CHAPTER XXIX.

Lord Howard was in no gentle mood, and the steward seemed to be goaded to desperation.

"Is the presence of Lord Stanhope necessary?" demanded the earl.

"There can be secrets between us two no longer," retorted Collins. "Lord Stanhope is the party chiefly concerned, and he knows the secret of my power over you now."

My lord covered for an instant; then he went on:

"Let me hear your demands, sir."

"I have first to explain one or two trifling matters to you. I will be as brief as possible. I am your elder brother; but, unfortunately, there is a doubt as to my legitimacy. I can prove it; but, if you are amenable to reason, I have do desire to make any scandal. I also desire to keep you out of a convict prison. Lord Cecil Stanhope is my son."

"What madness is this?" he demanded, contemptuously.

"No interruption, if you please. I repeat—Lord Cecil Stanhope—or at least the person who is known as ed very unhappy. He was quite sensible to the volcano under his feet. It was his duty to prove the story that Collins had told him, but he felt that he must obey the iron will of the man who claimed to be his parent.

"We're in a pretty mess all round," he concluded. "And it is only by holding together that we can hope to save the story from the world. If you do your part, Lord Howard, and let Gladys know that she is not the important lady she believes herself to be, we may be able to patch up matters."

The earl had been watching him steadily all this while, it was so difficult to believe that all that the steward had declared was true.

Lord Cecil Stanhope his own nephew! By keeping silent he was helping to maintain a terrible conspiracy, but he was bound hand and foot. Turn whichever he would, the crime of murder stared him in the face, within a few yards of him, even now was the skeleton of his victim.

"I am utterly bewildered," he said, hoarsely. "Let me give up everything, and take my child away. You can have all."

"That is just what I suggested to the steward—I can't get used to calling him father yet—that is just what I wanted; but he won't have it. He insists upon my marrying Gladys."

He drummed his fingers on the table for a few minutes, then added:

"And there is no getting out of the fact, my lord, that we have to obey our new master. For a decent sum of ready cash, I would get out of the country!"

He laughed harshly, and there was a sudden gleam in his pale blue eyes.

"I tell you frankly that I am not so infatuated with life as I was a few months since. I've carried things with a high hand, and I don't relish a villain for my father, reckless as I may be. To my mind the real Lord Stanhope will soon turn up, and even as the husband of Lady Gladys, I shall hold no enviable position in the country. She will regard me with greater contempt than ever, and my beautiful father will be feeding upon us after the bombshell has burst—possibly from some distant land—unless he can shift the stealing of the rightful heir upon other shoulders."

The picture was not a pleasing one, and Lord Howard could not resist a savage smile.

"I must confess that I shall await the denouncement with some interest," he replied, coolly. "I have been a weak fool from the moment that I thrust the body of Edgar Emden behind yonder panels. I am a man of resolution now. I killed him in self-defence—almost accidentally. I was frightened, and hid the body. That is my only crime. Mr. Collins, the steward, shall have my reply on the first day of January, and I will be judged by twelve of my countrymen."

Lord Cecil's face paled a little.

"My actions depend solely upon yours," he said, nervously. "I shall not bother Gladys with my attentions. I tell you, I am a changed man. If I can't be lord of my estate, I'll be nothing. I don't want to marry Lady Gladys now. I have pictured her as something beautiful to add to my possessions. This ambition being dead—or impossible—she is of no further use to me. I tell you, Howard, that I would rather get out of the country, if provided with money, and I shall look to you for my cue."

"I am grateful to you for this sympathy," the earl observed, after a few minutes of thoughtful silence, "but I do not think we need go any further into the matter to-day. You may depend upon one thing, however; when the steward comes for my reply to his demands, I shall straightway elect to suffer for my miserable crime. I cannot live longer under the shadow which is deepening and expanding day by day."

"I am satisfied," Lord Cecil declared.

He took the earl's hand, and grasped it with muscular force, continuing: "Our master commands that I remain your guest, and assert my authority. I will see Lady Gladys, and you may trust me that she shall have no excuse to avoid me again."

There was so much meaning in his words that the earl warmly expressed his gratitude, and the young man left him alone, feeling almost hopeful. He promptly locked the library door, and after standing for a while in thought, he glanced straight before him, and muttered:

"Dare I do it?"

Tenders will be received at the Office until noon on Monday, the 31st day of August, 1922, for two 5000 ton Steamers to ply between St. John's, Nfld., and the West Indies.

The steamers to be classed X 1000 at Lloyd's (England), and to be of a speed of at least 12 knots. They must have about 2000 tons deadweight capacity, be fitted with modern improvements, and have 20 class passenger accommodation.

Under the proposed service the steamer will leave St. John's every week, calling at Havana, Jamaica, Porto Rico, Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad and other islands in the West Indies, making one call on each trip at the above ports. The service to be continuous throughout the whole of each year, and the contract to be for a term of 5 years from the commencement of the service. The steamer to start with one steamer in October or November next, the second steamer will take up the work in October, 1923. Tenders to specify the rate per round trip at which the service will be performed, which will also cover the carriage of mail by the said steamers. Envelopes to be marked "Tenders for Steamers to West Indies."

Further particulars may be obtained on application to this Department. The Government do not bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender.

Peace Declared in U. S. Railway Strike

President Harding's Good Offices Assisted Materially--Greeks Desire to Possess Constantinople--Lord Northcliffe's Condition Causes Anxiety--Decisive Battle in Ireland Expected soon.

PEACE TERMS AGREED TO. CHICAGO, July 30. Peace terms already have been agreed to in the country-wide railway strike and formal ratification has been secured through President Harding's intervention. It was asserted to-night by a man in close official touch with the situation. All that now remains is the strike, which has cost the workers upward to forty million dollars in wages, passes into history, as was asserted, was the formal endorsement of the terms of settlement by the railway executives' meeting in New York and the strike leaders will convene in Chicago at the same hour on Tuesday.

GREEK WANTS CONSTANTINOPLE. ATHENS, July 30.

A note sent by the Greek Government to the Allies respecting the intentions of Greece in Asia-Minor, emphasizes the view that the occupation of Constantinople is the only means of bringing about peace, and says Greece has made arrangements with that purpose in view. The note urges the Allies to issue the necessary orders to Brigadier General Sir Charles Harrington, Commander of the Allied forces in Constantinople, and that it is confident difficulties will be imposed in the way of Greece. The note adds that by the neutralization of Constantinople the Allies are protecting instead of coercing Turkey and that thus depriving Greece of the means of imposing peace. The Turkish atrocities, the note continues, make it vital for Greece to adopt more energetic measures against the Turks, and that the Greek Government is willing to discuss the matter with the Allies. General Harrington's declaration that he will oppose by force any move towards Constantinople has caused deep discouragement and disappointment in Greece, as the newspapers have been leading the people to believe that Greek occupation of Constantinople would not be resisted by the Allies. LORD NORTHCLEFFE'S CONDITION STILL CAUSE FOR ANXIETY. LONDON, July 30. Physicians in attendance upon Lord Northcliffe say the condition of the patient is still causing anxiety. The encocarditis, they assert, is showing no noticeable sign of improvement. FURTHER PROGRESS BY FREE STATE TROOPS. DUBLIN, July 30. A communication issued by General O'Duffy, commanding the National troops in the south-western District, records substantial progress for the Free State troops, who, he says, have captured Castle Connell, Cappamore, Pallas and Knockalong on the East, and Cromma, Bruce and a line along the Maigue River from Shannon to Charville, on the West. The communication says Killmallock is covered on three sides by Free State troops and the fall of the town is inevitable. It is now expected that a decisive battle will be fought between Malloy and Fermoy. General O'Duffy says the irregulars are superior in number, but not in fighting qualities.

BRITISH STEAMER ASHORE. ST. VINCENT, B.W.I., July 30. The British steamer County of Carmarthen, en route from Dakar, Africa, to Keywest, is ashore North of Mayo Islands.

HUNGARIAN CROWN DEPRECIATES. BUDAPEST, July 30. The fall in the Crown is continuing, and the value of the dollar is now nearly two thousand Crowns. Bread is selling at two hundred and fifty Crowns a loaf. Hungarian money lost sixty per cent. in value during the past fortnight.

ANOTHER SOVIET SCHEME. PARIS, July 30. The Russian Soviet Government is is declared in a despatch from Vienna, have been for some time accumulating a platinum reserve with the purpose of establishing a coinage which will replace the gold standard. The message is expected to be completed within three months.

Romance of Methodism In Canada.

WHAT THE CHURCH HAS DONE FOR DOMINION.

TORONTO, July 28.—(By Canadian Press.)—In connection with the fourth centennial of the Methodist General Conference to be held in Toronto in September next, it is interesting to recall the contribution of Methodism to the religious, social and intellectual life of Canada. The romance of the founders of Methodism in Canada, of the hundreds of circuit riders, and of her famous orators, preachers and statesmen is one of the most glorious in the not inconspicuous annals of a country whose origin and development have been a variable epic of romance. The fact has been repeated with monotonous regularity that the Wesleyan Revival saved England. The vitality of the spiritual experience of Methodism poured into the hardening arteries of the religious life of the world a spiritual life that has quickened it ever since. Into the New World it was born along with the trader, the soldier of the imperial army, by loyalists and by a multitude of humble and courageous men and women seeking their homes and fortunes in the unexplored wilds of America. In fact Methodism has ever been a crusade faith.

WHEN CANADA WAS DIVIDED.

When Canada was divided in 1791 into two provinces, Upper and Lower Canada were thereby created, the former being Protestant and the latter being Roman Catholic. Pitt, through the instigation of Sir John Graves Simcoe, the Lieut.-Governor of Upper Canada, secured by treaty one seventh of all public lands for the support of the clergy and for the erection of rectories. The establishment of the church was deemed necessary in order to uphold the weight and influence of the Crown, and also to minimize the influence of democracy. The government of the new colony was not thought complete without a Protestant Bishop. The obvious intention of England was to fasten upon Canada a state church with special rights and privileges. Fox saw the motive at once and withdrew it, maintaining that all churches were entitled to share in the benefits provided by the Imperial Government. Some time later the provision was expanded to include the Church of Scotland.

CHAMPION FOR DISSENT.

There now arose a champion for Protestant dissent in Canada in the form of a young man, a son of a strict Anglican home, Egerton Ryerson. Born in 1803 he was ordained as a Methodist Minister in 1829 and in the same year founded the "Christian Guardian" a journal which has ever since stood out for truth, justice and independence. It started when there were only two other secular papers in Upper Canada, with a small capital raised by a few scantily-paid preachers, and a circulation of three hundred. The editor and publisher, Egerton Ryerson, not only provided the print but supervised the mechanical work and folded the papers and mailed them himself. The modest publishing enterprise has developed into the Methodist Book and Publishing House, otherwise known as the Ryerson Press, and may justly be called the mother of printing houses in Canada. Men trained here have gone out and become founders of other publishing houses of world-wide repute. Ryerson was a man of great gentleness and kindness but when aroused his giant figure took on a menacing aspect and his words cut like waxes. It is to Egerton Ryerson more than any other single individual that Ontario in particular and Canada in general owes its political, religious, and educational freedom. Presbyterians stood to win in any event as far as the money grants went, but the educational tests for the university harmed them as much as any other. It was because of this that Queen's University was founded. As the sense of ranking injustice welded together the non-conformist sects in their determination to secure redress, Ryerson became the general of the opposing forces of the dissenters in Upper Canada, and he was a fighter who drew from his enemies the acknowledgment of his courage, ability and sincerity.

CHURCHES ON EQUAL FOOTING.

The results achieved in this struggle were many. All churches in Canada were placed upon an equal footing; members of all denominations were allowed the protection of the law and were enabled to secure property and erect buildings, non-conformist ministers were authorized to solemnize marriages; all lands held by the crown were for the people; intellectual and political privileges were available for all classes. With the passing of the Family Compact, the Establishment and the Clergy Reserves, Upper Canada entered upon an age of unprecedented progress. Other strong men rallied to the standard, principal among them being George Brown. With the establishment of religious freedom and the principles of democracy Ryerson and his followers now addressed themselves to government and education. The military, legal and governing class insisted upon private schools, privately supported. This was distasteful to the Scotchmen and the followers of Ryerson. Such a system was out of joint with the spirit of the new world. The next step was to place education on a charge upon the province and to provide free instruction in public schools for all. Again the forces of freedom won and Egerton Ryerson was commissioned to organize a system of education for the Province. This has become the basis of the public school system of Canada.

WHAT METHODISM HAS ACCOMPLISHED.

The beginning made by Ryerson was an isolated and singular performance in the history of the Canadian Methodist Church. Methodism has supplied the Dominion with a constantly expanding army of educators, legislators, public servants and crusaders in every walk of life. Her colleges and universities number over a score and a half. Her periodicals have increased in number from the three hundred numbers of the first annual distribution of the "Christian Guardian" to over twenty-four million last year. She gave to Canada one of her greatest journals of Religion and the oldest and largest publishing house. Her members have not only moulded the destinies of our own land, but have given invaluable service at the councils of the nations. Her orators have been famed over the earth. Her religious education organization has become an instrument of tremendous power and importance. Her missionary policies have placed her in the vanguard of the world's benefactors. Her social legislation stands out unique in Christendom. Her spiritual life has leavened the life of the nation. Her spirit of discovery and crusade have sent out her sons and daughters into every walk of life filled with a passion for service. Artists, authors, poets, educators, artificers of the spirit without number have first had their imaginations kindled and their minds disciplined in Canadian Methodist homes. From the days of Ryerson there have stood forth an ever-increasing army of men and women splendidly endowed in mind and heart, doughty champions of a country of free men, freely expressing themselves, freely educating themselves, worshipping freely as they chose and freely heaving out their own destinies. Ryerson brought the people freedom in, and equality in, the law, and laid deep and strong those institutions which should equip the new democracy to assume its proper place and achieve its rightful destiny. In schools, in journals for the dissemination of independent opinion, in a publishing house and books were laid broad and well in the minds and spirits of the people of Canada, the foundations of truth, tolerance, reverence, independence and nationhood.

In Memoriam.

FATHER. I loved him best, I know not why Until he passed from earth to Heaven. And then the problem of my life was solved. He lived in me, and I in him. He is at rest.

Adown the years that lay between My time of birth till he passed on; My mind perplexed with many cares I fathomed not, 'till he was gone. But now I know the reason for my tears.

Why he caressed and loved me best. He read me as I really am. He knew my pleasures and my pain The efforts made for every man. Were made for justice—not for gain. For better things that all might share The Sacraments that make life dear; This was the aim that he loved best.

For was not man created in the image of the living God? To scatter truth and right abroad? For this our Lord came down from Heaven— To have and hold a life was given— That we might live in peace and joy Then—Rest in Heaven.

Love is the greatest gift of all. To him that hath it shall be given; No matter what shall ere befall The greater gift, the life itself. God gave his son for Calvary. He loved us best.

The Heavenly Father of the Realm, The earthly Father here below, Both show their tenderness to us. And if we serve, as we are told, And feed his lambs before we go, There's naught that he will not bestow. On us in Heaven.—E. D. C. H.

His Excellency's Visit.

(H.G. Standard, July 28.)

The visit of His Excellency the Governor to Brigus and Harbour Grace Districts took place this week on Tuesday and Wednesday. His Excellency came on a special car attached to the noon train, and was met and welcomed at Brigus station by a committee of Brigus townspeople. An address was presented to His Excellency at the Court House after which he addressed the people on the subject of the present depression and the lack of employment. The object of the visit was in a way to bid farewell and to counsel and advise the people on the need of industry and perseverance in contending with the conditions now existing. The depression was world-wide, and this Colony was passing through similar straits as confronted the whole Empire. His Excellency spoke whole-heartedly, and it may be said that the task was willingly undertaken so that the words of good counsel and advice would encourage the people to do their part to improve their condition in the future as well as in the present. The addresses given by His Excellency at the several places visited were based upon similar lines as the address in Brigus.

After a short delay, His Excellency motored to Clarke's Beach where the second meeting was held. Several prominent men of Brigus accompanied His Excellency to Clarke's Beach.

His Excellency then proceeded by car to Bay Roberts, where, from 6.30 to 7.00, the meeting in the Court House of the people of that town and neighboring places was addressed.

His Excellency then left for Harbour Grace by motor car and at 9 p.m. addressed a gathering of citizens in the Town Hall. After some introductory remarks by Judge Oke, His Excellency addressed the meeting for about an hour, expressing his sympathy and desire to help in this trying time, and pointed out the great need for earnest endeavor and patient industry. He emphasized the need of cultivating the ground, and advised every man to grow, if at all possible, enough vegetables for his own family. In this locality fishing was, in his opinion, the best means of livelihood, and he advised our men if they were unable to fish with motor boats, to go back to the way in which our forefathers prosecuted this industry—the whale boat and jigger. The immediate need was work that would really produce something, not employment which merely tided us over for a few days and left us no better than before. On the conclusion of His Excellency's speech, the Chairman invited any working man present who had any suggestions to make, or any questions to ask to do so as His Excellency would be pleased to hear any such. Mr. F. C. Archibald, M.P.A., then made a speech explaining to His Excellency that one reason why so many local men were now out of employment, was that they had received the promise of employment at home, and had stayed here under that impression, only to find that their hopes had been unfulfilled. He said that he had arranged passes for fifty men for employment in the woods at the rate of thirty dollars a month and found, and if he could secure an additional thirty or forty the unemployment problem in this part of the district would be satisfactorily settled.

His Excellency made a short reply, as the hour was getting late, and expressed himself pleased that the situation here was in a way to be solved. He promised on his return to the city to do his best to help Mr. Archibald to secure the additional number of passes required. Mr. Archibald then proposed a vote of thanks to His Excellency, which was seconded by Mr. A. Squires and a standing vote was accorded His Excellency. The meeting then closed with the National Anthem.

His Excellency's first outpost visit was to this town in March, 1918, shortly after he assumed the position of King's Deputy in this part of the British Dominions, and so his presence was greeted with more than ordinary pleasure.

The next morning at 10.30 His Excellency visited Upper Island Cove, and a meeting was held in the School Hall. An address from the people of that settlement and of Bishop's Cove and Bryant's Cove was presented. The meeting was largely attended, and His Excellency's address was listened to attentively. Island Cove gave His Excellency a spirited welcome. The return to this town was made by 2 p.m. At all the meetings His Excellency was accorded the thanks of the people for his visit and for the interest he had taken in their welfare since he came to our shores. It is needless to add that His Excellency will take with him the best wishes of our people for many years of happy life in his native land.

At 4.45, His Excellency left on the return to St. John's, the special car having been brought here from Brigus by the regular train the night previous.

The visit of His Excellency, having been undertaken for the good of our people, is greatly appreciated, and it is the earnest hope of all that His Excellency will be blessed for the good he has done, and that he has striven to do, for the good of this Colony.

Reaping the Crop of Reckless Extravagance.

(Harbor Grace Standard.)

Taxes of all kinds, whether by the State, the utilities of trade, are a direct payment by the worker, and no manner of reasoning can alter the fact. In this little island of ours, the people are taxed too heavily, by the tariff, perhaps the highest of any self-governing part of the British or other Dominions, by the companies that possess franchises or operate supposedly for the general good, and by state-aided utilities either in guarantee or land gifts and monopolies—all tend to increase the burden of the workers and with that burden comes the unrest and the many troubles that are now with us. Excessive taxation brought about by unsound and oft-times reckless expenditure is bad economy, in state, commercial and industrial work. We are unfortunately reaping as we have sown, and in no part of our undergoing since 1914, and for some few years prior to that year, have we shown either discretion, tact or good judgement—all have lived and worked with no regard to the future. And now we are face to face with the worst conditions ever known; we are reaping the crop of reckless extravagance and unwise exploitation by men who were not equal to the charge entrusted to them. A policy of railway extension that in one case cost half a million of dollars in direct loss is one of the many ways in which the present and future conditions of affairs have been brought about. The guiding principles of all governments should be safety for the people first; self-interest and personal profit, as well as kite-flying propositions should be placed in the category of unsound projects, and the promoters should be consigned to places where they could have not the power to jeopardise the people's well-being.

Not Eligible.

ORIGINAL DECISION STANDS.
The eligibility of Mr. Hackett, one of the cars comprising the C. L. B. team in the football race, has been reconsidered by the Football League, and the decision previously arrived at that Mr. Hackett was not eligible was upheld. All the delegates were present at the meeting, and it was pointed out to them that could it be proven that Hackett had ever played in a League Championship game he would be eligible for row. No proof of this, however, could be produced, and the League upheld its former decision.

THE BLOTTER THAT BLOTS.

Here is a happy sign of the times! Blotters will really blot once more!

I bought a blotter the other day for my desk and when I got it home I found it not only supplied the note of my desk as I wished it to, but actually could be used as a blotter.

I had said such a thing as that ten years ago, you would have wondered what I meant wouldn't you? But surely you cannot wonder now when you have passed through a period when many things were so cheaply and easily made that they did not even seem to give the service for which they were bought.

Blotter Only Smudged.

Have had blotters in the past few years that were no more good for blotting than just so much brown paper. Some of these were advertising blotters and I often wondered if the advertiser knew how ill they advertised their product when they supplied you with a blotter which merely blurred and smudged your letter, if you were so cautious as to use it. As one pointed up from the smudged signature to the offending blotter it was no use to see the merits of someone's blotters or gasoline or groceries advertised by a smiling faced girl on the right side of the so-called blotter. One ought to take a violent dislike to the advertiser and the advertiser at that moment.

Another blotter would sop up a little ink and then would smudge and blot the rest of the page and then would smudge and blot the rest of the page and then would smudge and blot the rest of the page.

Erasers Also Struck.

Another thing that seemed to go on during the war was the eraser. At the end of the ordinary pencil was a time when one expected to find that bit of rubber to erase. But during the war not to be expected. After viewing the black eraser that resulted one would not be surprised to find that the eraser would still there but was to anyone who expected to use it. Like blotters it seemed to be its own excuse for being. And it's another happy sign of the return of the good old days that erasers are beginning to erase once more. Just after the end of the war I bought a fur. It was a fairly expensive piece of fur and one would have expected the little chain that fastened it to be well made. On the contrary it broke twice within a short time. When I went back the second time to have it fixed the man said, "It's almost impossible to get a good one these days."

Made to Sell.

I don't know whether he is having less difficulty to-day. But I hope so. And I shouldn't be at all surprised if he were. For it seems to me the blotter that blots once more is truly a symbol of a return to the old days when products were made to use and not merely to sell.

If hangings and ornaments are eliminated during the hot weather, it saves the housework.

If the doors of your refrigerator are loose or warped, your ice bill will be necessarily large.

Remarkable Case of Dr. James Barry.

Do you think it possible for a woman to masquerade as a man for the greater part of her life without arousing suspicion until after her death, at the age of seventy-one?

Dr. James Barry would have passed as an average type of man. He was with the British Army in the Crimea, sometimes jumping two ranks at a time. In fact, when he died, he held the post of Inspector-General of Army Hospitals, a title which appears upon the headstone over his grave in the Kensal Green Cemetery.

No one ever suspected the doctor of not being a man until the year following his death. Then a long article appeared in one of the newspapers, stating that Dr. Barry had refused medical attention during his last illness, and that "an inquest was held immediately after his death. The following day it was officially reported to the War Office that the deceased Inspector-General of Hospitals was a woman."

Although there was, of course, no official statement from the War Office in connection with the discovery of Dr. Barry's sex, there was no denial whatever of the statement. What reason this modern Sphinx had for concealing her sex, and how she was able to carry on the impersonation

Great Naval Pageant.

KING REVIEWS FLEET.

In the morning of the Atlantic Fleet for the inspection of the King, Torbay had one of the most imposing Naval spectacles ever seen, within the range of its waters. True, there were leaden clouds, heavily charged with rain, but fortunately the downpour held off during the first phases of the muster.

To the sound of a Royal salute from scores of guns the King in the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert met the fleet of Lyme Regis and led the superb divisions to their moorings. There were nearly 100 ships in the procession. Leading were the submarine flotillas. Then came about forty destroyers in perfect formation, and following were light cruisers, battle cruisers and battleships, with Queen Elizabeth, the flagship of Admiral Sir Charles Madden in the rear.

Thousands Watch the Sight.

When first sighted by the thousands on shore the ships were over ten miles out at sea. They were steaming in three lines, presenting a wonderful spectacle, and that spread out considerably as they approached

Fashions and Fads.

Printed silks of bold design have gained much favor. Large lace-draped hats are seen at the garden party. Small white hats are being worn with dark crepe dresses. Fine tucks are favored as trimming on mid-summer models. White and scarlet foulards are enjoying a remarkable vogue. Felt will be used in combination with velvet for fall millinery. Striped hankerchief linen is a novelty material in favor at present.

Silk lace is favored by Paris for dinner gowns.

Long sashes tie on the left side and drop below the hem of the frock. Green checked gingham makes attractive pipings for a pongee frock. A magnificent evening frock is a cape of steel cloth flounced with steel lace. Black hats, edged with gold lace braid, have been exceptionally well received. Over dresses of black satin crepe are worn over little Chinese coats without sleeves. A smart suit model makes use of numerous pin tucks in a one-sided treatment. The ever useful raccoon fur will be in great demand for motor coats this winter. Dainty lingerie sets for summer are made of pasted tinted hankerchief linen. Ribbon cockades in vivid red underline the low waistline of a white crepe frock. Both the bead bags and the velvet bags trimmed with steel beads are in favor. In contrast to the loose flowing effects is a metal tissue tightly swathed robe. Metal fabrics and laces in pastel tones are used for evening frocks of bouffant style. Embroidered octagon mesh net in ochre color is used over ochre-colored crepe georgette.

More Funds Needed.

The Regatta Committee declares itself to be short of sufficient funds to meet expenses in connection with our annual aquatic sports. Up to Friday night collectors reported a shortage, but were anticipatory of receiving donations to-day to meet the sum required. The Committee regret to have to report and give publicity to such information, but they have no alternative. It is not good that anything should be kept back in this instance. It is as well that the public know just where those in charge of the one annual event of St. John's stand financially. Only by making known the shortage can it be hoped to bring the collections up to the sum required to run the various events. The people of the capital city of Newfoundland are a sport loving lot. They are never behind in patronising worthy objects. And surely they will not be delinquent now at the eleventh hour of the Regatta in contributing toward the fund necessary to make the one day in the whole year a success. Poets, local of course, have sung of the gaieties of Regatta Day; writers have used up all the complimentary adjectives in the English language in extollation and praise of the one day in the three hundred and sixty five, when rich and poor, gentle and simple, employer and employee meet on the same social plane, the banks of historic Quidi Vidi being the popular stamping ground for all, irrespective of class or creed. Regatta Day is a day of democracy, and it would indeed be regrettable if for any reason the races should have to be abandoned. Money is required to make the event as successful as in former years. The Committee in charge are not paid officials. They give their services freely for the good of the populace. Their labors are not without difficulty; many are the contentions brought before them, and many the rough places they have to smooth over. It is then the duty of all who desire to see our "Derby Day" perpetuated and carried to a successful issue, to find the wherewithal to make it so. To-night the final meeting of the Committee takes place. Will they have to report a deficit in collections? The answer is yours, citizens of St. John's. If you furnish them with the necessary funds to defray all the expenses of the day, the credit is yours. If, on the other hand, the sum received does not meet the outlay made by the Committee, then but little credit can be given those who profess their devotion to healthy sport. On Wednesday's results may depend the future fate of the Regatta. Afterwards it may resolve itself into a question of to be or not to be. Anyway as matters appear at the moment, what with dissensions, protests and lack of funds, it is obvious that there has to be more unanimity among promoters if the one day for the whole people is not being permitted to die of attrition or non-co-operation. Money is needed to finance the day. Let the records show to-night that the necessary amount is forthcoming.

World Air Flight.

MAJOR BLAKE CRASHES AT SIBL. The aeroplane in which Major W. T. Blake, the British aviator, is attempting an around the world flight from England, crashed to the ground at SIBL, British Baluchistan, near Quetta, says a despatch received from Karachi on July 26th. The aviator sustained no injury, but the undercarriage of the plane was smashed. Air force mechanics from Karachi have been sent to build a new undercarriage. SIBL is 800 miles from Karachi and the continuation of the flight, which Major Blake began from Croydon on May 24th, will be delayed about a week.

Dr. Zilva Addresses Board of Trade.

VITAMINES IN COD LIVER OIL. At a meeting of the Board of Trade held at noon to-day Dr. S. S. Zilva of the Lister Institute of preventative medicine, was heard in a short address on the objects of his mission here, which as he explained, is part of an enquiry prosecuted by himself and Dr. J. C. Drummond for the Medical Research Council of London. The speaker was introduced by the President of the Board, Mr. A. E. Hickman, who explained that Dr. Zilva was accompanied by Dr. M. Graham, biologist, and that their investigation appertained to the medicinal properties and vitamins of cod liver oil. Dr. Graham being concerned with the condition of the fish, and their movements, which it is known has a bearing on the vitamin content in the product. Dr. Zilva has consented to give two lectures under the auspices of the Board of Trade as to the healing and preventative properties of oils, which will be open to all those interested in this matter. At to-day's meeting, on the suggestion of Prof. Davies, and on motion of Mr. R. B. Job, prizes will be offered fishermen for information about the fisheries and the movement of fish. It is hoped by the method to gain information which may assist in research work. Dr. Graham agreed that such information would be of great assistance, and said that practically all the English fishery research work was based on information gleaned from fishermen. Mr. W. A. Munn in a few words pointed out the value of the present investigation to Newfoundland. It had been discovered that vitamins were present in cod liver oil in different proportions. It was only natural to suppose that this valuable element was absorbed by the roe and milt during the spawning season, so that livers of fish caught at that period did not make such a valuable product as is made from our fish which are taken at another period. Mr. A. B. Morine offered a few suggestions intimating that much information of value to the investigators could be gleaned if the Marine and Fisheries Department could be induced to assist.

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, July 31. For day use, a greatest cream is a necessity, and among the many good creams of this type, our Peroxide Face Cream ranks high. This really superior vanishing cream is one of the most softening and soothing creams made and by virtue of its contained Peroxide, acts also as a bleach and whitenor of the skin. McMurdo's Peroxide Cream is well made and light—and is merely perfumed. Its application affords instant relief when the skin is sunburnt, irritated or ahraded. Price 5c. a pot.

Speeders Fined.

MOTORISTS BEFORE COURT. Two charges of speeding against motorists were heard in the Police Court this morning. In one, a postponed case, a mounted constable stated he had been stationed on the Cockpit Road to keep an eye on motorists and see that no speed demons got past him. Mr. C. J. Fox for accused wanted to know how witness could gauge the speed the car was doing without the use of a stop watch. He cross-examined witness at considerable length. Accused said he was in low gear when stopped by the police and it was impossible for him to be going at a high rate of speed. Mr. G. E. Parsons, motor expert, said that the maximum speed of a Ford car in low gear was about 8 miles an hour. Mr. Fox maintained that it was a mental impossibility for any man to calculate accurately the speed of a motor car. The only way in which the speed of a car could be discovered was to have constables with stop watches at both ends of a measured distance. So far as the speed limit was concerned, counsel said, a car was more under control at 15 m.p.h. than at 10 m.p.h. The Magistrate was satisfied from the evidence that the charge had been proved. He imposed a fine of $5 on accused. In the second case the accused denied that he was exceeding the speed limit or that he was driving to the danger of the public. He, too, was fined $5.

Archbishop at Placentia.

REV. A. T. WHELAN, ORDAINED PRIEST. Special to Evening Telegram. PLACENTIA, July 30. A very imposing ceremony took place yesterday at the parish church, Placentia, when Rev. A. T. Whelan, a member of an old and respected family of that place was raised to the priesthood by his Grace Archbishop Roche. A very large congregation assembled to witness the ceremony, not only from Placentia and adjacent settlements, but also from the city. The ceremony was performed at the last mass, which was celebrated by His Grace the Archbishop, assisted by Rev. J. McGrath, as High Priest, and Revs. Fr. O'Flaherty and Fr. Flynn as Assistant Deacons. There were present also in the Sanctuary, Fathers Dee and Connor. At the conclusion of the Ordination the Bishop briefly addressed the congregation. He referred to the fact that this was the first ordination to be held in Placentia, and such would be a memorable event in the annals of the parish. After a short explanation of the significance of the ritual of Ordination, and the Graces bestowed by the Sacrament of Holy Orders, he made a personal reference to the newly ordained priest, welcoming him as another son of Placentia to the ranks of the clergy, and exhorting him to be always true to the high ideals of the priestly state. His Grace concluded by a reference to the historic Catholic past of Placentia, and expressed the hope that the day's ceremony would tend to stimulate and perpetuate the faith and Catholic traditions, for which Placentia and its people have been always remarkable. In the evening another interesting function took place when seventeen young ladies were admitted into the ranks of the Sodality of the Children of Mary, arrangements for the inauguration of which had been already made by the energetic Pastor, Father O'Flaherty. After a short address by the Archbishop, directed principally to those received, solemn Benediction of the most Holy Sacrament brought the ceremonies of the day to a close.

Topsail Memorial

WILL BE SOON UNVEILED. Topsail War Memorial has now been erected and is ready for unveiling. The ceremony, it is hoped, will take place early in August, if possible, before the departure from the country of His Excellency the Governor. The monument is an excellent example of the stoneworker's art and the cost is being defrayed wholly by the people of the small settlement. Local labor also erected the memorial tree of charge. There are thirteen names on the face of the monument, all natives of Topsail, who lost their lives in the war. This is a big percentage out of the 45 men that Topsail sent to the front.

Woman Sent Down.

An aged woman, belonging to Bay Bulls, was taken to the Police Station last night and appeared before the Magistrate this morning, charged with vagrancy. The Superintendent of Police stated that accused had been examined by a doctor, who had stated that while feeble minded, she was not insane, and could not be sent to the Asylum. She was at present living from hand to mouth and the Magistrate had no option but to send her down for 10 days, while efforts were being made to find her a home.

Normal School Started.

SURVEYORS AT WORK. Preliminary work in connection with the new Normal School began on the Parade Ground today. The site selected is on the Northwest corner, at the junction of Merrymeeting Road and Parade Street. Surveyors were on the spot to-day taking levels preparatory to having the excavations begun. It is expected that in the course of the next two weeks the work of digging will begin. The Normal School will front towards the harbor and will be two storeys with full lighted basement. The building was designed by Mr. A. J. C. Paine, Architect, of Ottawa, and will be of concrete. It will contain a domestic Science Department and a room devoted to sewing. On the main floor will be an assembly hall, kindergarten and 4 class rooms and a Teachers Room. The top flat will be divided into rooms devoted to Natural History, Physics and Chemistry. It will also contain a library and 2 class rooms. Tenders for the erection will be called for within a few days.

INSPECTING LINE.—R. C. Morgan, General Manager of the Railway, left the city yesterday on a tour of inspection of the Western section of the line for the purpose of discovering the cause of the recent derailments. Mr. Morgan is accompanied by T. A. Hall, Govt. Engineer, and W. F. Joyce, C.E. The return to town will be made about the end of the present week.

Capable Police Officer Retires.

Sergeant Noseworthy Leaves Mounted Force. We regret to learn that Sergeant Noseworthy Chief of the Mounted Police has been obliged owing to the state of his health to relinquish the post. Under the doctors recommendation he has been granted 20 days leave of absence and it is probable that in the meantime he will be assigned lighter duties. Sergeant Noseworthy, has been 42 years in the Constabulary, 16 of which he spent with the mounted force. When the latter was disbanded Sergeant Noseworthy went back to the infantry, and in March last again took up the mounted duties, when he was commissioned to reorganise that body. Efficiency, courage, and prudence have characterized the work of Sergeant Noseworthy, and it is the hope of numerous friends that he may soon regain his former strength and vigor.

BERMUDA ALSO HAS DIARIST. The Editor of The Telegram. Sir,—It is, indeed, a mighty great pleasure to me to learn from Mr. P. E. Outebridge how another descendant of the great Samuel, my ancestor, and Dr. J. C. Drummond, and does credit for a newspaper there, a journal, such as all in our great family have done. This cousin of mine, sir, that I did not know to be alive, writes a journal as good as mine own, almost, and I will print some of it in the Telegram sheet, if so be, it please you to permit it. I regret, sir, how I do find it necessary to make a journey on to-morrow, but I shall, I think, write a journal of my travels, which I shall send to you. I am, sir, your most respectful, most obedient servant, SAMUEL PEPPS.

Child Welfare.

Saturday's Drive For Mothers. The motor car drive for mothers, which was held on Saturday by the C.W.A. proved very enjoyable and the Committee in charge wish to thank the following people for the use of cars:—Mrs. E. Ayre, Miss M. McNeil, Miss E. Herder, Mrs. Dr. O'Reilly, Mrs. E. Milliey, Mrs. Murray, Lady Outebridge, Mrs. Thiele, Mrs. Coffin, Miss Seaman, Mrs. Geo. McGuire, Mrs. B. McGuire, Marshall's Garage for use of Mack Bus, Miss Helen Reid, Mrs. McKay. In the list of Doctors mentioned in Tuesday's report of the Baby Clinic, the name of Dr. McPherson was inadvertently omitted.

MARRIED.

On Sunday, July 30th, at St. Joseph's Rectory, by Rev. J. J. Pippy, Mr. Martin Power of Paradise, Placentia Bay, to Mrs. Ellen Bancroft of St. John's.

DIED.

Passed peacefully away on July 31st, Besse aged 7 months darling child of Mr. and Mrs. C. Newell, R.I. P. On Sunday, at 1 p.m., after a lingering illness, Susana Ingram (Sue) (Keefe), aged 22 years, beloved wife of Joseph Ingram and daughter of Jane and the late John O'Keefe. Left to mourn are husband, one child, mother, sister and brother. Funeral on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m. from her late residence, 21 Dugan Street, R.I.P. Passed away, at the General Hospital, Kathleen, aged 8 years, darling child of James and Margaret Power, leaving father, mother, 3 sisters and 1 brother to mourn their sad loss. Funeral on Wednesday at 2.30 p.m. from her late residence, 6 Hunt's Lane. A precious one from us is gone. A voice we loved is still. A place is vacant in our home. Which never can be filled.

NOTE OF THANKS.—Mrs. M. P. Harrington and Mrs. J. J. Murphy desire to thank very sincerely all kind friends who visited their mother or helped in any way during her recent illness and death, also those who sent telegrams and notes of sympathy.—E.T.

HIS DIARY.

July 29.—To Water Street, and meeting my Lord Morris there, did bid him farewell, being that he leaves the country to-day and, he tells me, is sorry for it. So to the Board of Trade, where I learn how Mr. Shipman, the cinematograph producer, has formed his company and will make a picture here. My wife did beg of me that I make her known to Mr. Shipman, she fancying herself mightly, and would have a leading part in the film. I did chide her for this and did bring it to her mind that she is not so young as she was once. At this, she did up and berate me so beautifully with her tongue, that I did haste me out and to the broadcasting concert where I did stay for some time.

July 30th. (Lord's Day).—It did rain mightily all the day, but at night, it cleared, and will I hope, so remain till the Regatta is over. I did lay long in bed, nor did I see the need to rise, being that it was so wet.

Every man who owns a four cylinder car or is considering a four, will want the Jewett Six. The 50 h.p. Paige bulk motor, means that Jewett will out perform every car in its class.—ly26.4t

DIES IN TORONTO HOSPITAL.

(Toronto Globe, July 21st.)
Mrs. Andrew Robertson, of 99 East Avenue, Hamilton, died yesterday at St. John's Hospital, following a brief illness, from heart failure. Mrs. Robertson had recently come to Toronto to visit her son, Struan R. Robertson, but shortly after her arrival was troubled with heart weakness and was taken to the hospital.

She was Miss Jean Annie Ross before her marriage to the late Rev. Dr. Andrew Robertson, former Pastor of St. James' Square Presbyterian Church, who predeceased her two years ago. She was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, 63 years ago, and came to Canada about 1896 with her husband, whose first charge was at New Glasgow, N.S. Later Rev. and Mrs. Robertson removed to Newfoundland, and about 13 years ago came to Toronto.

Mrs. Robertson was an ardent Church worker and took a keen interest in Sunday School teaching. She was connected with the Sunday School organization of Ontario, the Woman's Missionary Society, and was a prominent member of St. John's Chapter, I. O. O. E.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Agnes Holloway of Montreal, and Mrs. R. N. Duff of Kingston, Jamaica, and two sons, Struan R. of Toronto, and Athol S. of Hamilton.

MINARD'S LINIMENT USED BY VETERINARIANS

To Captain Fryatt.

Trampled but red is the last of the embers.
Red the last cloud of a sun that has set;
What of your sleeping though Flanders remembers,
What of your waking, if England forget?

Why should you share in the hearts that we harden,
In the shame of our nature that see and forget?
How more than the godly the greedy can pardon,
How well and how quickly the hungry forgive?

Ah, well, if the soil of the stranger had wrapped you,
While the lords that you served and the friends that you knew
Hawk in the marts of the tyrants that trap you,
Trot in the abops of the butchers that slew.

Why should you wake for a realm that is dead?
Sleep and forget us, as we have forgotten;
For Flanders remembers and England forgets.
—G. K. C. in the New Witness, (London.)

Killing People With Pins

STORIES OF WITCHES—ANCIENT AND MODERN.

In days gone by, when an evil-disposed person desired to wreak vengeance on an enemy, he—or she—consulted a witch.

The latter then made a waxen image like a doll, muttered over it, and set it before a fire. Then, as the wax melted, the person the image was supposed to represent, pined away and died. So, at least, the witch said.

Sometimes the result was obtained by sticking the doll full of pins and burying it, usually in a churchyard.

You can read all about this sinister superstition in "The Witch-Cult in Western Europe," by Margaret Alice Murray.

Witchcraft, the author tells us, is a survival of the far-off days before Europe became Christianized.

WHEN WITCHES WORE BRIDLES.

Many witches were expert poisoners, and it was that which caused such an outburst of popular fury against witchcraft about the middle of the fifteenth century, which resulted in hundreds of thousands of unfortunate women being done to death.

So furious did the people get that on one occasion in France four hundred alleged witches were executed at once!

Torture was freely used to extort confessions from witches even here in England.

One favorite method was to force a "bridle" with four spikes into the witch's mouth, to tie her by the head to a wall, and to employ professional "witch priesters" to keep her awake for several days and nights by sticking long pins into her whenever she closed her eyes.

These horrors, happily, are of the past. But the belief in witches and witchcraft still lingers.

In Essex, so recently as 1908, a man charged before the magistrates with violently assaulting a woman pleaded in justification that she was a witch, and had cast a spell on some cattle he owned.

PRESENT-DAY WIZARDS.

No longer ago than in the spring of 1919, again, a farmer dwelling near Swaffham, in Norfolk, complained to the magistrate there that there was a "wizard" that had bewitched one of his cows so that it gave bad milk. He had, however, he added, sought the advice of a "wise woman"—that is, a witch—who advised him to take a red-hot poker and thrust it into the churn. This he did, and the evil spirit went up in a flame which lighted up the dairy.

A few years back the case was reported by the Peterborough relieving officer of an old dame living near there who was almost done to death by starvation and neglect because the neighbours in her village believed that she was a witch, who was constantly making their pigs, poultry, and even their children, fall sick by the evil spells she put upon them.

Radio Demonstration.

MAGNA VOX RECEIVER USED.

A Magna Vox receiver, installed in the office of Mr. Will Meehan, enabled a large number of people to listen in at the radio concert broadcast from the Marconi office on Saturday night. This concert was in the nature of a commercial demonstration. Several well known local artists assembled in the Marconi office at 8 p.m., and rendered their songs into the mouth-piece of the broadcasting apparatus. The programme consisted of songs by Messrs. W. J. Wallace, J. Power, A. Williams, A. Lawrence, W. Herder, Tucker, E. Fox, J. Canning and C. Hutton. A speech was also delivered by C. T. James, Editor of the Telegram. People on the street by Mr. Meehan's office could listen in at the concert, so clear were the words produced. Both the steamships Manca and Silvia received the concert.

Dentists Who Use Hammers.

The Wakambo tribe of East Africa are very fond of mutilating themselves in various ways. They simply love having their teeth chipped, and certain natives are trained for the job of "teeth chippers." The tools used by these "dentists" are a small chisel and a hammer. The operation consists of knocking off tiny pieces of the top front teeth until they are spiky. The operator also chisels round each tooth, so that only the cement protection is left round the root, all the enamel being worn away. Although the chisel gets very near the nerve it is never touched. So skilful have these dentists become that they can replace human lost teeth with teeth taken from antelopes. The new teeth are hammered into the holes left by the old ones. Sometimes, if the root is left, they are sawed in.

Dr. Van den Berg tells in "On the Trail of the Pigmees" of one young native who had six artificial teeth, which he could screw in or out at will.

Clinch the Bargain with a Drink. Marriage amongst the East African tribes is principally a question of bargaining. When a young man and woman of the Wakambo tribe have decided to get married, the man's father goes to the girl's father and gives him two goats. The fathers then have a powwow, after which the bridegroom's father leaves to return again in three days with three goats. Then there is another conference. Seven days later the man's father pays another visit, this time bringing

The "Ozone."

The captain of a cricket team that had visited Slidmush-on-Sea had just finished a modest celebration of his side's victory, and was enjoying a quiet stroll before catching the train back. The vicar saw him and congratulated him on his success.

"But I hope the enjoyment of your visit has not been confined entirely to cricket," added the vicar. "I hope you have been drinking in the ozone."

The captain then replied: "Well, I didn't notice the name of the place, but it was the one opposite the pier."

SEXTON'S TWELVE RACE BOATS AND OTHER ITEMS.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—I imagine that your many readers would care to read the following brief description of some of the incidents which have connection with the races on Quidi Vidi Lake. I will begin by introducing an item copied from a letter written by Mr. J. B. Hutton, a native of St. John's, sent by him fifteen years ago from Melbourne, Australia. He did not forget to speak of the sports in which he took part in his youthful days. Mr. Hutton was nearly 95 years of age at the time he wrote the letter. He spoke of the Carter family and said that Peter Carter, a son of Magistrate Carter (the latter gentleman was the father of the late Sir Frederick Carter) was a clerk in his office in Australia, and on leaving the employ went over to New Zealand. He said "I also knew old Mr. Hoyle's very well. His son Sir Hugh, the late Sir Ambrose Shea, John and myself in our Brookbank four oared racing boat "The Maid of the Mist" with young Jim Simms, Coxswain, won nearly every race on Quidi Vidi formerly. The letter was written for the Newfoundland Quarterly and appeared in its columns in 1907. Following are some of the names who rowed in those days of which Mr. Hutton wrote, in the Amateur race, Lash, Furneaux, Hepburn, Winter, Pearce, Keough, Hoyle, Shea, Legg, Fowler, and Moyle. The boats competing were "Maid of the Mist," "Repeal," "Victoria," "Lallah Rookh," "Lucy Long," "Banabee," "Undine," etc.

Lieut. Bonnycastle tells us in his history "Newfoundland in 1832" that for three days the meadow near the lake was covered with boats or tents, and that some spirited matches took place. Sir Jhn Harvey, who presided as Governor of Newfoundland in the early forties was the owner of a jolly boat called the "Cubby Boy" which was a winner at the regatta of 1844. The boat was christened no doubt after the name of a famous place in the vicinity of the West End, near Casey Street, called "The Cubbies." The prizes offered in the years which Mr. Hutton wrote on in the Amateur race was first prize $50, second prize $25.00. Later the prizes dropped to $40 for first prize and $20 for the second. At a quarter to twelve, a bugle blast was blown, calling the boats to their respective places. Each boat was supposed to carry a flag 12 1/2 inches and not less than 18 inches above the gunwale. On three occasions Royalty has honored us with its presence at regattas, twice on the banks of Quidi Vidi, and once by viewing it on the harbor of St. John's.

In 1845, Prince Henry, the third son of the King of Holland, visited St. John's, and was given a grand reception by the inhabitants. It was after the annual regatta had ended, so a regatta on the harbor was held in honor of the visit of his Royal Highness. Pilots and fishermen, etc., competed. Ere his departure the Prince informed those in charge of the programme of entertainment that he had never been given such a welcome as that which he had received in Newfoundland.

In 1860, the late King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales visited the regatta, held in July of that year. His Royal Highness drove around the lake alighting on the North side near Jocelyn's (now Ross's), where his carriage was surrounded by the people, some of whom were heard to express themselves in the following language, "By the powers but ain't he a proper darlin' pet." One old Irish woman was heard to say "He's as safe here as if he was in his mother's parlour." Ere his Royal Highness departed he left £100 to be divided for prizes to be given to the winners in the fishermen's race which was afterwards known as the "Prince of Wales Prize."

A representative of the press of America here at the time wrote about the regatta as follows: "Fully ten thousand people were at the regatta." The lake is a beautiful sheet of water, about half the size of Toronto Bay, surrounded by high hills. It is of great depth and as "blue as the ocean itself." On receiving an address presented to him by the members of the Legislative Council, the Prince replied in part:—"Gentlemen—I thank you from my heart for your address. To-day I have set foot for the first time on the eastern-most portion of those vast territories in North America, which own the sway of Great Britain. And I have here a foretaste of the kind reception which I am led to expect in the more populous portions of the Empire which in fulfillment of the duty entrusted to me by the Queen, I am about to visit."

In 1913 as your readers are aware, the grandson of King Edward met with a hearty reception, and attended the regatta. I do not intend to occupy much more of your valuable space. Numbers of your readers would, I probably like to know the year which

The Romance of the Races

We'll meet at the Races,
My old love and I,
And recall the days of yore,
Which bring many a sigh,
We'll talk of old times,
And of when we were young;
Of how fate overtook us
And was our undoing.

For some other fellow,
She wooed and she married
I lost though she loved me,
Because I had tarried,
But she surely did love me,
And I thought that the sun
Rose only and set
In her love which I'd won.

But she cast me aside,
My own sweet, little honey;
For love in a cottage,
She said, was no money.
And she married the man
With the cash but no love;
And she's paying the price
Exact as above.

We'll meet at the Races,
My old love and I,
Recall our romance,
And our dreams blasted high.
But our hearts can't forget,
That the surety did love me,
We can love still, but wonder
That life is so strange.

We'll meet at the Races
And recount the past years;
All our joys and our sadness,
Oh laughing and tears,
Though our ways have long parted,
We are filled with regret;
For love, in its Springtime,
We can never forget.

CHARLES M. C. WHITE,
St. John's, July 29th, 1922.

HOUSEKEEPERS

The dust which you see blowing about the streets is composed of horse manure, filth from the drains and cesspools and various other disease-bearing particles or atoms.

This dust blows into grocery shops and settles on all uncovered foods. If your grocery has an open sugar barrel in his shop the dust and dirt will surely get into the sugar.

Whenever you buy Sugar taken from an uncovered barrel, depend upon it, you get a goodly share of disease-bearing dust. Do you care?

If you want clean Sugar, free from dust, buy Lantic Sugar in dust proof, full weight, sealed packages. Lantic Sugar is guaranteed very highest quality of pure granulated white sugar. Buy a 2 pound or a 5 pound package and see for yourself how good it is.

SHOPKEEPERS

Do you know that to put up Sugar in paper bags costs you for the bags, twine, time, and loss of weight, from 75 cents to $1.00 per hundred pounds.

Do you know that 80 per cent of the sugar handled by Canadian and American grocers is sold in packages. These grocers know that package goods are more profitable than bulk goods because there's no waste.

Any grocer who knows how to figure costs and profits can readily find out whether he is selling sugar at a profit or not; careful figuring will convince such a grocer that package sugar pays better than bulk sugar.

The jobber who wishes to lessen his percentage or risk, will find Lantic Package Sugar in 100 pound cases very convenient for this purpose. The loss of one case is less than one third the loss of one barrel.

Ernest Shipman Will Speak at Nickel To-Night.

GREAT PRODUCER ADDRESSES PUBLIC ON ART OF MOTION PICTURE PRODUCTION.

Ernest Shipman, one of the foremost Motion Picture Producers in the world, and the only successful producer of Canadian films has had expressly forwarded from Toronto, one thousand feet selected scenes from his latest production, "The Man From Glengarry," Ralph Connor's stirring story. Mr. Shipman will speak and explain the art of motion picture production in detail while the picture is being exhibited on the silver sheet.

Mr. Shipman has formed a Newfoundland Photography Company, and will produce a local picture which will be a source of gratification and pride to all Newfoundlanders. A story typical of Newfoundland with its marvellous rugged beauty and unexcelled background of scenic splendor. His pleasant personality will no doubt make for him numerous friends as he appears before the public to-night. Mr. Shipman is scheduled to speak about 8.45.

Shipman Successful.

Ernest Shipman, Canadian motion picture producer, has succeeded in forming a company which will find the capital to make a picture, advertising Newfoundland.

This picture will have a plot containing all the features of what the movie people call a "red-blood" feature and will incorporate in its plot, scenes of Newfoundland's main industry, a Newfoundland dog, a handsome hero and a beautiful heroine.

The Board of Directors of the new company consists of the following well known business men: W. G. Gosling, E.A. Bowring, A. E. Hickman, David Baird, J. C. Hepburn, Tasker Cook, J. P. Kiely, R. B. Job, J. J. McKay, C. A. C. Bruce, Ernest Shipman and others. Articles of incorporation have been prepared by the law firm of Blackwood, Emerson and Winter, Kenealy, O'Hara and Garrett L. Fort, director and continuity writer respectively, will be responsible for the making of the picture. The picture should be started about the middle of August and completed a month later. Here is what Mr. Shipman himself says of the forthcoming production, "I look upon this picture as the most interesting of all my past releases. The picture fans of the entire world are becoming jaded with the studio made product, the sex problem and the endless comedies. My recent experience with wholesome, nature-made, outdoor pictures such as "Back to God's Country," "The Sky Pilot," etc., prove that these nature dramas are in universal demand and will continue to head the list of successful film attractions for some time to come."

Produce and Provisions.

Codfish—The exports for the week were almost exclusively confined to exports, the only shipments from St. John's being made by steamer to extent of 1,420 qtls., and one cargo to Baha. With the exception of a few hundred quintals of West India stores in St. John's are now clean in readiness for the first of this week's cure. Some small sales of fish have been made in the city beyond the opinion of buyers here and will prevail as the opening for shore fish, there is nothing to indicate that there is likely to be till the first large quantities are ready. Report shipments for the week were limited entirely to the South West coast and these consisted of all new to the Gordon Tibbo for Oporto 2,349 qtls.; the Cyril T. from E. of Channel, with 3,044 qtls. for Oporto; the Allen Frost from Belton for Oporto with 1,588 qtls.; shipped by A. E. Hickman; the Gay from Belleoram for Oporto 1,850 qtls. from Harvey & Co. The shipment in Oporto last week showed a decided improvement over that of the previous week and amounted to 6,628 qtls., the stocks being only 11,429 qtls. with all arrivals entered. This market is therefore in splendid condition to receive the first of the South Coast banking voyage. Codell—This market is very unsettled and there seems to be a decided difference of opinion as to what present conditions abroad would warrant saying here. There is scarcely any of last year's oil now available and purchasers are eagerly seeking the new oil to meet contracts. One dealer in the city has been advised during the week that conditions in the American market scarcely justify the present local figure of $110.00 per ton. This price is, nevertheless, being freely offered, though we have not heard of its having been exceeded. It is almost certain that codell will not drop below $100.00 and should there be any improvement, no matter how slight, in the leather and paint and varnish industries in the near future, an advance may be looked for. Lobsters—There is little anxiety to sell at the best price now being offered locally, viz: $23.50 per case. Some purchases have been made at this figure, but fishermen are holding off in anticipation of the price going over $30.00. This is thought unlikely in some quarters and even where admitted it is argued that the advance can only be of the most temporary nature. Stocks must be held longer only at a very great risk. Flour—This week saw the largest imports of flour for some considerable time. The Belvernon from Boston brought 1,000 barrels and the Manoa 6,000 barrels, while smaller shipments came in by other steamers. The imports are now well up to the average, but will be greatly augmented each week now by increasing shipments from Montreal. The market has been easier as a result of a slackening in demand, but prices closed very little below last week's quotations. Crop reports are mainly responsible for the continual fluctuations, but the prospects in North Western Canada continue very favorable and all forecasts are consistently optimistic. Potatoes—Potatoes are now practically off the market. All old tubers with the exception of a few bags that came in by late steamers from P.B.I. have been sold. The first new potatoes are in charge of the situation at present and apparently to judge from reliable reports, they are confident of their position. During the past week it has been impossible for New York buyers of raw sugar to obtain any line at a lower figure than 3 1/2 cents C.I.F., which is equal to 5.11 cents duty paid. The market has been further strengthened by an estimate of the coming best crop by the United States Department of Agriculture which forecasts a decrease of 35 1/2 per cent. from last year's output. The cost of refined sugar in New York today is $5.10 per 100 lbs. F.A.S. which with freight, duty, exchange, etc., makes the cost landed at St. John's $11.90. Thus the actual value of sugar here to-day is $12.25 wholesale. Local quotations are, however, $11.25 per 100 lbs., both in barrels and sacks. There is enough sugar on hand at this price to last till late in September. Potatoes—Potatoes are now practically off the market. All old tubers with the exception of a few bags that came in by late steamers from P.B.I. have been sold. The first new potatoes from the Island are due here on Thursday next, and will sell for between $4.50 and $5.00 per barrel. Imports will not be heavy this season owing to the excellence of the local crop. There will be local potatoes available by the middle of next month, farmers say. Oats—This market has been stationary during the week with the tendency a little weaker if anything. There have been few purchases and only the smallest importations are being made. White oats are selling wholesale at $4.00. Hay—Hay is much cheaper this week, the price now quoted being $50.00 per ton for imported. The local hay harvest is now being reaped and is showing up even better than anticipated. The crop of hay this season will exceed anything that has been seen for years, and as a result the price is due for another drop. Wool—Wool is much cheaper this week, the price now quoted being $50.00 per ton for imported. The local hay harvest is now being reaped and is showing up even better than anticipated. The crop of hay this season will exceed anything that has been seen for years, and as a result the price is due for another drop. Wool—Wool is much cheaper this week, the price now quoted being $50.00 per ton for imported. ### Amputation in Mid-air.

SURGICAL FEAT BY RED-CROSS WORKER.
An amputation performed, in an extraordinary emergency, by a man who was not a doctor, was described at a luncheon of the Rotary Club at Cardiff. The story is told by A. E. Harrison and illustrates the value of Red Cross training. A man, Mr. Harrison said, working at a Cardiff tramway depot, slipped on a platform, and his arm, becoming entangled, dangled in mid-air, unable to help himself. It happened that a foreman was a commandant in the Cardiff Red-Cross. He realized that if the poor man was to be suspended much longer he was bound to die. With other men he therefore hastily set about constructing a rough platform high enough to reach the workman. SUCCESSFUL OPERATION. He next gathered together his Red Cross outfit, and proceeded to amputate the man's arm. This he accomplished in that perilous position so successfully that when the doctor arrived he readily admitted that he could not have performed the operation more successfully himself and under ordinary conditions. The operator was Mr. H. Preston, a Red Cross commandant, and the life saved is that of Mr. W. Hoekin, both of Cardiff. Mr. Preston said that Mr. Hoekin, who was working on some wires, slipped on the iron platform, when his arm came into contact with a bevelled cog-wheel, with the result that he was drawn into the gears, his body being suspended about 20 feet from the ground. "The machinery was stopped and a doctor sent for," said Mr. Preston, "but I realised that the poor fellow could not last much longer in that position. "I got together what equipment I could, and with the aid of the platform and some ladders I reached the man and found his arm to be hopelessly entangled. "The first thing I did was to put a tourniquet to stop the bleeding, and then amputated his arm with a clasp knife. To do this I had to cut through the muscle above the elbow."

How to Play Lawn Tennis.

SIMPLE LESSONS FOR SPEEDY PROGRESS.

By S. POWELL BLACKMORE (Author of "Lawn Tennis Up-to-date," in Cassell's Magazine.)

"Why did I miss that shot?" That is the question every player should ask of himself after a failure, and the next thing he might profitably do would be to look at the position of his feet. In lawn tennis good footwork is the half-way rung in the Ladder of Success. And only a few reach it because the majority do not tread the path of systematic practice.

Let me say at once, therefore, that I am writing for the ordinary man and girl. To the born genius correct footwork, and many other essentials of championship form, is second nature. In all walks of life the genius escapes much of the drudgery of practice. Rules are not for him. Footwork is as important in lawn tennis as it is in boxing, dancing or golf. But it is the means whereby a player gets into the best position to make the most effective shot.

There is but small space at my disposal, therefore I propose to suggest broad general rules which, from a long experience and wide observation, will, I know, help the largest number. Footwork in the overhead service implies a stance that will bring the player's whole weight on to the front foot at the moment of impact. Last season I was much impressed with the exaggerated stance of F. T. Hunter. Why did he stand with his feet so unusually far apart? I experimented; that stance compels transference of weight on to the front foot when striking the ball. I told him of my discovery. "I guess you are right," he assented. Hunter has a first-rate service, and was one of the real bright stars at Wimbledon. Later I communicated my conviction to Major Dudley Brown—the man with the most fiery service in England to-day, and, alas, he is an Australian! "I discovered that myself some time ago," he replied. The moral is there for all, with this addendum: No English-born and trained player has ever achieved a first-class service of the modern high-kicking calibre. Cannot some of our youngsters now remove that stigma?

Footwork in driving must be directed towards placing the striker in the best position for hitting the ball. For the forehand stroke hard hitters almost invariably plant the feet wide apart. (Throughout I speak of right-hand players; left-handed players will, of course, read "left" for "right foot," and vice versa.) Always keep on the toes when the ball is in play. That helps mobility and good poise. On the forehand the left foot is planted well ahead of the right; for the backhand drive the right foot is in front. A line drawn from one toe to the other should indicate the flight of your return. That is a golden rule to remember when practicing footwork: It is the ideal to strive for, especially in backhand driving, so that there may be full freedom for the shoulder swing. One of the chief faults of the beginner is standing square-on to the net to make a back-hand drive. Take up this stance and see how impossible it is then to swing the racket well back.

Hard hitting is largely dependent upon getting body weight into the swing at the moment of striking the ball, and this transference of weight from the back foot to the front cannot be achieved efficiently unless the feet are placed aright.

Keep always on the toes, that gives poise, balance, and keeps the knees bent. This gives a crouching expectant attitude which is one of the chief secrets of mobility. Stiffened knees, with the player's weight on the heels, almost invariably indicates a mind not fully alert; it also most certainly prevents any player getting off the mark in the shortest possible time. This stooping posture, with the weight on the toes, must be regarded as essential both in receiving service and when in the volleying position close up to the net.

SWING OF THE RACKET.

The swing of the racket may be conveniently divided into three parts: the swing back, the hit and the follow through. The swing back of the racket is the vital part of the stroke. This is the preparation for the actual stroke. I believe in a full swing back. Many out-of-date writers used to urge that the back swing should be reduced to a minimum, and that it was follow-through that gave speed to the stroke. Ambitious beginners, those who want to acquire modern hitting powers, must eschew this old fallacy.

The most prevalent fault in the swing is a late start in the swing back. This is the natural tendency, so I would emphasize to the beginner this: You can hardly start the swing back too soon once the direction of the ball to forehand or backhand has been discovered. The back swing should be commenced before the ball has struck the ground, because it is advisable to have a moment's pause before commencing the sweep forward. That pause is of immense importance to hitting true. Not only does it indicate, but it reaffirms confidence: the actual stroke and the danger of undue hurry—a fault fatal to the effective production of any shot—is eliminated.

At the end of this swing back for the forehand drive off the ground, the left shoulder should be pointing towards the net, and the right shoulder towards the base line.

In the backhand drive the full swing back is equally imperative. Often, on this side, the right foot should not only be well advanced, but nearer to the left side line than the back foot. For the backhand drive straight down the line this stance is frequently taken up by fine-stroke players such as Mr. F. Gordon Lowe or Mr. B. I. C. Norton.

If these essentials are faithfully observed, and if the actual hit is unchecked, the follow-through of the racket will look after itself. In the forehand cross-court drive the racket hand will finish against the left arm with the racket pointing towards the base-line. With the forehand shot down the line the racket should finish extended at arm's length pointing to the spot aimed for. The same holds good in regard to the backhand drives. Consider the follow-through as the effect, or as the harvest of something sown; an incomplete or imperfect follow-through is evidence of a fault developed before or at the moment of the actual hit. In the past the stress has been wrongly laid upon the follow-through as being a cause of faulty stroke-production. In reality bad follow-through is like photographic evidence of an earlier error. This is of vital importance, so think it over carefully. The old teaching indicates very loose thinking.

Racket control of the tennis ball involves a heap of things well done. We have seen that the player in driving must swing round and face the ball. That is why footwork is important. The swing back must be full, free and early. But the ball has yet to be truly hit. It is to be controlled. We must now insist, therefore, upon the keenest concentration in watching the ball—without relaxation for the fraction of a second—when the ball is in play.

Go amongst a group of beginners or mediocre players and anyone will hear the querulous remark in explanation or apology for a service fault or for a ball driven beyond the base-line: "I cannot see the service-line," or, "The back line is rubbed out." These players should not want to see the line. What they should desire, with all the power and will of which they are capable, is to see the ball at the moment of hitting it!

HOW TO ACQUIRE CONTROL OF BALL.

I am not going to enter into a long discussion as to whether a few super-champions do or do not deliberately, in the last fraction of a second before the racket strikes the ball, look up to the spot aimed for. Suffice it to say, I possess a heap of photographic evidence proving that, practically up to the moment of impact, past and present champions do have their eyes glued to the ball in actual match play. This rule—to keep the eye fixed on the ball—should be taken imperatively and without reservation. It is one of the most difficult things of all, to do continuously in actual play.

"But how can I, if my opponent is coming to the net?" a reader may inquire. Here again the older, instructional writers have erred. Faced with this poser, they have confessed that the player must take his eye off the ball. Rubbish, twice rubbish. After your opponent has struck the ball you swing or run into position, all the time keeping your head turned to the oncoming ball. Your eyes are thus continually photographing your opponent's court right up to the last fraction of a second before your actual hit. While you concentrate upon watching the ball in its flight over the net your mind is subconsciously recording the movements of your opponent. Up until the last quarter of a second, when your glance swings sideways, you have, therefore, while watching the ball, obtained a simultaneous picture of your opponents court. What the player has to do is to concentrate upon seeing the ball up to the moment of hitting, and the more faithfully he can achieve this the better.

I believe that there is a blind spot just before the actual impact of racket and ball, but it does not affect the truth of this fundamental principle. It must be the object of every player to see the ball as late as possible. To do so will require immense concentration for the vast majority; day after day the player will have to get back to this elementary rule. He can never become good enough to forget it.

In the service stroke there can be no possible object in wanting to look down to see whether the lines have shifted. The boundaries of the court permanent. Therefore keep your eyes glued to the ball once it has been thrown up, and try consistently to see the impact. You won't be able to, but the endeavor may be regarded as an insurance premium against a mis-hit. "Eye on the ball" is equally important in the overhead volley, generally called the "smash," and in all the low volleying strokes.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE FRIENDLY FOLK.
When the world has paid its honor to the glory of the brave
And has laid its wreath of laurel on some valiant soldier's grave,
When high skill has been rewarded, and the great with pen or brush
Stand as Masters of their fellows, in the silence, and the hush
Which follow after cheering, then my tribute I would pay
To the friendly men and women that I've met along the way.

The hand that drew the water and the hand that hewed the wood,
The friends who stood behind me when in danger dire I stood,
The gentle, kindly neighbour, seeking neither wealth nor fame,
Who knew my need for comfort and so, bringing comfort, came,
'Tis to them I'd pay my tribute—for when all is said and done,
It's the humble friends about us that our joys depend upon.

Praise the super-man for courage, the artist for his skill,
Robe the Masters with distinction, but at least when all is still,
If you turn and look behind you and recall the blows of fate,
You'll find the friends who loved you best were not the super-great.
The ranks of kindly people are the ones you will recall,
For the humble men and women are the greatest after all.

The Odious Power of Patronage.

TITLES ARE CONFERRED.
LONDON. (Canadian Press).—In the system of distributing titles of the House of Commons, it is interesting to recall that Sir Robert Peel, in a letter to Cobden, wrote the "odious power that patronage wields." Prime Ministers since his day have been perplexed frequently over the question of patronage. Sir Robert Peel showed his distaste for the system by his rare use of it. In the years of office he recommended the conferment of six peerages—three military, one for diplomatic service, one for Indian service, and one for Lord Francis Egerton, whom he made Earl of Ellesmere. In September, 1841, he refused to recommend the peerage of a "very worthy man" who had been a good partisan, giving as his reason "the state of the House of Lords." The peerage of Lord Melbourne, a reference to the immediate addition of a peerage to its members. The peerage additions had been made the instance of Lord Melbourne. "The distinction of a peerage," said Robert Peel to the Duke of Wellington, "and every other distinction, has been degraded by the profuse and capricious use which has been made of it." Peel, nevertheless, was prevailed upon to apply for the peerage of many of these, and he eventually offered to recommend Hallam, the historian, for a baronetcy, and was delighted at receiving a refusal of the offer. So pleased indeed was he that he immediately asked Hallam to allow his portrait to be painted for the collection which Peel had formed of the most eminent men of that time. Hallam accepted the compliment.

"DIZZY" A CAREFUL DISPENSER.
Disraeli was a careful dispenser of Crown patronage and honors, and prided himself upon avoiding what he considered to be Gladstone's invidiousness in their distribution. Disraeli, however, did not approach Peel's austerity. Between 1874 and 1880 he advised the creation of twenty-six new peerages and nine promotions. His basis frankly was that principle of making "useful" appointments. "The spirit of the party" he wrote to a friend in 1858, "depended greatly upon the distribution of patronage. The interests of the party can never require an improper appointment. An improper appointment is a job, and nothing more ruinous to political connection than the fear of rewarding your friends, and the promotion of men of opposite opinions to qualified adherents." Disraeli recommended persons for appointments in the Church with a view of political results. His treatment of ecclesiastical appointments casts an ironic light on the matter of patronage. "Send me down the Clergy List," he wrote to his private secretary in 1858. "I don't know the names and descriptions of the persons I am recommending for deaneries and mitres." "On one occasion he declined to appoint Magee, then Dean of Cork, to the Bishopric of Peterborough, though Queen Victoria pressed him to do so. His excuse to the Queen was that the appointee must be an Oxford man. Writing about this, Disraeli said "one objection to Magee is that his appointment would give us nothing, and that is a great objection."

TO IMPROVE THE HOUSE OF LORDS.
Gladstone also had his utilitarian principle, although extremely scrupulous, especially in Church appointments. His very large additions to the Peerage—the number is given by one authority as sixty-seven creations and fourteen Scotch and Irish additions to the House of Lords during his various periods of Premiership—were made with the definite notion of "improving" the House of Lords out of its persistent Toryism. Taking the present population of Great Britain and Ireland at about 46,000,000 and the number of members of the House of Lords (with the addition of Peers who are Minors) as 730, there are at present about sixteen Peers for every million of the population. The proportion has increased since Gladstone's and Disraeli's day. A notable feature of the evidence in regard to the grant of honors to be found in the records of Peel, Gladstone, and Disraeli is the absence of any suggestions of direct or indirect pecuniary considerations leading to any of the grants.

YOU SAID IT, BO!
When father wins his game, there is an atmosphere around our table spread, that radiates good cheer. He simply beams with pride; he boasts about his golf; and on his face there dwells the smile that won't come off. The soup he says is good; the roast is simply great; the pie is just the kind that mother used to make. And after coffee, he describes in casual way of how he beat old Briggs, three up and two to play.

Before it's time for bed he's told us every shot, and dwells delightedly on his prodigious swing. We listen with respect tho' fearful, 'fed up, yet registering joy to hear of father's luck.

For oft on other nights we could recall too well when father had been trimmed, his game all shot to well! When he would sit in gloom, while mother sat in fear. And all the rest would squirm beneath the trown severe.

When then the cook would get the deuce, to her chagrin, as we all caught it too for lack of discipline. When nothing functioned right, it really seemed a shame, The world, in fact, seemed doomed, when father lost his game.

You cannot wonder then, devotedly we pray that father strikes a dub when he goes out to play. This may not seem true sport, but really just the same his family prefer that father wins his game.

TO-NIGHT'S FOOTER.
Feeling that both the B.I.S. and Cadets are both riding to a fall in the balance of their clashes, the Felidians have by no means lost hope of a chance for the championship. Their eyes still longingly survey the top rung of the ladder, and that is why in their bout with the C.L.B. tonight they are taking no chances and are right out to win. The Brigade boys are full of pep and further their game is rapidly improving, so that the battle tonight will be a royal one. It starts at 7.30 sharp, with George Hunt referee.

This year three strikes by Mike Power are almost as rare as one strike by the office clerks' union.

The air is rife this morning with rumours of withdrawals and protests against crews in certain races, but doubtless everyone will view things in the true sporting spirit at to-night's final meeting of the Regatta Committee and forget their little differences.

By the way, we have been asked to protest in this column against the

TO FLY TO NORTH POLE.
NOME, July 31.
A wireless message received here states that Captain Amundsen has abandoned his attempt to reach Point Barrow in the steamer Maud, and has transferred to the schooner Holmes, taking Lieut. G. Omdal, aviator, and one other. It is understood his plan to fly across the North Pole is postponed until next year.

UNABLE TO INTERFERE.
LONDON, July 31.
The speaker of the House of Commons, in replying to a request of Horatio Bottomley's solicitors for a postponement of the motion for his expulsion from the House, pending the hearing of a new appeal to the House of Lords, said he was unable to interfere.

AMBUSHED AND KILLED.
DUBLIN, July 31.
Two Colonels and five soldiers of the Government forces were killed and many wounded near Maryboro, Friday, by irregulars, who ambushed and blew up an armored car in which they were riding.

THREAT OF EX-COMMUNICATION.
DUNDALK, July 31.
Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland, in a letter to Dundalk Diocese, complained of conditions of the last two weeks, and said he was deliberating upon whether he should go there and put the whole place under ex-communication. Scattered fighting between opposing forces throughout the night aroused the inhabitants. Michael Collins visited the town on Saturday, but stayed only a few hours. It is believed that the irregulars' attack failed, but there was much activity and fighting.

TEN KILLED.
LIMERICK, July 31.
Ten irregulars are known to have been killed in Saturday's night's fighting, and many others were captured.

Obituary.

JOHN FOLEY, POST MASTER OF HARBOR GRACE.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)
Although not wholly unexpected, the people of this community, and Harbor Grace in particular, were shocked as well as grieved when it was announced by telegraph yesterday that Mr. John Foley, Post Master of Harbor Grace, had suddenly passed away from amongst us. Mr. Foley had been in failing health for some time past, but notwithstanding this fact he was always found at his post of duty, which he ever discharged with courtesy, kindness and ability. So passed away a great soul. That he did much good to the people is no doubt. That a great deal of it never will be known in this world there is just as little. Deeply religious, an exemplary Catholic, in all things his supreme idea was to save his soul by leading others in the way they should go. No word of unkindness ever passed his lips. Charity and gentility animated his every act. Our deeds of disinterested charity are recorded in the Book of Life. On the great day of recompense our Blessed Saviour will say: "Come, ye blessed of My Father, possess the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." What Shakespeare says of mercy pertains also to charity and kindness: "It droppeth as the gentle rain from Heaven; it is twice blessed; it blesses him that gives and him that receives." Also, "Happy is he who has charity for every one," says the blessed Egilius of Aasat, "happy is he who performs great service for his neighbor, yet does not trouble about receiving anything in return." John Foley was a man who was widely and deservedly popular, and a great reason for his popularity lay in the intensely human character of the man—human in the absence of all pretence and pretensions, human in his manful desire to take part whether of work or play, human, above all, in his humanity to man. The principles of honesty and integrity marked his character through life, and being united with gentlemanly manners, and an amiable disposition greatly endeared him to his friends and a numerous circle of acquaintances. John Foley was born in Harbor Grace sixty-four years ago, and being intimate friends from childhood, the writer can speak of his sterling qualities, his official abilities and his great popularity amongst all classes of the community. For several years Mr. Foley was in the employ of James Ryan & Co., merchants of Bonaville, as bookkeeper, and during the summer months was the agent of that enterprising firm on Labrador. About thirty-five years ago, he entered the public service as an official in the Post Office at Harbor Grace, and on the death of Mr. A. T. Drysdale, for many years post master, the Government of the day appointed Mr. Foley as his successor. Seldom has an appointment been more popular. As Manager of the Government Savings Bank, he always retained the full confidence of the people and as Sub-Agent of the popular and time-honored institution the Queen Fire Insurance Company, he gave every satisfaction to the Directors and all who had business transactions with that company. He was a prominent member of the Knights of Columbus and during the past forty years took the deepest interest in the welfare of Harbor Grace and its people. The old officials of the General Post Office knew the worth of John Foley, and they one and all had full confidence in his ability and carefulness in the discharge of his various duties, and any business matters coming from Mr. Foley were always known to be correct even before they were examined by those in authority. Such was the confidence the Post Master General and Mr. George Lemessurier, as well as the general public reposed in him. The deceased leaves a wife (nee Miss Bramwell of Carboneau), four children (two in the United States) and hosts of friends to mourn their sad loss, and Newfoundland is the loser by the passing of one of the most competent, reliable and courteous officials in the public service of the Colony. Requiescat in pace.

The Romantic Love Story of Cleopatra— "The Serpent of Old Nile."

A sure Winner for the Regatta

A little, plain featured, red-headed girl of sixteen, and already a breaker of hearts. That is Cleopatra, "Serpent of Old Nile," as one of her lovers named her, a woman whose name has been handed down through all the generations, a heroine of one of the greatest love tragedies of the ages. She was equal to the occasion how she shared the throne. But the brother she was in a state of anarchy, many Greek adventurers scheming and plotting there, and finally Cleopatra was driven off the throne, although her baby brother remained. Perhaps the wily Greeks recognized in that red-headed girl a being with a will of her own. Immediately Cleopatra began to plot and plan how she might regain her throne, and hearing that the great conqueror, Julius Caesar, had come to the city of Alexandria, the stronghold of her enemies, she made up her mind that she would see him. Yes, how! It would require great daring, for Cleopatra knew that if she were captured by the Greeks it would mean her death. She was equal to the occasion however. With a single slave she made her way in the dusk of the evening to a small boat, and they rowed to the outer walls of the palace. Alas, it was too well guarded. There was no entering that way. Then one day Cleopatra heard that Greeks and Egyptians alike were trying to curry favor with the great Caesar by presenting gifts, and a brilliant idea sprang into her mind. She would give herself to Caesar! In a great hall, in a place of honor, sat Caesar, hawk-nosed, with an eye like that of an eagle, but with fast greying hair crowned with a wreath of laurel. Caesar—the hero whom everybody sought to please. Before him a mighty throng of people, all anxious to gain his ear or his eye, and behind him and around him were heavily armed guards. One by one mighty warriors advanced before the conqueror, each carrying a present, until the tasselled floor in front of Caesar was heaped high with gifts of all shapes and sizes. Rolls of Syrian silk, dyed marvellous shades, bales of fabric from Eastern lands, pictures, statuary, pottery, perfumes, all things lay there. Then came two black slaves carrying a roll of Persian carpet, a rare thing of wonderful blues and greens. They set down the roll, departed, and Caesar waited. But not a single man amongst the assembled throng claimed the roll of carpet as his gift, and with a feeling of half suspicion, the great Caesar leaned forward the better to examine the roll. Then the unexpected happened. The carpet was flung suddenly open and from his folds there stepped out a queen-like, wonderful girl. That was Cleopatra's way of getting to see Caesar, and of making Caesar see her.

THE ROMANTIC LOVE STORY OF CLEOPATRA

"The Serpent of Old Nile."

(Pearson's Weekly.)
Of course, Caesar fell in love with that slender, red-headed girl, and he carried her back with him to Rome. This was not quite what Cleopatra wanted, for she had expected him to make war on her enemies and set her on the throne of Egypt. Instead, Caesar set her in a great marble villa in Rome, and proceeded to squander money on her. Never was a queen more royally treated. Cleopatra had only to express a wish and it was granted. The man who conquered the world was at her feet.

Then came the day when Julius Caesar was assassinated, and Cleopatra had to flee from Rome, taking with her the son she bore to Caesar. A few faithful slaves accompanied her, and back to Egypt she came as nominal queen, although subject to Rome.

The men who had assassinated Caesar were dead, and Rome was ruled by three great men, one of whom is known to the world as Mark Anthony.

The news reached Cleopatra that Mark Anthony was coming to Egypt. Cleopatra was no longer a girl of sixteen. She was a woman now. A woman who had taken pains to cultivate every art a woman needs to charm.

It was this woman who set out to meet Mark Anthony. She went, dressed as Venus, reclining in a boat, down the river to where Anthony was staying. The stern of the boat was covered with gold, a gold-embroidered canopy was over her, the sails were of fine purple and the oars were of silver. Rosy-checked boys, dressed as cupids, stood fanning her with fans of peacock feathers. Maidens, the most beautiful of the day, attended her, incense was burned, and all down the river people crowded upon the banks. Like Caesar, Mark Anthony was quickly at her feet. He forgot ambition, forgot everything save the woman he loved and worshipped.

Cleopatra, wonder-woman, fascinated him. He returned with her to Alexandria, and troubled nothing over Rome and the affairs of State. This "Serpent of Nile" as Anthony called her, was a veritable temptress, but she knew how to return love with love and she knew how to keep a man. Rome might call, statecraft might beckon, but so long as his adored Cleopatra held up her little finger for him to stay, Anthony stayed.

Extraordinary tales are told of the two lovers—the most schoolgirlish pranks of Cleopatra, and the intonation of Anthony.

She would dress up as a slave and accompany him on all sorts of midnight adventures; she knew no fear, and she loved to share every pursuit of his. She hunted with him in the day, when hunting was a dangerous sport even for men, and there seems little doubt that she really loved him.

Once, when Cleopatra made a bet with Anthony that she would drink wine worth a King's ransom at a single sitting, he wagered her it could not be done. But the queen called for a goblet of vinegar, dropped into this the biggest pearl of Egypt, which dissolved in the acid, and then drained the goblet.

Such extravagances made the royal pair disliked, and news finally reached them that Rome intended to make war on Egypt and seize the throne. The fight was fought out on sea, and Cleopatra accompanied her lover in a galley of her own.

Through the battle Anthony's thoughts were with his queen. All at once he saw her galley making its way towards the shore, and fearing that she was wounded, gave up everything save Cleopatra, and went after her. His followers, thinking their leader was running away, were seized with panic, and the battle became a rout. Anthony was beaten, and knew it.

So, too, did Cleopatra, and she made a bold bid for the favor of the conqueror, Octavius, hoping to ensnare him as she had Julius Caesar and Mark Anthony.

But this was hopeless, for stories reached her that Octavius boasted that he would make her walk barefoot through the streets of Rome.

Determined not to be captured, Cleopatra fled to a monument she had prepared, locked the doors behind her, and with two faithful servants, Iris and Charmion, gave out to the world that she was dead.

Anthony heard this, and believing that there remained nothing in the world worth while to him, drove his sword into his body.

Alas, just at that moment news was brought to him that Cleopatra lived, and Mark Anthony, prince of lovers, with almost superhuman strength, dragged himself up, and commanded his slaves to carry him to her that he might breathe his last in her arms.

But the doors of the monument tomb were blocked up.

But Cleopatra wanted him, so she endeavored to hold him up by ropes to the room where she and two maids were hidden. It was a pitiful sight indeed, Anthony stretching up his hands to the woman he adored; red-headed Cleopatra, stricken with grief and remorse, straining to pull him to her.

The lovers were united. Anthony died in her arms. It was all he wished for.

Cleopatra lived but little longer, for when the soldiers broke open the doors of her room, Cleopatra, dressed
