Manufacturers look on this allowance for the steel as generous, as owing to its high carbon content it cannot be satisfactorily reworked.

Among those who like to mingle thought with their sports a pleasant hour may be spent by transforming one word to another by the changing of a single letter at a time. For example, one of the company writes upon the board the word "beef" and says it may be changed to "pork." A second person goes to the board and by the change of one letter makes it beat, so by each one changing one letter it becomes successively Beef, beet, boat, peat, pert, port and pork. Or change nose to hand thus: Nose, hose, host, hast, hart, hurt, hunt, hint, hind, hand.

ual navigators in remote wastes of waters. He has fought with sharks. He has dived for pearls. He has fac-ed mutinics. He has talked defantly ed mutinies. He has talked defiantly to cruel skippers on such subjects as grog and grub. He knows all the tremendous jokes, and he can play all the tremendous pranks, and he is steeped in the practice and procedure of the seaman. He has risked his life to save his meters and scolded them to save his mates and scolded them severely for being so careless after wards. He knows what it is to subsist on salt pork aboard a wind-jammer and he is quite himself on an occan grey hound. He has had his terrific collisions with pirates in the Red Sea, and he understands the best mode of defeating tryannical second mates and reckless masters. The astonishing thing about Have-

The astonishing thing about Have-lock Wilson to the London Mail is his physical vigor, his verdant fresh-ness. He retains the characteristic gait of the old salt, and in a mood, and a condition for a race he can run-fast enough to overtake a boarding-house keeper. He bursts now and then into such songs as "Aye, O, roll a man down." He has the indescrib-able deference of manner—at times —for which the sailor is conspicuous -for which the sailor is conspicuous among landsmen and he can be as rude as he pleases in a crisis. He conveys no impression of complexity, either. In fact, his simplicity is won-derful not only as regards appear-ance but mentality. He is quite unconscious of his own uniqueness

The curling moustache of Have-lock Wilson, reports the London Mail, is only beginning to turn grey. Mail, is only beginning to turn grey. The nose is very English — pugna-cious, long, splendid, suggestive. The eye is a flasher. It holds as well as roams. It searches, too. It speaks several languages. The hair on his long head gives Havelock Wilson that young look—thick hair, wonderfully brown in spite of silver strands. The shoulders are bread and mobile with brown in spite of silver strands. The shoulders are broad and mobile, with a psychological content of their own, casily shrugged but not loose. The figure is lithe and alert. The face is hungry but heathily so. As for his speech, here is a sample, provided by the admiring London Mail, reporting with sympathy an address at a gath-ering of his mates to discuss the right way of dealing with the Hun: "Now, then, you fellows,' he will say, 'let me see if I can't put some ginger and fight into you. I want you all to understand, including that Shetlander over there, who thinks

They have deepened the furrows in his cheeks, have turned his hair to silver, taken all the joy of life from his eyes. He is only one of million. He is only one of millions.

The Huns cannot make the old man young again, cannot restore the boy they stole from him. But even their brutal instincts can be

'Dawn" 6.0 By DOROTHY DOUGLAS assessment and a second and a s (Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"No," Dawn said, with regret and finality equally blended with love in her voice, "I love you as much as I am capable of loving any man, but you have not the right to ask me to give up my friends. It is far better that we consider ourselves free." Harry Barrington looked back at Dawn with pain in his eyes. A pain that was perhaps mixed with a too great darkness of jealousy. He looked all that a man should be in his khaki uniform, and he was sailing away to fight for America's liberty.

He glanced about the cool, home-like studio that was Dawn's home and realized that when he was in the trenches fighting, his sweetheart would be entertaining other men-that she would be sitting down at the little table dining tete-a-tete over a Dawncooked chicken or a rarebit and giving her smiles and her rare glances to some one else.

"You know, dear," he replied, trying to persuade her to his viewpoint, "It is not only jealousy—and Lord knows I am that—but it is just common sense I'm talking. Here you will be while I am away, and though you may be collaborating on stories and working your brain to tatters with Dicky Vane or Ralph Reed, you are still Dawn Conner, and therefore will be tempting both yourself and the other fellow. You can't help flirting," he added.

Dawn blushed, but her eves were steady and enveloped Captain Barrington with a glance that should have told him that she was true as steel, with all her flirting.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but women have gone far past the time when will give up all interests and all they men friends for the one man whom they marry. My writing is as great a part of my life as marrying will be -my men friends with whom I collaborate and work in this studio are dear and sincere friends and another big part of my life and happiness. If you cannot be generous enough to let me have my life and fulfill my ambitions just as you do your own, then, dear—we must not marry." But, Dawn-I love you-I-"

"And I love you," she said unsteadily, "but have I ever asked you to stop having your lovely stenographers in your private room for dictation-" "That is in business," he put in quickly. "And so is mine business," Dawn was worth while in the literary world. If on rare occasions Dawn was brought face to face with the nature of man under trying circumstances, she blamed herself and not the man. Dawn was a flirt, and she knew there was more than a little ground for Barrington's fears. On the whole, she knew, however, that her own way of reasoning had been right-her own philosophy best suited to her success and happiness. She did not fight attractions in other men. Dawn knew that to live on the surface of love affairs tended to make her great vold less deep. She missed Barrington's love, and she never for a moment thought seriously of her many flirtations.

But in a way her big captain had been right. Life told her that she could easily have succumbed had she been less true to some nearer love. Barrington, along with other men, could perhaps not appreciate that she was not like other women in love. Dawn loved love, but she also loved her work. She was generous and bighearted and unselfish, and wanted others to be the same.

The months flew past. Dawn reached wonderful heights of fame in her writing and found a very level sense of contentment and happiness. She had many friends and many who would have been more than friends. She began to dress exquisitely. The beautiful arms and shoulders were even more lovely when set off by beautiful gowns.

Then suddenly Dawn knew that Captain Barrington had been brought back home wounded—wounded to the point of being on that terrible precipice that rears itself between life and death.

She knew, also, that a considerable amount of skin-grafting was all that might save his life. It was no time before Dawn had made her way de terminedly to the surgeon in charge of Barrington's case.

"And he must never know," she insisted, after having pleaded successfully with the surgeon. The blood test had been perfect. Dawn was permitted to give many, many square inches of skin from her wonderful arms and shoulders that Barrington might live.

The operation was successful. Barrington, being totally unconscious, knew not that Dawn's skin had been grafted on his frightful wounds. Dawn's courage had been marvelous and her spirit felt greatly rejoiced She had done a small bit in the great fight.

No one in her big circle of friends knew why Dawn stopped wearing the lovely gowns that revealed her satiny arms, and no one knew that Capt. Harry Barrington's recovery was entirely due to the skin taken from those same arms.

I saw a specialist, who carefully examined me and gave me several tonics to take, which did not help me. Thenhe told me I must undergo an operation. This, I refused to permit.

I heard about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the wonderful results it was giving because this medicine is made from fruit juices, so decided to try it.

Telegrapher's Mistake Resulted In Practical Joke.

It was at Krasniarsk that we barely missed a good joke on our Red Guard friends. They had re-ceive at elegram to prepare to re-ceive sixty barani, which were to ar-rive on the train that day. Now, barani means "sheep," so the Red Guards made ready wagons and an abundance of hay and feed for the welcome animals. Instead of sheep, however, there stepped off the train sixty aristocratic nobles, heaving guarded. They were being sent into exile from the northwest province of Russia. The telegraph operator had made the mistake of reporting barani instead of baroni. But it made good were not working with me, I should still expect to be here and entertaining them in my studio. I want to be trusted by the man who loves me sufficiently to let me lead my life accord-ing to my own nature." She very gently slipped the ring from her en-gagement finger. "I am firm in my philosophy in love and marriage," she said with a swift, if unsteady, little laugh.

Barrington gazed long and earnestly at Dawn as he took the ring from her extended hand. Her beautiful satiny arm was as white as the lilies and her shoulders molded for the sheer heauty of art.

Barrington took her in his arms. "You don't love me, Dawn," he told her sadly; "you are perhaps not capa-ble of loving."

"I can't be the slave of love, if that is what you mean," Dawn told him, and she put her lovely arms up about his neck and held him close to her. "Please try to remember, dear, that I love you more than any other woman ever will, but my men friends would be a constant source of unhappiness to you, and in the end to me." "I am sorry I have disappointed you, Dawn. Life would have been a very beautiful experience with you at my side. There will never be another woman either in my heart or at my hearthstone."

When he had gone Dawn gave way to tears, but after that she braced up, began to readjust her life and tried not to think of the void that Barrington's going had left. She was neither the clinging vine variety of womanhood nor yet the independent, masculine type. Dawn was merely a good specimen of feminine beauty and brains combined.-She loved Captain Barrington as a weaker nature could never hope to love There were both depth and breadth to her affection and complete trust. Dawn continued her writing and she made no change in her manner of living. When Dicky Vane came up and their work carried them into the noon or evening hours, Dawn's chafing dish was brought out and savory meals prepared. Then the typewriter clicked while rabbit stewed. Dawn and her given for him. Dawn, of course, was there, and her eyes were steady and held the old light in them when she and Barrington again clasped hands. "Dawn, Dawn," was all Barrington said. His eyes told her that life had meant nothing to him without her and finally his lips said that he had been wrong, all wrong in demanding so much of her.

Dawn's smile was radiant. She had won the kind of love she had always dreamed of and she could look Barrington squarely in the eyes and tell him she had never wavered from his love.

Back in the studio after the dinner, Barrington took Dawn swiftly into his arms. Afterward, when a suggestion of calm reached him, Barrington trailed his fingers down over Dawn's arm.

"Why are my satiny, precious arms hidden by this chiffony thing? And why are Dawn Conner's shoulders so modestly under cover?"

Dawn shrank and the color stained cheeks. Barrington had never seen her shrink from his touch.

"It's just a little scar or two," she said swiftly; "they will all vanish some day."

Barrington looked hard at her. Love's eyes are overkeen and love's brain intuitive. Her sleeve was swift-ly rolled back and Barrington's heart thumped madly. He trembled with her in his arms as he had not trembled when the great shell sprang at him on the battlefield.

"But I couldn't have any other per son's skin on your arms," she said finally with a little trembling laugh. "It would have worried me-all the time."

"Dawn-my own wonderful Dawn," was all Barrington said.

I knew him to be a shrewd, pr. sperous peas-"Now, Izenkin," I said, after greet-ings were over, "you're a good Bolshevik, or Communist-pardon me! -so tell me about the reforms you're putting through here in Siberia."

He comically winked at me with both eye.

"Oh, Gospodin Atkinson, you know very well why I pretend to be Bol-shevik—because it isn't safe to be anything else. Most of us here in Siberia are descended from political exiles, and we've always tried to keep up our education a little and be exiles, and we've always tried to keep up our education a little and be worthy of our ancestors' fight for liberty. And now it seems as if everything had gone to pieces. "My people tell me that even when Kerensky was in power a lot of low toughs from the Petrograd factories, to say nothing of Sibertan convtcts, to resetuing pay from somebody Deserting soldiers were coming home, so they repeated to our home folk the lies we all used to hear from Germany and Lie Bolsheviki, all about America and Japan stealing eastern Siberia, and about the 'de-liverers, Lenine and Trotzky,' who were going to keep us from becoming slaves to foreigners.

ing slaves to foreigners. "Our people didn't believe these stories, nor did they like the way the provocators were acting; so they de-cided that they'd set up a republic of their own, with the capital near here, as Omsk or Tomsk. "You know the rest," he contin-ued, bitterly. "Trotzky, while he was talking intermologialize and the talking internationalism and the rights of free peoples, sent cannon and guns and ammunition, and a what could unarmed Siberia do? Every city fought to the last, but it had to end sometime. Thousands of our soldiers turned traitor and joined the invaders, getting good money for it. Of course, the criminal elements Were happy. Some of the women be-lieved the stories of the deserters and thought it was a great battle for their freedom. But most of them are just waiting, like the men, for a chance to throw off the despicable rule of these tyrants!"

The five horses that were tied beside us were borses that were tied beside us were blown to pieces and our clothes were scattered all over. We must have both been knocked silly by the concussion, because when one of the sergeants came running over we were both claiming the only pair of breeches we could find and were crying to beat the band. When I came to we had them nearly torn in two, as neither one of us would let go. All this time the bombs were falling in great shape, but we didn't seem to have sense enough to realize it." . . . "When our adjutant was killed I was leaning against him, pointing out German positions on my map, when a shell struck right at my feet, blowing us both flat. She ate egg salad and milk for luncheon, went to bed early and spent her evenings "at home." She didn't add that those evenings were sometimes spent with her tired little body resting on the soft upholstery of the long chair in her own little bed room reading some one of her favorite Spanish or Italian authors that she had learned to admire in college.

The next letter expressed approval of the young boy's steady habits, but he reproved the boy for not going to night school, and ended by telling him that he would give a prize of $50that he always offered messengers in the concern, but had never been wonif he would devote himself so earnestly to the study of Spanish that within six months he could command a slight reading knowledge of that language He himself, he said, had been handicapped because as a boy he had not mastered a foreign language. It was only recently, when his time for such study was limited, that he had taken up Spanish. It was the great language for business men of the future, etc., etc.

Alison really ought to have been more cautious, but the very evening after receiving this letter she wrote back a long and fluent letter in her best Spanish, explaining to Mr. Thorne that, though she did not go to night school, she had mastered Spanish the previous winter and spent much time reading it. She declined the prize, however, as she had studied it without knowledge that such a prize existed.

Then came the letter that caused consternation. Mr. Thorne wrote offering Alec a position in the Chicago office as second correspondent in the Spanish department. They were getg lots of orders from South Amer ica, he explained, and he really needed him. His wage would be more than doubled, and his traveling expenses to Chicago would be paid. Alison was at first confused and re-pentant. She felt that she ought not to have consented to the office manager's deception. But then she took a different attitude toward the matter. Financial conditions in the Preston family had not been all that they might have been for the past year and it had become apparent that another year at college would be impossible for Alison at the present time. She had about decided to spend the following autumn and winter working. And here was a chance to earn $25 a week. She wrote back to Mr. Thorpe accepting the position, confessing at the same time her sex, did not wait for an answer but, packing her little traveling box and gaining a rather reluctant consent from her parents, started forth to take her new job. She could live on $10 a week, she fig-ured, especially if she continued to dress in uniform, and the other $15 she could save to pay her next year's expenses in college. The office manager in the New York office when he heard of the step she had taken, predicted a stormy reception for Alison. He felt that he knew just how Thorne would snub her. But the storm and the snub were not forth-coming. Thorne told her that at first he had not known, then he chanced to see the New York paper that had the office manager's advertisement for girl messengers, and, beside, he suspected from the egg-salad luncheon and the hand writing that she was a girl. But it made no difference, he assured her. He was a thorough-going feminist, if that meant entire approval of giving girls an equal chance with boys when they proved themselves capable of grasping it. And this girl had proved herself more promising than any of the messenger boys that had ever drifted into the employ of the concern. Then one day Thorne called Alison into his office and as she came toward him in her trim little khaki suit he m / held out both his hands and took hers

Alison did not draw back, but stood looking down at their joined hands with a puzzled smile on her face. "I want you here, Alec," he had always retained the first name by which he had thought of her-"I want you in the office, but more than all I want you in my heart. I want you to make a home for me. Is it so necessary to finish out that college course of yours?"

"There is always one and only one possible event that will make a college girl give up her course," said "And that?"

"When the man in all the world she loves asks her to be his wife."

"Does that mean you have decided to finish?" asked Thorne relaxing his hold on Alison's hands. But he tightened it again when she told him that it didn't Fumigation on Mexican Border. The latest disinfection project which has ever been undertaken in this country, and probably the largest in the world, was recently begun by the United States department of agriculture along the Mexican border. Five fumigation houses are to be erected at a cost approximately of $50,000 for the disinfection of freight cars, motor trucks and wagons entering the United States from Mexico loaded with products that might introduce insect enemies, especially the pink bollworm of cotton. The largest house will accommodate fifteen freight cars. Each house will be equipped with apparatus and plant for the generation and distribution of hydrocyanic-acid gas.

"Why, certainly," faltered Alison. "Only, won't he find out?"

"He won't be back for months, and you say you can't stay later than the middle of September. You'll escape him completely. You see, we did our best to get boys, but we couldn't get any. He'd say we hadn't tried hard enough. And, by the way, don't say anything in that report about being in college. It might interest him too much and then he'd write to^{*} you and the cat would be out of the bag."

So Alison reported the next day for work and, provided with her pigskin wallet that swung easily over her left shoulder and rested on her right hip, she started out on the rounds of the day, carrying stocks and bonds about to various offices, reporting at the bank and back to the office of Brown & Brown. If she attracted any attention it was because she was so much better dressed for her work than the other girls who were beginning to take the places of messengers and errand boys in the downtown section. ' She wore neatly polished shoes that had served for country hikes the previous winter in college. Her suit was plain and of khaki-such as had been chosen by well-to-do college chums of hers who had "gone in" for motor messenger service in the vacation. The coat collar was neatly topped by a man's soft pique collar and a dark blue four-in-hand tie and a banded sailor of brown completed the equipment.

homes here and there in village and countryside in which this system of lightning has been in use for many years. Many improvements have been made in the mechanism of the plant, so that now this system is considered to be absolutely safe and reliable if it receives reasonable care and attention. The cost, of course, is rather more since the war, but even at the present price it is an investment that will return high dividends, probably not always directly in dollars and cents, but in better health, more comfort, less labor and genuine satisfaction for those living in the home, because acetylene gas in burning produces less heat, consumes less oxygen and forms less carbon dioxide than kerosene, for example, and makes a far more brilliant light than even electricity, and it is easier on the eyes. It may also be used for cooking in the house and it is also well adapted for street lighting of villages and small towns.

The accetylene lighting plant con-sists of a gas generator, gas service piping, and gas jets or chandeliers. The generators vary in size accord-ing to amount of gas required, one for the home being, of course, much employ than their required for a large smaller than that required for a large institution or village. The chief parts of the generator are: Water chamber, carbide holder, gas holder, gas filter, gas washer, gas intake pipe, feed pipe, safety vent, sludge agitator and automatic carbide feeder device. The generator for a home requires only a few square feet of space, as it is very compactly con-structed. It is usually placed in the basement, and it is very important that it be kept safe from frost.

The operation of the plant is as follows: The chemical substance used for making the gas is calcium car-bide, the same material that is used in bicycle lamps, for instance. Auto-matically this chemical is fed into the water chamber as fast as the gas is used in lights. In contact with the water it forms, a gas known as ace-tylene gas, which collects in the gas holder from which is passes through small iron pipes to the lights. In the

FARMING AMONG INDIANS.

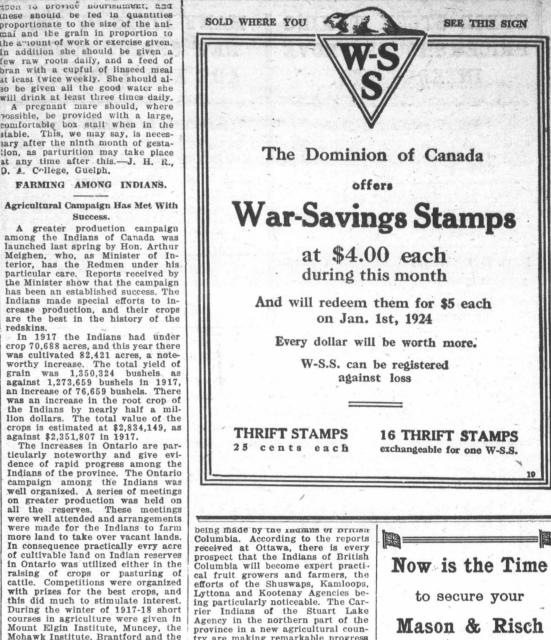

Agricultural Campaign Has Met With Success

Reports received by the Minister show that the campaign has been an established success. The has been an established success. The total yield of grain was 1,350,324 bushels as against 1,273,659 bushels in 1917, an increase of 76,659 bushels. There was an increase in the root crop of the Indians by nearly half a mil-lion dollars. The total value of the crops is estimated at $2,834,149, as against $2,351,807 in 1917. The increases in Ontario are par-ticularly noteworthy and give evi-dence of rapid progress among the Indians of the province. The Ontario campaign among the Indians was well organized. A series of meetings on greater production was held on all the reserves. These meetings were well attended and arrangements ware mede for the Indians to form were well attended and arrangements were made for the Indians to farm more land to take over vacant lands. In consequence practically evry acre of cultivable land on Indian reserves in Ontario was utilized either in the raising of crops or pasturing of cattle. Competitions were organized with prizes for the best errors and with prizes for the best crops, and this did much to stimulate interest. During the winter of 1917-18 short courses in agriculture were given in Mount Eigin Institute, Muncey, the Mohawk Institute, Brantford and the Shingwauk House, Sault Ste. Marie. These courses consisted of lectures and the stock with demonstrations were a live stock with demonstrations were also given. At the close of each course, examinations were held and prizes given to those obtaining the highest standing. The reports show that the Indians at Deseronto, Mun-cey and Sarnia had particularly fine crops — as good as any in the pro-vince vince.

Winter Care of Pregnant Mares.

Those who have had experience in horse breeding have noticed that a considerable percentage of the spring colts, especially those born before the mares are on pasture, are weakly, often not able to stand, and some times without sufficient ambition to nurse when held up and the teat in-troduced into the mouth. It will also be observed that foals of this description are usually those of dams that have been pampered during the winter months—those that have been well fed, and kept in the stable most of the time without exercise. The pregnant mare should be well

The pregnant mare should be well fed and given regular exercise or light work. The idea that she should not be well fed is not uncommon. The foetus is daily increasing in size. This growth does not take place without nutriment. The nutriment must be supplied by the blood of the dam and as nutriment is not a normust be supplied by the blood of the dam, and, as nutriment is not a nor-mal product of the blood, but is sup-plied by the food the animal eats, we can readily see that the pregnant animal has not only her own tissues to nourish, but also those of a grow-ing foetus, which, in the latter months of gestation is no small mat-ter.
