance-Corporal attached to a regiment at Bandon was shot dead mysteriously this morning. Two constables were ambushed and seriously wounded by bullets at Lixnaw, North Kerry, last night when also Borrisokane Court House was destroyed by fire.

DEMPESEY-MISKE FIGHT.

CHICAGO, July 27. Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, was matched late to-day to meet Billy Miske, of St. Paul, in a ten-round heavyweight championship contest at Benton Harbor, Mich., on Labor Day.

OFFICIALLY NOTIFIED.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 27. Governor Calvin Coolidge was formally notified to-day of his nomination as Republican candidate for the Vice-Presidency. The notification address was delivered by Governor Edwin P. Morrow, of Kentucky, and the ceremony was witnessed by a large crowd.

NO OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

QUEBEC, July 27. More than ten thousand people from Canada and the United States gathered at Ste. Anne de Beaupre, Sunday and yesterday. Up to last night ten miracles were reported, but the Redemptorist Fathers refused to make any official statement.

McMurdo's Store News.

WEDNESDAY, July 28.

For a slight throat cold—many persons occasionally "get a cold out of the heat" A box of Preston's Throat Pastilles will do effective service, relieving dryness of the throat and clearing the voice. In more serious colds, an occasional one of those lozenges sucked during the day, will add the proper remedies in effecting a cure. Price 30c. a box.

Towards the end of July, bowel troubles begin to make their appearance. It is well to have a bottle of McMurdo's Wild Strawberry Compound at hand for such eventualities. A few drops of this excellent remedy, taken at the first sign of diarrhoea or summer sickness, will often prevent a serious attack. Price 30c. a bottle.

The 300th Anniversary

OF AMERICA'S ORIGIN.

The year 1920 is doubly significant, historically. It marks the 300th anniversary of two important events which led to the founding of the Republic of the United States of America. One is the signing of the Mayflower Compact and the other is the meeting of the first American legislative assembly.

On November 11, 1620, in the cabin of the Mayflower, a tiny bark lying off the Massachusetts coast, a little band of liberty loving men, from "Brittania," entered into what history has styled the Mayflower Compact. This agreement bound the 41 adult males in the ship's company into a civil body politic for the better ordering, preserving, and furthering of their mutual ends. And it provided for such just and equal laws and offices as should be necessary for the general good of the colony.

Ten days later, so records Dr. Charles W. Eliot's inscription on the Pilgrim Memorial Monument at Provincetown, Mass., "the Mayflower, carrying 102 passengers, men and women and children, cast anchor in this harbor 67 days from Plymouth, England."

This body politic, established and maintained on this bleak and barren edge of a vast wilderness, a state without a king or a noble, a church without a bishop or a priest, a democratic commonwealth, the members of which were straitly tied to all care of each other's good, and of the whole by every one.

"With long-suffering, devotion and sober resolution they illustrated for the first time in history the principles of civil and religious liberty and the practice of a genuine democracy."

Meanwhile, uninformed of the Pilgrims, fellow-colonists of Captain John Smith had met at "James City" (Jamestown), Virginia, for the first American Legislative Assembly. On July 30, 1619, they had thus broken ground for the foundation of the present democratic form of government in the United States.

This year (in 1920) these events are being commemorated in the United States, in England and in Holland. In August, the origin of the Pilgrim movement will be celebrated in England. And early in September, meetings will be held in Holland in memory of the Pilgrim's sojourn in that country.

In September a "second Mayflower" will set sail from Southampton, England, to follow to the American shore the path taken by the original Mayflower. (But this second Mayflower will be modern, and therefore much more seaworthy than her smaller predecessor.)

This boat, carrying many prominent people of England, Holland and the United States, will anchor in Provincetown Harbor in late September. Its arrival will perhaps mark the crowning dramatic episode of the entire Tercentenary celebrations. The United States is appropriating, from national and state treasuries, hundreds of thousands of dollars to be used in plans for the commemoration. One plan is to erect, overlooking Plymouth harbor, a colossal statue of Massasoit, the Indian chief who befriended the Puritan pioneer. Another is to fet the Plymouth Rock, which in 1741 was raised above the tide, in its original position.

Saving the Babies.

Wonderful progress is being made in England in the way of preventative medicine both for the infantile population and for adults. What a long way it has yet to travel before it can catch up with the slaughter of babies is illustrated by the fact that of every million born, only 800,000 are alive at the end of the first year, which is the most fatal to very young children, and only 781,000 are to see their fifth birthday. Yet if all preventable causes of disease were removed, if medicine had a grip grip of measles and scarlet fever and diphtheria and the like, not more than fifty thousand of each million babies born would be swept off by accident, by untidiness and by congenital defects, and nine out of ten of them, it has been calculated, would live to the age of fifty. It is hoped that in time the larger number of the diseases which are so fatal to the young and many of those which in case of epidemics carry off large numbers of people of other ages, will be more or less under the control of preventative medicine. A marvelous work is being done by the Lister Institute of Preventive Medicine in London in the preparation of vaccines of different kinds intended to step in between disease and its fatal effects. Knowing that the influenza epidemic which produced such deadly results all over the world in 1918 had shown itself again, in some localities, the British government has had prepared two million doses of influenza vaccine as a preventative measure. This vaccine is prepared on the formula adopted in the army where it was possible to collect information as to its value in a way that was impracticable in civil life; and according to Sir W. Lishman its efficiency has been proved. The "Quebec Telegraph" says: "If this vaccine is as efficient as it is claimed to be by the military authorities, who certainly had exceptionally good opportunities for testing it, it is to be hoped that Quebec will not be long without a supply of it, for it is apparently impossible to tell when the epidemic may again visit our country without giving us sufficient warning to prepare the necessary vaccine for stemming its ravages. Our Board of Health and Hospital Authorities are alive, we hope, to the necessary measures to be taken in order to avoid being caught unawares."—Acadian Recorder.

Be Sure Your Soap Is Pure
Impure Soaps
Are Not Wholly Soluble

When a soap is cheap it cannot contain all the pure animal fats and vegetable oils that make a soap efficient and harmless.

For that reason in cheap soaps adulterants are used—strong lyes, bleaching alkalis that eat the fabric, and extra water and "fillers" to give the cake size and weight. These impurities do not dissolve. They make a scum and give off an unpleasant odor, besides rotting the fine texture of the cloth.

KIRK'S
FLAKE WHITE
SOAP

Is wholly soluble in hot or cold or soft or hard water. It contains no fillers or impurities of any kind and is so pure that it is as safe as it is pleasant to use for toilet and bath, as it never injures the skin.

The solid white cake of Flake White is pure soap all the way through. It is unexcelled for any sort of washing and it is particularly popular as a laundry soap for fine clothes—always washing so quickly and leaving the clothes unharmed, lily white, sweet smelling and clean. Try Flake White in your washing machine. Tell your friends.

Hard on the Maid.

One of the peculiarities of our language was brought to the notice of a Chicago woman by her Swedish maid.

This girl had attended night school for some weeks and was delighted by her attainments in English. She expressed her wish to try her knowledge by reading a story in English, and the mistress recommended for her perusal, a tale called "A Modern Cinderella," then running in one of the magazines. It was simply worded and appeared not to present any linguistic pitfalls.

"Did you like it, Hilda?" asked the mistress, when the magazine was returned.

"Yes, ma'am," was the reply, "but I am sorry she had so much trouble, and those glass eyes, too. My brother, he had one glass eye, and it was hard for him."

The lady of the house was puzzled; so Hilda unfolded the magazine and pointed with a respectful finger to the following undecipherable proofs: As Polly moved about the kitchen, doing her work, her eyes suddenly fell on the letter, which lay unopened on her aunt's lap.

"Keep your eyes where they belong," said that lady, sharply, and poor Polly colored with shame.

Strange Hotel.

What is probably the queerest hotel and restaurant in the world is that recently erected at Atlantic City, in New Jersey, U.S.A. It takes the form of a monster elephant. Seen from a distance the resemblance of the structure to a live elephant is remarkable. As you approach it its huge size becomes apparent, but you quickly observe that it is only a thing of wood and iron, but most cleverly contrived. It boasts of many beds, and a dining pavilion on the animal's back capable of accommodating two hundred people. One reaches this novel restaurant by means of a staircase which runs up through the animal's legs and body. Here and there windows give the necessary light. Needless to say the elephant hotel is causing quite an attraction, and its owner bids fair to reap a good harvest as a result of his ingenuity.

Capt. John Boland

Famous Fish-Killer Visits His Native Land After Absence of Quarter of Century.

In the eighties of the past century, few names were better known than Capt. John Boland, the famous banking master out of the firm of James and John Fox of this city, of which Mr. John Fox of H.M. Customs, was then a partner.

Capt. Boland has had a varied and interesting experience in the mercantile marine and fishing industry of our country. At a very early age he made his first foreign voyage with the late Capt. Wm. Hennessey, in the brig Belle of Harbor Grace. He then went in the brig, Kate, and subsequently in the splendid brig Margaret Ridley, Capt. Michael Collins; Dugan's Fling, Capt. Lawson; Goodridge's Heron, Capt. Stafford; the barquentine Mariner, Capt. Archibald; Donnelly's brig, W. Donnelly, Capt. Joshua Pike; L. O'Brien's brig, Guide, Capt. Dan Scanlan; Walter Grieve's Mozart, Capt. Baxter, with whom he remained for two years; also Duder's barque Olanda, Capt. Sam Frowse; Duder's Mary, Capt. Brothers and Goodridge's Gracia.

In 1882 he decided to go on the Banks, and shipped in the J. K. Mundell, Capt. James Kiely, owned by James Fox & Sons of St. John's, one of the oldest and most enterprising firms in Newfoundland. During the winter he went on foreign voyages with the late Capt. John Snow in Tessier's Britannia. The next Spring he went on the Banks again as a common hand, and in the Fall shipped in Goodridge's Minnie, Capt. Mulcahy. He then moved up to mate with Capt. John Dunn, Jr. in Goodridge's J. Albert Smith, on a voyage to West Indies. On return he went to the Banks again in S. March & Sons schr. Bersy, Capt. Geo. Nickerson, and she was lost on Cape Breton shore. The next year found him mate with Captain John and Thomas Brien of March & Sons Susan and Mayflower respectively. Messrs. Jas. and John Fox sent after him in November to take charge of the J. K. Mundell for the coming Bank fishery. That year he secured 2000 qts. of fish. The next year in the Scour Light he landed 4240 qts. and became highest. The following year in the same ship he brought Boston with cargo of pickled fish from Piacentia, returning with a load of flour. In the Fall he went to Boston on the S.S. Portia to purchase the schooner Grover Cleveland for Fox's firm. In the year 1888 he was only fairly successful, landing 2500 qts. That Fall he went to Piacentia, leaving the Grover Cleveland there, returning to St. John's to take charge of the Jubilee to go to Fortune Bay to load herring for Boston.

The First Shipment.

His was the first cargo of frozen herring ever shipped from this country in a Newfoundland bottom. With partners, he then purchased the schr. J. J. Burns, and went on the Banks doing fairly well. His next vessel was Job Bros' Vigilant, in which he secured 1800 qts. Hon. M. Monroe sent for him to take charge of the S. M. Lake, and the fishery falling on Grand Banks he went to the Flemish Cap and secured 2000 qts. In 1890 he took the S. M. Lake to Piacentia Bay for frozen herring, and during a heavy gale of wind, the vessel turned over while taking cargo. At the risk of his own life he saved his son's. The following year he went to the Banks and was fairly successful, landing 1600 qts. and then loaded her in Sound Island with herrings for Boston. Unfortunately he was a little too late for the market. The next vessel he commanded was the J. W. Roberts, but only secured 1200 qts. He then went mate in the schr. Hope, and afterwards shipped with Capt. Job Vine in Baine Johnston's Iron barque, Helen Isabel. This was his last voyage in Newfoundland.

As a Seal Killer.

Capt. Boland had considerable experience in the seal-fishery also in years gone by. In 1871 he was in the brig Dolphin, Capt. Farrell—next in the Mary Jane, Capt. Taylor of Carbonear, belonging to Apsey. They cut the spars out of her on Sheela's great sale of 1872, put back to St. John's repaired and went north in search of seals. They were off Battle Harbor on the 27th April, and during the gale drifted over the ice, where the S.S. Retriever, brigantines Lord Clyde, Huntsman and many other vessels were lost. The escape of the Mary Jane was miraculous. The following year he went with Capt. John Keefe in Munn & Co.'s Rival and was fairly successful with the whitecoats. In the year 1881 Capt. Boland received a silver medal and complimentary letter from the Portuguese Government, granting him protection in any Portuguese Colony, for having assisted nine others in taking four men off a sand bank near Cape Mondego, on the coast of Portugal. He was then before the mast in Goodridge's brigantine Marian, Capt. Manning, and Capt. John Dunn, Jr. was first officer. The late Timothy Quigley was also one of the volunteers.

Enters U. S. Civil Service.

Capt. Boland left St. John's in 1873, and for a short time followed up the sea, but an opportunity offering, he grasped it, and entered the Civil Service in New York, where he has held the same responsible and remunerative position for many years—he has two sons also in the Civil Service of the Great Republic. It is very interesting to hear Capt. Boland relate the success of the Newfoundland sea-faring men, who are in command of some of the largest steamships out of New York and other American ports, and amongst them we may mention the names of the three brothers Dalton, Kelly, Morrissey, Donnelly, Connor, Tucker and a score

Sweet and pure—through summer's heat

Your appetite will not pause before a glass of Carnation Milk.

For you know that it is pure—and fresh.

You know that it is guarded against taint.

Sealed Carnation Milk is certainly the safe milk for warm summer weather.

Pour out a third of a glass of this rich, creamy milk. Then fill up the glass with cold, pure water.

There you have milk better than you can usually obtain for table use.

Without the water, Carnation Milk is served as cream for breakfast tea or coffee.

It is fresh because it is sealed, while perfectly fresh, in the very heart of Canada's dairy lands.

It is pure—because it is first rigidly tested, then STERILIZED.

It is rich—because it is "whole" milk—not a separated or skimmed milk.

Imagine milk of such quality being kept safely on your pantry shelves during summer weather.

What a joy to have milk—fresh whenever you want it, always safe, always pure.

INFANT FEEDING

The uniform purity and absolute safety—of this rich milk make it ideal for baby's bottle. Write for the formula of a noted specialist on Infant Feeding. Consult your Family physician.

of others who are upholding the reputation handed down to them by their sires and grandfathers, as being from time immemorial the most competent fearless and trustworthy mariners who ever sailed the Seven Seas. In all other walks of life the Newfoundlanders have forged to the front, and well may our country be proud of them. Capt. Boland, (accompanied by his wife), will pay a short visit to his old home in historic Bristol's Hope to once more view the scenes of his childhood; but alas, we fear he will find few of his own generation there, for "the hills are still there but his comrades have gone," many of them never to return.

Raised With Care.

(From the Philadelphia Bulletin.)

The business man had decided to try an office girl, and was interviewing applicants for the job.

He eyed rather suspiciously a fair young thing who wore a somewhat flimsy silk blouse and a lot of gaudy "jewellery."

"I—er—hope you were carefully brought up?" he stammered nervously.

"Oh, yes, thank you," replied the damsel; "I came up in the elevator."

Has Fashion a Limit?

(Glasgow Weekly Herald.)

Most coincidentally we are slaves—subject grovelling slaves—to Fashion!

When the beautiful and much admired young Princess Alexandra married the Prince of Wales, it was fashionable to take example by her in dress and in every other possible way. One day she had the misfortune to suffer a slight accident, and for a time walked with a limp. This was enough for Fashion's votaries, and women might be seen at assemblies and walking in the parks with what was called "The Alexandra Limp!" This ridiculous example shows how far we can go in slavishly copying for fashion's sake what in itself may be far from desirable or beautiful.

It is in dress perhaps more than in any other way that our lack of freedom in choice shows most conspicuously. What happens to women who choose to disregard popular wishes as to Fashion was shown a few years before the war by the attempt of a small minority, greatly daring, to wear trousers. Trousers forsooth! There were only a few inches of dark satin showing beneath a skirt—much less noticeable than those worn by Eastern women—but instantly public fury fell upon the unfortunate ladies, and one indeed was so roughly handled that she was obliged to hail a taxi and hide herself, trousers and all, behind drawn blinds from public displeasure! The full absurdity of the situation, however, was disclosed when, war breaking out, women could be seen in all public places in full male costumes, and nobody objecting.

When one thinks of the whole gamut of fashion through which women have passed since the Early Britons clothed themselves in the furs of animals (a fashion, by the way, to which we seem to be reverting!), one can but feel astonished that such changes should have been allowed! For, if, when it was the fashion to dress in the changing gowns of the early 19th century, a lady had attempted to wear a corset she would have had a hooting crowd at her heels; yet in 1860 no fashionable woman would have dared to be seen without one. Truly, "Fashions change and we with them!"

Fortune or Crinoline!

One wonders what dreadful crime against their relations those poor girls have committed of whom one occasionally reads in the daily paper, whose aunts leave them a legacy on condition that they should for the rest of their lives wear crinoline or tippets and elastic-sided boots, or some such abnormalities. What acquisitions these aunts would have been to the torture chambers of the Middle Ages! For who can imagine a greater refinement of fortune than the making of a pretty young girl in poor circumstances decide as to whether she could give up a thousand a year or for ever wear a bustle?

All this goes to show—the difficulty of breaking through fashions, however ugly or foolish, being so strong—how important it is that fashions should in themselves be becoming and sensible.

It goes without saying that no one need go to the extreme of fashion in order to prevent oneself from being conspicuous; and there are times when a fashion is so unreasonable, or even injurious to health, that it is absolutely necessary to set oneself against it. For instance, when it was the mode for ladies to have their hair dressed in great powdered towers on their heads and there keep it till the next elaborate hair-dressing (weeks later) there were, we may be sure, not a few women with more common sense than to fall in with it, and who wore their hair in a little more reasonable—not to say cleanly—fashion. And when what was at the time described as "the hour-glass figure" was "correct"—when the waist was squeezed into vanishing point—women who cared at all about their health, knowing that this meant that the most important organs of the body were being strangled, and remembering that the hour-glass is the symbol of death, set their faces against it and were content to have waists slightly more resembling that of the Venus of Milo! But, apart from extravagances such as these, one does not want to make oneself conspicuous by being unfashionable.

Beauty is Simplicity.

What should constitute the aim of those who set the fashions? It can be summed up in two words—Comfort and Beauty. Fortunately, the two are not opposed, though for some strange reason many people are liable to divorce the two in their minds, and consequently in practice, and think that because a working dress, say, should be made comfortable it need not be beautiful, or because a party frock should be beautiful it cannot be comfortable. Of course, this is quite the wrong way of looking at it, for, as a rule, though not necessarily so, the most comfortable clothes are the most beautiful because they are the most simple. In simplicity there is always a certain charm.

No one should ever feel uncomfortable in one's clothes. There is absolutely no need for it; and no clothes should ever be other than beautiful. Beauty does not necessarily mean luxury. When one hears of some of the latest fashions in this direction—such as men's embroidered satin pyjamas—one begins to feel that the wrong people are setting the fashions!

What is wanted is a few artists and hygienists of both sexes to design the nation's clothes. In that case what would happen? To begin with, one cannot help thinking that a bag would be laid by artists and hygienists both on many articles of woman's dress. Corsets would go, high heels, and one is very much inclined to think—the skirt. A gown has its place, but that women should be compelled to wear several pieces of material impeding their movements during a working day, or even when going in for a tennis tournament, is when one thinks seriously, obviously absurd. One can only comfort oneself by the thought that, if the skirt cannot go all at once, it is at least going by inches!

With these new controllers of the Fashions, what an improvement we should see in the general health of women, and what a galaxy of beautiful costumes!

MINARD'S LINDMENT CURES GARTER IN COWS.

Leonid Krassin.

According to all accounts, Leonid Krassin, the business man of Sovietism, who has been in England to make trade arrangements between Russia and Britain, and who is about to return bringing prominent Russians with him to London, is rather a remarkable man.

Few would suspect, says the organ of German commerce, that this significant individual—judging from mere looks—was, in the opinion of competent judges, the world's greatest living master of the science of electrical engineering and perhaps the world's most competent organizer in the field of the mechanical engineering industries, the genius who, with nothing but the wrecks of plants and railroads and bridges left over from a revolution and with mobs of untrained workers to depend upon, had built up in the soviet world a system that goes through the motions of industrialism in a lifelike manner. Not very long before the great war, old Siemens, head of the famous electrical concern in Germany, declared that Krassin was without exception the most gifted and practical technician he had ever taken into his confidence.

He has apparently fantastic notions which he offered to the most puzzling electrical and engineering problems, but which in the testing proved to be eternal.

He was considered crazy by many professed masters in engineering. The laws of mechanics required his bridges to fall. The theories of engineering made his power houses impossible, but his bridges stood and his power houses functioned.

Returning to Russia he soon attracted unusual attention by his engineering schemes. The original aspects of Krassin's engineering genius were soon found to have a counterpart in the unprecedented character of his financial expedients. His system of accounting defied every principle of solvency. His statements of assets and liabilities worked out in bankruptcy. Precisely as he had invented an engineering of his own he had evolved a kind of business, which, while admirably suited perhaps to the peculiarities of Russian industry, raised doubts in other countries. Nevertheless his banks and his businesses had the good luck of his bridges. He had become a famous captain of industry in his own land when the war broke out.

This is the Moses to whom the Soviet government is looking to lead them out of its financial wilderness, and this little, insignificant, rather shabby looking Russian is the man who a holding conference with the financial experts of Britain, with a fair promise of coming to an understanding such as will lead to trustworthy commercial relations between the two countries, and it need not be wondered at if this grotesque genius should have some important part in effecting political and diplomatic settlements between his country and the Western European powers.

He has apparently succeeded in being acceptable to all the varied powers that have recently ruled Russia from the Czar to Lenin.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SITTING ON THE SAFETY VALVE.

"I really love her with all my heart and yet she has little mannerisms that get on my nerves so that I have to go out of the house to keep from bursting out about them," a husband once told me in regard to his wife. (It seems like an intimate thing to discuss with a third person, but we were all three very dear friends and he meant no disrespect.)

"Why on earth don't you tell her about them pleasantly? She'd be glad to get rid of them I know."

"Oh would she?" he said. "I thank you! I've tried that several times, but I know better now."

"What happened?"

When He Tried the Safety Valve.

"Well, here's one example. She has a way of humming when she is working, and she always hums the same tunes and always out of tune—you know she can't keep a tune to save her life. Well, one day when I was terribly tired I asked if she would mind trying a new tune if she must hum. I said it jokingly and I thought everything would be all right, but not a bit of it. She laughed with me at first and stopped humming, but then she got that silent, depressed way she always has when something is wrong, and by and by it came out—I didn't love her the way I used to because I used to like to hear her hum even if she didn't keep the tune. It took all the energy I needed for a hard day at the office the next day, to get things straight again and I went to bed feeling like a rag. I was too tired to make the same mistake two or three more times, but I am cured now. I just put up with things whether I like them or not. It's the easiest way."

The Easiest But Dangerous Way.

But one could see from the expression on his face as he said it that it was not the pleasantest way, and that the cumulative effect was most unfortunate.

Do you know what I think that

SUGAR.

The price of sugar's truly vicious—we're rationed at the place I board; the little sacks the grocers dish us cost more than toasters can afford. They give us many a far-fetched reason why sugar calls for so much kale; but little does their logic season our coffee, tea, or home brewed ale. A lot of reasons will not sweeten the pies on which the workers feed, and so the pastry must be eaten so sour it makes men's bosoms bleed. And all the reasons are but joshing, sent forth to cheer us when we dine; they'd all lose color in the washing, and shrink if hung upon the line. Some fat old skates

Buying More, Selling Less.

Customs returns for the first three months of the year show a trade increase of $136,000,000, as compared with the same period last year. The weak point, however, is that Canada is shown to be buying abroad considerably more than she is exporting. This year's exports reached a value of $237,236,799, less than that of the first three months last year, while imports increased in value from $131,020,409 to $229,004,966.

Canada's industrial power, as demonstrated during the war, evidently is not being sustained under circumstances other than those which created so huge a demand for war munitions of all kinds. The present trade figures do not encourage the view that this country is passing smoothly through the reconstruction period.

Production is the secret of power. So long as Canada fails to send out goods of the same value of those brought in, living conditions will remain difficult.

The passing of the habit of buying imported luxuries is not established by the trade story of the first three months of the fiscal year. It remains for Canadians to give another sharp hitch to their belt of self-restraint.—Montreal Daily Star.

MARK TWAIN'S HOUSE.

(A movement is on foot at Hartford, Conn., sponsored by The Hartford Courant, to save Mark Twain's home from the hands of speculators.)

Huck Finn is playing round the house, Tom Sawyer's whistling there. And Pudd'n'head stands by the pane some thumb prints to compare; The jumping frog is in the yard, and tender hearts and true Still hover day an' night around the home which Mark Twain knew. Oh, save them from the sordid hand of commerce and of strife, And keep that house a monument to all the joys of life.

There once the kindly writer lived and let his spirit flow. And gave the world those characters which every age shall know. There many a loyal heart was born and many a smile began Which went upon its rippling round to cheer his fellow-man. And now that he has gone away, the house he loved and knew Should shelter still the playful souls his gentle spirit drew.

Too many tender memories within the home abide To let it go the common way along life's changing tide. Let grateful hearts support it now and generous purses give That Huckleberry Finn may always have a place to live. Where Mark Twain lived and worked and laughed and wept his bitter tears. That spot should be his monument through all the future years.

Penalising Exporters

Last Saturday's Trade Review is the authority for stating in its Local Market Columns that "the new 1920 fish on the South West Coast will be held back (under the Export Regulations) till all the old catch is gone, in order that the latter may fetch as good a price as possible. In former days the new West Coast fish always had a detrimental effect on any old fish of the previous year that happened to be unsold. This unfair competition (the black type is ours) will now be removed, and all exporters will be upon an equal footing." For specious argument, this surely has to be awarded the palm. Because the South West Coast exporters, whose fishermen dealers engage in the winter fishery, and whose catch is ready for shipment by the middle of May, are ready to load cargoes earlier in the season than city merchants, they must, forsooth, be penalised and their energy and industry in keeping up the dominion, characterised as unfair competition, and their fish held up at the risk of serious loss on sale in order that others may benefit. Left handed encouragement of this nature is not good enough for the energetic exporters of the West Coast, and if it does not cause deep resentment, we are far short in our estimation of their sturdy independence.

The hypothesis that new fish going from Newfoundland to the European markets will interfere with the price of unsold old, might have some basis, were it not for the fact that new fish from Norway is already in competition with last year's catch from this dominion, and consequently will have the effect of forcing down old prices. Therefore if the cargoes now ready for shipment at exporting centres on the South Coast are held up until the total quantity of unsold old—at home and abroad—is disposed of, the chances of early new made 1920 fish realising quick sales and profitable returns, when it does arrive across, are exceedingly remote. There is no fair play whatever about such a distinction. It is not placing all exporters on an equal footing. The Regulations as applied to winter and spring caught fish are invidiously discriminative. No other part of the island carries on an all-the-year-round fishery, but the South Coast, and invariably cargoes from there have been the first to enter the markets. The early trips of the bankers in Fortune Bay and ports on the Burin peninsula, are also made and ready for export by the middle or end of May, long before there is any washing out done about St. John's and other fishing points on Avalon.

It is then manifestly unfair to the exporters of that section of the dominion, against which the Regulations have been invoked by Eastern competitors, that they should be prohibited from getting their produce away to market, and receiving the best figures obtainable, because through interference with old established customs, so much 1919 fish is on hand to-day. And if the embargo on exports be not removed the equilibrium of trade will be disturbed and exporters on the South Coast will be put to great loss, a loss which cannot but affect the bank and shore fishermen, who see the fruits of their toil and labor held up in holds or stores, and becoming old as time advances. No man can honestly and conscientiously declare that such procedure as obtains to-day is fair and square. It is far from that. It is unjustly and unduly harsh. It is using the regulations to the disadvantage of men who have gone through all kinds of hardships and peril during the early months of the year, and it is penalising the producers equally with the exporters. Far from placing all the latter on an equal footing, the regulations are deliberately killing the South West Coast codfishery, by hampering the operations of fishermen and merchants alike. If the ban on cargoes for export be not lifted shortly, we would suggest to the exporters who have cargoes loaded, that they furnish their captains with Consular Certificates, Invoices and Bills of Health, waive the formality of either license or clearance from the customs, and order their vessels to sea. By doing this they will bring matters to a head more speedily than by cautious waiting with heavy loss in the distance.

Press Delegates at Sydney.

On the arrival of S. S. Victorian at Sydney yesterday afternoon the delegates to the Imperial Press Conference landed in steam tenders. After the disembarkation ship left for Quebec. While the Victorian was in the harbor Hon. W. F. Coaker, Minister of Marine and Fisheries had quite a lengthy conversation from Signal Hill with Messrs. Buffrows and Tremellen, also hearing two gramophone selections. Mrs. R. G. Reid and Hon. S. K. Bell had interesting talks with the Victorian, and during the day six concerts were given the station. The delegates were warmly welcomed at Sydney, appropriate addresses being delivered in the main saloon. The short stay of the ship at Sydney prevented any conversations with the Newfoundland representatives who left here by express on Sunday. Communication was maintained with Signal Hill after Victorian had cleared Sydney Harbor, and was to have resumed this morning. A wireless direction finding station, it is said, will be erected on the Hill by the Canadian Marconi Company, to operate in conjunction with the telephone system.

Army and Navy Race.

A splendid fine crew from the Briton, went to the Lake side yesterday evening and prepared for practice. It was understood that they were going to row the Cadet but through some misunderstanding they were prevented from doing so. It is hoped that the difficulty will be straightened out and the crew get their boat, as a lot of interest is being taken in the Army and Navy Race, which would be taken from the programme, if only two boats are entered.

Picnics To-Day.

The annual picnics of the Cathedral and St. Michael's Sunday Schools are being held to-day at Hafey's Farm, Pennywell road. The George Street Sunday School children went out by train this morning and are having their annual outing at Kilbride. The Salvation Army, No. 2 Corps, is holding their annual outing to-day at the Old Agricultural Farm, head of Robinson's Hill.

Obituary.

SELINA SLEATER. On Monday evening at 8 o'clock there passed away, at the residence of her son, Charles, in the 73rd year of her age, Selina, widow of the late Robert L. Sleater of this city, jeweler. Left to mourn are two daughters, Mrs. (Rev.) J. Britton and Mrs. Fred Pike; one son Charles D. The late Mrs. Sleater was a sister of the late Charles and Anariah Dave of Bay Roberts. The funeral takes place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from 435 Water Street. To the sorrowing family circle the Telegram offers condolences.

Hotel Company Formed.

A recently formed company capitalised at one million dollars proposes to erect a modern hotel in the East End of the city on the site of Fort William which the Reid Company proposed to build on some years ago. The company has been promoted by Mr. B. B. Stafford and a provisional directorate, consisting of Mr. B. B. Stafford, Hon. F. Steer, Mr. W. Campbell and Mr. A. Stafford has been elected and two others will be added. One quarter of the capital is in sight locally. It is the plan of the promoters to materialize the building will contain 198 rooms with private baths, a theatre, an assembly room, billiard room, barber shop and a roof garden, and will be conducted on the American system and probably under American management. The project has the full approval of the business community.

Broad Cove Regatta.

Arrangements for the annual Broad Cove Regatta are now being finalised and the sports will be held on the afternoon of August 11th. During the week collectors have been in the city and have secured nearly sufficient funds to finance the affair. The evening's events will comprise motor boat races, 4 oared 18 foot boat races, cross-handed races, double cross-handed races, etc., in which crews from Broad Cove, Bell Island, Topsail, Portugal Cove and Horse Cove will take part. The committee in charge are Messrs. R. Squires, S. Squires, A. Squires and Jacob Squires. The first race starts at 2 o'clock.

Terra Nova Not Chartered.

In connection with the press despatches which announced that the S.S. Terra Nova had been chartered to carry supplies for the Cope Antarctic Expedition, it has been stated by Sir Edgar Bowring that this is not the case. During last year Mr. Cope held an option on a charter for the Terra Nova, but the time limit has lapsed. An offer has since been made to purchase the steamer but in view of the fact that the ship was one of the few left to prosecute the sealfishery, the offer would not be entertained.

Personal.

Mrs. T. Connolly, wife of Conductor T. Connolly, of the Trepansey railway, and children, and Mrs. F. J. Wadden left by the express yesterday for Louisburg, N.S., on a month's visit to the former's sister, Mrs. A. Wilson. Rev. Fr. Prendergast, S.J., who was in the city conducting a retreat for the clergy, left by the Sable I. yesterday on his way to New York. Dr. H. MacDonald, of Halifax, who arrived Saturday last on a visit to his brother Dr. J. C. MacDonald, who has been ill for some time, left for home by the Sable I. yesterday. Mrs. J. M. Forbes and two children, of Montreal, are guests of Mr. Forbes, at the Crosbie Hotel.

Schooner Ashore.

The Minister of Customs, Hon. H. J. Brownrigg, received a message from sub-Collector White at Ferryland last evening stating that the schooner M. J. Parks, Capt. A. Parks, was fast ashore on the back of Crow Island Rock, and the sea was getting very rough. The crew had landed safely. The Parks had a cargo of 1500 qts. of fish onboard.

Unnecessary.

It is said that there are sixteen military officers, ranging from the rank of Lieut.-Colonels down to Lieutenants, still attached to the Militia Department, and presumably on full pay. This appears to be a larger staff than the present business of the department warrants, and no doubt gives tremendous satisfaction to the Non-Commissioned Officers and Privates who have so frequently complained of the treatment accorded them. A list of the names of the present overstaff of this now unnecessary department would be of interest to the taxpayers. Of course the sixteen have the usual numbers of stenographers, typists and messengers in addition.

S. O. E. Banquet.

The S. O. E. Lodges of the city, Dudley and Empire, will banquet the Supreme President of the Order, Bro. T. H. Carter, at Victoria Hall to-night. A choice menu has been prepared and the programme is most interesting.

Acknowledgment.

The Hon. Secretary of the Church of England Orphanage acknowledges with thanks the following contributions to the Garden Party: Mr. T. A. Hall, $10.00; Andrew Murray, Esq., 10.00; Hon. R. Watson, 5.00; Mr. W. Oke, 1.00; Mr. J. R. McCowan, 5.00.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.

Regatta Jingles.

Hats off to the man who put that title bridge over the muddy brook at a head of the pond. His praise shall be great among the white-shod helmets as well as the slim Leanders of the heliotrope socks. By the way, what became of last year's bridge? It seemed new and rather durable. We do not remember to have read any public acknowledgment from its recipient. Possibly the function was carried out privately so that he may not be "taken by surprise," as they all say.

The most striking improvement at the Lakeside this year is the pretty paling fence all along the road side. The silent testimony of the multitude on Regatta Day must indeed be gratifying to the Brewers who have been the first to show a kindly feeling for the masses by their various benefactions of a public nature, in recent years.

Just a word, Mr. President! It has been suggested that in the interval there should be a race in the swinging boats. A variety race with three crews. One boat to be manned by a crew of colored vests only. The next to contain four stud-hole men—you know, the man with the stiff white shirt front who disdains to wear either collar or tie. The third to be propelled by a crew of shoulder-strap men with the little leather bag attached. I am holding money now to back the latter.

Alas! we have indeed reached the parting of the ways. With flour at $20 and raisins 40 cents a pound, what is there left to us now but "with partings such as press the life from out young hearts, and sighs that ne'er might be repeated" to reconcile ourselves as best we may to the "total loss" of our time-honored "Penn'orth o' Puddin'."

When Agriculture Was Prohibited.

On July 28, 1766, Governor Palliser issued an order that no more land was to be enclosed for agricultural purposes in the Colony, an exception however being made in favor of Mr. Justice Gill, who was given a grant for the Torbay Marshes.

DIAMOND DUST To-day's Messages. Nothing But the Truth—Without Fear or Flavour.

The big attraction for this afternoon is the playing off for the H. D. Reid trophy at Mount Cashel. Both the Cubs and Wanderers have a two year's lien on it, so that whichever banner victory perches on them will be the absolute owners. It is considered the finest silver cup ever presented here. The game will go 5 innings, and it is scheduled to start at 4.30. Our old friend Jup Pluvius poured forth his vials of wrath all yesterday afternoon which caused the C. of E. Orphanage preliminaries to get the hoist until to-morrow night. Of course you'll be there!

Messrs. Chesman and Hartnett will control this afternoon's game with Messrs. Merner and Conroy tabulating the plays. The lineups will be: WANDERERS CUBS Donnelly D Hall Britt C Clouston lb Demers Clouston lb Duggan McCrindle 3b Brown Canning Dillon rf Manning Dobbin cf Sawyer Burton cf Goose Regan lf Driscoll Talk about big baseball scores! The big fellows can play "cricket" too, for in the New York Times of July 20th we notice that the Yankees pounded the White Sox for 20 runs to 5. In the seventh the Yanks made 8 runs, all on errors. "Just wait," A. Harvey Thomas said.

NOTE OF THANKS.—Mr. W. Elliott of this city, and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Marshall and family of London, England, wish to thank the doctors, sisters and nurses of the General Hospital for their kindness towards their wife, daughter and sister, Mrs. W. Elliott, during her stay at that institution.—adv.

MADE SPLENDID PASSAGE.—Schr. Emma Belliveau, Capt. John Doody, has arrived at Corunna, Spain after a splendid passage of 18 days from this port. Capt. Doody is making his first trip as master, and has started well.

Phases of Presidential Campaign.

The lines on which the Presidential campaign in the United States are to be fought are now fairly clear. No "freak" or dissident candidates that may be nominated are likely to develop strength that will divert the contest into other than a straight old-fashioned fight between Republican and Democrat. The Socialists will no doubt support their old comrade, Convict Eugene V. Debs of Atlanta penitentiary; the anarchists may have a choice specimen to cheer for in William Randolph Hearst. The plain citizen, who far outnumbers both factions, will make his choice between Harding and Cox.

Never in any Presidential contest has the issue of battle lain between two candidates so nearly similar in antecedents, environment, and human experience. Both are Ohio men of clean frugal up-bringing; good family men; excellent platform speakers noted for warmth rather than brilliance; newspaper proprietors of the smaller-town type who learn much by human contact; excellent examples for the average American. Neither would make a bad President, neither a sensational or dazzling one. In the circumstances, it being a "Republican year," the odds favor Mr. Harding. It happens that so far as domestic issues are concerned, there is little to choose between the Republican and Democratic platforms. The delegates to the National conventions were careful to adopt moderate courses and to avoid pronouncements likely to develop extreme cleavages.

So far as international questions are concerned, it is plain that, though the Republicans are likely to get the most votes, the Democrats have the best arguments. By far the loftiest and most enlightened utterance delivered in either the Republican or Democratic conventions was the "keynote" delivered by Hon. Homer Cummings in opening the latter assembly at San Francisco. It elucidated the responsibility of the American people toward the rest of the world in these days when Europe is lying prostrate, in terms that made the opening speech of Henry Cabot Lodge at the Republican convention in Chicago seem playtime and provincial. Mr. Cummings also earned the good wishes of Canadians for Democratic success by his defence of this country's right to be a member of the League of Nations. Canada is and shall remain a member of that League, whether the United States stays out or comes in, but most of us would rather have the cordial approval of our great neighbor than otherwise. Probably when the Presidential campaign reaches its final stages Governor Cox will find his declaration in favor of the ratification of the Peace Treaty without reservations a valuable asset. Signs are not lacking that countless Americans hold that view.

There are one or two minor factors in connection with the campaign that are unique. In each instance the candidates for the Vice-Presidency are regarded as of higher calibre than the Presidential choices. There are those who scoff at the abilities of Senator Harding, but few who do not regard his running mate, Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts, as a strong selection. Others are inclined to view Governor Cox as of a somewhat superficial type, but everyone regards his associate, Franklin Roosevelt, as one of the ablest public servants in the United States.

Another unique circumstance is the fact that whatever happens, a newspaper editor will be the next President for the first time in the history of that country. In the past newspaper men have made and unmade Presidents, but have never captured the honor for themselves. The present certainty that signal honor will fall to journalism does not really mean very much; the average of intelligence among newspaper men is neither lower nor higher than in other professions. But all newspaper men of standing have one asset, the lack of which has been a grievous disability to Woodrow Wilson. That is the contacts of their daily experience that acquire a knowledge of human nature that enables them to work with others, and to accomplish their aims in a spirit of co-operation and mutual respect. The absence of such institutions in the occupant of the White House has prevented the fulfilment of his very noble ideals.—Saturday Night.

Professional Interest.

(From the Scotsman.)
The following amusing incident occurred at a hairdresser's in a small town in Lancashire:
Customer: Well, Shears, what did you think of the bishop's sermon Sunday? I saw you in church.
Barber: Yes, sir, I was there; but, to tell the truth, there was a man sitting in front of me whose hair wanted cutting so badly that I couldn't hear a word.

BRENNAN MATCHED WITH DEMPSEY.

New York, July 13.—K. O. Bill Brennan to-day was matched to box Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight championship, inside of two months before the club offering the best inducements. The Chicagoan got the plum immediately after Georges Carpentier, the Frenchman, deliberately ran out on his word to swap punches with the conquerer of Jess Willard. Brennan arrived here early to-day for a conference with his manager, Leo P. Flynn. The Knockout King will train at a nearby resort for the combat.

Ever since the arrival of Jack Kearns, manager of the champion Flynn has been on his trail. Kearns promised Flynn first crack in case Carpentier admitted he wanted nothing to do with his man. True to prediction, Carpentier wailed he had a contract with Cochran, of London, which forbade engaging in an encounter with Dempsey, unless the champion went abroad and had it out with him there. Kearns rightfully declared that it was the champion's business to do the dictating and all hands in conference at the Hotel Belmont could not at the hotel after the Carpentier bloodless affair ended. "Are you in a receptive mood? How about Brennan? Are you going to give him a chance and keep your promise?" Flynn asked.

Kearns smiled as he lifted a number of telegrams from his inside coat pocket which revealed the startling news that several promoters wanted a Dempsey-Brennan fight in preference to all others. "By the tone of the telegrams," answered Kearns, "I should imagine Brennan should get the first chance. Here's one from Dominick Tortorich from way out New Orleans who says we can have a bundle of dough for the fight, and here's a telegram from Murray in Buffalo who states he has a ball park all studded up for a scrap, and I could read on indefinitely the many offers."

"That's all very well, Jack, but do I get the fight?" persisted Flynn. There were several newspapermen in the room. "You're on Leo!" exclaimed Kearns. "Where is your fighter? Wire him to get in shape, the match is on. You know my word is my bond. We'll sign in a couple of days, I just want to get a breathing spell."

Flynn rushed out of the hotel to wire Brennan at Chicago to come to New York and begin light training. When news was flashed that a Brennan-Dempsey match had been clinched, Flynn's office, which is located in his home, was the scene of hurrying and scurrying messengers with telegrams containing offers for the scrap. Flynn's telephone rang incessantly with long distance calls.

Brennan's manager had another long talk to-day with Kearns completing arrangements for the battle. The site is still undecided but the largest bidder will get it. So far it lies between New Orleans and Benton Harbor, the latter place, which is just outside of Chicago, recently held the Benny Leonard-Charley White lightweight championship fight. Kearns, in giving his word to Flynn, realized that sooner or later he would have to give in to him, because Brennan is the only man who stood off the champion seven rounds in Milwaukee in 1917. Brennan was giving Dempsey a hard time, the latter not knowing that he was boxing a cripple. Brennan fought with a broken ankle but the pain finally got the best of him.

Since the Dempsey fight, Brennan has gone along knocking out contenders. Since 1914 he has amassed the wonderful record of 71 knock-outs, and he has beaten among others Battling Levinsky, Bob Roper, Willie Meahan, Billy Mike and so on down the line. He is accounted to be one of the hardest punchers in the game and he is the type of a fighter who gives the public a run for their money.

So sure was he of getting Dempsey that Flynn cancelled six fights in San Francisco for Brennan and three on the way out. Only yesterday Flynn wired back "no" to a $6000 offer to box Bob Martin in Kansas City. "I am glad of another opportunity for the world's title and you can bet I'll be in there whaling the champion every second of the going," said Brennan to-day. "I am in pretty fair shape right now but I am going to be at my best when I face the champion. I will have no excuse to offer in case I am beaten. This fight means a great deal to me and I'm going to go in there to do and die."

It was reported to-day that David Mackay, of the Newark Sportsmen's Club, was ready to lay before the managers a flattering offer. Tex Rickard, matchmaker of the International Sporting Club, has asked to be given time to send in a bid.

Resolute's Defeat of Shamrock.

Defender Won in the Fastest Race of Series.

SANDY HOOK, N.J., July 23.—Defender Resolute tossed her six minute and 40 seconds handicap overboard to-day and defeated the challenger, Shamrock IV, boat for boat in the fourth race of the 1920 regatta for the America's Cup.

The series now stands a tie and the deciding race will be run to-morrow. Shamrock won the first race last Thursday when an accident to Resolute's rigging forced her out while far in the lead. The second attempt, last Saturday ended in no race, the yachts being unable to get sufficient breeze to take them around the course in the specified six hours.

Shamrock IV, scored the second victory last Tuesday. Resolute came back on Wednesday, running a dead heat with the challenger and winning by her handicap of seven minutes and one second. Resolute will enter to-morrow's race a favorite in the wagering, her two wins having been more than convincing than Shamrock's.

A Fast Race.

To-day's race was the fastest of the series so far. Resolute completed the thirty mile triangular course in three hours, thirty-seven minutes and fifty-two seconds. Shamrock followed three minutes and 41 seconds later, but the actual difference in sailing time was only three minutes and 18 seconds. Resolute having led across the starting line by 28 seconds.

Although it lacked the thrilling neck and neck finish that put Resolute's victory on Wednesday in a class by itself, to-day's encounter had a picturesque all its own. A heavy blanket fog hung over the sea at Ambrose Channel Lightship until within a few minutes of the start, totally blotting out the excursion fleet and the tall masted rivals that were coming out from their havens behind Sandy Hook. The hoarse fog horn of the Lightship was groaning out its melancholy warning a few hundred feet away, but invisible.

Defender Gained Advantage.

Suddenly the breeze freshened, and the fog began sweeping out to sea. As the pall lifted, Shamrock IV, with her tremendous sails set, loomed through and bore down on the mark like a huge gray ghost. Resolute followed hard on her stern, and after a bit of jockeying about the Lightship, they were off down the Jersey coast.

Resolute was at her old tricks on this, the windward leg. She pointed high into the breeze, while Shamrock set off on a reach that took her rapidly shoreward. When they swung about for the first tack, Resolute's work into the weather had gained her an advantage of more than a quarter mile.

Again Captain Adams held Resolute well up against the wind, with the result that he was able to make the mark without a tack. Shamrock headed off more and was compelled to tack, which brought her around the mark nearly two miles behind Resolute.

A Threatening Squall.

The challenger gained on the second leg, but was still far behind when skipper Adams straightened Resolute out on the home stretch.

Shamrock was closing up the gap that separated her from Resolute on this leg when a freaky bit of weather blew up that fooled even the seasoned Jersey skipper Captain William P. Burton had on the challenger as an adviser and robbed Shamrock IV of whatever chance she had of taking the lead and winning.

The sloops were running fast in a 15 knot breeze when signs of a terrific squall became apparent. Shamrock took down her club topsail and her large jib and prepared for rough weather. Resolute plunged ahead under full sail for a time apparently bent on getting in all the fast sailing she could before the squall struck. And the squall did not strike—at least not with the intensity the Shamrock skipper obviously had expected.

Could Not Close the Gap.

There was a brisk blow for a few minutes and also a short torrent of rain, which Resolute weathered without taking in any sail save her jib topsail. When it was over, Shamrock was unable to re-set her club topsail and was forced to set a smaller topsail while Resolute had her original rig intact. A brief calm intervened and then the wind picked up again. Shamrock caught it first, and crawled slowly up until she was nearly, if not fully, abeam of Resolute. But when the defender caught the wind, she forged ahead with her superior rig, breaking out a balloon jib topsail to aid her progress.

Shamrock piled canvas on then, breaking out both balloon and spinnaker, but the finish was close at hand and she was unable to close the gap.

The steam yacht Victoria, carrying Sir Thomas Lipton, led the chorus of screaming whistles that acclaimed the victor.

A few minutes later a tiny tug was under the boat of the Victoria, its crowds of yachting enthusiasts giving three cheers and a "who's all right—Lipton," for the British sportsman. An excursion steamer and a fleet of smaller craft followed the tug's example, and the Victoria acknowledged the cheers with three sharp blasts of her whistle.

Sir Thomas could be seen on the bridge waving his cap jauntily apparently unmoved by the fact that to-day's race had not gone according to his predictions and his hopes. Keen Interest in England.

LONDON, July 22.—Interest in the America's Cup yacht races off New York was keen yesterday, though up to Tuesday it was much less than anticipated. With Shamrock's second win, Britain had visions of capturing the Cup and as bulletins came in to-day showing Shamrock leading the English sporting public, which had previously conceded the cup to America, began to show more enthusiasm than in previous races. Hope is running high that the coveted trophy will be brought to England. Shamrock's loss yesterday did not dash that enthusiasm, though the showing of the Resolute was acknowledged to be very impressive. Commenting after Shamrock's second win English newspapers said:

EVENING NEWS.—"Lipton has stuck with true British doggedness to the task. If, as is now probable, he brings the cup home, he will have scored a great success for British yacht builders. Burton has made a good reputation as skipper with fine skill and judgment. Nicholson has scored heavily with his new sail. It would be a case of bouquets all around."

STAR.—"Lipton's admirable pluck and perseverance have won him the sympathy of all sportsmen. He exemplifies the Englishman's traditional dauntlessness. Whatever happens it is time to congratulate Burton on his success of yesterday and vindication of his sailing genius."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"Can it be that at last Lipton will win the America's Cup. At least it is within sight. If one of the races still to be run is under strong breeze, Shamrock has every chance of winning."

Sensible Dog.

"Once," said the man with the ginger beard, sadly, "I owned a little woolly Scotch terrier that was one of the smartest of animals you ever saw. Funny thing—one day my wife was readin' in the paper that woolly dogs wasn't going to be the fashion that summer, and she says to me, in a 'jokin' sort of a way:

"I suppose we will have to sell Dagobert—that was his name—and get a nice, fashionable, smooth-haired dog."

"All right, says I, still keepin' up the joke.

"Now what do you suppose that there dog went and did?"

"Mebbe he committed suicide," ventured the grocer. "I have heard of dogs havin' their feelings hurt so bad that they killed themselves."

"Not much, he didn't. Didn't I jest tell you he had a lot of sense? He jest snaked twopence out of the box where we kept the small change to pay the milkman and the newspaper boy, and went down to the barber's shop and had his hair cut—that's what he did."—London Tit-Bits.

The Mystery of Glamis.

Grim old Glamis Castle is one of the most perfect specimens extant of a typical fortress-residence of the Middle Ages, but its chief claim to interest lies in the fact that it holds a secret within its gloomy precincts a secret of so terrible a nature that it has never been known to more than three people at a time. The heir is acquainted with it on the night of his twenty-first birthday. He is conducted to a secret room through a succession of corridors—a portion of masonry is removed, the secret revealed, and the wall built up again. The late Earl, who died at the end of July, 1905, was once asked by a pressing inquirer to divulge the secret, but he replied: "Sir, if you could guess the nature of the secret, you would go down on your knees and thank God it were not yours." Innumerable attempts have been made to solve the mystery, but without success. Once a former Countess of Strathmore, during the temporary absence of her husband, with her guests and servants, searched every nook and cranny of the ancient castle for a whole week, trying to discover the locality of the secret room. In the midst of it all Lord Strathmore returned unexpectedly, and furious with anger, bundled out the entire house-party neck and crop, dismissed about twenty of the servants, after which he and the Countess parted, never to meet again. There are innumerable stories professing to account for the family mystery, one that the secret chamber contains a hideous half-human monster of fabulous age, and another that a vampire is born every generation into the family. Perhaps the one which tells of a border feud contains the most truth, in the course of which the then Lord of Glamis made a number of prisoners, flung them into one of his dungeons, callously left them to starve, and that the bones of these wretched captives strew the floor of that dismal hole to this day.

True Spy Stories.

Captain Ferdinand Tuoby is one of the brilliant young men of Fleet Street, whose knowledge of languages and experience on a great London daily newspaper proved an admirable equipment for service in the Secret Intelligence Corps. He served at one time or another on all the Fronts as well as in neutral States.

The story he tells in his book "The Secret Corps," Murray, 7s. 6d., of the amazing development of espionage during the war behind the battle lines and in the great cities provides much more exciting reading than the work of some of the most skilled writers of Secret Service fiction, and Captain Tuoby is a vivacious storyteller. Here is a story which is typical of the risks taken by some of our young Intelligence officers:—

Captain Schmidt.

One day we learnt that there was a German officer in the sector opposite named "Schmidt." Dressed as a German officer, with a German postcard he had taken off a recent prisoner, a British spy picked his way in the night across No Man's Land and lowered himself into the German front-line trench.

"Wer da!" challenged a sleepy voice. The young Englishman confronted the German sentry, then rasped out in guttural Prussian, almost before the "da" of the "Wer da?" had died away: "Iche suche den Hauptmann Schmidt." (I'm looking for Captain Schmidt.) The sentry drew himself to attention, noting the rank and foot artillery badge of his interlocutor. "He is down at battalion headquarters, Herr Lieutenant." "Good." Then, casually, handing the sentry the postcard he had taken off the prisoner, the intruder observed "Here's a postcard for someone in your battalion. It came to me by mistake. . . good night. . . by the way" (and here the young Englishman turned sharply and severely on the now thoroughly cowed and duped sentry). "What's the password?"

"Schnapps!"

The sentry, completely on the defensive, blurted it out: "Schnapps!" That was how a brave and resourceful young Englishman got a German sector password one muggy, rainy, impenetrable night in Northern France. For the next two hours he wandered round the German lines. "Wer da?"

would challenge a voice out of the night. "Schnapps," would respond the spy. And so it continued up trenches, down duck-boards, at dumps and heaps of mine spoil, at battery positions and headquarters. . . all over the area involved. Towards dawn the young officer's mission, of necessity, drew to a close, and back he wandered to the British lines still saying "Schnapps" when challenged, and still noting all he saw about him.

The Cook and the Ritz.

"A prisoner of war," says the author, "is necessarily a cowed and fallen mortal, a man hiding his true self, and so one never knew if the complete absence of any hatred of England among these men was false or fact. Some had lived long in England. On the Somme the Canadians captured a cook formerly at the Ritz. He was kept very 'hush hush' for three whole weeks in the Corps examining cage. He cooked so well. Bully beef came up to table served in a dozen different ways and tasted like Tournefos Hqsini. Whenever the local A.F.M. in charge of the cage asked why this one prisoner was being kept on, the Intelligence officer would reply: "Hush! He's beginning to talk at last."

The Camouflaged Officer.

One of the most entertaining stories in the book is that about the English officer who, disguised as a wounded German, was put in the bed next to that of a real wounded German:—

"He had his head shaved in the approved Teuton style and his arm and leg all bandaged up and in splints. And so the two were left next to one another through the night. The real German moaned; the camouflaged German followed suit. The real German asked, 'Sind Sie Deutscher?' The camouflaged German replied: 'Yawohl, Bin auch officer!' The camouflaged German didn't encourage conversation; he was morose and taciturn. . . but when German met German in hospital, both officers, and when no one was looking or listening, fraternisation was bound to come sooner or later. It did. And before the genuine German had dozed off to sleep, the good work of 'pumping' him, by indirect suggestion, had got well under way. The morrow promised well. Alas! that was to be the end of a perfect 'stunt.' At 8 a.m. Sister came along. Unfortunately she was in the 'know' as to the true identity of the 'German' in splints, and when, with consummate artistry, the latter began moaning and making grimaces, as arm and leg were 'reset'. . . Sister couldn't support things any longer and broke into uncontrollable mirth and—the 'cat was out of the bag.'"

"Thus, a party of Canadians, with strongly distinctive accents, were separated from their Corps in the line in front of Amiens, and taken up to Ypres." There they were located in the front line opposite a point where it was known a German listening set existed, and were told to discuss the forthcoming attack to be carried out at the point—Ypres—by the Canadian Corps. One man in particular was told to say: "Hell! as if we Canadians hadn't done enough down South. Carting us up here for another—attack at Ypres—about time the Imperials did something!"

The Great Haversack Spoof.

But the best story of all is how we deceived the Germans and the Turks about the attack at Beersheba which they were led to believe would be made Gaza. A British haversack was discovered by a Turkish patrol in No Man's Land, and shortly the enemy learnt that the English had sent out a wireless message saying that every effort was to be made that night to recover it. The haversack was brought to Captain Schiller, the head of the enemy's Intelligence service, and he felt certain that the notes of Allenby's conferences for the past month which it contained were faked. Then:— "Gott in Himmel! What have we got here?" And Schiller read:— "Dear M—Sorry we must delay our little shoot as I'm running down to Cairo for a few days' rest. Back November 4—Yours, E. ALLENBY."

Schiller looks slowly from the letter to the calendar and from the calendar to the letter. The British offensive was expected for October 28th, and here was the British Commander-in-Chief going away on leave! "Donnerwetter!" proclaims the German. "If this isn't becoming—Yes, what is it?" (this to a junior officer just entered). "English prisoners taken at El Tagger say they were warned this afternoon about the loss of a haversack. If anyone found it he was not on any account to open it but was to send it direct to headquarters." Schiller doesn't answer, as this further evidence of authenticity seems in Eagerly, almost feverishly, he returns to the wallet and takes out its remaining contents—a photograph, the photograph of a woman written across in endearing terms, and a letter.

Little Hands and Little Feet. Schiller reads the letter avidly, on and on. It tells of the birth of a first-born, of little hands and little feet. . . it rambles on in that tender language which only a young mother can make her own. The letter is crinkled and has been clearly read and re-read a hundred times. . . it is a letter in a million. Its loss could only be accidental. So reasons Schiller. Division that had been hastily moved into reserve at Beersheba was as hastily moved back to Gaza. On October 28th we attacked the weakened Turkish position at Beersheba and, as all the world knows, carried all before us. . . And the letter concerning the first-born—the letter that saved hundreds, possibly thousands, of British lives, and went far to giving us Jerusalem, and ultimately a whole country? Has the little hospital nurse at El Arish, with the girlish handwriting, forgotten all about it?—John o'London's Weekly.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, June 14.
M. KRASSIN'S HUMOROUS WHIMS.
Mr. Krassin is evidently gifted with a rather grim sense of humor, or rather irony. This representative of the Russian proletariat is said to be vastly tickled by his renting of a luxurious flat at 20 guineas per week in elegant Mayfair; a flat, moreover, previously occupied by a Grand Duke—Dimitri—as also by Nabokoff, Kerensky's former Ambassador in London. The elegant Madame Krassin is no doubt even more enamoured of her new surroundings and associations than M. Krassin. It is true that at Stockholm she did not disdain to lead the bourgeois and cozy life of the haute bourgeoisie. Not less significant than M. Krassin's choice of an ex-Grand Ducal apartment for his private residence in London is his selection of offices situated over that great capitalistic institution, the London Joint City and Midland Bank. And yet there is no evidence of the bank having added to the existing locks of its strong room.

AN ICELANDIC VISITOR.
An interesting stranger in London is Mr. Fredericson, the editor of the Red Star Socialist daily paper. The winning of independence in 1918 has not, he thinks, affected the general condition of the country, though it has of course gratified Nationalist sentiment. On the other hand, not even Iceland has escaped from the economic effects of the war. Big fortunes have been made in the fishing trade, especially by the consignment of dried fish to Spain and Italy, and the new rich have been eagerly buying up landed property. The result is that land is now fetching five times the pre-war price. A corresponding growth of class-consciousness has taken place among the workers. The old trade unions need to include the employers, but now the employers have been turned out, and it is possible to run a Socialist daily in Reykjavik, whereas a weekly used to suffice. The situation is developing, in fact, on orthodox European lines. Mr. Fredericson has stated that the new rich Icelanders are buying up the salmon-fishing rights on the rivers which used to be purchased by wealthy visitors from England to make a summer holiday. Formerly the English outbid the natives for these rights, but now the biggest offers are made locally, and there is likely to be a falling away of the summer migrants.

THE HOUSING INTERNATIONAL.
The interesting point for an English patriot, at any rate in the big International Housing Congress that opened last week, is the unswerving belief in this country that is held by social reformers all over the world. Newspapers here are full of complaints of what is called the failure of the Government housing scheme, and yet it is worth while for large delegations of experts to come here from every quarter of the globe to see what we are doing, and with the intention—avowed by many of them—to copy. This attitude is expressed most clearly by the French, but it was heard in various accents from countries in every possible stage of social development. One of the first things Finland did when she started to set her house in order after obtaining independence was to adapt the best parts of Dr. Addison's (the Minister of Health) policy to her own needs. At the other end of the scale is America, where, as her chief delegate bitterly confessed, the individualistic spirit of the people is against the Government doing anything for housing. The conference—the first big international meeting since the war—is the most extraordinary assembly of races that London has seen for years. If Germany was there it would be an epitome of the modern world. The spokesmen of over a score of nationalities have been making speeches, and it was striking that, with the exception of the French and the Italians, everyone spoke excellent English. One got the impression that English is in truth the modern language. The formal discussions, which tended to be more complimentary than pointed, are likely to be less useful to our visitors than the tour they are making of the British housing scheme. We are at any rate building houses, and faster, apparently, than any other country in the world.

WOMEN AND THE MONOCLE.
Women appear to be using the monocle more this year than ever before. I counted ten at an afternoon dance in town the other day. They manage them remarkably well, but it is not becoming in a ball room, and surely a glass is not necessary to see to dance with. Big rings in the ears are quite to the fore again, also, and a good deal of amusement was caused at a dance recently by quite a young girl, exceedingly smart and pretty, who wore a bored expression, huge rings in her ears, and a monocle. Everyone said it was for a bet.

TOP HATS AND CHECK TROUSERS.
The optimists who declared that the war had killed the vogue of the silk hat should have been at Epsom for the races. The enclosures were full of morning coats and top hats, although outside on the cars round the course most of the men were wearing soft felt hats. There is strong evidence, however, that younger men, although conventionally garbed in morning coats, are striving after more originality in their trousers, and some truly amazing check confections are to be seen at race meetings and in the Park. A bold check of narrow black and white linen, with a blue or mauve thread running through it, I am told by a Savile Row (where are London's smartest and most expensive sartorial establishments) tailor, the very last word in design. These trousers are made of an ordinary cloth, and not of cashmere, the material which was at one time necessarily the complement to a morning coat.

NO PHOTOGRAPHS AT ASCOT.
The brilliance of Ascot week is not likely to be dimmed this year. The great fashion parade begins to-day. It is one of the most important society events of the season. Ostensibly it is a race meeting, but the sport is little more than an incident. The real interest is in the display of the latest creations of the dressmakers and the triumphs of the milliners' art. Whereas the Derby is the resort of all classes, Ascot by use and wont has taken on an exclusiveness entirely its own. The general public's interest is a second hand one, and is provided for by the picture press. But this year the exclusiveness has been made more stringent by the issue of an edict forbidding the taking of photographs whoever is responsible for the ban has shown a lamentable lack of appreciation of public opinion. One can hardly imagine that those most likely to be the subjects of the photographs will welcome the prohibition. There is a touch of personal vanity in all classes. Nor is it conceivable that the King—the most photographed man in the country—has objected to the attentions of the camera man. Apart from the fact that unless the embargo is withdrawn thousands of men, and particularly women, will be denied the opportunity of gratifying their innocent curiosity, the high-handed action involves an infringement of the liberty of the subject which may have been justifiable during the war, but which is no longer necessary.

LOCAL COLOUR IN THE THEATRE.
In these days of critical and well-travelled audiences producers have to take great pains to secure correct local colour on the stage. In the Chinese American play, "East is West," which was produced in London last week, the producer, Clifford Brooks, spent ten weeks in the Chinese quarter of San Francisco in order to secure the correct atmosphere. "I originally produced the play in New York, where the Chinese are so well known that the conventional piglin English and sing-song tone of voice would not pass muster," he said. "Several of the actors stayed with us in Chinatown to pick up all they could about the walk, tone, habits, and appearance of the Celestial. The play was produced with similar care in London, and we went to some considerable trouble to secure Chinese instruments for the orchestra. Moon-harps and Chinese xylophones played with wooden hammers, were purchased with difficulty in Limehouse London's Chinese quarter, and two Chinese artists advised us about the costumes." "The Garden of Allah" is due at Drury Lane Theatre this week. Arthur Collins, the producer, went to Africa for the local colour, and brought back several Arabs and camels and many of the costumes from that district.

DANCING CRAZE ENDING.
Dancing mistresses are nervous about the dwindling enthusiasm for dancing. Several charity balls have had to be abandoned because tickets could not be sold, and it is plain that the public is not so ready as last year to pay several guineas for dancing. Several instructresses have made hurried visits to Paris in the hope of discovering something new, and now advertise "new pair dances," but friends from Paris say the dancing slump is as noticeable there.

Mainly About People.
Speaking of the movies, the latest wild rumor is that former President William Howard Taft is the head of a new film syndicate, which will film patriotic features.
An American once wrote to Rudyard Kipling: "Hearing that you are retailing literature at $1 a word, I enclose $1 for a sample." Mr. Kipling complied with one word: "Thanks." Two weeks later the American wrote: "Sold the 'Thanks' anecdote for $12. Enclosed please find 46 cents in stamps, being half the profits on the transaction, less the postage."

There are over a hundred books to the credit of the Rev. S. Baring-Gould, who recently entered his 87th year. But one of his most popular achievements was the writing of that famous hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." In his early days, Mr. Baring-Gould fell in love with a mill-girl. With her parents' permission he sent her to York to be educated, and then married her, the union being an ideally happy one.

Three columns of The Times were occupied one day recently with memorial notices to those who fell in the Somme battles. One of the most striking was the following:
Sth. En. K. O. Yorks. L. L.—to the honored and ever-glorious memory of the Officers and Men who fell at Fricourt on 1st July, 1916, at the opening of the Battles of the Somme.

"Gentlemen, when the barra lifts."
General T. Coleman du Pont, multi-millionaire powder manufacturer and owner of many hotels, is an accomplished cook. He proved it the other day when he, with a party of friends, found themselves at the Marion Club, with nobody in sight to cook breakfast. "Now," said General du Pont, "if you fellows will all clear out I'll cook you a breakfast and serve it." Whereupon the General took off his coat and rolled up his sleeves. Thirty minutes later he marched into the dining room with a huge tray bearing about two dozen eggs fried "straight up," a platter of fried ham, a stack of toast and a pot of coffee. Also, he served the meal.

Marshal Foch is a great smoker, but spends most of the time in lighting his pipe. At Boulogne the conference took place in the mayor's villa, in a very moderate-sized room opening out on to the garden. While the ministers were conferring on subjects with which the marshal was not concerned, it was interesting to see him walking up and down devising elaborate precautions to light his beloved pipe afresh, watching the wind, investigating the suitability of different walls by way of shelter, making experiments in protecting the light with the match box, and usually ending by utilizing a friend's extended coat. The marshal dressed in a faded grey-blue uniform with worn, shiny brown leggings. He has the legs of a man who has spent much of his life on horse back—rather bowed at the knees.

The little town of Spa, lying securely sheltered in a valley of the Belgian hills, has had a very exciting existence in the last few years, as, during the later stages of the great war, it was the headquarters of German high command. There passed daily through its picturesque streets such important personages as the Kaiser, Hindenburg and Ludendorff, whilst occasional glimpses were obtained of the Emperor of Austria, the Turkish ambassador, and various German kings and princes. It was in the Hotel Britannique, at one end of the town, that the Kaiser signed the act of abdication. From the beautiful villa, outside the town in which he lived, the Kaiser took his hurried departure for Holland, and the mightiest army the world has ever known saw its head no more.

The King of the Belgians has just made the ascent from Chamonix, of the Aiguille Dru, which is 1,200 feet high, and more difficult than Mont Blanc or the Matterhorn. King Albert, who had not climbed for five years, was accompanied by the "Blue Devil" guide, Joseph Ravanel, who fought at Verdun throughout the war. He remained at the summit for half an hour.
