

CIHM/ICMH
Microfiche Series.

CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1984

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur
- Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
- Covers restored and/or laminated/Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
- Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque
- Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
- Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/ Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
- Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
- Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents
- Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge intérieure
- Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.
- Additional comments:/
Commentaires supplémentaires:

- Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur
- Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées
- Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
- Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
- Pages detached/Pages détachées
- Showthrough/Transparence
- Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression
- Includes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
- Only edition available/
Seule édition disponible
- Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/
Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure, etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible.

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	12X	14X	16X	18X	20X	22X	24X	26X	28X	30X	32X
						✓

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Seminary of Quebec Library

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Séminaire de Québec Bibliothèque

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

errata to pelure, on à

32X

364. Enseigne Lang. franc. N^o 3

FRENCH
WITHOUT A MASTER.

A COURSE OF LESSONS
IN THE

FRENCH LANGUAGE.

FIRST CANADIAN EDITION.

Montreal:
JOHN LOVELL, PRINTER AND PUBLISHER, ST. NICHOLAS STREET; Toronto:
WM. C. F. CAVERHILL, BOOKSELLER AND STATIONER, 71 YONGE STREET; AND FOR SALE AT THE BOOK STORE,
1859.

Price 25 Cents.

FIR

JOE

W

A COURSE OF LESSONS
IN THE
FRENCH LANGUAGE, ON THE ROBERTSONIAN METHOD;

INTENDED FOR THE USE OF PERSONS STUDYING THE LANGUAGE WITHOUT A TEACHER.

BY A. H. MONTEITH, ESQ.,
HON. MEMB. OF THE W. L. C.

FIRST CANADIAN, FROM THE NINETEENTH AMERICAN, AND EIGHTH BRUSSELS EDITION.

Montreal:
JOHN LOVELL, PRINTER AND PUBLISHER, ST. NICHOLAS STREET; Toronto:
WM. C. F. CAVERHILL, BOOKSELLER AND STATIONER, 87 YONGE STREET.
1859.

PREFACE.

THE object of the present course of lessons is to give persons disposed to study the French language without the aid of a teacher, some directions for their guidance, and to furnish them with a model whereon their studies may be advantageously prosecuted.

In order the more perfectly to supply the part of a teacher, a comprehensive, and at the same time, practical view of pronunciation has been given, together with such elucidations of the sounds peculiarly French as will enable the learner to enunciate them with a sufficient degree of accuracy.

The prevalent notion that it is impossible to acquire French without a teacher, appears to have arisen from the lugubrious attempts of grammarians who have undertaken to explain the pronunciation of the language. No human intellect could possibly digest, and bring to bear on the words of the language, the pages of unintelligible rules and ill-organized observations they have amassed with this view. In the present course of lessons this prolixity has been carefully avoided; and while no useless detail has been introduced, every essential point is fully explained, and brought prominently before the observation of the learner. French words being written in most cases exactly as they should be pronounced, there is nothing to prevent the acquisition of their pronunciation by theory; and the generality of persons who study the language, by relying upon the ear, that deceives them at every step, and by losing sight of the theory, neglect the only certain means whereby they can acquire a really good pronunciation.

A great many otherwise intelligent persons run away with the idea that French may be acquired by going to France. This is an excessively vulgar notion, and means that the language may be acquired by intuition, or by some other magical process. Whether in France or England, persons of mature years will not acquire the language thoroughly without a diligent and assiduous study of its principles. Hundreds of pounds have been expended by Englishmen, both in this country and in France, with a view to acquire French, without having attained the desired object. All the wealth of the Indies, and all the teachers in Christendom, will not suffice for the purpose, where diligence or intelligence is wanting on the part of the learner himself. On the other hand, any Englishman of ordinary capacity, whether in his own country or in France, whether with or without a teacher, if he set his mind earnestly to the subject, may, in the course of twelve or eighteen months, become perfectly conversant with the language.

The present short course of lessons, besides containing a full exposé of the pronunciation, comprises an explanation of the chief difficulties the learner has to encounter; and will enable the diligent student, without the aid of any kind of oral instruction whatever, to see his way clearly into the materiel of the language.

Th
" N d'e un

I cia eac to t in a abl
wit not step poi exh
T
as a is r et ai

qu
kwe

P'in
in-t

* B refer

THE FRENCH LANGUAGE.

LESSON FIRST.

READING.

Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor dans leur chemin, et dirent, "Nous avons faim, qu'un de nous aille acheter de quoi manger;" un d'eux se détacha et alla dans l'intention de leur apporter de quoi faire un repas.

Before the learner can read the above, he must first be taught the pronunciation of the words and their meaning. We shall therefore first place under each word such a combination of letters as may convey a notion of its sound to the English student. Afterward we shall exhibit the meaning of each word in a literal translation of the entire passage. This done, the learner will be able to translate into English and to pronounce the text of the lesson, if not with absolute accuracy, at least with a sufficiently close approximation. It is not indeed to be expected that the learner should be altogether perfect the first step he makes in a language. A portion of each lesson will be reserved to point out the true pronunciation of such French sounds as can not be exactly exhibited by a combination of letters.

The following is a repetition of our text with the pronunciation of the words, as also their euphonic connexion one with another, according as the language is read and spoken by a well-educated native of Paris.

Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor dans leur chemin, Trwa wa-ce-a-zhair troo-vair-t_{un}* trai-zor dan lâir she-min, et dirent, "Nous avons faim, qu'un de nous aille acheter de ai deer, Noo-z_{av-on} fin, kun_d noo-z_{ah-ye} ash-tai_d quoi manger;" un d'eux se détacha et alla dans kwa man-shay un d_{âi} s day-tash-a ai al-la dan l'intention de leur apporter de quoi faire un repas.
in-ten-see-on_d lâir ap-por-tai_d kwa fair un re-pa.

* For the pronunciation of the combinations an, en, in, on, and un, marked in italics, we refer the student to the article Pronunciation, page 11.

In order to read the above as it ought to be, the learner should deal with the verbal pronunciation we have given just as if the combinations of letters that represent the French sounds were so many English words. There are no unheard-of sounds in French that require the features to be distorted in enunciating them. The learner must avoid all straining, all effort, if he desires to speak French correctly.

Before leaving this part of the subject, we may observe, that a little attention to the pronunciation now will be worth more than a hundred times the amount of labor afterward; the same words will occur over and over again throughout this and the lessons that are to follow, so that a correct pronunciation at the outset will be of the greatest utility.

The sign \smile we have used, indicates that the words or letters it joins are to be pronounced as one word, and the sign $-$ over the ai signifies that these letters should be pronounced with a more open sound than usual.

TRANSLATION.

Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor dans leur chemin, et Three travellers found a treasure in their road, and dirent, "Nous avons faim, qu'un de nous aille said, "We have hunger, that one of us may go (let one of us go) acheter de quoi manger;" un d'eux se détacha to buy of what (whereof) to eat;" one of them himself detached et alla dans l'intention de leur apporter de quoi and went in the intention of to them to bring of what (whereof) faire un repas.
 to make a repast.

Aided by the above translation, the student may read into good English the text itself. And now that the meaning of the words, as well as their pronunciation, are understood, the learner should accustom himself to reading the French aloud. This exercise will familiarize the ear with a correct enunciation of the words, and serve to impress them more firmly on the memory.

VOCABULARY.

As it is essential to the march of our method that the learner should be perfectly familiar with every French word introduced into a lesson, both as regards its general meaning and precise logical value, we shall range all the words with their various translations in separate columns, so that he may be enabled to test his proficiency in this particular. This may be done advantageously in the following manner: cover over with a card the English column, and translate each French word aloud; verifying this translation by removing the card from the translation given of it. After all the French words have been turned into English in this way, cover over the French column of words, and translate in the same manner the English words into French. This exercise should be repeated until all the English words can be rendered into French, and the French words into English, with perfect facility.

Trois	three	de.....	of
voyageurs	travellers	aille.....	may go trouvèrent	found	acheter.....	to buy un	{ a	quol.....	what
	{ one	manger.....	to eat
trésor	treasure	eux	them
dans.....	in	se	{ himself
leur.....	{ their		{ themselves
	{ to them	détacha.....	detached chemin.....	road	alla.....	went et	and	la	the dirent	said	intention	intention nous.....	{ we	apporter	to bring { us	faire.....	{ to make avons	have		{ to do
faim.....	hunger	repas.....	repast que	{ that { what

It will be observed that some of the French words have two significations, as in the case of the word leur, meaning in one case their, and in another, them. The reason of this will be explained under the head CONSTRUCTION.

PHRASES.

Not only must the learner who desires to profit by our lessons, make himself familiar with each word in a sentence, but he must also observe carefully how words are made up into sentences, and the difference between the French and English manner of constructing phrases. All the points in which the French construction differs from the English, must be sedulously noted and stored up in the memory. To assist the learner in doing this, we shall now arrange the sentences of the lesson, with their English equivalents, in opposite columns, so that the student may subject himself to a self-examination, in the same manner as in the case of the previous exercise.

Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor	Three travellers found a treasure
Et dirent	And said
Nous avons faim.....	We are hungry
Qu'un de nous aille.....	{ Let one of us go
	{ One of us must go
Acheter.....	And buy
	{ Whereof { Wherewithal
De quoi.....	{ The wherewith { Something Manger.....	To eat
Un d'eux	One of them
Se détacha.....	Departed
Et alla	And went
Dans l'intention.....	In the intention
De leur apporter.....	Of bringing to them
De quoi faire.....	Wherewith to make
Un repas.....	A meal

It will be observed, that the phrases as well as the words have occasionally two translations in English; qu'un de nous aille, for instance, is rendered in English by one of us must go, as well as let one of us go. It will be observed, at the same time, that these English expressions are as nearly as possible equivalent in meaning.

CONVERSATION.

One of the original features in the present course of lessons, and certainly not one of the least utility, is that of introducing in the first lesson an exercise in conversation, on the subject-matter of the lesson, and in the words of which it consists. Facility in conversation is the object sought by every student of French; but it is not to be attained by the usual mode of instruction. In this particular our first lesson will place the learner on a par with the student who has obtained his degrees at the University of Oxford or Cambridge, where the most able masters may be supposed to preside.

In order to converse in French, it will be necessary to become familiar with the following words used in asking questions:—

Où	where	pronounced	like oo in good .
Quand	when	"	kang .
Qui	who	"	kee .
Que	what	"	ki .	} giving the letters the sound they have in the English word kill .
Ils	they	"	eel .
Il	he	"	eel .
Pour	for	"	poor .	} giving the o's the sound they have in the word good .
Le	the before words in the singular pronounced like the letter l .
Les	the before words in the plural pronounced like le in the word let .
Oui	yes	pronounced	we .
Non	no	"	nong .
Monsieur	sir	"	mos-yā .*

The pronunciation and meaning of all the other words introduced into the conversation have been already given. If then the previous exercises have been carefully gone over, there can be no difficulty with this. The learner should pronounce each question aloud, and proceed with the answers in the same manner as with the translation of the words and sentences.

Que trouvèrent les trois voyageurs ?	Un trésor.
Les trois voyageurs trouvèrent-ils un trésor ?.....	Oui, Monsieur.
Où ?.....	Dans leur chemin.
Trouvèrent-ils de quoi manger?.....	Non, Monsieur.
Que dirent-ils ?	Ils dirent, " Nous avons faim."
Quand ?.....	Quand ils trouvèrent un trésor.
Dirent-ils, " Nous avons de quoi manger" ?	Non, Monsieur.
Dirent-ils, " Nous avons de quoi faire un repas" ?	Non, Monsieur.
Dirent-ils, " Qu'un de nous aille acheter de quoi manger" ?	Oui, Monsieur.

* We are always disposed to laugh when we hear an Englishman pronounce the word "Monsieur," he generally makes such a mess of it. It seems impossible to teach this sound by the ear; not two, in twenty Englishmen, who have been taught the language by a master, pronounce it correctly, and yet there is no French sound more easily delected to the eye. We have heard persons who had been one, two, nay three years under tutelage, pronounce the word as if written moo-soo; now nothing could be more grating to the ear of a well-educated Frenchman than to hear himself addressed by such a barbarism as moo-soo. The word monsieur is pronounced as if written mosyai, and the plural messieurs as if written mesyai. Could anything be plainer than this?

Quand dirent-ils, " Nous avons faim " ?	Quand ils trouvèrent le trésor.
Où dirent-ils, " Qu'un de nous aille acheter de quoi manger " ?	Dans leur chemin.
Qui se détacha ?	Un d'eux.
Se détacha-t-il ?	Oui, Monsieur.
Quand ?	Quand les voyageurs dirent, " Nous avons faim."
Pourquoi se détacha-t-il ?	Pour acheter de quoi manger.
Où alla-t-il ?	Il alla leur acheter de quoi faire un repas.
Alla-t-il dans l'intention d'apporter de quoi faire un repas ?	Oui, Monsieur.
Quand ?	Quand il se détacha.
Que dirent les trois voyageurs, quand ils trouvèrent un trésor ?	Qu'un de nous aille acheter de quoi faire un repas
Quand les trois voyageurs dirent " Nous avons faim," que trouvèrent-ils ?	Un trésor.
Quand les trois voyageurs trouvèrent-ils un trésor ?	Quand ils dirent " Nous avons faim."

CONSTRUCTION.

We shall now point out such peculiarities in the structure of the passage we have given, as may serve to illustrate generally the construction of the language.

I.

Que trouvèrent les trois voyageurs ?	What found the three travellers ?
Quand trouvèrent-ils le trésor ?	When found they the treasure ?
Dans l'intention, for dans la intention.	In the intention.

It will be observed by these phrases, that the French word equivalent to the English article the has three forms, viz: le, la, and les. The French article is disposed in the following manner :—

le	is used before a noun in the masculine gender.
la	“ “ “ feminine gender.
les	“ “ “ plural number of both genders.

In English, the word the is invariable ; whether it comes before a masculine, a feminine, or a plural noun, it is always the same. The English say, for instance, the man, the woman, and the women ; but a different form of the article would be employed in French under these three circumstances.

We may observe here, that nouns in English are said to be of three genders. The word man is said to be of the masculine gender ; the word woman is said to be of the feminine gender ; and the word treasure is said to be in the neuter or no gender. This is a natural division, but somehow or other it does not happen to be a grammatical one. In French there is no such thing as a neuter gender : all the nouns of the language must either be masculine or feminine ; the word trésor, for instance, is said to be masculine, and the word intention is said to be feminine. As a different form of the article must be used in each of these cases, it becomes a matter of some moment to know to which of the two genders any particular word may belong ; we shall therefore give rules that will enable the learner to distinguish the gender of nouns when they become necessary. In the meantime, the gender of the words in the lesson must be judged by the form of the article that exists before them ; thus trésor will be recognized as masculine, since le stands before it. The learner, then, must take care always to render "the treasure" into French, by le trésor: it would be a blunder to write or pronounce la trésor. There is no difficulty about words in the plural, the same form of the article being always before them; thus we say les intentions and les voyageurs, although, as we have seen, the former of these words is feminine, and the latter masculine.

II.

Un d'eux..... One of them.
 Dans l'intention..... In the intention.
 Qu'un de nous aille..... Let one of us go.

When the words le or la, the, que, that, or de, of, come before another word beginning with a vowel, the u of the one and the e's of the others are invariably cut off. This is done in order to avoid the too-frequent recurrence of two vowels, these little words being very much used in French. The student, therefore, in writing, must take care when he has the two words de and eux, for example, coming together, to cut off the e of the de, and be careful at the same time to supply its place with an apostrophe, as in the sentences given above.

III.

Qu'un de nous aille } Let one of us go.
 That one of us may go }

The above phrase occurring in our text, exhibits a very common mode of expression. The sentence "qu'un de nous aille" is incomplete; the words "il faut," it is necessary, being understood. The phrase entire would be "il faut qu'un de nous aille," it is necessary that one of us go, or one of us must go. It is however the defective form of the phrase, the form which appears in our text, that is generally employed, and consequently that is the form the student ought to imitate when he has a similar expression to turn into French. Being imperfect, the phrase, when translated literally into English, does not exhibit the sense it is meant to convey. The best way to deal with such a phrase, is to consider it entire, without regarding individually the words of which it is composed, and look upon it as equivalent to a certain other phrase in English;—deal with it, in short, in the same manner as if it were a single word. We cannot approve of the manner adopted in a grammar of some note,* of explaining this difficulty by saying that "que" supplies an ellipsis, and ergo that que is equal to let. Such a solution of the difficulty is likely to beget a notion in the mind of the learner that que in French has the signification of the English word let, while these two words have not, nor can they logically have, any meaning in common.

A similar kind of construction to that under consideration occurs in the Latin language; we find frequently the Roman writers employing the subjunctive as an imperative, for instance in the well-known verse of Virgil—

"—— illâ se jactet in anâ Æolus, et clauso ventorum carcere regnet."

"Qu' Eole se contente de régner sur ses rochers, et d'exercer son pouvoir dans ses sombres cachots."

* Grammar of the French Language, by J. C. Delille.

"Let Æolus vaunt himself in his own hall, and let him reign in the closed prison of the winds."

Here we have a similar construction in Latin to that of "qu'un de nous aille" in French; but think of a "tyro" translating the Latin relative qui by let! We shall have occasion to revert to the logic of the construction of "qu'un de nous aille" in a future lesson. In the meantime it will be sufficient for the guidance of the student to say, that when he has an English phrase to translate beginning with let, implying a command, he must set out in French with the word que. Two or three phrases of this kind will be introduced into the exercise on composition, in order to habituate the learner to this mode of expression.

IV.

Que trouvèrent les trois voyageurs? } What found the three travellers? }	What did the three travellers find?
Que dirent-ils? } What said they? }	What did they say?
Dirent-ils? } Said they? }	Did they say?

In English there are two ways of asking a question,—with the auxiliary word did, or without it: a question can either be put in the form, "Did they say so and so?" or, "Said they so and so?" In French there is no such word as did that can be made use of in this way; the French therefore cannot put a question in the first of these forms, and consequently are obliged to employ the second. In framing a question, the student must therefore bear in mind that the word dit has no equivalent in French; he must bear in mind that there are two manners of asking a question in English, one of which accords with the French idiom and may be translated literally, but that the other cannot be rendered word for word into French. It will be observed that in English the word did is merely a sign of the past time, and may be dispensed with by using a past tense of the verb itself. In the phrases, "Did the travellers find a treasure?" and "Found the travellers a treasure?" the words "did find" in the one, and the word "found" in the other, are precisely equivalent.

Some English interrogative phrases containing the word did, will be introduced into the exercises under the head of COMPOSITION. To translate these correctly into French, the learner must, as we have said, bear in mind that the question did he go? can be put in a shape without the did, as, went he? and that this last form of a question alone can be rendered literally into French.

V.

Les voyageurs trouvèrent-ils un } The travellers found they a } trésor? } treasure? }	Found the travellers a treasure?
Les voyageurs dirent-ils, "Nous } The travellers said they , "We } avons un trésor?" } have a treasure?" }	Said the travellers, "We have a treasure"?

Quand les voyageurs trouvèrent-ils	}	When found the travellers a treasure?
When the travellers found they un tresor?
a treasure?

We have said, last section, that the English have two ways of asking a question,—one with the word did, as “Did three travellers find a treasure?” and another without this auxiliary, as “Found three travellers a treasure?” We also said that the first of these forms cannot be rendered into French, there being no such auxiliary as did in the language, and consequently that the second of the two must always be translated.

It is the practice also in French interrogations, to say “Three travellers found they so and so?” “Three travellers said they so and so?” instead of the English form, “Found three travellers so and so?” “Said three travellers so and so?” These last phrases, indeed, were they translated literally, would not be French.

It will be also observed by the sentences given above, that in questions the pronoun and the verb must be connected by a line drawn betwixt them.

VI.

Où alla-t-il? Where did he go?

When in a question the verb ends in a vowel followed by the pronoun il, he, the letter t is inserted between. This is done in order to prevent the hiatus in pronunciation caused by two vowels coming together. It may be asked why is a t used for this purpose, in preference to any other consonant, when an n, an m, or a b, would answer the purpose, so far as euphony is concerned, quite as well. In order to answer this question, we must trace the language back to its source. We find in Latin, the parent language, that all the third persons of verbs end in a t, and we know that in French the t is only wanted when a question is asked in the third person. The phrase alla-t-il, did he go, is in Latin, word for word, ibat ille; in the Latin word we have a t. And although the t has been dropped in the affirmative form of the phrase in French, it makes its appearance again when wanted. The t moreover is still retained in the third person singular of some verbs, as il dit, he said, il avait, he had; and in cases where it has been lost, it appears again when a question is asked, as if to remind us that the language of Gaul is still the language of Cæsar.

PRONUNCIATION.

NASAL N.

When the letter n, preceded by any of the vowels, occurs before another consonant, it has what is termed a nasal sound, being partially enunciated through the nose. The existence of this sound in the pronunciation of French, has given rise to a notion among the English, that the French are very much addicted to speaking through their noses; but nothing could be more erroneous. The truth of the matter is, that if this peculiarity abounds in any language more than another, it is in English that it predominates. In the English words clung, stung, swung, rang, fung, swang, there is a nasal sound, and a very decided one too; it only differs from the French in being more nasal! A Frenchman has the greatest possible difficulty in acquiring a correct pronunciation of the words we have named, for the unique reason that they are a great deal more nasal than his own. The French nasal sound is exceedingly nice, and must be enunciated with the utmost softness; it possesses more the characteristics of a simple aspiration, than of the unequivocal nasal of the English ng. The prevailing vice of beginners in French lies in the pronunciation of the nasal n; they either for the most part sound it too harshly, or do not enunciate it at all,—faults that it is the special object of these remarks to guard them against.

It may also be observed, that in English the nasal sound is variously modified, according to the vowel that precedes the ng; thus the ung of the word stung, and the ang of the word swang, are totally different in their inflection. We are led to mention this, because beginners very generally make no distinction between the French sound of in and en, while in reality the difference between these two combinations is as marked as between their equivalents, ang and ing, in English.

Keeping in view that the difference between the English and French nasal sounds is that the former partake more abundantly of the nasal character, and that the latter must be formed by a slight aspiration, the nasal sound being almost imperceptible, the following table will enable the learner to pronounce the nasal n in all cases correctly:

an	} are pronounced like ang in the word clang , giving the a the sound of that letter in the English word father .
en
in	is pronounced like eng or ang in the word anger , as that word is usually pronounced; that is, as if it were written eng-ger .
on	“ like ong in song .
un	“ like ung in the word sung .

When n is followed by another n, the nasal sound is lost; double n has the same sound as in English, but when it comes before any of the other consonants it is always nasal. It will therefore be seen from the table we have given, that the word “intention,” in the lesson, should be pronounced as if written eng-tang-sec-ong, the English nasal sounds of these letters being of course considerably modified.

The student must bear in mind that n is only nasal when followed by a consonant; when followed by a vowel, n has the same sound as in English.

The same remarks apply also to the letter m; the pronunciation of this letter resembling in every particular that of n.

COMPOSITION.

The text of our present lesson, though it be short, illustrates a great many points in the structure of the French language. We have noticed a few of these under the head CONSTRUCTION, and have exhibited the others by a comparison of the English and the French sentences that occur in the passage under the head PHRASES. The student may now put the knowledge the text has opened to him into practice, by a little exercise in composition. We give a few phrases and sentences in English to be rendered into French. In order to translate these, the French words that have already appeared in the lesson, alone are necessary; all that the student has to do, in order to go through this exercise correctly, is to bear in mind the structure of the sentences contained in the text. We shall give a translation of these phrases in the next lesson, so that the learner may verify the accuracy of his version.

We have.	They told them to bring the treasure.
We have a treasure.	They told them to buy something to eat.
We have the wherewithal.	They said to them , "We are hungry."
We have the wherewithal to make a repast.	He went to buy them wherewithal to make a repast.
We have the wherewithal to buy some meat.	He went to make them a road.
Have we?	Did they say?
Have we anything to eat?	Did they say, "We have wherewithal to make a repast"?
Have we wherewithal to buy a repast?	Did they say, "Let one of us go"?
Have we anything to do (to make)?	Did they find their road?
Are we hungry?	Did they find a treasure?
What have we?	Did they find wherewithal to make a repast?
Have we a meal?	Did he go?
Let one of us go.	Did he depart?
Let one of them go.	He departed.
Let him go and buy wherewithal to make a repast.	When did he depart?
Let one of us go and make a repast.	Why did he depart?
Let the traveller go.	Who departed?
They said, "We have a treasure."	They found a treasure.
They said, "We are hungry."	When did they find a treasure?
They said, "We have wherewithal to make a repast."	Why did they find a treasure?
They found something to eat.	Where did they find a treasure?
They found the road.	Where did they find us?
We have the treasure.	They said, "We are hungry."
We have a meal.	Did they say, "We are hungry"?
We are hungry.	Who said, "We are hungry"?
One of us.	He went.
They said to us, "We are hungry."	Did he go?
They found us in the way.	Who went?
We have their treasure.	When did he go?
They found their treasure.	Why did he go?
They found their way.

All these phrases the student will be able to render correctly into French, if he has paid attention to the construction of the text and our observations upon it. This exercise will not only serve as an introduction to writing French, but will tend also to impress the structure and idiomatical peculiarities of the sentences it contains on his memory; and thus a basis will be formed whereon the structure of the language may rest. The student will now have read, spoken, and written, a little French; and thus will have obtained a more extended notion of the language, than if he had been turning over the pages of a grammar, with a master, for a twelvemonth. Each successive lesson will strengthen and augment the knowledge of the language the learner may now be supposed to have attained.

LESSON SECOND.

READING.

REPETITION.

The following exercise in reading consists of a translation of the sentences given, under the head of COMPOSITION in the last lesson, as an exercise in writing French. The pronunciation and meaning of the words have already been given, so that the learner should be able to read and translate the whole without hesitation.

Nous avons. Nous avons un trésor. Nous avons de quoi. Nous avons de quoi faire un repas. Nous avons de quoi acheter de la viande. Avons-nous? Avons-nous de quoi manger? Avons-nous de quoi acheter pour un repas? Avons-nous de quoi faire? Avons-nous faim? Qu'avons-nous? Avons-nous un repas? Qu'un de nous aille. Qu'un d'eux aille. Qu'il aille acheter de quoi faire un repas. Qu'un de nous aille faire un repas. Que le voyageur aille. Ils dirent nous avons un trésor. Ils dirent "Nous avons faim." Ils dirent "Nous avons de quoi faire un repas." Ils trouvèrent de quoi manger. Ils trouvèrent les chemins. Nous avons le trésor. Nous avons un repas. Nous avons faim. Un de nous. Ils nous dirent "Nous avons faim." Ils nous trouvèrent dans le chemin. Nous avons leur trésor. Ils trouvèrent leur chemin. Ils leur dirent d'apporter le trésor. Ils leur dirent d'acheter de quoi manger. Ils leur dirent "Nous avons faim." Il alla leur acheter de quoi faire un repas. Il alla leur faire un chemin. Dirent-ils? Dirent-ils "Nous avons de quoi faire un repas"? Dirent-ils "Qu'un de nous aille"? Trouvèrent-ils leur chemin? Trouvèrent-ils un trésor? Trouvèrent-ils de quoi faire un repas? Alla-t-il? Se détacha-t-il? Il se détacha. Quand se détacha-t-il? Pourquoi se détacha-t-il? Qui se détacha? Ils trouvèrent un trésor. Quand trouvèrent-ils un trésor? Pourquoi trouvèrent-ils un trésor? Où trouvèrent-ils un trésor? Où nous trouvèrent-ils? Ils dirent "Nous avons faim." Dirent-ils "Nous avons faim"? Qui dit "Nous avons faim"? Il alla. Alla-t-il? Qui alla? Quand alla-t-il? Pourquoi alla-t-il?

Mais chemin faisant, il dit en lui-même, il faut que j'empoisonne la viande, afin que mes deux camarades meurent en la mangeant, et que je jouisse du trésor moi seul. Il exécuta son dessein et mit du poison dans ce qu'il avait apporté à manger.

In order that the learner may read, translate, and understand the above, we shall, as in the case of the text given in the previous lesson, proceed to give first the pronounciation of the words, as also their euphonic connexion, and then their signification.

Mais chemin faisant, il dit en lui-même, il faut
 May she-min fe-zan, eel dec-t en lüee*maim, eel fo que j'empoisonne la viande, afin que mes deux camarades ki sh en-pwa-son la vee-and, afin ki mai dây ka-ma-rad meurent en la mangeant, et que je jouisse du trésor moi mair-t en la man-shan, ai ki j shoo-ees dũ trai-zor mwa seul. Il exécuta son dessein et mit du poison dans ce sâil. Eel exe-kü-ta son d-sin ai mee dũ pwa-zon dan s qu'il avait apporté à manger.
 k-eel av-ai-t ap-por-tai á man-shay.

In order to read the above correctly, the learner must bear in mind what we said in the last lesson, under the head PRONUNCIATION, about the nasal sound. We continue to mark the n with its accompanying vowel, when it is nasal, in italics, so that this most important matter may not be neglected. We cannot too strongly impress upon the learner the necessity of his attention to the pronounciation we have given of the words in the text, and their euphonic connexion. The same words will be repeated over and over again in the exercises that are to follow, so that on the amount of attention paid at the outset will depend the learner's accuracy throughout the lesson.

TRANSLATION.

Mais chem'n faisant il dit en lui-même, il
 But road making (going along) he said in himself, it faut que j'empoisonne la viande, afin que mes deux is necessary that I may poison the meat, to end (in order) that my two camarades meurent en la mangeant, et que je jouisse du companions may die in it eating, and that I may enjoy of the trésor moi seul. Il exécuta son dessein et mit du poison treasure me alone. He executed his design and put of the poison dans ce qu'il avait apporté à manger.
 in what he had brought to to eat.

The student can now read and pronounce the new portion of text; the next thing is to turn the words acquired to a practical account.

* For the pronounciation of the letter n, where we have marked it with an accent thus (ñ), we refer the student to the head PRONUNCIATION, page 22, of the present lesson.

VOCABULARY.

We again range the words of the text opposite their English equivalents, in order that the student may test his knowledge of them before entering upon the more essential exercises of the lesson.

Mais	but	mangeant	eating chemin	road	et	and
faisant	making	jouisse.....	may enjoy il	{ he	du	of the
	{ it	trésor.....	treasure dit	said	moi	me
en	in	seul.....	alone
lui-même.....	himself	exécuta.....	executed faut.....	is necessary	son	his que	that	dessein.....	design
je	I	mit	put empoisonne	poison	du.....	of the la	the	poison	poison
viande.....	meat	dans	into afin.....	in order	ce que	what mes	my	avait	had deux	two	apporté.....	brought camarades	companions	à	to meurent	may die	manger	to eat

PHRASES.

The value of each word being known, the meanings of the sentences have next to be observed. As we have had occasion to remark under this head in the preceding lesson, it sometimes happens that combinations of words have acquired a meaning they do not exhibit when translated literally. Thus chemin faisant is, when translated into English, word for word, road making; but the two words together are in French employed to signify going along, just as the phrases making way and going ahead are employed in English occasionally to express a similar notion. In considering the phrases, therefore, the power of the words collectively must be regarded more than their individual meaning.

Mais	But
Chemin faisant.....	Going along
Il dit en lui-même	He said to himself
Il faut que j'empoisonne la viande.....	I must poison the meat
Afin que	In order that
Mes deux camarades meurent.....	My two companions may die
En la mangeant	In eating it
Et que	And that
Je jouisse moi seul du trésor	I alone may enjoy the treasure
Il exécuta son dessein.....	He executed his design
Et mit du poison.....	And put poison
Dans ce que.....	In what
Il avait apporté à manger.....	He had brought to eat.

CONVERSATION.

As in the preceding lesson, we shall now proceed to a conversation on the subject involved in the text of the present lesson. It will be necessary for the student to bear in mind the words given as an introduction to the previous colloquial exercise, in addition to which the following will have to be acquired :—

Madame, Madam , pronounced Madam	{ giving the a 's the sound they have in the word part .
Cela, that , " shu .
Des, of the , " de	{ giving the de the sound these letters have in the English word debt .
Ses, his , " se	{ like se in the English word sent .
Que dit un des voyageurs ?	Il faut que j'empoisonne la viande.
À qui dit-il cela ?	À lui-même.
Quand ?	Chemin faisant.
Qui dit, il faut que j'empoisonne la viande ?	Un des trois voyageurs.
Quand dit-il cela ?	Chemin faisant.
Pourquoi faut-il que le voyageur empoisonne la viande ?	Afin que ses deux camarades meurent en la mangeant.
Le voyageur dit-il, il faut que j'empoisonne mes camarades ?	Non, Madame.
Dit-il, il faut que je jouisse du trésor moi seul ?	Oui, Madame.
Avait-il trois camarades ?	Non, Madame.
Avait-il deux camarades ?	Oui, Madame.
Qui avait deux camarades ?	Un des trois voyageurs.
Pourquoi faut-il que ses camarades meurent ?	Afin qu'il jouisse seul du trésor.
Qu'est-ce qu'il apporté à manger ?	De la viande.
Avait-il apporté de la viande ?	Oui, Madame.
Avait-il le trésor ?	Non, Madame.
Qui avait le trésor ?	Ses deux camarades.
Qu'avait un des trois voyageurs ?	Un dessein.
Exécuta-t-il son dessein ?	Oui, Madame.
Qu'exécuta un des trois voyageurs ?	Il exécuta son dessein.
Avait-il apporté de quoi manger ?	Oui, Madame.
Avait-il apporté le trésor ?	Non, Madame.
Dans quoi un des trois voyageurs mit-il du poison ?	Dans ce qu'il avait apporté à manger.
Avait-il apporté de la viande ?	Oui, Madame.
Mit-il du poison dans la viande qu'il avait apportée à manger ?	Oui, Madame.
Pourquoi ?	Afin que ses deux camarades mourussent en la mangeant, et qu'il jouit seul du trésor.
Quand mit-il du poison dans ce qu'il avait apporté à manger ?	Chemin faisant.

CONSTRUCTION.

Under this head we shall continue to bring into view the points of the text that illustrate the general structure of the language. These remarks, as we stated in last lesson, are intended to guide and facilitate the learner in writing French.

VII.

Il faut que j'empoisonne la viande. I must poison the meat.

In our progress we shall occasionally fall in with a French word that has no corresponding word in the English language; and sometimes we shall in the same way have to deal with an English word that cannot be rendered into French by any single word of that language, which is the case with the English word must in the sentence before us. There is no single word in French that is precisely equivalent to the English must; and as this word must is very much employed in English, it becomes to the learner a matter of some importance to know how a sentence in which must occurs, may be rendered correctly into French,—a difficulty that our text by chance amply illustrates. We find in the sentence quoted above, that I must is represented in the French sentence by il faut que je, and it is by these four words arranged as we see them, that I must is most usually rendered in French.

The essential word of the equivalent for the English I must, is faut, and it will be seen from the translation of the text, that this word faut is equivalent to the two English words is necessary; so that the French phrase il faut que je, conveying the idea of I must, is literally in English, it is necessary that I.

The learner, therefore, in order to render I must in French, has to translate literally the phrase it is necessary that I, bearing in mind that the single word faut is equivalent to the two English words is necessary. In the same way when you must, he must, or they must, have to be rendered into French, a similar process is to be gone through, substituting for the je the pronouns equivalent to you, we, he, and they; thus in order to say, he must poison the meat, the phrase, it is necessary that he may poison the meat will have to be taken and translated literally; the result will be, il faut qu'il empoisonne la viande, and so in all similar cases. We shall introduce some phrases of this kind into the exercise on Composition, which we shall expect the learner, aided by the foregoing remarks, to render correctly into French.

It will no doubt occur to the observing student, that "it is necessary that he may poison the meat," is rather a clumsy way of saying "he must poison the meat," and most certainly such is the case. The French are as sensible of this defect in their language as an Englishman can be, and in order to remedy the evil, the words "il faut" are occasionally omitted in such phrases, the other part of the sentence being made to answer the purpose. An instance of this kind of abbreviation occurred in the text of our last lesson, where we have the phrase "one of us must go" rendered by "qu'un de nous aille"; the words "il faut," it is necessary, being entirely suppressed. We stated in speaking of this sentence, Section III. of our last lesson, that the words "il faut" were frequently omitted in such expressions, and the fact of the contracted form being found in our text may be cited as a proof that the abbreviated form of such sentences is employed by the best writers in the language. We would suggest the learner to refer back to our previous observations on this construction, before reading the next section.

VIII.

Pourquoi faut-il que le voyageur empoisonne ses camarades? Why must the traveller poison his companions?

The above phrase occurring in the exercise on Conversation, exhibits to us the manner of dealing with the English must when the word occurs in an interrogation. Translated literally, the phrase in question appears as follows :—

Pourquoi faut-il que le voyageur empoisonne ses Why is necessary it that the traveller may poison his camarades ?
companions ?

Here it will be observed that faut-il literally signifies "Is it necessary," just as we have seen the literal equivalent for il faut is "it is necessary."

It is possible and usual to omit the words il faut in expressing a command; but when a question is asked, the case is altered, for in an interrogation il faut is not so easily disposed of. It is perfectly good French to say, "Qu'un de nous aille," instead of "Il faut qu'un de nous aille," but it is quite impossible to ask a question with such an assemblage of words as "Qu'un de nous aille." In order to say, "Must one of us go?" the faut-il cannot be dispensed with; the entire phrase is required, and must be written "Faut-il qu'un de nous aille." In such a case il faut becomes an indispensable adjunct.

In the previous section we have noticed the exceedingly clumsy substitute that exists in the French language for the English word must, and we have stated that the means adopted to remedy the evil is by omitting the words il faut; but we have seen that il faut cannot always be so dispensed with, and is absolutely necessary in an interrogation. In order to say in French, "Must we eat?" the phrase "Is it necessary that we may eat?" would have to be employed; decidedly too long and roundabout to answer the purpose: brevity is the soul of social converse, and in the intercourse of common life long heavy locutions like this are totally inadmissible. The expedient adopted to abridge such expressions is to suppress the pronoun and the que, employing only the indispensable faut-il with the simple form of the verb; thus instead of saying "Faut-il que nous mangions?" must we eat? the following construction is usually employed:—

Faut-il manger? Must we eat?

It will be observed that this phrase, Faut-il manger? implies nothing more than, Is it necessary to eat? and consequently may be employed to express must I eat? or must you eat? as well as must we eat? When, however, a question of this kind is to be put in the third person, no abbreviation is practicable; thus, must he go? must they die? will have to be rendered in French, faut-il qu'il aille? faut-il qu'ils meurent? We shall introduce into the exercise on Composition some English interrogative phrases containing the word must, to be rendered into French, in order that the learner may be habituated to this kind of construction.

IX.

Le trésor The treasure.
La viande The meat.

In the first section of the remarks under the head CONSTRUCTION, we have stated that all words in the French language are either MASCULINE or FEMININE, and also that the is rendered by le before masculine words, and by la before feminine words. The learner must bear in mind, when he has to render the English article the into French, that he cannot use the words la or le indiscriminately. It very often happens that a word in French has one meaning when le is before it, and another when la is before it; thus, le manche is in English, the broomstick, and la Manche is the English Channel. Now if an Englishman were to say, speaking of having been to France, "I went across le Manche," instead of saying la Manche, a Frenchman would naturally suppose him to mean that he went to France on a broomstick: this would be an awkward mistake for an elderly lady to make.

X.

En la mangeant In eating it.

The learner, from what we have said in the last and previous sections, will now know how to proceed when he has the word the to render into French; we have said that the is to be translated in the following manner:—

Before a noun in the masculine gender, by le.

Before a noun in the feminine gender, by la.

Before a noun in the plural number, by les.

But it must not be supposed from this, that the words, le, la, and les, always signify in French the. It is true that the is rendered in French by le, la, les, but it is not true that le, la, and les, are always to be rendered in English by the, as we see from the sentence quoted above, in the text where the word la has the signification of the English word it.

When the words le, la, and les, occur before a noun, they are equivalent to the English article the; but when they occur before a verb, they are no longer articles but pronouns, and will have to be translated into English in the following manner:—

le before a verb, by him or it.

la before a verb, by her or it.

les before a verb, by them.

In the sentence before us the word mangeant is a verb, and consequently the la before it must be rendered into English by the word it, since it refers to the word meat.

This diversity of the meaning in the words le, la, and les, arising from their position in a sentence, requires to be particularly noted; as otherwise they are likely to cause a great deal of trouble to the beginner, and are apt even to mislead persons who have attained some proficiency in the language.

Properly speaking, the words le and la mean simply him and her, because everything in French being either masculine or feminine, the word it has no existence in the language.

In the phrase given above, in speaking of the meat, the French say, in eating, her, and not eating it. Just as the English say in speaking of a steamboat, "She sails well," so the French him or her all objects whatever. The fact that all objects in nature are considered masculine or feminine, may very likely give rise to this question in the mind of the learner: "Why is it that there are only two genders in French?" In answering this question, we may observe, that most persons who have written French grammars, assert that it is impossible to teach theoretically the pronunciation of the language. This may be perfectly true, so far as they are individually concerned; but instead of ascribing the impossibility to their own incompetency, they usually ascribe it to some impenetrable difficulty in the subject itself. In the same way, when such a point is to be resolved as the question before us, we have nothing but mystery and perplexity.

A very slight knowledge of the history of the language is sufficient to account for the use in French of two genders only. When the Franks overran Gaul, the inhabitants spoke Latin, and, in order to understand the people they had conquered, they were obliged to learn their language; but, as may be readily supposed, the conquerors did not trouble themselves much about the niceties of the Latin terminations, and the distinctions of gender depending upon them. They were content with being able to make themselves understood, and, beyond what was necessary to effect this, disregarded the subtleties of the Latin syntax. They were obliged, however, to make a distinction between male and female, and gradually embraced under these two heads all the words that had hitherto been considered as of the neuter gender. Thus it is simply from the circumstance of the Franks being a more warlike than a learned people, that two genders only exist in the language.

In rendering the English word it into French, the learner must observe whether it relates to a masculine or a feminine noun; for instance, if in the phrase, "They found it," the word it refers to the treasure, the phrase will have to be rendered in French—

Il LE trouvèrent.

But if the word it refers to the meat, the phrase must be—

Il LA trouvèrent.

It will be remembered that these pronouns are placed before, and not, as in English, after the verb.

PRONUNCIATION.

THE CHARACTERISTIC.

There exists in nearly all the modern languages some particular sound that is rarely, if at all, made use of in English; these sounds may be considered by the English as characteristic of the languages to which they belong. Viewing in this way the French sound u as they stand in relation to those of the English language, the sound of the vowel u may be called the French characteristic.

The nearest approximation to the French sound of the vowel u, made use of in English, with which we are acquainted, occurs in the word doing, when that word is quickly pronounced, as it usually is, especially when used with other words in a sentence. In such a case, the sound of the o in the word, blending with the i of the termination ing, produces exactly the sound given by the French to the vowel u. If then the learner pronounces rapidly the word doing two or three times over, and stops short at doi, he will pronounce the French word du almost as accurately as a native of Paris. He must bear in mind, however, that the sound of the o in do is not the French sound of u. It is only when the o of that word is blended with the i that follows it in the word doing, that it resembles the French u.

In English the vowel u has three sounds; that in tube, another in tub, and a third in such words as rude. In French the vowel u has only one sound, which must ALWAYS be given to it, except when it is associated with another vowel. There are three words in which this letter stands alone; these are the words du, lui, and exécution. The learner has been shown how to pronounce du, and he must now endeavor to transfer the sound of the u in this word to those in the other two. By observing carefully the sound between the d and the ag of the word doing, when quickly pronounced, the learner may form such a conception of the sound as will enable him to pronounce the French u in all cases correctly. We may repeat, that he must carefully avoid the sound of the o in the word do, that being the sound given to the French u by persons who, having studied the language under a maître, have been led to rely more upon their ear, than upon their comprehension.

We are satisfied, that, with a little attention to the direction we have given the pronunciation of the u may be accurately acquired. At all events, such a pronunciation of the letter may be obtained as will approach much nearer its exact sound than that given to it by the natives of some of the provinces of France itself. We have heard a well-educated native of Somersetshire pronounce the English word much, as if it were written "mooch." In Lancashire the word is pronounced as if written "meech."* In Kildare, the word would be, we think, pronounced as if written "mitch." In the same way, natives of France vary in their inflection of the letter u; and an Englishman pronouncing the u according to the conception of the sound he may form from the illustration we have given of it, will approach infinitely nearer the sound a Parisian gives the letter, than a native of Burgundy, Gascony, or indeed of any other province in France remote from the capital.

COMPOSITION.

Translating from English into French is a valuable auxiliary in the study of the language, especially when the subjects given for translation are within the grasp of the learner, and are useful in themselves; qualities which we think the phrases we have selected will be found to possess. An exercise of this kind will bring the peculiarities of structure more distinctly to view, and aid in impressing them upon the mind. Our text has enabled us to illustrate some of the leading features of the language, with which the student will be greatly benefitted by being familiar. No better means of effecting this can be devised than by translating their English equivalents into French. The learner ought not therefore to neglect the exercise. We shall give in the next lesson a translation in French of the following phrases, so that the learner may see whether he has himself rendered them correctly or not.

* Conversations in the Lancashire Dialect, by Tim Bobbin.

I must poison the meat.
 I must poison my companions.
 I must enjoy the treasure.
 My companions must die.
 My two companions must die.
 He must enjoy the treasure alone.
 The travellers must die.
 They must die.
 He must poison the meat.
 He must poison the travellers.
 He must poison one of his companions.
 Must the traveller poison the meat?
 Must one of the three travellers poison his companions?
 Must the travellers die?
 Must my two companions die?
 Must one of the travellers poison the meat?
 Must his two companions die?
 We must eat.
 The meat must be eaten.
 We must eat the treasure.
 The travellers must be eaten.
 The poison must be taken.
 Poison must be bought.
 Meat must be bought.
 We must buy something to eat.
 Must we eat?
 Must we eat the meat?
 Must the treasure be eaten?
 Must we eat the travellers?
 Must we eat the poison?
 Must I eat my companions?
 Must poison be bought?
 Must meat be bought?
 Must we buy something to eat?
 I must poison the meat, in order that my two companions may die when they eat it.
 I must poison it.
 I must poison them.
 He put it in the meat. (The poison.)
 He put it in the poison. (The meat.)
 He said it.
It must be taken. (The poison.)
It must be eaten. (The meat.)

We must eat them.
 Must I poison it?
 Must I poison them?
 Did he put it in the meat?
 Did he say it?
 Must it be eaten? (The meat.)
 Must it be taken? (The poison.)
 Must we eat them?
 Must it be bought?
 He executed his design.
 Who executed a design?
 Where did he execute his design?
 When did he execute it?
 Going along, one of the three travellers said, "I must poison my two companions."
 Going along, a traveller put poison in the meat, and said, "My two companions must die on eating it."
 Two travellers, on their journey found some meat on the road and said, "Gentlemen (Messieurs), we must eat it."
 He must eat his companions.
 Why must he eat his companions?
 When must he eat his companions?
 A Gentleman (un Monsieur) put meat in the poison.
 What did he put in the poison?
 Why did he put meat in the poison?
 When did he put it in?
 I must poison the lady. (Madame.)
 When must I poison the lady?
 Why must I poison her?
 Whom must I poison?
 We must eat some meat.
 Must we eat the meat?
 Why must we eat it?
 When must we eat it?
 Must my two companions die?
 The three travellers must die.
 Why must they die?
 When must they die?
 They must die on eating the meat that one of them brought to make a repast.

When the learner has rendered these phrases, he will have become familiar with some of the chief difficulties he has to encounter. In the next lesson we shall have to speak of some other leading features in the construction of the language.

LESSON THIRD.

READING.

REPETITION.

Il faut que j'empoisonne la viande. Il faut que j'empoisonne mes camarades. Il faut que je jouisse du trésor. Il faut que mes camarades meurent. Il faut que mes deux camarades meurent. Il faut qu'il jouisse seul du trésor. Il faut que les voyageurs meurent. Il faut qu'ils meurent. Il faut qu'il empoisonne la viande. Il faut qu'il empoisonne les voyageurs. Il faut qu'il empoisonne un de ses camarades. Faut-il que le voyageur empoisonne la viande? Faut-il que les voyageurs empoisonne ses camarades? Faut-il que les voyageurs meurent? Faut-il que mes deux camarades meurent? Faut-il qu'un des voyageurs empoisonne la viande? Faut-il que ses deux camarades meurent? Il faut manger. Il faut manger la viande. Il faut manger le trésor. Il faut manger les voyageurs. Il faut manger le poison. Il faut acheter du poison. Il faut acheter de la viande. Il faut acheter de quoi manger. Faut-il manger? Faut-il manger la viande? Faut-il manger le trésor? Faut-il manger les voyageurs? Faut-il manger le poison? Faut-il manger mes camarades? Faut-il acheter du poison? Faut-il acheter de la viande? Faut-il acheter de quoi faire un repas?

Il faut que j'empoisonne la viande, afin que mes deux camarades meurent en la mangeant. Il faut que je l'empoisonne. Il faut que je les empoisonne. Il le mit dans la viande. Il la mit dans le poison. Il le dit. Il faut le manger. Il faut la manger. Il faut les manger. Faut-il que je l'empoisonne? Faut-il que je les empoisonne? Le mit-il dans la viande? Le dit-il? Faut-il la manger? Faut-il le manger? Faut-il les manger? Faut-il l'acheter? Il exécuta son dessein. Qui exécuta un dessein? Où l'exécuta-t-il? Quand l'exécuta-t-il? Chemin faisant un des trois voyageurs dit, "Il faut que j'empoisonne mes deux camarades." Chemin faisant un voyageur mit du poison dans la viande et dit, "Il faut que mes deux camarades meurent en la mangeant." Chemin faisant deux voyageurs trouvèrent de la viande dans leur chemin et dirent, "Messieurs, il faut la manger." Il faut manger ses camarades. Pourquoi faut-il manger ses camarades? Quand faut-il manger ses camarades? Un Monsieur mit de la viande dans le poison. Que mit-il dans le poison ? Pourquoi mit-il de la viande dans le poison ? Quand la mit-il ? Il faut que j'empoisonne Madame. Quand faut-il que j'empoisonne Madame ? Pourquoi faut-il que je l'empoisonne ? Qui faut-il que j'empoisonne ? Il faut manger de la viande. Faut-il manger la viande ? Pourquoi faut-il la manger ? Quand faut-il la manger ? Faut-il que mes deux camarades meurent ? Il faut que les trois voyageurs meurent ? Pourquoi faut-il qu'ils meurent ? Quand faut-il qu'ils meurent ? Il faut qu'ils meurent en mangeant la viande qu'un d'eux a apportée pour faire un repas.

Mais les deux autres, qui avaient conçu un semblable dessein contre lui pendant son absence, l'assassinèrent à son retour, et demeurèrent les maîtres du trésor. Après l'avoir tué ils mangèrent de la viande empoisonnée, et moururent aussi tous deux.

In order that the learner may be able to read and pronounce the above, we shall have, as in the case of the two preceding sections of the text, to give first the pronunciation of the words, and then their meaning.

Mais les deux autres, qui avaient conçu un semblable
 Mai lè* dā-z o-ter kee av-ni kon-sū un sem-bla-bel dessein contre lui pendant son absence, l'assassinèrent à d-sin con-ter lū-ce pen-dan s-on ab-sens, la-sa-see-nèr-t a son retour, et demeurèrent les maîtres du trésor. Après son re-toor, ai d-mair-rèr lè mai-ter dū traî-zor. A-prè l'avoir tué ils mangèrent de la viande empoisonnée, et lav-war tū-é eel man-shair d la vee-and en-pwa-zon-né, a moururent aussi tous deux.
 moor-ür-t o-see too dā.

In reading the above, the learner must bear in mind what we have said of the nasal sound in the first lesson, and what we have said of the vowel u in the second. We continue to represent that nasal sound by italics, and to place a short accent over the u when that letter has its pure sound. The nasal and the sound of the u are two very important features in French pronunciation, and habitual attention to what we have said of them will do more to perfect the learner in pronunciation than a twelvemonth with a master.

TRANSLATION.

Mais les deux autres, qui avaient conçu un semblable
 But the two others, who had conceived a similar dessein contre lui pendant son absence, l'assassinèrent à design against him during his absence, him assassinated at

* For the sound of the e we have accented thus, é, and thus, è, see the article PRONUNCIATION, page 29.

son retour, et demeurèrent les maîtres du trésor. Après
his return, and remained the masters of the treasure. After l'avoir tué ils mangèrent de la viande empoisonnée, et him to have killed they ate of the meat poisoned, and moururent aussi tous deux.

died also all two (both).

VOCABULARY.

The text of the present lesson consists of forty words, twenty of which have already appeared in the preceding sections: we shall therefore limit the vocabulary to the twenty new words, as the learner may be supposed to have got the others already pretty well fixed on his memory.

Autres	others	demeurèrent.....	{ remained lived
avaient	had	maîtres.....
conçu	conceived	après.....	after semblable.....	similar	avoir.....	to have contre.....	against	tué.....	killed
lui	him	mangèrent.....	ate pendant	during	empoisonnée	poisoned absence.....	absence	moururent.....	died assassinèrent.....	assassinated	aussi	also retour	return	tous	all

Of these twenty words, the greater part are mere modifications of those already seen: avaient, lui, is the plural form of avait in the text of the preceding lesson; mangèrent, etc., is formed from the same root as manger, to eat; moururent, died, is from the same root as meurent, die. The principle operating these changes in the form of a verb, will soon have to engage the learner's attention.

PHRASES.

Mais les deux autres	But the two others
Qui avaient conçu un semblable dessein contre lui	Who had conceived a similar design against him
Pendant son absence	During his absence
L'assassinèrent.....	Assassinated him
A son retour.....	On his return
Et demeurèrent les maîtres du trésor.	And remained masters of the treasure
Après l'avoir tué	After having killed him
Ils mangèrent de la viande empoisonnée	They ate some of the poisoned meat
Et moururent aussi tous deux.....	And they also both died

In comparing these sentences, the learner will observe that the English say poisoned meat, and that the French reverse the English order of these two words, and say meat poisoned. It will also be observed that the equivalents of the English words all and two are used in French to signify both; the reason of this is, that there is no single word equivalent to both in the French language.

CONVERSATION.

All the words introduced into the following exercise have already appeared, either in the text of the present or in the conversation of the preceding lessons. Their meaning and pronunciation have consequently been already given.

Qu'avaient conçu les deux autres voyageurs ?	Un semblable dessein.
Qui avait conçu un semblable dessein ?	Les deux autres voyageurs.
Quand ?	Pendant l'absence de leur camarade.
Où ?	Dans le chemin.
Contre qui les deux autres voyageurs avaient-ils conçu un dessein ?	Contre leur camarade.
Qui avait le trésor ?	Les deux autres voyageurs.
Quand avaient-ils le trésor ?	Pendant l'absence de leur camarade.
Qu'avaient les deux autres voyageurs pendant l'absence de leur camarade ?	Ils avaient le trésor.
Qui les deux voyageurs assassinèrent-ils ?	Ils assassinèrent leur camarade.
Où l'assassinèrent-ils ?	Dans le chemin.
Quand l'assassinèrent-ils ?	A son retour.
Pourquoi l'assassinèrent-ils ?	Afin d'avoir le trésor pour eux seuls.
Après l'avoir tué, demeurèrent-ils maîtres du trésor ?	Oui, Messieurs.
Qui demeura maître du trésor ?	Les deux autres voyageurs.
Les deux autres voyageurs mangèrent-ils leur camarade ?	Non, mais à son retour ils l'assassinèrent.
Après l'avoir tué, de quoi demeurèrent-ils les maîtres ?	Ils demeurèrent les maîtres du trésor et de la viande que leur camarade avait apportée à manger.
Qu'avait apporté un des voyageurs ? ..	Il avait apporté de la viande.
Avait-il empoisonné la viande ?	Oui, Messieurs, il l'avait empoisonnée.
Pourquoi avait-il empoisonné la viande ?	Afin que ses camarades mourussent en la mangeant.
Qu'avaient à manger les maîtres du trésor ?	Ils avaient de la viande.
Qui avait de la viande à manger ?	Les maîtres du trésor.
Les maîtres du trésor mangèrent-ils la viande ?	Oui, ils la mangèrent.
Pourquoi la mangèrent-ils ?	Ils avaient faim.
Qui avait faim ?	Les trois voyageurs.
Qui avait empoisonné la viande ?	Un des trois voyageurs.
Qui la mangea ?	Les deux autres.
Quand la mangèrent-ils ?	Après avoir tué leur camarade.
Que mangèrent les deux autres après avoir tué leur camarade ?	Ils mangèrent de la viande empoisonnée.
Moururent-ils après avoir mangé la viande empoisonnée ?	Oui, Messieurs, ils moururent.
Les voyageurs moururent-ils tous les trois ?	Oui, ils moururent tous.
Quand moururent les trois voyageurs ?	L'un après son retour, les deux autres après avoir mangé de la viande empoisonnée.
Où moururent-ils ?	Dans le chemin.

CONSTRUCTION.

XI.

Après l'avoir tué After having killed him.
Ils l'assassinèrent They assassinated him.

Perhaps there is no difficulty more embarrassing to the learner than that arising from the diversity of meaning peculiar to the little words le and la. We have already had occasion to remark, that le and la are sometimes to be rendered in English by the, and at other times by him, her, or it. Persons who have gone partially over a French grammar, are aware that le and la are articles, and so equivalent to the English word the; but not having pursued their studies far enough, are not acquainted with the pronomial signification of the words. They have in consequence associated le and la with the English word the, and the result of this association is that they are confounded with the first page of any French author they attempt to translate. If any one, for instance, were to suppose that the l' in the phrases we have quoted above from our text, signified the, he could not possibly make sense of them. In translating, the meaning of such long words as assassinèrent may generally be guessed at, but the little words like le and la completely upset the partially initiated. We have stated (§ X.), for the guidance of the learner in this matter, that when le or la occur before a verb, they must be rendered in English by him, her, or it; and when they occur before a noun, are to be rendered in English by the; but it is only in this last case that le and la signify the. In the phrases, après l'avoir tué, the word avoir is a verb; and according to what we have said, the l' must be rendered by one or other of the English pronouns him, her, or it, which of the three being judged from the context. We have quoted the two phrases, however, at the head of this article, not so much to illustrate the meanings of le and la, as to recall the attention of the learner to the manner he is to deal with the English words him, her, and it, when he has to translate them into French. We have said elsewhere that there is no use for the word it in French. Everything is said to be him or her; thus the word viande being feminine, the English phrase they ate it, the pronoun it referring to the noun meat, would have to be rendered into French, they ate her; and in the same way in speaking of the treasure, the English phrase they ate it, would have to be rendered they ate him, the word trésor being a masculine noun. It will be seen by the phrase, ils l'assassinèrent, that the pronoun him is represented by the word le abridged into l', on account of the following vowel, according to the rule we gave in § II. In the same way, they assassinated her would be in French ils l'assassinèrent, exactly the same as the other, the a of the la being likewise subject to elision. When, however, the verb begins with a consonant, the distinction between him and her would be as apparent in French as it is in English; thus, they ate him would be ils le mangèrent, but they ate her, ils la mangèrent, the le and la in these cases not being subject to elision. The learner will also observe, that the English order of the words in such phrases is inverted in their French equivalents; for instead of saying, they assassinated him, we must say, they him assassinated, ils l'assassinèrent. We shall introduce into the exercise under the head COMPOSITION, some English phrases containing him, her, and it, to be turned into French, in order to familiarize the learner with the pronomial use of le and la.

XII.

Mais les deux autres, qui avaient conçu un semblable dessein contre lui, l'assassinèrent à son retour. But the two others, who had conceived a similar design against him, assassinated him on his return.

It will be observed from the above sentence, that, besides the pronoun le, there is another French word equivalent to the English pronoun him, and that this word is lui. When in English the word him is the direct object of a transitive verb, such as killed, assassinated, ate, him is then rendered by le; but when him or her is preceded by a preposition, then they must be rendered in French by lui. In our text, the word contre, against, is a preposition, and the word him following it, must in consequence be lui not le; in the same way, of him, to him, by him, for him, must be rendered in French, de lui, à lui, and pour lui; and so in all cases where a preposition precedes, the word him has to be rendered by lui. This double translation of the word him, is one of the difficulties to be encountered in writing French; but a little attention to the nature of the words, will enable the learner to judge whether he should employ le or lui in translating him.

XIII.

Il avait conçu un semblable dessein. He had conceived a similar design.

The letter c is pronounced in French exactly as it is in English, that is, like s before e and i, and like k before a, o, and u. It happens, however, that in some French verbs c must have its hissing sound before the last-named vowels. When such is the case, a little mark called a cedilla is placed under the c, as in the word conçu in the text. Without the cedilla, this word would have to be pronounced kou-ku. In writing this word, the learner must take care therefore not to omit the cedilla.

XIV.

Après l'avoir tué . . . After having killed him.

In this phrase, the word avoir is in the infinitive mood, and literally signifies to have. The English, after all their prepositions, except to, are in the practice of employing the present participle, ending in ing; but in French, all the prepositions except en govern the infinitive mood of the verb; thus we must say in French, after to have, of to have, from to have, for to have, &c., and not, as in English, after having, of having, from having, for having. This is a very marked peculiarity, and exhibits one of the most striking differences in the construction of the two languages. It would be very bad English to say for to have, and it would be absolute nonsense to say in French for having. In rendering, therefore, such English phrases as, after having put poison in the meat, after having killed their companion, after having eaten the travellers, after having brought the poison, the learner must bear in mind that the French construction is, après avoir mis du poison dans la viande, after to have put the poison in the meat; après avoir tué leur camarade, after to have killed their companion; après avoir mangé les voyageurs, after to have eaten the travellers; après avoir apporté le poison, after to have brought the poison; and so in all similar cases.

XV.

Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor Three travellers found a treasure on dans leur chemin, et dirent, "Nous their way, and said, "We are avons faim." hungry."

In the above sentence, the words nous avons faim are translated literally we have hunger, and this is the manner the English expression we are hungry must be rendered into French. In the same way, we were hungry would have to be rendered we had hunger. The English say, I have a headache, and I have a cold, and it would only be according to the analogy of their own language to say, I have hunger also. However, since it happens that this is not the case, the learner must bear in mind the difference in this respect between the construction of his own and the French language. The English phrases, he was hungry, and they were hungry, will have to be rendered, Il avait faim.....He had hunger.

 Ils avaient faim.....They had hunger.

XVI.

Ils moururent tous deux.....They both died.

We have already said, chemin faisant, that the English word both has no single equivalent in French, so that the notion of both has to be rendered in the latter language by a paraphrase. The word is most usually rendered by the phrase, tous les deux, all the two; but occasionally the article les is dropped, and the phrase assumes the form, tous deux, all two, as we have it in our text. It is very likely that they died all two, may sound somewhat odd in the ears of an Englishman, but it is only because he has not been used to it. The phrase, they died all two, is just as logical as they died all three, although the first appears very bad English, and the second very good. We mention this because the learner generally, when he meets with a construction that he is not familiar with, is very apt to suppose that there is some huge mystery at the bottom of it, when in reality it exists in his own language, and is as simple in itself as the construction of any other assemblage of words. A little judgment exercised in the study of a language will dissipate a vast number of apparent difficulties of this nature. The learner has to bear in mind that the word both is to be rendered by all two, tous deux in French; or when a greater degree of exactitude is wanted, by all the two, tous les deux.

In English, the word both may be put either before or after the verb: it would be as correct to say, they both died, as to say, they died both. In French, however, the adverb cannot be moved about in this way: there is only one way of arranging the words in a phrase like this, that is by placing the adverb tous deux after the verb, as in the text.

PRONUNCIATION.

ACCENTED LETTERS.

The vowel e has altogether in French four sounds. In order to show when it should be pronounced in one and when in another manner, little marks called accents are employed. The following table exhibits the various sounds of the e, together with the manner in which they are distinguished one from another.

- e* with an acute accent, thus, é, is pronounced like a in the English word mate.
- e* with a grave accent, thus, è, is pronounced like e in the English word best.
- e* with a circumflex accent, thus, ê, is pronounced like è, but a little longer.
- e* without an accent is called the e mute, and is generally silent; when pronounced, it has the sound of ea in the English word earth.

From this table the learner will observe that when he meets with an e having an acute accent upon it, thus é, he must pronounce it like the a in the English words make, bake, cake; and when he meets with an e having the grave accent, è, or the circumflex accent, thus ê, he must pronounce it like e in the English words press, dress, mess. So far as the accented e's are concerned, there is no difficulty: the é and the è may be considered as two distinct letters of the French alphabet, each having its own sound and characteristic properties, while the ê may be called a long è, and considered as such. We should now advise the learner to go over the sections of the text, and pronounce the accented e's according to the foregoing directions, without paying attention to the equivalents we have given of them in our verbal pronunciation; in this manner the habit will be acquired of pronouncing the accented e correctly. We would also here strongly impress upon the observation of the learner the necessity of ATTENTION. He has been accustomed from his infancy to associate the letter e with a set of sounds, many of which are totally different from the French sounds of the letter; he must therefore be watchful lest his inherent notions mislead him in the pronunciation of the French e. The accented e's in French have only the sounds we have described; these must always be given them, otherwise the word in which they occur will be rendered unintelligible, and the sense or meaning of the speaker consequently totally obscured.

The e mute, as its name implies, so far as pronunciation is concerned is a nonentity: it is a mere orthographic sign, not an absolute letter. There are some cases, however, in which it may be pronounced. The phrase il se détacha, occurring in our text, may be pronounced eels détacha, suppressing entirely the unaccented a, or the little word se may be pronounced distinctly, giving the e the shut sound of ea of the English word earth, as already stated. The pronunciation of the e mute is therefore quite arbitrary, depending entirely upon the taste or the style of the speaker. This unaccented e has given rise to much learned disquisition among writers of French grammars; they have contrived to discover in this simple matter the most insuperable difficulties, and the greatest possible amount of doubt and dubity. These perplexities are not said to consist in explaining the sound itself,—that we have given is sufficiently precise,—but in knowing when to pronounce the letter, and when to leave it entirely silent. One Frenchman,* who has written two very respectable duodecimo volumes to enlighten the English on this knotty point, after quoting a dozen pages of illustrations, says, "All these examples show rather than solve the difficulty; but it is impossible to give certain and invariable rules by which foreigners may be able to make so many nice distinctions, which depend greatly on the JUDGMENT of the speaker or reader, and are not always [qy. never] attended to by the natives themselves." Had this writer limited his treatise to this one passage, we conceive he would have acted wisely, for in this single sentence he has said all that need be said on the subject. The pronunciation of the e mute is admissible in an elevated style, but its pronunciation in colloquial intercourse would only be tolerated when the meaning of a word or the sense of a sentence would be obscured by its omission, or when great clearness of expression is required. In every instance where the unaccented e occurs in our text, it may be left entirely silent; and on the other hand, it might be in most cases slightly enunciated. The unaccented e is rarely pronounced in ordinary conversation, but it is very rarely silent in a solemn discourse. It might be pronounced at the Palais du Luxembourg, but would be silent within the precincts of the Tuilleries.

* Duverger's Treatise on the French Pronunciation, Part I.

The accents, besides being employed to point out the sounds of the e, are occasionally used to distinguish some words from certain other words resembling them in orthography, but differing materially in meaning; thus the letter a in French without an accent is a verb, and is equivalent to the English word has, but a with a grave accent, thus, à, is a preposition, and signifies in English to or at; and again, the adverb où, where, has a grave accent to distinguish it from the conjunction ou, or. The accents in these cases do not affect in any way the pronunciation of the letter over which they are placed: they are orthographic signs only.* The circumflex accent is used to mark the omission of an s. The word maître in the text is derived from the Latin word maister, or, according to the modern Latin spelling, magister, the Romans writing an s, though very probably they did not pronounce it. The older French writers wrote the word maistre, whence the English have obtained their word master, where the s is retained and the i dropped. The circumflex accent requires the voice to rest slightly on the letter whereon it is placed, in order to compensate for the omission of the s, as in the case of the ê already described.

We have now explained the use and application of the accents in French: they only affect the pronunciation in so far as the e is concerned. We shall henceforth, in giving the pronunciation of the French words, leave the accented e's to speak for themselves, as the learner may now be fairly supposed to know how to pronounce them.

COMPOSITION.

He had.	When had their companion poisoned the meat?
He had a treasure.	He had poisoned the meat during the absence of his companions.
Had he a treasure?	Who had conceived a design?
Who had a treasure?	One of the travellers.
They had.	Against whom had he conceived a design?
What had they?	Against the masters of the treasure.
They had a companion.	After having conceived his design, did he execute it?
Had they the meat?	Yes, he executed his design.
They had the meat, two treasures, and three intentions.	The masters of the treasure, had they also conceived a design?
Had they three designs?	Yes, they had conceived a design against the treasure, and two others against their companions.
No, but they had three companions.	Who was hungry?
Who had three companions?	One of the travellers.
The traveller who had the two intentions.	Had he anything to eat?
Who had the treasure?	Were his two companions hungry?
The two other travellers.	Yes, but they had something to eat.
When they had the treasure, had they also their companion?	What had the two travellers to eat?
No, they had poisoned him.
After the two others had poisoned their companion, what had they?
They had the treasure and also the meat, but their companion had poisoned it.

* And it may be useful to observe, that the grave accent only is used in these cases; the acute accent never being employed merely to distinguish words.

They had the treasure, the poisoned meat, and a companion, to eat.
 Where did the travellers live?
 They lived at Paris.
 When did the masters of the treasure live at Paris?
 They lived at Paris after they had killed their companion.
 Whom did the three travellers assassinate?
 They assassinated two travellers and their companion.
 Why did they assassinate their companion?
 In order to have his treasure.
 After having killed their companion, whom did they assassinate?
 They assassinated the two other travellers.
 Did they assassinate their companion after having killed the travellers?
 No, they assassinated the travellers after having killed their companion.
 Where did they assassinate their companion?
 They assassinated him on the road.
 Whom did they assassinate on the road?
 They assassinated the masters of the treasure, the three travellers, and also their two companions.
 They ate.
 What did they eat?
 They ate the treasure.
 After having eaten the treasure, what did they eat?
 They ate the meat.
 After having eaten that, what did they eat?
 They ate their companion.
 After having eaten the treasure, the meat, and their companion, what did they eat?
 They ate two other companions.
 Why did they eat their companions?

They were hungry.
 After having eaten all their companions, what did they eat?
 They ate each other (se).
 They died.
 Did all the three travellers die?
 Yes, all the travellers died.
 Did the masters of the treasure die also?
 Yes, they both died.
 When did the two travellers die?
 After having killed and eaten their companion.
 Where did the travellers die?
 Two died at Paris, the other three died on the road.
 During the absence of their comrade, the travellers ate each other.
 After having killed some and poisoned others, the two travellers remained masters of the meat; but after having eaten it, they both died.
 The masters of the treasure assassinated and ate their companion, but they both died also.
 During the absence of their companion, the two others had eaten the treasure.
 While the two travellers remained masters of the treasure, they had withheld to eat; but after having killed their companion, they both died of hunger.
 One of the travellers, during the absence of the other two, had conceived the design of eating the treasure; but the two others, on their return, assassinated him.
 After having killed their companion, the two others ate some poisoned meat as a refreshment.
 The poison killed one of the travellers: the treasure killed all three.
 After having eaten the treasure, the meat, and their companion, the three travellers died of hunger.

I Ils vian ils t trois avai le tr
 sonn qu'a l'ava vian can qui avoi mai conc Qui de Qu'
 de voy dem leur nère leur rad Ass ass nère ass les

LESSON FOURTH.

READING.

REPETITION.

IL avait. Il avait un trésor. Avait-il un trésor? Qui avait un trésor? Ils avaient. Qu'avaient-ils? Ils avaient un camarade. Avaient-ils la viande? Ils avaient la viande, deux trésors, et trois intentions. Avaient-ils trois desseins? Non, mais ils avaient trois camarades. Qui avait trois camarades? Le voyageur qui avait les deux intentions. Qui avait le trésor? Les deux autres voyageurs. Quand ils avaient le trésor, avaient-ils aussi leur camarade? Non, ils l'avaient empoisonné. Après que les deux autres eurent empoisonné leur camarade, qu'avaient-ils? Ils avaient le trésor et la viande, mais leur camarade l'avait empoisonné. Quand leur camarade avait-il empoisonné la viande? Il avait empoisonné la viande pendant l'absence de ses camarades. Qui avait conçu un dessein? Un des voyageurs. Contre qui avait-il conçu un dessein? Contre les maîtres du trésor. Après avoir conçu son dessein l'exécuta-t-il? Oui, il exécuta son dessein. Les maîtres du trésor avaient-ils aussi conçu un dessein? Oui, ils avaient conçu un dessein contre le trésor, et deux autres contre leurs camarades. Qui avait faim? Un des voyageurs. Avait-il de quoi manger? Ses deux camarades avaient-ils faim? Oui, mais ils avaient de quoi manger. Qu'avaient les deux voyageurs à manger? Ils avaient à manger le trésor, de la viande empoisonnée et un camarade. Où demeurèrent les trois voyageurs? Ils demeurèrent à Paris? Quand les maîtres du trésor demeurèrent-ils à Paris? Ils demeurèrent à Paris après avoir tué leur camarade. Qui, les trois voyageurs assassinèrent-ils? Ils assassinèrent deux voyageurs et leur camarade. Pourquoi assassinèrent-ils leur camarade? Afin d'avoir son trésor. Après avoir tué leur camarade, qui assassinèrent-ils? Ils assassinèrent deux autres voyageurs. Assassinèrent-ils leur camarade après avoir tue les voyageurs? Non, ils assassinèrent les voyageurs après avoir tué leur camarade? Où assassinèrent-ils leur camarade? Ils l'assassinèrent dans le chemin. Qui assassinèrent-ils dans le chemin? Ils assassinèrent les maîtres du trésor, les trois voyageurs, et aussi leurs deux camarades.

Ils mangèrent. Que mangèrent-ils? Ils mangèrent le trésor. Après avoir mangé le trésor, que mangèrent-ils? Ils mangèrent la viande. Après avoir mangé cela, que mangèrent-ils? Ils mangèrent leur camarade. Après avoir mangé le trésor, la viande, et leur camarade, que mangèrent-ils? Ils mangèrent deux autres camarades. Pourquoi mangèrent-ils leurs camarades? Ils avaient faim. Après avoir mangé tous leurs camarades, que mangèrent-ils? Ils se mangèrent. Ils moururent. Les voyageurs moururent-ils tous les trois? Oui, tous les voyageurs moururent. Les maîtres du trésor moururent-ils aussi? Oui, ils moururent tous les deux. Quand les deux voyageurs moururent-ils? Après avoir tué et mangé leur camarade. Où moururent les voyageurs? Deux moururent à Paris, les trois autres dans le chemin. Pendant l'absence de leur camarade, les voyageurs se mangèrent les uns les autres. Après avoir tué les uns et empoisonné les autres, les voyageurs demeurèrent maîtres de la viande, mais après l'avoir mangée ils moururent tous. Les maîtres du trésor assassinèrent et mangèrent leur camarade, mais tous les deux moururent aussi. Pendant l'absence de leur camarade les deux autres avaient mangé le trésor. Pendant que les deux voyageurs demeurèrent maîtres du trésor ils avaient de quoi manger, mais après avoir tué leur camarade, ils moururent de faim tous les deux. Un des voyageurs pendant l'absence des deux autres avait conçu le dessein de manger le trésor, mais les deux autres à leur retour l'assassinèrent. Après avoir tué leur camarade, les deux autres mangèrent pour repas de la viande empoisonnée. Le poison avait tué un des voyageurs, le trésor avait tué les trois. Après avoir mangé le trésor, la viande, et leur camarade, les trois voyageurs moururent de faim.

Un philosophe passant par cet endroit-là, dit : Voilà quel est le monde ! Voyez de quelle manière il a traité ces trois personnes. Malheur à celui qui lui demande des richesses.

In order that the learner may read the above, we shall, as in the case of the former portions of the text, proceed to give the pronunciation of the present section.

Un philosophe passant par cet endroit-là, dit : Voilà quel
Un fee-lo-sof pas-an par set en-drwa-la, dee, wa-la kel est le monde! Voyez de quelle manière il a traité ces ai l mond! Voyai d kel man-yèr eel a trai-té sé trois personnes. Malheur à celui qui lui demande des trwa per-son. Mal-èur a s-lüce kee lüce d-mand dè* richesses.
.ree-shès.

* For the pronunciation of the eu, see article PRONUNCIATION, page 40.

That the above may be read correctly, the learner must continue to bear in mind what has been said in the first lesson, of the nasal sound which we continue to give in italics, as also what was said of the vowel u in the second lesson, and finally, the pronounciation of the accented e's given in the third lesson. We would again urge the necessity of the learner sustaining his attention on these particular points : this is essential to an exact comprehension of the pronounciation of the words of the text and consequently on this depends the chief advantage the learner can hope to obtain from our lessons. The words of our text are not numerous, but they will serve as a key to the entire system of French pronounciation. The principles we shall lay down for the guidance of the learner in their pronounciation, if well fixed upon his memory, will enable him to pronounce, with a very few exceptions, every word in the language correctly.

TRANSLATION.

Un philosophe passant par cet endroit-là, dit : Voilà quel
 A philosopher passing by that place there, said, See there what est le monde ! Voyez de quelle manière il a traité ces is the world ! See of what manner it has treated these trois personnes. Malheur à celui qui lui demande des three persons. Wo to him who at it asks of the richesses.
 riches.

VOCABULARY.

The present portion of text consists of thirty-one words, ten of which have already been seen ; and the five words, philosophe, manière, passant, personnes, and richesses, are nearly the same in form with their English equivalents. This vocabulary will therefore only consist of seventeen words.

Par.....	by	a.....	has cet.....	{ this	traité.....	treated endroit.....	{ that	ces.....	{ these là.....	place	malheur.....	{ those voilà.....	there	celui.....	{ wo
quelle }	{ see there	demande.....	{ misfortune quel }	behold	des.....	{ he est.....	what		{ him
le monde.....	is		{ ask
voyez.....	the world		{ asks
	{ see		{ want look		{ wants of the

CONVERSATION.

The following new words will be introduced into this exercise.

Mesdames,.....	Ladies,	pronounced	mèdam
Ce,.....	it, or that	"	s.
Pourquoi,.....	why,	"	poor-kwa.
Parce que,.....	because,	"	pars-ky.
Combien,.....	{ how much, }	"	kom-be-wn,
	{ how many, }	"	kelk-fwa
Quelquefois,.....	sometimes,	"	o.
Au,.....	to the, or at the,	"	était.
Était,.....	was,

In the reading exercise we have given é as the pronunciation of the word est, is. Above, we see that the little word ce, it, when denuded of its e mute has the sound of s. The learner will observe from this, that est-ce, is it, should be pronounced ès; and for the same reason that qu'est-ce? what is it? should be pronounced kès. It may not be out of place to notice here a peculiar manner of putting in French the question, What is that? The learner is already aware that "what is that?" should be rendered by qu'est cela? but though "qu'est cela?" is very commonly used, the form most employed is qu'est-ce que c'est que cela? This phrase translated literally gives in English, What is it that that is that that? Such a multitude of thats looks like a very prosy way of saying, What is that? If, however, the learner has borne in mind the pronunciation we have given of the individual words composing qu'est-ce que c'est que cela? he will find the whole amount to kesh-sek-sla; the French interrogation in reality not requiring more time in its enunciation than the English what is that?

- Qu'est-ce que dit un philosophe?..... Le philosophe dit: "Voilà quel est le monde! Voyez de quelle manière il a traité ces trois personnes.
 Où dit-il cela?..... Dans le chemin.
 Quand le dit-il?..... En passant à l'endroit où moururent les trois voyageurs.
 Est-ce que le philosophe dit: "Voilà les trois voyageurs"?..... Non, Mesdames.
 Est-ce qu'il dit: "Voilà ces trois personnes"?..... Non, Mesdames; mais il dit, "Voilà de quelle manière le monde a traité ces trois personnes."
 Trois personnes.
 Qui le monde a-t-il traité?..... Le monde.
 Qui est-ce qui a traité trois personnes?..... D'une manière.
 Comment le monde a-t-il traité trois personnes?..... Il a traité trois personnes.
 Combien de personnes le monde a-t-il traitées?..... Les trois voyageurs.
 Quelles trois personnes le monde a-t-il traitées d'une manière?..... Les voyageurs qui trouvèrent un trésor dans leur chemin.
 Quels trois voyageurs?..... Parce qu'ils lui avaient demandé des richesses.
 Pourquoi le monde a-t-il traité ces trois voyageurs d'une manière?.. C'est un malheur de demander des richesses au monde.
 Qu'est-ce que c'est qu'un malheur d'après le philosophe?..... Un philosophe.
 Qui est-ce qui dit, Malheur à celui qui demande des richesses au monde? Parce qu'il était philosophe.
 Pourquoi dit-il cela?..... Non, Mesdames.
 Le philosophe dit-il malheur à celui qui a des richesses?..... Non, mais il dit que c'est un malheur de les demander au monde.
 Le philosophe dit-il que c'est un malheur d'avoir des richesses?..... Parce que le philosophe le dit.
 Pourquoi est-ce un malheur que de demander des richesses?..... Non, Mesdames, il dit que c'est un malheur de les demander.
 Est-ce que le philosophe demande des richesses au monde?..... Voyez les trois voyageurs, ils moururent après avoir demandé des richesses.
 Comment est-ce un malheur?..... Non, mais afin de les avoir, ils assassinèrent leur camarade.
 Est-ce que les voyageurs demandèrent des richesses au monde?..... Oui, Mesdames, et leur camarade afin d'avoir le trésor à lui seul mit du poison dans la viande qu'il avait apportée pour manger.
 Était-ce afin d'avoir ses richesses qu'ils assassinèrent leur camarade?.....

Est-ce que toutes les personnes qui demandent des richesses au monde meurent?.....	Non, Mesdames, mais quand ils assussinent leurs camarades afin d'avoir leurs richesses, ils meurent quelquefois, voyez de quelle manière le monde a traité les trois voyageurs.
De quelle manière le monde a-t-il traité les trois voyageurs?.....	Il les a traités de manière qu'ils moururent tous les trois.
Qui est-ce qui dit cela?.....	Un philosophe.
A qui dit-il cela?.....	A tout le monde.
Était-il à Paris quand il dit cela?....	Non, il était à l'endroit où moururent les voyageurs.

CONSTRUCTION.

XVII.

Malheur à celui qui lui demande des richesses. Wo to him who asks it for riches.

We have stated elsewhere, that the English pronouns him, her, and it, when the direct objects of a transitive verb, are rendered in French by le or la placed before the verb by which they are governed; as,

They ate him..... Ils le mangèrent.
They ate her..... Ils la mangèrent.

We have also stated, that when the pronouns him, her, and it, are in English preceded by to, at, or any other preposition, they are to be rendered in French by lui; as,

The travellers had conceived a design against him. Les voyageurs avaient conçu un dessein contre lui.
He said into himself..... Il dit en lui-même.

In the sentence we have quoted at the head of this article, there is an apparent exception to the latter rule, since we have the word him rendered by lui, even although no preposition precedes the him in the English sentence. This arises from the mutability of the English language. It would be quite as good English to say, in speaking of the world, "Miserable is he who asks at it for riches," as to say, "Miserable is he who asks it for riches," only the English usually dispense with the preposition at in such cases, and hence the apparent departure from the rule we have given. Although the English can in this way say, "Who asks it?" or, "Who asks at it?" indiscriminately, the French language is not susceptible of any mutable property of this kind: the preposition à, to or at, must, under such circumstances, invariably follow the verb demande, to ask. We cannot say in French, "Who asks it?" the genius of the language requiring us to say, "Who asks at it?"

But we may be told that there is no à after the verb demande in the sentence we have quoted from the text. True, there is none in appearance. It will be observed, however, that lui precedes the verb demande. In such a position, lui has the signification of à lui in any other. Lui before a verb is precisely equivalent to à lui placed after one. And we have the sentence who asks it? or who asks at it? rendered by qui lui demande? instead of qui demande à lui? because it is more consonant with the structure of the language to express at it by placing lui before the verb, than by placing à lui after it.

It is in matters of this kind that the judgment and observation of the learner might be advantageously exercised; the difficulties of the language being hid in minute verbal modifications. The property that little words like lui possess of assuming a variety of meanings from a change of position, is also a source of great embarrassment to beginners. A little exertion of the perceptive faculties will do more for the learner in overcoming difficulties of this nature, than the explanations of all the masters in the United Kingdom, who, nine cases in ten, are totally ignorant of the animus of such detail, and consequently are incapable of supplying the place of intellect to the student.

The words of the English language are not in general susceptible of a change of meaning from the change of position; but in French a word has often a very different signification in one set of words from that it has in another set. For instance, in the sentence—

“Un d'eux se détacha et alla dans l'intention de leur apporter de quoi faire un repas,” “One of them departed and went away in the intention of bringing to them wherewithal to make a meal,”

the word leur occurs before a verb, and in that position is to be rendered in English by to them; but in the following sentence—

“Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor dans leur chemin,” “Three travellers found a treasure on their way,”

the word leur occurs before the noun chemin, and in that position has no longer the meaning of to them, but must be rendered in English by their. In beginning to read French, attention to points like these is of great importance. The exact value of the little words being known, the sense of a passage will always be clear; but until this is the case, the meaning of an author will ever appear obscure.

The sentence we have cited from our text illustrates two points to be noticed in writing French: first, that the verb demander, to ask, requires the preposition à, to or at, after it; and secondly, that to or at, him, her, or it, are rendered in French by placing the single word lui before a verb.

In the same sentence we observe the word lui, him, rendered by celui after a preposition as well as lui. The little particle ce prefixed to the lui, is equivalent to the English word that; celui, therefore, when reduced to its primeval elements, is equivalent to that him, the ce being obviously, in this instance, appended to the lui merely for the sake of emphasis or euphony; but be this as it may, celui must always be used under similar circumstances.

XVIII.

Un philosophe passant par cet endroit-là. A philosopher passing by that place.

We have already spoken fully of the various significations of the little words le and la. We have said, that when le or la occur before a noun, they are to be rendered in English by the; as,

Nous avons le trésor..... We have the treasure.
 Nous avons la viande..... We have the meat.

But when they occur before a verb, le and la are pronouns, and have to be rendered in English by him, her, or it.

Ils la mangèrent..... They ate her or it.
 Ils le mangèrent..... They ate him or it.

It will be observed from the phrase we have quoted above from the text, that the word la has also to be rendered in English by the adverb there. When, however, this is the case, the a of the la is always marked with a grave accent, thus, là, as we see it in the text. There cannot therefore be any difficulty when la has the meaning there, since so visible a sign is used to point it out.

It may be asked, what business has the word there in the sentence under consideration? This is another matter, and merits a little explanation. The English have the two little demonstrative words, this and that; this expressing an object spoken of to be near, and that expressing the object spoken of to be distant. The French have only the little particle ce to express both these relative positions of an object, and are consequently obliged to use some other word along with it to indicate more exactly the position of the object. The words used for this purpose are ci, here, and là, there. In order to express the English words this and that, the French are obliged to proceed in the following manner:

This world..... ce monde-ci..... This here world.
 That treasure..... ce trésor-là..... That there treasure.
 This philosopher..... ce philosophe-ci..... This here philosopher.
 That place..... cet endroit-là..... That there place.

The English occasionally employ a similar construction; for instance, in the phrases "Down that 'ere street," "Up that 'ere stair"; but we presume such phrases are exotics, as the word 'ere or there is superfluous in such cases, the word this or that expressing precisely enough the relative position of the objects indicated. In French, however, it is necessary to say, "That there place," or rather, "That place there," and to employ the adverb there in all cases where the object spoken of is not present to the speaker; as otherwise, the ce would not, if employed alone, indicate with a sufficient degree of clearness the object spoken of.

It will be observed by the learner, that the adverb là, when employed in this way, is joined by a hyphen to the noun that precedes it, and also that ce is used before a word beginning with a consonant, and cet before words beginning with a vowel.

XIX.

Ils avaient..... They had.
 Il avait..... He had.

The syllable ent at the end of verbs is never pronounced; it follows, that the word avaient, given above, should be pronounced as if written av-ai. We may also observe here, that final consonants are generally silent in French; so that the word avait, given above, should also be pronounced as if written av-ai.

The two words avaient and avaient, consequently, though differing in spelling, are pronounced exactly alike. The learner must, however, be careful always to write in the plural avaient, and in the singular avait, as—

Ils avaient un trésor They had a treasure.
Il avait un trésor He had a treasure.

PRONUNCIATION.

DIPHTHONGS.

In the English language two vowels are occasionally used to represent a particular sound. The vowels ou, for instance, in the word house, represent a sound that neither the o nor the u resemble when pronounced individually. The same is the case in French: two vowels are used to represent some one particular sound of the language; and when two vowels are so employed, they are usually, though improperly, called DIPHTHONGS. There are in French altogether five diphthongs, representing five distinct sounds of the language, of which the following is a table exhibiting the sounds they represent:

oi is pronounced like wa in the English word wall .
ai	"	ai	"	" laid .
au	"	o	"	" go .
ou	"	oo	"	" good .
eu	"	ue	"	" guest .*

The only one of these diphthongs that requires a special notice is the eu. This diphthong is very much used in French, and most Frenchmen pronounce it precisely as the English do the ue in the word guest. The natives of Paris, however, give the eu a deeper inflection, somewhat approaching to a in the English word bath. Natives of London, in their pronunciation of such words as birth, mirth, give the ir a sound that is an exact counterfeit to the Parisian inflection of the French eu; so that they have only to transfer this sound to the French eu in order to pronounce that diphthong in absolute perfection. Those among our students unacquainted with this local inflection of ir, must use the sound of ue in the word guest, which, though not the most elegant, is nevertheless the most common pronunciation of the diphthong.

The learner should now go over the words of the text, and pronounce the diphthongs in the manner pointed out in the table. By doing this carefully and attentively, he will make himself familiar with the signs and value of the combined vowels. When he has accomplished this, he will have gained an important point in his progress towards acquiring the French pronunciation; we say an important point, because the sounds of the five diphthongs may almost be said to constitute the language.

We would here guard the student against allowing the peculiarities of his own language to mislead and retard him in the study of French. In English, diphthongs are employed to represent single sounds as well as in French; but the sounds represented by a diphthong in the one language, is in most cases totally different from the sound it represents in the other. Unless therefore the learner be exceedingly careful at the outset, he will naturally give the English sound to the French diphthong, and the result will be a bad pronunciation of the latter. The English student of French must also guard himself against the unfixed notions as to the value of letters he has imbibed with his mother tongue. An English diphthong, like the chameleon, has the property of change, varying its sound to suit the convenience of the word in which it is used; take for an example of this, ou in the words Cousin, court, could, count.

* In all other combinations of vowels besides these, each vowel has its own individual sound.

In each of these four words the ou has a perfectly distinct sound. Such a melange cannot but superinduce a vague impression of the value of letters, exceedingly pernicious in the study of spoken language. But having a variety of sounds is not the only noxious circumstance attendant on the English diphthongs: some of the sounds of one diphthong are occasionally given to another. The sound of ou in could is also possessed by the diphthong oo in good; the ou in court is claimed by the ou in course; and the ou in count is enjoyed by the ow in cowherd. It is a favorite theme with the writers of English grammars to say, that an Englishman should be well grounded in his own before he studies another language. We must observe, that if another language was grounded upon the discordant materials we have been now speaking of, it could not stand, it would soon be swallowed up in the perplexities of its foundation, and very probably "leave not a wreck behind." The mingling of the sounds peculiar both to the vowels and diphthongs of the English language, destroys the relation that should subsist between the orthography and pronunciation, and must at the same time destroy the impression that such should exist. Throughout the whole series of modern languages, except the English, and perhaps the Chinese, there is an intimate connexion between the orthography and pronunciation. We do not know much either of the language or of the literature of the Esquimaux; but we know enough of both to be aware that greater consistency reigns between their written and spoken language than there is in English. The learner therefore must endeavor to divest his mind of the views of language he has obtained from his mother tongue, and replace them by some more stable notions as to the relation between sound and letter. He must not suppose that because a vowel, or a combination of vowels, has three or four different sounds in his own language, that such is the case in any other. The sounds we have given of the five French diphthongs in the preceding table, they ALWAYS have, under all circumstances, and in every position. In this particular the French pronunciation is not only fixed and immutable, but exceedingly clear and simple. Nothing can be more easy than to pronounce the diphthongs correctly, and few points in the language are of more importance.

COMPOSITION.

He has.
 What has he?
 Has he wherewithal to eat?
 Is he wealthy?
 Yes, he is rich.
 He has said.

What has he said?
 Who said that?
 When did he say that?
 To whom did he say that?
 He said that to the philosopher.
 He is.

Who is he?
 Is he a philosopher?
 No, he is a traveller.
 Where is he?
 Is he here?
 No, he is there.
 Where is the philosopher?
 The philosopher is at Paris.
 What is that person?
 He is a traveller.
 What is that other person?
 It is the philosopher.
 He wants.
 What does he want?
 He wants wealth.
 Who is it that wants wealth?
 It is the philosopher.
 From whom does he want wealth?
 Why does he ask for riches?
 What does that traveller want?
 He wants a place.
 What place does he want?
 He wants the place where the three travellers died.
 He wants also a companion.
 The person he wants is at Paris.
 That is a pity.
 Look at that person going along there;
 that is a philosopher.
 There is a traveller from Paris.
 Look at that place.
 There is a misfortune.
 Here is another.
 Here is a traveller.
 There is another.
 This person is like that.
 This philosopher is similar to that.
 What a pity!
 What misfortunes!
 What wealth!
 What a philosopher!
 What a lot of travellers!
 What a crowd of people!
 What excessive politeness!
 What a place!
 There are riches!

One of the travellers said to the other,
 We are hungry and must have something to eat; let one of us go and buy some meat.
 Is it a misfortune to be rich? said two travellers who died of hunger.
 A philosopher passing the place where the two travellers were eating (mangelant) their companion, said. There is a manner of making a meal!
 The three travellers said that their two companions died after having poisoned a philosopher.
 We are unfortunate, said two travellers who found a philosopher on their road.
 It is necessary to have something to eat, said a philosopher, after having killed his comrade.
 We have something to eat, said the two travellers when they found the poisoned meat.
 Now we are poisoned, said the two travellers after having eaten the meat.
 How rich we are! said the three travellers when they found the treasure.
 We are hungry, said two persons when they ate their companion.
 We have a treasure, said two persons when they found a philosopher.
 What is wealth! said a passenger.
 There are three travellers who found a treasure, and afterward died of hunger.
 The world treated the three travellers in such a manner that they all died.
 There is a way of going to work, said a philosopher, when the traveller put poison in the meat he had brought to eat.
 We must eat, said the two travellers when they ate their companion.
 Here we are masters of the treasure, said the two travellers after having killed their companion.

LESSON FIFTH.

READING.

REPETITION.

IL a. Qu'a-t-il? A-t-il de quoi manger? A-t-il des richesses? Oui, il a des richesses. Il a dit. Qu'a-t-il dit? Qui a dit cela? Quand a-t-il dit cela? A qui a-t-il dit cela? Il a dit cela au philosophe? Il est. Qui est-il? Est-il philosophe? Non, il est voyageur. Où est-il? Est-il dans cet endroit-ci? Non, il est dans cet endroit-là. Où est Monsieur le philosophe? Monsieur le philosophe est à Paris. Quelle est cette personne-là? C'est un voyageur. Quelle est cette autre personne? C'est le philosophe. Il demande. Que demande-t-il? Il demande des richesses. Qui est-ce qui demande des richesses? C'est le philosophe. A qui demande-t-il des richesses? Pourquoi demande-t-il des richesses? Que demande ce voyageur-là? Il demande un endroit. Quel endroit demande-t-il? Il demande l'endroit où moururent les trois voyageurs. Il demande aussi son camarade. La personne qu'il demande est à Paris. Voilà un malheur. Voyez cette personne passant par là: c'est un philosophe. Voilà un voyageur de Paris. Voyez cet endroit-là. Voilà un malheur. Voici un autre malheur. Voici un voyageur. Voilà un autre voyageur. Cette personne-là est semblable à cette personne-ci. Ce philosophe-ci est semblable à celui-là. Quel malheur! Que de malheurs! Quelles richesses! Quel philosophe! Que de voyageurs! Que de monde! Que de manières! Quel endroit! Voilà des richesses! Un des voyageurs dit à l'autre, "Nous avons faim, et il faut avoir de quoi manger; qu'un de nous aille acheter de la viande."

"Est-ce un malheur d'avoir des richesses?" dirent deux voyageurs qui moururent de faim. Un philosophe passant à l'endroit où les deux voyageurs dirent que leurs deux camarades moururent après avoir empoisonné un philosophe. "Nous avons du malheur," dirent deux voyageurs qui trouvèrent un philosophe dans leur chemin. "Il faut avoir de quoi manger," dit un philosophe, après avoir tué son camarade. "Nous avons de quoi manger," dirent les deux voyageurs, quand ils trouvèrent la viande empoisonnée. "Nous voilà empoisonnés!" dirent les deux voyageurs après avoir mangé la viande. "Que de richesses nous avons!" dirent les trois voyageurs quand ils trouvèrent le trésor. "Nous avons faim," dirent deux personnes quand ils mangèrent leur camarade. "Nous avons un trésor," dirent deux personnes quand ils trouvèrent un philosophe. "Qu'est-ce que les richesses!" dit un passant, "voilà trois voyageurs qui trouvèrent un trésor et moururent de faim après. Le monde a traité les trois voyageurs de manière qu'ils moururent tous les trois." "Voilà une manière de faire," dit un philosophe quand le voyageur mit du poison dans la viande qu'il avait apportée à manger. "Il faut manger," dirent les deux voyageurs quand ils mangèrent leur camarade. "Nous voilà maîtres du trésor!" dirent les deux voyageurs après avoir tué leur camarade.

READING TEXT.

Instead of giving a fresh portion of text, we shall make what we have already given the subject of the present lesson. A few words well known, and a few leading principles thoroughly understood and firmly established on the memory, will be of more use to the learner than a vagrant notion a hundred times the number. The following is the text constituting the preceding lessons, united under one head, and with which the learner ought now to be quite as familiar as with his pater noster.

LES VOYAGEURS AVIDES.

Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor dans leur chemin, et dirent, "Nous avons faim, qu'un de nous aille acheter de quoi manger"; un d'eux se détacha et alla dans l'intention de leur apporter de quoi faire un repas.

Mais chemin faisant, il dit en lui-même, il faut que j'empoisonne la viande, afin que mes deux camarades meurent en la mangeant, et que je jouisse du trésor moi seul. Il exécuta son dessein et mit du poison dans ce qu'il avait apporté à manger.

Mais les deux autres, qui avaient conçu un semblable dessein contre lui pendant son absence, l'assassinèrent à son retour, et demeurèrent les maîtres du trésor. Après l'avoir tué ils mangèrent la viande empoisonnée et moururent aussi tous deux.

Un philosophe passant par cet endroit-là, dit : Voilà quel est le monde ! Voyez de quelle manière il a traité ces trois personnes. Malheur à celui qui lui demande des richesses.

CONVERSATION.

In addition to the words already introduced under this head, we shall in the present colloquial exercise make use of the following new ones :

Mesdemoiselles,	young ladies,	pronounced	méd-ma-zel
Y	there,	"	ee
En	{	of it, or, of them,	en
		about it, or about
On		them,
	one,	"	on

From the translation we have already given in the text of the word dil, the learner will be aware that on dit is word for word one says; but in translating a sentence, he should not rest satisfied with a mere literal translation of the words; he should see whether some other English expression will not bring out the sense of the context with greater clearness. The sentence on dit is very much used in French, and the literal translation one says is scarcely English; some other kind of phraseology must therefore be employed in English in cases where on dit is employed in French, and it is the business of the learner to find these out. The other words of the phrase will generally suggest how on dit should be translated. The expression they say, people say, it is said, will be frequently found the actual equivalents for on dit. In the same way the learner will be aware that the phrase on avoit apporté de la viande is word for word one had brought of the meat, but a moderate exertion of intelligence will suggest "Some meat had been brought," as the English translation of this phrase. When the words of a sentence are known, the learner should exercise his ingenuity in supplying the English for the French construction; by this means facility and accuracy in translation will eventually be acquired. We shall introduce abundantly the pronoun on in the following colloquy, in order to familiarize the learner with the use of the word, and habituate him to rely upon his own judgment in making English of an expression wherein it occurs.

The foregoing remarks are also applicable to the pronoun y, there, and to en, of them, or, of it; both of which are of very common occurrence in French. The word en has already appeared in the text, but in that case it is equivalent to the English word in. En has two perfectly distinct significations. In one case it is a form of the Latin preposition in, and in the other is a contraction of the Latin word inde. In the first case it is equivalent to the English preposition in, and in the second it is a pronoun, and will have to be rendered by one or other of the expressions we have pointed out. The intelligent learner will always be able to judge by the words of the context whether en is a preposition or a pronoun, and it will be necessary for him to pay attention to this distinction in translating the word. We have said that y is equivalent to the English word there. The y is used exactly as the word there in all cases where there indicates a place, with this difference, that y is always placed before a verb, whereas there is usually placed after one. Besides the common use of y, in such phrases as il y étoit, he was there, an idiomatic use is made of the word, that requires to be noticed here. The French, to signify what is meant in English by the expression there was, say, it there had, il y avoit; and in asking such a question as, "Was there so and so?" say there had it so and so? y avoit-il so and so? This idiomatic construction will have to be borne in mind in going over the following exercise. The words y, en, and on, being much employed in French, it is necessary that their use and value be well understood. We have introduced them abundantly in our present colloquial exercise, because the subject of conversation being known, and all the other words, the learner will very easily find out the meaning of these three; and thus he will be able to detect for himself the principle that determines their use. A careful observation of the application we shall make of the en's, y's, and on's, will greatly facilitate the learner in reading a French author, and will pave the way to a clear perception of the genius of the language.

- Dit-on que les trois voyageurs moururent à Paris?..... Non, Mesdemoiselles,* on dit qu'ils moururent dans le chemin.
- Dit-on qu'ils assassinèrent un philosophe?..... Non, Mesdemoiselles, mais on dit qu'ils assassinèrent leur camarade.
- Dit-on qu'ils avaient empoisonné leur camarade?..... Non, Mesdemoiselles.
- Les voyageurs mangèrent-ils de la viande empoisonnée?..... Oui, ils en mangèrent.
- Euf moururent-ils?..... Oui, ils en moururent.
- Qu'en dit un philosophe?..... Il dit, Voilà comment le monde a traité ces personnes!
- Que trouvèrent les trois voyageurs dans le chemin?..... Ils y trouvèrent un trésor.
- Qu'en dit l'un d'eux?..... Il dit, Il faut que j'en jouisse seul.
- Combien de voyageurs y avait-il en chemin?..... Trois.
- Y avait-il d'autres personnes?..... Il y avait aussi un philosophe.
- Y avait-il un trésor dans le chemin?..... Oui, il y en avait un.
- Y avait-il de quoi manger dans le chemin?..... Non, mais on en avait apporté.
- Y avait-il de la viande dans ce qu'on avait apporté?..... Oui, il y en avait.
- Dans quoi y avait-il du poison?..... Il y en avait dans la viande qu'un des voyageurs avait apportée pour manger.
- De quoi mangèrent les voyageurs?... Ils mangèrent de la viande.
- Y avait-il du poison dans ce qu'ils avaient mangé?..... Oui, il y en avait.
- Où dit-on qu'ils demeurèrent?..... On dit qu'ils demeurèrent dans le chemin.
- Y trouvèrent-ils de quoi manger?... Non, Mesdemoiselles.
- Y trouvèrent-ils un camarade?..... Non, Mesdemoiselles.
- Qu'y trouvèrent-ils?..... Ils y trouvèrent un trésor.
- Qu'y dirent-ils?..... Ils dirent, Nous avons faim, qu'un de nous aille acheter de quoi manger.
- Qui y assassinèrent-ils?..... Ils y assassinèrent un de leurs camarades.
- Qu'y mangèrent-ils?..... Ils y mangèrent de la viande.
- Dit-on qu'ils y moururent?..... Oui, on dit cela.
- Dit-on qu'ils moururent de faim?... Non, il y en eut un de tué et les deux autres moururent en mangeant de la viande empoisonnée.
- Qu'avaient les trois voyageurs en chemin?..... Ils avaient faim.
- Qu'en dirent-ils?..... Ils dirent, Qu'un de nous aille acheter de quoi manger.
- S'en détacha-t-il un dans cette intention?..... Oui, un d'eux se détacha.
- Alla-t-il acheter de la viande?..... Oui, il alla en acheter.
- Dit-on qu'il avait apporté de la viande?..... Oui, on dit qu'il en avait apporté.
- Avait-il du poison?..... Oui, il en avait.
- Mit-il du poison dans la viande?..... Oui, il en mit.
- Pourquoi?..... Afin que ses camarades mourussent en la mangeant.
- Combien de camarades avait-il?..... Il en avait deux.
- Avait-on empoisonné les trois voyageurs?..... Non, Mesdemoiselles.

* In addressing young ladies, the compliment Mesdemoiselles is always employed in French.

† It will be observed that en will be here better translated by in consequence of that, than by its simple equivalent of it.

Avait-on un trésor?	Oui, Mesdemoiselles, les trois voyageurs en trouvèrent un dans le chemin.
Alla-t-on acheter de quoi manger?...	Oui, on y' alla.
Alla-t-on acheter de la viande?	Oui, on y alla.
Alla-t-on manger un philosophe?...	Mais non, Mesdemoiselles.
Alla-t-on à Paris?	Non, Mesdemoiselles.
Dit-on que les trois voyageurs demeurèrent à Paris?	Non, Mesdemoiselles.
Dit-on que les trois voyageurs mangèrent un philosophe?	Mais non, Mesdemoiselles.
Que dit-on qu'ils mangèrent?	On dit que les voyageurs mangèrent de la viande.
Dit-on que le philosophe avait mis du poison dans la viande?	Non, mais on dit qu'un de leurs camarades l'avait empoisonnée.
Avait-on faim?	Oui, les trois voyageurs avaient faim.
Avait-on apporté de quoi manger?...	Oui, le voyageur qui se détacha en avait apporté.
Avait-on assassiné un voyageur?...	Oui, les deux voyageurs avaient assassiné un de leurs camarades.
Avait-on tué un philosophe?	Non, Mesdemoiselles.
Comment le monde a-t-il traité les trois voyageurs?	De manière qu'ils moururent tous les trois.
Qu'en dit un philosophe?	Il en dit, "Voilà quel est le monde! voyez de quelle manière il a traité ces trois personnes. Malheur à celui qui lui demande des richesses."
En quel endroit dit-il cela?	Dans l'endroit où moururent les trois voyageurs.
Exécuta-t-on un dessein?	Oui, le voyageur avait exécuté son dessein.
Quel dessein exécuta-t-il?	Le dessein d'assassiner ses camarades.
Comment l'exécuta-t-il?	Il acheta de la viande et y mit du poison.
En mangea-t-il lui-même?	Non, il apporta le tout à ses camarades.
Pendant son absence où demeurèrent les deux autres?	Ils demeurèrent en chemin.
Quand il apporta la viande empoisonnée, qui en mangea?	Ses deux camarades.
En moururent-ils?	Oui, ils moururent après l'avoir mangée.
Les trois voyageurs moururent-ils tous?	Oui, ils moururent tous.
Où moururent les trois voyageurs?...	Dans l'endroit où ils trouvèrent le trésor.

CONSTRUCTION.

XX.

Trois voyageurs trouvèrent un trésor.....	Three travellers found a treasure.
Ils dirent.....	They said.
Ils meurent.....	They may die.
Ils l'assassinèrent.....	They assassinated him.
Ils demeurèrent.....	They remained.
Ils mangèrent.....	They ate.
Ils moururent.....	They died.

* It will be observed that y here has rather the signification of for that purpose, than its primitive signification there.

It will be observed that these verbs are all of the third person plural, and that they all end in ent. If the learner has been attending to the pronunciation, he will be aware that this ent is not pronounced in any of them. If we inquire whence comes this ent, and wherefore it is not pronounced, we must go back a century or two in the history of the language in order to find the cause. In the Latin language, of which French is nothing more than a barbarous dialect, the third person plural of all tenses of verbs end in ent, or nt preceded by some other vowel. This ent in Latin is equivalent to the English pronoun they, and to the French ils. The Franks, when they got possession of Gaul, preferred expressing themselves when speaking in the third person, by a pronoun; and as they do not appear to have paid the smallest respect to Latin grammar, dropped the ent altogether, having found that they could make themselves perfectly understood without it. The Latin termination, however, continued to exist in the written language even although its equivalent ils had been introduced, and thus a solecism was created, and exists in the language.

It may be some consolation for an Englishman to know, that, while his own language is yet in a state demi-savage, there are also barbarisms in languages that boast a higher degree of civilization. The French cannot, any more than the English, declare itself an independent language: it is still a "motley clown," one half belonging to the transalpine conquerors of Gaul, and the other half to the Goths and Vandals from beyond the Rhine. From the one it has its personal endings, and from the other the habit of using subsidiary words. In continuing to use both in defiance of logic and grammatical analogy, the French only perpetuate a monument of their double subserviency.

The learner must bear in mind that though ent is written at the end of all the third persons plural of verbs, it is never pronounced.

XXI.

FORMATION OF A NEGATION.

The English negative particle not is rendered in French by the two words ne and pas, the ne being placed before the word negated, and the pas after it. In this way the affirmative, ils trouvèrent un trésor, they found a treasure, forms the negative; ils ne trouvèrent pas de trésor, they did not find a treasure; and so in the case of all other negatives.

When ne comes before a word beginning with a vowel, the e is elided, as from the affirmative c'est, it is, is formed the negative

Ce n'est pas..... It is not.

In asking a question with a negative, the ne is then placed before the simple interrogation itself, and the pas at the end of it; as from the interrogation est-ce ? is formed the negative interrogation.

N'est-ce pas ?..... Is it not ?

We may here observe that this particular interrogation, this n'est-ce pas (pronounced nes-pa), is very often used in asking questions. It is of universal application, and, on being put to the end of any affirmative, forms an interrogative.

The following examples will show the use and application of n'est-ce pas :

Vous avez le trésor, n'est-ce pas ?	You have the treasure, have you not ?
Nous avons faim, n'est-ce pas ?	We are hungry, are we not ?
Ils mangèrent leur camarade, n'est-ce pas ?	They ate their companion, did they not ?
Il alla à Paris, n'est-ce pas ?	He went to Paris, did he not ?

We shall introduce a series of negatives, under the head COMPOSITIONS, for the practice of the learner in their construction.

XXII.

Ils demeurèrent LES maîtres du trésor. They remained masters of the treasure.

In English the use of the definite article the is subject to greater exactitude than in French. The is only used in English when some special object or objects are alluded to; but in French, as may be observed by the phrase before us, the definite article is used even although no definition is signified. "When the two travellers killed their companion, they remained masters of the treasure": there is certainly no necessity for saying here, "they remained the masters of the treasure." In French, however, an article of some kind or other is used before almost every noun: this appears to be done in order more to point out its gender than to serve any other purpose. We have already said (§ XI.) that nouns sometimes have a different meaning when they have the feminine article la before them, than when they are distinguished by the masculine article; hence the article is used in French in many instances where it is totally unnecessary as an instrument of definition, and consequently would not be employed in English. In most of the French grammars we have seen, a large portion is taken up in explaining the use of the article in French, in which the authors generally contrive to embarrass themselves, and create a complication of difficulties where there is absolutely nothing but the utmost simplicity, the article being used in French on all occasions that it possibly can be used. We have seen a large octavo volume written on this one subject, and we think the author merits the pillory for his pains; not only because he has thereby confounded and misled all his brother grammarians, but because he has led people who have no means of knowing better, to suppose that there is a difficulty where none exists, and so to waste, in hunting after a shadow, time that might be profitably employed.

PRONUNCIATION.

VOWELS.

There are in French, as in English, the five vowels, a, e, i, o, u. Of these we have already given, page 20, lesson second, the pronunciation of the u; and, page 29, lesson third, that of the e. The other three are pronounced in French as follows:—

a is pronounced like a in the English word part .
i	" \	ee	"	seen.
o	"	o	"	stone.
D

Besides these, there is the letter y, usually considered in both languages to be a vowel. Y is pronounced in French exactly like the i, that is, like ee in the English word seen; but when y occurs between two vowels, it then becomes equivalent to two i's; for example, the word voyageurs is pronounced as if written voiiageurs. The first of the i's in conjunction with the o forms the diphthong oi, pronounced, as we have said, wa, and the second i, having its own sound, makes up the pronunciation (wa-ee-a-zhair) we have given of the word in the text. Each of the English vowels has two or three sounds, some of which are enjoyed in common by all the five, but no such confusion exists in the French language. Each of the French vowels has the one particular sound we have assigned to it, which must always be given to it in order that the word in which it occurs may be intelligibly pronounced. Nothing therefore can be more easily attained than a correct pronunciation of the French vowels, and yet we know that it is frequently a long time before the learner accomplishes this part of his task. We have said that the letter a has the sound of a in the English word part, but this is not the most common English sound of that vowel. An Englishman, when he meets with an a in a word whose pronunciation he is unacquainted with, will naturally give it the sound of a in made. The French a never has, under any circumstances, such a sound; and if this sound be given to the a, the meaning of the word in which it is so pronounced will be totally obscured. These remarks are applicable to the other vowels. The natural predilections of the learner will lead him to pronounce them all inaccurately; he must therefore endeavor to associate the French vowels with their French sounds. To effect this, he should again go over the words of the text, and pronounce all the a's that do not form a part of one or other of the five diphthongs, like a in the English words part, start, dart; all the i's like ee in the English words seen, been, green; all the o's like o in stone, gore, bore. This exercise will serve to impress on the memory a fixed notion of the sounds peculiar to the French vowels, that will be of the greatest use to him in his future intercourse with the language.

CONSONANTS.

Singles.

With the following five exceptions, and the nasal sound given to the m and n already spoken of, the consonants are pronounced in French precisely as they are in English:

1st. The letter g in French before e, i, and y, is pronounced like the z in azure; as voyageur, pronounced roya-zhair. The letter j is always so pronounced; as jour, day, pronounced zhoor. The learner is requested to pay attention to these sounds of the j and g, as these letters are pronounced in English in a very different manner.

2d. When s or x occur between two vowels, they are pronounced in French like z in the English word zone; as empoisonner, to poison, pronounced empoisonné.

3d. The letter t before i is generally pronounced like s; as in the word intention, pronounced in-ten-see-on.

4th. The letter r has always the vibrating sound er-r-r of the English word term.

5th. The letters gu are pronounced like g in the English word get; as in the word guerre, war, pronounced ger, giving the g the hard sound. And in the same way qu are pronounced like k; as in the word qui, who, pronounced kec; quel, what, pronounced kel; question, pronounced kes-lee-on, &c.

These five observations should be read over two or three times, so that they may be well fixed on the memory, as they are essential to a correct pronunciation.

The most marked feature in the pronunciation of French is, that a consonant at the end of a word is silent. No final consonants are pronounced except r, which is also silent at the end of manger, to eat, pronounced mangé; tuer, to kill, pronounced tué, and other infinitives of the first conjugation. This peculiarity presents little difficulty: the learner has only to cut off the concluding consonant of each word before pronouncing it; thus he will pronounce trois, trwa, voyageurs, wa-ee-a-geur, and so with all other words ending in a consonant.* When, however, there is a close connexion between two words, such as exists between a verb and its pronoun, one of which ends in a consonant and the other begins with a vowel, the final consonant is then pronounced with the vowel that follows it; as,

Nous avons	pronounced	noo-zavon.
Faut-il	"	fo-teel.
Son absence	"	so-nab-sens.

We have already remarked, under the head CONSTRUCTION, § XX, that ent of the third persons plural of verbs is also silent. The t when followed by a vowel is however enunciated; as mangèrent-ils, pronounced mangèr-teel. This will be better understood by referring to CONSTRUCTION, § VI.

Doubles.

Besides the sounds represented by the single consonants, there are two others used in French, represented by double consonants: these are the liquid ng and the l mouillé. When ng occur between two vowels, these letters are pronounced like ny in English; as, enunciating the ye very slightly. When two ll's occur after i, followed by another vowel, they are pronounced like y; as in the word fille, girl, pronounced fee-ye. In conclusion, we may add, that if the learner has followed up attentively what we have said in this and the four preceding lessons, he is now capable, so far as the pronunciation is concerned, of reading French. There are here and there exceptions to the rules we have laid down; but these will become known to the learner as he proceeds. Once familiar with the broad principles and leading feature of the pronunciation of a language, and the minute detail will be no obstacle: the learner's own observation and judgment will tell him when a rule may be judiciously departed from.

La campagne	pronounced	In eam-pan-ye,
Boulogne	"	Boo-lon-ye,

* There are a few words of which the final consonant is pronounced; these the student will become better acquainted with as he progresses in the language.

COMPOSITION.

The traveller is not at Paris.
 Is he not in France ?
 No, he is not in France.
 Where is the treasure ?
 Is it not on the road ?
 No, it is not there.
 The philosopher is not rich.
 Has he not the treasure ?
 No, he has not the treasure.
 The masters of the treasure had nothing to eat.
 Had they no meat ?
 No, they had none.
 You have (vous avez).
 You have eaten your companion, have you not ?
 You have killed a philosopher, have you not ?
 You have the treasure, have you not ?
 You are hungry, are you not ?
 You have wherewithal to eat, have you not ?
 Have you nothing to eat ?
 Are you not hungry ?
 Have you not the treasure ?
 Have you not the meat ?
 The travellers did not find a treasure.
 They did not eat their companion.
 They did not poison any other traveller.
 They did not bring anything to eat.
 They did not go to Paris.
 They did not pass into France.
 They did not live on the road.
 They did not buy any meat.
 They did not kill any philosopher.
 They did not assassinate any one.
 They did not seek riches.
 They did not execute their intention.
 They did not separate themselves.
 They did not die.
 They did not conceive a design.
 They did not say, "We are hungry."
 They did not enjoy the treasure.
 They did not put any poison in the meat.
 They did not make any repast.
 They did not see any philosopher.
 The traveller did not find a treasure.
 He did not eat his companion.
 He did not poison any other traveller.
 He did not bring anything to eat.
 He did not go to Paris.
 He did not go into France.
 He did not remain on the road.
 He did not buy any meat.
 He did not kill a philosopher.
 He did not assassinate anybody.
 He did not seek for riches.
 He did not execute his intention.
 He did not separate himself from his companions.
 He did not die.
 He did not conceive a design.
 He did not say that a philosopher is an evil.
 He did not put any poison in the meat.
 He did not enjoy the treasure.
 He did not see any other traveller.
 He did not make a repast.
 No one found a treasure on the road.
 No one brought any meat there.
 No one ate any.
 No one bought any.
 No one lived on the road.
 No one killed a philosopher there.
 No one assassinated a traveller there.
 No one executed an intention there.
 Were the three travellers not eaten ?
 No, they were not eaten.
 They are dead (ils sont morts), are they not ?
 Yes, they are dead.
 That is a pity, is it not ?
 Yes, it is a pity.
 Are all the three travellers dead ?
 Yes, they are all dead.
 Good-by (adieu) to the three travellers.

LESSON SIXTH.

READING.

REPETITION.

Le voyageur n'est pas à Paris. Est-ce qu'il n'est pas en France? Non, il n'est pas en France. Où est le trésor? N'est-ce pas dans le chemin? Non, ce n'est pas là. Le philosophe n'a pas de richesses. N'a-t-il pas le trésor? Non, il n'a pas le trésor. Les maîtres du trésor n'avaient pas de quoi manger. N'avaient-ils pas de la viande? Non, ils n'en avaient pas. Vous avez. Vous avez mangé votre camarade. n'est-ce pas? Vous avez tué un philosophe n'est-ce pas? Vous avez le trésor, n'est-ce pas? Vous avez faim, n'est-ce pas? Vous avez de quoi manger, n'est-ce pas? N'avez-vous pas de quoi manger? N'avez-vous pas faim? N'avez-vous pas le trésor? N'avez-vous pas de viande? Les voyageurs ne trouvèrent pas un trésor. Ils ne mangèrent pas leur camarade. Ils n'empoisonnèrent pas d'autre voyageur. Ils n'apportèrent pas de quoi manger. Ils n'allèrent pas à Paris. Ils ne passèrent pas en France. Ils ne demeurèrent pas dans le chemin. Ils n'achetèrent pas de viande. Ils ne tuèrent pas le philosophe. Ils n'assassinèrent personne. Ils ne demandèrent pas de richesses. Ils n'exécutèrent pas leur intention. Ils ne se détachèrent pas les uns des autres. Ils ne moururent pas. Ils ne conçurent pas un dessein. Ils ne dirent pas nous avons faim. Ils ne jouirent pas du trésor. Ils ne mirent pas de poison dans la viande. Ils ne firent pas de repas. Ils ne virent pas de philosophe. Le voyageur ne trouva pas un trésor. Il ne mangea pas son camarade. Il n'empoisonna pas d'autre voyageur. Il n'apporta pas de quoi manger. Il n'alla pas à Paris. Il ne passa pas en France. Il ne demeura pas dans le chemin. Il n'acheta pas de viande. Il ne tua pas un philosophe. Il n'assassina personne. Il ne demanda pas de richesses. Il n'exécuta pas son intention. Il ne se détacha pas de ses camarades. Il ne mourut pas. Il ne conçut pas un dessein. Il ne dit pas qu'un philosophe est un malheur. Il ne mit pas de poison dans la viande. Il ne jouit pas du trésor. Il ne vit pas d'autre voyageur. Il ne fit pas de repas. On n'a pas trouvé un trésor dans le chemin. On n'y a pas apporté de viande. On n'en a pas mangé. On n'en a pas acheté. On n'est pas demeuré dans le chemin. On n'y a pas tué de philosophe. On n'y a pas assassiné de voyageur. On n'y a pas exécuté de dessein. Est-ce qu'on n'a pas mangé les trois voyageurs? Non, on ne les a pas mangés. Ils sont morts, n'est-ce pas? Oui, ils sont morts. C'est un malheur, n'est-ce pas? Oui, c'est un malheur. Est-ce que tous les voyageurs sont morts? Oui, ils sont morts tous. Adieu, aux trois voyageurs.

 IDIOMS.

An acquaintance with a few of the common-place phrases of every-day use will be found of considerable utility to the student of a modern language. These phrases, in general, involve the most idiomatic constructions of the language, and may aid the learner in comprehending other expressions of a similar nature, but of less frequent occurrence. Besides, if the learner has any intercourse at all with persons who speak the language, he will hear these phrases so often repeated that they cannot fail of becoming familiar to his ear, and so he will ultimately arrive at understanding a part at least of what is said. To charge the mind, however, with a multitude of these phrases would not be advisable: a single phrase, if properly handled, might be turned to as much account as a whole book of "Dialogues." Suppose, for example, the learner to put in French, to a native of France, the question "What do you call this in French?" he might by this means elicit the whole vocabulary of the language, and carry on a colloquy of as much practical utility as a more extended conversation. Again, supposing the learner on the other side of the Channel, the phrase "Which is the way to —?" would elicit an indefinite variety of reply that would be readily understood by the querist. The learner might in this manner get familiarized with the realities of the language, even while his knowledge of it were limited to the two phrases we have been speaking of. All the benefit that a beginner could possibly derive from a teacher, is an early induction to the practice of a language; but how few teachers of French possesses the art of making themselves understood to their junior pupils in French! Their lessons for the most part consist in illogical explanations, and commonly in so very bad English as to excite laughter. How the ear of the student can be familiarized with the French language by such means, we cannot possibly conceive. We shall give for the present reading exercise a series of such familiar every-day expressions as we may consider most likely to be of practical utility. Of these we shall give the English equivalents, together with the value of each individual word. There is no necessity for us giving the pronunciation of these phrases, as the learner who has carefully attended to our remarks in the preceding lessons, can now pronounce French perfectly well. We shall, however, point out any peculiarity in the pronunciation of the words that is not in accordance with the principles we have laid down.

INTRODUCTORY PHRASES.

Parlez-vous Français?.....	Do you speak French?
Un peu.....	A little.
Je comprends le Français, mais je ne le parle pas.....	I understand French, but do not speak it.
Vous êtes Français, je pense, Monsieur?.....	You are a Frenchman, I suppose, Sir?
Oui, Monsieur, je le suis.....	Yes, Sir, I am.
Combien de temps êtes-vous resté en Angleterre?§.....	How long have you been in England?
Aimez-vous beaucoup Londres?.....	How do you like London?
Vous m'obligeriez si vous me parliez Français.....	You will oblige me if you speak French.
Je vous comprends parfaitement bien.	I understand you perfectly well.
Excusez-moi.....	I beg your pardon.
Je n'ai pas compris ce que vous m'avez dit.....	I have not understood what you have said.
Seriez-vous assez bon pour répéter ce que vous avez dit?.....	Will you be kind enough to repeat what you have said?
Fumez-vous?.....	Do you smoke?
Voulez-vous un cigare?.....	Will you have a cigar?
Avec plaisir.....	With pleasure.
Merci.....	Thank you.

RECOGNITORY.

Bon jour, Monsieur.....	Good morning, Sir.
Comment vous portez-vous?.....	How do you do?
Assez bien, et vous?.....	Pretty well, thank you.
Je suis charmé de vous voir.....	I am delighted to see you.
Il fait une superbe matinée.....	It is a beautiful morning.
Il fait vraiment chaud!.....	It is excessively warm.
Il fait beau depuis quelques jours....	The weather has been very fine for some time.
C'est vrai.....	It is true.
Y a-t-il quelque chose de nouveau?..	Is there anything new?
Rien, que je sache.....	Nothing, that I know.
Quand viendrez-vous me voir?.....	When are you coming to see me?
Un de ces jours.....	One of these days.
Messieurs, je vous souhaite le bon soir.	Gentlemen, I wish you a very good evening.
Adieu, Messieurs.....	Good-by, Gentlemen.

* We have said that final consonants are not pronounced when the silent consonant is preceded by an unaccented e. In that case this letter is pronounced as if written é; thus parlez is pronounced as if written parlé; aimez, as if written aimé; répéter, répété; and so in all similar cases.

† The word êtes, are, is exceptional, the unaccented e not being pronounced: êtes is pronounced as if written ét.

‡ When the letters p, d, or t occur after a nasal, they are usually silent, as in the word comprends, pronounced comprang; temps, pronounced taug. This is because these consonants cannot be easily pronounced after the nasal. It is for the same reason that l is silent before k, in the English words walk, talk, etc.

§ An unaccented e before two consonants is pronounced as if written è. Thus Angleterre is pronounced Angletèr; richesses, as if written richèss; and so on.

|| Ch, in French, is, except in a few words derived from the Greek, pronounced like sh. Thus the words charmé is pronounced as if written sharmé; chaud, sho.

GENERAL.

Quelle heure est-il ?.....	What o'clock is it?
A pen près huit heures*	About eight.
Est-ce bien vrai ?.....	Is it true?
Je le pense.....	I think so.
Je suis occupé	I am busy.
J'ai tort	I am wrong.
Vous avez raison	You are right.
Précisément	Exactly.
Monsieur, ayez la bonté de me dire — Comment appelez-vous cela en Fran- çais ?.....	Have the goodness to tell me, sir,— What do you call that in French?
J'y suis.....	I am coming.
Quelle bêtise !.....	What nonsense!
Que je suis bête !.....	What an ass I am!
Cela est bon	That is good.
Je ne sais pas	I do not know.
Le croyez-vous ?.....	Do you think so?
Oui, je le crois	Yes, I do.

ENGLISH GALLICISMS.

A la Française	After the French.
Honni soit qui mal y pense.....	Evil to him who evil thinks.
Dieu et mon droit.....	God and my right.
Cuisine bourgeoise.....	Family cookery.
Table d'hôte à cinq heures.....	An ordinary at five o'clock.
Au bon gourmet.....	Go to the good eater.
Déjeûners à la fourchette	Beaf-steak breakfasts.
Fête champêtre	A pic-nic.
Ici on parle Français.....	French spoken here.
Voulez-vous me donner la monnaie de cinq francs ?.....	Can you change a five-franc piece?
Que voulez-vous ?.....	What do you want?
Comprenez-vous l'Anglais ?.....	Do you understand English?
Je ne parle pas Français.....	I do not speak French.
Je suis Anglais.....	I am an Englishman.
Vive la reine	God save the Queen.

TRANSLATION.

The following is a literal translation of the phrases, giving the exact English equivalent for each French word contained in them.

* An s, added to a word to indicate the plural number, does not affect in any way its pronunciation. Heure, hour, and heures, hours, are pronounced exactly in the same manner. The learner must take care always to pronounce a plural word by its singular form.

† The French like the English, have a natural abhorrence to aspirates and gutturals; for this reason, nearly all the h's in the language are silent, consequently when an h is followed by a vowel, the word is considered to begin a vowel, and the rule we have given (§ 11.), relative to elision of certain letters before words beginning with a vowel, is applicable to them also. There are however some words in the language, such as honi, of which the h is aspirated: these are usually written in italics in the Dictionaries, and should be committed to memory by the learner.

‡ The e mute is inserted after the g in this word, to show that the g is soft, just as an s is sometimes inserted after the g in the English word acknowledgment, for the same purpose.

INTRODUCTORY PHRASES.

Parlez-vous Français? Un peu. Je comprends le Français, Speak you French? A little. I understand the French, mais je ne le parle pas. Vous êtes Français, je pense, but I it speak not. You are French, I think,
 Monsieur? Oui, Monsieur, je le suis. Combien de temps Sir? Yes, Sir, I it am. How much of time êtes-vous resté en Angleterre? Aimez-vous beaucoup Londres? are you rested in England? Love you much London?
 Vous m'obligeriez, si vous me parliez Français. Je vous
 You me would oblige, if you to me speak French. I you comprends parfaitement bien. Excusez-moi. Je n'ai pas understand perfectly well. Excuse me. I have not compris ce que vous m'avez dit. Seriez-vous assez bon understood what you to me have said. Would be you enough good pour répéter ce que vous avez dit? Fumez-vous? Voulez? for to repeat what you have said? Smoke you? Will (have) vous un cigare? Avec plaisir. Merci.
 you a cigar? With pleasure. Thanks.

RECOGNITORY.

Bon jour, Monsieur. Comment vous portez-vous? Assez Good day, Sir. How yourself carry you? Enough bien, et vous? Je suis charmé de vous voir. Il fait well, and you? I am charmed of you to see. It makes (is) une superbe matinée. Il fait vraiment chaud. Il fait a superb morning. It makes (is) truly warm. It makes beau depuis quelques jours. C'est vrai. Y a-t-il quelque fine for some days. That is true. There has it (is there) any chose de nouveau? Rien, que je sache. Quand viendrez thing of new? Nothing that I know. When will come vous me voir? Un de ces jours. Messieurs, je vous you me to see? One of these days. Gentlemen, I you souhaite le bon soir. Adieu, Messieurs. wish the good evening. Adieu, Gentlemen.

GENERAL.

Quelle heure est-il? A peu près huit heures. Est-ce What hour is it? Almost eight hours. Is that bien vrai? Je le pense. Je suis occupé. J'ai tort.

 well (very) true? I it think. I am busy. I have (am) wrong.
 Vous avez raison. Précisément. Monsieur, ayez la bonté
 You have right. Exactly. Sir, have the goodness de me dire. Comment appelez-vous cela en Français? J' of to me to tell. How call you that in French? I y suis. Quelle bêtise! Que je suis bête! Cela est there am. What nonsense! What I am beast! That is bon. Je ne sais pas. Le croyez-vous? Oui, je le good. I know not. It believe you? Yes, I it crois.
 believe.

ENGLISH GALLICISMS.

A la Française. Honi soit qui mal y pense.* Dieu To (after) the French. Ashamed be (he) who evil there thinks. God et mon droit. Cuisine bourgeoise. Table d'hôte à cinq and my right. Cookery bourgeoise.† Table of guest at five heures. Au bon gourmet. Déjeûners à la fourchet e. hours. To the (go) good enter. Breakfasts to (with) the fork.
 Fête-champêtre. Ici on parle Français.
 Holiday-field. Here one speaks French.

LOCAL.

Madame, j'ai l'honneur de vous présenter mes salutations.
 Madame, I have the honor of to you to present my salutations.
 Monsieur, veuillez recevoir les miennes? Est-ce là le chemin Sir, will to receive the mine? Is that there the road de Paris? Voulez-vous m'indiquer la rue St. Honoré? Combien of Paris? Will you to me indicate the street St. Honoré? How much la douzaine? Un franc.‡ Ils sont chers. Voulez-vous me the dozen? A franc. They are dear. Will you to me donner la monnaie de cinq francs? Que voulez-vous? Comprenezto give the change of five francs? What will you? Understand vous l'Anglais? Je ne parle pas Français. Je suis Anglais you the English? I speak not French. I am English.
 Vive la reine. Garçon du café. Quels vins avez-vous?
 Live the queen. Waiter of the (some) coffee. What wines have you?

* Vide Order of the Garter.

† This is one of the words that it is difficult to find an exact equivalent for in English. Its meaning in the phrase before us, however, is evident enough: it clearly indicates that the cookery in question has all the exuberance, without the refinement, of rus in urbe.

‡ A franc is a current silver coin equivalent to 20 sous.

Apportez-moi une bouteille de Macon.* Un petit verre de Bring me a bottle of Macon. A little glass of Cognac. Servez-moi des côtelettes de mouton. Donnez-moi une brandy. Bring me of the ribs of sheep. Give me an omelette.† Monsieur, voulez-vous me passer le pain, s'il vous omelette. Sir, will you to me pass the bread, if it to you plait?
 please?

PRONUNCIATION.

SUMMARY.

Under this head, in the five preceding lessons, we have comprised all the leading principles of the pronunclation of the French language. In summing up our observations on this subject, we have to remark, that there is an order to be followed in the pronunclation of the letters making up a word, that requires attention. In pronouncing a word, it is usual to begin at the first letter, and to go on spelling the others in succession to the end: this process must, however, be slightly departed from in pronouncing the French words. We have said that there are certain combinations of letters used to represent single sounds: it follows, therefore, that the single letters composing these combinations must not be enuncliated individually. Again, of these combinations the nasal sound takes the precedence in pronunclation of all others. For example, we have said that ai is pronounced like ai in the word paid. According to that rule, the ai of the word faim should be so pronounced; but this is not the case: the im is of necessity nasal, and, when the nasal syllable is deducted from the word faim, the diphthong ai no longer exists; the syllable fa only remains, and the fa blending with the nasal im makes the pronunclation fin we have given of the word faim in the text. The nasal syllable must always in the same way go for its full value in a word; and it is only after the nasal syllable has been allowed its rights, that the other letters can claim theirs. We may here remind the learner, that m and n are pronounced exactly as in English, when followed by another m or n, or a vowel, as in the words honneur, honor, fumer, to smoke; but under all other circumstances these letters combine with the vowel that precedes, and form the nasal syllable. When more than one vowel occurs in a syllable, the learner must see that they do not involve one or other of the five diphthongs, before pronouncing them singly. In the word beau, fine, for example, we have the diphthong au, which is pronounced o; then the consonant x being final, and the e unaccented, the pronunclation of this word is in consequence simply bó.

In conclusion, we have to say, that, if the learner has followed up our instructions attentively, he is capable of pronouncing French correctly. He will be more or less accurate, according to the degree of stability the different points illustrated have obtained upon his memory. The first of the series of phrases given as a reading exercise in the present lesson, is "Parlez-vous Français?" If our observations are fresh upon his memory, the learner will know that p is one of the consonants pronounced in French as in English; that a has always the sound of a in the English word part; that r has always its vibrating sound; that l is another of the consonants pronounced as in English; that z, being final, is silent, and that in consequence the z mute preceding it is pronounced é; that v is pronounced as in English; that ou is one of the five diphthongs; that s, being final and not followed by another word beginning with a vowel, is silent, that fr are pronounced as in English; that an is one of the five nasals; that ç with a cedilla is pronounced like s; that ai is one of the five diphthongs; and finally, that z, being final, is silent. Our observations providing for all the exigencies of pronunciation, with a very few unimportant exceptions, the learner may in this way analyze all the words of the language, and by this process he will acquire more speedily, a much more accurate and an infinitely more permanent notion of the French pronunciation, than he could possibly obtain from a teacher.

* Macon is a wine similar in flavor to Burgundy, and is a vin ordinaire very commonly used in the restaurants and cafés of Paris. In price it varies from 7½*d.* to 15*d.* a bottle.

† Une omelette will generally be found the most satisfactory dish that can be had at a road-side auberge in France.

Any one wishing to have the French alphabet, may construct one by taking an English A B C, striking out the w, and naming the letters ah, bay, say, instead of ai, bee, see. This however can serve no useful purpose. Some advantage might be derived from constructing a table of the sounds, arranged in the order we have pointed. This table should begin with the five nasals, as being the first sounds in order of importance in pronunciation, and should conclude with the observations we have given in the notes to the text of the present lesson.

HOW THE LEARNER SHOULD PROCEED.

We have given some general views of the construction of the French language. We have shown how words being known, they may be made of use in practice. We have shown how questions are put, and answered. We have explained the manner of expressing a negative. And we have exhibited the chief idiomatic difficulties of the language. We have also given such a view of the pronunciation, as will serve the learner for every practical purpose. He must now follow up our instructions by a diligent and careful course of reading. We would suggest for this purpose Gil Blas, which is by far the best author for the beginner's perusal, both as regards the style and the diction. Before however he can read this, he will require to make himself acquainted with the desinenes of the French verb. We are sorry that the limits we have prescribed for our present course of lessons, will not admit of our giving a satisfactory analysis of the verb. The learner must therefore in this matter have recourse to one or other of the common grammars. He must make himself familiar with what are called the four regular conjugations; to one or other of which series of changes most of the verbs in the language are subject. He must then write twice over, in full, all the verbs that are not in accordance with either of these conjugations. This done, the learner, with the aid of a good Dictionary, will find little difficulty in translating Gil Blas. He will very soon be able to dispense with the Dictionary ; and on arriving at this point, his task will be well-nigh accomplished. Once able to read a French author, a month or two in France will do the rest. We have spoken of nearly all the difficulties the self-instructor has to encounter : none of them are of so formidable a character that a little intelligence will not suffice to overcome. We are satisfied that a little perseverance, exerted in the manner pointed out, will put the learner who has attentively gone over our lessons, in possession of a more accurate knowledge of the language than is ever attained by persons who have acquired it by means of oral instruction.

FINIS.

LO

TR

FI

RU

and

IN THE PRESS,

LOVELL'S GENERAL GEOGRAPHY, for the use of Schools; by J. GEORGE HOBBS, Esq., M.A. This Work will be embellished with about 40 superior Maps, and 100 Beautiful Engravings.

TREATISE ON ARITHMETIC IN THEORY AND PRACTICE, revised, Improved, and adapted to the Decimal Currency, &c.; by J. H. SANGSTER, Esq.

FIRST BOOK OF ARITHMETIC, in Decimal Currency, &c.; by J. H. SANGSTER, Esq.

RUDIMENTARY CLASS BOOK IN NATURAL SCIENCE,—Part I. First Outlines of Chemistry, Heat, and Physiology.—Part II. Heating and Ventilation with reference to Domestic Architecture.—For the use of Schools, Academies, &c.; by HENRY H. MILES, Esq., M.A., Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in the University of Bishop's College, Lennoxville.

The above Works will be prepared with great care, printed on good paper, and bound in the most substantial manner.

CANADA DIRECTORY OFFICE,
MONTREAL, January, 1859.

JOHN LOVELL,
Printer and Publisher.

A NEW MAP
OF THE
CITY OF MONTREAL,

2 feet by 2 feet 6 inches,

LITHOGRAPHED ON STONE,

Compiled (by permission) from the most recent Authorities,

BY F. N. BOXER,

CIVIL ENGINEER AND ARCHITECT,

Will be Published by the undersigned early in April next.

The Map is embellished with two beautiful VIEWS OF THE CITY; one taken from St. Helen's Island, and the other from the Mountain. It has been carefully compiled, and exhibits a great deal of useful public information. It gives, in addition to that part of the City comprised within the Corporation boundary, a Plan of the entire Mountain, shewing the RESIDENCES thereon and the line of the proposed BOULEVARD.

The different Dock Projects and proposed Wharf Improvements are laid down from Actual Survey, as well as the Victoria Bridge and the Grand Trunk Railway Terminus.

PRICE, $2.50 IN GILT FRAMES; ON ROLLERS, $2.00; IN SHEETS, $1.25.

Subscribers' names received at the Canada Directory Office.

JOHN LOVELL, Publisher.

MONTREAL, January 3, 1859.

SOUS PRESSE,
RECUEIL DE CHANSONS
CANADIENNES ET FRANCAISES.

Ce recueil sera divisé en deux parties.

DANS la première seront réunies toutes les CHANSONS POPULAIRES CANADIENNES que l'on a pu recueillir et parmi lesquelles figureront quelques-unes de celles des auteurs suivants:—JOS. QUESNEL, BÉDARD, N. AUBIN, CRÉMAZIE, CARTIER, MERMET, MARSAIS, LENOIR, LAJOIE, PLAMONDON, DEROME, VOGELI, etc., etc.

La seconde partie se composera d'un choix des Chansons de BÉRANGER, DESAUGIERS, FLORIAN, LÉONARD, HUGO, MARMONTEL, LEMIERRE, LAHARPE, P. DUPONT, G. LEMOINE, E. CATALAN, LOISA PUGET, LA-MARTINE, CHATEAUBRIAND, SCRIBE, SIMARD, BARATEAU., MME. A. TASTU, BERQUIN, DELAVIGNE, etc., etc., et des autres Chansons populaires de la France.

Prix 50 Cents, ou 2s. 6d.

Cet ouvrage sera en vente sous peu de jours chez les Libraires du Canada.

JOHN LOVELL, Editeur.

BUREAU DU CANADA DIRECTORY,
Montréal, Janvier, 1859.

W. C. F. CAVERHILL,
 · WHOLESALE AND RETAIL BOOKSELLER AND STATIONER,

87 Yonge Street, Toronto,

Keeps constantly on hand a large assortment of the

NATIONAL AND OTHER SCHOOL BOOKS,

Bibles, Prayer Books, Hymn Books,
 Miscellaneous Books, in great variety,
 Lovell's Ready Reckoners in Dollars and Cents, Interest and Advance Tables,
 Time Books, Copy Books, Ciphering Books,
 Blank Books of every description,
 Envelopes of all sizes and qualities,
 Writing Papers, Writing Inks, Pens, Penholders, Pencils, Slates, Slate
 Pencils, Sealing Wax, Wafers, &c., &c.

JUST PUBLISHED:

	Cents.
Hodgins' Geography and History of British America, illustrated,	50
A Summary of English History,	15
The Hand-Book of Toronto,	75
Nova Britannia; or British North America, its extent and future,	25
Montalembert's celebrated Essay on the Colonial Policy of England,	25
On the Ventilation of Dwelling-Houses and Schools, illustrated by diagrams,	25
Report on the Red River Settlement,	75
Tales and Sketches, from Grave to Gay,	75
Canadian Ballads,	50
French without a Master,	25
The Practical Letter Writer,	20
Simon Seek; for Canada in all Shapes,	50
Canadian Homes; or the Mystery Solved,	25
The Arts of Beauty; or Secrets of a Lady's Toilet,	20
Jessie Brown; or the Relief of Lucknow,	12½
Mottoes for Confectioners, per sheet,	2

AND THE FOLLOWING FRENCH WORKS,

BY H. E. CHEVALIER:

	Cents.
L'Heroine de Chateauguay,	25
Les Trappeurs de la Baie d'Hudson, par livraison,	6½
Le Pirate du St. Laurent,	50
Le Foyer Canadien, ou le Mystère Dévoilé, par Maple Knot, traduit par H. E. Chevalier,	25

The Trade and Country Merchants supplied on reasonable terms.

Catalogues furnished on application.

ON SALE:

THE CANADA DIRECTORY FOR 1857-58,—In Cloth,		$5.00
" / " In strong binding,		5.50
THE CANADA DIRECTORY MAP.—In Cases, Plain,		0.85
" " " Colored,		1.10
" " " In Sheets, Plain,		0.75
" " " Colored,		1.00
" " " Mounted on Rollers, Plain,		1.50
" " " " Colored,		1.75
" " " " Stretchers, Plain,		1.75
" " " " " Colored,		2.00

Toronto, December, 1858.

PRINTING AND BOOKBINDING.

THE undersigned respectfully announces to the Public, that he is now enabled to execute all kinds of PRINTING and BOOKBINDING, in every style.

At the PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION, held in Montreal in October, 1858, he was awarded the First Prize and Diploma for the best specimen of Bookbinding;

First Prize for the best specimen of ordinary Bookbinding, suitable for Libraries; and the First Prize for the best specimen of Blank Book Binding.

"Some specimens of binding, from Mr. Lovell's, are the best we have seen in Canada; and, so long as such work can be done here, there will be no occasion to send Books to New York or Boston in order to have superior binding."—Montreal Witness, October 2.

Orders for BLANK BOOKS of every description, and for GENERAL BOOK-BINDING, will receive prompt attention.

BOOK and JOB PRINTING executed on the most reasonable terms.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

Now Publishing, the Series of NATIONAL SCHOOL BOOKS, THE SPELLING BOOK SUPERSEDED, COLENSO'S ALGEBRA, Part I.; LENNIE'S GRAMMAR, PINNOCK'S GOLDSMITH'S ENGLAND, SUMMARY OF ENGLISH HISTORY, &c.,—printed with new type, on good paper, and carefully bound.

CATECHISMS of the Church of England, of the Church of Scotland, &c.

The Trade and Country Merchants will be supplied on the lowest terms.

IN THE PRESS:

LOVELL'S GENERAL GEOGRAPHY, for the use of Schools; by J. GEORGE HODGINS, Esq., M.A. This work will be embellished with about 40 superior Maps, and 100 beautiful Engravings.

TREATISE ON ARITHMETIC IN THEORY AND PRACTICE, revised, improved, and adapted to the Decimal Currency, &c.; by J. H. SANGSTER, Esq.

FIRST BOOK OF ARITHMETIC, in Decimal Currency, &c.; by J. H. SANGSTER, Esq.

RUDIMENTARY CLASS BOOK IN NATURAL SCIENCE. Part I. First outlines of Chemistry, Heat and Physiology. Part II. Heating and Ventilation with reference to Domestic Architecture.—For the use of Schools, Academies, &c.; by HENRY H. MILES, Esq., M.A., Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in the University of Bishop's College, Lennoxville.

The above works will be prepared with great care, printed on good paper, and bound in the most substantial manner.

ON SALE;

THE CANADA DIRECTORY,

For 1857-8—Price $5.

LOVELL'S READY RECKONERS

IN DOLLARS AND CENTS.

THREE DIFFERENT SIZES AND PRICES.

No. 1 Edition..37½ cents. No. 2 Edition..25 cents. No. 3 Edition..15 cents.

A liberal discount will be allowed to the Trade and to Country Merchants.

Any of the above Books may be procured at the Publisher's prices, from Mr. W. C. F. CAVERHILL, Bookseller and Stationer, 87 Yonge Street, Toronto.

JOHN LOVELL, Printer and Publisher.

CANADA DIRECTORY OFFICE, Montreal, Dec., 1858.

