SHAREHOLDERS REJECT CITY'S OFFER—SELL TO OUTSIDERS FOR $135 A SHARE

TORONTO ELECTRIC LIGHT SELLS TO SYNDICATE FOR $135 A SHARE

City's Offer Turned Down By Shareholders National Trust Company Acting for Buyers—Will Pay $20 a Share Down and Balance Within Six Months—Probably an American Company.

At the meeting on Saturday the shareholders of the Toronto Electric Light Company unanimously decided not to dispose of their holdings to the city at $125 per share. Furthermore, they were equally unanimous in their decision to sell their shares to an unknown company, represented by the National Trust Company, for $135 per share. The city's offer was as good from a money standpoint as the other, taking into consideration the fact that the company retains the liquid assets, but Sir Henry Pellatt pointed out that the city's offer obligated the company to readjust their contract with the Electrical Development Company and other things which could not do, and litigation would ensue, which would make the value of the liquid assets to the shareholders questionable.

Close the Door and Go Ahead.

The Toronto Electric Light Company, exercising its own good judgment, has refused the offer of $125 for its stock, made by the City of Toronto. The company had a perfect right to do this, but in so exercising its right it has closed the door to any further negotiation. The city was charged by the shareholders of the Electric Light Company with unfair competition, and it was alleged that not only was confiscation in view, but the widow and orphan were also paraded as victims of a city's greed. The widow and orphan and those who alleged confiscation, have agreed to sell to other parties, and in thus selling, their claim is closed. The new purchasers buy with their eyes open, and they buy into a proposition with a limited franchise, and with a record of bad faith toward the city, and with full knowledge of the competition of the city and the associated municipalities of Ontario that are bent on securing for the public cheap electrical energy. There is nothing now for the city to do but accept the situation and to go ahead on its own account in the best way it can to realize the wishes of the citizens in the matter of cheap power and light.

SIR HENRY PELLATT, President T. E. L. Company, which turned down city's offer for plant.

Mayor Does Not Fear Opposition

But Would Have Been Pleased If City and Company Had Got Together.

It would have been a nice thing if we had been able to get together, said Mayor Geary, who was seen on the street shortly after the result was announced. They have the right to sell to whom they wish. The fact that they are to be in the field in opposition makes no difference to me. The city electrical department will go ahead the same as it had intended. I was not in favor of the offer being made, said Controller Ward, and I am surprised that the company did not realize what a good offer it was. Let it be a fight to a finish now that it is started. I think the city will be able to take care of itself.

ONE HUNDRED CONVICTS KILLED IN MINING HORROR

Two Hundred Men Started Work in the Evening and Only Forty-Five Have Been Rescued—Disaster Was Caused by Explosion of Coal Gas and Dust.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 8.—Two hundred state convicts are reported killed in an explosion in the Banner mines at Littleton, 33 miles from here. Two hundred men are known to have been in the mines at the time of the explosion, and most of these must have been killed. The Banner mines are in the western part of Jefferson County. They are owned by the Pratt Consolidated Coal Co., which employs convicts, hired from various counties throughout the state. The explosion came after the night

OVER TEN THOUSAND JOIN BOARD OF TRADE

Ten Days' Whirlwind Campaign Closed on Saturday With Reports of Captains Who Secured Desired Addition to Membership—C. H. Willson Gets 110 Names.

IN A NUTSHELL. Started March 29 Closed April 1 Members Secured 1028 Membership of Board 2600 In 1908, membership 800

There was a grand final rally of the captains and committees to the number of about fifty, engaged in the membership campaign of the Board of Trade in the round-up lunch in the National Club at one o'clock yesterday. Mr. W. F. Gundy occupied the chair, flanked on either side by President B. S. Gourlay, the acting secretary F. D. Talbot, vice-president G. T. Somers, and other members of the executive.

The Captains' Report. After the lunch Mr. Gundy briefly asked the captains for reports. Every one was ready, but as Mr. Lloyd Wood, who has the dentists in charge, and Mr. Eric Armour, who has the lawyers, doctors, professors and teachers to look after, asked for an extension of time, it was decided to receive applications in connection with the campaign up to Saturday next, the 15th instant. Every announcement was greeted with applause, especially the leading figures were announced.

The Deed Accomplished. A grand total of 1028 actual applications was announced, making the membership of the board over 2500. Mr. Gundy, in a few felicitous words, handed the results over to the president, Mr. Gourlay. The principal figures given in were, No. 2, lawyers and doctors, Eric Armour, captain; No. 5, bookbinders, booksellers, etc., Captain S. B. Gundy; No. 12, No. 8 builders and contractors, lumber and timber, Captains ex-Mayor Gundy and Mr. Munro; No. 13, electrical contractors and jewelers, Captain C. H. Willson; No. 12 and 20 united, Captains Douglas Eby and H. H. Love; No. 19, and 18 transportation, cartage and storage, Marshall H. Brown; No. 17, By letter 72 were received. Other of the captains gave in 64 (Mr. W. M. Doucette, etc.).

Mr. Gundy, in referring to the results, spoke enthusiastically of the grand work achieved by the president, the captains and the members of the board. He pointed out that the ten hundred and twenty-eight did not include thirty-nine names handed in to the board just before the campaign commenced. Before the end of next week he had every expectation that the number would be swollen to two hundred. People were only just beginning to understand and appreciate the board. It was a great thing to have shown the city what the board can do and was doing. Thanks to the newspapers the board had been more in the public mind during this campaign than ever before. He thanked the board.

New Napoleon of Chicago Wheat Pit

Arthur Cutten, a Guelph Boy, Made $700,000 in Deal in May Wheat.

ARTHUR CUTTEN MAKES MILLION IN MAY WHEAT

Guelph Boy New Napoleon of Finance Five Years Ago Had $3,000, But Got on Right Side of Market and is the Biggest Winner in Big Deals on Chicago Market.

Arthur Cutten, a Canadian, son of W. H. Cutten, barrister, Guelph, and brother of Lionel Cutten, of Cutten & Foster, American Auto Manufacturers, Toronto, cleaned up $750,000 in the transaction in May wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade. Five years ago he was a clerk who had saved $3000; to-day he is rated as a millionaire. He was the biggest winner on the deal—the latest Napoleon of the wheat pit, according to the Chicago papers, and the man most talked of in the commercial life of the big city.

Five years ago Arthur Cutten, who lived carefully, who had saved money from his salary, announced to a Stamford White, his employer, that he was going to branch out in business for himself. "Get any money?" asked Mr. White. "I've saved some," said the young man. "I think I can get along." "My best wishes go with you, my boy," responded Mr. White, who thought a great deal of his clerk and who still thinks a great deal of Cutten.

A Guelph Boy. Cutten is a Canadian. He was born and raised in Guelph, Ont., and went to Chicago about a dozen years ago to seek his fortune. He entered the employ of White, then as now a big dealer in provisions and one of the wealthy men on the board of trade. Cutten was bright, attentive to business and got along. He lived carefully. He was "let in" on a number of deals and his bank account began to grow. He began to study conditions and also to study the market. Then he branched out by himself and for himself.

To-day Arthur Cutten is looked upon by the other members of the board by the speculators, big and little speculators alike, as a man who is not afraid to take risks, and big risks. He is in the name of speculation now in a big way. He is one of the best informed men on the board, is a shrewd trader and a clever "coverer," as the wheat pit knows the term. Early in his career that spectacular career Cutten operated in a small way. But he was always careful and almost uniformly successful. He followed the big speculators, James A. Fatten in particular, and made money.

Was on Fatten's Side. In the big wheat deal of two years ago—far by the biggest deal that was ever pulled off on the Chicago Board of Trade—Cutten was on the right side of the market and his bank account swelled considerably. Since then he has been in the market in a big way, plunging heavily at

SCORES KILLED BY EXPLOSION IN MINE

Over Seventy Bodies Have Been Recovered From the Workings, and Many Others Cannot Yet Be Reached—Rescue Leader Loses His Life in the Search.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 8.—Mine officials in charge of the searching party gave out as their opinion this afternoon that the number of dead as the result of the fire in the Pancoast Mine at Troop yesterday will probably reach 80. Seventy-three bodies had been brought to the surface at noon. The large number of dead exceeds that of any mine disaster in the anthracite coal regions in recent years, exceeding the number of dead in the terrible Twin shaft disaster near here some years ago, when fifty-one men and boys lost their lives by entombment. All thru the night the rescuing gangs kept at their gruesome task of picking up the dead who lay strewn along the farther parts of the shattered tunnel of the Pancoast colliery, from off which were the chambers and headings into which they had entered for their day's toil.

The bodies of the dead showed that all had made a hard struggle for life, burying their face deep in the cullin and wrapping their coats about their heads in an effort to ward off the poisonous air. The fire, which started in one of the hoisting engine rooms in the China vein, 750 feet beneath the surface, the lowest working in the mine, did not do so much damage as had been expected. The fire did not reach the entombed men, and the condition of their bodies shows that death was due to suffocation from smoke and asphyxiation from the accumulated gas. None of the bodies which were found in a heap in the blind gangway were in the least mutilated.

The searchers reported that the victims were found in heaps and in groups of three, five and six. Forty-four of the dead have been identified. Many of the victims were foreigners, and known only by a number or nickname, their identification was, therefore, difficult. Died Like a Hero. Heading the list of victims is Joseph E. Evans of West Scranton, who was a foreman of the United States Rescue Car, which was hurled to the mine from its station at Wilkes-Barre. He was 35 years old. Dr. J. A. Holmes, director of the United States Bureau of Mining, who arrived during the night, accompanied by Dr. W. Roberts of the instruction department of the bureau, paid a high tribute to the heroism of Evans, who was leading a rescue gang into the smoke-laden mine filled with deadly black damp. "There are martyrs in every cause," he said. "Ours has poor Evans for its first."

It was the first time that the federal rescue system was brought into action in the anthracite coal region, and Evans is regarded as the real hero of the day. It has not yet been definitely established how he came to his death. James E. Roderick, chief of the department of mines of Pennsylvania, arrived at the Pancoast colliery early to-day, and will make a thorough investigation. He will be assisted by the state mine inspectors of this region. The Pennsylvania legislature is still in session, and it is likely that further legislation to protect miner and mine property will be presented as a result of lessons learned in this latest of mine horrors.

Police Patrol Lost On the Long Trail

Search Party Fails to Locate Detachment of R. N. W. M. P. Missing for a Month.

EDMONTON, Alta., April 8.—Grave fears are entertained that the worst has happened to the mounted police patrol, consisting of sergeant Fitzgerald and Constables Carter, Martin and Taylor, who started from Hirsch Island for Edmonton, in December last. The expedition is one month overdue now, and a searching party returned to-day with no tidings of the missing men.

THE ADAMS FURNITURE COMPANY, Limited, CITY HALL SQUARE

City Hall Gossip

Like the southerner's mule, the city council on Monday last demonstrated the faculty of speculating on what they are likely to do until after they have done it. It looked like a brief session when it opened and everything ran along smoothly until the first item on the report of the board of control was reached. It nominated P. W. Ellis for the city's representative on the electrical commission, which is to take charge of the city's electrical department, and it was generally supposed that it would go thru without comment. Ald. Graham surprised everyone by moving that the appointment be delayed, and Ald. Baird made a bitter attack on the way the legislation for the commission had been put thru. Ald. Maguire, who had expressed similar opinions previous to the meeting, but decided to say nothing in council, was encouraged to voice his views on the matter, and there was quite an opposition developed to the appointment being made until the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission had named their man. This resulted in the appointment of the city's nominee being deferred. The board of control, however, have again sent the appointment on, and it is expected to go thru the next session of the council.

If there is one man in the city council who is in his right place it is Ald. A. H. Maguire, as chairman of the legislation and reception committee. Every time there has been a civic welcome extended to any body of visitors he demonstrated his fitness for the position, and never was this more apparent than at the reception to the Sheffield Choir last week.

The critics of the waterworks department received a severe setback on Wednesday, when Contractor Wed-dell refused to take over the work which the city engineer and his men were said to be mismanaging in connection with the repairs to the intake. Furthermore, the contractor endorsed everything that had been done by the city engineer and declared that all the progress possible had been made on the job, with the weather conditions prevailing. The outcome of the conference between Mr. Weddell and the members of the board of control was that the latter decided to let the head of the works department proceed with the work without interference, and give him the opportunity of showing what he can do in a week of fine weather.

The board of control have been busy on the estimates for the past week, but they have much to do yet before the tax rate is struck this year. There is a possibility that the tax rate will be struck at a much later date this year than for some years past. The controllers are prying every possible request with a view to keeping the rate down to 17-1/2 mills, but considerable doubt is expressed as to their ability to do it.

Ald. McBrien put up another strenuous fight for the life of Brocton Hall in council, but it looks very much as if the scene of his oratorical triumphs is about to pass into history. There will be another chance to extol on the beauties of its construction and the absence of "available" cracks in the walls when the report of the property committee is presented next council meeting, but there is little chance of saving it, as the majority of the council are of the opinion that halls are a poor investment for the city.

TO-MORROW.

Oh, yesterday was a wild, dark day. With a chill, angry wind and a swirl of rain. To-day drew on with a flickering ray of sunshine, but clouds soon plied up again.

But we have hopes of a fair to-morrow. For see! overhead is a patch of blue, where clouds are fleeing like phantoms of sorrow—

"One glorious, glorious star shines thru."
The Past and Present to us are given. And whether 'tis joy that they hold, In the far-off blue of His infinite Heaven.
The Father has promised a glad To-morrow.

Aerial Torpedoes.

Lieut.-Col. Muge of the Swedish army is credited with the invention of aerial torpedoes. These torpedoes are very light, and it is said that they will travel a distance of about three miles. They can be made to explode either by contact or by means of clockwork. They are launched by means of a special apparatus the torpedo travels at the rate of 30 metres a second, but the celebrity is soon increased to 300 metres, the metre being

Madero Discounts Diaz Promises

Insurrecto Leader Declares That Only Possibility of Peace Lies in Resignation of President.

MADERO'S CAMP, near Chihuahua, Mex., April 8.—The tenor of General Madero's "ultimatum" on the question of peace delivered yesterday, was rather to discredit the possibility of immediate peace. He said no peace overtures whatever had been received by him. He did not intend to move camp toward the border or anywhere else with a view of receiving any peace-commissioners. The report that his father was in El Paso and was preparing to enter the insurrecto country to see him interested him, but would have no influence on his actions, he said.

It was the first formal interview Senor Madero had given since the complete text of President Diaz's message was received in camp.

As for the reforms promised in the message, Senor Madero dismissed them with a smile, saying the promises were no more than President Diaz had previously made.

By permission of the federal authorities and the insurrectos, a special train flying a white flag was run out to Bustillos Hacienda, sixty miles west of Chihuahua. Half way out, a correspondent was met by General Orozco and an escort of 100 insurrectos.

Senor Madero dictated a statement which he said might be accepted as a definite expression of his views. The statement follows:

"I know the great damage which the war is doing to the country, and if it were possible by negotiations to end the war I would be pleased, tho it should be necessary to make some concessions from each side. I am disposed to make all personal concessions, and I will ask only the necessary guarantee to have a new election perfectly free and open to every voter.

Diaz Must Retire. "I will not consider as a guarantee the promises of General Diaz, because he has never fulfilled his previous promises. To have peace in Mexico, it is absolutely essential that General Diaz shall retire. In such case, a provisional president will have to be selected by both sides. It is not necessary that I or any of my friends shall be chosen. I would accept as provisional-president, a member of the Diaz administration if chosen by both sides, and if we are granted the right to select a few provisional governors. This to us is a great concession which we will make to end the war. If the ambitions of General Diaz obliges us to continue, I am sure we shall soon be victorious. It will be better for the country in the end to have all my program developed because that will mean a most radical changeover.

"When I left the United States there was no talk of peace negotiations, for which reason I could not name any peace commissioners. Notwithstanding MIXED MARRIAGES. Editor World: Will you kindly permit me to say a few words on the question which is interesting so many people at the present time, viz., the mixed marriage question, and the pope's decree in regard to it?

It seems to me that those who are writing and preaching in favor of the decree are to a great extent waiving the real issue that is involved, and rambling off into hair-splitting and irrelevancy. We have in this country long established British laws, by which we, as Protestants and Catholics, Mormons and heathen, have to abide or else receive our just punishment, meted out by the law-makers to law-breakers. The laws of the state must hold good under all circumstances, and no church has any right to frame a contrary law to any statute framed by said state. To do so is to overstep the prerogative of any church on earth, and if allowed would open our doors to all kinds of confusion and anarchy. If the pope can establish a law on the marriage question for Canada, contrary to the law of the state, then he can do the same thing in regard to the law of stealing, Sabbath observance, etc., etc.

The papers report that a certain man in the region of Montreal took by force certain documents connected with a lodge of Free Masons, because he thought the members of the lodge were opposed to Roman Catholicism. A jury composed of Montreal men returned verdict on this case of highway robbery of "Not Guilty" because they said the robber was performing a religious duty. If the laws of our land can thus be broken in the name of religion, or anything else, where will this kind of thing land us?

"The end justifies the means" has ever been the motto of the Jesuit, and in the name of religion the most heinous crimes have been committed. In the name of religion, which held itself superior to law, men and women have been burned at the stake, and thrown into the furnace, and given to the lion.

The Catholic Register in its article on "Hincks' High Jinks," says that the law of the land which held itself superior to law, men and women have been burned at the stake, and thrown into the furnace, and given to the lion. The Catholic who will not obey the law, but gets married before a magistrate or other person unauthorized by the church, is breaking the church's known laws. This union since Easter, 1908, has been declared invalid, and no marriage by the church. In the next breath, we are told that the decree was "intended for runaway people to the length and breadth and depth of the first statement. The pope's decree cannot be modified now, to mean less than appears on the surface, viz., Every Catholic and Protestant, no matter how honorably, respectably and openly married by a Protestant clergyman, if they attempt to live together in the marriage state thereafter, are, according to the decree living a life of immorality and as a result thereof there is only one conclusion to reach: their children are illegitimate. One does not require to be a prophet to foresee the wreck and ruin this is doing to work in homes and with individuals. We have already had a few examples.

The Register says the decree will not affect marriages which took place previous to 1908, but are there not rumors of homes where unrest and confusion have been created by the thought suggested in the decree, to men and women who have been married "en masse"? Let a pure minded man or woman begin to think at the instigation of some priest of the decree, that after all it may be he or she is not married and has perhaps been living in sin and the chances are that insanity or desperation will be the result.

Gold Issues Stronger

There was an almost complete reversal of form in the mining markets on Saturday in so far as the Porcupine gold stocks were concerned, and advances were the rule throughout the list. Hollinger was especially strong, this shares moving up 40 points in the trading, sales being put thru at $3.05 and as high as $3.85. At the close traders were bidding the better figure for more stock, with no offerings under the nine dollar mark.

The cheaper Porcupines were almost universally higher. Preston East Dome gained six points at 41; Vipond moved up three to 58, and Dome Extension and Pearl Lake were up to about a like extent.

Traders were jubilant over the advances made in the day's trading, as they were taken to indicate the underlying strength to the situation.

FOOTNOTES OR FOOTLIGHTS FOR SHAKSPEARE?

One of the most illuminating contributions to the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy, is given by a correspondent of a New York paper—illuminating not because one needs arguments to show that the author of the essays was not the author of Rosalind and Romeo, but as showing how Shakespeare needs to be read and thought about by anybody.

This writer is one of the few to remind us that Shakespeare was written not as a text for learned exposition nor to test the erudition of the nineteenth century, but as matter to be acted and spoken on the stage before a popular audience. If these plays show learning on the part of the hearers, a successful and popular play is never crowded with recondite allusion to which footnotes are more necessary than footlights—indeed the drama in Shakespeare's time was not innocent of either form of illumination. When Shakespeare makes an allusion or reference, or uses a story which plainly appeals because its features are familiar to his hearers, he proves at once that he was dealing in what was the common intellectual possession of the time. Just as a thousand of his jokes and innuendoes are lost to those who have not studied the vernacular of the day, so thousands of things which to us are painful and far away of this research require specifically to be looked up in serious times were the current talk of the time. This writer uses as illustration the reference to "Hyrcania" in "Macbeth" and elsewhere. Various annotators have referred this phrase to distant sources, the most painful and far away of these researches a serious account of "Hyrcania" and telling us that in Holland's translation of "Ulysses" (who is cited as source of the reference) the name rhinoceros appears on the page opposite—this probably to show that Shakespeare could have used this ample beast, had he not been modestly content to show his conversance with the less eccentric animal.

The Palaces of Rome. London Globe: The Roman palaces remain intact, says Dr. Muhling, but the demands of progress and of business have wrought changes in them. The Borghese Palace is now an art repository; a bank and the Austrian embassy; the Quirinal share the same fate; a drugstore establishment occupies the ground floor of the Bonaparte Palace and a moving picture show of the cheap kind is conducted in the Bernini Palace. A savings bank rents the Sciarra Colonna, a restaurant the Ruspoli, and what was once the Altieri Palace is now a row of small shops. A dealer in pictures has his sign on the Salviati Palace, and the Torlonia Palace has on one side of its portal a tourists' ticket office, and on the other the "Credito Italiano." Palatial business concerns all.

JAPANESE CARPENTERS AT WORK

Chicago Daily News: When the Chicago Athletic Association gymnasium was turned into a Japanese tea garden many members took delight in watching the workmanship of the Japanese craftsmen. Nails rarely are used in Japanese construction, most of the joining work being done either by tying or cunning fitting.

It is a strange sight to see a Japanese carpenter sawing a board. The saw resembles nothing so much as an elongated butcher's cleaver, the metal part about 18 inches long and the handle a trifle over three feet long. Where the American craftsman puts his strength into the downward or push stroke of the saw the Japanese gets it in the upward or pull stroke.

Practically the same thing occurs in the use of the drawknife and the plane. Where the American uses the drawknife as its name would imply, i. e., by pulling it, the Japanese gets it in a hacking push stroke. The Japanese drawknife is different from the American in that it has only one handle instead of two and that this instead of being set at right angles to the blade is in a straight line with it. Its principal use is in trimming the joints of bamboo poles.

On Parliament Hill

Mr. Fielding's budget deliverance on Tuesday last, without doubt, the most singular that the finance minister has ever delivered to the house. The budget speech is usually made on the motion that the house go into committee of ways and means, when the proposed tariff changes are presented in the form of resolutions. These practically become operative at once, and so, the speech is usually deferred until it is time for the customs houses to close and the telegraph offices in the house was tied to prevent any advantage being derived by special interests in the country.

All these elaborate precautions were dispensed with this year. It was known at the time that when the reciprocity resolutions were given to the house that the budget would be before it. The usual glamor and mystery, but there was an expectation in some quarters that there would be an increase in the British preference, which ministerial organs throughout the country were consistently advocating. Speculations, however, evaporated into thin air. Mr. Fielding declared a surplus of $20,000,000 in less than forty-five minutes, and the Conservatives were so taken aback that Mr. Foster was the only one who deigned to reply, and he spoke for a comparatively brief period. "Forty-five minutes," remarked one listener. "It sure reminds me of the last budget of Lord Randolph Churchill."

The minister of finance usually speaks from two to three hours in making his financial statement, and there is a protracted discussion this year the whole thing was over in three hours.

Mr. Fielding was not at ease. One would not dare say that his conscience was troubling him on account of the reciprocity deal, but assuredly he was ill at ease. His speech was delivered in a monotone. There was an absence of gesture; there was no magnetism; he didn't remind the opposition of his waywardness in previous years; he didn't tantalize; it was a simple statement of fact. The figures, as he said subsequently, speak for themselves.

One wondered if it was the Fielding of old. The substance was there, but where was the fire, the flash and the retort? No man thrives on interpellation. The finance minister. To fight the devil with fire in that case to pay him with his own tools. Friends and foes alike were sympathetic.

One is often told about the faculty of political leaders for remembering faces and names. Archbishop Bruchesi is not a political leader, but he possesses that quality to a marked degree. He was an interested spectator in the speaker's gallery one day this week. One of the newspaper correspondents wanted to speak about a matter of public importance. He had met the relate only once previously, some thirteen years ago, when as Canon Bruchesi his name had been mentioned to succeed the late Archbishop Fabre in Montreal. The newspaper man went to the gallery, addressed the archbishop with the words, "Do you know me, monsignor?"

"Certainly," replied the distinguished ecclesiastic. "You are the man who approached me on behalf of a Montreal paper some years ago to congratulate me on my appointment as bishop. I remember at the time that was the first compliment I received of my good fortune. In fact, you showed me a copy of the cable."

No man receives a more patient hearing in the house of commons than Andrew Broder, the Conservative veteran from Dundas. Mr. Broder has represented his constituents since 1896. Previously to that he represented Dundas in the legislature from 1875 to 1886. Mr. Broder was introduced to a party of newspapermen a short time ago as "the Abraham Lincoln of Canadian politics." As a farmer, he is a real son of the soil, and his arguments in the house of commons are generally clinched by a pointed anecdote or an appropriate epigram. His sincerity and candor make him loved by both Liberals and Conservatives.

Mr. Broder's speech against reciprocity on Wednesday is worthy of consideration. For the most part Sir Wilfrid himself was a patient and amused listener. Sidney Fisher, however, is usually on the gridiron when Mr. Broder speaks. Some of his sentences are worth reading apart from the general discussion. Replying to Ralph Smith (Nanimo) Mr. Broder said: "My hon. friend says that the Union Jack is safe in the hands of the American. Does he ever find it there? He finds the stars and stripes in his hands as in the western country, and I think that should not be. I do not think for one moment that the people of the older and more settled part of Canada will be affected in so far as their loyalty is concerned by this proposal."

"The genius of our people in the older settled part of the country is too sturdy and too honest to be swayed by any such thing as that, but we are attacking this country in its very vein. In the west, which is filling up with a foreign element who are not favorably disposed towards British institutions. That is where the danger lies."

Referring to Ralph Smith's feeble plea for the consumer, Mr. Broder said: "He is going to give the consumer cheaper food and the farmer more for his produce."

"The man who is found in the furrow is the man who ought to be considered first, because you may send a man to the battlefield, you may send your statesmen wherever you wish, but if the farmer leaves the furrow and does not feed him, he cannot stay in that place very long."

After describing Dr. Clark, the free trader from Red Deer, as having taken to the woods, the member from Dundas went on: "Why argue that a 25 per cent. tariff is a curse to Canada and then go for blessing to the United States where they have a 40 per cent. tariff?"

"One man," added Mr. Broder, "said don't you want that 90,000,000 market?" "I said: 'How would you like to have 90,000,000 people in your woods carrying off timber to the United States?'"

Taft did not bring reciprocity about according to Mr. Broder. "It was 90 cent farmers, whom the government had said gave them a mandate. The prime minister's reply to their demand for a side of the free trade loaf he characterized as: 'No, that is shewbread; that is in the holy of holies; you cannot have that; that is for the wild westerner; that is for the high priests of my party.'"

Mr. Broder's homely epithets are found in the following sentences: "My hon. friend yesterday was talking about potatoes in New Brunswick."

Well, so far as I am concerned—to use plain English—I don't want to see New Brunswick made the potato patch of the United States, nor the future occupation of these noble people in Tew Brunswick should be the extermination of potato bugs in order that the citizens of New York and Boston should have potatoes for dinner."

"Then the noble little island of Prince Edward, I would rather build a tunnel across Northumberland Straits than see the future destiny of that little island tied up to Boston wharves."

"Nature's God intended the Canadian people should be strong and able to overcome difficulties."

"Is there a Canadian who is not proud of British Columbia? That province, with her great range of mountains, holds in her rugged embrace the record of the ages, and she may also hold the future destiny of the Canadian people."

"Now people have said a good deal about loyalty. Well, I am always willing to fight for my country when she needs me. I am glad she has not needed me very often."

Mr. Broder could not see the Canadian raw product being converted into the finished article in United States. "I am not disposed to carry swill to the hogs to feed Brother Jonathan."

"If they (the government) went behind the backs of the people before, let them now wake up those old men (pointing) over there in the senate, and tell them to strangle this child born out of due season because if they do so it will do this country a lot of good."

Let us have a decent funeral and we will all go as pallbearers."

The lack of any mention in the budget speech that the British preference was likely to be increased from 33-1-3 per cent was unexpected in some quarters. The fact was several Liberal newspapers throughout the country were suggesting this gave color to the belief that the government would offset the reciprocity pact by granting a larger measure of preference to the British manufacturer. There was no suggestion whatever that this would be done, and it is thought now that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is playing a long shot for the imperial conference and will make a formal offer of an increased preference in return for some consideration at the hands of the Motherland. It is indubitably believed here that the government will not be content to leave the preference alone before the general election, soon to be held, and will palliate the disgruntled by introducing this element into the next contest.

WARRANT NOT EXECUTED
No Attempt Made to Arrest Chief Mattson, Arnprior.

ARNPRIOR, Ont., April 8.—The expected execution of the warrant against Chief Mattson, of Arnprior, did not take place this morning. "We haven't seen it yet," said Ralph Slatery, solicitor for the chief. "But I know the warrant is made out and expect Chief Mattson will be arrested this afternoon."

The money, which has been raised by subscription, has nothing to do with the case of the town or guarantee company, and will probably go to alleviate the condition of the chief's family.

NEW TYPE OF MOTHERHOOD THE CURSE OF ENGLAND.

By W. B. Thompson.

LONDON, April 8.—Of all the unsavory practices that have been imported from the land of the Stars and Stripes surely the most neurotic, the most harmful, the new type of motherhood which is eating into the heart of the nouveau riche of the twentieth century. This is all the more to be deplored when it is remembered that England's greatness is fundamentally associated with England's motherhood—a motherhood which in the days of our grandfathers, was the essence of all that was good and noble and sacred. But things have changed. A new race of people have taken possession of our country—a race that knew not Joseph, and to whom our traditions are as dust.

Much has been written, more has been said, about the decline of the birth-rate and about race suicide, yet no one has risen, either in the press or in the pulpit, to denounce the modern fashionable woman for her wanton indifference to the duties of motherhood. Marriage at all events among certain classes of society has ceased to be in any way concerned with maternal instincts. The world is dumb, it may be forgotten the claims of motherhood, but if she has borne children, she tries to forget, in the hurry and excitement of the social round, that she ever was a mother. Dances are of more value than children, card-parties more important than offspring.

Following the example of the United States—where divorce is the rule rather than the exception—marriage has become a trade, and marriage vows a farce. A few months ago a beautiful Anglo-American wife was heard publicly to declare at a west end hotel that she had not the remotest idea of the age of her child. Surely such a confession was disgraceful. It is not race suicide that matters so much as the preservation of the living. But under modern conditions when the gratification of desire appears to be impossible, it is a terrible indictment. But it is not only in the smart set that the daily round of the smart set is a hard one—Paris, Monte Carlo, Switzerland, dashes across the continent, fishing in Norway, trips to Japan. The society woman never knows where she will be next week. She has, of course, a home, but so busy is she that as often as not she is too hurried to go there, and puts up at some fashionable hotel, where the arrangements are ready-made to meet her demands, and where she can entertain with the greatest possible ease and extravagance. The children are left to the tender care of a staff of servants. Their mother may look into the nursery once for a fortnight or once a month—on the other hand, she may not.

The social round takes up all her time, and in all she cares about, the children are sacrificed to the base pleasures of life. The American dollar has decreed that the only thing worth while in this world is to fall in love with the Golden Calif, and the society mother has taken the doctrine to heart. Motherhood is no longer a love which is the milk of childhood. Half her life is spent in her motor car, in her club, or in some gambling hell, where she plays with the recklessness of a Monte Carlo plunger. And the debts that accrue during the season—have to be paid, and in the paying of them many things are lost sight of—children, modesty, virtue itself. She must follow the fashion. And of such are the mothers of the coming generation of England's "old nobility."

Craze of Smart Set. We all recall that American importation called the "cakewalk." It became the craze of the smart set, several of whom were exhibiting their prowess in that questionable art on the stage. One, succeeded in obtaining an engagement, with the result that a year later divorce proceedings were instituted against her by her husband. The unsavory details—how her children had been neglected, how months went by without her either seeing or visiting them, made sad and arresting reading. But the eccentric cakewalk is a mild amusement compared with some of the fancy dances and so-called cotillions which come over from the other side of the Atlantic, and which are assiduously copied by modern hostesses. Only a short time ago an American nobleman, married to an American heiress, turned a portion of his magnificent ancestral mansion into something approaching a music-hall, and invited his wife an opportunity to display her talents in some particular form of voluptuous dance. And the horror of it was that those present voted her "clever," and the idea of turning a mansion into a music-hall "cute."

This is the wrong sort of schooling or environment in which to rear boys and girls if you want to rear them into healthy men and women. Once a creature of fashion violates the conventional codes of the ultra-modern set, which she moves she is blackballed, and let a woman commit any sin and she is a pariah. Let her commit the greatest sin of all—forget she is a mother—and can be committed than to ignore the flesh of your flesh, blood of your blood?

The responsibilities of motherhood are multitudinous and are never-ending. In generations gone by the English mother was the world's model. The wife of the richman lived in her own home, and never thought of travelling until her children had grown up. Entertainments were certainly given—entertainments of the comparative modesty of which to-day would provoke a contemptuous smile; and the season over, the family would retire to the country, there to remain until the following year.

Another Court Needed. And that is the redoubt on which motherhood should be retained, if it is to desire to begeth to our children that sense of justice, truth, and honor which should begeth to our citizenship. The nations have established Hague Conference to put an end to the folly of war. Another conference should be provided to put an end to the mother who violates the code of motherhood.

MUSIC NOTES

Dr. Norman Anderson and the well-known choir of St. Andrew's, King-street, will give a recital of the new oratorio, "The Crucifixion," Holy Thursday evening at a special service at the church. The oratorio, which has always maintained a high standard of musical proficiency, and it will be safe to say that the choir will give a rendering of this popular work which will be assured. As is pointed out in the program, the oratorio is a masterpiece of the pen of the narrator, and the latter, the work attributed to our Saviour, Mr. Anderson, who is a native of Dundee, Scotland, and who is a member of the parish church of St. Mary's, he is heard here for some time to come, with such success, and it is a matter of doubt but that an artistic interpretation of this work will be given.

An interesting musical event for this evening is a piano recital to be given by Miss Florence Johnston, pupil of Mr. W. O. Forsyth. The recital will be given in the theatre of the Normal School, and begins at eight o'clock.

Miss Johnston will be assisted by Mr. Russell G. McLean, the well-known baritone.

Our Weekly Short Story THE BETTER WAY

By L. G. Moberly. Douglas stood in the spring sunlight, his eyes looking down into mine, his voice deep with earnestness, the soft breeze ruffling his fair hair. "Hilda, listen to me," he said, and in his voice I could not help noticing a new note of strength of manliness. "You say I am only a boy. You say you could not give yourself to somebody so young. You say—and that is the worst thing of all—you say you want to live your own life. It is nonsense to talk like that."

"It is not nonsense," I flashed back on him. I love my work as much as you love yours. Why should I give it all up to be a soldier's wife? I want to be a singer—a great singer. My voice—"

"Your voice is wonderful," he broke in, "no one wants to deny that; I least of all. But your womanhood is more wonderful than your voice, darling. His voice dropped. "Are you going to sacrifice your womanhood to your career?"

"I can't have my life hampered, my hands tied," I said. "I must carve out my career. I must live my individual life. I agree with the poet who said, 'He travels the fastest who travels alone.' I mean to travel alone."

"Is fast traveling the only kind that matters?" Douglas asked, and I saw that his mouth set itself into determined lines, whilst a stern look came into his blue eyes. "And what is your goal?"

"I want to make a huge success as a singer," I answered, a touch of defiance in my voice. "My goal is fame."

"Fame versus perfected womanhood," he said, and the sternness in his eyes crept into his voice; "fame versus a woman's kingdom."

"Do you look upon life with you as a kingdom for me?" He put his hands suddenly upon my shoulders and held me with a grip that almost hurt me.

"Her man, her home, her children—those make up the kingdom of a good woman," he said slowly; "of anyone worthy to bear the name of woman at all."

"Then perhaps I am not worthy to bear the name," I said, pulling myself away from him, and speaking angrily. "I mean to live my own life. I can't be hampered. I shall travel as I please, with my own friends, as we were before."

"Because I don't want your friendship," Douglas answered roughly; "I promise about it. There can't be compromise about it. I want you for my wife, and if you will not be that, then this is the end unless you can do what I wish."

"For a moment I did not answer him; my eyes wandered round the landscape and when my glance came back to Douglas' white face my eyes were as hard as my heart."

"Certainly," I understood, "my cold refusal," our pleasant friendship is to end to-day, because you will not be satisfied with my handiwork."

"Most assuredly," he replied, "you are choosing to-day between your career and your womanhood. You are choosing well and good; I go out of your life forever. This is the end. Only Hilda's—his voice shook—remember, to Douglas, is it a dreary work; very desolate, sometimes sad."

had leapt into public favor. As I drove back to the rooms where I lived with an elderly cousin as chaperon, I laughed softly to myself, my hands striding over the heated-up flowers that filled every available corner of the vehicle.

"And instead of this Douglas wanted me to merge my life and individuality in his," I said aloud. "I wish he could have been there to-night. Then he would have understood."

"Cousin Bessie was sitting up for me. Indisposition had prevented her from coming to the concert, but her kind face greeted me as I entered our sitting-room, the cabman staggering after me with arm-loads of flowers.

"Oh, my dear!" the kind old darling exclaimed, "Oh, my dear!" and to my surprise I saw that there were tears in her eyes.

"You mustn't cry, Cousin Bessie," I said laughing. "I hope this is only the first of lots of equally exciting times. I've been a success. I've got the ball at my feet. There is nothing to cry about."

"It is not your success that makes me cry, Hilda," she said, gulping down a sob. "It is something quite different—something that—"

"What on earth is the matter?" I asked, seeing that she was in genuine distress. "Is there any real trouble, Cousin Bessie? What is it?"

"I did not mean to let you know to-night, she faltered, pushing the evening papers towards me across the table, but seeing you so happy and triumphant made the contrast all the more dreadful, and I—it upset—"

"Is there some news in the papers that you—?"

"My eye was died into silence as her hand pointed to a column of the paper headed in large letters 'Frontier Campaign,' and for one moment she hesitated to speak."

"As I picked up the paper and glanced at what followed the big headlines, I read the casualities were as follows: 'Wounded—since dead, Douglas Fraser.' I looked stupidly across the table at Cousin Bessie, a large tear drop was coursing down her long, thin nose; it dropped upon the table, and I laughed. The sound of my laughter startled me, and I was aware that my brain, and a queer sort of dizziness seized me, so that I gripped at the table to steady myself."

"Douglas Fraser—wounded—since dead. Douglas could not be dead! And all I could hear was the hurt note in his voice as he said: 'God grant, God grant, when you get it, your heart's desire may not bring leanness into your soul.'"

"I think I'll go to bed," I said. "No, I don't want any supper. I couldn't eat anything. And my flowers—oh, they can just stop here. I—I don't want to talk any more."

"When Cousin Bessie kissed me with such warmth, I had a sudden glimpse of Douglas. And I had not shed one tear since that day. I had told her that I was shutting the door on my woman's kingdom. When I stood alone in my own rooms, I stood there with my own image in my long glass and wondering what Douglas would have said if he could have seen me now."

SECOND TEAM LOST TWO HARD LUCK GAMES DURING THE WEEK

Jim McGinley is in Mid-Season Form — Kocher Looks to Have the Makings of a First-class Backstop—The World Man With the Yannigans.

DANVILLE, April 6.—(Staff Correspondence.)—When the time came to leave Macon, after two weeks of good hard practice, Manager Kelley decided to divide his club, placing Willie Keeler in charge of nine players, namely, Winter, Delahanty, Slattery, Mueller, Kocher, Armiger, McIntyre, MacDonald, McGinley, and send them to play games up thru the State of Virginia.

Your correspondent decided to make the trip with Keeler. The first stop before leaving Georgia was at Columbus, where the week previous the regular team had met a 7 to 2 defeat. The Yannigans put up a great game, and during several stages looked like certain winners. In the ninth innings Toronto made the score a tie on hits by Winter and Keeler. In Columbus' last half of the ninth the first man up popped to Winter, the next man singled and went to second on the next put-out. Mueller threw a trifle wide to Slattery to get the last man at first, but Slattery, in attempting a one-handed play, dropped the ball. That left a man at third and first and two out. Kocher, who had been putting up a great game behind the bat, then made a grievous error. He attempted to get the player at third on a snap throw, but threw wide of the bag and the run scored, which gave the home team the game.

While the play looked bad at the time, still it was a mistake that has often been made. Kocher looks to have the makings of a wonderful catcher. At the present time he is green and has considerable to learn. He is a most willing worker, and is a young player who is anxious to learn and to make good. Willie Keeler is particularly well pleased with him, and sees no reason, with a little careful handling, why he should not develop into a really first-class catcher.

The old reliable Jim McGinley was in great shape, and pitched the first five innings of the game in mid-season form. He showed his class in the fourth innings of the game, when, after one man was out, two hits were made in a row. McGinley settled down, and, tho' he had to face two of Columbus' best batters, he fanned them both. Winter and Keeler each had two hits to their credit, while Delahanty drove out a corking three-bagger, that made the southerners sit up and look around.

After leaving Columbus and magnificent summer weather, an all-day-and-night jump was made to Roanoke, Va., where the players were met by rain and cold winds, which lasted for three days and prevented games being played at that town. A journey was then made to Danville, Va., and on Thursday, April 6, a game was played with that town, in which the Leafs again met defeat by one run, after a most interesting match, and one of the kind that will go a long way to help players fit themselves for a hard season.

Mueller, Winter and McGinley are all in excellent shape, and need but one or two good warm workouts to place them ready to pitch championship ball. Keeler also is rounding up fast, and it can safely be said he will be found in the Leafs' outfield this season. Delahanty has been troubled for a few days with a nasty cold, but otherwise is in condition to play, as also is Slattery.

Armiger, MacDonald and McIntyre have each shown well whenever they have been put in the box. Armiger looks the best of the three, and is very anxious to succeed. MacDonald has still a lot to learn, but his work against Columbus in the last four innings created a most favorable impression.

McIntyre pitched a full nine innings game against Danville, and surprised everybody by his excellent showing. He appears a clever pitcher, but mars his usefulness by an indifferent attitude when either at practice or in a game. If by some means he could be brought to put more life into his play he would show to much better advantage.

Many amusing incidents crop up as a team tours thru different states, and one which fell particularly to notice was a courtroom scene. On a rainy morning a number of the players decided to visit the court house. The trial was that of a man charged with stabbing a doctor who was attending the man in question's wife.

The man in the course of his defence said he had come into the house the worse of liquor, and had found the doctor with his arm around his wife's neck. Words passed and the doctor struck at him and he then drew a knife and stabbed the doctor. This evidence regarding the doctor's actions with the wife was contradicted by the man's own daughters. The judge summed up the case in this manner, and turning to the prisoner he said: "In face of the evidence submitted by your own family, I do not believe a word you have said, but had you really walked into your bedroom and found the doctor, or any other man, with his arm around your wife's neck I would not have blamed you for stabbing him." He then fined the man $50 and six months in jail. While lots have been written of how much a southern gentleman prides the honor of his home, and now far he will go to defend that honor, it is doubtful if many more striking examples ever occurred than the remark of this southern judge.

On Monday the two squads will again come together at Richmond, and it will in all probability be the point at which the weeding-out process will start. Eddie Fitzpatrick, the Leafs' last-season's utility fielder, who has been sick, is due to meet the team there.

From work shown so far, Torontos look to have a much stronger team than last season, and should make an excellent showing in the race for the championship honors.

Coleman's Carlyle Blue Serge Suits Made-to-Measure 22-50

You have heard of these Carlyle blue serge suits before, and our phone has been kept busy the past few days enquiring if there is time to have one of these suits made up for Easter wear. We have answered "yes" to all who have been quick in having their orders booked. There is no equal value material offered by any house in Canada. A Carlyle blue serge suit—made-to-measure—is really a thirty-dollar suit. We make it a leader at twenty-two fifty.

The Correct Suit No suit is more proper for a man, young or old, engaged in business or professional life. What has given, doubtless, more than anything else, distinction to these blue serge suits, and to all clothes made by this house, is the care and skill and perfect fit that goes with Coleman's clothes—clean-cut stylish garments, full of character and individuality. If residing out of town, send for our new catalogue, containing forty-one actual samples of materials, fashion designs, self-measuring chart, and all particulars how to do business with this house.

Moncrief Statistics

The winter meeting of the Florida Live Stock and Agricultural State Fair Association, which opened at Moncrief Park, Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 24, 1910, and came to a close April 1, embraced 111 racing days, during which $300,000 was distributed in stakes and purses, representing a daily average distribution of $2778. J. V. Schorr and F. J. Fong figured in an exceedingly close contest for first place in the money-winning owners' list, the honor going to Mr. Schorr by the scant margin of $60. The winnings of the Schorr horses cost up $14,000, as against $14,000 to the credit of the Fong stable. S. A. Clifton led third with $11,449 and others over the $10,000 mark include R. D. Williams and the Beverwyck Stable. G. E. Chinn fell just short of the $10,000 class. The following are the 20 best winning owners:

ART OF PITCHING MUST BE NATURAL, NOT TAUGHT

A Pitcher Finds It Hard to Instruct Another Man to Curve a Ball.

By W. S. Farnsworth. NEW YORK, April 8.—Two of the greatest pitchers in the American League met at Ponce de Leon Park in Atlanta, Ga., a couple of weeks ago. They were Russell Ford, the sensational spitball twirler of the New York Americans, and Walter Johnson, the John Meekin for speed of the Washington team. Ford and Johnson are close friends and during the practice of the Nationals one morning Ford strolled out in a uniform to work out a bit before the game in the afternoon between the Yankees and Otto Jordan's Atlanta club of the Southern League. Johnson was well warmed up by the time the New Yorker arrived at the grounds and he was fairly burning the atmosphere with a fast ball that had a peculiar break to it. "Where do you get all that speed from, Walter?" Ford asked of the tall Washington boxman. "Gee, I don't know," answered Johnson. About ten minutes later Ford began cutting loose with his splitter, which is the freakiest of all freak deliveries. "And how in the dickens do you make that ball break that way, Russ?" asked Johnson. "I couldn't tell you if you paid me a million dollars," replied Ford. And there you are. The art of baseball pitching cannot be taught; it must be natural. Of course a pitcher can be taught when to pitch an inside or an outside or a high or low ball. He can be shown how to change his pace, mixing in a dope ball with his fast ones. But in a matter of curves he finds it hard work to instruct another man so that he can deliver the same heave. As in every case there are exceptions to this rule. For instance, Jack Quinn, who was next to Ford in winning percentage for the Yankees last season, has finally mastered one of Ford's splitters. But it was only after watching Ford pitch, day in and day out, all thru the southern practice of the New York club, that Quinn could get the ball to break right. When Ford was with Atlanta a few years ago he was the possessor of a side-hand splitter that was a peach-erino. But as he was a natural over-hand heaver he found that the side-arm ball was injuring his wing. Therefore, he discovered and perfected an over-hand wet fling, which last season won 26 out of 32 games for him. Now Quinn is a distinct side-arm twirler. He always had a good splitter, but Ford spent an hour after hour with him at Atlanta, Ga., where the Yankees trained this year, showing him how to fling the old splitter that put Atlanta on the baseball map. Since then Quinn has been working on the ball and to-day he has it down pat. With his old splitter as good as ever the husky Yankee is probably the only boxman in the world who can honestly boast of having two separate and distinct wet deliveries. But there isn't one case in a hundred where a successful twirler of a certain curve can teach it to some other man.

In 1821 a certain German doctor was persecuted because of his views on medicine; thirty years after the public erected a statue in his honor, because of those same views. The doctor was named Hahnemann; his discovery was homeopathy. History is always repeating itself. Two years ago people were incredulous when we told them that "NOBLEMAN" CIGARS (two for a quarter) were equal to high-grade "imported." To-day the sale of "NOBLEMEN" is unprecedented. "NOBLEMAN" CIGARS are made from the choicest Havana leaf, by skilled Cuban workmen. What better elements can any cigar contain? The quality of "NOBLEMEN" is the same as imported, but the price is half. "NOBLEMEN" size, two for a quarter. "PANETELAS" size, 10c straight. "CONCHA FINAS" size, three for 25c. S. Bowling Chat

The fifth annual tournament of the Canadian Bowling Association, which closed Saturday night, was a huge success, and some good bowling was witnessed.

The B.B.C. Company team of this city set up a world's record on Friday night that looks good to stand for some time.

The Bonds of Cleveland were the former record holders with a score of 2989, made at the Buffalo tournament, but the locals went this 65 better by spilling 2024 for their three games.

The tournament was run in a business-like way, and the alleys were going at all stages. In the doubles and singles several good scores were hung up, but no new world's marks were made.

Three more championships were decided on the Toronto Bowling Club alleys during the past week, the winners being Men's League, and having also postponed games set for roll. Nationally Cash Register and Langmuir Pairs will now have to fight it out for second and third positions.

In this league the finish is the best in many seasons, all teams being fairly well bunched for midday to last-fourth, did well their first set on both and no doubt will be a factor in the race next year from the first ball rolled. Leveck & Co. also did themselves proud, having come thru the bunch from last place and finished in the first division.

The second championship decided was the morning section of the first league, with the two World teams—Sunday and Daily—winning the first and second series, respectively, which were rolled Monday and Tuesday afternoons, were well attended by all the morning section types, who were out strong to root for their favorites. The Dalries won the championship on total pins.

In the evening section Toronto Typewriter won the first series, second series, rolled off for their championship in Wednesday and Friday evenings, and furnished even more final. Both teams, who were backed up to their highest pitch, had an army of rooters in attendance, and which some-what told on the more and which some-rollers. It was an even break, however, and a fair field for both, and with an even division of games on both nights Toronto Typewriter were awarded the championship by a total pins, the margin being 273 for the day.

In the Eaton League, Engineers have been detoured for failing to live up to the schedule in No. 1 section, and in their place Fifth Floor now represents a few games down. In No. 2 section, Dept. A, who almost tied with Winnipeg Office and Dept. E, C for the top, put themselves out of the running by losing their set, and the latter pair, who are now tied, and with one more game to roll, will fight it out for the championship.

In the Apple League, Pippins are still leading, but the next three from rolled will have to go some in order grabbing the lead.

In the two leagues, ElFairs jumped into the lead in the first, winning five straight games, while the Mea bettered the Bankers for second, now tied with the Bankers for second right on their feet, and are now tied that is being hard fought and one not far behind.

In the Eaton Two-man the going is close, but the winners of the morning of ten teams. The ninth is still very much in the running, while the last team cannot be counted out as yet by any means.

In the Emmett Two-man League, from first to last it would take some guessing to get this little six-club affair any closer together at present.

Altho not down on the program for this season, the winners of the morning section of the Printers' League, Daily World, have indicated their intention to roll off with Toronto Typewriter, the winners of the evening section, for the championship of both sections, and to say the least, it's a plucky move on the part of the morning section executive, five to sanction the meeting, for it's a well-known fact that for some seasons back the evening rollers to draw from that could never be met by any of the morning section clubs, and for that reason alone both sections had agreed not to meet this year in the final roll-off. However, the morning section are to be congratulated on their plucky move at the last minute, and the true sportsmanship entered into by them in taking on an opponent acknowledged to be their superior. This match, which will be home-and-home games, started Saturday night, and will be concluded next Saturday night with games to count, or in case of a tie on the round, total pins will decide the championship.

The wholesale frugal dealers will hold their annual handicap tournament at the Toronto Bowling Club on Wednesday evening, and with a banquet to be held immediately afterwards, the affair promises to be of the full dress variety during the rolling, and at the banquet a twelve-piece orchestra will be in attendance. Tom Vance and Aling Pim Kimpson, who have the affair in hand, promise the

SPORTING NOTES.

Rudolph Unholz, the boxer fighter, who Friday night was knocked out in the third round of a scheduled 10-round go with Tommy Moore of Chicago, at St. Joseph, Mo., was a few hours later removed to a hospital suffering from a dangerous case of blood poisoning. His condition is said to be watched by physicians who are attending him. Unholz had an operation performed on a "cut-throat" ear in Chicago, a few days ago, after blood poison had set in. After the fight last night it was discovered that the infection had spread down the side of his face to his neck.

Capt. J. Hardress Lloyd and Captain Herbert Wilson sailed for New York Saturday on the steamer Lusitania from Liverpool. The other 9 of the British polo team, which will try to regain the international polo cup on the Meadowbrook field, will follow soon. Lieut. Paine and Capt. Ste. Cheese will arrive from their Indian posts to-day and sail on Wednesday. Capt. P. W. Barrett and Lieut. Noel Edwards will follow on April 18. The English players are confident of victory.

News has reached boxing fans of New York that Jim Driscoll, England's featherweight champion, who is called by British experts the best boxer in the world, has decided to retire and will not fight again unless he finds that the ring offers him only means of livelihood. Driscoll will henceforth turn his entire attention to race racing.

A fifteen-day racing meet will open at the Ogden, Utah, track May 1.

Vermont League Meeting.

The Vermont League executive will meet Wednesday night at St. Cyr's Hall, corner Manning and Fols Avenue, at 8 o'clock. The following teams are asked to send two representatives: Vermont, St. Cyrpans, St. Annes, Red Sox and Garmocks. This meeting is very important.

Carpet Ball.

Waverley defeated College on the latter's floor in a fast game of carpetball by the score of 12 to 9. This game was very exciting, as both teams are trying hard for the cup. The line up: J. Innes (ct.), H. Brown, W. Archibald, K. Noble, L. Waters, J. Ridley.

"Ridiculous," was the answer of President Thomas Lynch of the National League, in the charge made by the Rev. P. R. Miller at Services yesterday that baseball interests have raised $250,000 to secure the passage of a Sunday baseball bill.

"The whole thing is a joke," said Mr. Lynch. "Why the New York clubs don't win Sunday ball. They feel that the people of the state do not want it. Furthermore it seems rather odd that if such a fund were in existence I would not know about it."

VERDICT WAS SUICIDE.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—A coroner's jury empaneled to enquire into the death on Thursday of Craig Lippincott, president of the J. B. Lippincott Company, publishers, rendered a verdict of suicide to-day.

Mr. Lippincott was buried to-day, the funeral being private.

Tom Johnson Seriously Ill.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 8.—Former Mayor Tom L. Johnson, who, following a relapse, has been confined to his bed for nearly three weeks, from cirrhosis of the liver, passed a comparatively restful night, but to-day is believed to be approaching death.

Respectable, Reputable Racing

What the Canadian Racing Associations Are Up Against And the Responsibility Col. Matheson Has Assumed—Wanted a Commission.

Racing in Canada is going to flourish this year. All the members of the Canadian Racing Associations have announced their stakes and in every instance the added money has been retained at its former figure. This shows the confidence of the associations and it also shows the appreciation of the public without which the standard of the sport could not possibly be maintained. A great and grave responsibility rests upon the Canadian Racing Associations in the premises. They must act not with consideration for possibly powerful and unscrupulous enemies but with a manifest desire to stick to the right path no matter what befalls. Had this been done in years gone by there would have never risen the opposition that a year or two ago threatened to kill the sport for all time. Why there should be in the minds of a section of the community such a deadly horror of racing is difficult to understand. It is a good sport, generally a clean sport—the standard of which in this professionalism prevails—and is of benefit alike to the community and to the horse. It is because of the gambling that some men let me tell the good people who take this view that the gambling and evil from horse racing are not a patch upon the gambling that goes on in another direction, mercilessly ruining men's lives, bringing women to the gutter, and creating thieves and forgers.

STATE OF THE MARKET FOR HORSES

Prices Too Stiff in the Country to Give Dealers a Fair Margin of Profit—Consequently Sales Are Declining.

The dealers are certainly up against it. Prices are so stiff in the country that the margin of profit is pretty nearly nil and several have gone out of business. Proprietors of the auction marts are in a quandary. On the one hand they want to boost business by quoting decent prices; on the other they wish for the patronage of the dealers, out of whose efforts they make their profits.

During the past week there has been no room for grumbling as regards the figures forthcoming, but selling has been slow, although the market has been as numerous and as high in quality as ever. Draught horses continue in good demand, but there is a lightning in delivery horses owing doubtless to the increased use of automobile trucks. So far these have mostly been used for bulky parcels, but they are coming into vogue for the general delivery business and consequently the outlook for expressors and delivery horses is not so bright as it might be. It is even said that one of the big transportation companies has in contemplation the conversion of the motor trucks into delivery trucks. If it is so the manager of the system says he knows nothing of it and that he is in favor of the horse and expects that he ever will be. But of course he is ruled by the high muck-mucks in Montreal.

One thing is sure, namely, the better roads, the greater the use of electricity. And farmers are all in favor of good roads. Hence there is reason for their understanding that horse prices must weaken. When that comes it is natural to suppose they will give up breeding, or say they will, and then not only will prices strengthen once more but there will be a scarcity that will amount almost to a famine, for it is as certain as day and night that the demand for horses will continue even if the auto-trucks come in, when trolleys arrived, when bicycles made good and now that automobiles are all the rage the usefulness has gone for sure! Not so, however, he will prevail for all times and his usefulness, like himself, will increase and multiply.

Sales For the Week.
The entries this week will be of a higher grade than usual, including at The Repository what is called a continuous sale, running over Tuesday and Wednesday. Among the special offerings will be a consignment of hammer horses from the Nickle-Dyment Lumber Co., and a high-class Hackney colt owned by J. W. Hammond of Hamilton. Mr. C. A. ELEVEN STAKES TO CLOSE ON MAY 1

The O.J.C. Maintains Its Reputation For Enterprise and Sportsmanship by Retaining the Value of Its Races at the Standard Set in More Liberal Times.

Not a whit discouraged by the virulence of the opponents of racing, nor by the loss of revenue from the limitations of periods, the O. J. C. has retained its status intact and announces that eleven of them will close on May 1. The added money to these stakes amounts to $17,400, which with the $2850 added to the four events that closed on March 1, brings the grand total up to $20,250 in stakes for the spring meeting alone. In addition there will be some 35 or 40 purse races run, none of which will be worth less than five hundred dollars and several quite a bit more. So that altogether something over forty thousand dollars will be distributed to the winners. This enterprising liberality is all the more notable because of the uncertainty of the revenue from the pari-mutuel system, which has given their first trial at the track this year. The stakes that close with Secretary W. P. Fraser, Imperial Bank Building, Leader Lane, on May 1, are as follows:

- Toronto Cup, $5000 added; for three-year-olds and up; a mile and a furlong; to be run May 24.
- King Edward Hotel Gold Cup, with $1500 added; for three-year-olds and up; weight for age; a mile and a sixteenth; to be run May 27.
- Minto Selling Stakes, $1000 added; for three-year-olds; a mile and a sixteenth; to be run May 20.
- Prince of Wales Handicap, $1000 added; for three-year-olds and up; six furlongs; to be run May 25.
- William Hendrie Memorial Handicap, $1000 added; for three-year-olds and up, foaled in Canada; one mile; to be run May 27.
- Woodstock Plate, $2000 added; for three-year-olds; penalties and allowances; a mile and a furlong; to be run May 20.
- Victoria Stakes, $1200 added; for two-year-olds; penalties and allowances; a mile and a furlong; to be run May 24.
- Coronet Stakes, $1000 added; for two-year-olds, foaled in Canada; four and a half furlongs; to be run May 22.
- Woodbine Steeplechase, $1500 added; for four-year-olds and up; penalties and allowances; about two miles and a half; to be run May 24.
- Street Railway Steeplechase Handicap, $1200 added; for four-year-olds and up; about two miles and a half; to be run May 27.

The daily crowd at the spring meetings will consist of seven races. It will be noticed that, as stated in last Sunday's World, the heavy weight champion of the National Horse Show of 1909, which he took from Giffrey France. He also bought from George Watson half a dozen prize winners and show prospects, among which was the brown Hackney mare Lady Tuck, for which Mr. Watson paid $2750 at the horse sale. She won ten first prizes in her last season and was champion at the Plainfield and Brockton horse shows. In the spring she was also high class bay that looked like leader of a winning park four. It was generally understood that Mr. Lowes had purchased her for $15,000. He is going into the show business and will be represented in the coming season at the armories. Thomas Custon, who has charge of the stable, accompanied Mr. Lowes, who purchased of Emil Seiler, of the Knickerbocker Stables, a Stanhope Phaeton, park gate and George IV. phaeton, all built by Brewster. Together with two sets of double harness for appointment classes.

TRADE IN NEW YORK.

Truman Lowes Buys Some High Class Horses For Sir Henry Pellatt.

Trade in the horse market at New York according to the papers there is brisk and encouraging, but good animals are hard to get and buyers are exacting. In the best buyers, recently has been Truman Lowes, formerly of Brampton, Ont., now domiciled with his wife, Fred C. at Calgary, Alberta. Mr. Lowes was in Toronto during the past week. One of his purchases in New York was the thoroughbred saddle horse, Heartstring, a heavy weight champion at the National Horse Show of 1909, which he took from Giffrey France. He also bought from George Watson half a dozen prize winners and show prospects, among which was the brown Hackney mare Lady Tuck, for which Mr. Watson paid $2750 at the horse sale. She won ten first prizes in her last season and was champion at the Plainfield and Brockton horse shows. In the spring she was also high class bay that looked like leader of a winning park four. Together with two sets of double harness for appointment classes.

Fisher Wilmore of Belleville is another gentleman who will be strong in the saddle classes with Kentucky-bred importations. Emilus Jarvis will also be well represented. So will J. B. Kilgour, 80, 100, Hon. Adam Beck, and the forthcoming show they will be more numerous and of a higher quality than ever. Many entries have already been made, but more will come to hand on Monday, Saturday having been closed day, but in the meantime it is pleasing to have Secretary Starck's assurances that the prospects were never roser.

HAMILTON MAN DEAD

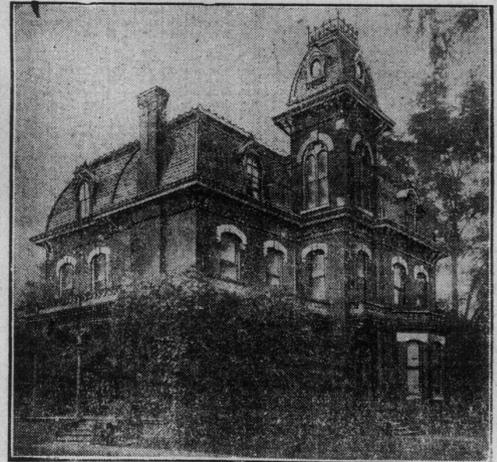

Was Leading Undertaker and Member of City Council.

HAMILTON, Ont., April 8.—James Dwyer, one of the best-known undertakers in Hamilton, and for a number of years a member of the city council, died at his home here this morning.

Bjornson and the Bird. Bjornson, the Norwegian poet, loved animals. In a lecture delivered by him when abroad he said: "At home in Norway we do not murder any of our song birds. Our children have for years banded themselves together in clubs to protect the birds' nests. But what we gain by this for our fields, gardens and woods is as nothing in comparison with what we gain for the education of our children in wearing them from cruelty and making them the protectors of the little birds. It teaches them to control their feelings and awakens enthusiasm for worthy causes. Their love of destruction we change to magnanimity. In Norway it is the school that teaches children their duty to song birds, and in the schools they form their societies for bird protection."—From The Animal's Friend.

Trend of Legislation Towards Conservation of Public Values

Before the Ontario Tax Reform League, George J. Bryan gave an address on Conservation of Public Values. He said: No more important and interesting question before the public to-day is there than what may aptly be described as the—conservation of public values.

The rapidity with which this movement—not merely the movement for the conservation of our forests or other natural resources—but the larger movement, i.e., the conservation of all public values has spread is most remarkable—and yet when we ponder over the fact—the evidence of which is seen everywhere—that the wealth possessed—and the power to absorb wealth of almost all known rich men in the world at present, has been and is derived from those sources which in an economic sense may fittingly be spoken of as public values, it is not so wonderful after all that there should be an awakening such as we are witnessing everywhere, and that something drastic in the way of public policy legislation should be enacted all along the line.

Gradually, however, and almost imperceptibly we have seen the enactment of various laws—in all parts of the world, in which the principle for which we are contending has been given some recognition.

What Are Public Values? It may be necessary at this point to enquire—what do you mean by public values? I refer to values attaching to concessions or special privileges under legislative acts in respect of site or ground values—urban and rural, coal, oil, gas and mineral land values, water power values, water dock values, forest land values, railroad right-of-way values, gas and oil pipe line values, electric light and power, telephone, telegraph, steam heat and power, water works and street railway franchises, and not least of all fish and game preserve privileges. In a sentence we aim for the conservation of the value inherent in all natural resources and natural monopolies which by natural right belong to the public and should always be so considered.

For illustration—in our taxation laws the right of the community to tax in great part the value attaching to land is recognized; not alone because there is a value easily reached but it is generally conceded the duty of government to so tax this value for the reason that it is a publicly created value. And just as we herein accept the theory or principle of conserving public values—this means of the taxing power, so do we find in other enactments relating to public values otherwise described, its principle embodied and acted upon. It will be of genuine interest to refer to various legislative measures—here in Ontario and elsewhere, wherein we find a clear expression of the community's right to deal with, conserve and absorb publicly created values.

Trend of Legislation. I shall deal with but a few of numerous examples which go to show the trend of this progressive legislation and designed by its sponsors to serve the common interests. Whenever we hear of a community taking over a public service franchise, whether it be a gas, electric light and power, or waterworks plant, telephone or street railway lines or other concessions—valuable because they are natural monopolies, we see evidence of the community coming into its own—in other words a concrete example of the conservation principle practically applied. Whenever we find a community assuming direct control of municipal lands and leasing same to users on an annual rental basis, here, too, we have evidence of what the conservation of public values means. Whenever we find—as shown by legislation enacted by the State of New York, and more recently the legislation passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature, which permits the municipality to expropriate lands adjacent to lands required for public purposes and which would increase in value thereby—thus permitting the community to profit by the increment as individuals are profited—here also is evidence of the conservation principle at work.

Whenever we find—as shown by the recent law passed in Germany and other European States, wherein the state becomes a partner in the increment of land in whose case New Zealand, the Australasian Colonies, German China, Great Britain and other countries of the world, The Federal Governments have instituted laws on land values, and where municipalities, as for instance in numerous places in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, etc., and values are the chief source for municipal revenue—We note unquestioned evidence of the conservation principle at work.

Even in the regulations governing our fish and game preserves. We can observe an approach to the principle involved in this discussion. To many it will prove agreeable to learn that when the Ontario Government—then under the leadership of the Hon. Oliver Mowat—in the year 1897 passed an act preventing further alienation of the water-power privileges and instituting better regulations devised for the common good. Therein was recognized the principle of conservation in its truest meaning. The enactment of 1897, however, has since been supplemented by further enactments tending to strengthen the principle involved.

Recognition of Principle. And when the present government of Ontario enacted legislation in connection with the Tamskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, reserving power to the railway commission in order to determine the location and disposal of town sites, their sale or lease thereof, we find also a recognition of the conservation principle.

The Mining Law. In a measure too, we find the principle recognized in our own mining laws, which, for your information, I may mention, imposes a tax of three per cent, on all gross returns on mineral production values over and above the first ten thousand dollars produced. Then a further supplementary act which prevents the licenses of any mining claim securing any valuable water power lying within the limits of a mining claim without first obtaining permission from the Ontario power privilege and paying an annual rental therefor. And in another act also we find, as indeed in most governments relating to mineral, agricultural and other valuable lands, a recognition expressed and implied of the sovereign rights of the people to a claim upon the mineral wealth discovered in and under the land.

In many parts of Germany, indeed the number exceeds one hundred, the state has been found ample to meet all expenses of local government. Nor can we overlook the beneficent legislation of the United States, relating to the uses of Niagara's wonderful power whereby the people through the Hydro-Electric Commission exacts from the mineral wealth discovered in the proceeds obtained by the production of electric energy from this natural resource.

And, too, the beneficent legislation whereby the government for the people enable us to share in the advantage of cheap electric power and light—through the Hydro-Electric Commission from that great natural resource—the property of the people. In the instances I have just given you can see the conservation principle working as it is for the comfort and benefit generally of the public, and the friendly interest of public spirit, and the aid of the Government of Ontario, by the formation of the Hydro-Electric Commission, we should have seen what a few men—banded together as a corporation could do—to exploit the people of this province by exorbitant charges for light and power, and the consequent, and inevitable outcome of the making of a few millionaires or multi-millionaires. Fortunately for us the scheme—certainly it was a scheme—was nipped in the bud.

That there is yet a great work to perform all along the line, and to which I have alluded, the importance of this great movement has, however, gained the attention of government—not quite to the full extent which I am contending for, but at least working toward the goal. This we see, as you are aware, in the formation of the department for conservation of natural resources of the United States, the aim of which body is to prevent further alienation and exploitation of the nation's forests, its mines, oil and coal lands, etc., etc.

And, too, the formation of a similar department by the Dominion Government. Having referred specifically to different forms of public values, it should be made perfectly clear that in the science of economics these public values, all of which should be considered are nothing more or less than site, or land values. If we are agreed that the various public values referred to specifically should be conserved then there is only one course to pursue governmentally, and that is to tax these values to the fullest extent.

Not Always Bad.

A certain well-known composer, now in the full vigor of his established reputation, was at one time, when he was comparatively unknown, engaged in writing the music for a production favored by two managers who knew exactly what they were doing in addition to knowing next to nothing of the musical classics. After having burned much midnight oil and worn out his eyes, he produced a finale which would please any one, and the theatre in an entire section of "Paris" to which he had somehow managed to get in. The work was a success, and the composer was a millionaire. The managers were pretty bad, but this is the rottenness of them all. "So" remarked the secretary of the Society "it was considered good when Gounod wrote it!"

"The Temple of the City God, right under our windows, a stone's throw from our verandah, raises its rugged walls and picturesque curved roofs with as stately a face to the world as it has shown for all these long centuries past; and the old City God himself sits stolidly on his throne, and smiles calmly and benignly down, untouched, the his people, hundreds of them, are starving and dying before his face, and his temple has become, indeed, the 'City of Dreadful Night.'"

SENTENCE DAY. By DR. QUILL. The fan of judgment in the general sessions again has purged the city of some of its chaff and noxious seeds. It has heaps of human material for the day's unpropitious task. The work is done with almost mechanical precision and the separation proceeds not by chance, but with almost certain results.

But they are not sheaves of straw, but the fellow-citizens and neighbors of ourselves. There is a distinct foreign cast upon it, showing that as Canada has opened its gates to the world, she has also broadened her sympathies and grave responsibilities. The special brand of nationality on this occasion happened to be the offspring of the illustrious Greek. But philosophy has given place to sectarianism, and they have carried their religious feuds into this inspiring air. The judge heard explanations and appeals, and the half score fierce and bronzed zealots who were capable of inspiring sympathy, yet he felt that they were to be made examples in punishment for the good of their people.

The two counts against our British and Canadian unfortunate seem to be petty stealing and wickedness. Hence the change from the religious side of the Bulgarian Greeks to the monotonous narrative of light-fingered work in stores, fitting sockets, running off valuables, and free lights, was not eulogistic of our native blood.

The judge seemed to believe firmly that short terms of quiet meditation and enforced labor would have a wholesome effect of teaching how much better it is to work for an honest dollar and prize their goods.

The poor daughters of Eve are still yielding to temptation. Unfortunately all have not precocious records as good as their mothers. They seem to like the fashionable vogue of dress, yet both steal and do other naughty things. In these cases all knighthood has passed away. No one delivers them, and also some sweep others take their medicine with a sneer.

The chief feature of the day was the number of suspended sentences. This does not imply miscarriage of justice. To have a trial at all is punishment severe. From the first sight of handcuffs to the last appearance before the judicial bench of Judge Denton is apt to produce a genuine cure. They make good promises, their loyal counselors look them in the eye and speak emphatically of what will happen if it occurs again.

FURNISHING A ROOM. Perhaps nothing shows more clearly the good taste of a housewife than the manner in which she arranges the furniture in her reception room. An observing visitor may tell at a glance whether her contrivance is really one or the other of these categories: it is, indeed, seldom that they are entertained in equal measure. In arranging furniture the space available has to be reckoned, and making it look harmonious, wise, the couple whose supply of furniture is not ample may find it hard to piece out the gaps of incompleteness.

MORE SMALLPOX AT OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 8.—Five new cases were added to the smallpox epidemic to-day, bringing the total now isolated on Porter's Island up to 34. A fact which makes the epidemic more serious is that the disease is of such a mild type that patients have been known to walk about with it for several days before being detected and quarantined.

The properties are as follows: 200 ac., on a ninety-nine year lease, paid in full. 28 ac., on which are located the mill, etc. 8 ac., on which are the boarding-house, etc. Plant consisting of three-story mill, engine house, boarding house, offices, elevators, crushers, conveyors, pulverizers, screens, etc., to a value of about $55,000.

Also a Feldspar Quarry is being acquired by the Company, complete with necessary machinery, conveyors, elevator, mill and other necessary buildings, to a value of about $300,000. This quarry is near Tyondogora, N.Y. The total value of the mineral rights of the properties, with their present equipments, is over $1,200,000.

SECURITY FOR BONDHOLDERS

The mineral rights and plant and goodwill of a talc quarrying industry, located in Vermont, near the town of Moretown. The properties are as follows: 200 ac., on a ninety-nine year lease, paid in full. 28 ac., on which are located the mill, etc. 8 ac., on which are the boarding-house, etc. Plant consisting of three-story mill, engine house, boarding house, offices, elevators, crushers, conveyors, pulverizers, screens, etc., to a value of about $55,000.

PRODUCTION

The Talc mill has been producing its full capacity of ten tons per day. The cost of marketing the Talc has been $2.89 per ton while the average price received for it has been over $13 per ton. This will give a clear profit of at least $7 per ton, making every allowance for accident or depreciation in plant and machinery. It has been decided that by means of the bond issue the plant will be enlarged to permit the milling of 50 tons per day, and this will, within the year, be increased to 100 tons per day. The average cost per ton will be reduced by the increased output.

ESTIMATED YEARLY PROFIT

Table with 3 columns: Based on past results the business should show returns as follows: NET RECEIPTS, Tons, (Say) 75 tons Talc per day for 300 days... 22,500; 150 tons Feldspar per day for 300... 45,000; 22,500 tons Talc at profit of $7 per ton... $157,500; 45,000 tons Feldspar at profit of $2 per ton... 90,000. Total profit for year... $247,500

TORONTO SECURITIES COMPANY, Fiscal Agents

EXPENDITURES. Interest on $200,000 at 6 per cent. $12,000 Annual retirement fund... 20,000 Cost of management and sales (say)... 25,000 Net annual profit... $190,500

This net profit may be used to help retire the bonds or part may be available as dividends on stock. The stock of the Company should yield dividends at the rate of about 20 per cent. per annum, and should be worth considerably over par within a year. The Talc Quarries have been examined by Dr. Barlow of Montreal, who says: 'The supply of raw material is practically inexhaustible.'

'The quality is not excelled in any of the producing quarries of America. The demand for Talc is constantly increasing, and the production in America is not equal to the demand.' Professor McEvoy of Toronto also reports very favorably as to the quality, quantity, value and commercial possibilities of the proposition.

FELDSPAR

The Feldspar Quarries are situated at Tyondogora, N.Y. A competent engineer estimates that at least one million tons are in sight without going into the interior formation. The Spar is separated, part being sold for poultry grit, for which a ready market has been created. The balance is sold for use as roofing material, while thousands of tons are used annually in the production of glass, brick and tile, and in the enameling of china and grantevares.

The proposition is a legitimate one, based on actual experience, the security is greater than is afforded by an ordinary first mortgage. In 700 subscriptions, accompanied by cheque, make cheque payable to THE INTERNATIONAL QUARRIES COMPANY.

GERMAN WOMEN'S EXPOSITION.

The women of Berlin and of Germany in general are deeply interested in the first exposition of women's achievements, which is to be held in the exhibition hall of the Zoological Gardens of the city named, under the auspices of the Lyceum Club, a year from next fall. The Lyceum Club is a women's organization, whose president is Frau Hazel, author of a famous cook book and active in numerous movements for the advancement of her sex. Associated with her in the promotion of the exposition are many distinguished German women, among them Frau Wille, a noted interior decorator, and Fraulein Salomon, founder of the only school of philanthropy in the empire. The exposition will include original and models displaying the accomplishments of women in the fine arts and all the industries.

including those who follow the professions as well as those who pursue the humblest trades. For the most part, this is a self-supporting as it is a self-respecting army, its contribution to the industrial progress and wealth of Germany, so marked in recent years, cannot well be overestimated. Naturally, the exposition will undertake to show the advancement whereby the laboring women in other industrial callings has been ameliorated and improved. In this and in other respects where interests are concerned to merge or to ramify the exhibits may develop and broaden until they take on far greater proportions and far greater importance than are anticipated by the most enthusiastic promoters of the enterprise.

New Apparatus to Restore Life. A wonderful contrivance, which provides a method of preventing death of the hundreds of persons annually overcome by inhaling gas, by drowning or by electric shock, has been brought to this country from Germany by officials of the United States Bureau of Mines and made a part of the equipment of all of the government's mine rescue cars. Where there is a spark of life left in the body this machine, which is known as a pulmotor, or lung motor, will restore the asphyxiated or drowned victim by causing the natural movements of inhalation and exhalation, at the same time giving a carefully measured supply of oxygen to the lungs. This new lung motor is entirely different from any other contrivance ever used in this country to resuscitate persons, and it is expected to play an important part in the government's work in the prevention of mine accidents.

IMPERIAL MINE WORKS
NIGHT SHIFTS

Shaft to Go Down to 100 Foot Level Immediately—Plant Installed.

Porcupine, April 8.—After many weeks delay the hoisting plant of the Imperial Mining Co. has arrived on the ground and is now installed so that sinking has once more begun in the double compartment shaft with machine drills.

The shaft was sunk to a depth of 50 feet by hand in February, when work had to cease, due to the fact that it was not economical mining to continue longer by hand-sinking and windfalls.

A 60 horse-power boiler, together with hoisting plant suitable for sinking to a depth of 350 feet, and two machine drills, were then ordered, which arrived about the middle of March.

Night and day shifts are now busy dropping the shaft to the 100-foot level at the rate of 1-2 feet per day, so that by the first of May 100 feet of depth will be reached, where a working station will be cut and the big ledge which was covered on the surface and which showed such spectacular ore, will be cross-cut and the main ore shoots drifted upon.

It is expected by H. Crampson, general manager of the property, that by the first of June if the underground developments come up to the expectations of many leading mining experts, he will be able to begin blocking out ore reserves in such quantity that by mid-summer the company will be able to figure on the reduction plan.

Mr. H. L. Taylor, president of the Imperial, was called to Nevada this week, where he has large extensive interests, having been one of the original stakers of the famous Red Top and Jumbo Mines, and while there he will inspect the recent improvements in the Goldfield Consolidated 850-ton daily capacity mill, in order to get the latest improved methods of the reduction of ore, as this mill is now extracting 94 per cent. of the gross value of its ores.

As the milling feature of the big properties in Porcupine will be an important factor to consider, the owners of the principal mining properties are now studying reduction plants with an idea of placing the most improved mills on their respective properties, and as soon as the Dome and Hollinger mills start operations, they will be a model for other properties who will need plants by next fall.

The camp of Porcupine is keenly watching the developments of the Imperial, as the work of this mine will prove up the value of several other adjacent properties, all of which have good surface showings, and the making of the Imperial commercial mine will greatly strengthen not only the immediate section, but the whole Porcupine camp.

ANOTHER BIG POWER PLANT FOR PORCUPINE

Scottish Ontario Co. Will Develop Hydro Power at Sturgeon Falls on Mattagami.

Porcupine City, April 8.—(From Our Man Up North.)—Another high-class industrial institution for Northern Ontario is assured in the announcement that the Scottish-Ontario syndicate's backers, thru Alex. Miller of the Miller Transportation Company, have secured from the government the contract of, and right to operate, a power dam at Sturgeon Falls on the Mattagami River, 30 miles to the north of Sandy Falls, where hydro-electric power is now being developed for the Porcupine camp.

J. B. Hillard of Glasgow, head of the Scottish-Ontario syndicate, is one of the old country prime movers in the enterprise, while Alex. Miller, Jas. Stewart, his secretary, George Willock and Engineer Peter McLaren of the Scottish-Ontario are interested in this end.

And with the securing of these rights to operate a power dam, only the first development for Northern Ontario is made known, many are the commercial enterprises that may grow out of the venture.

A pulpwood limit has been taken up and following the building of the dam, which will start June 1, a saw mill will be erected to cut the necessary timber to be used in the erection of the dam and also for camps and other purposes.

In a meeting in the necessary material to start the work of building the plant is the first real hard task, and it is not probable that more than 200,000 ft. of lumber will be available without transporting in machinery will be undertaken this summer.

Sturgeon Falls lies on the Mattagami River, in the Township of Mahaffey, 36 miles to the south of the Transcontinental Railway. In the summer the falls are reached two ways, by the falls and down the Mattagami River to the north some 30 miles, or from Cochrane west on the Transcontinental to the Mattagami River, and thence up the river 36 miles to the falls. The river course would be more than 35 miles.

With another power plant on the Mattagami River between Porcupine and the Transcontinental Railway, it would seem the magic that becomes a potent factor in the progress of every new country to be supplied.

The Scottish-Ontario syndicate are willing to become colonizers and developers of the timber assets, as well as to mine the Ontario gold. Nothing should be left as a barrier to the successful carrying out of their plans. Chas. Fox.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

Montreal reports to Bradstreet's say the past week has seen little change in trade conditions there. The weather has been rather more favorable to spring business but this condition has not yet existed long enough to start the movement of general trade to the extent that is looked for. The spring trade in drygoods is still in the hands of a few speculators from different parts of the country state that spring business is now beginning to open out well and that prospects for the rest of the season are satisfactory. Given good weather, the Easter trade should be heavy, more particularly as buying has suffered during the past few weeks. Business in groceries has shown some inclination to pick up. Prices in most lines continue to hold a firm tone. Hardware continues to move very satisfactorily. The demand for iron is active and supplies are just now light. Early orders from England will bring good shipments in quick succession. The demand for iron is active and supplies are just now light. More great fortunes have been made in oil in proportion to the amount expended in development, than any other field the small investor can enter.

These fortunes have come like a bolt out of the sky in the majority of instances. Gushers have sent farm acres up to fabulous prices. Much waste has entered into the development of every famous oil field of the past; millions of barrels of oil have been lost through inability to control these gushers.

Where modern science and machinery have been used, oil men have amassed the most remarkable fortunes of the past decade. The value of oil produced in California during 1916 was $40,000,000. The value of all gold produced in California during 1916 was $22,000,000. Oil is king.

The holdings of the Buick Oil Company are located in the famous Midway District of Kern County, California. Within 50 feet of our forty-acre tract, located in Section 6-11-23 is the world-famous Essex Gusher, with a present output of 5,000 barrels per day. The owners of the Essex were made rich overnight.

The 640 acres which comprise our total holdings in Kern County are valued at, and could be sold for, $2,000 an acre; we are in the very heart of the Midway District, a section which has become famous over the United States as the land which has made and is making millionaires.

When the small investor is offered assured security for his money, plus the chance of a lifetime for great dividends, he wonders why the owners of the property do not develop it themselves. D. D. Buick, inventor of the Buick automobile, practical business man, President of the Buick Oil Company, wants as his business associates the conservative investors who are willing to back his report, sworn to before a Notary Public, states that the naturally producing well on the property, and its holdings are estimated at $18,000,000 value.

$1,000 invested in Lucile stock a few years ago is returning over $1,200.00 per day; consider the figures are left to your own imagination. When examining this company's chance to make you independent for life, forever, this is the biggest chance you will ever have for large returns on small investment. We know this; D. D. Buick backs the statement with his No. 1 well and his past reputation in the business world for giving everyone the square deal.

Investigate our Company; find out what it has done and will do. Look up the records of the men behind its active affairs. They are aggressive, cool-headed hustlers, every one of them. They are men over do things just a little better than the other fellow.

The Buick Oil Company is going to develop its holdings in a scientific, methodical, economical manner. The Buick Oil Company is going to eliminate waste in its development work as far as modern methods can. The Midway district has seen fortunes made which could have been much larger if science and conservatism of administration had entered exclusively into the oil business.

FORTUNES MADE IN OIL

DAVID D. BUICK OF AUTOMOBILE FAME WINS AGAIN--THIS TIME IT'S AN OIL WELL IN THE FAMOUS MIDWAY FIELD OF CALIFORNIA

BUICK WELL NO. 1--Flowing Thousands of Barrels Daily and Earning Thousands of Dollars Weekly.

We have taken lessons from the Standard Oil and Southern Pacific wells around us. The big interests do not commit the sins of omission; neither will we. Not a chance will be overlooked to improve your investment.

Do you know what the demand for oil is? The United States navy, the railroads and the large refineries could use ten times the present supply of crude oil. The Standard Oil Company, largest holder of oil wells in the world, purchased 138,401,305 barrels of crude oil from other producers in the year 1916.

The largest concrete oil reservoir in the world is now practically completed at Tank Farm near San Luis Obispo, California. It will have a capacity of 1,000,000 barrels. It is being built by the great pipeline companies for the storage of oil brought from the Kern county field.

Where the great pipeline companies are willing to invest millions you can certainly afford to invest a few hundred dollars. You can't afford to be left out of the "big money." The pipeline companies realize that our holdings are in the greatest oil field the world has ever known.

Your chance for big dividends is doubly safeguarded. The Buick Oil Company is not only conducted by men with whom you will be proud to associate, but these men have made it a going concern. Business methods have again proven triumphant; this stock was not offered for sale until the company was making good.

That's why this offer is different from any oil stock you have ever had your attention called to. Buick Oil is the most excellent purchase on the market to-day. You know the man who could have bought land fifty years ago which is now occupied by department stores; land which was then but a weed-infested lot. He "just missed opportunity." It knocked upon his door and he did not answer.

The Buick Oil Company offers a limited amount of treasury stock to conservative investors at 75 cents per share. Active work now going on in Kern County will send this stock to $1.00 within very short while. Do not be the man who "might have made" the man who "will make."

For the benefit of those who cannot pay all cash, and on account of the numerous requests that we resume the installment plan, shares may be purchased for a limited time on the following basis:

ABOUT "LUCKY" SCOTT

One of the Men Who Have Made Money Out of the Great Gold Camp.

Then there is Lucky Scott, a picturesque figure you must not overlook when you speak of Porcupine. And by the same token, he must not be overlooked when you speak of the West Dome, there adding to Lucky's wallet to the extent of $75,000.

Perhaps one of the chief elements in the make-up of Lucky Scott is the fact that he is an old Owen Sound boy. You must keep an Owen Sound boy down. As for instance, Dick McWilliams, who fairly eats up Portland cement, and Jack Crate, who can put more type in a news item than anyone else in fact Canada.

But Lucky has other elements in his make-up. Without saying anything about those diamonds, it is nevertheless a fact that they show up well. They indicate that there is gold in Porcupine, for it takes real money to buy such sparklers.

Besides all this, Lucky is "some gun-fighter" as Horace Hunt, Room 618 King Edward and Boston says--but that is another story.

Lucky Scott has made good in Porcupine and before the camp is much older, will be in the near-millionaire class. Three cheers for Owen Sound.

SEVRES BLUE. The famous blue color given to the porcelain manufactures of Sevres has long been believed to be the result of a secret process, and many legends exist about it. It has, however, been recently shown that it is a mistake to suppose that Sevres blue cannot be produced elsewhere. As a matter of fact, it is produced in many French potteries, where sufficient care is taken, and where pure oxide of cobalt is used. Formerly it was difficult to procure this article without impurities, which injured the color, but chemical discovery has overcome all the difficulties. The same is true of the Chinese green known as celadon. It was invented in China, but it can be perfectly reproduced elsewhere.--Harper's Weekly.

CHARITY DOG SHOW

Officers of the Boston Terrier Club of these dogs in Toronto an invitation to co-operate with them in the holding of a "Charity Dog Show" in Montreal.

The show is to be held at the Children's Memorial Hospital, and G. B. Coghlin, president of the club in Montreal, is desirous that Toronto terrier owners will send on their dogs to compete against the Montreal canines. There are some good terriers in Montreal. Mr. Coghlin will exhibit several of his prize-winner Queenie Valeska, and a host of other good entries have been made. The Montreal people are aware that there is a number of fine terriers in Toronto, and their desire is to have them shown at the exhibition. There will be a number of prizes of good proportions offered for the best dogs in the various classes. Entries close May 10, and premium lists may be obtained from Mr. Coghlin, F. R. Phelan, 437 St. Catherine-street, Montreal. Among the patrons of the show are: Mr. C. G. Grey, Sir Hugh Graham, His Honor Mayor Guerin, George R. Smithers.

FIGUREHEADS ON OLD BRITISH SHIPS

Five figureheads affixed to stumps in a ship are all that now remain of an equal number of the "wooden sailing ships" which formed the backbone of the English navy in the last generation. Reading from left to right, the figureheads are: Collingwood, Burgh, Leander and Duke of Wellington.

These ships were the successors of the fleets of Nelson's day, and Collingwood commemorates the distinguished admiral of that name, second in command at Trafalgar, where he led the lee line into action and was the first to engage the enemy.

Formidable, an 8-gun ship, built in 1823, was the first of a series of famous names, having been the third successor of the French flagship captured by Hawke at Quiberon Bay in 1759, and added to the navy under her original name.

French naval architects of the eighteenth century had a great reputation, and the British generally paid them the compliment of acquiring specimens of their skill whenever circumstances rendered it possible.

Edinburgh, the fourth of that name, originally a 74-gun ship, took part in the bombardment of St. Jean d'Ac in 1823. Subsequently, having been converted into a 40-gun screw steamer, she saw service during the Russian war, when she was captured by the Russian navy.

Leander, a 60-gun ship, was also employed in the Russian war, and was the last of a series of ships of which the following is an extract, throws a curious light on the state of things which prevailed before the days of continuous service.

It commences: "Why would I enter for small sailing ships, the leader, the fleetest and fastest sailing frigate in the world, with a good spread of canvas, a deck you dry, warm and comfortable, and a lower deck like a barn, where you may play at billiards under the hamper and hang up, has room for 100 active seamen."

The writer often admired the Duke of Wellington, one of the last and about the finest of the wooden navy, as the bay of years in Portsmouth harbor at the feet of the port admiral. A steam three-decker, built in 1820, she was built as the Windsor Castle, but renamed after the Duke of Wellington, having been launched on Sept. 14, 1820. She carried the flag of the vice-admiral, Sir C. Napier, during the Russian war.

ON WALL STREET

The stock market is in a position where comment is not called for. It continues this way for some days or the situation may change over night. Banking interests are holding off, content to see prices fluctuate within a narrow range. They do not want to see them go up, they apparently support them from below. The outside public is not in the market. What is thought it safe to sell, they are not ready to buy back if we get an unexpected break. Taking a long look ahead the future is not very bright. The tariff controversy may be strung out all summer. If it is we see no alternative but receding business with smaller profits and reduced earnings, attended with reduced dividends.--Hudson's weekly letter to J. G. Beatty.

While there are some exceptions, most railroads are showing up poorly in their gross earnings, and the net results are less satisfactory from the standpoint of the shareholders. As President McCrea, of the Panhandle, states, the business outlook is not having its full effect upon the receipts of the roads. Too much stress cannot be laid upon the case of money, for with funds accumulating in the large centres, there is inevitably a tendency to invest in the securities which afford a comparatively attractive rate of interest. This may be plain in part the much commented upon scarcity of stocks in Wall Street.

The better class stocks are professional market, in which only nimble trader will be able to scalp quick profits, but for the long pull we feel that the better class stocks are an attractive purchase. Taken as a whole, the situation certainly warrants conservative bullishness.--Charles Head & Co. to E. R. Bongard.

Legitimate Advances Assured. Heron & Co. say in a market letter: The Porcupine gold boom has received a very decided but entirely healthy check. New flotations, many of them capitalised out of all proportion to merit, have been brought forward by the score without regard to the limitation of the market's absorptive power. A condition of congestion has resulted that will require some time to rectify. The wonderful possibilities of the Porcupine district have not, however, been lessened in the least. Public interest has been thoroughly aroused, and out of the present uncertainty as to price movements a legitimate market has been actual developments in the camp will ensue.

C. P. R. Appointments. W. M. Kirkpatrick is transferred to Montreal as general freight agent and will be succeeded in Toronto by Robert Brown, J. H. Griffin coming to Toronto to succeed Mr. Brown. W. J. Grant has been appointed district freight agent at Hamilton.

Looking Ahead. Popular "If you don't meet me to print it!" Margarine Editor--It isn't that, my dear friend. It is simply that you make a mistake, and it looks so well to announce something "posthumous."--Puck.

WILL BE NO RATE WAR SAY SHIPPING MEN

Entry of Cunard Line into Canadian Route Regarded As a Benefit to All Concerned.

MONTREAL, April 8.—Opinion gathered this afternoon from the various shipping firms in Montreal who do passenger traffic indicates that as far as local knowledge is concerned there will be no question of a rate war being raised in the North Atlantic trade by reason of the advent thereto of the Cunard Line. The conference rates to which the Cunard Company subscribe are fixed, and it would be a great upheaval, indeed, according to the passenger agents of the several lines which operate to Montreal, which would break the contracts in this respect which the lines subscribing thereto have made. As a matter of fact, the entry of the Cunard Line into the Canadian business is heralded as one of the best signs that could be given that this business is yearly becoming more important, for a firm with such a standing as the Cunards would not take the trouble to enter the field unless they could see more in the near future. Possibilities for the St. Lawrence route were alluring. It is held that the Cunards mean that there will be by so much the more advertising of the St. Lawrence route, and this is in the long run bound to do every one of them more good than harm.

SHIPS THAT ARE KICKERS.

When sailors join a ship almost the first question asked by each one as he takes the wheel for the first time is, "Does she kick?" Kicking, as it is called by seamen, is due to the action of the water under the lee of the rudder when the vessel's stern, which has for the moment been borne skyward on the crest of a wave, falls back again into the trough with such terrific force as to make her tremble fore-and aft and perhaps wrench the wheel from the grasp of the steersman. Sometimes it happens that he is taken unawares, and, being unable to let go in time, is flung right over the wheel to the other side of the deck, often receiving serious injuries, says The Star. Sometimes a man will be pitched right overboard into the sea, and a recent case is known of a man who received a blow under the chin from one of the spokes and died a few days later from the effects.

In some of the worst types of kickers kicking straps are used regularly in, apart from all weather, and many sailors refuse to go to sea in ships which are known to be confined kickers.—New York Herald.

OUR ENVOYS WERE EASY WANTED TO GIVE MORE

But President Taft Thought Half a Loaf Better Than No Bread.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—With the opening of the special session of congress to consider the Canadian reciprocity agreement, the question arises, "What is to be the joke of the session?" There is in this question a cruel reference to the two Canadian ministers who were in Washington during the latter part of the last session, negotiating the agreement which congress is now asked to ratify. The coming date is likely to reveal the sad truth that the Canadian ministers of finance and customs did not impress the United States negotiators as being specially equipped either with sagacity or with the technical knowledge necessary for a full understanding of what they were agreeing to. Hence the popular sobriquets of "Babes in the Woods" and "Injured Innocents," which were commonly applied to the Canadian representatives.

It has become a matter of common discussion that instead of offering the Canadians a wider agreement than they would accept, President Taft was in reality kept busy refusing the Fielding offers. President Taft is said to have replied these offers with some such statement as this: "My dear sirs, what is the use of making an agreement that you can't possibly carry thru

REFINING KING JAMES' ENGLISH.

The making of many translations of the Bible into English that appeals to one and another literary man as being more modern and up to date, and hence more directly appealing to the man in the street, is not a vanguard of this time alone. The Westminster version cites the following passages from a translation made by Edward Howard, a divine of the eighteenth century. He found that the authorized version was not refined enough—were not the eighteenth century folk by way of being prodigious?—and publishes his own idea of what was "free, spirited and elegant" in the English of his day. From Luke xii, 13, The Gazette cites: "I will then say to my soul—Happy soul! Distinguished is thy felicity! Come indulge thy soft envied repose—feast on the most delicious viands... and traverse a circle of every amusement and joy." In this translation "the damsel" becomes "the young lady," and men "pay the common debt of nature." And the beginning of the parable of the prodigal son is turned into this inflated language: "A gentleman of a splendid family and opulent fortune had two sons. One day the younger approached his father and begged him in the most impudent and soothing terms to make a partition of his effects between himself and his elder brother. The indulgent father, overcome by his blandishments, immediately divided all his fortune betwixt them."

WOOLNOUGH Tailored-to-Order Corsets $3.50, $6, $10 and $15

True, it makes it more impossible than ever to be suited from the ready-to-wear brands, and that is why you should this season, if never before, have a pair of corsets tailored to your individual measurements. It means, aside from their style, more ease of movement, better support, and perfect satisfaction.

Lower bust and longer hips are the features of the new styles—the narrow hip lines are essential to have this season's suit or dress styles properly carried out. We invite your inspection of our spring models.

HOW OTHERS HAVE BUILT

Edited by
FRANKLIN E. BELFRY

The general grouping of exterior features is especially well handled in the design of this house and a strong factor in its real beauty is the neatness and slickness in its minor detail. The house is built of red brick and we may say decorated or trimmed with a cream-colored woodwork, green shingles and a touch of stucco with dark brown half timbered straps.

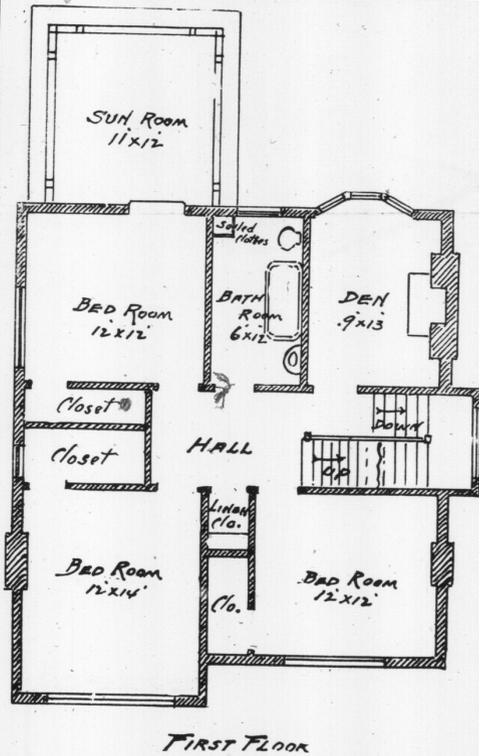

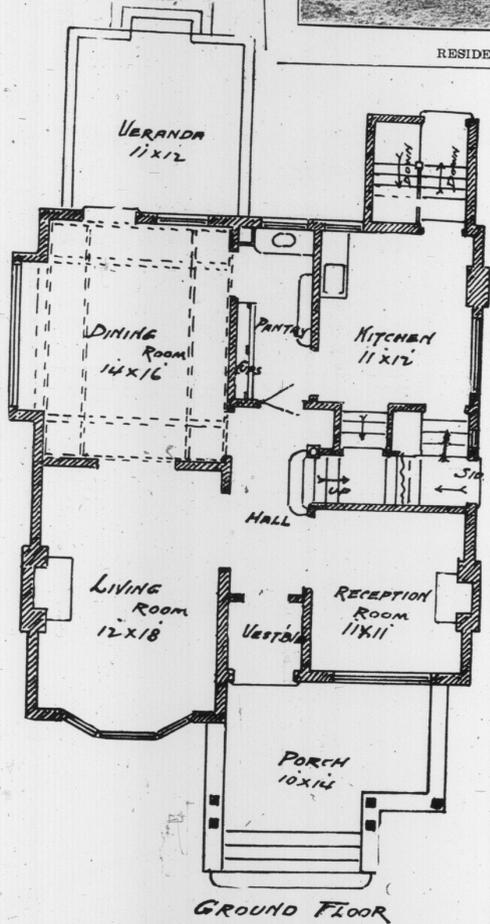

The broad steps and veranda floor of concrete and the simple lines to the veranda posts and beams is beauty in its plainness. The low, broad living-room, oriel bay of plate glass, is attractive, and the gable above, with heavy barge board and cut brackets, becomes a crowning feature. The rectangular shaped clear glass, leaded, is in good taste with the prevailing simplicity and helps to characterize the entire scheme as modern. The doorway carries the same feeling with glass divided into small square lights and wrought iron hardware of cathedral pattern.

On the plan many good points in the arrangement are noticeable. The hall, with the ever popular wide opening overlooking the principal rooms and the broad staircase, retreating to one side, becomes the center of a very convenient layout. The combination of the main stairs, rear stairs, basement stairs and side entrance takes up the least possible space. Access from kitchen to front door is direct but thru a double doorway as is the case from kitchen to dining-room. The dining-room is brightened with a ten foot bay window overlooking the buffet and in being opened up with wide doorway into the living-room there is an appreciable total length. The bed-rooms show good size and have extra large clothes closets. In the attic are four more bedrooms and a bathroom, and with the addition of billiard-room in basement the whole scheme is a handsome example of our modern house building. Chas. F. Wagner was the architect.

Are Your Walls In Style

Kalsomine and wall paper are hardly up-to-date. Tinted walls are now the vogue. And by far the most popular are those tinted with Alabastine, the sale of which has doubled during the last two years. Alabastine tints possess that soft, velvety, restful effect considered so desirable by fashion authorities. With the 21 tints and white, any desired color combination can be produced quite easily. Mix Alabastine with cold water and apply with a flat bristle brush. Anyone can do it. Alabastine is an Alabaster rock cement. Its colors are permanent. It won't rub off. You can redecorate any time without scraping or washing off the previous coat. The most sanitary, durable, economical and stylish wall decoration.

"TROUBLE MAKERS"

SEE WHO'S COMING! — THAT QUIET LITTLE FELLOW GEORGE SIDNEY IN HIS BIG NEW MUSICAL FARCE "THE JOY RIDER"

SATIRE ON THE SUFFRAGET

Never since "Hap" Ward and Harry Vokes entered into a theatrical fun-making conspiracy years ago have these unctious comedians been provided with a better vehicle for the display of their ability than the "Trouble Makers," the merry satire on the suffraget. These two funny men will appear in the role of a pair of non-descript who drop into the piece at the psychological moment. A young man who is in love with a girl interested in the equal rights movement, is anxious to get her out of it, and to cure her and the other women of the town as well, he conceives the idea of having Ward & Vokes impersonate suffraget lecturers who have wired their inability to visit the town. Then follow intensely ludicrous complications which continue until the young man's end is achieved just before the curtain drops. Ward & Vokes will appear at their best which is saying much. They have many new funnyisms, and a song entitled "The Son of a Suffraget," which is rich. Among the other musical numbers are "You're the Girl I'm Dreaming Of," "Combination of My Heart," "Does Anybody Want a Little Girl?" and "Where the Bright Light Shines." They have a cast of fifty people including Lucy Daly, who in the part of babbling Bess Snodgrass, will have as her feature songs "Phase of Life," "Oh, Look Who's Here" and "Babbling Bess"; Louise Shepard, who resigns the office of president of a woman's suffraget club in order to be married; Adella Barker and Susie Kerwin, two suffraget agitators; Richard Barry, John Brinsley, May Kilcoyne, Robert Daly, Tim Currins, Claude Martin and a pony ballet of twelve charming young misses. During the week at the Grand a special matinee will be given on Good Friday.

A MAN WHO HAS DELVED DEEP INTO NATURE'S SECRETS

Professor A.B. MACALLUM of TORONTO UNIVERSITY

Solves some of the tangled physiological problems of human life and health and well being.

THIS is a tribute to the hermit. To the man who, for unselfish purposes, goes apart from his fellowmen. The hermit whose dwelling place is in the laboratories, the workshops of science. Whose purpose in life is to delve deep into nature's secrets, not that human curiosity may be satisfied, but that fellowmen may be benefitted.

Of olden time men went apart into deserts and solitary places that benefit might come to their souls. They were religious recluses. To-day learned men set themselves apart that as scientific recluses they may bring healthful benefit to their fellows. They probe nature's secrets, they read many of her riddles, they apply her remedies to human ills and the whole race is benefitted by their persistent self-sacrificing efforts.

Scientific hermits discovered the principle whereby cretins, children sadly stunted in mind and body are restored from idiocy into normal human beings. To watch this restoration is to behold the performance of a miracle unexcelled. Physiological researchers discovered the basic principle of antitoxin. For years they patiently experimented with the blood serum of animals until the secret was theirs. And now the physician called to the bedside of the diphtheritic patient can inject with his antitoxin needle the antidote to the poison of diphtheria that assures victory over the dread disease. Formerly many patients operated on by surgeons died on the table from lack of life-containing blood, or died soon afterward from the drain on the system. Physiological researchers discovered a fluid whose injection fortified against just such accidents and the mortality rate was markedly reduced.

And in a thousand such ways have these scientific hermits set up safeguards about human life. They have made it their business to study the outgoings of life and to make them happier and less dangerous. And the sum of their works no man can adequately recount.

One of the giants of these scientific intellects is Professor A. B. Macallum, of Toronto University, who occupies the Chair of Bio-Chemistry. He is one of a small group of great men who have grown up with the provincial and whose names and achievements have made her renowned to the ends of the earth.

Less than a quarter of a century ago two Canadians ranked with world-scientists, Dr. William Dawson of Montreal, in the field of geology and Dr. Daniel Wilson, of Toronto, anthropologist. To-day scores of Canadians are to be found figuring prominently in every profession and perhaps a parallel is to be found to the great scientific duo above-mentioned in Professor A. B. Macallum, physiologist and Professor A. P. Coleman, geologist, both associated with the University of Toronto.

At the meeting of the British Association held at Winnipeg in 1910, both were highly honored by fellow-scientists, Professor Macallum being elected to the chair of the physiological section and Professor Coleman to that of the geological section.

A native of Westminster Township, Ontario, despite his numerous honors and labors abundant, Professor Macallum is by no means advanced in age, having seen just fifty-two years. And his age sits lightly on him, for as a hard worker he has learned to conserve life's machinery by methodical operation.

At fifteen, Professor Macallum was teaching school and after three years he matriculated at Toronto University, where he graduated in arts in 1880 with first-class honors and the medal for Natural Science. Between graduation and 1884 we find him teaching again and taking a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins. Then he began his great active career at his Alma Mater as fellow in biology, becoming later lecturer and professor in physiology.

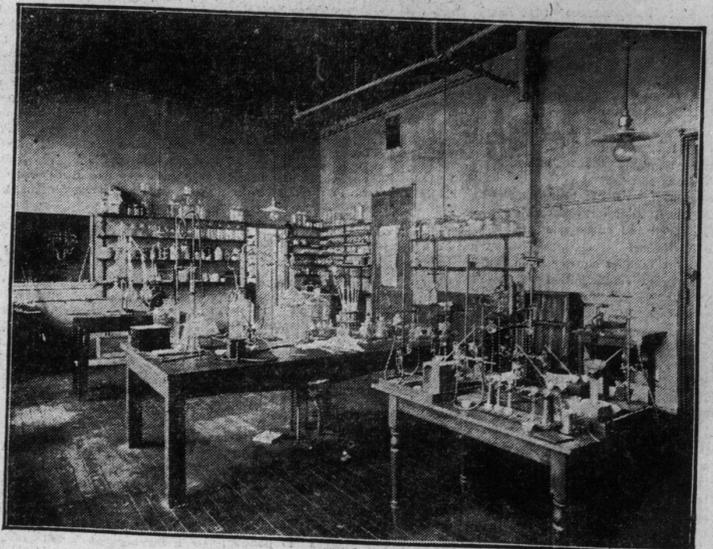

It is significant of the value set on the man by the University authorities that he had been advanced to the physiological chair by 1891, a period of seven years. It is also significant of his own capabilities as a student that in the meantime he had graduated as M.B. at Toronto and as D. Ph., at Johns Hopkins. Of late years many educational institutions have hastened to do him much honor. He was elected Fellow of the Royal Society, London, a rare recognition indeed, in 1906. And the same year Aberdeen, Scotland, made him an honorary LL.D. He was made an honorary D.Sc. of Yale in 1907 and of Trinity College, Dublin, in 1907, while last year he attained his high official position in the British Association.

Some of Professor Macallum's greatest work has been done in chemical investigation of the origin of human life. He read scientific papers before the Royal Society on this subject and his views are always received with the highest attention and respect by authorities the world over.

Professor Macallum is a classic type of the student and the philosopher. He is tall, alert and vigorous of form and his stern-set face and calm demeanor bespeaks the man who has held close communion with nature in her innermost secret places and is not likely to lightly be disturbed by the passing passions of the moment. But masked beneath all is a very human heart, and many a troubled student has received ready help, advice and words of cheer from A. B. Macallum, the scholar, and the gentleman.

CHURCH AND STATE

Since the mediæval period when the Popes struggled to win and maintain absolute supremacy not only in religious, but in secular affairs, church and state have been at variance. The Holy Roman Empire was never more than an unrealized vision of the identifications of the church universal with the state universal but that ideal still persists with the inheritors of the Papal ambitions. For centuries, however, in Protestant countries the subject of every citizen and every institution, whatever its character, to the civil law has been recognized as a cardinal principle of their government. There can be no imperium in imperio—no kingdom within a kingdom, no authority to make new laws but the state itself—no authority to withdraw any person or body from the operation of the civil law.

THE EMANCIPATED FEMALE

Would the extension of the franchise to women benefit mankind and womanhood? Would giving women equal rights and responsibilities—for one must go with the other—with men advantage the country and the world? Would the morals of the community be improved by the further emancipation of the female? Is the world better for the freedom and independence that has come to women? Has the race benefited by this greater freedom and independence? Are the men and women of the day more physically and mentally fit than their ancestors? Have love and respect for women decreased by reason of the greater freedom accorded to them compared with times past? Has the family life been improved or has it deteriorated by reason of the social and business emancipation of women? Will the race be shorter lived for the complete emancipation of women? Will race-suicide be increased by the extension of freedom to women? Will the peace and happiness of the home be disturbed by the acceding of the franchise to women? Will not love and devotion still prevail and in the aggregate surmount difficulties and obstacles in the future to the same degree as, or to a greater degree than, in the past? Have not improved reason and judgment come to women with the extension of freedom to them? Would purity and unselfishness be lessened in either sex by the extension of equal rights with men to women?

Women and Wings

The difference between law and morality is illustrated in the experience of the women of Vancouver, B.C., who, when they go to shop in Portland, Ore., have to take the Chinese pheasants' wings off their hats and carry them in their suitcases. It is illegal to wear these wings in Portland and on the boat that crosses the Columbia River the women do a bit of hasty millinery which saves them notoriety and fines in Portland.

The New Peril

Dr. Hastings, medical health officer, is doing splendid work in agitating for the abolition of the public drinking cup. A Chicago school girl, aged 10, is said to be suffering from an incurable malady, which she caught from a drinking cup. So there is a great attack on the use of the public cup in that city. Public sentiment has become aroused and the demand is strong for a law prohibiting its use.

The Monarch of the Seabirds

The tall ship bent her head to the fierce wintry blast, skimming along over the broken water like some graceful thing of life. Anon the ocean reared a menacing billow right in her path, but she plunged her way bravely thru, emerging from the smother of foam with a leap and a bound and unimpaired buoyancy that seemed to defy the warring elements to do their worst. The unsteady gusts whistled thru the rigging of her tall spars and howled along her decks and over and anon the gale blew up a cloud of snow that hid the yards overhead and the watery waste around from the men on deck. It was desolating, storm standing there unsheltered from wind and spray, desolate, lonely, dispiriting.

their restless flitting, their wide swerves before the compelling gale, contrasting oddly with the deliberate, undisturbed grace of movement of the great sea-bird overhead. A sailor, weary of the monotony of the sea, immediately the Albatross averted in its But in the meantime the restless little scavengers below the prize and he could do little more than lounge in rage, smiting at those unlucky enough to be within reach with his powerful, hooked, yellow beak. Then for a little while he rested on the crest as the tall billows rushed roaring by. A tall, foam-crested wave raised itself high from the depths and as it lifted spread his wide pinions, launched himself forward with little effort and soon had resumed his place far aloft and abreast his strange companion, the laboring, storm-tossed ship.

CRISTS & CRUMBS BY Albert Ernest Stafford

"God fulfills Himself in many ways, least one would custom corrupt the world," is a saying of a great English seer of the last century. Everybody knows the truth as applied in politics, but it is scarcely yet recognized in religion except as applied to other people's religion. We hear a great deal from our missionaries about the abominations in foreign lands, the in this respect one should take all missionary statements with a grain (or even a dose) of salt. The objections of missionaries are usually to form rather than to fact, and the much worse facts that are to be heard of in Christendom are as nothing compared with the strange possibilities of heathenness. There is a strong presumption of evil in the evidence of unfamiliar costume (or the absence of) to the narrow mind accustomed to the limited range of our more or less good and more or less corrupting customs. One can judge of the outbreaks over India and China by the tremendous rows raised in England over a deceased wife's sister, or in Canada over a "mixed marriage." "The form, the form alone is abominable," as one might pervert the quotation. It takes the theological mind to appreciate the saintliness of time, place and condition, and to understand why what is right in Germany may be wrong in Canada, and what was highly commendable some time ago has developed into a deadly sin to-day quite apart from the intrinsic evil or goodness of the act. When sets of men developed the cloaks of evil motive it is time for the good customs to be broken up and changed for they are already corrupting the world. There was a time when the priesthood of the early religions had real powers of discernment. Judgment and discrimination. They knew what was in man, and the faculty of that discerning knowledge and motive and shrewdness of purpose. As they lost their powers by abusing them they substituted other means of gaining the absolute control over a man's life which knowledge of his innermost thought and purpose and most secret act bestows. As that power is abused it will be lost by man's own revolt from the tyranny. The good priest becomes an intolerant tyrant in one less exalted in character.

But he recognizes the historicity of the doctrine. "Yes," he says, "it is historic; indeed no conception seems more profoundly rooted in the early speculative philosophies. The Chaldaeans and the ancient Egyptians held it; the Greeks included it; Pythagoras deprecated, but his doctrine of emanation of Hera the shield he had worn in a previous incarnation at the siege of Troy; Plato has been claimed as its advocate, but his doctrine of emanation suggested pre-natal life, not necessarily reincarnation. The Jews of the Kabballa held it indistinctly, and it has been traced in unexpected places. The Yoruba tribe in Central Africa, who can possess no traditions of eastern thought, address a new-born child with the words, 'So thou hast come again, I wonder who thou art?' Anamnesia is recollection of a previous life, and the fact that Plato spoke of Dr. Wilberforce implies that the pre-natal life is not the life of a previous incarnation, and objects that Plato was vague. Undoubtedly there are many who will decline to receive any such teachings, especially among the older generation with its materialistic bias. The declaration of Paul that 'flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven' and of Jesus that 'who eat of my flesh and drink of my blood' are not to be taken as a denial of the essential truth. All real faculty must come from an inner source, and when we are born we are born with a faculty which is not of this world, but which is the rebirth of the soul. If you have only a vague idea of the more all of your existence as a being apart from the garment of the flesh, you are not ready to accept the idea of laying aside that garment, and after a period of rest and restoration, putting on another. When such a faculty is inherited, as in the case of the rebirth of the soul, it is not a great danger of a too general diffusion of the knowledge, which is power. 'Is it not written,' asks Dr. Wilberforce, 'and answered him that follows: 'Well, with a little manipulation of contexts you may get a semblance of Scriptural authority, but I contend that the inferences drawn from Scripture point to pre-natal life, not to a future incarnation. In Wisdom 1: 2, we read: 'Being good, I came into a body undefiled'; in John 1: 1, 2, the Jews asked our Lord if he was the Son of God, and he answered: 'I am not; I am only a man, like you, and I have a father in heaven, who is the Father of all men.' It is hardly fair of Dr. Wilberforce to say, 'here the statement of our Lord in Matthew 23: 17-18, speaking of John the Baptist in this passage Jesus says: 'for ye will receive it, it is Elias, which was for him to come. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.' Dr. Wilberforce is not correct in this particular quotation as Matthew 23: 17, 18, Jesus returns to the point. 'But I say unto you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall the Son of Man suffer of them.' Then the Lord said to the disciples: 'spake unto them of John the Baptist. Could anything be more explicit than that?'

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 119-CHAIR AID TO BEAUTY

slowly and deeply, else half their value will be lost.
The next exercise is one which I described in my beauty talk to business girls, but which is so important that I wish to emphasize it. Sit astride a chair man fashion, your arms resting across its back. Then let the muscles slowly of a long, shrugging motion of shoulders and back. This awakens a torpid liver, and so is an aid to clearing a "muddy" skin.

"This awakens a torpid liver and clears a 'muddy' skin."

By Mme. Lina Cavaleri

Girls write me plaintive letters saying they are not beautiful, as who does not? But they have neither time nor money to follow the suggestions of the beauty expert.
Your case are far from hopeless. Time and money are valuable aids, of course, but a girl may keep herself wholly attractive with very little of either to spare. For instance, let me talk to you of what can be done with the hair of the chair in your mother's sitting room or your own small bedroom.
You are thin and poorly developed, we will say, and you look with envy upon the fine, rounded figures of the other girls in your office. You need exercise, and you have not the time for the long walks that will bring a flush to your cheeks, straighten your shoulders and expand to your chest. Well, then, call in the aid of the chair. It is only a cheap, straight backed wooden or cane-bottomed chair. All the better for it has the advantage of lightness and will not overtax your strength.

The Old Story

Fired and dusty, a party were returning by train from a holiday trip. Stinking a little man, seated himself down to read, but dropped off to sleep. On the rack was a ferocious crab in a bucket, and when Stinking went to sleep the crab woke up, and finding things dull in the bucket started exploring.
By careful navigation Mr. Crab reached the edge of the rack. Down it fell, alighting on Stinking's shoulder, and the passengers held their breath and waited for developments, but Stinking only shook his head and said:
"Let go, Sarah! I tell you I have been in the office all the evening!"—Ideas.

GREEN, ALL RIGHT.

"My grandfather—the young man spoke not without a touch of pride—my grandfather lived to a green old age. A singular green old age. Three times after his seventieth birthday he was taken in by the confidence trick."

A MATINEE IDOL.

"He's a stickler for realism."
"Yes, but he carries it to excess. In the second scene he is supposed to be severely wounded, and he has a surgeon issue bulletins between the acts."

JUST A MOMENT.

"I say, old chap—"
"Well, what's the row, old top?"
"I want to talk to you about a second."
"Heavens! Are you going to fight a duel?"

TRYING TO BREAK IN.

"Well, you are no longer poor and struggling."
"You're only half right. We are rich, but still struggling. My wife has the society class."

GIVE HIM THE BOOT.

Nellie—He just won't propose.
Nellie—Give him the mitten.
Belle—What good is a mitten for cold feet?

NOT THAT MAKE.

"You know old Jollaby? Well, he has locomotor ataxia."
"He has?" I thought all the time it was a limousine."

It will bring into action almost every muscle in your body. The easily overlooked and ignored chair will be of great assistance to you in straightening your drooping shoulders. Grasp the upper rungs on either side firmly and slowly and, while counting four, raise the chair as high as you can above your head. Draw in the air fully while doing so. Count four as you hold the chair above your head; then, slowly, while lowering it, expel the air, again counting four.
If more convenient, handle the chair in the following way: Grasp it by the sides of the back. Slowly raise it until the seat of the chair is above your head. Hold there and gradually lower, counting as described before.
I have known the exercise which I am about to describe to rid a girl of the ugliness of protruding collar bones when all other exercises had failed. At the same time she developed the muscles of her chest and straightened her shoulders.
Stand before the chair, which, like yourself, has rested since the first exercise. Take a full, deep breath and grasp it by the sides of the back, exactly in the way you would do if you were about to make an attack upon, or to resist the attack of an interloper. Then lift the chair slowly while keeping your muscles rigid, as high as the head. Count seven slowly and breathe deeply while so doing. Slowly lower the chair to the floor, expelling the air while you do so. This exercise will be more effective if you stand as far as possible from the chair, keeping the muscles quite tense.
If you have a thin, weak back the next exercise will be of great value to you in developing strength and symmetry of the back and pose for all the body. Breathe deeply until the lungs are packed with air. Seize the chair by the sides of the back and, holding the upper half of the body, still away the weight of the body as far to one side as possible, holding the chair straight before you. Then swing the body back as far as possible to the other side, twisting only the lower part of the thorax.
If the arms are thin this is a helpful exercise. Grasp the seat of the chair. Hold the head and shoulders straight and, gradually turning the chair upside down, raise the chair even with the head keeping the arms firm and rigid.
The waist muscles of most women are very weak. Corset wearing has made them so. The best exercise I know for developing these muscles which suffer more from neglect than all others in the body is this: Grasp the chair by the top of the back and, holding the arms straight out before, swing the chair back and forth, playing swing as children do in one of their old games.
All the while you are doing these exercises and the next one, which I shall describe, be sure to breathe

For the dark circles, take more rest, more and more regular sleep, more outdoor exercise and more nourishing food. If, after a few weeks, these fail of the purpose, go to a physician and be treated for anemia or whatever depleted condition has caused the lowered vitality indicated by those dark circles.
For clearing and brightening the eyes, a well-known physician has advised bathing them in a teaspoonful of water into which a half dozen drops of cologne have been dropped.

MME. CAVALIERI always endeavors to make her talks on beauty practical. To-day she succeeds even more admirably than usual, for she shows what can be done as to beauty development with what can be found in any home, "a cheap, straight-backed, wooden or cane-bottomed chair."

Cheese as a Spring Diet

D. P. WILEY, chief of the United States Pure Food Bureau, warns people against the theory that we eat too much. Eat all you can digest, he advises in England prominent physicians are giving the same advice, particularly with respect to the "spring diet" which many persons are said to limit to their own disadvantage.
Eat cheese and nuts and continue jam diet during the early Spring, they advise.
At this time of the year the body's resistance against disease is at its lowest, and cheese is one of the best body-building, germ-resisting foods.
Make a habit of eating cheese not only after lunch and after dinner, but between meals. At 11 a. m. eat

HOW I KILLED MY SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Even After Beauty Doctors, Electro-Powders, Pastes and Liquid Depilatories Failed.

(From a Correspondent.)
"Killed" seems a strong word to use, but that is just what I wanted to do to the hair that disfigured my face and arms. I wanted to kill it root and all, so that it would never live again. It spoiled my looks, made me seem old and masculine, and hence interfered with both social and business success.
I tried the ordinary dissolvents and depilatories, but found them worthless—even dangerous. From a so-called specialist I secured electrical treatment. It was painful and expensive, but I would have stood the suffering and cost had I not found that the needle (electrolysis) often leaves scars that are even worse than the disfiguring hair itself.

So I gave up hope, and in despair resigned myself to being called the "hairy lady" for the rest of my life, until a friend persuaded me to try a new and easy method learned from the Japanese. In it I found a way to actually kill the hair, and I permanently removed this superfluous growth, at the same time improving my complexion.
Having myself experienced so many previous disappointments, I have decided to forget my own sensitiveness, and for plain to others the method which cured off the exposed hair and ruin the skin. It is a discovery only recently introduced into this country, and so simple that any woman can use it in the privacy of her own room, and in only a few minutes.

Many friends have said to me, "It seems too good to be true," but the test proved it true both for myself and others as well. If you will write me for full particulars, enclosing stamp for reply, which will be sent in plain, sealed envelope, you, too, may enjoy the same happy experience, for I will tell you fully and freely about this wonderful discovery, so you can be just as successful as I was. Address Mrs. Caroline Osgood, 84 B. R. Old P.O. St., Providence, R.I.

Special endorsement—As the method above referred to has been endorsed by doctors, true specialists and many other publishers, we advise all readers thus afflicted to take advantage of Mrs. Osgood's offer and write her at once at above address.

First American Road Race By Self-Propelled Vehicles

Facts Which Describe a Two Hundred Mile Struggle in 1877 Dug Out of the State Records of Wisconsin, Antedating All Contests Between Self-Propelled Vehicles.

Buttonhole your automobile historian and ask him to give you the date of the first speed contest of self-propelled vehicles held in the United States. If your historian is well versed in his subject he will tell you that the first race of this kind was held in 1877; that it was conducted under the auspices of The Chicago Times-Herald; that the total distance was 70 miles, and that the speed attained averaged 7 1/2 miles an hour.

Yet while every automobile racing history written so far will agree with him, your friend is wrong, because the first race of self-propelled vehicles was held in the United States in 1877, 33 years ago, says The Kansas City Star.

In addition to the credit of being the first motor vehicle race, the event has the distinction of being the only road race held under government auspices, and also the first one in which a state government was both race organizer and donor of the highest prize ever given to the winner of any motor vehicle race.

This "prehistoric" race evolved a winner who covered the distance of 100 miles at an average speed of 15 miles an hour, which is twice as fast as the gait maintained by the winner of the Chicago race held 18 years later.

That such a race was held many years before the so-called pioneers began to realize their dreams of the horseless carriage is a fact that has been dug out of the records of the State of Wisconsin, after being buried and forgotten amidst the spectacular progress made in the automobile business during the last 12 years or more.

A State Prize of $10,000.

The race was conceived early in the winter of 1878. It sprang from one of those nightly gatherings at the country stores when villagers sat around on empty cracker boxes and sugar barrels, discussing politics, live stock, religion and agricultural problems.

Conversation drifted to horseless vehicles. Instinctively they moved away from the crackling fireplace to give the subject cool Oshkosh air.

"We have machine shops and men with fertile minds," they mused. "Why not have the state offer a prize for the best product." And it was not long before the town politicians had a plan that would forever stamp Oshkosh as the leader in the world in speed.

The legislature "fell for it" and appropriated $10,000. This was to be paid to the man or men who would build a vehicle that would propel itself without help across 200 miles of roads running north and south thru the State of Wisconsin in the most satisfactory manner and in the shortest time. Thus it will be seen that the race was not between previously built machines, but speed contests between vehicles which were designed and built for this particular occasion.

Under the legislative act, Gov. Smith was empowered to appoint four judges or state commissioners, where duty decided that the start should be made at Green Bay, and the route should carry the contestants in a southerly direction thru the cities of Appleton, Oshkosh, Waupun, Watertown, Fort Atkinson and Janesville, at which place they were to turn to proceed north to Madison, the central of the state.

Only Two Entrants at Close.

One broke down on the way to the starting point and failed to arrive on time. Another did not get farther than the starting line. A third vehicle had practically no chance. The contest, therefore, narrowed down to a race between a machine that was built at Green Bay and one built at Oshkosh by Gallinger and two participants.

The greatest excitement prevailed all along the route. Thousands of persons lined the roadways. Farmers drove many miles to get in good position along the course. Country scores closed up, and farm hands took a day off.

When the officials fired the starting gun the huge vehicles plunged forward. Dense clouds of steam and smoke obscured the cheering multitude. Many persons made an effort to follow the vehicles, not knowing just what speed they would be able to maintain. The racers, however, managed to keep as far as Fort Atkinson, where the judges called for a stop and imposed upon the contestants a side contest which they had not anticipated.

The Green Bay and Oshkosh machines were the only two to reach this point. They were required to haul their plows and to plow seven acres of land. This event worked the purpose of the entire region into a frenzy of excitement. The plowing contest was arranged to take place the following morning.

The difficulties encountered by the machines in this part of the race are not set forth in detail in any of the records of the event. They merely state that the plowing contest was successfully conducted, both machines having performed the allotted work of turning over an area of seven acres. The same train or procession of carriages was drawn to Fort Atkinson by the self-propelled vehicles, receiving the applause of immense crowds along the line.

A Wrangle Over the Award.

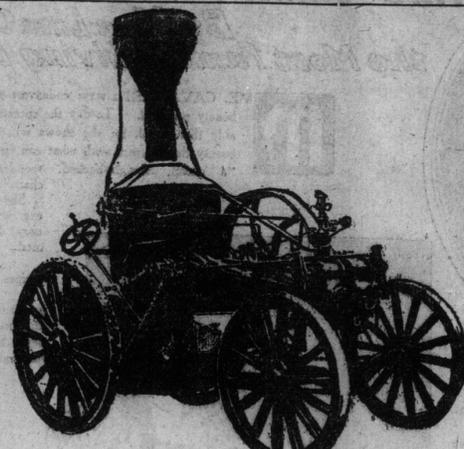

The following morning the start was made for Janesville and Madison. The last leg of the journey proved to be the worst that was encountered on the entire run. It proved fatal for the Green Bay machine, for this vehicle broke down within 20 miles of Madison, having covered 180 miles, under its own power, in addition to the plowing performance. The Oshkosh machine, however, surmounted all difficulties and reached Madison without trouble, completing every requirement set forth by the state.

The builders of the winning vehicle, Mr. Gallinger and his associates, immediately claimed the $10,000, but the claim was protested by the Green Bay entrant and a controversy was waged for long time before the judges finally made their award.

Their decision divided the purse into two awards of $5000 each, and the Oshkosh winner was obliged to accept this sum of money, although the judges admitted that he had averaged 15 miles per hour during his running time for the entire 200 miles. It was asserted that the hand of politics was found in the award, but no evidence was adduced to show that the appointment of the government judges resulted in undue advantage to either machine.

Modern automobile enthusiasts must marvel at the speed which was maintained by these machines. To imagine a vehicle with steel tires averaging 15 miles an hour over such roads as were reached in the State of Wisconsin 33 years ago, gives one idea of the difficulties these men had to overcome. Mr. Gallinger, who is still living in Oshkosh, said that every bone in his body was sore for a month from the racking and jarring he received on the running platform of his machine. How badly other contestants suffered is not known. It is certain, however, that these primitive "tractors" inflicted severe physical penalties. On the other hand, they showed some advanced thought and sound engineering principles that are found in our modern and luxurious cars.

Mr. Gallinger is the only living representative of the Oshkosh entry. He now lives in that city and employs the use of a modern gasoline motor car.

AVIATION TO ADVANCE DURING CURRENT YEAR

European Governments Vote Large Sums to Encourage Flying Men.

The current year, in all probability, will be marked by the most strenuous endeavors to eclipse France in flying machines in considerable quantities, and the necessity to avoid being caught at a military disadvantage will stimulate effort all over the continent. France possesses a commanding lead at the moment, alike in her fleet of flying machines and in her skilled and successful fliers. But Germany, or Austria, can scarcely afford to allow that condition to remain unaltered. Each has voted considerable sums for aviation material, as has Russia, and Great Britain even has joined in the game. Everything points to strenuous endeavors to eclipse France in airplane work, and if Mr. Mervyn O'Gorman is a true prophet in all probability she will be outdistanced in dirigible success. The chief superintendent of the Army Balloon Factory at Farnborough predicts that we shall soon see a dirigible capable of outflitting an aeroplane in altitude, and of a speed equal to forty miles per hour. Needless to say such a machine would possess greater potentialities for war than the aeroplane—but it has not yet been seen, and the sixty mile-an-hour aeroplane is with us.

THE KING'S SIX.

His Majesty the King has this year set the seal of fashion upon the six-cylinder car, his latest acquisition being a magnificent six-cylinder Daimler. Judging by the number of six-cylinder cars being turned out of the Daimler factories at Coventry, many royal subjects are following the example of their august sovereign. His Majesty is a keen motorist, in addition to being a good engineer, and many stories may be heard in the royal garages in connection with his knowledge of a car's "internals."

SAYS AMERICA IS TURNING TO "SIXES"

Mr. Charles Y. Knight, on Return to England, Discusses Industry in United States

NEW YORK, April 7.—Some extraordinary statements about the American automobile industry as well as some very interesting prophecies about the developments of the next twelve months have been made in England by Mr. Charles Y. Knight, the inventor of the sliding steeve motor, since he returned to that country a few weeks ago. Next year, in Mr. Knight's opinion, will be one of triumph for the six cylinder motor in the United States.

The American designer and manufacturer receives scant respect from Mr. Knight, who considers that all their ideas for improvements are picked up in England or on the continent. He sees no likelihood of American cars finding a strong market in Great Britain.

"Very marked developments are foreshadowed in America," says Mr. Knight. In the car "to-day" there is not a single worm-drive car produced in the States. However, it is safe to say that the worm-drive car will be seriously looking into the worm proposition, and it is only a question of time when this means of power transmission will entirely supersede that of the bevel across the water.

"Strangely enough, there is a tremendous awaking in the six cylinder situation. For years this propaganda has been seriously pushed by only a few of the important contractors. One after another experimented with the six cylinder motor, and because of the various difficulties encountered with crank shafts and camshafts, abandoned it and concentrated their entire efforts on four cylinder motors. Later refinements and developments and consequent increase of knowledge in the result of years of experience has simplified this problem, and to-day there is a strong rush to adopt this type of motor.

As has been pointed out in previous practice, the suggestions for mechanical refinements and changes have been given in America, and a number of the new six cylinder cars, which will appear on the American markets for the 1912 season, will have been suggested, to a very great extent, by previous English or European practice.

A Packard "Six."

The six cylinder motor has probably been given its greatest impetus and popularity thru the marked success of the Packard Company. The result is that the Packard "Six" has become the most popular of the new six cylinder cars on the market for the 1912 season.

"As to the future of the business in the States, I would not like to prophesy. Necessarily there will be a considerable weeding out, as it is possible for the people to keep up their hands in the great number of cars being produced. There has been sensational reductions in price upon the part of concerns which have found no outlet for their products, and prices as a whole are considerably lower than they were a year ago.

European Ideas Adopted.

"When asked to express my candid opinion regarding the design and construction of cars in America as compared with this country, I must say that as a result of the large quantities produced in America, it is possible for the Americans to be extremely alert in the adaptation of the new tools, to produce cars at lower price than is possible on this side, despite the fact that labor is at least double in cost.

"On the other hand, the Americans seem to have little time for original research and study of design along mechanical lines, and almost all of the improvements and innovations are taken from this side, dozens of engineers coming across every year at the time of the London Motor Show to study the trend of English and European construction.

"A year ago, upon my return from America, I took the position that while it was possible for Americans to produce motor cars at a lower price than practicable to build them upon this side, I did not believe that there would be any flood of cheap American built products in England.

"I explained that the question of selling cars of unknown reputation, no matter at what price offered, was an easy matter, and necessitated tremendous expense, and that American manufacturers could not afford to even at the low price at which they could produce, to compete in the English market with home producers. The outcome has been just as I predicted. It would be—i. e., the American manufacturers have chosen to reduce their output to the extent in some cases, of almost closing their works, rather than contend with obstacles which stand in the way of doing business in England."

A Source of Supply.

"The new motor is building up very rapidly. It is really the artless, freckle-faced lad. If he really has, had been there," replied the brilliant captain. "But unfortunately he had just gone out to lunch."

HEADLIGHTS THAT TURN WITH STEERING WHEELS

Royal Auto Club Claims That They Do Not Violate Searchlight Law.

LONDON, April 7.—The Royal Automobile Club has issued a notice to the effect that its legal committee consider that the use of headlights adapted to turn with the steering wheels is not in contravention of the ordinances issued on the matter by the local government board. Some people are not satisfied with that assurance, and in order to fortify its supporters the Royal Automobile Club offers to defend any member who may be prosecuted for doing as it indicates as lawful. To my mind the most curious point about the matter is that it should have taken the Royal Automobile Club legal committee about seven years to arrive at its present opinion. Since about 1904 we have been allowed to believe that it was essential, in order to observe the law, to attach our lamps to the car so that no movement relative to it was possible. Now it is discovered that so long as the lamps are directed towards the path of the car the law is observed. The fact of the matter appears to be that the local government board regulations are so worded that other meanings may be extracted from them. Motorists are forbidden to fit lamps that can be used as searchlights—a rather vague term in itself, for I fear that most of us carry searchlights and call them lamps. Searchlights are generally capable of being swivelled and swung, and we have assumed that even the swivelling entailed by being connected to the steering gear would bring us into conflict with the law. On the wording of one regulation the local government board can say that it does, and on the wording of another it can say that it does not. My own opinion is that the local government board have intimated to the Royal Automobile Club that they are not disposed to quarrel with swivelling headlights so long as their direction is controlled by, and limited to, the steering mechanism—hence the illumination and the offers to defend any prosecuted member who may choose to make his car a chopping-block for the necessary legal precedent.

PREMIER TRANSMISSION DETAILS.

Automobile transmissions in the best regarded makes have become standardized, but several well known cars exhibit features of particular interest. Such, for instance, as the manner in which Premier transmissions are held in the frame, in such permanency as to be always in proper alignment. It is recognized among the best considered motor car manufacturers that the proper place for the transmission is "midships," where its weight is held by the frame and not where it is subject to road shocks.

When the Premier transmission is set in the frame it is lined up with the motor so that the drive will be absolutely straight and the transmission case is bolted to the pressed steel side members of the frame. In addition to this, moiten babbit is poured between them and the transmission is assured of permanent proper alignment. There is never any reason to move, and it is in position for years to come. Another indication of the matchlessness of detail is found at each end of the transmission main shaft, within the case, where there are little plates so designed and placed that by their centrifugal action they throw beads of oil upon the gears any grease which would tend to ooze out.

It is not always known that the Premier Company is a pioneer in the use of sliding gear transmissions, and we the first Premier car appeared and was first to use a construction that has since become nearly universal.

HOW TO PREVENT CARBON DEPOSITS

Best Method of Keeping Cylinders and Piston Heads Clean.

The following plan of preventing a deposit of carbon upon the cylinder walls, piston heads, valves, and spark plugs is quite simple and remarkably effective. When the engine is lastly well heated after the day's run, about three or four ounces of kerosene oil is fed thru the air vent on the intake manifold or thru the air intake of the carburetor while the engine is running. No special kind of syringe is necessary if the car is provided with an air intake on the side of the manifold, as is to be found in many modern cars. The kerosene will be slowly poured in and the throttle gradually opened and the engine allowed to speed up on the kerosene, which is drawn in the cylinders in larger quantities than can be vaporized, and the surplus of kerosene is being churned up and down in the cylinders and wets the valve seatings and spark plugs.

Method of Using.

That a surplus is deposited in the cylinders is proven by the fact that the engine will run quite rapidly for some time after stopping the kerosene from being drawn into the intake manifold. After running the engine for a few minutes upon the kerosene, it is rapidly speeded by opening the air vent wider and then, while the kerosene is drawn into the cylinders, the spark is switched off. Now more kerosene is drawn into the cylinders with each revolution, but this is not ignited, and so may be left over night in contact with the cylinder head, some of it rapidly also deposited upon the valve seatings. The advantage this method has over injecting the kerosene thru the petcocks is its uniform application to the valves and gradually remove part of the deposit and leave the other side untouched with, perhaps, a decrease rather than an increase in compression, provided the valves are covered with deposit of carbon.

A Kerosene Tank.

From my "experience" with this method, I think my car would run indefinitely without any difficulty with carbon on the cylinder walls or valves and practically none on the spark plugs. I suggest on a friend who had a most valuable addition to a gas engine would be a small tank, under the seat, for kerosene or carbon cleaner so that, when nearing the end of a day's run, the engine could be easily run on kerosene for a short while to clean it. My attention was called to this method by a friend who by mistake poured kerosene into his gasoline tank and ran his car about five miles after it before he discovered his mistake. There was no trouble, provided the engine was overhauled, but he said the car had never run so well as it did after this kerosene cleaning. The plan I suggest is based upon practically the same principles.

Of course, the cylinder oil should be of first-class quality and the carburetor adjusted so as to give the proper mixture of gas and air. To get the best results the valves should be ground and every abnormality corrected, and then if kerosene is run thru as described every day or every other day, depending upon the distance covered, I think all who try this procedure will be surprised at the splendid manner in which the motor works. Carbon cleaner (if preferred to kerosene), such as acetone two parts, kerosene two parts and ether one part, may be easily applied to the cylinders and valves by pouring it into the air intake while the engine is running rapidly, just after the spark has been switched off.—Edgar G. Ballenger, in Motor.

Automobile Insurance

The extensive use of the automobile has given rise to many problems, and one of the most important of these is the question of insurance. As the average motor car represents an investment of about two thousand dollars, it is necessary that the owner should be protected from loss by fire or any other accident by a reliable insurance policy. He should also be insured against injury or death resulting from any accident in connection with his motor car.

As a certain amount of risk always attends the operation of any vehicle, especially on the streets of a city, what is known as a "Third Party Insurance" is also very important. If one's policy includes "Third Party Insurance," it means that the insuring company assumes all liability for damage caused by one's car to the person or property of any third party. This also includes all law costs.

There are many companies in Canada that undertake these different forms of auto insurance, but so far the form of policy issued has not been such as to inspire any great confidence in the policy holder. There are too many loopholes thru which the company can escape its just obligations.

There have been several cases in Toronto in which companies have refused to indemnify car owners, both for damage to their machines and injury to a third party. In each case the company has taken advantage of some clause in its policy to which the assured has not given sufficient consideration before insuring.

This question of companies evading payment became so important in England during the last two years, that it was taken up by the Royal Automobile Club, a large and powerful organization. The result of their work was the production of a model policy, absolutely fair to both the insurers and the assured.

The recommendation of such an influential body as The Royal Automobile Club of England could not be ignored, and, therefore, many of the best known English insurance companies have adopted the model policy. They are as follows:

- Car & General Insurance Corporation, Ltd.
- General Accident, Fire & Life Assurance Corporation, Ltd.
- Gresham Life, Fire & Accident Insurance Co.
- Law Accident Insurance Society, Ltd.
- Lloyd's.
- Dreadnought Underwriters.
- Red Cross Indemnity Association.
- London & Lancashire Fire Insurance Co.

LONDON'S ARMORY AGAINST FIRE: THE NEW ELECTRIC CAR FOR CONVEYING A FIRE-ESCAPE. In rescuing people from the upper windows of a burning building, it is, of course, of the utmost importance that means should be available of conveying the fire-escape to the spot with all possible rapidity. It is therefore satisfactory to learn that the London Fire Brigade has recently added to its appliances a special electric car for this purpose. One of our photographs shows a general view of the car, with the fire-escape on it; the other shows the accumulators in which the electric power to drive the car is stored.

DURALUMIN.
It has sometimes been suggested that the use of duralumin for improvements in the engine, the automobile was marking time in the matter of development. That is to say, clutches, gear-boxes, and back axle drives practically stand where they did, and the direction of the next advance is hard to see. But the design may not play a great part in the next step forward, it may fall to the lot of material to score the next point.

If price be not a bar, the new alloy called "Duralumin," may play a large part in the construction of chassis. It is said to have the strength and hardness of mild steel, but to be only slightly heavier than aluminium. It contains 90 per cent of aluminium, and has a specific gravity of about 2.8—that is to say, it is about 2 3/4 times as heavy as water. It is a tensile strength of forty tons per square inch; and where mild steel is used in automobiles, duralumin might be substituted with a great saving of weight.

Small Cars on Farms
The farmer in the last few years has bought thousands of light cars; he has been quick to appreciate the fact that to him a reliable automobile is a most profitable investment—a better investment probably than to the average city purchaser.
Probably the greatest influence in the work of the improvement of roads has been the selling of the automobile to the farmer. He buys his car, then he talks good roads and repairs his own highway. In driving thru the western farm land sections it is not difficult to determine the home of a farmer who owns an automobile by the character of his road.
The Ford car has become an especial favorite with the farm trade, because it is easily operated. In case the farmer is busy with the horse in the field his wife can take the car and run to town, take the children to school, etc. The automobile brings the farm close to town and is very often found on the way to market with its load of garden truck or returning with parts to replace broken farm machinery.

ADVANTAGES OF NEW STOCK CONTEST RULES

Public Will Know Exactly What Type of Car Winner is Facing with

For such it is well to note that the new rules in favor of the public, and the new supervision could not be expected to devote as much time to its work as it will under the new arrangement on a salary basis. Much closer inspection will result in the elimination of contestants who are inclined to evade the rules and will safeguard the public, which is unfamiliar with the full details of what constitutes a strictly stock car.

"One of the most important additions to the rules is the one which compels each maker to carry in his advertising the registration number of the model with which he wins races. The contest board assigns registration numbers to each stock model. A certain series of numbers cover stock cars of 1909; another series those of 1910, and still another series of numbers will cover stock cars of 1911. Under this arrangement the public will know whether the car winning a race on the track is a model of the current year or an obsolete model which the manufacturer has discontinued building, possibly because it was not properly constructed for general service.

"In the past under the old rules a manufacturer could race an obsolete stock model and create the impression in the minds of the public that it was the model which he was then delivering to his customers. Persons interested will very quickly familiarize themselves with the meaning of these stock car races, and under this new rule it will not be possible to mislead them as has been done in some cases in the past."

Harry T. The trip J. Joseph, the importer, is making to Italy, is taken to mean that he will bring back with him the new creation. being at the date hereof included in the official list of the Royal Automobile Club.
Policy No. _____ Annual Premium £ _____

Whereas _____ (hereinafter called the Assured), has paid or has agreed to pay the sum above mentioned by way of premium or consideration to _____ (hereinafter called the Insurers) for the insurance hereinafter contained during the period commencing at noon on the _____ day of _____ 1911, and ending at noon on the _____ day of _____ 1911, and for such further periods as may be agreed by the Insurers.

Now this Policy Witnesseth that the Insurers hereby undertake to the extent, and subject to the conditions contained herein, to pay or make good to the Assured, his executors, administrators, and assigns, any loss or damage as hereinafter provided.

DAMAGE.
Section 1.—The Insurers will pay for or make good all damage to any Motor Car belonging to the Assured and described in the Schedule hereto occasioned by Accidental Collision or Impact with any object, or by malicious injury or by passing over any artificial ridge or artificial dip, or by other accidental external means, but only to the extent of the total sum named in the Schedule hereto as being the Full Value of the Motor Car. The Insurers will pay for or make good damage to Lamps and Accessories occasioned by Accidental Collision or Impact with any object or by other accidental external means, and also damage to Rubber Tyres on the said Motor Car from the same cause when such damage is the direct result of an Accident which causes damage to other parts of the Motor Car for which compensation is payable. In addition, the Insurers will be responsible for the reasonable cost of removing the Motor Car from the scene of the accident to the Repairs and for their fair charge for delivery to the Assured after re-assembly.

Special Condition.
This Section does not cover repairs or replacements rendered necessary by wear and tear or mechanical breakdown, or damage caused by freezing of the water in the circulating system, but the Section covers damage which is the direct and immediate result of accidental collision or impact between the insured Motor Car and any object or is caused by other accidental external means although primarily caused by wear and tear or mechanical breakdown.

Facilities for Repairs under this Section only—
(a) Temporary Repairs.—In the event of Accident the Assured is authorized to have such TEMPORARY REPAIRS executed and to take such steps as are necessary to remove the Motor Car to a place of safety, and reasonable charges therefor shall form a part of the claim. The Car should not be removed by its own power if such driving may in any way increase the damage caused by the accident. The Insurers are not liable for any further accident, loss, or increase of damage caused by driving the Car in an unsafe or damaged condition.
(b) Repairs up to £5.—When the Total Cost of Permanent Repairs necessitated by an accident will not exceed £5 the Assured is authorized to have such repairs executed forthwith provided that the Assured previously obtains a detailed estimate and Condition 2 below to the Insurers.
(c) Repairs by Makers.—In case the makers of the insured Motor Car have an establishment for repairs in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or Isle of Man, or if such an establishment exists in the Continent of Europe and General Condition 4 hereof applies thereto, then if the makers of the insured Motor Car shall have an establishment for repairs in the particular country of Europe in which the damage shall occur the Assured shall be entitled to require that the repairs shall be executed by the makers of the insured Car if the makers of the insured Car are willing to execute the repairs for the same sum as or a less sum than any repairer selected by the Insurers, and for the purpose of ascertaining this the same specification of repairs shall be submitted for estimate to the makers and the repairer selected by the Insurers.

THIRD PARTY.
Section 2.—The Insurers will pay all sums which the Assured shall become legally liable to pay to any person or persons, firm or Company (excluding any person in the Assured's service or driving or being conveyed in the said Motor Car), as compensation for accidental loss of life or bodily injury or damage to property or animals or law costs in connection therewith sustained or caused through or by or in connection with any Motor Car belonging to the Assured and described in the Schedule hereto. The Insurers will also pay all law costs incurred by the Assured with the written consent of the Insurers in defending any Third Party claim covered by this Policy.

Insert here the words "in the case of a Company, or "as who have heretofore subscribed our names" in the case of Lloyd's underwriters.
See also Section 6.

Special Condition.
No liability of any sort shall be incurred or admitted nor any offer, promise or payment made to Third Parties without the written consent of the Insurers, who shall be entitled if they so desire to take over and conduct in the name of the Assured the defence of any action or to prosecute any claim for indemnity or damages or otherwise against any Third Party, and the Assured shall give all such information and assistance as the Insurers' representative may require for the purpose of prosecuting, settling or resisting any claim.

FIRE.
Section 3.—The Insurers will pay for or make good damage to any Motor Car belonging to the Assured, and described in the Schedule hereto, and Accessories and/or Spare Parts in, on, or about such Motor Car by Fire, Lightning, Explosion (including Accidents) or self-ignition, but only to the extent of the Full Value of the Motor Car as being the Full Value of the Motor Car.

THEFT.
Section 4.—The Insurers will pay for or make good the loss of or damage to any Motor Car belonging to the Assured, and described in the Schedule hereto (and Accessories, Fittings and/or Parts in, on, or about such Motor Car) by Burglary, Housebreaking or Larceny (by persons not in the service, employment or household of the Assured), but only to the extent of the Full Value of the Motor Car as being the Full Value of the Motor Car and Accessories. Provided that the Insurers shall not be liable under this Section when such loss or damage arising out of any one theft does not exceed the sum of £20.

TRANSIT.
Section 5.—The benefits under this Policy shall only apply to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, and whilst any Motor Car belonging to the Assured and described in the Schedule hereto is being loaded, discharged, or conveyed by any recognized sea or railway route between Great Britain and/or Ireland, the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, and the Continent of Europe, and whilst temporarily on the Continent of Europe, and whilst being loaded, discharged, or conveyed by any Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man, or the Continent of Europe, conditionally upon the Assured paying the first £10 of each claim arising whilst the motor car is temporarily on the Continent of Europe. Limits to third party liability arising outside the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man—£1000.

REPLACEMENT VALUE.
Section 6.—In the event of total loss or destruction of any Motor Car belonging to the Assured, and described in the Schedule hereto, the amount stated in the Schedule as the full value of such Motor Car is agreed as the Replacement Value during the currency of this Policy, but it is agreed that either party may require the Replacement Value to be adjusted at any time when the premium becomes due for renewal, and in that event the amount of the new Replacement Value shall be entered hereon and shall be deemed to be the Replacement Value until any further re-adjustment is made.

ARBITRATION.
Section 7.—In the event of any dispute or difference between the Insurers and the Assured arising out of this Policy or any claim thereunder or as to the true meaning of this Policy, such dispute or difference shall be referred to the arbitration of three members of the Legal Committee of the Royal Automobile Club, who shall be chosen for the purpose by the said Legal Committee, and the decision of such persons shall be final and binding on all parties.
[NOTE.—The Legal Committee of the R.A.C. will only accept such references in respect of policies effected with Insurance Companies or Firms of Underwriters whose names have been placed upon the Club's official list.]

GENERAL CONDITIONS.
1. Each accident shall be held to include a series of accidents occurring in connection with or arising out of one event.
2. In the event of any accident which may result in a claim under this Policy or in Police or other proceedings against the Owner or Driver, notice shall be given to the Insurers. Such notice must be given in writing (and by telegram if convenient) as soon as possible after knowledge of the accident has come to the Assured or the Assured's representative. The Assured shall also give full information as to the circumstances of the Accident and all claims made, with names and addresses of witnesses and all persons concerned in the accident.
3. No claim shall attach to this Policy for any Accident arising whilst the Motor Car is engaged in prearranged or organized racing or pure-making or whilst engaged in pre-arranged or organized racing against time or is hit on fire.
4. The Insurers shall at all reasonable times have free access to examine the said Motor Car by their authorized representative.

The Grecian temple is presented to the audience and stately and painting are mysteriously produced from nothing, while living models appear and disappear.

The transparency of the human forms is the mystifying part of this act, these tableaux come and go, while you sit and wonder how.

As Signor Arvie has over one hundred of these tableaux which he changes at every performance, the patrons of the popular Star will have a chance to see something which is bound to mystify, as the more you see the greater the mystery.

The more said the less you know, so you had better come and see for yourself, so the name "Arvie Mystery" is "mough said."

"Nothing is so bad that it couldn't be worse," quoted the Wise Guy.

"Yes," agreed the Simple Mug, "we can't suffer from insomnia and nightmare at the same time."—Philadelphia Record.

George Sidney In "The Joy Rider"

Quaint Little Comedian With a Big Company Coming to the Grand Week of April 17.

Next week at the Grand Opera House promises to be a merry one and a busy one, for "Busy Izzy" will be there—Iszy with his stunning show girls, in his funny comedians, his tuneful songs that one whistles a week after and a general whirl of gaiety and life and color. George Sidney, that quaint and comical little fellow of the round figure, the chin whiskers, the shiny teeth, the shuffling feet and a thousand funny little ways and mannerisms, is one of the most beloved entertainers before the public to-day.

A new and even more alluring edition of "The Joy Rider" will be the vehicle in which Busy will favor Toronto with a visit this time. "The Joy Rider" has some kind of a plot—not a burdensome one, however—about Izzy, the joy rider, running over the pet dog of Miss Mabel Lee. Detectives are put on the trail of the dog-slayer, and he has a merry time in avoiding them and finally coming out on top.

It is all fun and music and frolic from curtain to curtain. Everybody in the show seems bent on having a good time, and so with the audiences that see Busy Izzy. The dances go with a vim and a dash, the jokes fly fast and furious, the costumes and the scenic effects glitter and delight and the music comes in volleys of melody and rhythm and pleasing swing. Among the song hits of the season are mentioned: "The School of Love," "There's a Girl in the Moon," "I Want a Beau," "The Bowery Rag," "My Picture Puzzle Girl," "Maybe You're Not the Only One," "Sundae for Two," and the usual inimitable Sidney parodies which never fail to bring down a house.

With Busy Izzy this season is as usual, a typical Sidney company, with clever people in support and a big chorus of handsome and shapely show girls who can sing and dance as well as they look. Carrie Webber, his stunning leading lady, will again appear in that role, and other "good-luckers" are promised in the big cast.

The local engagement will include matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, with a special performance Easter Monday afternoon.

It is interesting to note the number and the character of New York's amusements 50 years ago. On March 2, 1856, Blanchet's five-act drama, "The Knights of the Round Table" was being played at Wallack's, with a farce called "The Winters' Tale" being played to open the bill. The performance began at 7.15. "The Winters' Tale" was having a run at Burton's Theatre, on Charles-street. There were four other theatres open, with variety or spectacular entertainments. The city had eight theatres in all.

MISS BILLIE BURKE'S NOSE and MOTHER

MISS BILLIE BURKE.

MRS. BLANCHE BURKE.

Miss Billie Burke has a "naturally curly" nose and a mother. These have been the two big factors in Miss Burke's wonderful success as an actress.

The nose is mentioned first, not because it is more important than the mother, but because it is more in evidence. When Miss Burke comes to the Princess in "Suzanne" on April 10, everyone is bound to see the nose. It was just the final touch of the good fairies who gave her beautiful outlines and velvety skin and it makes her prettiest piquant rather than conventional. It is to her appearance what a sense of humor is to an intensely intellectual personality—a sort of seasoning.

But if anyone should happen to have the good fortune to meet Miss Burke off the stage, then the mother will become apparent.

Most women who have attained success have had mothers—mothers that is, who helped them to climb. Some mothers help one way, some another. There's the mother, for instance, who sees that her daughter gets who's-me food instead of a commercial selection of cream puffs and ickies. Then there is the mother who solves the problem of the distraction of collecting and keeping her clothes in order, or who gives her a smooth home life, or who mends her shoes and cuts clean handkerchiefs in her peck, or who shoos off irritating or rapid acquaintances, or who argues with relatives who want to swindle a girl with advice.

Mother discourages open admiration of Miss Burke's charms. She evidently admires them herself, but—"There isn't very much in being pretty"—that's what she says. "If you are, and many people see it, you can't enjoy it without appearing conceited."

How "Uncle Tom" Was Written.

In the account of "How Mrs. Stowe Wrote 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,'" by her son, Charles Edward Stowe, and her grandson, Lyman Beecher Stowe, in "McClure's," there is the following story of Mrs. Stowe's modest attitude toward her book: "Neither Mrs. Stowe nor her husband had the remotest idea of the unique power and interest of the story that was being written. Nor, indeed, did it dawn upon either of them until after the publication of the first edition in book form. Professor Stowe was a very emotional man, and was accustomed to water his wife's literary efforts quite liberally with his tears; so the fact that he had wept over the bits of brown paper had for him no unusual portent. As to money, he often expressed the hope that she would make money enough by the story to buy a new silk dress." Three hundred thousand copies of the book was sold within a year of its publication.

Girls From Dixie Attraction at Star

High Standard of Burlesque Set By Company Headed by Adams and Guhl.

The attraction this week at the Star Theatre will be "The Girls From Dixie." This is a new organization this season produced under the personal direction and supervision of the German comedians, Adams and Guhl. These performers have made rapid strides the past three seasons toward a high place in vaudeville and burlesque circles, their phenomenal success in the principal comedy roles, originated by the famous Roger Brothers, "In-Banana," gave them the sign manual to the top grade of German comedy. "The Girls From Dixie" has set a high standard that other burlesque shows are finding very difficult to follow.

All of the supporting company that surround Adams and Guhl are of the same caliber and they can be depended upon to give an unusually meritorious performance.

The chorus is young and shapely and handsome, selected from among a great many because of their ability to sing and dance. The musical numbers they execute are riotous which often stop the show until the second and third encore has been given.

Among the supporting artists who deserve special mention engaged to support Adams and Guhl, are Gertrude Hart, electric soprano; Karl Lang, Thompson, musical artist; Karl Lang, dancer; and others equally as well known for their talents as entertainers. Novelties in costuming are many, the latest addition of the Parisian Hobbie Skirt is a predominating feature. It's the catchiest thing in dresses for women ever designed and as a revealer of electrical effects in amazing profusion.

As an added attraction, the burlesque has been provided to make "The Girls From Dixie" show one of the best of circuits. As an added attraction, the Star has been lucky in securing "The Great Arvie Mystery" for a return engagement. This is the act that caused so much talk at the Star a few weeks ago.

Strength in a Whale's Tail.

Ask 10 persons what is the strongest animal force in the world and nine will reply that it is the blow of a lion's paw. The tenth man may express the belief, from experience, that it is the kick of a mule. As a matter of fact, the blow of a whale's tail is incomparably the strongest animal force; a blow delivered by a full-grown whale placed at just the right distance would smash one's ears shell. The second strongest were an egg shell. The second strongest force is the kick of a giraffe, and this terrible kick is adequate protection to these otherwise helpless animals. The stroke of the lion's paw comes third on the list.—Harper's Weekly.

Toronto Girl's Part In The Chocolate Soldier

Miss Alice Yorke Has Made Success as Nadina, the Leading Role.

Opportunity has played many great parts on the stage, and it has been the making of many a player and singer. Provided the person is ready when the opportunity arrives—success is as good as won. This has been demonstrated on many occasions when understudies have stepped in, and in one night have scaled the heights of success, where they may have remained in obscurity all their lives. In the case of Miss Alice Yorke, alternating in the role of Nadina in "The Chocolate Soldier," the opportunity arrived and arrived suddenly—but the young woman was ready, and the result was an instant and remarkable success.

It is a far cry from the part of slinging a minor role in a musical comedy to the prima donna role in the opera house of the calibre of "The Chocolate Soldier," but Miss Yorke was equal to it, and she has accomplished this in a few short years. During the time she was singing roles in such pieces as "A Knight for a Day," "The Twins," "A Broken Idol," and others, this young woman was studying all the time. She took vocal training from good teachers, and applied herself with the result that when the great opportunity arrived she was ready for the success she deserved.

Miss Yorke took the role suddenly and before she expected to on account of the illness of Miss Kopsky, so Miss Yorke, without so much as one rehearsal with the big orchestra, went on and acquitted herself with much credit. "It was not an easy feat," says Miss Yorke, "and I was frightened to death. I didn't eat or sleep for a whole day and night before I sang, and my hands and feet were like ice. I realized that it was my own supreme opportunity, however, and I knew I had to succeed. I was so nervous I didn't know whether I was dead or alive, but they say I did well and I am glad."

An Awful Country.

One of the dangers which ex-President Roosevelt encountered while on his hunting trip in Africa is being mentioned by a correspondent of "The London Daily Mail," who quotes an ivory hunter in Uganda as saying: "It is an awful country, with the thickest elephant grass full of flies, mosquitoes and ticks. The average range for shooting the elephants is five yards. We creep up and shoot point-blank. Two of them I shot I could touch with my rifle, and they fell only six feet off. One monster heard me and rushed at me and knocked me down, but I managed to swing my rifle quickly and fired into his jaw. His blood poured over my shirt. He then rushed off, but had he fallen he would have crushed me flat."

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS.

ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LINSKOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL PRESS BIBLE QUESTION CLUB. (Copyrighted 1910 by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

I have read the Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson, by Rev. Dr. Linscott, in this issue of The Toronto Sunday World.

Date, April 9, 1911.

THE CONTEST.

The most popular and the most practical plan for Bible study, together with a prize Bible contest, is running in The Sunday World.

In short, the Sunday School Lesson must be read each week for 52 weeks, also the "Suggestive Questions," and the coupon should be cut out each week and signed, certifying that this has been done. Then any five of the questions that are indicated to be answered in writing must also be answered, and at the end of the term the coupons and written answers, duly signed with name and address, must be delivered to this office. The prizes will be awarded according to the number of coupons sent in, and the merits of the written answers. You can get all the help you want with the written answers.

Go in to win one of the solid-gold medals. If you complete the course, you will get a beautifully engraved Diploma, in three colors, in any event, and all you can join you in this course of Bible study.

TO YOUTH GROWN OLD.

What canst thou give, O Gifted, in return
For all the spenders that were shown to thee?
How oft at sunrise thou in ecstasy
Didst see the sky and autumn maples burn!
Thou canst recall perhaps when thou didst learn
That God had made thee like to Him,
and free
To be thyself, and gave thee hope
Fit for the heights for which thy soul did yearn:
And now, at sunset, eyes upon the ground,
Thou hast forgot, and know'st not
of Him,
Ah, dwell upon the glory in thy day—
its red and gold; think not upon the mound
That shall enclose thee, lest to thee intrude
Self-pity and self-love to gloom thy way!

His Summer Vacation.

WHEN MAGIC APRIL.

When magic April comes apace with all her laughter on,
'Tis like a dew, O dewy grace, with silver, soft and light,
'Tis like a smile, O smile, that comes to meet the eye,
Behind the moon, the sun, behind the twinkling star,
When magic April trips and sways,
When at my door she stands,
Oh then I take the fair ways
And then the heart has wings!

Throw wide the doors and windows, too,
and let the sunshine dwell
Upon the sill with all the skill of April's pleasant spell;
The winter rattle and winter roar and winter storm and blow,
To memories of the April dream my heart is true, is true,
When magic April trips and sways,
When at my door she stands,
Oh then I take the fair ways
To find the fairylands!

To memories of the April dream 'tis sweet to turn again,
When on the ripple of the stream she dances back to me,
When sweet to feel, 'tis sweet to know that every field and lane
Is in the mystery of her smile, the drapery of her hair,
Wake up, wake up, 'tis April time,
And magic April's here,
With one side of her face a smile,
The other side a tear!

I know, I know, how fondly did blow,
but what are they to me,
Who have no more the d'istant roar but only hear the bee
That in the honey of her heart swoops
down to suck his fill,
And then is off across the chart of meadow and of hill?
When magic April clicks the gate,
Why dream of winter's gloom,
For in her basket and her breath
She bears the pink peach-bloom!

Educational.

"Do they teach domestic science at your college?" inquired the visitor of the freshman.
"Only wing," replied the freshman.
"Good!," said the visitor. "And why do you see, college?"
"Wild oats," replied the freshman—

Fritzi Von Busing of Teutonic Origin

Daughter of One-Time Concert Meister of Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y.

Altho it is Fritzi von Busing in the cost of "The Chocolate Soldier" it becomes "Frau" once the question of ancestry arises, for this singer of the mischievous Maescha is of Teutonic birth, was educated in the land of her fathers, and is intensely proud of her long line of musical progenitors. She is the daughter of Frederick Von Busing, at one time concert meister of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, and now violinist in Berlin; her uncle is Fritz Stellar, director of the Kaiser's own band in Berlin.

A pupil of the great Garcia, and of Anna Lankow in Germany, Miss von Busing's appearance there in grand opera roles was noted. Her first appearance in American opera was with the Grand Square Opera Company, and afterward she created the contralto part in Paderewski's opera "Manru." In its first presentation on this side of the ocean, she also created the role of Nicklaus in the first English production of Offenbach's "Love Tales of Hoffman." "Les Contes d'Hoffman."

For all her wide range of operatic experience, Miss von Busing is little more than a girl, and it is her possession of the vaguely described but invaluable something called "Personal Magnetism," as well as her powerful voice of unusual range, that led Signor Nevea of the Manhattan Opera Company of New York to choose her as the coming Carmen of grand opera. MONTGOMERY AND STONE COMING.

The many-sided talents of David Montgomery and Fred Stone have never been so cleverly displayed as in never been so cleverly displayed as in which is coming to the Princess the week of April 17. There are lots of comedians who can sing and dance. There are a few who can sing and dance and act, but there is only one known to contemporaneous theatre-goers who in addition to singing and dancing and acting, can walk a wire, do a neat acrobatic "stunt" and scipone one of Buffalo Bill's cowboys in the adroit handling of a pistol and a revolver. That one is Fred Stone, and he, with his partner, Montgomery, keeps the performance of "The Old Town" moving rapidly every minute that it runs. George Ade and Gustav Luders have given Montgomery and Stone an excellent basis of characterization, humorous situations and tuneful music. They must be praised for most of the other qualities which go to make "The Old Town" the most entertaining musical show of the year.

Being a Charles Dillingham production it was to have been expected that the details of artistic scenic illustration and beautiful and lavish costuming would have received the attention of artistic hand and eye. Mr. Dillingham has lived up to his high reputation not only in this regard but in the interior entertainment and order of the artists assisting Montgomery and Stone in the presentation of "The Old Town" have proven themselves worthy of their associates. Miss Allene Crater, Miss May Ellison and Mr. Charles Fox, are well remembered from their previous visits with Montgomery and Stone in "The Red Mill." Miss Flossie Mope, a sprightly little dancer, an intelligent sourette, succeeds to the role of Gustina, and Mr. Melville Stewart, a handsome, manly interpreter of virile characters, brings an admirable baritone voice to the big solo and the important duet allotted to "Jim," the western politician.

Paving the Way---How an Alliance Between Britain and the United States May Be Effected

(By T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, April 8.—I have not seen the case against the staggering size of the naval estimates put anywhere more convincingly and more succinctly than in the following passage in a leading article in The Manchester Guardian:

Seventy-two millions in a year of profound peace—three times the interest on the national debt, equal to the revenue from customs and excise with half a dozen small taxes thrown in, and twice the yield of the income and property taxes—not to regret, not to apologise would be to lack both sense and feeling.

Why the Revolt? This was partly the case of the Liberals who rose in revolt against these gigantic estimates. Their case was strengthened by the mistake with regard to the purpose of the German Government which had to be avoided. It had to be proved that there was no acceleration of the German naval program, that the German Government had no intention of building far more powerful vessels than any they had yet constructed, and this was held to be a justification of the building of so many more Dreadnoughts.

These are questions which are raised by the very remarkable and momentous speech of Sir Edward Grey. I do not stop to discuss either the manner or the mere house of commons and immediate purpose of that speech. It is sufficient to say that it was a model of an official utterance; perhaps the more so because it was, at points, halting and even awkward in delivery. As for the immediate and long-term purposes, the speech turned the flank of the Radical revolt in a most dangerous way, and even made things difficult for the opposition.

Minor issues, and even made things difficult for the opposition. But these are minor issues in comparison with that part of the speech which dealt with the whole question of armaments and peace from the international point of view. There was one very startling point in the speech, a point which probably will bear a great deal in the future—especially from the British point of view.

Looking out for what might be the end of it. These are questions which are raised by the very remarkable and momentous speech of Sir Edward Grey. I do not stop to discuss either the manner or the mere house of commons and immediate purpose of that speech. It is sufficient to say that it was a model of an official utterance; perhaps the more so because it was, at points, halting and even awkward in delivery. T. P. O'CONNOR.

of hope there were to be found in the world for a cessation of the disastrous competition in armaments. Sir Edward Grey first chose "internal revolution" as one of these possibilities. "Internal revolution," I have little doubt that Sir Edward Grey meant the phrase to be of international application; not to apply to any country in particular. But assuredly with our knowledge of the already strong revolt in Germany against heavy taxation, and that what makes the situation dangerous were driven to fury by what they consider a direct bid and even invitation to the Socialists by an English foreign minister.

The End of the War. However, let me pass even that momentous point to come to what was really the gigantic fact that comes before us in such bold relief from the speech of the foreign secretary. Sir Edward Grey quoted that epoch-making passage in a speech of President Taft, in which he laid down the doctrine that arbitration might even to the questions of national honor which divide nations—a point which has been carefully, rigorously, uncompromisingly excluded from arbitration to the present. If arbitration were to be extended to that point, why then war could have come to an end.

Then there is the large Irish population that would be added to the ranks of those of the older generation. There are still many bitter recollections of the condition in which they left their country, and the sufferings which landlordism inflicted upon them in the days before the Irish people had the sense to destroy landlordism. I have heard tales of the tragic episodes which accompanied the great exodus of Ireland after the famine, which I have sometimes related to English audiences, and I am sure that without seeing many of the English and of indignation. The English would be more than human if they could see the sufferings, either of themselves or those dear to them, who were driven out of Ireland in an emigrant vessel with four hundred other souls, and who were driven out of their mother's knee that three hundred of the four hundred were dead before the vessel landed, including his three sisters.

Not Irreconcilable. And yet I go on to say with full conviction, and with the knowledge of America's thirty years, that these Irish are not irreconcilable. The man who told me that story begged me to encourage my colleagues—if I could do so—to encourage the great peace with the masses of the English people. But there is a condition precedent, namely, that the Irish people at home shall be satisfied; and that, of course, by the grant of them of self-government. This is the Home Rule question—which is the real question, and which is at the heart of the English people's mind. I have heard tales of the tragic episodes which accompanied the great exodus of Ireland after the famine, which I have sometimes related to English audiences, and I am sure that without seeing many of the English and of indignation. The English would be more than human if they could see the sufferings, either of themselves or those dear to them, who were driven out of Ireland in an emigrant vessel with four hundred other souls, and who were driven out of their mother's knee that three hundred of the four hundred were dead before the vessel landed, including his three sisters.

Queen Mary Too Homely For British Smart Set

Upper Ten Fear Least Spectacular Side of Life Will Suffer Some Eclipse.

(By Cable to The Sunday World.) LONDON, April 8.—The Upper Ten are none too well pleased by the pronounced character of Queen Mary's homely interests, fearing lest the spectacular side of life, with all its pomp and ceremonies, will suffer some eclipse by reason of her simple tastes. But also it is the practical side of the Queen's nature that up to the present has impressed the people most, I am informed on the best authority that there is a more picturesque side to her nature.

She has, for instance, once more taken to wearing the lucky charm her husband gave her years ago, a tiny sea shell incrusting in gold, which he picked up on the shore near Sandringham, the one she never wears it out of respect. Sometimes she also wears a tiny gold pin which the late King Edward gave her when he returned from his last visit to Marlborough. Princess Victoria is the most fortunate collector of lucky charms in the royal circle. They dangle from all her bracelets, the most curious being a small piece of ordinary coin. In consequence of the royal example, small sea shells and golden pins are now much in favor as charms with women of fashion.

LONDON MADE SUITS TO MEASURE

There is a distinctive style and finish about a "Curzon" Suit which the "ready-to-wear" or "semi-ready" garments sold in Canada and the States lack. Indeed the "Curzon" cut and finish is hardly equalled even in garments sold by the best Custom Tailors, whose charges are always excessive. If not altogether prohibitive, there is just that ease and comfort about our garments which give the wearer a "well at ease" appearance.

Then there is the cloth to remember: nothing but real British materials every time.

WHAT IS SMUGGLING AND WHAT IS NOT. The season of summer travel to Europe and other foreign lands will soon be open. The prospects are that the transatlantic steamers will be crowded to the utmost and that the number of tourists will far exceed that of any previous year.

And every one of the hundred thousand or more travelers will buy something abroad for personal use or as a gift to friends, and unless the tourists of 1911 are different from those of previous years, many of them will attempt, even at the risk of fine or imprisonment, or both, to smuggle into the home port some goods that are subject to duty.

It is a risk, a plean, mercenary, dishonest trick played on Uncle Sam by far too many of his sons and daughters. The government is not liberal. In spite of its tariff laws it permits an

THE ORDER OF THE JUNIPER TREE

The Order of the Juniper Tree. Elijah, one of the greatest and best of men, was the founder of this order. He had been doing his best to save his people from the evils that were the civilization of the old world. Israel was intended to be a people who lived by faith and good works, but the example of people who had an abundance of good things to eat and who had degraded themselves by sensual practices had proved a temptation to them. At this crisis in their history Elijah openly challenged the Baal worshippers to make a test of the whole matter. If Baal was really the giver of light and rain and if he really gave fertility and life to creation as his devotees said he was, let him prove it by sending fire, the force in nature in which he was believed to make his power known. Let the test be made in the open where there was no opportunity of fraud and if Baal proved the let all Israel worship him. As we all know the test was a fraud. The victory rested with Jehovah, Elijah's God.

Then a strange thing happened. The angry queen, Jezebel, who believed in Baal, threatened to destroy Elijah, and the prophet, who had been so brave all alone fled to the wilderness, far away from Jezebel's jurisdiction, and prayed for death. This brave of men thus became the founder of the order of the Juniper tree. It is a large order. To it belong all men who believe that a great good can be wrought in a day. They believe in revolution rather than in corruption. They give their allegiance to the wonder working rather than to the educational. They believe that progress comes not by corruption and the storm rather than through training and enlightenment. They have not the courage to stay at their work merely anti-unionist in sentiment, but that they mean to be anti-unionist in practice. To press for union at present means the lessening of the number of denominations, which is a new denomination to the number already existing. To follow such a course is to follow a wrong path to make haste by going slowly.

A Good Man At Rest. Canada is peopled by a noble and Moalin is at rest. None but the noble and his God knew how loyal he was. He was an emphatic churchman. All good men should find him on a matter such as that of his belief in and his adherence to the church of our fathers. He was the less a better man, he was not a special Christian. Luke-warmness is not a virtue. He was a man who was not afraid to say what he thought, and he was a man who was not afraid to say what he thought, and he was a man who was not afraid to say what he thought.

How Peace is Being Promoted. Just now peace is being promoted in national disarmament. Science and progress and all that progress and civilization to throw away their military and naval forces of defense is to invite anarchy. We are in the horrors of barbarism. We are in the horrors of barbarism.

AN ENGLISH VIEW

Some Comment on Proposed Yankee Invasion of British Auto Market. An English auto editor makes the following comment on American cars in England.

We have heard comparatively little of the American trade invasion for some time past; but if the American trade press is any reliable guide, we are likely to hear more in the near future. The Motor Age of Chicago, in a recent issue, states that Captain Rawlinson and Lord Northcliffe are the head of a syndicate which has placed a preliminary order for 1000 cars of a certain make, which will be offered on the British market at something about $200 each.

The Newest from Paris

The New Big Hat, the New Little Hat, the New In-Between Hat and the Brand New INSIDE-OUTSIDE Dress

The New Big Untrimmed Straw for Summer.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

HERE are some of the newest Paris styles and oddities. I'm showing you them just to prove that I'm broad-minded enough to see something besides my own creations. Although by showing these I don't mean that I approve of them. For instance, I think the "inside-outside" gown horrid.

The most exclusive Parisian milliners are just now showing three sizes of hats. The first of the perfectly huge hat and the tiny hat would seem to be wanting, as a rival has now appeared in the in-between hat. But there are many smart Parisians who will wear the big hat, no matter how many small ones appear, and for them there is a new shape and a new idea in the big rough hemp here shown.

The brim measures more than a yard and a half around. The crown is low and broad. This may not sound new to the average reader, but wait—it is absolutely untrimmed. No floating bird of paradise, no upping but the two jeweled hat pins which hold it to milady's head.

The brim is bent in a bit just over the left eye. This particular hat in vivid colors is appealing to the very smart members of French society.

What a contrast is the small, close-fitting hat shown in the second model. This is a typical pillbox hat, its close-fitting brim making it particularly becoming to the delicate features of the true Parisian. The broad hand-brim of spangled straw and the drooping ear pendant will appeal to the woman who longs for the unusual. This cap-like hat is the natural outgrowth of the Tyrolean hats which flooded Paris last Fall. They can be exceedingly dressy, and, also, they are the most delightful head-gear for motoring.

But, oh, the joy of the in-between hat! There are women who will not wear the big chapeau; there are many who cannot wear the small one. Paris milliners make a great effort to please all tastes, hence the two charming models herein pictured. These show distinct traces of the poke bonnet so fashionable a few years ago. The graceful curves across the front is typical of the Parisian hatmaker, who dislikes the broken face line favored by many American milliners. The model covered with flowers might have been copied from an ancient Chinese print, its curved sides, level with the chin, recalling the hats of the earliest mandarins of the Chinese Empire.

And here I approach the "inside-outside" gown shown in this quaint photograph. It is undoubtedly the most unusual mode evolved by the fashion dictators. One does not need to be twins to wear it. The under dress of plain satin almost covered with the over dress of striped satin can be changed in a minute to an under dress of striped satin and an overdress of plain satin! The plain sailor collar and deep cuffs are transformed at the same time to striped ones. It would take a clever Paris modiste to develop this style, but it will probably be as short-lived as the trouser-skirt.

And, by the way, Paul Poiret is showing a truly wonderful trouser-skirt, one that can scarcely be told from the real thing. It is an accordion-pleated chiffon robe, with a high waist line and high foot bands, too. The pleated part is held in at the knees with three deep bands, the upper and lower of plain satin, the in-between one of rich embroidery. The centres of the front and back are stitched together from the knees to the feet, under a narrow satin band. As milady stands, it is a skirt; as she walks, well, it is a trouser. It is the sensation of the moment in Paris.

Always milady is eagerly looking for delightful boudoir robes. The model in this sketch is one that is creating a sensation among the mondaines. It is a sumptuous brocade, its high Grecian waistline differs slightly from the Empire effect and is newer. The curious and extremely low neck and very long, narrow sleeves are also extremely new. Low neck and long sleeves is a combination seldom seen on such robes. Another distinctive touch is the very long skirt, showing a wide slash directly at the back.

This robe, as worn by the model, is one of the most graceful, if bizarre, creations of the Spring.

Shall Our Sons Inherit a Gameless Continent?

WILD birds and other animals are rapidly being swept away as a result of the activity of the pot hunter. Several important species are already totally extinct, while others are on the verge of extermination. Still, the slaughter goes on.

Realizing that if any wild life at all is to be saved for future generations, drastic measures must be adopted at once, the League of American Sportsmen, including among its members such well-known naturalists as Ernest Thompson Seton, Dr. W. T. Hornaday, director of the Bronx Zoo, New York, G. O. Shields and Dr. T. S. Palmer, of the United States Agricultural Department, is conducting a vigorous crusade against the automatic and pump gun, which is believed to be the greatest menace at the present time to the wild life of the continent.

A bill has been prepared making it unlawful to use, in hunting birds or animals of any kind, any shotgun holding more than two cartridges at one time, or that may be fired more than twice without reloading. In support of this bill the league addresses the following argument to legislators:

"The enormous increase in the number of men and boys who shoot, coupled with the tremendous activity and ingenuity of the gun-makers and cartridge makers, now bring you face to face with this question:

"Are you willing that all the game shall be killed off?"
 "Are you willing that this continent shall be depopulated of all wild life that can be classed as game, except that in game preserves?"

"It is true that the protective laws on the statute books today are the best and the most elaborate that were ever passed, and greater efforts are now being put forth to save the game than ever before. Unfortunately, however, the number of guns and gunners, and the deadliness of guns, are increasing with such tremendous rapidity that it is impossible for wild life to withstand the terrific slaughter. In every section where hunting is legally allowed, the bag limit is entirely too high, and this alone spells annihilation.

"Do you wish your sons and grandsons to inherit a gameless continent?"
 Dr. Hornaday, who is one of the most determined fighters in behalf of our wild animals and their preservation, recently said regarding the use of the automatic gun in hunting:

"The logic of the automatic gun question is so simple that any child can see it. That weapon is on the market solely because it is the most murderous bird gun ever made. Its five cartridges can be discharged, in quick succession, by five pulls on the trigger, and without taking the weapon from the shoulder. It is a shoulder Gatling gun, for use against wild creatures. It is exactly the same in hunting as the machine gun on wheels is in war.

"Can any decent citizen use it without sinking to the level of those who fish with dynamite and kill birds with cannon?"

The use of automatic guns for hunting has been prohibited throughout Canada, as a result of this crusade, but in America, Pennsylvania is the only State thus far which has passed a law along these lines. The constitutionality of this law was questioned, but in a test case brought before the Supreme Court the law was upheld.

COPYING HIS "LINES"

THE LEADING LADY COACHES HIM IN HIS PART.

By Augustus Thomas.

THE Child Labor Committee of the United States has instituted an active campaign looking to the enactment of laws in the several States of the Union for the protection of children by excluding them from factories and workshops. This is a work with which all good men and women are in sympathy. In their zeal the members of this committee have made the draft of the law which they are advocating somewhat too broad, and are including in one association the labor-burdened child of the factory and the mine with the rather pampered child of the theatre.

In the States of Illinois and Massachusetts such a blanket enactment has been passed, with the result that children under the age of sixteen are excluded from the theatres. In those States, and consequently from their two principal cities, Chicago and Boston, which are most important on the theatrical map.

The effect of this exclusion of children from the theatre is to shut out a large section of the drama, which includes such classics as "The Tempest," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "King John," "The Winter's Tale," "Macbeth," and such modern plays as "A Doll's House," "Rip Van Winkle," "Peter Pan," "The Blue Bird," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "Mother," "A Bachelor's Baby," "Salvation Nell," "The Travelling Salesman," "A Man's World," "Shore Acres," "His House in Order" and many others. It practically says to the dramatist: "You shall not choose any dramatic theme to which the child value is essential." It says to the child of genius: "You shall not have this school of training, without which a full and proper development of your talent is not possible," and makes a lamentable confusion between the enforced and benumbing labor of the factory and the developing and educating exercise of the playhouse.

This menace to the drama and to the rights of the child has led to the organization of the National Alliance for the Judge Lavigne of Montreal must have had his faith in his own opinion a little rudely shaken by the action of the jury in the Lemieux case. In summing up he told them "Do your duty. If you are honest and intelligent you cannot do otherwise than report a verdict of guilty against the prisoner." The jury promptly "reported" a verdict of "not guilty," which was, perhaps, the most effective way possible of intimating to Judge Lavigne that his functions were confined to the effective uncovering of facts and a clear laying down of the law in the case. After any judge has performed these duties in a trial the issue lies with the jury who, in effect, are the real judges, under unbiased direction.

The News commits itself in its society notes to the assertion that "You cannot climb the heavenly ladder on stilts of dignity." Perhaps not. For myself, however, I may say that I have never seen any kind of ladder on stilts of any sort, and I don't believe the News has either.

A tunnel has been completed after some five and a half years' work, cutting thru the Bernese Alps. How bored they must have been.

"Nellie" put it this way to the editor: "Why does the Church of England keep Lent?" and the editor gave an evasive reply. It seems to me that the obvious answer is "Because it stays borrowed."

I lived in Paris, France, without causing any international complications, for nearly two years, and, being mixed up in a good deal with a bunch of newspaper men, I got to know the ropes, and found it, then quite a cheap abiding place. It is of course easily possible to spend quite a good deal of money there, but it is equally possible to refrain, and still have quite a good time. It seems, however, that one can live more cheaply there than one can die there. Of course, this is only a deduction on my part, for I have never died there yet, but I read in a French newspaper recently that the death duties collected on estates during last year amounted to nearly fifty-three million francs, which, translated, means over ten million and a half of dollars. Under such a handicap as that French people will probably shew nearly as much reluctance to die as they do to be born.

I saw recently in a Yonge-street store a song called "Four Little Letters Spell Love." I hate to contradict anyone, but I worked this little sun out for myself, and I find that this estimate is short by a trifle of 50,047. I make the number 50,051. I will explain how next week, but I should be interested to hear if any local figure-finder can arrive at the same total as I have.

It is possible, without much effort to distort the meaning of almost any set of words. Did you hear of the worthy Toronto citizen, making his way peacefully homeward, who was startled to hear a succession of shrill screams, and then the call "Help! Murder! Police!" Of course he didn't hear the notes of an exclamation, but he did hear the squeals. He paused for a second, then telling himself that he had no intention to help murder police, he unhesitatingly resumed his journey.

So that you may know what to do when you see a bunch of boys and girls, and all are feeling really, spontaneously, frivolous, I pass on a prescription from a contemporary. There it is called "April Fool Party"—but I have no doubt it would suit any other month equally well so long as your supply of Fools doesn't run out. This is what is recommended:

"Arrange, in adjoining room, a looking-glass with curtains hung across. Draw the curtain slowly and he sees himself. He must be bound not to tell the others."

For sheer rollicking gaiety, for unrestrained, devil-may-care jolliness that takes some beating, you can surely see yourself and your victim yelling and shaking with laughter when the subtlety of the joke begins to steal into his at first atrophied consciousness. This charming little pastime, however, is only adopted for intelligent, thinking people—persons of ultra-refined tastes. One blundering male guest, void of the necessary fine-cut sense of humor, might spoil everything by handing you a thousand short-arm jab on the protocols. Also, in arranging this amusing little surprise for your lady friends, you should first obtain a doctor's certificate that they possess the necessary sense of humor.

I do not think the Fool was feeling very well. When we came out from lunch, he sighed and told me, bitterly, "Ah, well, this cursed money is at the bottom of everything." Then he plucked his hands, despondently, into his trousers pockets, and found that it wasn't.

It is perhaps when he breaks into alleged poetry that he is really most trying. Here is his last lunch effort:

I pondered on my earlier life,
And all its "might have beens,"
Then went into my dinner and
Thought I might have beens.
I said "rotten."

A resolution in favor of international arbitration between Great Britain and the U. S. was passed in the Alhambra Presbyterian Church. I was just beginning to wonder what caused the delay in reaching this little arbitration business put thru, but now that the A. A. P. C. have given the scheme their approval, things should proceed in the direction indicated, smoothly and without further hesitation.

You, friend the reader, will know especially if you are a musical amateur, in which case I salute you, how a bit of melody will sometimes get right inside your head and worry you with reminiscences. I heard that rather a banal ditty "Every Little Movement Has a Meaning All Its Own" recently, and I knew quite well that I had heard something very like it before. Those among you who have the comparative misfortune to be men will probably, as Mulvaney says, "howl melodious to the moon" or the ceiling—during the dismal operation of shaving. Pursuing this time-honored custom the other morning I found myself humming the first phrase of "Every Little Movement" and running into the second phrase of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song." Then I tried putting the two melodies together—running them as a duet, a fugue, a canon—and discovered that the refrain of the "Little Movement" is a paraphrase, probably an unconscious one, of the greater movement by Mendelssohn. Since then I have used no other—Try it in your bath!

That's the worst of memory:
Memory, and the girls, skidoo
If pursued unduly,
Left alone—return to you
Very much less unduly.

Expediency nowadays overcomes sentiment, even religious sentiment, but it looks to be an extreme case when one reads of a congregation of Presbyterians selling their church to a body of Greek Catholics. The Presbyterian pastor does not seem to be anything of a "stick-it" minister. After a quarter of a century in the Golden Chersonese I naturally know a little about opium, or as the Chinese call it "Chandu"—and about its unquestionable demerits when used in excess, for, dear me, what utter, complete wreck, Mongolian and European, I have seen and know it to make of men. But even the Pharmacopoeia Britannica acknowledges it's very valuable medicinal qualities, and it is very expensive. All this is more or less common knowledge, therefore it was manifestly the act of a lot of fanatics or fools—generally interchangeable descriptions—to burn, as was done at Ottawa last week, opium acknowledged to be worth $55,000. It was worth just as much (may more) as a medicine for the relief of human suffering, as it was as a detestable poison, and its destruction was entirely foolish. I wonder some medical association does not kick hard at such wanton ridiculous waste.

THE POLICEMAN MILLIONAIRE.
Mr. Gaynor, the Mayor of New York, says that no more police constables shall be able to retire as millionaires if he has his way. He does not commit himself as to what will happen if he does not have his way.

Fruitless Struggle.
I understand that after waiting twenty years she married a struggling man.
"Yes, poor chap. He struggled the best he knew how, but she landed him."—Brooklyn Life.

It, perhaps may give pleasure or pain, or May leave you indifferent, when You read the remarks of Mayor Gaynor On his irresponsible men; The men paid to guard the Civilian, In just a few years they are Millionaires.

A profiting business, my hearties, It isn't it can't be—too rash To prophesy, in it, all parties Acquire a good deal of cash; The road may be hard and a hilly 'un, As steep as a stiff climb of stairs, Yet 'coops, 'sure, will end up as millionaires.

It 'gives one to think'—as the French say, In the certain and ultimate end, How Judges who sit on the Bench may Regard this remarkable blend Of Constables—never a silly 'un Had they for their peres and their m'eres Or they ne'er had become bloated millionaires.

EDDY'S MATCHES

Cupid Struck M.P. During Earthquake

(By cable to The Sunday World).
LONDON, April 8.—Politicians generally and Canadians especially are interested in the marriage that has been arranged between that rising politician, Hamar Greenwood, M. P. and Miss Margery Spencer.
This is understood to be a love match of the old-fashioned romantic order. The couple first met at an hotel during the Jamaican earthquake, and Cupid then and there fired his subtle shafts undisturbed by the falling masonry.
Hamar Greenwood is the best known Canadian in English public life, and is a very popular platform speaker, especially in the north of England. He has lived for the last fifteen years in the old country. In 1905 he was returned as senior member of parliament for York, and was at the Colonial Office for two years as one of Winston Churchill's secretaries, while at the last general election he captured Sunderland for the liberals.
His future bride, who also takes a keen interest in politics, is sister of Mrs. Forbes Semple, wife of Captain Lionel Forbes Semple, R. N. She is a well known rider to hounds, generally with the Hertfordshire fox hounds. The marriage will take place at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, at the end of May.

MISS MARGERY SPENCER, who will wed Hamar Greenwood in June.

Now you know just what some of the men and women of this paper look like. Artist Skuce has made a brave attempt to depict a scene in the editorial rooms on a busy day, sketching fairly accurately the features of some of us who did not hand in actual photographs. You'll observe that the police reporter is required to have a long and keen nose, the cattle market reporter wears rubber boots in and out of season, the automobile editor, has of course wheels in his head, the society reporter must necessarily be a handsome cuss and the spring poet subscribes to all the rules of that cult. The man on the table pulling his hair out by the handful certainly does look somewhat worried, a characteristic of that particular specimen of newspaper man. It all looks very much like the real thing. Anyway the point is this: It takes a lot of time and money to produce your favorite paper. That the work of these men is appreciated by the public is shown by the rapidly increasing circulation of The Sunday World.
