The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

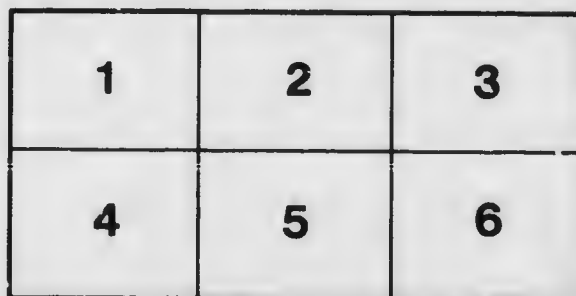

The Nova Scotia
Legislative Library

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

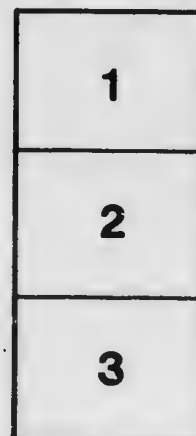

The Nova Scotia
Legislative Library

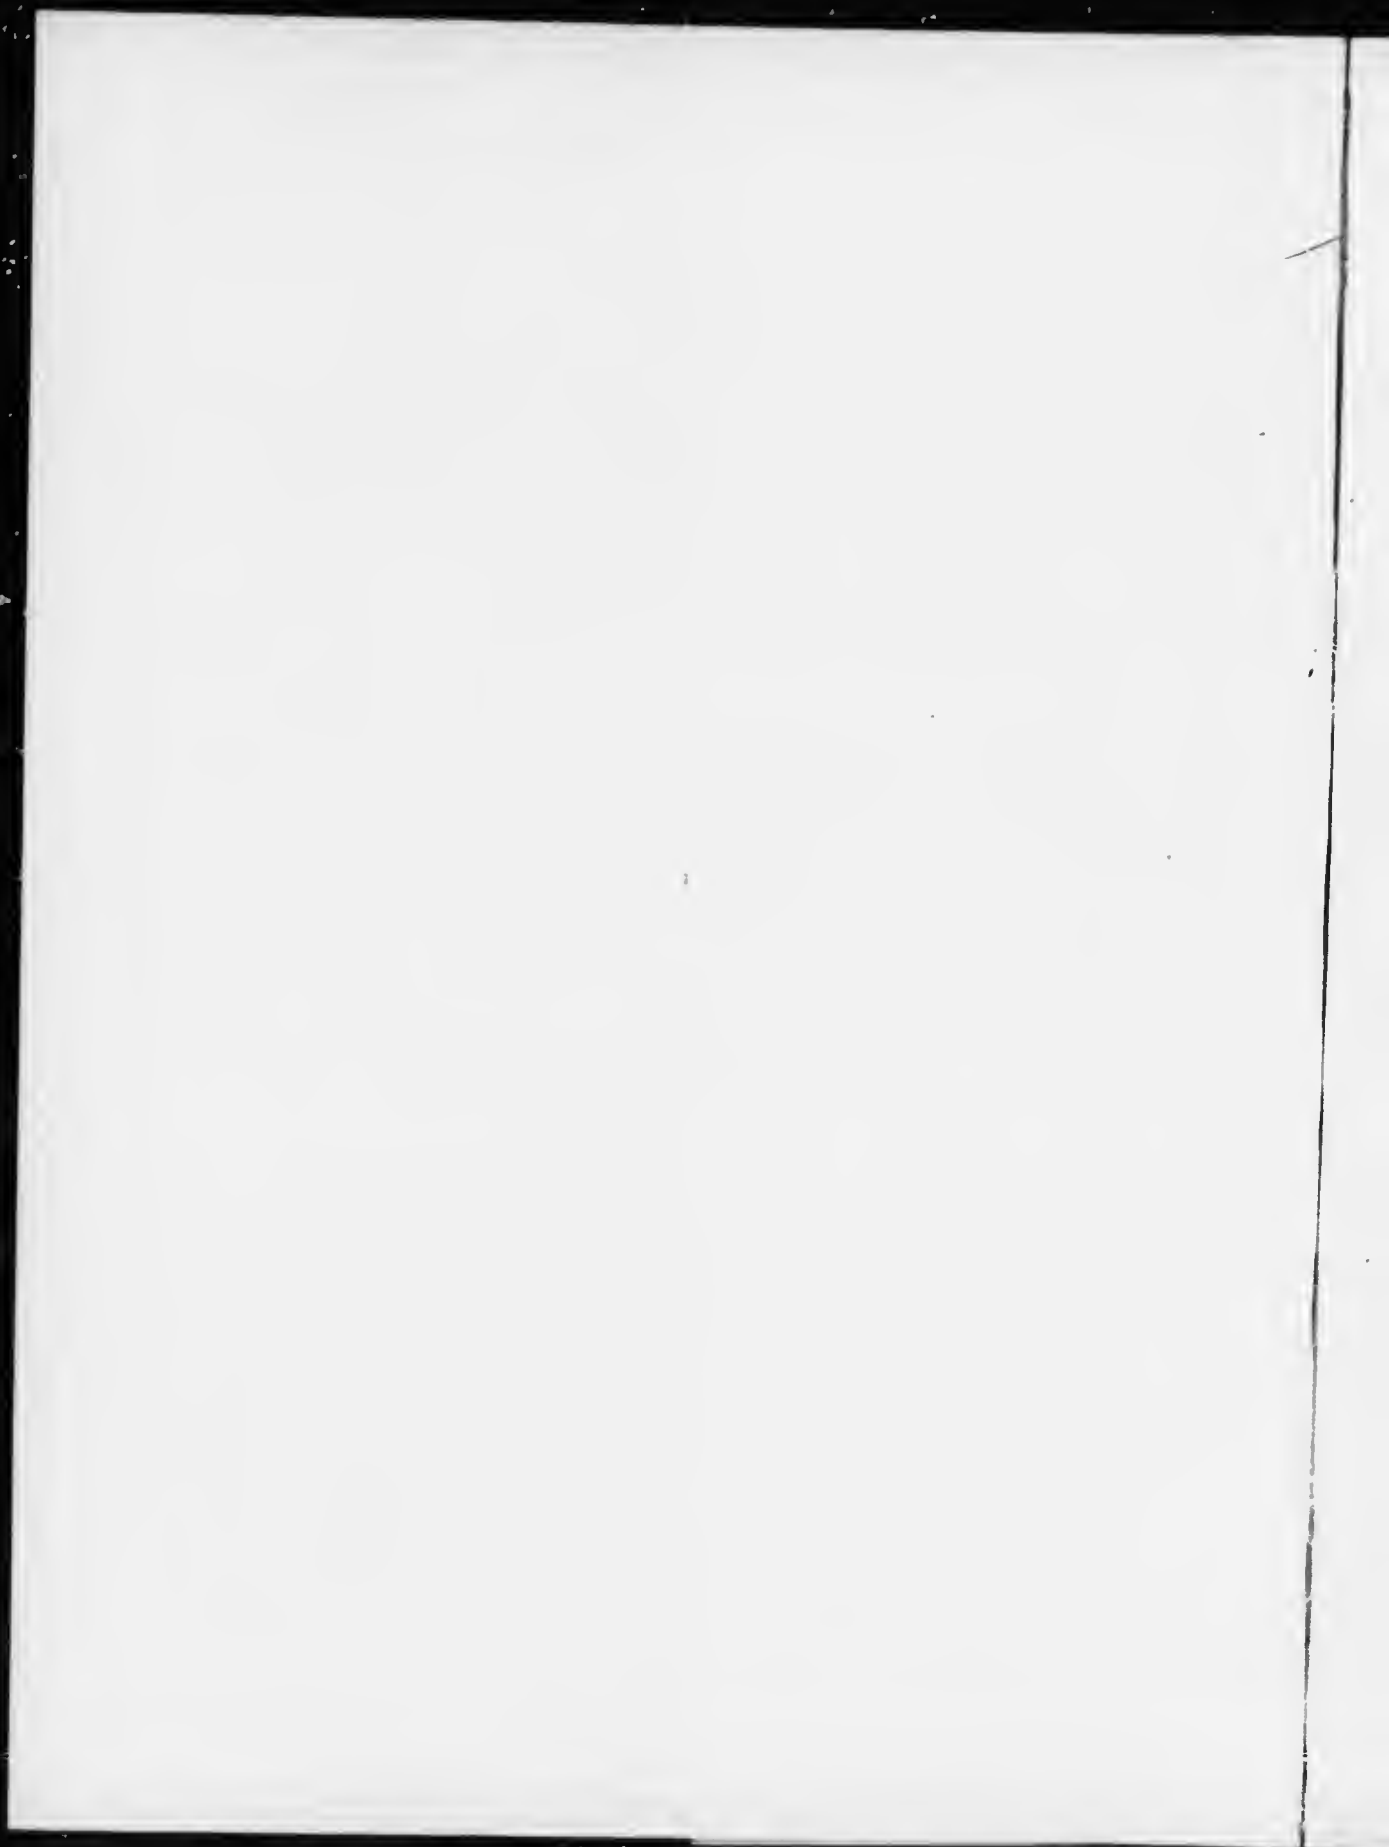

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "À SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

SERMON, &c.

ACTS, xxvi. 17th and part of the 18th verses.

Delivering thee from the People and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, to open their Eyes, and to turn them from Darkness to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God.

WHEN those arguments were advanced by St. Paul at Cæsarea, which almost persuaded king Agrippa to be a Christian, we cannot suppose that a real want of conviction obstructed that virtuous impulse, but that the same political motives and interests which swayed the chief captains and principal men of the city, dependants on the Roman government, precluded their salutary influence also upon him.

That the words of truth and righteousness should have their due weight with many of the well-disposed, in every city, who were not under the same bias, is not to be wondered at; nor that the earnestness with which the Apostle impressed the great objects of His Mission, while it was construed into madness and enthusiasm by the governor Festus, should prove an assurance in reflecting minds, that it was rather to be considered as an ardent desire to make them wise unto salvation. This wisdom, however it might appear to the Greeks foolishness, consisted in a full persuasion of the efficacy of the Saviour's mediation, and of the certainty that a day would come, when this corruptible should put on incorruption, and this mortal should put on immortality.

The Jews, in every part of the world where the Gospel was preached, would naturally maintain the exclusive privileges which they considered as belonging to their own nation. Their ill-timed jealousy disposed them to reject the admission of the Gentiles to any participation cipation of the promises made to Abraham: and the doctrine of the resurrection, which formed no part of the Mosaic dispensation, was absorbed in the more immediate and alluring idea of temporal retribution. Hence they were wilfully and determinedly blind to supernatural means of conviction.

The luminous appearance which signified the conversion of St. Paul, was lost upon them; and the star which shone at the birth of his Divine Master, instead of being hailed as the presage of glad tidings to all the world, was to them but a more visible termination of their glory.

In minds devoted to worldly expectations, these prejudices were too strong to be overcome. It had pleased the Almighty to honour them with the title of his peculiar people; they were the chosen depositaries of the sacred oracles, and had possessed the glorious distinction of preserving the worship of the true God in the midst of surrounding idolatrous nations.

Nor did the gracious designs of their Heavenly Benefactor end with these pre-eminent marks of favour. The promise of a Saviour and Deliverer, so fully predicted by their own prophets, prophets, was fulfilled to them in the person of the Messiah: they had the first offer of those great advantages which were destined to accompany the promulgation of the Gospel: and whenever a particular commission was given to the disciples, to heal the sick and cast out devils, and to preach repentance and the Kingdom of Heaven, we observe a marked preference to the House of Israel. And not merely, in the early part of Christ's Ministry, but after his resurrection, he still enjoins that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name, among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Neither is there any inconsistency between this passage and that which occurs in the first Mission of the Twelve, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans, enter ye not."

This negative, by no means, amounts to an actual prohibition, but conveys, only, in the usual style of Scripture, the idea of preference: and this preference, St. Peter, anxious for the spiritual welfare of his countrymen, was willing to maintain to the last, studious to palliate the national guilt, and to impute to ignorance, their their sad and woeful treatment of his blessed Master; "Unto you first," said he, "God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you, from his iniquities."

In these and similar passages, there is nothing which invalidates the doctrine of universal redemption, as every where inculcated in the writings of St. Paul, and in those words, especially, which I have selected as the basis of this discourse.

That no obstacle might impede the reception of the Gospel, by the Gentiles, it seemed a providential dispensation, that St. Paul should prevail in his controversy with St. Peter. When the latter displayed a too scrupulous conformity to the Jewish ritual, and to the burdensome variety of ceremonies of which it was composed, the former exhibited a considerate and judicious condescension, in complying, to a certain degree, with the habits and manners of his converts; taking every opportunity, wherever the Judaizing Christians abounded, of refuting the notion of exclusive participation of the Kingdom of Heaven.

In an age, when the doctrine of partial redemption is so strenuously revived; when the terms of salvation are so circumscribed and narrowed, and when limits are, as it were, set to the mercies of the Omnipotent, it will not, I trust, be inconsistent with the solemnity of the present occasion, to consider, however briefly, the probable causes of such a doctrine; and for that purpose, to look back to the æra of the reformation.

The unlimited power of indulgences, and pardons to sinners of every description, and the entire controul of men's future destinies, by the Roman pontiff, seemed so preposterous, to the leading reformers, that they, very wisely, had recourse to the authority of Scripture, to determine the question, and to ascertain the ground of pretensions so apparently unwarranted and presumptuous.

Among the rest, Calvin, perceiving, as he thought, the doctrine of predestination, to be prevalent in the writings of St. Paul, was induced to arm himself with this weapon, in his part of this theological contest, in order to counteract so great an usurpation. And there is no doubt but that in the earnestness of his zeal, he considered himself as vindicating the power of the Divine Majesty, in asserting that that the rewards and punishments of another life were already fixed by an immutable decree; and that, therefore, no impiety could exceed that of ascribing privileges of so transcendent a nature to any of the sons of men.

Between two extremes so remote from each other, it is seldom that the mind has to make a choice; and, still seldomer, that the error in judgment would lead to such final hazard, such vital and irreversible consequences.

The controversial abilities of Calvin, and the incomparable language in which he wrote, enabled him to present his arguments to the best advantage; and he soon acquired so powerful a body of adherents, as to establish his tenets on a foundation not easily to be shaken by those contemporary divines, who seemed to have an alternative only of difficulties presented to them, in the dangers of either extreme.

The subsequent modification by Armenius, of this doctrine of Calvin, obtained very slow access among the reformers of the day, and was, as we know, condemned, after a long hearing, by a full synod of divines, at Dort. The champions who had so successfully combated the pretensions of the Romanists, were not to be over-ruled by the advocates of a more moderate interpretation.

But, as is, generally, the case in the experiments on civil government, that when the convulsions arising from the vehemence of parties have subsided, a more temperate system finally prevails, so did it also happen upon this occasion.

And here we may justly claim a share of praise for the composers of our Articles; who amidst the difficulties of conciliating the opposing interests of the day, were careful so to frame them, as not, in any instance, to compromise the genuine meaning of the apostolic writings.

The deductions which resulted from the more moderate interpretations were these; that salvation by Christ is open to all; that the expression of God's electing some to everlasting life is a benevolent purpose of making believers finally happy, and to be understood conditionally, on compliance with the terms of faith and obedience: that sufficient assistance will be given to all; and that final reprobation applies only to unrepented sin, and to hardened and wilful unbelief.

And

And here it is but doing justice to some of the modern advocates of Calvinism, to admit, that they do not go the length of defending his institutes, to their full extent, or of denying the consequences to which, from misconstruction or abuse, they are so easily liable. With what reserve they admit that comprehensive plan of Divine Providence which is entitled Universal Redemption, is another question. I am aware of the explanation which they give of those texts which treat of the merits of Christ, as extending to all mankind, and of that text, in particular, addressed to the Corinthians, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ, shall all be made alive." Universal benefit is here opposed to universal loss.

I do not, however, maintain, that the stress of the argument lies on the word ALL; that word being often used to denote an indefinite number, or to relate to the whole number of individuals mentioned in a former sentence. But I am justified in the assertion, that whatever sense we may annex to this adjective in the first clause of the verse, we must adhere to it in the second. Those who die in Adam, are those who are made alive in Christ. If universal death prevailed through his disobedience and transgression, universal life is promised as attainable through the intervention of the Redeemer. In any other sense, his dominion over the last enemy, would not be complete.

To us, with whom the doctrine of original depravity derived from our first parents, is an article of belief, it will appear almost superfluous to introduce the opinions of some distinguished metaphysical writers, who argue against the existence of all innate ideas or moral principles.

But, even allowing their position, that evil may proceed from causes subsequent to our birth, whether from imitation, wrong discipline, or corrupt communication, it cannot be denied that it does exist, and that sin and sorrow prevail in every part of the created world.

If, among the worshippers of the true God, this sad truth be acknowledged, and recorded by Moses and the Prophets, what must we suppose to have been the case with those idolatrous nations, with whom the greatest enormities composed a part even of their religion itself?

For

For it is well observed by an eminent writer *, that "the threats and severities expressed against idolatry, in the Old Testament, were not against idolatry simply, or considered as an erroneous religion, but against the abominations which usually accompanied it."

The Old Testament, then, furnishes sufficient historical proof of the corruptions of mankind in all ages of the world; of the displeasure of the Almighty, in consequence of those corruptions, and the denunciations of punishment, on unrepented and incorrigible sin.

The first transgression inflicted the mortal wound. But in what sense the declaration "Thou shalt surely die" would be understood by the primæval transgressors, is, perhaps, not determined. Labour and sorrow and banishment from the early scenes of happiness, evidently constituted a part of the penalty, as well as that completion of the sentence of mortality. We may suppose, however, that in whatever sense the penalty was, at first, understood, it was limited to this life, and the power of the grave, by the Israelites, with whom an earthly Canaan was the greatest blessing, an earthly captivity, the consummation of woe.

The same notions, we know, prevailed, respecting the terrestrial dominion of the Messiah; and the disciples themselves could scarcely be persuaded that His Kingdom was not intended to be of this world; or that the benefits of His Mission were designed to extend beyond the deliverance and temporal aggrandizement of the children of Israel.

From the celebrated passage in the book of Job, it has been maintained, that the notion of a Redeemer, with reference to a future state, was acknowledged at that early period. And yet, if we take for our guides the most correct masters of the language in which the passage was written, we may, I think, be justified, in admitting, that it expressed, only, the pious confidence of Job, that the vindicator of his innocence would, at last appear, and rescue him from those sufferings which had now so much reduced him in the estimation of the world. The subsequent observations in the same chapter, prove, that the sentiment had no primary reference, at least, to the mediatorial office of the Messiah, or to the retribution of a life to come.

The

The substance, then, of what we have advanced, is this.—That in the councils of the most Highest, it was reserved for the Gospel alone, to present to mankind, more enlarged views of those important and awful subjects, and to open the everlasting doors of light and glory. Death and life, before interpreted in a limited sense, would now assume a more extended meaning; the terrors of the Lord would invade the wicked, in vain confiding in the refuge of eternal sleep; and the good man, oppressed with the cares and sorrows of this life, would direct his hopes to repose and consolation beyond the grave.

That the Gospel has not yet been revealed to all; that so large a portion of the human species should still sit in darkness and the shadow of death, is a dispensation which we must contemplate with submissive awe and wonder, and include among the inscrutable designs of the Almighty. The condition of many of those miserable regions, we know to be as deplorable as it was in the darkest times and places, before the days of the Apostles: they know not their Maker; they are without God in the world; they are uninstructed in the only method which he has appointed for approaching unto him, that of a Meditator; and this consideration is sure to arise in every Christian heart, that while Paganism and the doctrine of Mahomet overspread so large a portion of the globe, that religion should be so little protected, and that name so little known, than which there is no other under Heaven, whereby men must be saved. This is, indeed, one of the darkest mysteries of Providence; but which, however, he who would endeavour to discredit, because he does not understand it, would find a sufficient argument for disparaging, also, all that might to him be unaccountable in the moral world, all the anomalies of nature, and all the seeming imperfections in the visible creation.

It has been thought becoming the Divine Wisdom, that there should be an infinite variety of creatures, differing from each other, more or less, in their natural frame, capacities and powers, and consequently, in their perfection and happiness. The same analogy of reasoning and of nature, will lead us to conclude, that in the intellectual world, there may be, and probably are, innumerable kinds, orders and degrees of nobler beings, rising one above another, in their natural states, powers and constitutions; and that in that series of the link, the human race, individuals may be formed more or less perfect, more or less capable of happiness, and with different means of comprehending and obtaining it: and this very irregularity, this seeming imperfection may, for ought that we know, be the wise and gracious opportunity afforded each of us, (by rectifying what thus appears to be amiss, and by supplying what has been left wanting) of more effectually working out our own salvation. Considered in this light, the propagation of Christianity is as universal a duty, as the occasion of it is perpetual. Every individual will then consider himself, as, in some degree, an instrument in this glorious cause; as authorised, enabled and commanded to communicate the glad tidings of the Gospel. His wealth, his power and knowledge will, in that case, be so many talents for the execution and furtherance of it; and for the abuse of which, he will, one day, be accountable under the awful denunciation of "Woe unto you, for ye shut up the kingdom of Heaven against men; ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that were entering, to go in.

The means which God himself was pleased to make use of, in order to accomplish the great work of our redemption, are to be known only by Revelation; and this Revelation, after it had once been authentically proved and confirmed by the first preachers of it, was by them delivered to their converts, to be conveyed onwards, in succession, to all ages. This method, therefore, of communication, the only one now left unto us, imposes an obligation upon those who have been so enlightened themselves, to impart the same blessings to others; and renders every believer, in some measure, a depositary of the faith.

The great and supernatural powers which attended the first propagation of the Gospel have, indeed, been long withdrawn: we must, therefore, call in the best aids which human prudence and industry can afford. Every hand should assist, as circumstances enable us, and every mind should be employed in the blessed work; and if the religion which each man professes, be but vital enough to be practised by him, it will, insensibly, propagate itself.

In

In the quiet and less ostentatious method of opening the understanding, and inclining the will; and bending the stubbornness of the human heart, as effectual a miracle may be wrought, by the aid and intervention of God, as the more visible descent of tongues, or the thunderings of the mountain. The force and eloquence of such silent arguments for Christianity, will convert those who cannot feel the force of other reasonings: good Christians make converts when they know not of it: the influence of their virtue steals imperceptibly into the heart, and the first discovery of it will be its fruits.

Those who direct this charity, consider the objects of it as having been overwhelmed with the grossest idolatry and superstition; and they resolve to watch over, to support and to encourage the virtue and religion which they have laboured to produce. They have not planted Colonies in order to bring them into subjection, or to bear rule over men's persons; but they have sent forth their influence to lead the unhappy of a foreign land, into the comforts of life and the consolations of religion: they "have cast their bread upon the waters, and, after many days," have the satisfaction of daily "finding it:" they have demonstrated that the Christian's neighbourhood has no other boundary than the confines of the earth; and whoever he be, and wherever he live, so that he stand but in need of help, and of the necessary instruction for salvation, he is the Christian's neighbour and friend and brother.

When it pleased God that a pure and reformed system of religious doctrine and worship should be established in these realms, the • Royal Patron and Founder of the pious undertaking which we are assembled to commemorate, extended his paternal care to the subjects of his distant Colonies: he was aware, as the words of his Charter import, that "many wanted the administration of God's word, and sacraments; and seemed, on the one hand to be abandoned to Atheism and Infidelity, and, on the other, to Romish superstition and idolatry."

And we have the great happiness to reflect, that his good design has been promoted to the benefit and blessing of thousands; and that while the day-spring from on high, hath visited this land with the direct lustre of its light,

the reflected rays have been imparted to those who have hitherto sat in darkness: they have "seen the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God."

Let us, therefore, pray that we may be the happy instruments of promoting the glory of his name; that we may prosper, more and more, in establishing the pure doctrine of the Gospel, in regions yet untaught; and the sense of that Redeemer, through whom ALONE they and we CAN obtain final salvation.

AN ABSTRACT of the
C H A R T E R,
And of the Proceedings of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, from the 21st Day of February, 1812, to the 19th Day of February, 1813.

KING William III. was graciously pleased, on the 16th of June, 1701, to erect and settle a CORPORATION with a perpetual succession, by the name of THE SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS; for the receiving, managing, and disposing of the contributions of such persons as would be induced to extend their charity towards the Maintenance of a Learned and an Orthodox Clergy, and the making of such other provision as might be necessary for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, upon information, that in many of our PLANTATIONS, COLONIES, and FACTORIES beyond the seas, the provision for Ministers was mean, and many other of our said PLANTATIONS, COLONIES, and FACTORIES, were wholly unprovided of a maintenance for Ministers, and the public worship of God; and that, for lack of support and maintenance of such many of his loving subjects wanted the administration of God's Word and Sacraments, and feared to be abandoned to Atheism and Infidelity, and others of them to Popish Superstition and Idolatry.

The Society was composed, by the Charter, of the Chief Prelates and Dignitaries of the Church, and of several Lords and eminent persons in the State, with a power to elect, from time to time, such others to be Members of the Corporation, as they, or the major part of them, should think beneficial to their charitable designs, to receive the donations of all charitable and well-disposed persons towards this most pious design: And thro' an especial blessing this work of the Lord hath all along prospered in their hands.

The Society, as their Charter directs, give an annual account to the Lord High Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, of the several sums of money by them received, and laid out, and of the management and disposition of the revenues of the Corporation: an Abstract of which, and of their proceedings, they annually publish, and take this opportunity of returning their most hearty thanks for the particular Benefactions which were received in the year 1812, viz.

The Rev. David Rowland, Missionary at St. John's, in his Letter of 22d of December last, acquaints the Society, that he preaches twice every Sunday, and diligently catechises the Children, many of whom can repeat more than half of Lewis's Catechism, and he transmits this Notitia: Baptisms 40; Marriages 17; Burials 58. He has requested a farther supply of Books which the Society have sent him. He has recommended a memorial from the people of Burin, in which they solicit the extension of the Society's bounty to Mr. William Tulk, the Schoolmaster, and from the character given of him, they have been induced to put him upon their List.

The Society are very happy in having it in their power to fill up the vacant Mission of Harbor Grace and Carboneer, through the kind influence and assistance of Sir J. T. Duckworth, who has recommended the Rev. Frederick Hamilton Carrington, A. B. and to whose active and benevolent exertions on several occasions, the Society are much indebted. The Mission was vacated last year by the resignation of Mr. Anspach, in order to accept a respectable situation which his friends have procured him. Before he quitted he gave a very satisfactory account to the Society of his management of the flock committed to his care, which he had faithfully watched over for nine years past. The people themselves, sensible of the great benefit derived to them from his pastoral exertions, have expressed, in the strongest manner, their gratitude for it.

Since the vacancy, Mr. Lampen, the Schoolmaster, has supplied the want of a Missionary, as far as he could, by the desire of the inhabitants, in constantly reading to them on Sundays, the Prayers of the Church and a Sermon.

In his own School, by day and by night, he has taught 80 children, and 10 young men. In the Sunday School, 11 girls and 15 boys to say the Catechism, and they constantly attend Church.

In addition to this the Society have the pleasure of being informed, that at Brigus, in Conception Bay, two individuals have erected a Church at their own expence: and at Morton's Harbor, £160 has been raised to build a Church. At Fortune Bay, where a Missionary is much wanted, two Churches are building in the district, for which the people have raised £700. A Church is also building at Greenford, by the liberality of the inhabitants, to which Government have added £100. Towards all which Sir J. T. Duckworth has solicited the aid of Government.

Mr.

Mr. Edward Mullaby is appointed Schoolmaster at Bonavista.

The Church at Trinity is repairing. The inhabitants subscribed to it amongst themselves, and Government, at the request of Si. J. T. Duckworth, gave £80 towards it. Mr. Clinch continues in the faithful discharge of his duty, and in the course of the year he had baptized 60; married 9; and buried 16.

Nova Scotia.

The Rev. Mr. Perkins, Missionary at Annapolis, having received great benefit to his health from the warm climate of Jamaica, is again returned to his Mission.

Two letters have been received in the course of the year from the Rev. Dr. Stanfer, Missionary at Halifax, of the respective dates of May 11th, and October 30th, 1812, by which it appears, that he continues in the faithful discharge of the laborious duties of his Mission. In the first half year he had baptized 93 Infants and 3 Adults; married 42; and buried 77. In the last he had baptized 101 Infants and 3 Adults; married 13 couple; and buried 37. The addition made to the Church, and the new Steeple are finished. He is happy to inform the Society, that he has had another kind instance of the esteem and affection of his flock, by the addition of £50 a year to his salary.

By

By a letter received from Mr. Norris, Missionary at Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, the Society have to lament the loss of the venerable Colonel Burbidge, who died on the 14th of September last, at the advanced age of 95. To the last he enjoyed a sound understanding, and his latter end was peace. In him the Church has lost a bright ornament and liberal supporter, and the Society's Missionaries a kind and generous friend. He was wont to contribute £4 a year to the subscription for said Missionary, and has bequeathed to him ten acres of land, of which his predecessors always had the use, and were allowed to inclose it with the glebe. In his life-time he gave £100 towards the erection of a Church, and has left another £100 towards finishing it. He has also bequeathed four acres of dyke land to the Churchwardens for the time being, in trust for the use of the Church, which at present may be worth £8 a year. The Church is now completely finished, and does credit to the Churchwardens, Colonel Campbell, and James Allison, Esquire, under whose direction it was erected. As the Congregation seems to encrease, he has requested the Society to send him some Prayer Books and a few Bibles. They have lately had a donation of a folio Bible, and a quarto Prayer Book. He has recommended Mr. John Laird to be the Society's School-master, at Horton, being a young man of good abilities and moral moral character; and he has been accordingly appointed.

The Rev. Mr. Millidge, Missionary at Granville, has informed the Society, that the Lower Church has been put into good repair he trusts, that by the time he writes again the new Church, in the Middle District, will be erected, and the Upper repaired. His Notitia contains 19 Baptisms; 16 Marriages; and 6 Burials.

The Rev. Mr. Shreve, Missionary at Lunenburg, has transmitted this Notitia: Baptisms 53; Marriages 14; Burials 6; Communicants 149; Children catechised 36. He writes that his Congregation continues to increase. Two German families have been joined to the Church in the course of the year. Sir George Prevost has granted £300 for the repairs of the Church, and the parishioners have assessed themselves for £100 more.

From the Rev. Mr. Gray, Missionary at Sackville, the Society are informed, that within his parish he had baptized 26; married 15; and buried 18; and has 15 Communicants; and at Pictou 38 were baptized, besides 2 Adults. Those at Pictou are chiefly emigrants from Scotland. At Cumberland there remain scarcely any besides Methodists and New Light Societies.

Societies. He was not able to visit Parrboro', but understood that Mr. Shreve, their former Pastor, had been there in the course of the year. About 25 miles beyond Cumberland he found a thriving settlement at Dorchester. He assures the Society that great harmony subsists between him and his parishioners, and they are much improved since his settling among them. There is a tolerable attendance on Religious Worship. The Sabbath is no longer with them a day for fishing, fowling, and excess at taverns. Instead of which is an evidently encreasing respect for sobriety and decorum, and Civil Institutions. £250 has been appropriated towards finishing their Church, and the people have raised £50.

The Rev. Mr. Ingles, lately settled at Chester, transmits the following Notitia: number of families 143; Communicants 37; families professing the Church 57; Baptists 46; Presbyterians 27; Lutherans 4; Romanists 6; he had baptized 17; married 1; and buried 2.

The Society have to lament the painful intelligence of the death of Mr. James Wiswall, their old and most respectable Missionary at Wilmot. In his last letter to the Society, dated October 9, 1812, he informed the Society that he had been in a very ill state of health for a twelvemonth past.

New

New Brunswick.

The Rev. Dr. Byles, Missionary at St. John's, transmits a very favorable account of the religious state of his parish. The Congregation is large, and the number of Communicants encreases. The Church has been enlarged by an addition of 20 pews on the lower floor, all which were sold immediately at an high price, subject to taxes, besides a number of other seats by lengthening the gallery. Since his last the Baptisms have amounted to 97; Marriages 45; Burials 33. He acknowledges with thanks the receipt of a valuable box of Books; three of them for his own use, and a large number for the benefit of his parish.

The Rev. Mr. Pidgeon, Missionary at Fredericton, assures the Society of the prosperous condition of his Mission, as far as the uncertain state of the Province will admit. His Congregation large, regular in their attendance on religious duties, and exemplary in their deportment. Having informed the Society that Mr. Symondson, the School-master, has totally neglected his duty for two years past, he has been struck off their list of School-masters: but he is happy in bearing testimony to the diligent attention of Mr. and Mrs. Williams, in the care of their Schools.

He

He received the Books for those Schools in good condition, and thanks the Society for them. His Notitia ending at Midsummer last stands thus: Baptisms 45, and 3 Adults; Marriages 19; and Burials 21.

The Rev. Elias Scovil, Missionary at Kingston, in his letter of July 29, 1812, acknowledges the receipt of the Books for the use of his parishioners, together with a Bible and Prayer Book, for the Church at Hampton. That Church, he says, is gotten into such forwardness that they met in it all last Winter, and another subscription has been made sufficient to wall it, and to finish the Chancel, if it should not be stopped on account of the war with the United States. It is placed in a very eligible situation, where a large Congregation may, and do assemble. A resident Clergyman is much wanted there. The Church at Kingston has been repaired, a Chancel built, and several pews erected. A great proportion of the people are attached to the Church, and regular in their attendance on Divine Worship. The number of Communicants in the parish is 32. In Hampton 45. In Kingston 148. His year's Notitia stands thus: Baptisms 63, and 3 Adults; Marriages 20; and Burials 3.

The Rev. Mr. Andrews, writes to the Society, ciety, that his Mission improves in numbers, and in a punctual attendance on Divine Worship, to which the late division of his Mission hath, in some measure, contributed. His Notitia however for the year stands thus: Baptisms 47; Marriages 15; Burials 4; Communicants 60.

The Rev. Richard Clarke, Missionary at St. Stephen's, in a letter dated June 10, 1812, acknowledges the Secretary's letter of March last, and expresses the most grateful sense of the goodness of the Society for their generous donation of £100. Since he has been settled at St. Stephen's he has baptised 12 Infants and 1 Adult; married 7 couple; and buried 1; only 11 Communicants.

The last letter that has been received from Mr. Dibblee, was dated October 10, 1810.

Nor has any since that date come from Mr. Arnold, Missionary at Suffex Vale.

Upper and Lower Canada.

In consequence of the death of the late Dr. Stuart, Missionary at Kingston, in Upper Canada, several alterations have necessarily taken place. The Rev. George Okill Stewart, son to the Doctor, has succeeded him at Kingston, and Dr. Strachan has removed from
F Cornwall

Cornwall to York: which vacancy has been supplied by the Rev. Devereux Baldwyn, a Clergyman in the Diocese of Chichester, well recommended and approved by the Society, and is now on his passage thither.

It appears from the informations of the Bishop of Quebec, that Clergymen are greatly wanted in various quarters, and could the Society send out three or four, they would be placed, with the concurrence of the Colonial Governors, in such situations as the Society would entirely approve. The Bishop has expressed his satisfaction in having had an application from a Lutheran Minister, by name Weagrant, of Williamsburgh, in Upper Canada, who has long used our Catechism, admires our Liturgy, and unequivocally approves our Articles, to be admitted to Holy Orders; the inhabitants of that place, and of Osnaburgh, having concurred in the same wishes, and expressed their cordial desire to conform in all things to our Church. In consequence of which, and from the original testimonials of Mr. Weagrant, which were most satisfactory, the Bishop admitted him a candidate, and has since ordained him on the 18th of October, and is extremely well satisfied with him, and is entirely convinced that the Society will not misapply their bounty if they should adopt him as their Missionary with the usual salary. The Society have accordingly

resolved to take him upon the List of their Missionaries, as soon as a Mission shall be found for him with the usual salary of £50. The Bishop adds, that Mr. Weagant was well known to the late Dr. Stuart, and much esteemed by him.

In two letters of the respective dates of June 26th, and August 25th, 1812, the Reverend Mr. Jackson, Missionary at William Henry, Lower Canada, states to the Society, that he had been near nine months in the discharge of his duty, and has every reason to be satisfied with his situation. He observes a small but progressive increase in the Communicants, and he has frequent applications for Prayer Books and religious Tracts. A present of that sort would be most useful. By a grant from Government of £100 they have been enabled to make several material repairs and improvements to the Church, which, tho' a wooden structure, is neither inelegant nor dangerous, as heretofore in the winter season. His Notitia is this: Baptisms 17; Marriages 2; Burials 19. He requests a small supply of religious Books, with which the Society have complied.

The Rev. Caleb Cotton, Missionary at Dunham, in Lower Canada, has acknowledged in his letter dated April 3d, 1812, the receipt of a box of Books, containing, besides a supply of small Tracts, some valuable Books for his own use, for which long expected articles he returns his most hearty thanks. A regard for the Common Prayer appears to encrease as the people become more acquainted with it. In the last six months he had baptized 1 infant; and married 11 couple. At Easter in both parts of the township there were 30 Communicants.

The Hon. and Rev. Charles Stewart, Missionary at St. Armand, Lower Canada, has written twice to the Society in the course of the year, giving a circumstantial account of the places he has visited, and the parochial duties he has performed. He acknowledges the Society's letter of last April, and acquaints the Society, that a neat Tower and Cupola have been erected on the west end of Trinity Church, at the expence of near 400 dollars, but in consequence of the war, they have postponed the painting. The number of members of the Church since he wrote last has encreased.

✠ The Society taking into their serious consideration the absolute necessity there is, that such Clergymen, as are sent abroad, should be duly qualified for the work to which they are appointed, desire every one, who recommends any person to them for that purpose, to to testify his knowlege, as to the following particulars:

1. The age of the person.
2. His condition of life, whether single or married.
3. His temper.
4. His prudence.
5. His learning.
6. His sober and pious conversation.
7. His zeal for the Christian religion, and diligence in his holy calling.
8. His affection to the present Government.
9. His conformity to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England.

And the Society request all persons concerned, that they recommend no man out of favour or affection, or any other worldly consideration, but with a sincere regard to the honour of Almighty God, and our blessed SAVIOUR; as they tender the interest of the Christian Religion, and the good of mens souls.

But if any person should appear abroad in the character of a Clergyman of the Church of England, and disgrace that profession by improper behaviour, the Society desire their friends to examine, if they can, into his Letters of Orders, and to inspect the list of the Missionaries annually published by the Society, by which if it should be found, that he came thither with their knowledge, they will, upon due information, put away from them that wicked person.

The

The Receipts and Payments on the GENERAL ACCOUNT of the Society for the Year past, stood thus at the Audit, on the 28th Day of January, 1813.
