Lord Somerton's Ally.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Elsie consented to drink a cup of tea, and while Annette was engaged in admiring a few trinkets she had bought, she reviewed what had taken place in Lawyer Grant's office; she thought out the whole story, her heart filled with bitterness, but served with determination.

"Five minutes longer," announced Annette, presently, "is there anything that I can get you, Miss Elsie—a book or a newspaper?"

She tripped away, believing in her light-hearted fashion that these were but passing clouds. How could any permanent harm come to the heiress of Blairwood. And her own happy future, was it not couleur de rose?

At that moment a tall man, who had been staring through the window, hunched over, for some few minutes, walked into the waiting-room, and stood before Miss Sterne.

"He had no business there at all; the rules of the railway company forbade it."

"Are you Miss Elsie Sterne," he asked, quietly.

The girl lifted her startled eyes to his face, and saw that it was the shabby stranger she had seen at the door of the Blairwood Arms.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"And yet, why should I ask?" the man continued. "I should know that you were Elsie Mervin's daughter even if I had never seen you before!"

He looked at her so strangely that the girl felt half afraid, but his words bent a rush of hot blood tingling through every vein.

"What do you know of my mother?" she demanded. "I saw you in the Park—in Blairwood Park this morning, talking to Lord Somerton. Who are you?"

She spoke in an eager whisper, for the man could not have disguised, even if he had desired to do so, the fact that he had been a soldier. His shoulders were well set back, and the poise of his head betrayed the training of his youth. It came like an inspiration, the thought that this was James Castlemon, the man who knew so much of Sir John's past life.

"In good time you will know all," he replied, ambiguously, but in tones trembling with emotion. "The likeness to your dead mother completely unmans me, child."

"You are Captain James Castlemon, you know my darling mother?" Elsie was facing him, but he was not permitted to reply, for Annette had returned, and an official was looking inquiringly at Castlemon.

"The train is in, madam," Annette said, and the railway official cried: "Please take your seats!" following this with a string of names where the train would deposit passengers.

"You are returning to Blairwood, Miss Sterne?" Castlemon said. "Allow me to see you to your train. I am back in a day or two, and you shall hear from me. I am bent upon settling matters right so far as lies in my power."

Almost bewildered, Elsie followed his lead. He opened the door of a first-class compartment for her and Annette, saw that they were comfortably settled, and as the train moved away, raised his hat with the air of one who had seen better days.

Not until the rumbling of the train sounded from afar like the rumbling of distant thunder did he move, and in his eyes was the light of a bitter remorse.

"He was ever my evil genius!" he muttered. "Or is this but an idle and cowardly excuse for my own weakness? I do not think that I am wholly bad, and the devil only rises in my heart when I taste too much brandy. Every penny of the money taken from thatascal Grant must be refunded. This is why I have driven my Lord of Somerton into a corner. I will bash the cheque to-morrow, and—"

He smiled to himself, a smile that was almost happy. Then he left the railway station, and walked at a leisurely pace in the direction of the Strand, until he came to a quiet hotel in one of the many unimportant streets that branch from that bustling thoroughfare.

He appeared to be known to the door-porter, and nodded familiarly to the clerk, as he passed upstairs to his room.

Having closed the door behind him, he took a newspaper from an inner pocket of his coat, and immediately selected the following paragraph to read:

"There is a rumor in police circles that the infamous scoundrel, Captain James Castlemon, has had the temerity to venture back to England. It will be remembered by many that this man sold a whole company of British soldiers into the hands of one of India's native princes just before the outbreak of the Mutiny, by which hundreds of innocent women, and children were brutally outraged and butchered. For a time there was a well-accredited belief that Castlemon had perished, but it now transpires that he has been hiding among the hill tribes, and even assumed the manners and customs of these savages. He is tall, broad-shouldered, from fifty to fifty-five years of age, decided military bearing, hair inclined to be sandy, and cropped close to his head; heavy sandy mustache, and stubby beard of the same color. Our foreign correspondent informs us that he was last seen wearing a shabby tweed suit, evidently of British importation."

Castlemon read this through three or four times, and then stepped to a looking-glass and inspected his reflection.

"By Jove!" he muttered, "I wonder how the deuce this came about? I would not be surprised if I were arrested at any moment. I thought that I had thrown the bloodhounds of my track pretty effectually, but see that I was mistaken."

He sat down again, and thought the matter out, but his manner was not expressive of any particular alarm.

"A week hence," he said, at last, "and I can unmask and defy them all! The disguise was for the benefit of Sir John, whom, after all, I was afraid to meet."

He dined alone, and after dark bought a really-made suit of clothes at a tailor's shop in the Strand.

Attired in these, and his face combed with the aid of a hairdresser, he presented an appearance that was very much changed for the better. The only fault was the exposure of his weak mouth and chin.

The hotel clerk hardly knew him again, but only smiled. The little hotel was too slow to be even suspicious, even if there were any grounds for suspicion.

The next morning Castlemon purchased all the morning newspapers, and he saw a repetition of his description in three of them. These he promptly destroyed, and wandering down into the reading-room of the hotel, surreptitiously pocketed the objectionable papers of the papers laid on the table for the use of guests.

He now felt ordinarily safe under the circumstances, and, having breakfasted, proceeded to the Temple Bar branch of the London and Westminster Bank, where he cashed the Earl of Somerton's check.

He placed the Bank of England notes in his pocket-book, buttoned it up securely, and strolled toward Temple Gardens in a leisurely manner, for the fingers of the huge clock over the Low Courts only pointed to the hour of ten.

"The boy has my papers by this time, I have no doubt," he thought, as he passed the hallway that led to Noel Campbell's chambers.

"If I only dared, how I would like to see him!"

For a little while he watched the well-dressed crowd of men that ever seemed on the go, and then, with a sigh, finally continued his way until he stood before the imposing offices of Mr. James Grant, wherein a dozen clerks were already busy at different desks and tables littered with legal papers.

He entered the office and asked for Mr. Grant. The managing clerk informed him that the principal had not yet arrived. What name?

"Ray," he replied—"John Ray. Tell him when he comes that I will be here again at noon."

The name was entered in a book by a small boy behind the door, and Castlemon was turning to leave when he almost ran into the arms of the lawyer.

At sight of his visitor Mr. Grant started, then a wicked smile wreathed itself about his lip.

"Ha! Is that you, Mr. Ray? Follow me into yonder office, please. I am glad that I was so fortunate as to meet you."

When they were alone, he turned to Castlemon, and said, sharply:

"You are running great risks by dawdling about London. I understand that you were at Blairwood yesterday? A man cannot serve two masters. Mr. Castlemon, and such flimsy tricks do not find favor with me. My resources for watching your movements are rather surprising, eh? However, I do not think that you can do much harm, and I strongly advise you to get out of England. You have served my purpose, and been paid for it. I am acting merely in the interests of my client, Mr. Noel Campbell; and do not wish his name to be in any way mixed up with yours."

"Oh, no, of course not," sneered Castlemon. "You have advanced me something under a thousand pounds during the past year, and your security for this sum is a mortgage practically upon your client's word of honor—on his very life. I know not one word of the truth, or I would never have accepted the money. Don't rest too self-satisfied, Mr. Grant. I have no intention of leaving England at present, and warn you that your fancied security is a myth."

STORY OF TURBINA LIKE OLD ROMANCE OF THE OCEAN.

Former Fast Passenger Steamer Returns After Her Disappearance Five Years Ago—Had Various Experiences on Highways and Byways of the Sea.

Battered by hard service, and latterly by the unrestricted force of the elements, there came into Toronto harbor lately a ship which was once the fastest passenger vessel running out of that city. After more than five years of absence shrouded in mystery, the S.S. Turbina has returned.

It literally bumped in through the Eastern Gap, convoyed by two sea-going tugs, crippled from two years of inactivity, and reduced by its war service to an ugly grey bulk, powerless and disheveled.

The five years of its absence have dealt harshly with it. The once palatial saloon has for some years past served as a messroom for the crew. Between two lounges there stands an ugly kitchen range, and, in strange contrast, a bird has nested in another corner of the room. Directly opposite there hangs a certificate of registration which expired in 1918, and which is practically the sole evidence of her former glory.

Her top deck is utterly bare, and here and there the deck-boards are shattered. Only her two gun funnels, her masts and bridge work remain. Her promenade deck below is boarded in, and on the front open deck, where pioniereers were once wont to make merry, there lies a mass of tangled tackle. Outwardly, too, she shows her scars of service. Her iron hull, once black, then grey, now is streaked with peeling paint, and only in dim, embossed outline is her name visible.

Early in the summer of 1918 the Turbina steamed out of the harbor and out of public knowledge. Between that fateful time and yesterday her whereabouts have been known to few. Rumour credited her with many episodes, both creditable and inglorious, and even, at times, suggested that she had come to an untimely end in some unnamed quarter of the globe.

When she warped out from her slip in 1918 for the last time she was bound on war service, though few knew it. She made her way through the St. Lawrence canal, and at Quebec, Capt. George Green, Chief Officer Anderson, and Chief Engineer Joseph Kennedy, were detailed by the Canadian Steamships Company to take charge of an Admiralty crew and pilot her across the submarine-infested Atlantic. From Quebec she went to North Sydney, where she was to have joined a 12-knot convoy leaving about the end of October. Unforseen delays in bunkering held her up, however, and she left the Atlantic seaboard five days after the departure of the convoy. Eight days later she was in Falmouth, having crossed the Atlantic alone.

As it turned out later, the lack of a convoy was not so serious a matter as it seemed to the crew at the time. The date of her arrival at Falmouth was Nov. 10, 1918, one day before the cessation of hostilities, and for days before there had been little submarine activity. The fact was unknown to those on board, however, and she pursued the zig-zagging tactics which had been made necessary earlier in the war as soon as she entered the submarine area. Four hours before her arrival, the convoy, which had left five days earlier, had just arrived. The Turbina had averaged 17 knots an hour.

At Falmouth the Turbina known to thousands of Ontario people ceased to be and there came into existence the dull drab Turbina of wartime. From that port she steamed round to Liverpool, and then entered the cross-Channel service, carrying troops back from France. For many months she plied between Dover, Folkestone and Boulogne, or between La Harve and Southampton. Sometimes Canadian troops were carried back to England by her, and many times there were those among her complement who recognized her beneath her war trim.

The time came when the Admiralty no longer needed the boat and she was headed back to Canada. That was in the fall of 1920. She came back to Canada a mere shell of her former self and, because there was no immediate use for her, she was laid up in the obscurity of Sorel, Quebec. For two years she lay exposed to the elements. About September 20 she was roused from her long rest and tugged down to Quebec. There Capt. Cornett of the Canada Steamship Lines took charge of her and piloted her, with the pair of tugs, to Ogdensburg, N.Y. After a few days in drydock, where her bottom was cleaned and ledged, she entered on the last stage of her journey for Toronto.

A crew of men is already on board removing the traces of her hard service. Next spring the old Turbina will have been recreated, and once more she will enter the Toronto-Hamilton passenger service.

The Turbina was built in 1904 on the Clyde and was brought to Canada in the same year to enter the service of the Turbine Steamship Company, operating between Toronto and Ham-

STORY OF TURBINA LIKE OLD ROMANCE OF THE OCEAN.

Former Fast Passenger Steamer Returns After Her Disappearance Five Years Ago—Had Various Experiences on Highways and Byways of the Sea.

Battered by hard service, and latterly by the unrestricted force of the elements, there came into Toronto harbor lately a ship which was once the fastest passenger vessel running out of that city. After more than five years of absence shrouded in mystery, the S.S. Turbina has returned.

It literally bumped in through the Eastern Gap, convoyed by two sea-going tugs, crippled from two years of inactivity, and reduced by its war service to an ugly grey bulk, powerless and disheveled.

The five years of its absence have dealt harshly with it. The once palatial saloon has for some years past served as a messroom for the crew. Between two lounges there stands an ugly kitchen range, and, in strange contrast, a bird has nested in another corner of the room. Directly opposite there hangs a certificate of registration which expired in 1918, and which is practically the sole evidence of her former glory.

Her top deck is utterly bare, and here and there the deck-boards are shattered. Only her two gun funnels, her masts and bridge work remain. Her promenade deck below is boarded in, and on the front open deck, where pioniereers were once wont to make merry, there lies a mass of tangled tackle. Outwardly, too, she shows her scars of service. Her iron hull, once black, then grey, now is streaked with peeling paint, and only in dim, embossed outline is her name visible.

Early in the summer of 1918 the Turbina steamed out of the harbor and out of public knowledge. Between that fateful time and yesterday her whereabouts have been known to few. Rumour credited her with many episodes, both creditable and inglorious, and even, at times, suggested that she had come to an untimely end in some unnamed quarter of the globe.

From Miss M. Morris, Lynchburg, Va., comes this fine recipe for

Sally Lunn

Boil one large white potato and mash it fine in one cup of the boiling water. Dissolve one yeast cake and two tablespoons sugar in cup of warm water; add to potato. Beat one egg well and add it too. Then mix in 1/2 cup Libby's Milk diluted with 1/4 cup water, and one teaspoon salt. Sift in enough flour to make mixture so stiff you can just drop it from a spoon; add one cup melted lard or butter; beat well and set to rise. When it has doubled itself, beat again and put in molds to rise, then bake like mold cake.

7 1/2 teaspoons of butter
1/2 fat in every 16 oz. can

Libby's Milk, Miss Morris says, greatly improves her Sally Lunn

A milk so rich that a single 16 ounce can of it contains 7 1/2 teaspoons of pure butter fat.

When Miss M. Morris of Lynchburg, Virginia, heard that fact about Libby's Milk she knew at once that it would give greater richness, finer flavor to this and that dish which she regularly cooked.

Even her specialty, Sally Lunn—it should improve that!

Now Miss Morris, like thousands of other good cooks, is using Libby's Milk in more and more of her recipes, for her Sally Lunn, she told us, was greatly improved—was noticeably richer—had finer, softer texture. She sent us her recipe; it's given above.

Why Libby's Milk is richer

Libby's Milk is so rich in butter fat because, first, it comes from selected herds in the finest dairy sections of the country—those favored localities where nature has made of shady hills and green, well watered meadows ideal pasture lands, and where men specialize in raising cows that give exceptionally rich milk.

Then, at our condenser in the heart of these famous dairy sections, we remove more than half the moisture from this fine milk, making it double rich.

Nothing is added to it; none of its food values taken away. But to bring it safely to you who live, perhaps, many hundreds of miles away we must seal it in air-tight cans and sterilize it.

This, then, is Libby's Milk—just the finest cow's milk in the land, made double rich!

Make your cooking richer with this richer milk

Order a can of Libby's Milk from your grocer today. Try it in one of your favorite dishes—in a soup for instance, a sauce, gravy or dessert. Notice what wholly new richness it gives. And what fine flavor.

Once you have used this richer milk, have seen for yourself how economical it is, you will want it for all your cooking. And think what a convenience it will be—to have always on your pantry shelf a supply of this fine, pure milk!

General Election In Britain Predicted.

Elizabeth Howard Lost on Her Way to Bay of Islands—France will not Tolerate a Dictatorial Government in Germany—
Bavarian Irregulars will March on Berlin—Preference in Britain Meets with Opposition.

BRITAIN'S POLITICAL POT BOILING.

LONDON, Nov. 8.
More than one paper this morning repeated the suggestion that the general election may come before Christmas. "Panic stricken by the force of the trade speeches delivered in the last few days," is the condition of the party's own press, according to the Daily News, which will have nothing to do with election and thinks the protectionists are easier to jockey the Premier than a snap election. Another suggestion abroad, that a full meeting of the Unionist Party should be called, meets a rather poor reception by the party's own press, which regards the demand as one embodied by a rather fussy minority.

PREFERENCE PROPOSALS AT- TACKED.

LONDON, Nov. 8.
Attacked by Free Traders as a tax on the poor man's lunch, Great Britain's new preference proposals are already the centre of much controversy. The Daily News asserts that as a result of the preference, every pound tin of salmon and every pound pot of honey from outside the Empire will cost a penny more wholesale.

Every quart bottle of fruit juice will jump three halfpence, according to the News, and every pound of foreign apples a half penny.
The Westminster Gazette says one by one the delicacies of the workingman's table are being added to the schedule of things to be taxed and addition to food that will cost more to buy.
None of the preference proposals will become effective until they have parliamentary sanction. The Imperial Conference made a last hour addition of wines to preferential tariff offer.
Australia and South Africa lately have been purchasing their wines on the English market.

POINCARÉ GIVES EVASIVE REPLY

BERLIN, Nov. 8.
Premier Poincaré, replying to recent German protests against the attitude of French General De Metz in the Bavarian Palatinate, informed Berlin that the French Government was entirely unconcerned with reparations for Separatists' action in either the Palatinate or Rhine Province, and would continue to be so. A semi-official statement announcing receipt of the reply says that it evaded answering the complaints against De Metz.

REBELS DEFEATED.

TRIPOLI, Nov. 8.
Italian troops in Tripoli have inflicted another defeat upon the rebellious tribesmen in a sharp attack near Nahant, the natives losing a hundred killed while the Italian casualties were two dead and thirteen wounded, all native soldiers.

and directors, as the result of an attempt to sell one million dollars in dollars a share, the New York Evening Post said to-day.

Winter-Fishers of the Northern Seas

DIOGAS KISSACK, in Crumbers Journal.
Reykjavik to Billingsgate—it seems the white fastnesses of Iceland; Billingsgate with its crowded, shadowy streets that wander vaguely at the foot of the Monument. But there are men who span the distance—the winter-fishers of the silent northern seas. They are men rough of speech and they are men rough of heart. They fish but the casual passer-by; only the fishermen know their real work. Their work is cruel, biting work. The winter seas, where nothing breaks the silence save their own voices or the shrill shrieking of hungry seals that follow their boats. They are really a great day when they are out on the quaysides as the ice and provision. Exploited by the postmaster, all to no purpose the hundreds of rough fishermen and their blanket hoods, jumpers, and with crinkling sea-boots on their legs, all talking and laughing; the chatter of the usual business of the port; the raucous chatter of the gulls hovering aloof and the big boats straining at the ropes as if they knew the tide was on the flow and they must be out to sea.

Such vessels! High and wheel-shaped in the bows; low and squat in the stern; one great funnel looming with rusty colours; stout, short masts. Mighty winches fore and aft, and coils of the stoutest rope imaginable. Steel-built throughout to withstand the roughest seas that are swept off the north coasts—the winter-fishers' boats. From stem to stern they have coats of dull gray—steel streaked with rust or long, the coating and provisioning over the funnels begin to throw out great plumes of black smoke. In the dusk green and red and white lights up each side of the bridge and ride up the masts. Down below the green and red and white lights up each side of the bridge and ride up the masts. Down below the green and red and white lights up each side of the bridge and ride up the masts.

By now the fleet is spread out in many units, miles apart. Only now can be seen, attenuated and thin, the fingers against the breaking waves. But such bustle on board! The cook is busy, boiling the fish by the kailon, making flapjacks and the trawlermen love so well by the dozen. Every man gloved and armed and abetted by cigarettes and pipe. The vessel slows down, and the which begins to grunt and wheeze. Up comes the great drag on its steel rests. For a moment the trawlers uncertainly, then down it goes with a crash. This done, and the trawlers tensed astern, the vessel comes ahead with a nice breeze on her bow.

a tall stick, surmounted by a flag and corked at the foot, is dropped overboard. The trawler leaves these to bob derisively in her wake. She is working round in a huge semi-circle. Two, three hours pass. Again the cook and his boy appear with hot food. Then, at a curt command from the master, standing snugly in his wheel-house, all hands prepare for the incoming of the trawl. The winches tug and strain at the ropes. Slowly the net draws nearer, tumbling the water about its sides. Then one extra heave and it is inboard with its weight of silver fish.

All kinds of fish have come in, much useless; fine plaice and soles, dace, ray, cod, whiting, gurnard and lone herring, crabs, dogfish, shells and seaweed. It is hastily scrambled out and sorted. What is worthless goes back to the sea again. Then the slaughter begins. Wear, heart-breaking work this of cleaning the fish. In the closing of the day it is colder still. The acetylene lamps flare up, lighting the scrubby faces of the busy men. After a washing the fish goes down to the ice-chambers. And all this time the trawl is out again. So the whole process is repeated. Day after day, trawling and cleaning, the same prowling up and down the seas, all ways the same things to see. Till comes the day when the vessel's holds are full. Gay-coloured flags run up halyards and a tiny steam-vessel puts off from Iceland, manned by a strange bearded crew of giants who speak little English.

This little craft willingly relieves the trawl of her catch, no matter the weather making it so difficult for her to stand by. Then, with a farewell hoot of her siren, she forges away for the coast of Scotland. Once in port, her cargo is delivered to the railwaymen. A long run through Scotland, over the border, then down, down to London and the shadowy, cobbled lanes of Billingsgate, where the iced catches are sold to anybody who may care to buy at the foot of the Monument.

Far off in the northern seas, their coats streaked and rusted, their haws-pipes choked with weed and clay, their tunnel-colours dimmed, and their crews dirty and unnaturally bearded, the trawlers still cast their great nets and still at night post a double look-out for the icebergs that sweep down from the Arctic to crush the daring men who would trespass in their seas.

Value of Insurance

ENHANCED BY A DEFINITE LIFE PROGRAMME.

Have you a definite plan of insurance on your life? This important question which was addressed by the Travelers' Insurance Company, of Hartford, to its own staff, is deserving of more attention from men than it gets. The evident advantages of life insurance can be greatly enhanced by attempting to understand the chief benefits of policies offered, and arranging those purchased accordingly.

The answer of one member to the questionnaire mentioned above, reads: "I am arranging my life insurance along a very definite plan. It has four definite parts to it—five in fact, when I take into consideration my old age. "The first step in my plan is a $2,000 Ordinary Life payable in a lump sum to my wife for the purpose of cleaning up debts and funeral expenses. This is very important, I believe, I don't want the widow Brown walking around with all the merchants saying that Old Man Brown died and left a big wad of bills that she could not pay."

"Next comes the home. In my case I already own a home, but there's a mortgage on it. The second feature of my life insurance program is a term policy sufficient to pay off this mortgage in case of my death. "Third comes a monthly income for my wife. This is arranged on a graduated scale. A large income for the first ten years to cover the time when the children might still be independent, and after that a smaller, yet sufficient, income for the lifetime of my beneficiary.

"These income policies really play two parts in my program. They are on the insurance-annuity or long term endowment plan, so that they not only provide an income for my wife in case of my death, but also an income for myself in case I live beyond age 60 or 65, which I fully expect to do. "The fourth feature is a $5,000 policy, payable in a lump sum, to be deposited in the bank as a contingency fund. This is very important—and I believe a large number of such policies could be sold to men who consider themselves amply provided for in the way of insurance. Take home-ownership, for example. Every home-owner knows that only too frequently unexpected expenses will crop up in the form of special assessments, painting, re-roofing, new plumbing, a new furnace or a dozen and one other things in connection with the house. The possession of an emergency fund for such purposes would enable my wife to meet such expenses without trying to save it out of her monthly income.

"If my children were younger, I should have a special policy to cover their educational expenses; as it is, their education will be completed within five years—and the larger income that I have arranged for the first ten-year period should see them through in case of my death."

The program of each person will differ just as his circumstances do. Consequently forethought is necessary to reach the proper solution. Intensive study by actuaries has resulted in the placing on the market of new policies to meet these peculiar needs, but, as the public has a limited knowledge of insurance, it devolves on the agent to work out the program. The purchaser of insurance has a right to demand and expect from agents, the ability and knowledge to give them wise counsel in these matters. Efficient agents will place themselves in a position to do this, realizing that the same lack of foresight which makes it difficult to sell policies, will lead to future dissatisfaction and resentment where policies not suited to the needs of the insured are placed.

Lobster canapes make attractive appetizers. Serve the heated lobster mixture on golden rounds of bread sautéed in hot melted butter.

Dainty macaroons are made with grated coconut, corn flakes, sugar, beaten white of egg and a pinch of salt. Bake until nicely brown. When you are in a hurry, to save making dumplings for the stew, place over it quarter slices of stale bread and let them steam, tightly covered.

DOUBLE-STRENGTH.
He who has a friend has this:
Some friendship for sunny days;
Something kings and princes miss
One to speak his name with praise.

He who has a friend may be Poor of purse and worn by care,
But he's rich in this, that he May his comrade's fortune share.

He who has a friend may weep
For some gentle spirit flown
Which he loved but could not keep
But he will not mourn alone.

He who has a friend may fall
Bruised and broken in the fight,
But his friend shall hear him call
And shall seek him through the night.

He who has a friend may know
For the work he has to do,
Wherever he may go
That he owns the strength of two.

To his own, through good or bad,
From beginning to the end,
When he needs it he may add
All the treasures of his friend.

Famous Catch-Phrases

SECRETS OF THEIR SUCCESS.

They ask me sadly why I am downhearted:
What secret sorrow corrugates my brow?
I answer: "Sirs, our glory has departed;
We have no catchword now!"

So sang a poet some fifteen years ago, and certainly at that time there was no current phrase so universally popular as "Yes, we have no bananas" is to-day.

The necessary qualifications for a popular catch-phrase would seem to be Simplicity and Stupidity, and without a doubt those two ingredients abound in the phrases that have tickled the senses of the people during the last hundred years. In 1830 the small boy of the period would rudely remark to his elders, "How are you off for soap?" or, more rudely still, "Go to Bath and get your head shaved." Some five years later the slogan became, "Go it, ye cripples," while in 1850 a phrase was coined that remained topical for two generations. That was the famous "Does your mother know you're out?"

"Where Did You Get That Hat?"

Catch-phrases, by the way, in the form of questions have frequently reached a high degree of popularity, as witness the one invented in 1840, "Do you see any green in my eye?" In the 'nineties, "Have you seen the Shah?" and "Where did you get that hat?" attained an equally wearisome vogue.

The year 1830 gave to the world the classic "Jump, Jim Crow," while in 1841 the advent of the first public koo-koo-birds led to "That's the ticket for soap."

No further meteoric phrase occurred until 1850, when "All Serene" lit up the comic firmament; and after that there is a long and blessed wait of ten years. But the year 1860 was a true vintage year. In those short twelve months were coined such universal favourites as "Keep your hair on," "Like a bird" (both typical to-day), "Not for Joe," and "How's your poor feet?"—an absolutely unique collection.

"Not To-day, Baker."

In 1865 the social verbal plesantry was "Not to-day, baker," which had its origin in a phenomenally successful music-hall song. In the 'seventies and 'eighties there were many catch-phrases, but none worthy of inclusion in this column, which is only reserved for those of abiding interest. But with the arrival of the 'nineties they blossomed thick and fast. In 1890 "Mind the step" instantly achieved immortality, and then in quick succession through the following years came those world-beaters: "Get your hair cut," "Now we shan't be long," "Let 'em all come," "What ho! she bumps," rising to the classic pinnacle of "Pip-pip" and "There's hair" would have said, "Prodegeons!" The Great War was not responsible for many catch-phrases. Possibly the best known, if put to the vote, would be "That's the stuff to give the troops."

Anyhow, any impartial person who has read through this article must assuredly agree with my contention that Simplicity and Stupidity make up the recipe for a successful catch-phrase.—HARTLEY CARRICK, in John O' London's Weekly.

Dr. Banting a Public Benefactor.

A message in the Canadian press states that the Manitoba Board of Health have made arrangements for the distribution of insulin for the treatment of diabetes in the Province.

The remarkable discovery of the young Canadian Dr. Banting, is the most important of recent time, and has made him at once a conspicuous figure in the medical world.

What is perhaps more to be admired than anything else is the unselfishness that Dr. Banting has shown. He might well have been excused had he turned to commercial account this marvellous discovery.

King Coal.

The account which we published on Tuesday of our interview with Mr. Arthur J. Seifridge, the legal adviser of the newly organized Newfoundland Coal Mining Company, once again raises the question we or have we not coal fields that may be turned to commercial account.

Various properties have from time to time been "scratched," but the field which gave promise of the best results has had but little attention, and those who by their years of labour in the St. George's coal area have shown their faith in its possibilities, have received but little encouragement.

Mr. T. J. Freeman has at last aroused the interest of several capitalists in his enterprise, and the promising reports of Sir Stopford Brunton would make it appear that at last operations will be started to develop the mines.

If their efforts meet with success, the other mineral deposits long known to exist in the Bay St. George area would immediately become valuable, manufacturing industries would spring into life, and an era of prosperity hitherto undreamt of would dawn in Newfoundland.

Lowney Firm Renewing Newfoundland Trade.

In another space of to-day's issue we find an advertisement of the well known firm of Walter M. Lowney Co. of Boston and Montreal, Cocoa and Chocolate makers since 1878.

For some time back Lowney's were unfortunately compelled to withdraw their exportations to Newfoundland territory owing to abnormal circumstances, but now they are pleased and find it possible to place their quality line on the market once again and have appointed Leo A. Duffy as their Dominion representative.

It is indeed encouraging to see the old firm of the past coming back again and we heartily welcome the Lowney Co. and bespeak for them the patronage of which they were accustomed to share in earlier days.

Nfld. and the Navy.

The Hon. W. R. Warren, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, speaking at the Nelson Day dinner of the Navy League on Monday, said Newfoundland had historic associations with the Navy. In the war Newfoundland lost more men at sea than all the other Dominions together, and it would continue to do its duty. He was disposed to vary Nelson's signal by saying "Every man expects the Empire to do its duty," and he hoped that soon the Dominions would be taking a larger share in maintaining the Navy, which was their one common salvation.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE HAS CLOSED.

LONDON, Nov. 9. Another imperial conference passed last night into history. The economic conference meets again to-day for consideration of wireless communications but its proceedings will probably be brief. It has been six weeks of constant consultations, committees, conferences, and speeches. Not until Monday will the official text of the resolutions be issued but it may be forecasted that they will not indicate any important change in constitutional relations. On all matters of foreign policy there is no change in the existing machinery.

BAREFACED BANDITRY IN OGDEN.

Eight or ten bandits in wild west fashion held this town of five hundred inhabitants at bay for two hours early yesterday while they blasted their way through the door of a vault in Ogdens state bank. The guards stationed outside the bank kept up a heavy fire until their companions gained access to vault and looted it. Then shouting derisively the bandit gang shot up the town as they walked to their two motor cars to the edge of the town and drove away. Bank officials estimated the loss at twenty-five thousand dollars in liberty bonds. Telephone, telegraph and electric light wires were cut by the bandits before the raid.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT CRUSHES BAVARIAN COUP D'ETAT.

A proclamation issued by the government to the people regarding the Bavarian coup d'etat says "armed band has overthrown the Bavarian government, arrested Premier Von Knilling who arrogated the right to form a Reich government, made General Ludendorff, chief of the German army, and Adolf Hitler who has only been naturalized a few days arbiter of Germany's destinies. Whoever supports the movement is guilty of high treason. All measures to resist the coup d'etat have been taken and will be executed with utmost energy."

LLOYD GEORGE'S ABSENCE ENHANCES HIS REPUTATION.

Lloyd George returned to Great Britain to-day to find an entirely new political situation, and one investing him with greater political importance and curiosity than he could possibly have possessed when he started his tour to Canada and the U. S. Moreover it is a situation which may easily give him dominance to which for a long time he has been a complete stranger. At Southampton and at London plans are prepared to give the former premier a warm welcome. He will be given the freedom of the city of Southampton which will be made an occasion of a great gathering of his political adherents, and his progress from the railway station in London to his Chelsea home will be in the nature of a triumphal celebration. It is barely a fortnight since Premier Baldwin announced his conviction that the remedy for unemployment was a protective policy. Protection will be fiercely fought by both Liberal and Labor and both Mr. Lloyd George and Winston Churchill are expected to be on the free trade side. This brings up a possibility of conciliation between opposing wings of the Liberal Party.

IN MEMORIAM DEFEATS ZEV.

My Own Was a Poor Third, Trailing Six Lengths Behind Zev.

LATONIA, Ky., Nov. 4.—A Kentucky bred and owned horse, with a Kentucky boy in the saddle, caused the greatest surprise that has climaxed a turf spectacle in years, when in Memoriam defeated Zev, and his greatest rival, My Own, in the $50,000 Latonia championship Saturday, before a crowd of 45,000 spectators.

The victory of the Bay, son of McGee-Enchantress, owned by Carl Wiedemann, millionaire horseman of New Port, Ky., was convincing. Sprinting into the stretch, in Memoriam conquered Zev, the conqueror of Papyrus and winner of the Kentucky Derby, raced him into submission, and flashed across the wire a winner by at least six lengths.

Back of the flashing heels of Zev came Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson's My Own, trailing eight lengths behind. Rialto, the fourth starter in the race, was distanced in the stretch, and pulled up without even trying to catch the flying leaders.

The race, a grueling test of one and three-quarter miles, was run in three minutes and our-fifth seconds. Jockey Mack Garner, who rode in Memoriam to victory Saturday, holds the distinction of riding Rockminister when that three-year-old established the track record.

Harry F. Sinclair, owner of Zev, evidently was convinced that Zev could not be beaten, because he plunged $63,000 in the Paris-Mutual machines before the races. Sinclair first wagered $20,000. Then he dumped $20,000 more. As the hour for the start drew near he wagered an additional $9,000, and finally threw $4,000 more on Zev's chances to win.

The sums were wagered at the track Saturday afternoon in addition to the amounts he wagered before leaving the east. Because Zev and My Own were such overwhelming favorites, $2 ticket in the pari-mutual in Memoriam paid the liberal price of $23.60 to win.

The price of Zev was forty cents to a dollar, while the figure on My Own was $2.75 to $1. The odds on Rialto were $54.90 to $1.

Wiedemann, who won $50,000 in cash in first prize for in Memoriam's triumph, presented the boyish-looking Garner with a cheque for $10,000 as a reward for his victory.

THE SCHOONER RACE FIASCO.

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—The unfortunate ending to the Fishermen's Race at Halifax is a general topic of conversation amongst those interested in the sailing game in Toronto.

"I think the Bluenose should have sailed in yesterday's race," said Commodore Aemilius Jarvis. "Of course, the trouble is these men comprising the crew are undisciplined so far as yacht racing is concerned and take absolutely their own view of such matters as rules."

Major Windeyer, of the R. C. Y. C., when asked whether the Bluenose had acted in a sportsmanlike manner in withdrawing and sailing for Lunenburg without competing, said "It looks to me as if the Bluenose was wrong, and I think the action of her crew was absolutely unsportsmanlike. When the Committee's decision was made, Bluenose should have bowed to it."

Commodore T. A. E. World, of the Queen City Yacht Club said: "Waters should have stayed with the game to the finish. The fact that he did not do so shows lack of sportsmanship."

"Bluenose's crew should not be deprived of their prize money after winning the fishermen's trophy fairly and squarely," said Sir Thomas White. "I would like to suggest that the prize money be made up by public subscription and sent to them. I'll gladly start it off with $200."

INTERNATIONAL ATHLETICS Proposed Events for Match Between Great Britain and America.

At a meeting of the Championship Committee of the Amateur Athletic Association the following events were suggested for the proposed match between the Amateur Athletic Union of the U.S.A. and the British Amateur Athletic Association, to be held next July:

RENAULT WINS BY KNOCKOUT.

Johnson's Seconds Threw Towel in the Ring.

Furious Battle Between the Heavyweights. NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Jack Renault (196½) knocked out Floyd Johnston (196), of Iowa, to-night in the 15th and last round of a furious battle at Madison Square Garden. Johnson's seconds tossed a towel into the ring as he rose from taking a count of nine.

Johnson was the aggressor throughout the first round. They set a fast pace in the second round, Renault firing Johnson with his left, but got the worst of the exchanges at close quarters.

Partly off balance, Renault went half way through the ropes from a left to the chin in the third, but he scrambled back without a count, apparently unhurt. Renault brought blood from Johnson's nose in the 4th with a straight left.

Renault staggered Johnson in the fifth with a left hook and kept a steady stream of blood flowing from the Iowan's nose as they battled at close quarters. They mixed at a furious pace in the sixth. The Canadian tried hard for a right hand knockout but was wide.

Renault had Johnson in momentary distress in the seventh with a terrific attack to the head, but the Iowan rallied and sent Renault partly through the ropes in a mix-up. Both slugged away at close quarters in the eighth.

Renault had Johnson groggy in the ninth with a series of ripping upper-cuts and hooks; his left eye and chin were cut, his nose streaming blood, and his right eye discolored.

Renault drove Johnson groggy and bleeding about the ring in the tenth. Johnson rallied spectacularly at the start of the eleventh, driving Renault to the ropes with a slashing attack to the head. Johnson snapped Renault's head back with a right in the twelfth, but took a solid right to the chin.

MACAULEY IN LUMBER WOODS.

Mr. John M. Tobin, who arrived by the Rosalind yesterday, states that he was speaking to "Coke" Cahill while in Halifax, and was informed that it would be impossible to get Victor MacAuley, the runner, to come down this year. MacAuley left Halifax for the lumber woods about a month ago, and intends to remain there all winter.

Although a few large picturesque hats are seen the small hat undoubtedly predominates.

Cain Meets Abel at Star Movie To-night.

The above quotation may seem historical but it is the episode of that exciting series "Leather Pushers," and it is just what it is, and no doubt all patrons of the popular Star will be on deck. As advertised Fawcette and Tesori will give an exhibition of fox trotting with "Indian Home," and this is sure to be a big attraction in itself and as requested the management would like all who can to come early so as to obtain seats for the first performance. Frank Mayo in the feature picture "Wolf Law," is one in which this always pleasing actor will be seen at his best, assisting him is Sylvia Breamer, and with two such stars how could "Wolf Law" be anything but a hundred per cent production. See it to-night.

Boy Scouts.

A large number of gentlemen attended the Annual Council Meeting of the Boy Scouts' Association held at Government House yesterday afternoon. His Excellency Sir W. L. Ainslie, K.C.M.G., Chief Scout, being in the chair.

The report of the Executive Committee which was tabled and adopted, showed considerable progress had been made during the past twelve months. According to the latest Census, 481 lads are now on the roll, whilst during the tour of the Chief Scout to the various Outposts, interest in the movement was aroused and several applications to be permitted to form new troops, have been received.

His Excellency had an opportunity of inspecting the Troops at Mr. Grace and Grand Falls, and was very pleased with the efficiency of the Troops at both places. In other places visited by him, he noted a number of lads only waiting to be taken in hand, and it is hoped that very shortly a leader in each of these places will come forward and take an interest in the movement. The Chief Scout referred to the report of the Rotary Club, showing the large number of lads in St. John's who are not attending school, and who are not on the Roll of Boy Organizations in this city. He pointed out how much the work of the Brigades is appreciated, and the sincere desire of the Boy Scouts' Association to work in conjunction with them and make an earnest endeavour "to develop good citizenship among boys by forming their character, training them in habits of observation, obedience, and self-reliance, inculcating loyalty and thoughtfulness for others, teaching them service useful to the public and handicrafts useful to themselves, and promoting their physical development and hygiene," which are the aims of the Boy Scouts' Association. Reference was made in the Committee's Report to the very valuable work rendered by Dr. Blackall, Mr. Furlong and Mr. Peters, who relinquished the post of Chairman of the Committee, Secretary and Treasurer, respectively but who intimated their readiness to support the movement as heretofore. Major Wilberforce-Bell, M.C., who is shortly leaving Newfoundland also retired from the Executive Committee. The election of officers then took place, resulting as follows:—

Chairman—Hon. Tasker Cook.
Hon. General Secretary—Capt. G. J. Whitty, M.C.
Hon. General Treasurer—Harold Knight, Esq., B.A.
Committee—Dr. Blackall, Dr. V. F. Burke, Rev. Dr. Curtis, Commander C. J. Stuart (Commissioner for Sea Scouts), Eng. Commander R. A. Howley, R.N., Rev. Fr. T. J. Flynn, Messrs. C. P. Ayre, A. E. Holmes, James Murdoch, R. S. Furlong and H. A. LeMessurier (Officiating Chief Commissioner).

The Chief Scout read a letter he had received from Dominion H. Q., Canada, in response to his enquiry for a gentleman to undertake the training of Scoutmasters. The letter stated that at present all Canadian Officials are very busy, but, no doubt, Mr. Rodney C. Wood, Dominion Camp Chief of Canada, would be available in the spring and would come to Newfoundland for a month. Mr. Rodney Wood is one of the best posted officials of Scouting in Canada, and took charge of the Gilwell Training Camp at Chingford, Essex, last summer, and has only just returned from England. The Chief Scout very generously offered to have Mr. Wood as his guest whilst in St. John's, and the Council agreed to pay the travelling expenses of Mr. Wood. Scoutmasters are needed as a Scout is essentially an "outdoor dog." Scouting is a most fascinating and useful study. It is therefore hoped that our young men will embrace the opportunity offered by Mr. Wood's visit, to learn more of the work, and show a lively interest in the welfare of our lads, by giving up a part of their spare time to so worthy an object. Capt. G. J. Whitty, M.C., would be glad to hear from those who are willing to take up the work.

Another very important matter that of Private S. King. He has no less than an Estate, the better affairs are administered. The selection of an Executor is a matter of business, not of friendship. Friendship should, therefore, give way to sound business judgment.

Quite the contrary. As a rule, the less personal the interest an Executor has in an Estate, the better the affairs are administered.

Running the Royal Household

NEW THINGS ARE MADE TO GO SMOOTHLY AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

The keynote of Buckingham Palace is efficiency. It is impossible for the residence of the Royal Family to be run on successful lines unless there is in operation behind those who are in charge an orderly array of windows and red-coated sentries looking up and down outside.

The King's household is divided into three branches, which are in the charge of Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Steward, and the Master of the Horse. These are all political appointments, and holder retiring when a Government goes out of office.

The Lord Chamberlain, known in former days as the King's Chamberlain, controls and superintends all the officers and servants of the household above stairs. It is in his charge to see that the King's household is run on the lines of a well-oiled machine. He is responsible for the licensing of plays, and is the official issuer of the invitations to the Court and general points of etiquette. One of his lesser-known duties is having general charge of all matters in the Houses of Parliament.

The Lord Steward exercises control over the whole of the staff "below stairs," except those attached to the Department of the Master of the Household, says Mr. Guy Heston, in his new book, "The Court Circle." The official title of his office is the Lord of the Green Cloth, from the color of the table at which all expensives are dispensed in former days. The office is one of the oldest about the Court, for it dates back almost to the time of the Norman Conquest.

The Lord Steward takes his orders from the Sovereign in person. The Master of the Horse has charge of the ordering and disposing of all matters relating to the royal stables, and the control of the equestrian, downwards.

He may make use of any horses, dogs, or footmen, belonging to the household, and in all Royal processions his place is directly in front of the Sovereign.

Another very important Court post is that of Private Secretary to the King. He has to deal with all the King's personal correspondence and affairs, as well as making all his engagements and appointments, except those of a State or formal character. Among the minor officials the Treasurer of the Household is the principal one under the Lord Steward, taking full control in his absence. His duty is to pay all money from the Board of the Green Cloth and to supervise the household expenditure generally.

The Master of the Household supervises all the accounts and must certify them correct before passing them to the Treasurer for payment. He makes next to the Comptroller, and presides over the dinners of the suite attendance.

The Breaking Point
TALK OF A TERRIBLE STRUGGLE.

In the crude light of a single gas lamp that burnt in the small upper room a man struggled grimly. Perspiration stood out in beads on his forehead, and every muscle in his body was tense under the terrible strain. The struggle was all the more terrible by its silence. Once a dry sob broke from the parted lips, a sob that seemed to shake the rigid frame.

The struggle went on. There was the while thing about it—it went on. Here were fingers at the man's throat, strong fingers that gripped, groped, mercilessly, endeavoring to force the hold that would bring the man face to a finish.

And still no word was spoken, just the silent struggle for mastery in that upstairs room, and the painful gasping for breath. The suspense grew painful. Would neither win? And then for a moment it was broken.

"Curse you," The strained, choking voice rang through the room with startling force. "This beat you yet, you damned you. I will!"

His efforts seemed to relax a little as he said those words, relaxed for a moment as if summoning up fresh strength to continue the grim fight. Unheeded and unheeding, the sound of the traffic far below filtered in through the open window uncovered by curtains. The pale moon alone saw all that passed in the lighted street.

Suddenly the man braced himself for a last savage effort. Every ounce of strength was expended in one supreme moment. There was a second of tenseness that pervaded every fibre—and then the sudden, sharp rattle of linen. A hoarse shout of triumph escaped him.

He had won! The collar had torn away from the stud.

For making chocolate milkshakes, soups, sauces and frostings, it is convenient to have on hand a bottle of home-made chocolate sauce.

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Council was held yesterday afternoon. Councillor Collier presided and Councillors Vincombe, Dowden and Ryan were present.

The meeting was a short one, there being very little business to occupy the attention of the Board. The Deputy Colonial Secretary forwarded for the consideration of the Council a copy of Resolutions passed by the Nfld. Motor Association, recommending that tourists who bring their motor cars to this country for a limited period be given a rebate on the usual license fees. This matter was deferred.

S. O. Steele and Sons wrote with regard to damage done their premises through overflow of surface drain, asking what action the Council intends taking. The Engineer was asked to report, and a copy of their communication ordered to be forwarded the City Solicitor for his opinion as to Council's liability.

H. C. Jones, Sudbury Street, called attention to the need of placing a surface drain in this street, on which there are so many up-to-date dwellings, also the advisability of having it widened, as it is now only about 26 feet. The City Engineer was instructed to make inquiries and report for next meeting.

A petition was read from the residents of Quidi Vidi and Plymouth Roads, asking that the rock crusher be moved to a more suitable location as the dust and noise caused by operation of same was a great inconvenience and annoyance to them. Consideration was deferred.

The application of P. Eagan for water service to his dwelling, Cornwall Avenue was granted, provided he contributes proportion of cost for water and sewerage extension.

Complaint was made re the condition of drains, Prince of Wales St. and Franklin Avenue, and the Roads Department was instructed to see that they are given attention.

The contract for plumbing of the new city stables was awarded Messrs. Moore & Co.

The Medical Officer of Health reported thirty new cases of Scarlet Fever in the City during the past week, one of which was fatal. In the city at the present time, there are—Diphtheria, 12 cases in hospital; Scarlet Fever, 51 cases in hospital; 64 under treatment at home; Typhoid, 2 cases in hospital, 2 under treatment at home.

The City Engineer submitted report of the work done in connection with various departments during the past week. He also stated that the conduit, Windsor Lake, had been examined and some slight repairs found necessary, which were now nearing completion. The Council decided to visit the screen houses and reservoir during the coming week. The application of Mr. Geo. Jones to extend dwelling, Barter's Hill, was granted subject to the approval of the City Engineer.

The City Clerk tabled statements of Revenue and Expenditure to Oct. 31st, last.

The accounts and payrolls for the week were ordered paid.

There being no further business, the meeting adjourned.

New Orchestra

"Music hath charms" so the Poet tells us, that being so, are long the music lovers of St. John's will be regaled with a new orchestra now being promoted by a talented lady violinist, Miss Teresa Power, A.T.C.L., assisted by Mr. P. O'Grady, cornet player, and Mrs. Tremblert (formerly Miss Bogan), Pianist. The latter lady arrived a short while ago from Montreal, where she had been living up to the death of her husband. She has a host of friends in the city who praise her for the great talent she displayed in the past in music. Three other instruments will be added to the orchestra in a short while which when ready will be open for parties, etc.

An Attractive Display

Possibly no display on Water St. is more widely discussed than in the Royal Stores Showroom Department window. Featuring Stansfield's wool and silk underwear for ladies, the window has all the features of a real lady's boudoir. Handsome Parisian models attired in the undergarments display the qualities of the goods in a most effective manner. The show cards used bear such legends as "Time to put on," "Doctors recommend it," "Keep Warm," etc. Other features are the handsome furniture the windows of the room with their rose curtaining and the harmonious color scheme. We understand that at the present time throughout Canada, Stansfield's are having a window dressing competition and are offering substantial prizes for the best display of their goods.

THE INVERTED BOASTER.

"For an inexpensive little house," admitted my newly prosperous friend, as she accepted our compliments upon the lovely house she had acquired with that new prosperity, "I do think it is rather nice."

The inexpensive little house cost $30,000.

It has nine rooms and three baths. My newly prosperous friend was brought up in a house around the corner from ours, which has six rooms and a bath room, with old time plumbing.

Furthermore, not one of the friends to whom she was showing her new house lives in a home that cost more than half of her $30,000. Two of them live in rented apartments.

"An Inexpensive Little Home." All of which she knows, of course. And yet, (or should I say "therefore") she refers to her lovely home as an "inexpensive house."

She knows very well it isn't that to us. And we know very well (remembering the six room cottage on C—street) that it isn't that to her. And yet she puts up that absurd bluff.

It is an axiom of good manners that one should not boast about one's possessions. Only the very crudest people do that.

But what is this running down one's possessions to people to whom we know they must appear very grand but an inverted form of boasting?

Sometimes They Get Away With It. We have all of us met people who do it. And sometimes, if we didn't know them very well, we have been impressed by it and thought they must be used to perfectly wonderful things if those things that seem so grand to us seemed insignificant to them.

And then again, if we knew them and their beginnings we have not been so much impressed.

When you stop to analyze it, it really is frightfully rude to do this sort of thing. And it is frightfully annoying to see the way people get by with it, with never a notion that they are being anything except very impressive and high toned.

One woman I know who isn't afraid to say what she thinks has a method of dealing with these inverted boasters which scratches the surface of their complacency. I heard her do it one day to a mutual acquaintance.

A Cheap Car!

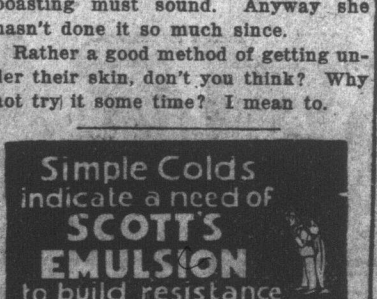

Said the mutual acquaintance: "My husband wants me to turn in my H— (naming a car that costs about $2800) and get a good car, but I really don't want to. It is running beautifully and I think it is much the best of the cheap cars, and plenty good enough to run around in the way I do."

Said my outspoken friend: "Here, what are you talking about? If you call that a cheap car what do you call mine? You know very well what I drive and you know it didn't cost half what yours did and I don't call mine a cheap car either. I call it a middle price car. Are you trying to make me feel like a piker?"

It was said with an air of rattily but it put it right up to the other woman just the same. I think she caught a glimpse of the way inverted boasting must sound. Anyway she hasn't done it so much since.

Rather a good method of getting under their skin, don't you think? Why not try it some time? I mean to.

Working People to be Good

WE NEED ORGANIZED MORALITY
P. C. THOMSON in Daily Mirror.
The forces of immorality are organized whist those of morality are not. This is the reason why the London parks are not fit for the young—or "mick-mind" people to go to. "Mick-mind" London morality is disorganized, leader to think of what it would be if it were organized!

not organized—a city where there are no drinks after eleven, no chocolate after nine, and where I feel like a gaolbird if I ask for a packet of cigarettes between the acts of a play. If we are to have more organization, I suggest that we should be careful whom we choose to carry it out. In a recently-delivered lecture, Dr. Crichton Miller said that the pettiness and meanness which could be concealed behind a prudist exterior passed all belief. That is the danger. Most so-called "nice" people are not really shocked by what they call "immorality." If they were, they would not look. What they want is a chance to interfere, to look after those who are not, in their opinion, capable of looking after themselves.

Even more unusual was the advertisement of an American who wanted to marry. "WANTED: Wife to clean and scrub, mend my socks and cook my grub. Must be handsome, bright, and gay, thirty-two if she's a day. Widow woman not deterred—one kid, maybe, none preferred. She must have some cash to spend; and intellect with learned trend. She must be music lover; fond of me and nary other. That is what my wife must be—lum-to-tum-to-deedle-dee."

Anti-Groveling Jack for Cars

A good jack for lifting an axle if a tire has to be removed or a wheel put in position is a necessity for all motor cars. With the ordinary type one has to grovel to place it in position and work it—a most irksome performance at any time. To avoid these disadvantages, a jack has been invented which is placed under the axle and worked by a long handle, the latter slanting upwards from the jack to a convenient height for the operator. The mechanism includes both rack and screw movements, the former giving instant adjustment for height before the screw is actually used to do the lifting. The jack comprises a hollow aluminium pedestal with a wide circular base. A tube, provided at the lower end with a nut to take the lifting screw, slides in the pedestal and projects at the top. The bottom end of the screw is fitted with a bevel pinion, which engages with a bevel pinion, and a ball-thrust is provided to carry the weight with the least amount of friction. Projecting through the base, the spindle of the pinion slants upwards, and is made square for taking the handle. A tube with a square socket, the upper end of the pinion-spindle, this tube being made in two lengths, with a square socket-joint for convenience in getting away, while a square at the outer end takes a crank with a hand-knob. On the pedestal above the spindle, the tubular handle is also pinned on to this projection to lift the jack into position, so that no stooping or kneeling down is required. When the jack is placed, the handle is removed to the pinion-spindle, just below the crank at the end of the tube is a loose sleeve. This is held in the left hand to steady the tube, while the crank is turned with the right. The tube inside the pedestal contains the usual sliding-bar, with a ratchet and pawl, to give adjustment of height before lifting begins. We now come to a most important feature, which does away with the need for groveling to set the ratchet-bar. The upper two inches of the bar are cut away to form a flat projection, which constitutes the head of the jack. Through this a cross-pin is fitted, that overhangs at each side. The pin engages with double hooks permanently attached to the axle near to each wheel. One part of each hook turns downwards and the other upwards, with space enough between for the pin on the jack to pass through. The hooks, which are wide and flat, have slots to take the wide end of the bar. When the jack is lifted and the head is passed into the hooks, it rests on the lower one, and the weight of the jack causes it to fall until the base rests on the ground, leaving the bar extended, while the pawl engages with the rack and prevents its return. In this way the jack adjusts itself for height. When the screw is turned through the handle and bevel-gear, the bar and the tube rise together, and the pin engages with the upper part of the hook, afterwards lifting the axle.

THE GRIEF TALKER

One trick of Hiram Hubbel's has often made me frown; he talks about his troubles as if they weighed him down. Yet he has every blessing a man should hope to see, and he should be confessing his gratitude and glee. His health is quite resplendent, his vitals working fine, and he is independent, with rubles put in brine. His crops and barns are swelling with harvest from his soil, and yet he's always telling about his corn or holl. He rides in state and glory, his car is painted blue; his credit's hunky-dory, no billies are in view. Each day the choicest victuals reward him for his toil; yet while he sits and whittles he talks about his bill. He talks about his spavin from morning until night; yet all the things worth havin' are lavished on this wight. His wife has jewels jingling upon her ample breast, his daughters fair, are mingling in every social fest. He always has been guarded from trouble and defeat, and nothing has retarded his march to Easy street. He should be blithe and cheerful, but when you seek his booth he'll hand you out an earful about an aching tooth. No anemias is he humming, no madrigal of glee, and when I see him coming I climb the nearest tree. MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR HEAD-ACHE.

HUMOURS OF MODERN ADVERTISING.
Humour enters very largely into modern advertising. For instance, the following notes appeared in an Oriental newspaper which devotes part of its space to matter in English.
"The news of English we tell the latest. Write in perfect style, and most earliest. Do a murder commit, we hear of it and tell it. Do a mighty chet die, we publish it and in borders sombre. Staff has each been collaged, and write like Rippling and the Dickens. We circle every town, and extortions not for advertisements."
Another journal published in the same part of the world printed in its advertisements columns amazing information of the activities of "Human-Bucks and Co. Merchants and Soda-water." Another advertisement read: "Mooka Sing and Co. Customers sending orders will be promptly executed."

MACDONALD—GIBB.

At 7.30 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 20th, a very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at Humberock, Mass., the contracting couple being Daniel Watts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Macdonald, Moncton, N.B., Canada; and Frances, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Gibb, formerly of St. John's, Newfoundland, but now resident in Boston.

The ceremony took place at the Humberock Inn, which was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves for the occasion and was attended by the immediate relatives and friends of the young couple.

The bride was charmingly attired in a white Georgette dress and coronet veil and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas and maidenhair fern. The bridesmaids, Miss Marion Gibb and Miss Phyllis Gibb, sisters of the bride, wore gold and jade lace dresses, with bouquets of lavender sweet peas, whilst the bridegroom's brother, Mr. Wilfred Macdonald, performed the duties of best man, and the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Tait, flower-girl. The bride was given away by her father and the nuptials were tied by Rev. Mr. Gove, of Marshfield, Mass.

Immediately after the ceremony the newly wedded couple and guests repaired to the reception room where refreshments were partaken of. The health of the bride and groom was proposed by Rev. Mr. Gove, who in a short and felicitous speech wished them every happiness and prosperity in their voyage through life, and to this toast the groom fittingly responded. After the wedding supper dancing was indulged in and a happy time was spent.

The popularity of the young couple was evidenced by the many beautiful and useful presents which the groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch bracelet and to the bridesmaids amethyst and jade gem bracelets.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald left by train for Moncton, N.B., to spend a few days with the former's parents prior to the journey to Elkhorn, Manitoba, where Mr. Macdonald holds a responsible position in the Bank of Commerce.

The many friends of the young couple join in wishing them the full measure of happiness and bliss together in their wedded life.—Moncton Transcript.

Alice Lake Picture Thrills Audience

AT THE NICKEL THEATRE LAST NIGHT.

An eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth—the old Mosaic code of ethics was called into play yesterday in the Wesley Ruggles Production "Over the Wire," in which Alice Lake stars, and thrilled the full-house audience which witnessed the first performance of this Metro picture at the Nickel Theatre last night.

But more—as they followed with bated breath the dramatic movements of the picture the audience was treated to an unexpected climax as was ever unfolded. For the action moved relentlessly towards the gaining of vengeance by a young woman whose brother's death had been brought about by a fiancé; vengeance was almost consummated when suddenly a flower of love sprung up from the bog of hate. It was a masterly situation, but then the creator of it was Arthur Somers Roche, the fictionist whose work in the magazines and between book covers ranks him among the best short story writers of the country.

As Kathleen Dexter, Alice Lake, gave a performance of surpassing skill and beauty. Her acting has finish and spontaneity; it sparkles brilliantly like diamond facets, leaving nothing to be desired. Miss Lake's supporting cast includes Albert Roscoe, George Stewart and Alan Hale.
Edward Lowe, Jr. wrote the scenario. Allan Siegler photographed the picture, and J. J. Hughes designed and executed the art settings. It is an unusual picture, well worth seeing.

Fads and Fashions.

Plaited fringe trim the overcoat of a satin frock which ties at the left side.
A coat of brown shayed lamb is lavishly bordered with long-haired brown fur.
Rings of black onyx hold the drapery on a frock of black velvet and satin.
White fox collars a suit of black, with embroidery and cutwork over white cloth.
An odd, widely winged bow is used across the back of a toque of black velvet.
Quills, feathers, embroidery and ribbons are millinery trimming notes of interest.
Grosgrain ribbon in shades of black, mauve and yellow, trim a hat of black felt.
Amber, carnelian and tortoise shell jewelry are charming worn with brown costumes.

Sale of Work and Concert.

Yesterday afternoon the annual sale of work under the auspices of the Cochran Street Church Women's Association was opened in the Lecture Room by Lady Allardyce. The room was tastefully decorated for the occasion and the different stalls were well stocked with a variety of articles. The sale which was well patronized concluded at 9.30 p.m. when the remaining goods were auctioned by Hon. S. Milley. A concert which proved very enjoyable followed. Those taking part were Messrs. F. Wylie and R. Steel, Miss Eleanor Maunder, Eva Whiteway, Sylvia Moore, Doris Withers, Readings by Misses Brown and K. Fraser; a piano solo by Miss Whiteway; an instrumental solo by Miss Amy Magruder; F. Wylie and R. Steel, Miss Eleanor Maunder, motion pictures by Mr. R. Young and Mr. Darby.

Good Health Secret of Beauty

Beauty lies in the care a woman bestows upon herself and in keeping at bay those dread ailments peculiar to her sex, which drag her down and leave telltale traces upon her countenance. Sparkling eyes, the elastic step and a clear complexion never accompany organic troubles. Distressed expressions, a sallow complexion, dark circles under the eyes, lassitude, headaches, and mental depression are the telltale symptoms of women's ailments. Women so troubled should not lose a day in taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, the most successful remedy known to overcome women's ills and restore health and beauty.

"Fair Lady" Based on Sicilian Love Plot

THRILLS, ROMANCE AND MYSTERY IN SETTING OF EXQUISITE ARTISTRY, EXCELLENTLY ACTED.

Thrills, romance and mystery in a setting of exquisite artistry; action, heart-interest and a dash of history, are the ingredients that make up the splendid offering at the Majestic Theatre this week, where Rex Beach's "Fair Lady" is holding rapt attention.

"Fair Lady" is a romance, but nevertheless a typically smashing Rex Beach story. It is an adaptation from the famous novel, "The Net," with much new material added at Mr. Beach's suggestion, and the result is a screen drama that meets every requirement of an exacting public. It is entertainment of the highest order, superbly put on in sumptuous sets and played by an exceptionally well-balanced cast.

Miss Betty Bythe is seen in the leading feminine role supported by Robert Elliott, Thurston Hall, Gladys Hulette, Florence Amer, Arnold Lucy, Macey Harlan, Walter James, Henry Leone and Editham Pinto. It is a Whitman Bennett production directed by Kenneth Webb and released by the United Artists.

The story deals with the operations of a secret society in Sicily that transfers its operations to America with headquarters in New Orleans. The leader of this band of desperadoes is known as Cardo, but who Cardo is, is not revealed until the final scenes of the production.
The Mount Cashel Band continues to delight audiences with its beautiful selections. To-night they will appear again.

Household Notes.

A roll of medium width gauze bandage is a real help in darning. Use it under darns in white undergarments and the inside of neckbands.

A piece of thick cardboard covered with oilcloth will soon become indispensable in the kitchen. Use it to protect the table from blackened pots, etc.

Clams are very attractive served in grapefruit shells from which the pulp has been removed and replaced with shaved ice. Serve with a cocktail sauce.

Grease is not so difficult to clean from the floor if ice-cold water is thrown upon it as soon as it is spilt. This hardens it and prevents it soaking into the wood.

On thin rounds of tongue place slices of tomato, top with a half of a hard-boiled egg placed cut side down, and garnish with tartare sauce. An excellent appetizer.

A little powdered pumice stone mixed with lissed oil to form a thin paste, and applied with a soft cloth, will remove the worst of the scratches from your furniture.

Fruit salad topped with a rounded stiff of whipped cream and garnished with a maraschino cherry is decorative as well as palatable. Be sure that the lettuce is crisp.

A simple but delicious luncheon consists of chicken or veal loaf, lettuce with tomato dressing, sandwiches of thinly sliced raisin bread and butter, hot tea and sponge cake. If you feel uneasy when wearing a valuable fur piece in a crowded place, sew two small safety pins on the under side and with these attach it to the front of your costume. Put patch pockets in the bloomers of your kiddies' wash dresses. Then, in case you have to mend tears you have a piece of the material which has been washed as much as the dress. Tuesday, November 13th, at 8 o'clock, Lantern Lecture, "Cambridge and the Colleges," Synod Hall. Admission 30c, including tea.—nov.11 was lying on the ground when they found him, still alive and able to recognize them, but in such an enfeebled state that all he could utter was the first syllable of one of their names.

The aperture by which the rescuers had entered was so low and small for a considerable distance that it was only by laying Brown on a board and shoving it along that he could be taken out, while some time had to pass ere he could be raised to the pit-head, as at that early hour of the morning (three or four o'clock) nobody was astir but the men who were with Brown. During the interval of waiting, the rescuers stripped off their clothes and covered Brown with them, in order to protect him from the cold. One of them had a piece of bread and butter, and with the latter moistened the rescued man's lips, which were dry and parched, while another ran off to get milk, as Brown had expressed a wish for some, and a third went for assistance. The others meanwhile took turn about lying with their backs to his to produce something like natural heat in his almost icy-cold body.

The news of Brown being found spread, and a crowd quickly gathered at the pit, and with their assistance Brown was soon comfortably laid in his own bed at home. There was then an agreeable warmth on his skin, and, although he spoke little, he was perfectly collected. His appearance was very striking; from the length and glossiness of his long black beard, and the hollowness of his eyes and their extreme brightness as if they had been lazed. After answering a few questions, he desired prayer to be offered up, and when the minister had concluded, Brown thanked him. A doctor attended him regularly, and for a day or two it seemed there was a possibility of his regaining strength, but on the 2nd of November he began to sink, and expired quietly the following evening.

An enquiry held by the Sheriff elicited some interesting details. It appeared that Brown had a lamp with him and some oil, but he was in almost total darkness all the time of his imprisonment. He had no food of any kind, and it never occurred to him to drink his oil. As long as he was able to walk, he drank of the strongly-impregnated water which ran past him, as it was from thirst he said he suffered most. For almost a fortnight he was able to walk to and fro, but after that he had not strength to reach the water. He had some idea of the flight of time from hearing the search party at work, and he—firm in the belief that they were attempting to reach him—never lost heart.

"Boys," he said to them when he was able to speak, "oh, but ye were lang in comin'." Of his thoughts and feelings he could give no account, and, owing to his enfeebled condition it was deemed unwise to trouble him with questions on the subject.

The pit in which he was immured is known as "John Brown's Pit" to this day, but it is not now worked.

Five Days in a Well.

In 1915, a man named Tarrant, working on a Sussex farm, completely disappeared, and it was thought that some sudden project had made him throw up his work and go off without drawing the wages due to him; that he had met with an accident never occurred to the farmer or any of his men, and no search was made. Five days later, however, for lack of a dog attracted attention to a disused well attached to some outlying buildings, and there, at the bottom, Tarrant was found. He had broken an arm and a leg, and was lying up to the waist in water. He was brought up alive and restored to health. "I never expected to be found," he said; "I regarded myself during those terrible days and nights as a dead man."

Entombed Alive at Sea.

The history of the sea provides some extraordinary examples of rescues when all hope seemed to be useless. The men of the Indian Chief, stranded on the Goodwin Sands, clinging perilously to a stump of mast, whilst over them raged one of the greatest storms the shoal has ever known, had given themselves up for lost. The lifeboat attempted to reach them; with longing eyes they saw it standing off and on; then darkness fell, and they thought themselves left to their fate. But after two days and nights the survivors were brought ashore to Deal. "Never before," said an eye-witness, "had I seen rescued men in such a plight. Their faces were masks of salt. It was as if the sea had given up dead men who walked."

The brig, Nerina, sixteen days from Dunkirk, turned turtle in a squall, the captain, two men, and a boy being imprisoned in the cabin. Wrenching open the trap hatch in the floor, now the ceiling, they crawled into the lazarette, and there they lived for many days, knowing that no passing ship would trouble to investigate. A wreck floating keel uppermost. A slow and agonising death seemed inevitable; yet, eight days later, the hulk was flung upon the rocks of the Scilly Islands, and, the tide receding, they were able to scramble out ashore.

They learnt later that they owed their remarkable escape to the fact that the hulk had actually been towed or many hours by a pilot cutter thinking of salvage, and having no idea that there could be any living men in her! The tow-line had broken, and the hulk had been abandoned, but the survivors of this strange catastrophe owed their lives to that few hours' towing; it brought them out of the currents which must have carried them far into the Atlantic, where they must have perished slowly in their floating tomb.

WINDSOR ESCAPES FROM MINE AND SEA.

WINDSOR
A wonderful escape of the man who is—does not establish a record in the great Lena disaster, a large number of miners were in the Courrières Pit, 13 men were rescued after 21 days, and a further 26 men after 26 days. In the course of their sufferings, the majority of them completely recovered and returned to work. In 1859, 11 miners were rescued from a pit in the district of Gard, France, after 14 days; the effects of their ordeal were such that two of them lost their reason and only one ever resumed work.

Brown's Ordeal.
There are few more pathetic incidents in the mining annals of Scotland than that which is perpetuated by the tombstone in the churchyard of the Ayrshire mining village of Bally. The stone bears this inscription:—
In memory of John Brown, collier, who was entombed in Kilgrammie Pit, by a portion of it having fallen in on Oct. 8th, 1845, and was not alive and in full possession of his faculties, but in a very exhausted state, Oct. 31st, having been three days in utter seclusion from the world, and without a particle of food. He lived for three days, having quietly expired on the morning of Nov. 3rd, aged 36 years. This is the brief record of this incident is worthy of relation. It was about five o'clock in the evening that part of the pit fell in, the crash continued for a couple of hours, thus rendering it extremely difficult to enter the pit. All the men then working there escaped, the exception of Brown, an elderly married man, who either did not hear the noise of the fall or disbelieved it until he found himself buried among the debris. On direct occasions attempts were made to extricate him, but the foul air had collected prevented their success, and at the expiration of a night the idea of his being alive scarcely entertained, even by the most optimistic. Nevertheless, all anxious to reach the spot where he had been working at the time the fall, and by the 30th of the month great progress had been made in that direction.

It was the belief that groans had been heard while they were clearing, a week on the twenty-third day, some of the working party returned, again to the pit, and, after three days' labor, were successful in finding the object of their search. Brown

Enjoyable Entertainment

AT ST. MARY'S HALL LAST NIGHT.

The pleasing operetta "A Dream of Flowers" was repeated at St. Mary's Hall last night before another large audience. The children, who performed their parts splendidly, represented Fairy Queens, Floweries, etc. The various characters were impersonated in a very clever manner, while the singing was all that could be desired. The programme rendered was as follows:—

The Fairies were Margaret Modell, E. Smith, Evelyn Carberry, Irene Williams, Susie Jones, Marjorie and Jean Nixon, Gertrude Purchase, L. Roberts and Barbara Parsons.

Obituary.

MR. JOHN WINTER, Buria.

A message was received in the city this morning by Mrs. W. S. Moulton, acquaintanting her of the death of her uncle, Mr. John Winter, who had passed away at Buria, some hours previous. The death of Mr. Winter will come as a great shock to his many friends in the city and elsewhere. He was a life long resident of Buria, and up to the time of his death held a responsible position as the Weather Bureau official for the West Coast. The deceased is a brother-in-law of Hon. R. K. Bishop, and Mrs. (Rev. Dr.) T. B. Darby, of this city.

In Memoriam.

MARIA CACCIOLA.

Second anniversary High Mass will be celebrated on Saturday morning, Nov. 10th, at 9 o'clock, at St. Francis Xavier's beautiful Church, Bar Haven, Placentia Bay, Nfld., by the Rev. Francis Arthur Cacciola, in sad and constant memory of my dearly beloved and darling mother Maria Cacciola, who departed this life Nov. 10th, 1921.

Could I forget? Oh, no, dear mother! The sweetest memories are woven around your dear sweet past. Just a thought of sweet remembrance. Just a memory fond and true; Just a token of affection And a heartache still for you. The day has come to remind us Of the day you passed away. But you can't tell how we miss you Ever since you passed away. "Loving Remembrance!"

—Rev. Father Francis and Brothers.

Girls' Friendly Society

ENTERTAINMENT AT SYNOD HALL

The members of the Girls' Friendly Society held a most enjoyable entertainment at the Synod Hall last night. A feature of the evening's programme was a short play entitled "Guilt," in which the principal characters were Mrs. H. Outebrida and Mrs. H. LeMessurier. Following the pleasing playlet, Miss Dunfield delighted her audience with a well rendered solo, while the dancing of Miss Stella Hemmens was greatly admired by all. The presence of the C.L.B. Band added greatly to the evening's success. The selections were excellent. Teas were served by the Girls of the Society before the close.

Buried Treasure

Discovered in Bay St. George.

THE LAND OF TO-MORROW.

To the Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—Since before I read Stevenson's Treasure Island I have been interested in tales of buried treasure, even when the tales were of fictitious, non-existent treasure, perhaps, therefore, I may be able to interest you and your readers in a true story of a real treasure.

What greater treasure can be unearthed anywhere than immense deposits of coal and iron. In that whole region from Campbell's Brook in the Codroy Valley, to South Branch and Robinson's, along to Coal Brook, St. George's, at Stephenville, on in a general easterly direction as far as Twyford, coal outcrops continually. It is probable that this coal bearing area is a continuance of the great North Sydney coal field. Nor is there anything remarkable in the idea of such a vast field of coal. The E. Bituminous or Appalachian coal field is 900 miles or more in length and approximately 180 miles wide. The United States mines over 300,000,000 tons of coal (bituminous) annually.

This great Newfoundland coal area is, as yet, practically unprospected. The boring and prospecting that have been undertaken give ample evidence that the coal, in vast quantities, lies below. Nothing is known, at present, as to the depth of these deposits; but it is worthy of note that the coal bearing strata in places in England and Wales are 12,000 feet thick. Therefore this extensive Newfoundland coal field may inspire us with the most ardent hopes for the future. Yet up to the present, this vast buried treasure, these millions on millions of tons of coal, lies altogether uncached, practically unthought. But a change is coming.

Last week we had with us T. J. Freeman of the St. George's Coal Fields and a distinguished party consisting of Mr. Selfridge of Boston, Sir Stopford Brunton, of Montreal, engineer and Geologist, and an explorer of one of the States of the Union. These gentlemen visited the St. George's Coal Fields property and expressed themselves as well pleased with what they saw. At St. George's photographs were taken of Turf Pt. in the east end and a site for the shipping pier was selected. St. George's will be the principal shipping point, but as it is not ice free some winters from February, a winter port, probably at Port aux Basques, or La Poffe is talked of. After a short time, when operations are in full swing, the company expect to ship a million tons of coal yearly. Operations start about the end of the year.

The past summer has brought the discovery of three great deposits of iron ore, to one, at least, of which the term inexhaustible, may, without exaggeration, be applied. It has an outcropping of several hundred feet of high per cent. ore of superior quality to the height of an ordinary building. Within close touch of the St. George's Coal Fields may be counted eight or ten large deposits of iron ore, the inexhaustible iron mines of the future. Perhaps the future may bring, not the exportation of our coal, but the turning of this bituminous coal into coke to run the blast furnaces of this Star of Ruhr of Newfoundland. The limestone for flux is in abundance at Port au Port.

American capitalists are, at the present time, examining the gypsum deposits of Flat Bay, River, Sheep Brook, and the nearby streams. The gypsum may be seen on the river banks in cliffs fifteen to fifty feet high. It is of a superior quality, being free from grit and other impurities. The importance of these deposits increases every day because of the new uses to which gypsum is being put. Reinforced with cow hair, mangled and allowed to set in sheets of requisite size and thickness, it makes a superior kind of wall board, which is used in the interior finish of public buildings, big hotels, etc. It is made into Corinthian and Ionic pillars, ornamental cornices, statuary, etc., which after they have set are washed with a gypsum finishing coat, which gives the appearance of the finest marble. It may be stained and tinted of any shade or color. It composes most of our wall finishes. Pease' great showrooms in London are decorated with gypsum figures advertising Pease's Soap. The Gypsum baby, chasing the gypsum soap in the gypsum basin is so naturally tinted and colored that the one privileged to notice it almost expects the baby's lips to say: "Good morning. Have you used Pease's Soap?" The debris left from the manufacture of gypsum is used as a fertilizer. Windsor, N.S., is a busy shipping point for gypsum. It is blasted out of open quarries near that town; it is carried by rail four or five miles, laden into barges and towed to the Hudson River to be manufactured. At Windsor there is a barrel factory in connection with the quarry. The waste material is filled into these barrels and sent all over Canada to be used as fertilizer. We may therefore expect that when the gypsum quarries of Bay St. George are in full swing, that employment will be given to a great number of workmen.

And now I might go on to mention gold. A small nugget of the pure metal was picked off the beach at Coal Brook. But as gold has at the present rather a black eye, I shall not even emphasize the fact that we have gold. I am, Mr. Editor, Yours truly, A. J. O'REILLY.

Absolutely Pure

When you speak of a toilet soap being pure, you mean that it contains nothing but just those ingredients that are absolutely essential to make good pure soap. Some soaps however are made with a desire to create a nice perfume and have a fancy appearance. Not so with Ivory, for this delightfully pure soap contains nothing but pure ingredients with no "trimmings." You will certainly appreciate just what this means the first time you use Ivory, for its fragrant, cleansing and purifying qualities will make you a life-long friend. Now at all grocery stores in three sizes.

Big Night at the Crescent To-Night

MONSTER AMATEUR CONTEST IN PREPARATION.

To-night the Crescent Theatre holds its weekly contest which, it is anticipated, will be greater than any yet held. Lots of amateurs and abundance of real good talent—something to make you laugh and entertain you. Dan Delmar who is in charge of the contest states that owing to such a large list of names received, he is compelled to limit the list to-night so as to make things snappy. Supposing you have to do without your supper do not miss this big entertainment to-night. Robert Shields will be heard in Baritone solos, together with the biggest of big pictures, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," containing the greatest living cast of screen artists headed by Blanche Sweet, John Bowers, Lon Chaney, Elmo Lincoln, and a supporting cast equally as powerful. The picture is well made in every respect and is rolling over with thrills and excitement, and of course there is also a plentiful supply of laughs. It is a duty you owe to yourself to see "Quincy Adams Sawyer," for it is doubtful if you have ever seen such a powerful picture. Only two more nights to see it at the Crescent.

GOOD EVENING!

FISHERMEN OF NEWFOUNDLAND!
 Motor Boats--The first motor boat was shown at the Paris Exhibition of 1889, being fitted with the petrol motor invented by Daimler. The Fishery Board of Scotland is demonstrating the value of the motor boat to the fishing industry; the National Lifeboat Institution is experimenting with various types of motors in connection with its boats. At the exhibitions in London and Paris in 1905 and right on to the present time, fishermen in Scotland and Newfoundland continue to give evidence of the popularity of the motor boat for fishing purposes.

ADVERTISE IN THE EVENING TELEGRAM.

WHAT DO YOU WANT?

$10.00 a week, or $12.50, or $15.00 or more--just whatever amount you need, we will pay you, every week you are ill or injured, commencing the first day of disability and only finishing when you are completely cured.

The cost is so little that any one week of disability pays you back all that you pay in for six months. For example, $25.00 per week only costs $25.00 for six months and carries $5,000 of principal sum.

Right Now, while you are well and uninjured why not ask us to completely protect you?
 We have been paying claims for 36 years.
